

Class BL2700

Book .F68

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 1.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, JANUARY 4, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal. as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - JANUARY 4, 1890.

LAW AND RELIGION.

The question is often asked, Why are our attorneys so indifferent to the claims of religion, and such poor patrons of the church? Why do they so completely ignore what should really be the higher wisdom of the clergy? The clergyman has the benefit of an education equally with the lawyer. He is supposed to make a profound study of the "Book of God." He is thought to live a holy life, apart from those sins and that strife which the lawyer cannot avoid. And he implores God to endow him with an elevated and heavenly wisdom; nay, he is supposed to acquire by his ordination a sort of authority to understand and teach what pertains to God, and man's salvation. With all these advantages why does the law student neglect his advice?

Because at the very roots the two systems—law and religion—point different ways. The law school and the divinity school are as wide apart as light and darkness. No sane man can accept both. No sound mind can find room for the two systems. One or the other must be extinguished. They stand opposed. Religion sets up these positions: "God is an absolute despot, bound by no rule of right. His will is law, which we have only to obey. He has sent his book, his son, his prophets, and his priests, to man, to instruct, to guide, to rule. If you believe, obey, and pay the priest, God will smile, and prosper and reward you in heaven. If you refuse, he will frown on you, bring disaster, death, and hell."

This is the sum of all religion. It is not merely Christian alone, but the essence of all the religions of the world. Sift them to the bottom and you find this. Each has its own book, prophet, and priest; but the one idea of all is contained in the foregoing words.

Now the law student has this foundation for his starting point: "There is a great moral obligation resting on all rational beings in their relation to each other—the father to the child, the husband to the wife, the citizen to the state, and vice versa. Indeed, all obligation is mutual, as there can be no valid contract without a consideration.

"The human mind is subject to certain laws of evidence, and cannot, and should not, accept belief without that evidence. All mere opinions should be free. The man, to be free, must think, and to think is to be liable to error. But errors of judgment are not crimes, and cannot rightly be punished as such. Crime, to deserve punishment, must be a wrong done with intent, with deliberation, with malice, with no sufficient provocation, and not in self-defense. The rules of evidence alone are safe guides in sifting testimony and establishing facts. No man should be convicted of any offense unless the proof is conclusive in the light of these rules. All punishment should be adjusted to the offense, neither unusual nor cruel, and should carry with it the purpose of reform and paternal kindness."

Now, when the propositions of religion, as above set out, are presented to the law student, he finds an absolute incongruity. His law is rational, just, and useful, while the religion presented lacks every quality of mercy, justice, and reason. As compared to the God of the preacher, the judge on the bench is an oracle of wisdom and beneficence.

It is not possible to conceive of a great and good God to whom man owes duty and devotion, without at once admitting that God owes reason and right in return. "Shall not the judge of all the earth do right?" is a sort of admission of this fact. God cannot do wrong, in the same sense that George Washington could not lie. God cannot be foolish or unlearned. He cannot be ignorant of any great principle of justice or truth; if he were, he would not be a god.

With these truths in view, let us suppose an unbelieving soul called before one of our earthly judges for final trial. Would it be conducted on orthodox principles? By no means. If the indictment set up the probative allegations of the Christian religion, they would all be ruled out. Were the pope to put in his plea that he is the vicegerent of God on earth, the vicar of Christ, the head of the church, that he holds the keys of heaven, and is altogether infallible, the court would decide that he was an impostor.

The law student cannot set aside the laws of evidence, the rules of justice, and the dicta of common sense, and accept such a system, and he is not alone. The doctors are equally debarred from any possible acceptance. Their knowledge of the human body and mind, with all its liabilities to error, forbids. Even clergymen are only kept in the magic circle of faith by the severest discipline. The Bible teaches nothing certain. There is not a point that is not in debate with themselves. There is nothing so certain as this, that there is not a solitary tenet of the Christian faith that is not in dispute among those who pretend to be orthodox believers; and the whole learned world has ceased to quote either scripture or catechism or creed, in support of any practical project.

The governments of the civilized world, which three hundred years ago were guided by theologians, have discarded them as wholly impracticable and incompetent. Crowded out of civilization they are seeking followers in barbarous realms, as a last refuge; and intelligent people no longer look to the clergy for either grace or guidance.

BW 2700
F68

CONVERSION AND WIFE-BEATING.

Richard L. Cochran was in jail across the bay on the day following Christmas, on a charge of beating his wife, and when the judge inquired if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced upon him he responded briefly: "Your honor, the only plea I make in extenuation of my offense, is that I didn't beat her very hard.

Richard's mother was in court, and when her son made his confession she shouted: "No, you didn't do your duty by her, you ought to have beat her within an inch of her life. She is worse than a fiend of the infernal regions. She refused to be converted, and she ought to be killed. I say to you, judge, that my son's wife deserves no mercy. Richard and I have been born again, and we are the Lord's children; but she, Richard's wife, refuses to believe in the visions and the trances. He believed in them, but through her influence he lost his faith and was ruined. On Christmas day he was again drunken Dick Cochran, and when he went home he grabbed the Christmas dinner turkey from the table and struck her over the head. But did she not deserve it? Has she not refused to be converted? Glory to God! Dick and I have been born again, and he shall not live with an unbeliever."

The judge could not see that unbelief was a sufficient excuse for wife-beating. He imposed the usual sentence, "Fifty dollars or fifty days," and the convert was led below. Later in the day old Mrs. Cochran appeared at the prison. "Tell Dick that I am here," she said, "and I will pay his fine on condition that he never returns to that unconverted woman. If he refuses to leave her tell him he may rot in his cell before I pay a dollar to secure his release." The officer who conveyed the message to the wife-beater returned with the answer: "He says he will jump into the bay before he ever returns to his wife." "Glory to God!" shouted the mother. "Here is your $50 and I'd pay it if it were a thousand." And a few minutes later Cochran, the wife-beater, departed with his mother. His unconverted wife will commence divorce proceedings. Verily, religion is doing a blessed work!

A WISE MOVEMENT.

It will be seen from the letter of Mrs. Gage, printed in this issue of FREETHOUGHT, that a split has taken place in the National Woman Suffrage Association, and that the proposition is made to form a new society on more Liberal principles than govern the old organization. There has for some time been noticeable a growing conservative tendency on the part of the national association, culminating in the union with the American Woman Suffrage Society last January. Mrs. Gage was among the inaugurators of the National Association. She wrote its constitution twenty years ago, and has worked for it since that period, but now finds it impossible to longer affiliate with the organization. Many of the younger members, from motives of business or social policy, or from blindness, cater to the church; while some of the older ones are not able to bear the crucial test of social recognition in place of the contempt with which they had long been treated. The "American Society" was always a more conservative body than the National Association, and the union of the latter with the former is considered a backward and downward step. After due consideration, therefore, Mrs. Gage has decided to call together the more Liberal thought women of the country for the purpose of forming a national society of women fearless enough to speak the truth, not alone in reference to their own emancipation, but to show the destructive aim of the church with regard to the government, both state and national. In this project hearty co-operation is met in many parts of the country. The formal public call, which has been deferred until success was assured, will soon be issued. In the mean time we wish the new movement the greatest prosperity, and hope the West will send a large body of delegates to the convention.

THE LECTURE AT UNION SQUARE HALL.

Do not forget that next Sunday evening, January 5, there will be a Liberal meeting at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, addressed by S. P. Putnam. Admission is free, and all are invited.

THE AMENITIES OF THE SITUATION.

We are able at the beginning of 1890 to extend to our readers the compliments of the season and to assure them that this promises to be a happy new year for FREETHOUGHT. After two years of arduous labor the publishers of this paper find for the first time in its history that they may for a brief period put off the burden of anxiety for the immediate future, knowing that their charge is safe. If Sisyphus, who was "doomed to toss the rolling stone that got no moss," had suddenly found hundreds of willing hands seizing and supporting his burden, so that it no longer rolled back upon him, and that his work thereafter would be merely to aid and direct, he would doubtless have felt a certain sense of relief. Those who can appreciate his sensations at such a moment may apprehend to some extent the placid and quiet restfulness which we are permitted to enjoy at the present time. To a paper struggling for its weekly existence, with debts incessantly threatening to rival its assets; to men with a constantly increasing load which they can scarce carry and yet must not lay off, what could be more gratifying than to find themselves all at once relieved of the weight, their responsibilities taken from them as by magic, their burden upheld by stronger hands, and wider and pleasanter paths opening to their feet?

This beatific state of affairs being exactly the condition of FREETHOUGHT and its publishers, why should we not send to every reader, to every man, woman, and child on the face of the earth a hearty New Year's greeting? Such a greeting to all, singly and severally, we do hereby extend. May they enjoy with us long life and good luck!

Mrs. WOODWORTH, the Oakland revivalist, has placed another lunatic to her credit—a young man who tried to kill himself on a ferryboat a few days ago—and the people are beginning to think that something should be done. This has been our position all along, that something ought to be done, namely, instruct the popular mind that religion is principally ignorance touched with insanity, and that its preachers are mainly impostors. When this truth prevails, there will be no more religious lunatics.

It is hoped that correspondents will be indulgent with us for a brief time. The task of moving and settling down has fallen heavily upon the active parties in the work, but we are laboring diligently to overtake the rush of business. This explanation, we trust, will be accepted as an apology by those who fail to hear from us personally.

502140

Je 22, '36

NEW HAMPSHIRE is blessed with a governor that would have done credit to the colonial days of New England. His name is Goodall, and he has just issued this extraordinary proclamation:

"In view of various and heinous crimes within the past few weeks, directly traceable to the use of intoxicating liquors, in the sales of which the criminal laws have been flagrantly violated:

"Now, therefore, I warn all persons engaged in the illegal and deadly traffic to desist therefrom immediately, and I call upon the attorney-general, solicitors, and sheriffs of the counties, mayors of cities and selectmen, and all other officers throughout the state, and upon all good citizens of every party to unite in one supreme effort to close up and suppress every liquor saloon of every description within our borders.

"Let no guilty man escape.

"I cannot refrain from urging all churches, temperance organizations, and all persons who desire the best good of the commonwealth to redouble their efforts to promote personal sobriety and temperance among our people."

Something is the matter with New Hampshire. The state is not prosperous, and the temperance people imagine that only prohibition is necessary to restore her lost prestige. The fact has to be admitted, however, that less liquor is consumed by her people now than fifty years ago, and that the tighter the screws are turned on individual freedom, the greater the decrease of business in city and country.

FREETHOUGHT is safely landed in its new quarters at 838 Howard street. Messrs. Schou and Gierisch have done their work well in fitting up shelves and partitions, donating the larger part of their services, and Mr. Breuer has performed a great deal of gratuitous painting. Fifty dollars' worth of work should be credited to these gentlemen. When things are settled down a trifle and we have regained our bearings, the paper may be expected to appear with less of incompleteness than marks this issue.

THE insanity and suicide of John Taggart at San Mateo are due to religious influences. He was a Catholic by birth, and when John Slater introduced him to the "spirits" he took the Catholic view that they were devils, and acted accordingly. Taggart did business as a phenologist on Kearny street a few doors from our former office, and was often to be seen standing in his doorway waiting for "subjects."

