

executors to satisfy to the full. He also gives Mr. Green and goodwife Langhorne, both of Cambridge, forty shillings apiece as a token of his love for their affection shown to him.

To his aunt Pacey he gives his best cloak, waist-coat and forty shillings as a legacy, which he desires her to accept of. Further, he gives his "two sisters by his mother, viz., Margaret and Ann, ten pounds apiece," and he desires his executors to take this last legacy into their custody, and improve it to the best advantage in some way of increase in sheep or otherwise, as they shall see meet; the legatees to have the principal and increase at the day of their marriages, or within ten days after his father's decease. To Mr. Thomas Danforth and Mr. Samuel Danforth of Cambridge and Roxbury, his loving friends, he gives the sum of forty shillings apiece, and chooses both of them for his executors. To his dear brother John Dudley, he gives the rest of his estate, be it ten pounds more or less; he to have it when he comes to live of and by himself after he is twenty-one. And he requests that, out of his brother John's legacy, his father "most honored and dear," may have twenty shillings paid him "presently to buy him a ring as a small token of duty he owes him." And he further gives his brother his new suit that is now a making, and requests that his books, credits and part of the mill his grandfather Dudley gave him, be all sold and improved by his executors, that the most may be made of them.

SKETCH OF JUDGE THEOPHILUS³ DUDLEY,

SON OF REV. SAMUEL.³

(See pedigree opp. p. 16.)

HE was the Captain Dudley mentioned by Governor Joseph Dudley in one of his letters to Colonel Winthrop Hilton. His mother was Mary Byley, whose family came over in the Bevis of Hampton, in 1634. Henry Byley, who is sometimes erroneously called Byles, came from New Sarum in England. He seems to have been a very respectable man, although styled a
