The Call To Peace

I

When this war is o'er,
Let us have no more;
For men were not made to kill.
Let us learn to live,
And freely give
Of the spirit of good-will.
There is room for all,
Nations great and small,
And we all each other need.
With an active peace
We shall all increase,
And o'ercome the lust of greed.

II

The Pharaohs' power
Lived but an hour;
And Egypt is forgot.
Alexander the Great
Won a tyrant's fate,
The ruthless warrior's lot.
Great Caesar fell,
And Rome as well
Has lost her mighty power.
Napoleon too
The day did rue
He tried the world to cover.

REFRAIN

O let us pray
His hand will stay
The error by His might!
The good will live,
And glory give
To those who seek the right.
With war's surcease
We learn that peace
Makes art and beauty grow;
Instead of arms,
'Tis love that charms
The soul to rise and know.

III

If the cost of war
With its awful gore
Were used to educate,
This knowledge true
The point of view
Would change in every state.
May the watchword be,
"Let the truth make free,"
To resound through every land;
Then the slave's release
Will love increase,
And men as one will stand.

IV

Our land is for all
Who are caught in the thrall
Of oppression and of strife;
Let us keep her pure
That she may endure,
And in spirit gain new life.
May our land of the free
The leader be,
With the flag of white unfurled;
And the dove of peace
May she release
To soar around the world.
