"Our Yankee Sailors And Soldiers, Adieu!" J. F. Murphy.

1

Adieu, dear Mothers, Wives, and Sisters, Sweethearts, we must now leave you;
O'er foreign lands and seas we now must roam;
Don't let the parting grieve you, for we'll put the Kaiser down;
We've answered to the Call, we're leaving Home!
We're fighting for our just rights, and soon blow a fresh stain wipes,
From off our Glorious Banner--our own dear old Stars And Stripes!

2

We'll travel o'er South seas and roads, till we the Kaiser get,
We're Yankee Boys that fear no noise or fight;
When we are far from Home, sweet Home, we will come back again;
We're over there for Liberty and right!
We never will come back until we've set the whole world free;
We never will lay down our arms except in Victory!

3

Oh, Sparice, never mind if we are leaving you behind,
We have you in our hearts, so just be game;
Beneath our Starry Banner we go forth to meet the foe;
And all the while, we'll love you, just the same;
Our Glorious County cannot lose--she must win, don't you see?
We're fighting over there for it, and you, and Liberty

4

We sail across the bounding sea, we breathe yes many storms;
We are the rovers who will do the task;
But we will all come back again, to you, and friends, and Home
When we are done, now what more could you ask?
For we're the good old Yankee boys, that fear not kind of noise.
The Kaiser will soon find out that he is fighting Yankee boys.
