The Practical Farmer

AND JOURNAL OF THE FARM.

34 PARK ROW, NEW YORK.

FOREIGN AGENCY.

F. ALGER, 8 Clement's Lane, Lombard Street, London, England.

It is the only agricultural paper published in Pennsylvania. Two editions are published simultaneously—New York and Philadelphia—and advertisers get the benefit of both editions.

It is the Official Organ of the Centennial Bureau of Agriculture.

It has a real and bona fide circulation among the largest and most reliable farmers and business men in town and country, many of whom take no other agricultural paper. It is published in convenient size and shape for binding, so that every advertisement appears in a permanent form before its readers, which probably number not less than 100,000 persons, as a majority of the copies go to several families. The publishers are always careful to exclude all unreliable men and articles, which is a guarantee to its readers that they will not be swindled, and for that reason they are more ready to patronize the advertisers who appear in its columns. The proprietors of the PRACTICAL FARMER are not connected, either directly or indirectly, with any firm engaged in the manufacture of agricultural implements, farm machinery, fertilizers, etc., and maintain the same advertising rates to all. It is national in its character, and is just as valuable to advertisers in New England, Southern, South-Western, and Western States as in New York or Pennsylvania.
