- 328 XI. David, b. Sept. 19, 1799 (more than seven and a half months after his father's decease); m. Ellen (Lena, b. Nov. 23, 1801, dau. of Marcellus-Helmigh Post and Judich Evertse), Dec. 2, 1820; d. Feb. 7, 1856; she d. Aug. 11, 1877. His mother having married a second time, David did not get along well with his stepfather. So, when only eleven years old, he went to Newark and was apprenticed to the shoemaker's trade. Completing his apprenticeship in five years, at the age of sixteen he set up for himself, and plied his trade with such diligence and success, that in eight years he was able to buy a small tract of land at the present Athenia, by deed dated Jan. 24, 1824, from Henry Jacobus, for $575, for six acres. Settling here, he worked at his trade for a few years longer, and also tilled his land, to which he added by subsequent purchases from time to time, until he had quite a farm.¹ He was known as David D. Doremus. He lived in Acquackanonk township, about half a mile northwest from the present Athenia station on the Paterson and Newark railroad. By his will, dated Nov. 13, 1855, proved March 15, 1856, he devised his homestead to his son Andrew.²
