"THE BLACKSMITH."

Words by DR. H. M. SMITH.

Music by HUBBARD T. SMITH.

With an arm of might, at the dawn of light, the blacksmith hies to his shop a-way! To la - bor till the whip-poorwill at evening sings her ves - per lay The cresc. f

bel - lows blow . . . and the coals soon glow . . . like the daz - zling rays of the noon - day sun! The huge sledge swings

. . . and the an - vil rings . . . for the dai - ly task is now be - gun!

The sparkas bright as a meteor's light from the viv - id met - - - al swift - ly fly; Whilst wreaths of smoke

dim. p

. . . from the burning coke in beauteous col - umns rise on high!

Allegro.

Allegro. f List,

list the peal, as on the steel the ham-mers swift - ly fall with might. Like

The Blacksmith.

clash-ing swords when arm - y hordes con-tend - ing meet in dead - ly fight, con - tending meet in dead - ly fight! Fine. Moderato. p Tho' on his brow The sweat stands now He heeds . . it not, but toils a - way! Since heavh has said man's dai - ly bread By la - bor shall be won each day

The world may f sneer, . . and cast a leer . . . on the soot - y . . smith while pass - ing by But what cares he . . . with a ff heart as free . . as the curl - - ing smoke as - cend - ing high!

D.S. to Fine.
