is opposite, the planets must make revolutions in themselves, presenting successively the whole circumference of their orbs to the sun."

British Civil list.

Mr. Pitt lately called the attention of the house of Commons, to the embarrassment of the civil list, which he placed under three classes: 1st. The expences incurred by foreign ministers and ambassadors; 2ndly; the extra expenses of the household; and 3dly, the extraordinary expenditure for secret service in the present important conjuncture of affairs. The ground for the house to proceed upon was the same on which it acted in 1802, and he would shortly state the exceedings to be at present, accruing since the year before mentioned, 590 000l. In his opinion, there were many of these charges, which, instead of hanging as a burthen on the civil list, should annually be laid before and voted by the parliament. The expense of prosecutions, and many other estimates were liable to vary according to circumstances, and could not be foreseen at the time the house might vote the necessary sums for his majesty's civil list establishment. All these charges he should not at this time propose to transfer, but should confine himself to the amount of about 135 000l. which would exclude the heads of exchequer messengers, and various other expenses, which would be explained in the detail. Gentlemen must know, from their own private affairs, that since the year 1786, when Mr. Burke's bill passed, household expenses had increased 60l. per cent. The same augmentation of expense must, of course, take place in the royal as in other families. In some departments the expense of the civil list was much diminished, and particularly in that of pensions, for which there was an allowance of 92,000l. and out of which there had been for some years past, a diminution of 12,000l. annually. The excess of the expences for foreign ministers in consequence of the war, and numerous transactions connected with it, was, in this war, 10,000l. There was also another consideration to which he wished to point the attention of the house, namely, to the illustrious princes of the royal family, to each of whom he had no doubt, that every gentleman would think an allowance of 6,000l. a year instead of 4000l. which they now received would be extremely reasonable. He concluded with observing, that the additional sum to the civil list, which he intended to submit, was 6,000l. a year, and moved, in the first instance, that this sum of 591,515l. 3s. 10d. be granted for the payment of the arrears of his majesty's civil establishment. The motion was opposed by Mr. Banks, on the ground that the clauses of Mr. Burke's bill had never been strictly complied with, and that the increase of arrears in the civil list had, upon an average, been more than trebled within the last two years; and by Sir F. Burdett, on the principle that at a time when the comforts of the people were diminished by the grievous taxes imposed upon them, those who were the cause of that diminution, ought to participate in their privations. After a reply from Mr. Pitt, and several observations in support of the measure from Mr. Addington, the motion was agreed to.

WASHINGTON CITY.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 17.

The FAIRS, established in the City of Washington, by an act of the corporation, to commence in November next, will, if properly attended, be of great advantage to the country adjacent, and to the city. They will afford to such persons in the country adjacent, as have stock or property of any kind to sell, opportunities of meeting those who are desirous of purchasing, and by this interchange of wants they may be advantageous to both parties. This City being made the point of meeting they will be probably the means of circulating large sums of money in it; whilst at the same time they cannot but prove equally beneficial to the agricultural interest of our country.

It is hoped that by the May Fair some measures will be adopted to distribute handsome premiums to those who produce the best flocks of cattle or sheep. Premiums of this kind will excite a laudable emulation, and extend their influence in a manner highly beneficial to our neighbouring country.

MARYLAND ELECTION.

Though unable to give the result of the entire elections, the following statement will exhibit the progressive state of republicanism in that state.

Of the representatives to CONGRESS elected,

Seven are republican,

Two federal.

Of the former Messrs. Nicholson, Nelson, Moore, Mac Creery, and Archer were elected without opposition; Mr. Covington by a majority of 83 over Mr. Van Horn, likewise republican; and Mr. Magruder by a majority of 204 over Mr. Plater.

Of the latter Mr. Campbell was elected without opposition, and Mr. Charles Goldsborough by a majority of 574.

The present representation consists of six republican and three federal members.

Of the members of ASSEMBLY, the following exhibits the federalists elected.

|---|---|
| Somerset | 4 |
| Dorchester | 4 |
| St. Mary's | 4 |
| Montgomery | 4 |
| Charles | 4 |
| Annapolis | 1 |
| Alleghany | 2 |
| Talbot | 1 |
| | 24 |

The federal member elected for Talbot was chosen by republican votes: and in Alleghany two republican members were chosen. This is the first instance in which that county has sent a republican member.

All the other counties, except Carolina, have been heard from, and they all send republican members: amounting to 52.

This result gives a larger republican majority in the Legislature than has heretofore at any time existed; and we are assured that the relative republican votes in every county have advanced.

PENNSYLVANIA ELECTION.

In all the counties, from which we have heard, the elections have terminated favorably to republicanism, except in York and Adams, which form a congressional district. In York county, the federal ticket for Assembly has prevailed by a majority of about 200 votes, and James Kelly, the federal candidate for a representative in Congress, has likewise succeeded over Mr. Stewart, by the same majority. Adams County, not yet heard from, has heretofore been federal.

DIED—At Annapolis (Md.) JOHN H. STONE, formerly governor of Maryland.

DIED—At Winchester, Virginia, ALEXANDER WHITE, formerly a representative in Congress, and a commissioner of this city.

DIED—At South Kingstown, on Wednesday, the 26th ult. SAMUEL J. POTTER, one of the Senators of the United States, from the state of Rhode Island, in the 54th year of his age.

The Light House on Old Point Comfort, at the entrance of the Chesapeake, was a few days since, destroyed by fire.

The seeds of foreign grapes have lately been discovered to be an excellent substitute for coffee—when pressed, they first produce a quantity of oil, and afterwards when boiled furnish a liquid much resembling that produced from coffee—The practice is rapidly becoming general in Germany.

VINCENNES, (Ind. Ter.)

Sept. 11th 1804.

This being the day appointed for taking the voice of the people, for and against the second grade of government, at one o'clock the ballots were for it 85, against 5.
