Mr. Nelson, amongst other observations against the motion, said that it was unfair to take the discussion at this day to take care that representation (notes to the amount of eight millions) and would deserve execration if there did not always exist.

Mr. D. R. Williams, in reply, observed that he conceived the gentleman's conscience was perfectly at ease, because they had left all to Congress to do, and the Congress had done nothing, and he was sorry to see the Congress so backward in the discharge of their duty.

Mr. Dorsey, in reply, said he was sorry that the Congress had not done more, and he was sorry that the Congress had not done more, and he was sorry that the Congress had not done more, and
