"The Yellowstone Canyon" by Moran

PRE-EMINENT in beauty among the marvels of Yellowstone Park stands the Canyon. For twenty miles northward, beyond the Falls, the gigantic cliffs reflect an ever-changing panorama of color—yellow, orange, vermilion, green, purple—transforming their precipitous walls into veritable rainbow retreats. Below, at a depth of 1,000 feet, the Yellowstone River adds its note of sparkling emerald to the picture. Moran has not only succeeded in catching these wonder-tints of nature, but his reproduction of the structure of the rocks is geologically correct.
