UNDER THE LINDENS.

IDYLLE.

The summer of 1870 was spent with some dear friends at an old farm House near East Hampton, Long Island, celebrated in that neighborhood for its comforts, and above all, for the two gigantic Linden Trees that flank the doorway, and which are decidedly the feature of that pastoral but flat landscape. With swung hammock under their cool shades to invite us, as well as the constant ocean breezes that sang in the branches, and made even those well remembered days endurable and the evenings refreshing, all care was forgotten, and hours of true comfort most frequent.– Alas! that those happy days are but memories and the only fruits of this little souvenir.