GEO. H. DAWES, of North Yamhill, Or., desires lecture engagements in Oregon and Idaho during the spring and summer, and will go into Wyoming and Utah if calls are loud enough. He holds a six-nights' debate with the Rev. James Campbell at McMinnville in April, and has engagements at Prineville, Corvallis, Eddyville, Wilsonville, Mulino, Lone Rock, and Lost Valley in Oregon.

THE rainy weather preceding Christmas ruined the holiday trade with San Francisco merchants. One firm alone is reported to have lost more than twenty thousand dollars from this cause. Perchance an offended heavenly father has adopted the above method as a rebuke to those who would make merchandise of the birthday anniversary of his only begotten son!

THE beginning of a New Year is always a good time to renew. Those who hold the publisher in kind remembrance cannot make him a more appropriate gift than the name of a new subscriber.

READ OUR Premium List on page 13.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The old Jesuit church on Market street, in which the Spiritualist paper, the Carrier Dove, is published, has been again gutted by fire. Three women lost their lives by suffocation from the smoke and flames.—The floods have cut off communication by rail with the southern part of the state.—John Taggart, laboring under the delusion that devils were after him, committed suicide by cutting his throat in a Catholic church at San Mateo last Sunday.—A special from Walla Walla, Wash., says: A few days ago a stranger hailing from Minnesota appeared here and claimed to be hunting for his runaway wife and child and exhibiting the photograph of the man who he supposed had taken his wife from him. It was soon discovered that the face was that of a Methodist minister going by the name of Bond and stationed at Dixie circuit. Somehow the minister got an intimation of trouble being ahead and with the derelict wife immediately disappeared.—Col. J. D. Stevenson, the man who brought the famous Stevenson's regiment to this coast in 1846-47, was ninety years old Jan. 1. His friends gave him a reception in the Pioneer building.—Robert J. Stevens, U. S. consul at Victoria, died at Seattle Dec. 25.

Chu Fong, the Chinese Napoleon of finance, who was arrested in New York Dec. 27, proves to have been even more of a gay Lothario than was at first reported. He was found in a house on Fifteenth street in the midst of a circle of pretty American girls whom he was supporting, one of whom was his former Sunday-school teacher. His forgeries reach $50,000 fully.—Influenza is making its appearance in many American cities.—Eight negroes were lynched by a mob at Barnwell, S. C., last week. They were accused of committing several murders, but had not been convicted.—The recent decisions against the Mormons are said to have produced a lively business boom in Salt Lake City.—A daughter of Sam Jones, the revivalist, ran away from her parents and married a stenographer at Chattanooga, Tenn., the other day. The Rev. Jones opposed the match.—The Rev. J. B. Goodall, Baptist, of Orange, N. J., was lately forced at the muzzle of a breach of promise suit to marry a young lady whom he had deceived. He was at the same time engaged to another young lady with whom he will also have to settle when he gets back from the South, whither he has gone in haste.

Parnell, the Irish leader, is co-respondent in a divorce suit brought by one Captain O'Shea.—The influenza epidemic in Paris is growing more serious and the disease is in many instances accompanied with fatal results.—Gladstone was eighty years old last Sunday.—The emperor of Germany has lately pardoned an editor convicted of libeling a Socialist.—The wife of Dom Pedro, late emperor of Brazil, is dead. She died of heart disease, her death being hastened by the late troubles in the new republic.—Robert Browning, the English poet, was buried Tuesday in Westminster Abbcy. The grave is just below Chaucer's tomb and within a few feet of Spenser's sepulchre. The poet lies side by side with Abraham Cowley, who died in 1667.

MR. CRUZAN AGAIN.

The Rev. John Cruzan, pastor of the Third Congregational church, gave another "plain talk" last Sunday night from his pulpit, the subject being "Wage-working Women." The church was well filled. He began by comparing the condition of the working-women of the East with those of this city and coast. We take our report from the Examiner.

"In some respects," he said, "the working-woman of this city is far better off than her sister in the East. Anyone noticing the statistics of the laboring classes could not but be struck by the fact that so large a proportion of our working-women live in their own homes and are provided for by friends and relatives:

"At first glance this will be seen to be a great advantage to the woman that has a home, but a disadvantage to the one who has not. And for these reasons:

"In the first place she who does not need to work takes the bread out of the mouth of one who does. She lowers wages, because she has not the same necessity as her less fortunate sister; and, more than all the rest, she is largely responsible for the sneer with which we hear the characters of working-women discussed. Not because of any immorality or looseness of character on her part, but because she is enabled with the wages she earns, and which are not required to keep body and soul together, to dress better and more expensively.

LS 4/22/57

"People see this and are apt to draw the conclusion that she has other and degrading sources of revenue. The wage-working women are the purest of women. To find immorality you must go a grade higher in the social scale or a grade lower. But this does not lessen the fact that people talk, and the doubt which attaches to the characters of some in time comes to attach to all.

"Another point in which our working-women have the advantage over those in the East is found in the fact that she works shorter hours—from eight to ten hours in a day—while the Eastern women are compelled to work from nine to sixteen hours. Still another advantage is the higher wage. The average here is from $4 a week, which is earned in canneries and wineries, to $11, which is the average in umbrella making. The average from all trades is from $5 to $6. And the commissioner of the labor bureau states that the tendency on this coast for all manual labor performed by women is for a daily wage of a dollar. But owing to the increased cost of living it is a question whether our women will be able to buy more of the necessities of life than the Eastern women on the smaller wage.

"While the conditions under which our women work are in some respects better than those under which some women work in the East, yet there is much to be remedied. Her quarters for the most part are much better.

"Yet I have read in the report of the commissioner of the labor bureau of a place on Kearny street where fifteen women are packed in a basement under the sidewalk where the only natural light and ventilation comes through the grating in the sidewalk. The air is vitiated by the presence of so many human beings crowded into one small place, by the damp stone walls, by the sewer gas and by the illuminating gas constantly burning up the supply of oxygen. Think of a delicate woman working from morning till night in such a hole! And this is only one of many instances.

"Again, she is compelled to stand upon her feet from the time she goes to work till the time she leaves. Some men become brutalized by their lust for gold. I was told of one man who, upon being visited by a committee of the Women's Protective Union, which asked him to furnish seats for his girls, brutally replied that he would not put a seat in his place, and if the girls didn't like it they might leave. If that man's name had not been given me in confidence, I would inaugurate a boycott on him from this pulpit.

"It is by these means that such men are enabled to furnish us with 'bargains.' It is in the avoidance of all 'bargain' counters that the remedy lies. When you see a bargain be sure that some poor woman has slaved for little or nothing under the lash of the sweater to enable him to sell it cheap. Avoid the bargain counter as you would something evil, and let those who have a means of livelihood refrain from competing in the labor market with their poorer sisters. In this lies the remedy of many of the wrongs of the working woman."

DRIVER IN UNION, OR.

The Rev. Mr. Driver, a notorious preacher of Portland, has been extending his uselessness into the country. Amos K. Jones, editor of the Union Scout, gives him the following notice:

A series of "holy shows," as they are called, under the management of Rev-enue Driver, the comedian, is now progressing at the Methodist church. While the staid thoughtful members of the church look on in solemn disapproval at the antics of the monkey in the pulpit, the show is highly enjoyed by the unregenerated sinners who like to have fun wherever they can find it. The beefy sky-pilot wears side-whiskers, which, by a slight exertion of the imagination on the part of the spectators, are transformed into wings, and as his rubicund face beams with heavenly rapture, and streams of execration pour from the hole in his countenance, the effect is comical indeed. He is a great advertiser and makes it a rule to write out a synopsis of his sermon—or we should say a programme of his show—and reads it in the barber shops, livery stables, and on the street corners, assuring all who will listen to him that no admission is charged at the door; that salvation is free, and urging them to "come to Jesus right now." We understand the subject of his discourse next Sunday evening will be: "The Scout Scrunched, or a Skeptical Skunk Skewered and Skun." It is thought the heavenly harp-ster will be able to extract a vast amount of spiritual consolation and soul-satisfying peace out of the text. In a recent sermon his attention was about evenly divided between Jones and Jesus, with Jones leading a little in point of importance. This flattery to Jones (that's us) is beginning to make us feel pretty hefty, and we are liable to assume complete control of the earth hereabouts at any time. If we do, it need not alarm Mr. Driver. He can just transfer his allegiance from Jesus to Jones and his salary will continue right along.

AUSTRALIAN LETTER.

In reviewing the political situation in Australia in a former letter, I took occasion to mention Anarchy as one of the so-called fads of the day, but when we come to consider that it is based on a philosophy of the highest order and looked on with favor by some of the most celebrated writers of the day, among whom not the least was Ralph Waldo Emerson, it must not be regarded with contempt. But the ideal, or Anarchy in its entirety, is an utter impossibility until organized monarchy shall have disappeared from the face of the earth—an occurrence which naturally would be followed by universal republicanism. Then Anarchy may fit in as a medium in lessening the evils of government, as was shown by its short reign in California nearly forty years ago, a reign too short to give it full development, but long enough to prove that it is quite practicable under a government endowed with the functions of diplomacy. If, then, it was practicable in one state, why not in every state subject to similar conditions? It is not deficient in war—it will be remembered that the battles of Bunker Hill and Lexington were fought by Anarchists—every man was his own commander and hit straight out from his own shoulder, forming no organized front for the enemy to strike at; and history furnishes us with the result. Thus far we have seen it successful in war, but we fail to see how it could have negotiated a peace or maintained friendly relations with other nations. It is just possible that Paine, Jefferson, and others, would have contemplated such a form of government but for the reasons above assigned.

I have thus endeavored to show how Anarchy may be made practicable and advantageous to the working classes by lessening government, viz., by curtailing expense and doing away with all government officials, law courts, judges, lawyers, jails, etc., and I was just going to say churches, but I suppose churches and lunatic asylums—which may be placed in the same category—will be needed until evolution shall have polished the human race down to the consistence of common sense, when Anarchy may be expected to have acquired its full development.

This brings me home to Australia, where I shall briefly review the position of my Anarchical or Anarchistic friends in these colonies. They are battling against evils which we all wish to see overcome. Their theories may be plausible and praiseworthy, but practical evils demand a practical remedy, and no one has yet suggested a practical scheme to that effect. Can they lessen a monarchical government by Anarchy? I think not. I think they would be very bad neighbors; it would be like putting the goose and the fox in the same cage. Then what do they want? Do they each mean to have, individually, a lick at Great Britain, and do they think that such a course will be sufficient to establish their claim to independence or individual liberty? If they do I think they are mistaken. Great Britain is not likely to be choked off by a scratch from a flying jackdaw or withdraw her iron hoof from this sunny land without organized force.

I am not accusing my Anarchical friends of insincerity, but I earnestly wish that they could see and clearly see that their scheme is premature and purposeless. When Mr. Symes remonstrated with them on the prematurity of their arguments and urged the necessity of united effort in consummating the one grand end of independence of these colonies they abused him like a pickpocket. He pointed out the necessity of supporting the republican platform until they had gained their independence, when government might be lessened to suit the wishes of the people, which strikes me as the most wise and politic course to be taken.

