

JERRY CRARY was born in 1842 on a farm east of Liberty, N. Y., on which his father had lived all his life. He obtained his education at the common schools and the Liberty Normal Institute, Liberty, N. Y. He worked on the farm in the summer, going to school in the winter, and also taught school in the same manner a few years. He enlisted in Aug., 1862, in Company H, 143rd Regiment, New York Volunteers. Had very good health and served with the regiment in all its campaigns, battles and marches until May 15, 1864, when he was wounded at Resaca, Ga. The regiment marched to Atlanta and Savannah and through the Carolinas to Washington, where it was discharged. Mr. Crary was in hospital in Nashville, Tenn., Jeffersonville, Ind., and Sisters of Charity Hospital, Buffalo, N. Y., until June, 1865, when he was discharged for disability, his wound still being unhealed. He entered the store of Allison & Crary, Allisonville, N. Y., as clerk and bookkeeper. In March, 1867, he went to Sheffield, Pa., where he entered the store of Horton, Crary & Co., as clerk and bookkeeper and later became partner in the business, assisting in its development and management during the existence of the firm. Upon the consolidation of the tanning companies in 1893 he was elected President of the Penn Tanning Company, serving for about ten years. He moved to Warren, Pa., in 1902, and has since been engaged in various lines of business, principally corporate. He married in 1870,

LAURA ANTOINETTE DUNHAM, daughter of Richard Dunham and Laura Allen. She was educated at the common schools and at the Female Institute, Lewisburg, Pa., from which she graduated in 1867. She
