JOSEPH FREDERIC DEARBORN.

The eldest son of Jonathan and Sarah Dearborn, growing up in the quiet of his Hampton home, early gave promise of those talents which developed under the instruction of Principals Harris and Shepard at the Academy, especially in the lines of classical and mathematical study. At the age of eighteen, he entered Dartmouth College, and at once took high rank. Applying himself intensely to the studies he loved, and faithfully to the whole college curriculum, steadfast and upright, genial and kind-hearted, he could not fail to pass the college course with honor. He was graduated in 1839, third in his class of sixty-one members.

From college, Mr. Dearborn went to Harvard Law School, and thence to the office of Colby and Clifford, in New Bedford, Mass. Having completed his course with these eminent lawyers, he was admitted to