T. W. HARRIS.

Upper Yarra, Victoria, Australia.

INCIDENTS IN THE HISTORY OF SCIENCE.

BY JUDGE J. W. NORTH.

IV.

Giordano Bruno was born at Nola in Italy about the year 1548. In his fifteenth year, the historian tells us, he entered the order of the Dominicans, at Naples, and soon found the restraints of that order intolerable to him.

He spent two years in England, and traveled extensively through the chief cities and seats of learning in Europe, everywhere lecturing, writing and publishing the burning words that stirred to their depths the ancient prejudices of medieval ignorance, and brought upon his own head the terrible malignity of the church.

In 1593 he accepted an invitation to Venice; he was there arrested, taken to Rome and imprisoned for seven years. This long imprisonment failing to crush the brave spirit of Bruno, on the 9th of February, 1600, he was excommunicated, and on the 17th of that month was burned at the stake.

It was on the demand of the "spiritual authorities" that he was removed from Venice to Rome and imprisoned by the Inquisition. The special charge against him was that "he had taught the plurality of worlds, a doctrine repugnant to the whole tenor of scripture, and inimical to revealed religion, especially as regards the plan of salvation." He was then handed over to the secular power to be punished "as mercifully as possible and without the shedding of blood." This was the horrible and hypocritical formula of ordering a victim to be burned at the stake.

But mark the sublime fortitude of this calm man as he received his sentence, only saying, "Perhaps it is with greater fear that you pass the sentence upon me than I receive it."

When, at the stake, the flames enveloped and consumed the shrinking flesh, he stood in calm grandeur, uttering no murmur of complaint, no cry of agony, apparently unconscious of physical suffering, the embodiment of sublime exaltation and conscious triumph.

As some tall cliff that lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale, and midway leaves the storm;
Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,
Eternal sunshine settles on its head.

This event transpired two hundred and eighty-nine years ago. As the anniversary came round, on the 17th of last February, a statue of Bruno was set upon a high pedestal in Rome, upon the very spot where he was burned. The pope and cardinals had stormed and raved to prevent it, but the people of that city had voted overwhelmingly in favor of it. The Freethinkers of Europe, Great Britain, and America had contributed to procure it, and a Roman senator delivered an oration on the occasion, in which he told the assembled thousands, that "a movement is this day inaugurated more fatal to the papacy than even the loss of the temporal power." The pope, in the meantime, retired to the Vatican, not showing his face in Rome for three days. But the pope has revived his courage sufficiently to revile Bruno with all the ancient malignity; and the Protestant church has never abandoned its attitude of earnest, though diluted, hostility to science.

And while we mark the extreme hostility of the church to all true science, let us notice the instruction that even the Protestant church of this period furnished to her obedient children.

In 1612 Dr. Wolfgang Franz, a professor of theology at Wittenberg, the university that Luther attended, and long after Luther's time, published his "Sacred History of Animals," in which he describes dragons with three ranges of teeth, and calmly adds,

"the largest of these is the devil." This book claims to be "designed for students of theology and ministers of the word;" and it is said "to have had much influence on thought for 100 years."

Sir Isaac Newton, who lived from 1642 to 1727, the most distinguished scientist of his time, was restrained from publishing important truths, for many years, through fear of the church. In 1690 he wrote a letter to his friend, Mr. Locke, the distinguished philosopher. It gave an account of two notable corruptions of the text of scripture, and invalidated two passages in favor of the Trinity; for Sir Isaac wrote much on theology, as well as science.

At first he was anxious to have his letter published, but fearing to publish it in Protestant England, he asked Mr. Locke, who was then going to Holland, to get it translated into French and published on the continent. As Locke did not go to Holland, he sent the letter to Mr. Le Clerk, who, fearing to get it published in French, was having it translated into Latin, when Sir Isaac interfered and stopped the publication entirely.

This letter was never published until twenty-seven years after Sir Isaac's death, and sixty-four years after it was written. So fearful was the greatest scientist of the age of the church, in Protestant England, that he dare not publish what he knew to be true.

Joseph Priestley, a liberal minister of England, and a distinguished scientist, deserves more than a passing notice in this list of persecuted men of learning. A man of gentle and kindly spirit, but a remarkable scholar, he became so distinguished as a man of science that in 1771 he was about to be appointed to accompany the celebrated Captain Cook expedition to Otaheite to observe the transit of Venus; but the government of Great Britain was shocked at the idea of giving a man a position who was not orthodox, and he was rejected.

In 1774 he made several valuable discoveries in science, among which was that of oxygen, the basis of all life and of combustion; but he was not orthodox, and his very discoveries were enough to condemn him in the minds of the enemies of science. So, a few years later, in 1791, while he was quietly attending to his duties at home, the mob wanted a victim and they sought him out, burned his house and his chapel and destroyed his valuable manuscripts that represented the earnest labor of many years. Three years after this terrible exhibition of orthodox malignity, this gentle, peaceful man gathered the fragments of his manuscripts, and with his family in 1794 left England and came to the quiet little town of Northumberland, in the interior of Pennsylvania, where he spent the remaining years of his life in peace.

But when the centennial anniversary of the discovery of oxygen came round the world had learned the value of this quiet, modest man. On that day, in 1874—only fifteen years ago—learned scientists of Europe, Great Britain, and America were seen wending their way to the quiet little village on the banks of the Susquehanna, there to place flowers on the grave of the world's benefactor, and to pay their devotions at the shrine of this recent victim of religious hate.

But let us turn from these sad scenes of cruel wrong and melancholy mistakes to a brighter picture, before which even ignorance and orthodoxy were powerless.

Benjamin Franklin, our great patriot, statesman, scientist, and philosopher, happily lived at a time when his patriotism, statesmanship, and usefulness compelled men to forget that he was an Infidel, and to remember only the great services he had rendered to mankind.

As one of these, Doctor Franklin, in 1752, discovered that simple electricity, which pervades the atmosphere, was the cause of thunder and lightning, that had for ages so terrified mankind. "St. Jerome, as well as the other Christian fathers, maintained that the air was full of devils that caused the lightning, wind, and hail, basing their theory on the prophecies of Isaiah and the Epistle to the Ephesians." St. Augustine maintained the same view, as did Luther and the later reformers. Even the celebrated Increase Mather, president of Harvard University, and the other leading ministers of New England as firmly believed in the "devils that caused the hail and lightning" as they believed in witches, and they believed with John Wesley that "we might as well give up the Bible as to give up our belief in witches."

But Doctor Franklin, with his simple kite and key, demolished the theology of ages, and took from the clergy a large share of their stock of terrors with which they had been accustomed to alarm mankind. He also showed the people how, by a simple iron rod, he could ward off the lightning and save property from destruction. Here theology was placed at a disadvantage. If the old theory of devils in the air was adhered to, the tall steeples were struck by lightning and were destroyed. If the "heretical rod" was adopted, the priests had to admit that "an Infidel's remedy" was better than that presented by the saints of the church.

Doctor Franklin had only to smile and look on, and wait to see how long it would take ministers to adopt common sense, in place of absurd mythology, when their interests were on the side of common sense. The result showed that it took some of the most prominent of them from ten to sixteen years, and some from twenty to twenty-five years.

The first rod put up in England was ten years after Franklin's discovery. In Austria and Italy they waited much longer. At length they began to protect their churches by the "heretical rod," as the people called it, and several that had been repeatedly struck and badly damaged were thus placed out of danger.

But some hesitated to adopt this "Infidel's remedy," and these were instructed by some severe calamities. Among others was that of the church at Brescia, near Venice. Seventeen years after Franklin's discovery, the republic of Venice had stored in the vaults of this church over 200,000 pounds of powder, and had provided no lightning-rod. A storm came, the church was struck, and the powder in the vaults exploded. One-sixth of the entire city was destroyed, and 3000 lives were lost. The result was that their theology gave way, and the churches generally obtained Franklin's remedy. Science and theology became reconciled in the precise way they always have been, viz: by theology abandoning its foibles and accepting the lessons of science.

Humboldt, the illustrious German savant and traveler, had the good fortune, like Franklin, to live at a period when his services to mankind could protect him, in some measure, from religious hostility. And yet even this great man, who had crossed the mountains of South America and the desolate plains of Siberia in search of knowledge for the human race, says in a letter to a friend that the ministers would have driven him from Berlin if it had not been that the king was his friend.

The French priests who objected to common table forks because no such instruments were mentioned in scripture, and the Scotchman who objected to the common fanning mill as an ungodly implement because "it created a wind when the Lord willed a calm," need only be mentioned as illustrations of the religious ideas of the time.

I have but to name one instance more and I have done:

So recently as 1846—less than fifty years ago—Doctor Simpson, of Edinburgh, Scotland, one of the most learned physicians of his time, invented or discovered chloroform, and used it to relieve suffering in his medical and surgical practice. One would naturally suppose that so great a blessing would be hailed with joy even by bigots. Far otherwise. The ministers of the Scotch church raised a serious objection, and one of the bitterest controversies of our time ensued.

Doctor Simpson had used this anesthetic impartially, to relieve the sufferings of women as well as men; and at times when the ministers feared he was relieving them of a part of the original curse. They were quite willing that men should be relieved; but women must suffer the full penalty originally inflicted on Eve.

Incredible as it now seems, these men were thoroughly in earnest, and doubtless thoroughly sincere; and they fought Doctor Simpson with all their energy.

The great Doctor Chalmers, more enlightened than his brethren, took the part of Doctor Simpson, but even his great influence was not likely to turn the scale. At length a happy thought occurred to Doctor Simpson, and he told the ministers that he was simply following the method of the Creator, that when God had made man and wished to perform the surgical operation of taking a rib from his side with which to make woman he put him to sleep.

"This," said the doctor, "is precisely what I am doing. I am only following the example of my maker." The ministers could not bring anything to bear upon that, and so the victory was gained for Doctor Simpson and chloroform.

That such an instance of ministerial bigotry could have occurred in our day is simply inexplicable. But such has been the contest of ages, and such the hostility shown to science through the whole history of the Christian church.

For nearly sixteen hundred years the church has fought science and never gained a victory; science has won in every contest. The church has been driven backward into civilization, step by step, step by step, but always backwards. Will it never turn round, open its eyes, and welcome the glowing dawn? The future will determine.

NATIONALISM.

To the Writer of "Observations:."

I am glad you do not feel struck. I plead "not guilty" to the impression. My object was not to strike any body. I am a Secularist myself, and am proud of the good work you do for the cause. I am also a Nationalist, but not one of the "razzle-dazzle" kind.

My object in writing to you was to get a fuller statement of your views about Nationalism. You had touched upon it several times, but in a way to make me think you saw something fundamentally wrong with its principles.

On referring to the article, which was the cause of my first writing to you, I find you are correct in not giving a definition of Nationalism. But somehow I got the idea that you classed or defined it as a sort of semi-religious craze.

