OH YOU FARMERETTE!

Roche Marzano. M. DuFrerre.

One day while I was wandering on a farm, I chanced to meet a farm-er-ette with such charm; She looked so cute in her jumpers and straw hat. Right down close by her I sat. She had no powder on her nose, And she wore such low heeled shoes; And I softly said to my-self, As I watched her pet a calf. (CHORUS) "Oh you cute little farmer-ette, One of these days I am going to get you yet; You will make a good little wife I can see, And you will cook such meals for me. I - I - I love your smiles, They give light to the fields around for miles and miles, Oh you sweet little farmer-ette, I will get you some day yet."

I jumps up then from my hiding place
To get acquainted with her high Grace;
I talked to her for a long time you know,
And how fast time did go.
After that we met time after time,
Then I asked her to be mine;
She looked into my eyes and said "Alright",
Then I told her by the moon's bright light:
