1. On the bright and beautiful shore Of the sil_ver Ju_na's stream, In the vine clad cottage all glee; When the soft wind touched the stream, So the sad heart wakened to still, When the sis__ter an__gels came, And the dear life passed a_way bowered in the trees Lived the gen_tle and love_ly A_ _leen; When the life and joy a_new In the smile of the gen_tle A_ _leen; To the gen_tly to their arms Leav_ing here ev_ery sor_row and pain; On the morn's first glo_ri_ous light Woke the praise of bird and flower, In its loved ones in the old home, To the friend and stranger too, Her af_ far more beauti_ful shore Of the stream of life so fair, Are the golden radiance knelt the loving child, With her meek eyes uplift_ed in prayer.