You said it was the biggest thing that had struck San Francisco since Moody was there. You also spoke of it along with the paradise beyond Jordan, and declared you had little faith in either. You also report it as a razzle-dazzle order, and say they run it in San Francisco on the principles that prevail in revival meetings, and go on with the comparison until it looks quite like a religion, only that religion refers to man's relation with God, while Nationalism does not, judging from the platform of it you so kindly gave us.

Of course, "the quality of this world depends upon the people in it," and the people in it ought to depend a good deal upon themselves; but in doing so, I cannot help thinking we may also depend a good deal upon one another, and Nationalism or Bel-lamism is the most perfect order of self and interdependence I have ever seen formulated.

And so far as I can see, we have precisely the same people to build a Nationalist party out of that we have to build Secularism out of, that is, the people of this world. And the process must be educational also.

You are right about the robber class. But there is also another class that neither wants to rob or be robbed, and my notion is that that will be much the larger class one of these days. When people once see clearly that there is a way to provide for and protect themselves against this robber class, I have confidence enough in human nature to believe they will do it. It is because the good things of this world are mostly enjoyed by the said robber class that many of the robbed are ambitious to become robbers themselves. It is the system they are acquainted with. It is the one they have been taught, and the only one they know. But I think Nationalism will not be made up out of the happy-go-lucky, devil-may-care kind of people altogether. There are a few basic principles involved in the order, and it will take people of nerve, knowledge, honesty, and perseverance to make a success of it. There will be people ready to attach themselves to the cause who are unworthy of it, just as there are to any other cause. There will be schemes to divide its power whenever it has gained power, and then is when the tug of war will come.

But a republican form of government was established in this country, and a good many true-hearted sons and daughters of America are glad of it; and if an industrial republic can now be established there will be a good many more true hearts gladdened by it. In fact, I see but little use to tinker with the hands of the clock while the trouble lies back of them; but in this case, as in every other of its class, we have to get from the face down to where the works are before we can compel the hands to indicate the truth of these principles. There is just where Nationalism proposes to go, and when it gets there a good deal of Secularism will be there too.

J. C. WEYBRIGHT.

ANOTHER STEP BACKWARD PROPOSED.

"The annual report of the assistant attorney-general for the post-office department recommends several changes in the postal laws, and he further recommends a radical change concerning 'obscene' newspapers and publications so as to bring all filthy and indecent publications found in the mails (whether published or pretended to be published in the interest of science or not) within the scope of the law. This, in his opinion, has become necessary by the rulings of the courts on such publications, under which anything not intended to excite lust or that may be construed as not doing so cannot be excluded. The license granted by these rulings is abused by characterless persons who issue pamphlets of a gross character, some of them as advertising circulars of so-called remedies for loathsome diseases, and send them indiscriminately and in immense numbers to young people of both sexes and often to all the inmates of boarding schools for young ladies."—Buffalo Express, Nov. 25, 1889.

The above bit of telegraphic news from Washington is the first little shadow of coming events, and though the voice appears to be that of the assistant attorney-general of the post-office department, it is easy to see that the hand directing is that of the wily agent of the Vice Society. The last sentence is one of his old "gags," manifestly a lie, but he sticks to it and always works it for more than it's worth were it true. No matter how "characterless" the proprietor of a specific for loathsome diseases might be he would gain nothing by sending advertisements "indiscriminately," and he would certainly not waste them on the inmates of boarding schools for young ladies.

Probably the first case in which the Vice Society found its mail law inapplicable to the suppression of popular medical books or pamphlets was the prosecution of Dr. Heath, of this city, for mailing a paper-covered book treating on venereal diseases, with crude and offensive illustrations, though not more disgusting than those to be found in the most authoritative works on the same subjects. Prosecutions against this pamphlet failed both in the United States court and the New York state court. Then an attempt was made to remodel the state law so as to cover all publications, except text-books for students, treating of private diseases of either sex, and all medicines or specifics for the cure of such diseases. This sort of a bill failed to become a law, though twice backed by all the power of the Vice Society. Now it is evidently the intent to so remodel the obscene literature postal law as to render unmailable any book giving instruction for the ordinary (unprofessional) reader upon the physiology or diseases of the procreative organs, "whether published or pretended to be published in the interest of science or not." Either the United States laws are to be made to render one domain of science taboo, or if some exceptions be made for "text-books," the mail laws are to render professional men a privileged class, and discriminate against the common people by limiting their privileges of using the mails for the obtaining of such information on important subjects as they believe they have a right to have. We have always tried to make this journal do service in the way of maintaining in practical force the words of Professor Agassiz, as kept standing on the editorial page, "The time has come when scientific truth must cease to be the property of the few—when it must be woven into the common life of the world." There may be some ills and abuses attending the popularizing of science in the realm of sexual affairs, but it is just as true that in the broadening of knowledge relating to poisons, explosives, etc., evil has gone hand in hand with the good. Let all people have equal access to all science, and then hold them responsible for the use they make of it. There is no other just and constitutional method possible in this democratic republic.

The editorial, "More Light on a Dark Subject," in the October number of the Health Monthly is all appropriate to the discussion of this matter, commenting, as it did, on the conclusion of the Medical Society of Kief, Russia, that in view of the ill success of attempts to suppress the spread of venereal diseases, it is time to try the "popularizing (vulgarization) of correct knowledge" in cheap pamphlets for gratuitous distribution. Yet this is just what our government proposes to suppress. Russia has had a surfeit of loathsome diseases and no books to enlighten people as to how to avoid them, so it proposes to try the "vulgarization of knowledge as a remedy." We have less of the diseases and more of the "filthy" books about them; so we propose to abolish the books and encourage more disease by ignorance. Since Russia has found no bliss in ignorance shall we indulge in the folly of abolishing wisdom?

The ostensible object of the Vice Society in this move for more law is that it wants machinery for the suppression of the pamphlets on private diseases which are gratuitously distributed through the mails, but we predict the impossibility of framing a general law which will give such power without at the same time covering a large variety of very useful and respectable pamphlets and books, which even ultra-moral and conservative persons would hesitate to interfere with, and probably any fair, indiscriminating application of such a law would render unmailable many of the tracts used by the White Cross Societies, organized for the promotion of "social purity." Of course the agents of the Vice Society would claim that they would have sense enough to discriminate as to what ought to be prosecuted and what let alone, but we are unaware of any provision in our form of government for the enactment of laws to be enforced at the discrimination of private star-chamber inquisitors, and we know full well that the existing postal law has been enforced with unjust discrimination, by individuals and classes, for the injury of their opponents or enemies; and we shall be greatly surprised if the new law, when formulated, shall not prove to be in the main a means for widening black-mail operations, and for providing a new weapon for the use of the "old school" in its crusades against the "new schools" of medicine. We have in our possession copies of a "regular" medical journal, of large circulation, which came through the mail and which contains articles about the prevention of conception which if we were to quote in our paper would entitle us to five years imprisonment, according to the existing law. Editors of such journals take all the liberties they please under the present law without fear of trouble, and would continue to do as they please with a more stringent law, while the liberties of the non-conformists among medical publishers would be greatly curtailed, and the martyrs to persecution for opinions' sake would have new recruits. Once more we say that if the United States government is to consider the moral qualities of mail matter, and legislate thereon, it should provide also a responsible body of censors with powers to interpret the relation of the law or its applicability to printed matter submitted to them, so that publishers need not be in doubt, or may have some one to appeal to when in doubt, and not be subject to the bigotry, malice, or caprice of a self-constituted body of prosecuting censors. The broader such a law is made in its scope, the more imperative is the necessity of a commission of authoritative censors with power to give decisions that submitted matter is or is not mailable under the law. If we, the people, are ready for any increase of Comstockian postal legislation we are ready for a general censorship of the press.—Foote's Health Monthly.

The Freie Gemeinde.

The nineteenth annual festival of the Deutsche Freie Gemeinde was held on the eve of the closing year. Mr. Schuenemann-Pott, head of the society, delivered a short opening address reviewing the work of the school, the occasion being especially a school festival. Then the children, the smallest first and the largest last, were called upon to give the recitations they had learned, and their performances were proof of the faithful labor of Mr. Schuenemann-Pott and his associates. After the recitation the children received their prizes, and the well-attended festival closed with a ball.

Not a Paying Business.

A—Who was that shabby looking man you stopped to speak to?
B—He is a lecturer, just returned from a trip in the West.
A—But do lecturers look as seedy as that after a trip?
B—Not generally, but he has been giving "A Reply to Bob Ingersoll."

JUDICIAL OATHS.

IV.

The Roman oath was of a promissory character—a ceremonial contract. The church borrowed and preserved the idea of ceremony, gave it greater solemnity, clothed it with supernatural power to discover the truth, buttressed it with a threat of the visitation of God's wrath here or hereafter, and empowered its priesthood to punish as treason to God the violation of the oath in the courts ecclesiastical, exclusive of the civil courts.

Whatever superstitious idea in regard to the oath may have existed prior to the time of Juvenal, 83 to 100 A.D., the apprehension that perjury was punishable by the avenging gods had lost much of its effect in his day. The codes of the Christian emperors of Rome preserved the maxims of the early law in regard to the sacredness of truth, and the duty of man to tell the truth. But in the definition of an oath the codes incorporated the ecclesiastical dogmas, and invested the oath with a superstitious character. The Christian ceremonial oath, which, like the civil law of Rome, was local and designed for the members of the church only, was, like the faith of Christ, required of all. The law of nations, then also known as the law of nature, accorded to every man the right to take an oath in the manner binding on his conscience—a rule of the Aryan nations—but this was rejected by the church, and the oath was defined in the emperor's codes as based on a superstitious fear of God.

The literatures of other civilizations have been only preserved in part from the vandalism of religious bigots; and recently the efforts of scholars have been devoted to the translation of the sacred books of the east. As the European nations are now held to be off-shoots of the Aryan stock of India, the laws and ethics of the Oriental nations have an important bearing on the usages, customs, and ethics of the Celtic, Scandinavian, and Germanic races. The study of Sanscrit has been industriously pushed by European scholars, and the results of their researches show more clearly than was known a century ago, the real faith of the people of India, and the characteristics of their laws. This fact has an important bearing, as the leading case in the English Reports cited as excluding Infidels from being competent witnesses, is that of a Gentoo witness in a case where the objection that he was an Infidel was made by a Christian to prevent the collection of an honest debt. The Gentoo code provides: "If a man brings a suit against another, who answers: 'I am in doubt about the affair; such plea is not to be admitted as an answer. In that case the plaintiff shall prove his claim by deed, by witnesses, or by usufruct on the part of the defendant. If he fails in these three modes, he shall take his oath, or perform the Purrikeh (trial by ordeal). In every affair where a deed, witnesses, or proof of usufruct, cannot be produced, an oath must be taken, or the Purrikeh performed.'"—Gentoo Code, Ed. 1776, p. 118.

It was also provided that "if a person who hath brought a suit against another, can ascertain his claim by the evidence of witnesses, by writing, by proof of usufruct, by opinion of arbitrators, by the Purrikeh, or by an oath, the suit shall be given in his favor."—Ibid, p. 122.

