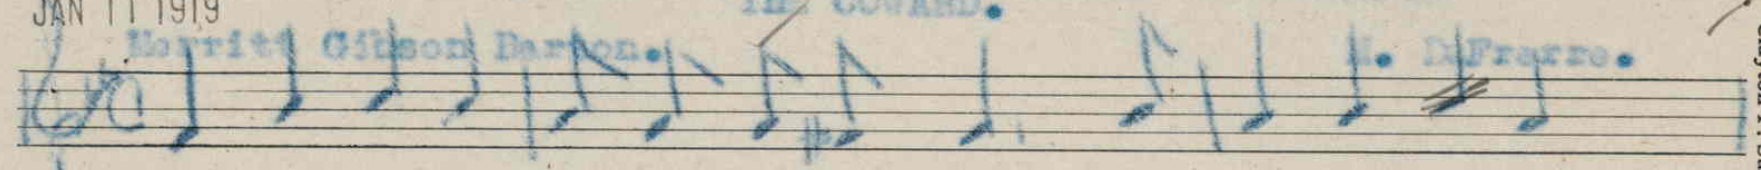
THE COWARD.

Harriet Gibson Barton. H. DeFrarre.



All ye cowards who from battle shrink, Now all ye listen, you just think- When from your country you did part, Did you feel deep in your heart The feeling of a passion-ate bound, Until the scenes you had found? When you saw a soldier fall, you'd scream, And clutch your gun as in a dream.

But conscience hurt you more and more,
Till you were smitten to the core;
When you failed to respond to your country's call,
And saw your comrades fight and fall.
Now another chance to you has come,
To right the wrong that you have done;
So gladly follow the trumpet's blast,
And save yourself from disgrace at last.
