

a long and intimate knowledge of his numerous virtues, it may now be allowed us to add a few minute particulars chiefly relative to his various publications.

“Mr. Budworth’s first and largest work was a Fortnight’s Ramble to the Lakes, by a Rambler, 1st Edition, 1792, 2nd ditto 1795, 3rd ditto 1810.

“In 1794, Mr. Budworth published the “Siege of Gibraltar,” a Poem for the emolument of the Widow and Children of a Naval Officer of Rank, who had recently fallen by the yellow fever.

“In the same year he published “Half-pay,” dedicated to Hans Sloane, Esq., M. P.

“In 1797 Mr. Budworth published “A View of the Village of Hampton, from Moulsey Hirst, and with the original Lancashire Collier Girl,” 12<sup>mo</sup>. This interesting story was first printed in one vol., 197 p., and had been widely disseminated by the Society for circulating serious tracts among the poor, but with some alterations not approved by its benevolent author.

“In 1798 he published “Windermere,” a Poem. The notes to this poem are very instructive and amusing, and peculiarly expressive of Mr. Budworth’s own benevolence of mind.

“To enumerate his various Essays both in poetry and prose in the pages of this Magazine would be tedious, suffice it to say that his well known signature, a “Rambler,” always afforded pleasure to our readers, as they were sure to find amusement and improvement conveyed in an original and manly turn of thought.

“The Literary Anecdotes of the 18th century contains a Memoir by Mr. Budworth, of his Father, the Rev. Wm. Budworth, the learned Master of Brewood School, in Staffordshire, and in the same work is his account of a very interesting conversation between Bishop Hurd, (who was educated by the Rev. Mr. Budworth) and himself. And in the late Edition of the Bishop’s Works, is a handsome eulogium on his worthy School Master.”—Editor Gents. Mag. Vol. 85, pt. 2, p. 391, (Nov. 1815)

Joseph Budworth died at Eastbourne, Sept. 4, 1815, and was buried Sept. 14, in the Churchyard of West Moulsey, Surrey.”

On visiting the Church of West Moulsey, on July 6th, 1876, I was much gratified to find that the memory of Capt. Joseph Budworth had by no means become obliterated in the Parish, and that thirty years after his death the inhabitants had placed on the north side of the aisle and nearly over against his tomb, which is in proximity
