f

1st. f Come brothers rouse, let's hurry out To see our hon-ored Guest. For lo! in ev-ery street they shout "Brave Harry of the West." For 5

lo! in ev . . ry street they shout, "Brave Har.ry of the West."

colla voce. f

24. The Ci . . ty now is all a . . wake, And in her lau . . rels dress'd, And voi . . ces make the 4

wel . kin shake, For "Harry of the West." And voi . ces make the wel . kin shake, For "Harry of the West."

colla voce.

3

The women, too, and children sweet,
Are singing with the rest,
And weaving garlands in the street,
For "Harry of the West?"

4

Old Broadway now is all alive,
And every heart seems blest
As th' word goes round, he ll soon arrive,
Brave Harry of the West."

5

Behold! the aged Statesman comes!
In highest honors dressed;
No conq'ring hero ever shone,
Like "Harry of the West?"

6

Nor shall a party feeling dare
To raise one narrow test,
But all shall in the tribute share,
To "Harry of the West?"

7

For th' glorious day is coming near
When Wrong shall be redressed,
And Freedom's Star shine bright and clear
On "Harry of the West?"

8

Then hail! all hail! thrice-honor'd Sage,
Our most distinguished guest!
We'll venerate thy good old age,
Brave "Harry of the West?"