The principal test of competency in male witnesses was veracity and reputation for telling the truth. As in cases of murder, theft, adultery, and false abuse, "one single man of veracity, and good conduct, with whose good disposition and love of truth men are well acquainted, may alone be a witness." Minors under fifteen years of age, a woman, a man of bad principles, a father, or an enemy, could not be witnesses. (Ibid, p. 124.) Giving false testimony was severely punished.

The Monona Dharma Sastra prescribed the oath as satisfactory evidence in default of other testimony, but requires it to be reinforced. It was an oath of purgation. "In cases where there is no testimony, and the judge cannot decide upon which side lies the truth, he can determine it fully by administering the oath."

"Let the judge swear the Brahmin by his truth, the Kshatriya (noble) by his horses, his elephants or his arms; the Vaisya by cows, his corn, and his gold; the Sudra by all crimes."

Among the ethical sayings of the Hindoos are the following:

"Iniquity committed in this world, produces not fruit immediately, but like the earth in due season, and by advancing little by little it eradicates the man who committed it."

"Justice being destroyed, will destroy; being preserved, will preserve; it must never therefore be violated. Beware, O judge! lest justice being overturned, overturn both us and thyself."

"The only firm friend who follows men, even after death, is justice; all others are extinct with the body."—Moner.

"He who speaks the truth with all his heart, is superior to those who make gifts and practice austerities. If a man abstain from falsehood, and practice no other virtue, it shall be well with him. Truth will lead to every other virtue."

"Purity of body comes by water; purity of mind by truthfulness."

"The lamp of truth is a lamp of the wise."—Cural II.

"The majority of people say that there can be no religion without definite belief in a personal God. The majority, as usual, is wrong. The Confucian religion has no god. Buddhism, the greatest religion in the world, has no god."—Conway's Apologia.

Sir Thomas Strange, in his work on the "Elements of Hindoo Law," vol. 1, p. 310, says: "...credit is to be given to the pregnant brevity of the Hindu oath, viz: 'whaf ye know to have been transacted in the matter before us, between the parties reciprocally, declare at large and with truth;' as also to the noble warning with which the subject as detailed by Menu, is ushered in, that "either the court must not be entered by judges, parties, and witnesses, or law and truth must be openly declared."

The Buddhists inculcated absolute veracity. At the fortnightly confessions of the Buddhist priesthood the monk who led in the confession charged the brethren present not to conceal by silence any sins they had committed, for silence is lying; and intentional lying, O brethren! leads to destruction; thus hath the Exalted One said.*

Another doctrine of the Buddhists was that no man could escape the effects of his actions. "Not in the heavens, not in the midst of the sea, not if thou hidest away in the clefts of the mountains wilt thou find a place on earth where thou canst escape the fruit of thy evil actions."†

The crime of giving false testimony was punished in the Gentoo Code by penalties varying with the character of the suit or thing upon which the suit was based. The idea of an avenging god and special punishments hereafter was not the foundation of the sacred obligation of a witness to tell the truth. Buddha did not teach that the perfected saint lived after death. "Orthodox teaching in the ancient order of Buddhists inculcated expressly on its converts to forego the knowledge of the being or non-being of the perfected saint."

But Buddha impressed upon his followers that "five-fold uprightness" is the path of salvation, the substance of the requirements being—

1. To kill no living thing.
2. Not to lay hands on another's property.
3. Not to touch another's wife.
4. Not to speak what is untrue.
5. Not to drink intoxicating drinks.

It is evident from this that the reliance in the Hindoo courts against perjury was the truthful character of the witness in the higher castes, and in the lower castes the severe penalties of the law and the social degradation which would be visited upon him. The belief in miracles, or the divine intervention upon the perjurer, was not relied upon as the basis of the sanctity of the promise of the witness or party to speak the truth. This is shown in the directions for examining a witness and the punishment for false swearing. "He who means to take an evidence shall separately explain the religious merit of faithful testimony and the horrid nature of false witness."... "And the crime of false witness is the same as if a man had murdered a Brahman or had deprived a woman of life or had assassinated a friend... Whatever crime is incurred in such actions as above mentioned is incurred by giving false witness."

"When a man is appointed a witness, if he will not give his evidence, whatever guilt is incurred by false evidence the same guilt is imputed to him; and the magistrate shall exact from him the same fine as from a person giving false witness."—Gentoo Code, pp. 128, 129.

*Oldenberg's Buddha, 76.

†Dhammapada verses, 127, 219.

These citations show that the Gentoo Code was based on the same general principles of the merit of truthfulness which is inculcated in the Buddhist ethics. The character of the Hindoos to-day, as well as before the time of Christ, shows that truthfulness was a marked characteristic of the race. Sir Sohn Malcom says of the Hindoos of the district of Behar: "They are brave, generous, humane, and their truth is as remarkable as their courage." Colonel Sleeman, who has had large acquaintance with the village life of the Hindoos of the present day, says that "in their punchayets men adhere habitually and religiously to the truth." "I have had before me hundreds of cases in which a man's property, liberty, and life has depended on his telling a lie, and he has refused to tell it." He states that witnesses in Hindoo courts may be divided into three classes:

"1. Those who will tell the truth without oath. 2. Those who would tell a lie if they had a motive for it, unless restrained by an oath. In taking an oath they are afraid of the anger of God and the odium of men. 3. Those who will lie when they have a motive, whether sworn by the Koran or Ganges water." That the first class is large, but the second class the largest; that three-fourths of those who do not scruple to lie in the courts, would be ashamed to lie before their neighbors or the elders of the village.

From the fourth century before Christ up to modern times the concurrent testimony of Greek, Chinese, Mohammedan, and European authorities is that love of truth is the most prominent feature of the Hindoo character—that no one ever accused them of falsehood.

Max Muller says: "The whole of their literature from one end to the other is pervaded by expressions of love and reverence for truth. Their very word for truth is sat or satya, sat being the participle "as," to be. "True," therefore, was with them simply "that which is."*

"Now one of the highest praises bestowed upon the Gods in the Veda is that they are satya, true, truthful, trustworthy, and it is well known that in both modern and ancient times men always ascribe to their gods those qualities which they value most in themselves." Other words applied to their gods as truthful beings are adrogha lit, not deceiving. Adrovhanak means he whose word is never broken. Thus Indra, the Vedic Jupiter, is said to have been praised by the fathers "as reaching the enemy, overcoming him, standing on the summit, true of speech, most powerful of thought."

The Brahmanas, or theological treatises of the Brahmins, contain, among other passages, the following: "Whoever speaks the truth makes the fire on his own altar blaze up as if he poured butter into the lighted fire. His own light grows larger, and from to-morrow to to-morrow he grows better. But whoever speaks untruth he quenches the fire on his own altar as if he had poured water into the lighted fire; his own light grows smaller and smaller, and from to-morrow to to-morrow he becomes more wicked. Let man, therefore, speak truth only." Again: "A man becomes impure by uttering falsehood."†

"In the plot of the Ramayana, one of the great epic poems, Rama, the son of the king, who refuses to let his father break a rash promise, says: "It is good conduct that makes a man to be noble, or ignoble, heroic or a pretender to manliness, pure or impure. Truth and mercy are immemorial characteristics of a king's conduct. Hence royal rule is in its essence truth. On truth the world is based. Both sages and gods have esteemed truth. The man who speaks the truth in this world attains the highest imperishable state. Men shrink with fear and horror from a liar as from a serpent. In this world the chief element in virtue is truth. It is called the basis of everything. Truth is lord in the world. Virtue always rests on truth. All things are founded on truth; nothing is higher than it."‡

(To be Continued.)

*India, by Max Muller, 79.

†India. What Can It Teach Us? p. 73.

‡Satupatha Brahmana II, 2, 2, 19, and III, 1, 2, 10.

VOLUNTARY DURANCE.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Did it ever occur to you or to your readers or the police judges of the city and county of San Francisco that very many sentenced during the winter months to our county jail and the House of Correction seek the opportunity to be so sentenced? It is so. Coming from the interior without means, with no other place of shelter and without food, they commit a seemingly petit larceny with no intention of depriving the owner of his goods, as in his sight he removes coat or boots from the owner's doorway and places them under his arm, to be immediately collared—caught in the act—as the whistle is blown, and a burly policeman in triumph bears off his prey to the city prison.

The next day the thief is found guilty, the goods are restored to their owner, and the culprit is sentenced to three or six months in the county jail as the judge swells up and looks at the admiring and approving reporters about such courts as if he would say, "Note that in what short order I put that fellow through," and then the offender finds a winter home at the expense of the taxpayers in comfortable quarters, supplied with substantial food, and while away his time in cards with his room-mates or in reading good books until the storm is over, when he comes out fresh as a daisy and none the worse for wear as he again hies himself away to the green fields and pastures new.

Perhaps you don't believe all this. I do. Yours, S.

DYING.

"Speaking generally," says Dr. Shady, "the instinct for life is strong in man, and the teaching of the present day, as well as the writings of our novelists, do not make the majority of men any the more ready to die. Hell fire is not preached as much as formerly; it is an unpopular doctrine; but it is, nevertheless, taught, and often adds to the torture of dying people."

"What people are the most afraid to die?"

"My own experience, strange as it may seem, has taught me that Christian people are, as a rule, the most afraid to die. My profession has brought me into contact with all sorts of men, and I have made a study of death from a psychological standpoint, and have found that the best Christians are the most willing to step out of heaven as long as possible. They all want to get there, but they are in no hurry. The scientific philosopher who weighs the chances, who knows that death is inevitable, who recognizes that there is no way of escape, since every one before him has had to meet the grim visitor, meets death as bravely as any. He knows that the necessity of dying is the penalty of living. He regards it from a purely matter-of-fact standpoint, and he is fully aware of the fact that no argument or theory will take off its edge."

"I am talking like an Agnostic, and I am not," broke in the doctor parenthetically; "but I am a believer in Christianity for all that, and what I have told you is the result of my own experience as a physician, and quite apart from my own preferences. I had to attend a short time ago, a noted revivalist, who was living, I suppose, in a state of religious exaltation, and who was terrified at the thought of approaching death."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MESSRS. PUTNAM AND MACDONALD are to be congratulated on their success in the formation of the Freethought Publishing Company in San Francisco. I see that the amount of the capital stock of the company is fixed at $20,000, divided into four thousand shares at a par value of $5 each. It was voted that two thousand and five hundred of these shares be placed on the market, and one thousand five hundred reserved. The Freethought Publishing Company is therefore now in working order, and all subscribers for capital stock are invited to forward their money to the office, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal., addressing and making all drafts, checks, and money orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Company. We tried to form the same kind of a company here, but for some reason signally failed. I trust that the new venture will be all that its advocates desire it to be. FREETHOUGHT is one of the brightest and best written Secular papers on our exchange list.—Secular Thought.

WOMAN'S NATIONAL LIBERAL SUFFRAGE ASSOCIATION.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Arrangements have been perfected for organizing a woman's Liberal association of a national character. Woman's political enfranchisement does not advance because women themselves are no longer progressive. The tendency in existing societies towards conservatism, apparent for some time, has now reached the point when it has become imperative that a new society should be formed of women brave enough to say of her own slavery, as the old abolitionists did of negro slavery, that the American church is its bulwark.

