The Merchant is cast down with loaded shelves in view,
And no customer buys to his sorrow
For soon from New York he will get a billet doux,
For money is a hard thing to borrow. Let him take down his shingle &c.

4
The politician stares, office costs a mighty "lump,"
And the mouth of his purse is so narrow
It was just to get some cash, that he got upon the stump,
Knowing money is a hard thing to borrow. Let him take down his shingle &c.

5
The whiskey maker sighs, for the drought has kill'd the corn
And he looks on his prospects with horror,
For he knows his friends wont stick when he hasnt got a "horn"
Finding money is a hard thing to borrow. Let him take down his shingle &c.

6
But honest men ne'er fear, though there come a mighty crash
And a note should fall due on the morrow
Just call on your friends, they will spare a little cash,
Though money is a hard thing to borrow. You can keep up your shingle &c
