

An aerial extension fire ladder is a necessary part of the R-34's hangar equipment—fastening the British naval ensign to the giant dirigible's stern just before the start of her recent transatlantic round trip. Note the runways at the top of the hangar for access to the top of the great blimp.

The sight of appetizing food in the show windows of a store in the Invalidenstrasse was too much for the self-control of the hungry Berliners, who raided the place and carried off a bountiful loot of delicacies before the arrival of the police.

Two remarkable one-armed golfers who have been giving an interesting series of exhibition matches recently in East Orange. Louis Martucci, one-armed champion of Italy, and Ydes Dotoapou, one-armed champion of France.

Major Filip Jacob, of Rumania, on his prize winner, Beby, taking a fence in beautiful form in the jumping contest of July 5 at the inter-Allied games, held in Pershing Stadium, at Joinville.

General Peyton C. March, Chief of Staff, wearing his newest decorations, the great cross and sash of the Order of St. Maurice and Lazzaro, presented to him by General Emilio Guglielmotti on behalf of the Italian government. President Wilson has recommended that General March and General Pershing be made permanent generals for the remainder of their lives.

Ambassador Wallace places a wreath, sent by President Wilson and inscribed "From a fellow servant of Liberty," on the tomb of General Lafayette. The ceremony took place in Paris, July 4. To the left stands General Tasker Bliss and peeking out from behind the lady's hat can be distinguished the features of General Pershing.

A Newport photo of Mme. E. de Cartier de Marchienne, wife of the Belgian Minister to the United States, whose marriage took place recently in Paris. Mme. de Marchienne was Mrs. Hamilton Cary, of New York.

A recent and very charming photograph of Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt, a prominent figure in New York and Newport society. Mr. Vanderbilt is president of the Assoc. of American Horse Shows.

Being pinched by a new speed cop in Cheyenne, Wyoming, isn't any joke. Miss Frances Irwin guarantees to stop any lawbreaker who races his car in the town during the period of the famous Frontier Days Roundup.

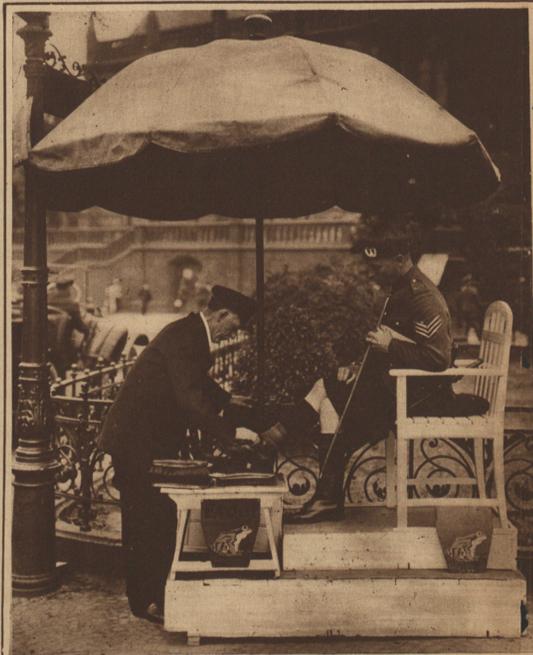

John Jacob Astor, 6th son of Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor-Dick, whose fortune, left him by his father, Col. John Jacob Astor, lost on the Titanic, will amount to some $10,000,000 by the time he reaches his majority.