Second. The Christian party in politics, composed of both Catholics and Protestants, whose aim is union of church and state, were never so aggressive as at the present time, it having already succeeded in securing the introduction of several bills of that character in Congress.

One of the most efficient aids of this party is the W. C. T. U., which at its recent Chicago convention resolved that Christ is the King of Nations, and as such should be recognized in our government and laws. This resolution is of the same character as Article II. of the constitution of the National Reform Association, a body largely officered by clergymen, its avowed purpose an amendment to the federal constitution which shall destroy the secular nature of the government and prevent individual rights.

It is thus high time the Liberal thought women of the country united in work for their own enfranchisement, and also to arouse public thought to a sense of the impending danger of a destruction of all liberty.

Already have arrangements been so far perfected that a convention for this purpose will be held in Washington, D. C., Feb. 24 and 25, 1890. Persons in sympathy with this design are invited to correspond with Matilda Joslyn Gage, Fayetteville, N. Y., to whom contributions in furtherance of this object may also be sent.

Editors are invited to copy the above announcement.

MATILDA JOSLYN GAGE.

THE SCOPE OF CONVENTIONS.

This question ought to be settled if we have the wisdom to settle it.

In Mr. Underwood's letter, printed in your paper Oct. 26, the idea is advanced that there should be "co-operation of all, irrespective of religious belief." "See that the speeches, discussions, and the action taken are confined to this purpose." "Opposition to Christianity or Judaism is no part of the work of the organization."

It is clear that a convention should not go outside its "call," which should be explicit. The God-in-the-Constitution "reform" conventions make their call narrow enough to include discussion of Christianity on one side. In their earlier conventions they admitted opposing speeches from Jews and Infidels. But it was discovered that this plan was too broad and seriously injured the Christian movement.

If "the discussion of Secularism," as friend Underwood says, is as much outside the Union as the discussion of Spiritualism or Calvinism, this fact should be plainly set forth in the call. Perhaps it was; but in the Oregon convention it was practically disregarded. "It would be clearly inconsistent and even dishonorable to make the convention an occasion for advocating or assailing theological belief and institutions as such," says Mr. Underwood. His thought is clear cut. There should be no discussion of church dogmas.

The elegant banner presented by Miss Blaisdell, skillfully by her own deft fingers embroidered with gold, eagle, stars, "noble names of Freethought." "On the reverse side of the banner the Stars and Stripes float above the prostrate cross."

The thrilling speech of presentation by this modern Hypatia would have been missed; the noble hymn, "A Thousand Years, My Own Columbia," eloquently recited by Mrs. Seip, "sung by the whole vast audience, with accompaniment by the orchestra," would have been omitted if the call meant state secularization and not Secularism. "An exposition of Adventism by Mr. Jones would be just as appropriate" (Underwood).

Notwithstanding there was so much Secularism, Rev. Jones did not get a fit of saintly sulks, but joined the assembly, made a strong speech in behalf of liberty; said, "I am a Christian; I believe in Christianity; I believe it is a divine and supernatural religion." All of which shows that the convention was more liberal than the call.

Now the question is, Should the call be made broader, or the convention narrower? If the Secular Congress and State Secular Unions exist for the "sole purpose" of secularizing the state, then I think there is urgent necessity for Liberals all over the United States to organize Liberty Lodges. When sufficiently numerous in a county, say four lodges, to hold regular quarterly assemblies at various points in the county. When there are six counties organized call a State Liberty Lodge. When there are fifteen, or even a dozen, state lodges call a National Liberty Lodge. The state lodges to meet once a year, the national once in three years. Such societies would strengthen the Secular Congress and State Secular Unions. The calls of all Liberty Lodges should be as free as liberty, fraternal as humanity; the discussions should exclude no question appertaining to the welfare of the race, and should include all subjects covered by science.

Des Moines, Iowa.

W. F. JAMIESON.

RELIGION AS A MORAL NECESSITY.

" 'Tis education forms the common mind;
Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined."

You may take a hundred infants in the cradle and train them to any religion in the world; or to be soldiers, sailors, lawyers, tradesmen, or thieves.

No one knows this better than the priest, preacher, and sectarian. They all insist on taking charge of the children. They all declaim against the common school, because it does not permit them to capture the young mind, and make sure of it for what they call religion.

In every land on earth this great truth is practically understood. Give us the training of the children, and we can make them of any religion we please! Go where you will from Dahomey to Turkey, Russia, Rome, Britain, or the United States, and you will find each training the rising generation to follow their fathers, and maintain the national religion and habit.

Go where you may and you will find it a success. No matter how absurd, the great mass vote that it is correct, and to be a heretic is a crime; and the more educated and respectable the people are, the more certain and persistent they are in the assertion that their religion is the one thing needful, and all other religion so much error and crime. The priests are perhaps the best theologians in the state; and they are the most certain of all that their religion is right; and he who rejects it is a scurrilous wretch, without loyalty to truth and destitute of moral principle.

Collect the clergy of the whole earth in one grand conference, and each would vote his religion the best, the only true saving faith. There would be no exception in any of the great bodies. The vote would confirm the religion they have been trained to believe; and they would all declare that without that religion moral goodness is impossible.

Now, from this fact two conclusions may be drawn which cannot be disputed:—

That the vote of all the clergy of the state is no test or proof of true religion. There must be something else to prove that one is right, and all the rest are wrong. That something else must consist of the facts of the case, the scientific, historic, and moral facts. These alone can distinguish the right from the wrong religion.

The second is this; "That as a man's religion is the direct result of his training and surroundings, it would be absurd for either man or God to hold him responsible for being of the faith to which he has been trained."

This last strikes at the root of all religion, because it takes away the possibility of the awful hell, which is the solid bedrock of every religion on earth. It shows that simple justice makes hell impossible, an absurdity, a fable.

Our fathers, in their constitution of the United States, virtually abolished hell, when they declared that the mind should be absolutely free, that no opinion should be a crime, and no religion have any preference in this government.

How, then, did this unjust and preposterous fable of hell come to be common to all the religions of the world?

By a natural evolution of the mind, humanity is the same in all lands. It tends to the same groupings, the same forms of government, and the same means of acquiring, maintaining, and perpetuating government. Those who find themselves in power, no matter by what accident, cast about at once for the best means of sustaining themselves. Those in power are always conservative. Things as they are seem sweet and nice to them. They dread change, lest it should hurl them from the throne; and they seize upon every means at hand to confirm and steady their possessions.

Religion has ever been one of the great factors in government. As a general thing it begins a rebel. It seeks the aid of those out of power. It converts only those out of power, for the reasons above stated. Those in power are not generally convertible.

It teaches for the most part a revolutionary system. Christ did this to a large extent, as did most others. But either the religion is crushed and dies, or it grows and becomes powerful; and on succeeding to power, the clergy at once seek the alliance of the state, for their own emolument and importance.

A most unholy compact follows. Church and state are combined for the benefit of both, the extinguishment of liberty, the oppression of the people, and the aggrandizement and security of the emperor and the priest. The religion may have had some undefined place of torment for wicked heretics; but now it is defined, fixed inexorable; hell is born. The emperor kills the body for rebellion, and the priest damns the soul for unbelief.

Such was the compact made between Constantine, emperor of Rome and the Holy Roman Catholic church, three hundred years after Christ. Prior to that time the bishops were no more in Rome than Methodist bishops are now in the United States. They were rather opposed to the government, and inclined to denounce its tax-collectors and soldiers as publicans and sinners; and the emperor regarded them as dangerous schismatics disposed to rebellion.

But after the compact, the emperor professed to be a Christian and the church became loyal and imperial. All the powers of the two were strained to maintain both. The emperor proclaimed himself the servant of God, as the head of the church. He ordered all heads to be stricken off of those who persisted in rebellion or heresy; and the church consigned all to hell fire after the emperor had put them to death.

Look round the world and you will see this compact, almost word for word, in Turkey, Russia, China, India, Africa, and with the pope, in some of the republics in America. It is the natural evolution of man, of savage man, to despotism. It is the consummation of the despotic idea. In the name of God the emperor condemns all heretics and rebels to death, and the church consigns them to eternal torment.

This compact once made, the church ceases to be of the people, ceases to be just, moral, or for liberty or just government, or for anything that may imperil the power of the state and the church. Its so-called sacred books are tampered with. Its catechism is revised. The faith is made imperial. Its discipline is all abject royalty. It declares that the powers that be are of God, and obedience to king and priest the whole duty of man. It gives heaven only to obedient slaves, and hell to all who dare to think for themselves.

Yet these men, these clergy of all these religions and despotisms, call themselves the conservators of all moral principles, and those who reject their dogma as wholly given over to a reprobate mind and vice and crime.

It is true that in the great republic most of our churches have seceded from the Catholic and Protestant churches of Rome and England and have no compact with the state. But whose fault is it that they have no compact? Not theirs. Our wise fathers refused to indorse them. They are out in the cold; but not of their own will. They are clamoring for recognition. Each of them is eager to be the established church. They want a part in the constitution. They want to educate the children. They want to creep in anywhere for money, power, and means to strengthen themselves and persecute heretics. Who knows if one of them would be one jot better than Rome if they had the power Rome once had? When have the churches demanded a just government for the people? When have they denounced the monstrous injustice of kings and nobles? When have they demanded the land for the people, and not for landlords and monopolists? Or equality for the people? Or education for all? Or care and plenty for the little ones? Or fair wages for workers? Or punishment for rich criminals?

Who have been the salt of the earth, the leaders in science, the champions of freedom, the evangelists for a better age for man? The free minds, the doubters, the thinkers, the Infidels, if you please. These tore down Rome. These gave a partial freedom to England and France. These led the van in our own revolution. These made the constitution of the United States. These declared all men are free and equal; all shall think for themselves; opinions shall not be crimes; the people shall rule; no kings, nobles, or priests; no hereditary succession; no special privileges. All who said these things are called infidel.

No church on earth would say them. No conference of clergy would say them. No religious body would even indorse them. But the Congress does, the courts do, the lawyers do, and all free-men do. The political parties both declare them. They are the will of the American people. And these are the very essence, the first principles of true morality. Without them there is no moral government, no just government, that a sensible man should submit to or support.

In San Francisco there are 300,000 people who rely upon these rules and laws alone for their good conduct. They never go to church. They ask no priest for his advice. These laws and moral philosophy are their guides; and they live decently and well because they follow the laws of nature and of right. The police, the courts, and the jails know them not, for they cheerfully obey the laws made by a just and rational government.

The other 50,000 attend church more or less. They are mostly believers. They are ignorant of these benign laws. They know literally nothing of natural facts. They have no moral philosophy. They rely on the preacher to pray for them and to see that their sins are forgiven. And they fall into the hands of the police continually. Go to our jails and see who are there. What do you find? Believers in this hell of the churches. All of them believers. Your true American, the disciple of Jefferson, the follower of the constitution of his country, is not there.

Still these men tell us there is no true morality without their religion! They themselves are the men who do not know what morality is. Morality is a science that needs no religion for its basis. It is the true guide of human life and points out the path of duty wherever a man may be placed. H. L. KNIGHT.

