2

How proud it floats o'er this fair land
 Where plenty doth abide,
 The guiding star of all our race,
 Our idol and our pride;
 The hope of those who've left the home
 That tyrants would destroy;
 Swear, thou wilt ever guard that Flag,
 And remember Fontenoy!
 Then forward! (&c.)

3

When traitors rise in might and power,
 To humble its proud name,
 Rise one and all, as Erin's Sons,
 Protect its noble fame;
 Proclaim abroad to all the world
 That Flag they'll ne'er destroy,
 Swear to defend the Stars and Stripes,
 And remember Fontenoy!
 Then forward! (&c.)

4

Brave Sons of Erin, Sixty Ninth!
 Unfurl, then, to the breeze
 The Ocean Harp, the Stars and Stripes,
 On land and on the Seas;
 And, with noble hearts, who volunteer
 To leave all they enjoy,
 We swear our Banner to uphold
 And remember Fontenoy!
 Then forward! (&c.)

5

Then onward, onward! Sixty Ninth!
 Determin'd ne'er to yield
 The Flag for which our fathers fought,
 On many a battle field;
 And where the contest rages fierce,
 There, ever we'll deploy
 And strike as did our sires of old;
 Remembering Fontenoy!
 Then forward! (&c.)