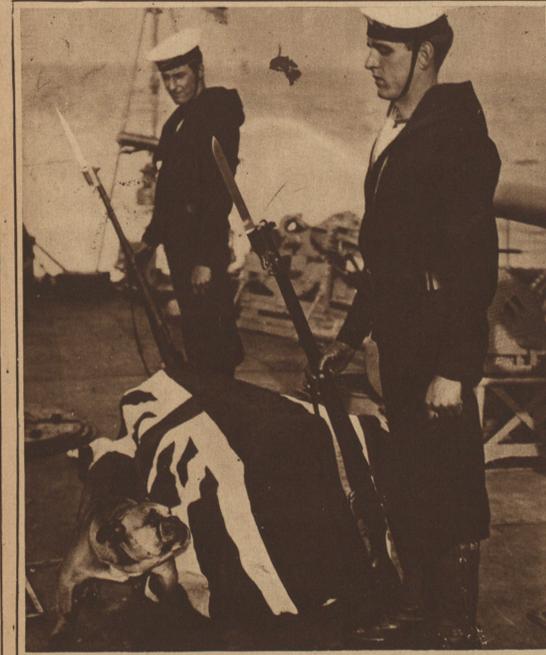

Sergeant G. A. Reed, of San Francisco, a lady friend and the latest thing in chaperons—a pet mountain lion. Needless to say, this couple are in the same class as fire engines when it's a question of right of way through Fitco traffic.

Left—Major General Siebert, photographed on the steps of the French Embassy in Washington immediately after the ceremony at which Ambassador Jusserand bestowed upon him and Major General Barnett of the Marines the French War Cross.

What a difference from a year ago. This Coblenz Heime is now shining Allied footweers instead of German artillery, and Jock of the Scotch Highlanders apparently is a skeptical customer.

The casket of Captain Fyatt, brought home to England for final honorable burial, on the deck of the destroyer Orpheus, guarded by the men of the Dover Patrol and an English bull. Captain Fyatt was shot by the Germans for an alleged attempt to ram an attacking U-boat with his ship.

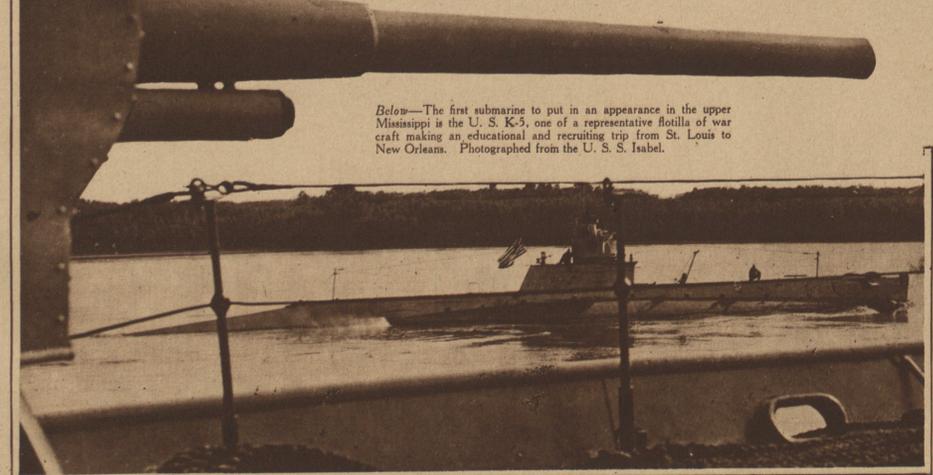

Mme. Eishiro Nuido, wife of the Secretary of the Japanese Embassy in Washington, wearing the exquisite and picturesque costume in which she appeared at the recent reception given for President-elect Pessoa of Brazil.

Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, watching the inter-Allied games in her box at the Pershing Stadium.

Undaunted by the downpour of rain, over a thousand Czech-Slovak soldiers of five years' constant warfare stood outside the Capitol in Washington last week, waiting to march in review before President Wilson. Above—Two seventy-year-old Czech veterans, survivors of the terrible Siberian campaigns against the Russian Bolsheviks. Over 400 of the Czechs in the parade were wounded chevrons.

Below—The first submarine to put in an appearance in the upper Mississippi is the U. S. K-3, one of a representative flotilla of war craft making an educational and recruiting trip from St. Louis to New Orleans. Photographed from the U. S. S. Isabel.
