L. L. D. Benefit Performance

Last night the International Labor Defense, known for its outstanding work in the protection of legal rights, was the beneficiary of a program of unusual interest at Carnegie Hall. Under its aegis, Martha Graham and her group, Doris Humphrey and her group, Tamiris and her group, Charles Weidman, and the Dance Unit directed by Anna Sokolow presented a gala program. Not since the days of the Dance Repertory Theater has there been a joint performance of so many outstanding American dancers. And to judge by the success of last night's venture, perhaps the time is approaching for a renewal of a combined recital season. Every seat in Carnegie was filled, and many stood to watch what was, in effect, a panoramic view of the modern American dance.
