Fireside Companion Version.

1.

Maggie and I had a tiff one night
 'Cause she danced at a ball at Eurke's
 With a four-dollar dude with a blonde moustache,
 He's the book-keeper where she works.
 He wore a glass di'mond, a hired dress suit;
 She thought he was just all right
 When I asked her to shake him, she gave me the laugh;
 So he took Maggie home that night.

Ah, but it's all right now;
 Yes, it is all right now.
 When I saw her alone, why, we made it all up,
 But I shan't say how.
 It was a great mistake
 That we two had that row;
 Why, she did it to see just how jealous I'd be ---
 But it's all right now.

2.

Next day I saw her pass by the shop;
 For she don't go to work till eight;
 But she wouldn't look in, as she always did,
 Hurrying by as if she were late.
 "Oh, well there are others", I called to her
 Before she had gone by far.
 "Why, of course there are others", she said with a laugh,
 "And I know where some of them are."

Ah, but it's all right now;
 Yes, it's all right now.
 When I saw her alone, why, we made it all up,
 But I shan't say how.
 It was a great mistake
 That we two had that row;
 I felt dead to the world there for two or three days;
 But it's all right now.

3.

You may think it's a trifle perhaps it is.
 Good fish there are in the sea.
 The world's full of girls, and I know a lot;
 But there's only one for me.
 So I waited my chance, and I thumped that dude
 Till he was a sight to see.
 And when I told Maggie she laughed and she said
 "Well, that settles him with me."
 Ah, but it's all right now;
 Yes, it's all right now,
 That's her going by. Wait, and I'll catch her eye.
 Did you see that bow?
 It was a great mistake
 That we two had that row;
 But a kiss made amends. We're the best of good friends,
 And it's all right now.
