

MRS. HARRIET C.⁶ BARKER is the only one living of the eleven children of Capt. William⁵ Dudley. She sends me these additions and corrections from Mrs. Charles Dudley's house at Providence. WHEN Ambrose Dudley moved to Kentucky in the spring of 1786, he bought fourteen hundred and fifty acres of land at two shillings per acre. This land is located three miles east of Lexington, and is in the heart of the famous "blue-grass" region. He married Ann Parker in Virginia, Feb. 2, 1773. For sketch of Ambrose Dudley, see Sprague's Annals of the American Baptist Pulpit, and Taylor's History of Virginia Baptist ministers, Vol. I.

After the battle at Raisin, T. P. Dudley (Ambrose,² Robert¹) was taken to Detroit without hat, overcoat or shoes, and was bought by a British officer and sent home. He was ordained to the gospel ministry in 1823, by Louis Craig, John Shackelford, and one other, the same ministers who ordained his father in Virginia. He was a Baptist minister of the Predestinarian order (not Presbyterian, as in No. V.).

He was appointed by Jackson to wind up several of the branches of the National Bank in central Kentucky, in which he was engaged about seven years. Previously, at the battle of New Orleans, Jackson had cast some reflections upon the valor of the Kentucky troops; and young Dudley, meeting him, rashly denounced him and even cursed him for what he regarded as an aspersion of his fellow Kentuckians. Possibly there may have been a little wine about. Anyhow Jackson cherished the warmest respect for Dudley and confidence in him, as is shown by his appointment to wind up the banks.