ROBERT THE DEVIL.

LIJE AND LISHE, THE TWO PROFETS.

In the days of the profets there was profets and profets, some bein' all talk and no cider, and uthers a good deal of talk and a little more cider, too, of which Samuel was one, and Elijah a corker, and Elisha, too, with uthers that was some tar on a stick, so to speak. These profets hired out to kings, the most of 'em, and it was a snide monark that couldn't aford to keep a profet or two, you bet. These profetic ducks belonged to both parties, Zion Hall and the oppersishun, and made a pretty good thing of it, I guess, the oppersishun antein' up the most liberal, I expect.

Of the Zion Hall profets, Elijah and Elisha were the most dashin' and dazlin' and startlin', I guess. It was a cold day when these two profetick sharps and wunderful magishuns couldn't profesy something dizzy, and work the magic racket in a way to make a feller's hare stand up; and, if it was very, very cold, they cood ring down fire from heaven and warm their feet! You can bet they wasn't all talk, like some of the mouthin' muffs, but a good deal of cider, too!

Yes, Lije and Lishe were corkers, and no mistake, and when they plade with fire somebody got warmed, and don't you forget it, and them somebodies wasn't them. Lije was the fust of the two in the feeld, but didn't exost it, Lishe, who inherited his magic mantle, findin plenty to do, and doin' it clean up to the handle, you bet! Them two sharps didn't think nuthin' of bringin' stiffs to life agen, and when it come to utilizin' the fire of heaven, they was there every time, but some uther folks was missin', shortly subsequently, so to speak. Oh, they was dandy neckromancers and seersuckers, and don't you fale to remember it.

The fust thing Lije done, to bring himself afore the public, was to cure a widder's son of deafness, soon's he seen him, and no tomfoolin' round with pills and powders for a month, and no sendin' in a big bill for the job, he makin' the corpse a well man free gratis for nuthin', shamin' the doctors of our day! The next thing on Lije's program was a cheeky thing to do, which it was to challenge the four hundred and fifty profets of the oppersishun to a roastin' match, the fire to be supplide by the two gods, or no roast! It is unnessessary to say that Lije won—Great Scott! what a pile of scads he mite a won, and p'r'aps he did, we don't know—not only his offerin' of bullock's meat bein' burned, but the stone altar and a trench full of water! Cracky! but that was corkin' magic, burnin water, warn't it? It must a made them uther duffers sick to the stummuck to think what snides they was, and what a penny-whisle god they blowed for!

But Lije warn't satisfide with this blazin' victory, for his blud was up and nuthin' but blud wood down it; so he ordered the people, who had all joined his party, soon's they seen the water burnin, and nary fire comin' to their altars, to do up the snide seersuckers, and they was slewed on the spot. This was fust blud for Lije! The next fire racket that Lije worked was a scorcher, roastin' fifty sojers of an oppersishun chief in jest about three shakes of a lam's tale, and anuther fifty, comin' up to see what the matter was, jest as quick, and wood a done up a third party, only the cap'n was smart, and went over to Zion Hall then and there, bag and baggage!

Lije then jumped from fireworks to waterworks, so to speak, dividin' the river Jordan by slappin' his blankit on it, he and Lishe walkin' over without wettin' the bottoms of their trousis! The Lord was now so well pleezed with Lije's performances that he concluded to take him up to Blissville, fearful, p'r'aps, that the oppersishun mite seduce him from Zion Hall, and so trouble him to find a match for him. Any how, he h'isted Lije into Blissville the same day and hour the two profets crossed the Jordan, and done it in shape, too, with a chariot and hosses of fire knowin' that Lije's strong holt was fire!

Lishe now comes on the scene, and, with Lije's magic blankit, works the same racket on the river, and recrosses without wettin' his feet. Then Lishe doctored the stinkin' water of Jericho with salt, and went on his way rejoicin', but had'n't got far 'fore some kids guyed him and hollered out, "Go it, old Baldy!" This made Lishe mad's a hornet, and he cussed the kids, when two bears rushed out of the woods and grabbed 'em, Lishe lookin' on the picnick and free lunch with plesure, no doubt, though the sacrid book don't say so—it don't need to, for, as he let the feed go on, when he mite a stopped it, it's dollars to donuts he liked it! I've allus been down on Lishe for this, 'cos there warn't no need of it; and it was jest orfle, havin' two bears chaw up forty human kids, jest 'cos they had a little fun hollerin', "Go it, old Baldy!" Lishe was a bluddy chump, that's what the matter was with him! Any man that wood do what he done ain't no company for me!

The next thing he done was a fraud on the peepke, though it helped 'em out of a water famine. You see, he told 'em to dig ditches, and when they struck water, a dead sure thing, they tho't it was his magic, and he let 'em think so, the fraud! The next thing he done wasn't so bad, he makin' barrels of oil out of a pint for a poor widder, which give her a stake, you see. Then he cured a dead kid for a woman who had given him a lodgin' room for nuthin'. Then he fed a hundred people with twenty five-cent loaves, and the sacred book says they coodn't get away with it all—p'r'aps 'twas sour and mouldy, eh? It jest occurs to me how the Standard Oil Company wood like a man like Lishe, to set some of their dry wells runnin' with oil! Oh yes, I guess yes!

Lishe then knocked leprosy out of one man and into anuther —one of his servants who wanted to make a dollar or two aginsf a rainy day—which made honors easy on the leprosy lay. Then he done a cute trick by makin' an iron ax swim and cavort on the water; but this was for a man who had dropped it, and felt bad about it, so it wasn't for show. Then he got up some grand fire works, fillin' the mountins with hosses and chariots of fire, which must a looked bully! Then he made a whole army blind, but it was after him, and all's fare in war, you know. Lishe done more or less uther magic and then goes to sleep with his fathers; which was a good thing, on the whole, I think. He warn't no such grate shakes as Lije was, and the Lord knowed it, for he let him croak like any ornery rooster, and didn't send no fiery chariot after him! As I said, I've allus been down on Lishe for that bear racket and free lunch he got up, and he never cood make oil enuff for me to forgive him—unless he made it 'speshally for me, you know! It's ruff, I spose, to sour on a profet, but I can't help it; and if there was any one profet wuth sourin' on, Lishe was that one, for he was a mean cuss from the word go, the cussin' of them kids which bro't the bears onto 'em to gobble 'em up, provin' what I say.

I dunno's the ed. of Gabe's Horn wood a printed this pece in our colums or not, and don't care. He's a snide, and I didn't show it to him, and send it on to FREETHOUGHT.

ROBERT THE DEVIL, of Gabe's Horn.

TO THE LIBERALS OF CALIFORNIA.

All who are in favor of the total separation of church and state; of the American Republic founded upon the Declaration of Independence; of equal rights and impartial liberiy, are cordially invited to meet in Convention at San Francisco on Saturday and Sunday, January 25 and 26, 1890, at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, for the purpose of discussing the issues forced upon the people by ecclesiastical encroachments, and preparing measures for the establishment of a purely Secular government in the state of California, and throughout the nation.

The main question which is now presented to the Liberals of California, and which demands, on their part, persistent and united action, is the Sabbath question. "At a recent meeting of the American Sabbath Association of California it was resolved to proceed at once with a vigorous and well-directed campaign to restore, by state legislation, the weekly day of rest to its proper position." This is the declaration of the ecclesiastical party. The California Liberal Union is opposed to any Sabbath legislation, and the purpose of its Convention is to arouse the people to the threatened danger and, by the force of an enlightened public opinion, to guard against the passage of any laws by the state legislature for the enforcement of the Sunday as a Sabbath.

All Liberals of other states who are visiting San Francisco at the time are cordially invited to be present; and will be welcomed as members of the Convention if they so desire.

There is no creed, no religious belief or non-religious belief in the platform of the Liberal Union. It stands simply and solely for human rights irrespective of creeds, and it expects the co-operation of every American, without regard to belief or non-belief.

RANFORD WORTHING,
W. F. FREEMAN,
PHILIP COWEN,
WM. SCHROEDER,
W. S. RODGERS,
JOHN ROBINETT,
MRS. KATE PARKER,
J. E. CLARK,
L. MAGENHEIMER,

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, President,
EMIL S. LEMME, Secretary,
A. H. SCHOU, Treasurer,
J. W. NORTH, First Vice-President.

Executive Committee.

"TO COMPEL a man to furnish contributions of money for the propagation of opinions which he disbelieves is sinful and tyrannical. Be it therefore enacted by the General Assembly that no man shall be compelled to frequent or support any religious worship, place, or ministry whatsoever."—THOMAS JEFFERSON in General Assembly of Virginia, 1785.

"The Story of an African Farm," a good Freethought novel, by Olive Schreiner. Price, 25 cents.

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRAIG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY.—A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be Obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

J. S. S.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last an heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendia, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavilion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the Invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder-worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portraiture of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. PRESCOTT.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll.) with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated late scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALCON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

PÖE'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

The Song.

Two maidens read together,
All in the autumn time,
A little love-sick poem,
Some humble poet's rhyme.
One glanced it lightly over—
"Oh, what a love-lorn wail!"
One hid it in her bosom—
She understood its tale.

There came another autumn;
Oh! it were passing strange
If any year departed
That left no solemn change,
For Love, the tireless hunter,
Is shooting night and day,
And some of his barbed arrows
Are sure to go astray.

Like some lost leaf of autumn,
The little rhyme once more
Was blown unto the maidens,
Who read it as before.
But she who called it love-lorn
And laughed the laugh of youth,
Cried, "Oh, the sweet, sweet verses,
They are as true as truth."

So poets write forever,
And when the song is sung,
To half the hearts that hear it,
It is an unknown tongue.
But Pain, the great translator,
Comes by and by along,
And he interprets fully
The meaning of the song.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

"Bible Contradictions," 15 cents.

Hints to Busybodies.

Don't ask the landlady to hitch up the butter and give you a ride.

Don't advocate a board of trade unless you are willing to furnish some of the nails for it.

Don't bake your furniture and fry your cellar walls in trying to get even with the gas companies.

Don't lean on an editor's shoulders when he's at work. Distribute your weight more generally by straddling his neck.

Don't ask a political candidate to give you a ride on his breath. Throw him into the sewer and pursue the even tenor of your way.

Don't sing in the muzzle of a gun if you can help it, but if you must do so let the selection be "White Wings" or "Sweet Violets."

Memorial Services.

The funeral services of Mrs. Elizabeth H. Church will be held at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Memorial address by Samuel P. Putnam. Freethought friends are especially invited.

ASTHMA DR. TAFT'S ASTHMA CURE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE
DR. TAFT BROS., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

HISTORY OF CHRISTIANITY,

An important work by Gibbon, the historian. Comprising all that relates to the progress of the Christian religion in "The History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," and a Vindication (never before published in this country) of some passages in the 16th and 18th chapters, by Edward Gibbon, Esq., with a Life of the Author, Preface and Notes by the Editor, including various notes by Guizot, Wenck, Millman, "an English Churchman," and other scholars. Handsome 12 mo., 804 pages. Cloth. With Engravings. Price, $1 50.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL'S

GREAT CENTENNIAL ORATION

On the Declaration of Independence. Also, the immortal document, The Declaration itself, and the national anthem entitled "Land of Liberty." Price, 10 cents; 5 copies, 25 cents; 25 copies, $1.

