Unrestrained, we freely wander,
Thro' the fragrant fields of green,
But we pause not in our rambling,
Tho' it be a lovely scene.
In this quiet, elf-like region,
Unknown guests before us stand,
Guests who wander from the future
To the peerless vision-land.

Those who never yet have known us,
Those whom we already prize,
In a brilliant panorama,
Float before our raptured eyes,
Then we'll banish from our natures
Everything which evil seems,
Since our thoughts, tho' pure or sinful,
Are reflected in our dreams.
