They say that we each Have our A tiny blue star In a own special star, Which gov-erns our joys and our woes, — And pure field of white, And round it a bor-der of red, — Means that it keeps watch Ov-er us from a-far - Which all may be one that they love Has en-list-ed to fight - A-gainst the di-true, for who knows - I know of a star That can bring smiles or sci-ples of dread; - Their ev-ry hope It's bound up in the tears To the hearts of three mortals, at least, — Who follow its lad Who is do-ing his bit over there; — It's on-ly one course, With mis-givings and fears, And whose prayers for it never have star, But it's all that they had, Do you wonder it fills ev-ry

Chorus.

It's on-ly a star in a ser-vice flag. Just one of a million or more: — But it stands for a boy Who for-sook ev'ry joy When his country was forced into war — There's a wee ba'-by brother, A sweetheart, a mother, He left when he answered the call — — And should an-y-thing hap-pen to their one lit-tle star, Then the sun would go down for them all -
