"Now, Charlie, And Jamesie, And Tommie And Jack" C. H. McFarland.

1

Now, Charlie, and Jamesie, and Tommie, and Jack,
What will you all do when you're all coming back?
We'll marry the girl that weleft far behind,
And smack her a kiss just our bargain to bind!
Away to the Parson's come, then, let us go;
So, hurry up, Mammie! what makes you so slow?
TheParson is waiting to make you my wife;
So we can live happy the rest of our life.

2

A smile on her face and a wink of her eye
The time of her life it was to bid her good bye,
To fight for my country I now, dear must go,
But she will be waiting, her darling, I know;
We'll meet with a smile, and a kiss, twill bejoy,
She'll greet him her darling--heroun soldier boy--
She'll never regret that shewaited in pride,
He'll be her life partner, they'll stand side by side.

3

So tell her your troubles and hark to hers, too;
Just share them together whatever you do;
Forget them together-be glad from the start--
Then you'll never part from the girl of your heart!
Yes, from far we're coming, we'll all long to see,
The sweethearts we left --one for you, one for me--
For they waitedour coming, they did from the start
And now we shall marry the girls of our heart.

CHORUS.

Now, Charlie, and Jamesie and Tommy andJack
Oh, what will you do when from war you get back
You'll all meet the girls of your hearts
With a smack--
Will Charlie, and Jamesie, and Tommy and Jack!
