EAST is WEST

The charming and popular Chinese-American comedy in which dainty Fay Bainter scores nightly at the Astor

Costumes in East is West designed by Blackburn in Mallinson's Silks de Luxe.

Fay Bainter, who plays the piquant little Ming Toy, heroine of many adventures from the far Yang-tse River to San Francisco's Chinatown.

Above—Forrest Winant, the Billie Benson whose wooing of Ming Toy is beset with difficulties. To the right—George Nash, who invests Charlie Yang with real Oriental villainy.

Ming Toy (Fay Bainter) sings a Chinese lullaby with Billie Benson (Forrest Winant). Lo Sang Kee (Lester Lonergan) is as expressionless as are all proper Orientals.

Left—James Potter (Hassard Short), who delights in teaching the innocent Ming Toy somewhat doubtful American accomplishments.

Ming Toy asks the kind "Chlistian God" to send her that nice "Melican Meester Beelie" Benson, an appeal which brings prompt response

Little Ming Toy acquaints herself with the mysteries of modern American conveniences and uses the telephone.

Dainty Ming Toy wonders whether the cherry in a cocktail is an essential.
