A young man was seat-ed one night in June, While all na-ture seemed at rest —
 They sat in the moon-light these lov-ers true, But now they were old and gray —

— He was tell-ing the tale of his love so true, to the girl he loved the best —
 They told each the sto-ries they told in youth, it seemed like yes-ter-day —

— As they sat in the moon-light he told her — As he looked in her eyes of blue, —
 — As she sat by his side there she told him — In words that were fond and true, —

— If I had the world to make o-ver — I'd make it all for you. —
 — If I had the world to make o-ver — I'd make it all for you. —

Refrain, Slowly.

If I had the world to make o ver I'd make it all for you, I'd make more bees in the clo ver,

I'd make the sky more blue I'd make more ro - ses and sun shine, I'd make more spring-time too. If I had the world to make

o ver I'd make it all for you. If you,
