

Wappenbuch—Hohe Adel see Rheina-Wolbeck Nurnberg 1888. Hist. Gen. de Neufville—1869. Almanach de Gotha Rheina-Wolbeck 1895-7. Copie d'une Gen. de Lannoy 1139—1866. MSS. Gen. de Lannoy en Flandre 1096-1760. Old French Gens. in 10 vols. Généalogie de la Maison de Lannoy Paris 1667—fol. These works contain various lines of Lannoy complete; for such refer to vols. named. All the lines are mentioned in this work, but some branches are not in full. In Dict. Hist. et Her. de la Noblesse Francaise. Vol. 1, 1896 by Mailhol Lannoy is given as being apparently extinct in France.

II: HUGUES II de LANNOY succeeded his brother Robert 1366 and was living in 1373 seigneur de Lannoy de Lys & de Maingoval. He made in 1373 an endowment in the church at Lys where later he was buried. Married: Marie de Berlaimont or Berlaymont daughter of Fastre de Berlaimont chevalier. Coat-armor: Azure, a bande—bend—argent charged with three eagles sable. Hugue II, inherited & bore his fathers' armes: Arg. 3 lions rampant sinople crowned or, with a bordure engrailed gules: They had: Jean "le Ramager" who follows.

JEAN I de LANNOY surnamed "le ramager" (the singer or warbler) seigneur de Lannoy de Lys & de Maingoval (son of Hugues II). He built the chateau de Lannoy [castle at Lannoy] where we find "Jean de Lannoy écuyer (esquire) who was at a review with six other écuyers of his company April 22 1378." "Jean de Lannoy one of nine écuyers of the company of Binart du Perray écuyers (esquires) de la company de Pierre de Havesquerque, seigneur de Raisse chevalier, captain of the ville d'Ardres, in Sept. 1410." "Jean de Lannoy one of fifteen écuyers of the company of Antoine de Lay chev. Boch who was killed at Rosay in Brie Oct. 3 1411." "Jean de Lannoy one of the écuyers of the company of Guy de Laval seigneur de Gaure écuyer banneret, who was killed at Pontoise Oct. 4 1411." He married: Jeanne de Croy daughter of Jean seigneur de Croy GRAND-BOUTEILLER de FRANCE (killed at Agincourt 1415) (Chief Butler to the KING 1405 ?) & wife Marguerite de Craon—who remarried Jean seig. de Sombresse—Armes Croy: Arg., 3/fascies gules—see chap. on Gold. Fleece—they had a 2d son Antoine de Lannoy seigneur de MAINGOVAL who follows succeeded his bro. & the eldest son and LANNOY heir Jean II. Note "le Ramager" is called the first Jean de Lannoy showing that de Franchimont was not counted as a Lannoy.

JEAN II de LANNOY seigneur de Lannoy & de Lys. He created a Chevalier de la TOISON d'OR in 1451 (L) & was the fourth CHANCELLOR of that Order, under the duc de Bourgogne—He was an AMBASSADOR to England for the treaty of Peace with France 1453, being the end of the "Hundred years War" [Louis XI King of France & Henry VI of Eng.]. He was captain of "cent hommes d'armes" (100 men at arms) in the war against the Gantois. Gouverneur of the cities of LILLE, Douai, & Orchies, Bailly d'Amiens Captain of Dourlens (Doullens ?) and instituted in 1458 GOVERNOR of HOLLANDE, Zelande &