THE SYSTEM OF NATURE,

Dr. Laws of the Moral and Physical World. By Baron D'Holbach. A new and improved edition, with notes by Olsinet. Two volumes in one. Price, $2

PUTNAM'S WORKS.

The New God. 10c. The New God was made by an artist hand, guided by a poet soul. It is as perfect as sculpture. The creator makes his "god" in his own image, and breathes into his nostrils the breath of his own life.—L. K. Washburn.

Golden Throne. A romance. Price, $1 00. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words; the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Walls and Wanderings. A new American story. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1 00. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—John Swinton's Paper.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc, worth $35, for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

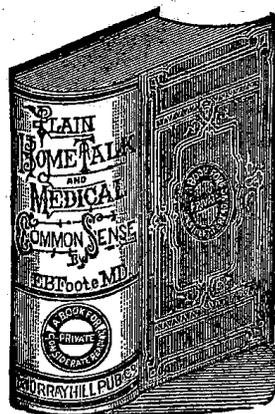

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do., $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
" Forks	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded. Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

Circulars Free. Address

Price, cloth bound, by mail, $1.50; LIB. 12 THE GOSNOLLS CO. & SONS.

IF YOU WANT TO KNOW

All about the human body, its health and disease, nature's secrets revealed, How life is perpetuated, health maintained, disease induced, death delayed, How to marry your own mate, and transmit wealth of health to posterity, Read the most popular, comprehensive and useful book treating of which Dr. Eadon declares to be "priceless in value, new, startling and very instructive." The latest edition is more complete and valuable than ever, having been re-written in important parts. It contains AN APPENDIX of great practical utility made up of

MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

OVER 200 PRESCRIPTIONS OR RECIPES

For Acute and Chronic Disorders Common to Adults and Children, a complete table of poisons and their antidotes (from highest authorities), illustrated directions for resuscitating the drowned (prepared for Health Boards), and hygienic rules for care of infants; also

ORIGIN OF LIFE AND DEVELOPMENT OF MAN,

tracing the embryo from conception, through all stages to birth, illustrated by Over 20 Beautiful Colored Lithographs, on fine plate paper, such as are to be found only in high priced, imported medical works; and to illustrate the anatomy, and relative positions of important parts, each book is also embellished with

THREE ELEGANT CHROMO CHARTS OF VITAL ORGANS.

Murray Hill Publishing Co., 129 East 28th St., N. Y.

Men, Women, and Gods.

A Short History of the Bible.

By Helen H. Gardner. Introduction by Robert G. Ingersoll. Price, 50 cents,

Being a popular account of the formation and Development of the Canon. By Bronson C. Keeler. Price, 50 cents.

NEW BOOKS.

Any of the following works may be ordered through this office, and will be sent postpaid upon receipt of price.

FUNDAMENTAL PROBLEMS. The Method of Philosophy as a Systematic Arrangement of Knowledge. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, $1.00.

"The book is of most excellent spirit and great ability."—Public Opinion.

"Dr. Carus with an ingenious and artistic hand unites the rival theories of the Idealists and Realists."—Watts's Literary Guide.

"Dr. Carus expounds the principles of Monism in a most able manner, and with so little technicality as to enable all ordinary readers to follow him with pleasure."—Secular Thought, Toronto.

THE PSYCHIC LIFE OF MICRO-ORGANISMS. A Study in Experimental Psychology. By Alfred Binet. Price, 75 cents.

"The essays constitute a powerful and masterly argument, thoroughly supported by observed facts."—New York Tribune.

THREE INTRODUCTORY LECTURES ON THE SCIENCE OF THOUGHT. By F. Max Müller. Price, 75 cents.

"They are the ripe expression of a life-long labor in the study of the Science of Language."—Scotsman, Edinburgh.

THE IDEA OF GOD. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, 15 cents. Being a disquisition upon the development of the idea of God in human thought and history.

"An effort to purify our idea of God."—Literary World, London.

"The writer defines God as 'The Ethical Force of Nature,' and supports his definition with much solid argument."—Watts's Literary Guide, London.

MAKING BREAD DEAR. A Controversy between Wheelbarrow and Sympathizer. Price, 10 cents.

"In the controversy both sides are fairly represented and some new ideas advanced which clear the atmosphere of the clouds that frequently dim the honest mind."—Elite News, Chicago.

A REGULAR EDUCATED AND LEGALLY QUALIFIED PHYSICIAN, and the most successful (in his specialty) as his practice will surely prove. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men such as seminal weakness, impotency, &c., resulting from indigestion and ignorance of youth. Those who are ailing should send ten (10) cents for his book, "Private Counsellor," setting forth an external Application—

A POSITIVE CURE

The book is worth many times its cost, and should be read by the young for instruction and the afflicted for relief.

All Communications Strictly Confidential.

Plain Envelopes used. The book spoken of sent sealed. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, NEW JERSEY. Say where you saw this Advertisement.

[From the Washington National View.]

Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, New Jersey offers his valuable services to all those in need of a kind, sympathetic and skillful physician. Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been assailed and exposed by the press, but, Dr. Fellows, a specialist, in his line, stands foremost in his profession, and the encomiums showered upon him publicly as well as in private, are flattering evidences of the high appreciation and confidence his long and conscientious devotion to his specialties in his profession have so justly merited for him, and it is safe to trust him.

A Testimonial.

WEST LIBERTY, O., Aug. 12, 1888.

DR. R. P. FELLOWS—Dear Sir: The remedy you sent is working like a charm. I am completely surprised the way it acts upon the organs. Have only been using it one week, and that weakness, (seminal weakness) is coming out all right. Yours respectfully, J. R.

REMARKS—The above is a fair sample of the hundreds of testimonials received from all parts of the United States, from young, middle-aged and elderly men, suffering from various kinds of sexual complaints, but who are now cured by my External Application; the greatest of all known remedies for this class of diseases. As I am an out-and-out Liberal I trust the Freethinkers of the Land will give me their patronage, and not waste their time and money on Christian doctors. DR. FELLOWS.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future

Republic of North America

BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1. Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

CHURCH AND STATE

THE BIBLE IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—THE NEW AMERICAN PARTY,

A Criticism by "Jefferson."

Price, 10 cents.

Address

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,

838 Howard street, San Francisco.

ROMAN RULE OR RUIN.

BY Z. SHED.

A Summary of the atrocities committed by the Catholic church.

Price, 10 cents; four copies, 25 cents; ten copies, 50 cents. Address

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,

838 Howard street, San Francisco.

Why Priests Should Wed.

BY JUSTIN D. FULTON, D.D.

A startling book, particularly to those unacquainted with the character of the confessional. Price, $1.50.

Address this office.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

The Open Court.

A Weekly Journal of Reverent Freethought.

Discussing Problems in Science, Philosophy, Ethics, and Religion.

Subscription for twelve months, $2.00.

Specimen Copies free on application.

THE OPEN COURT PUB. CO.,

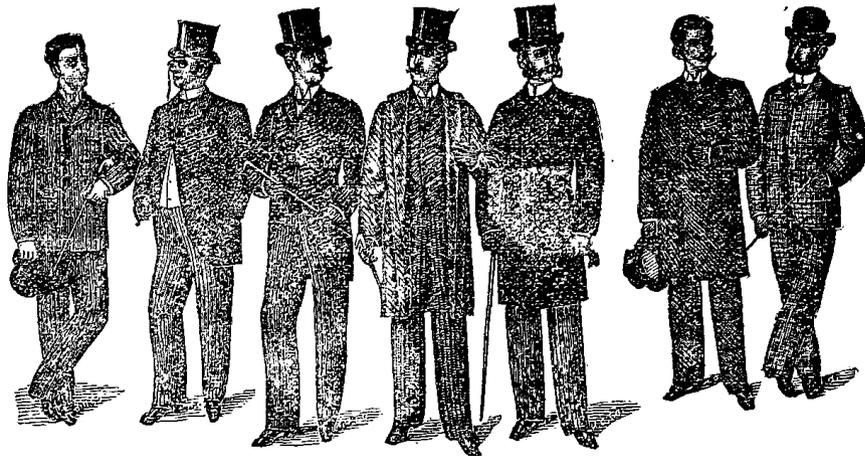

169-175 La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois.

P. O. Drawer F.

THE ORDER OF CREATION,

A Discussion between Gladstone, Huxley, Muller, Linton, Reville on the Conflict between Genesis & Geology. Price, 50 cents.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.

OLIVER HINCKLEY SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED, 375 Natoma st., cor. 5th, S. F.

P. A. CLARK.

CHAS. W. CLARK

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS,

NURSERYMEN.

Catalpas for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines.

Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice.

Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address

CLARK BROS.,

P. O. Box C,

Sun Jacinto, Cal.

REMSBURG'S WORKS.

False Claims. Price 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Anti-slavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic.

Fathers of the Republic. Paine, Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. Price 15 cents.

Bible Mora's. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

WASHBURN'S WORKS.

The False Teachings of the Christian Church. Price, 10 cents.

Sunday and the Sabbath. Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. Price, 10 cents.

The Catholic Church and the Public Schools. Price, 5 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

==THE NEW YORK DRESS CHART,==

A system of easily-comprehended rules and Chart by which any one can readily learn to cut Dresses, Basques, etc., in the most perfect manner. It contains the best ideas resulting from thirty years experience with Dress Charts and Tailor systems. It is adapted to the modern requirements of dress, and is used and indorsed by the best professional dressmakers of the East. It is as far superior to old methods as the steam car is to the stage. Price of the Chart, with full instructions, $10. By special arrangement we are able to offer the readers of FREETHOUGHT a liberal discount, for a short time. Write for particulars if you are at all interested in matters of household economy. This chart will save any family five times its cost in a single year. Send 25 cents with bust and waist measure and number of inches from natural waist up as high as you wish the dress underneath the arm, for a sample pattern drafted to order, with full directions for making up, if you wish to test the system. To take the first measure correctly, place the tape above the bust, underneath the arms, and straight across the back, drawing it very tight. Write figures plainly. Address, Agents } DRESS CHART AGENCY, wanted. } 838 Howard st. San Francisco, Cal. Care of FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
Six Months......75
Three Months......25

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,
Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.
PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,
536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San Francisco.

THE SABBATH IMPOSTURE.

BY HARRY HOOVER.

"Proving that there is no authority for the Sunday laws, either Human or "Divine."

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies 50 cents. Address this office.

JUST PUBLISHED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE GLORY OF INFIDELITY

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

"The Glory of Infidelity" was one of the poet-secretary's happiest efforts, and ranks with the best speeches of the Congress.—New York Truth Seeker.

Putnam's "Glory of Infidelity" is one of the ablest defenses of Freethought to which I have ever listened. JOHN E. REMSBURG.

The lecture was "The Glory of Infidelity." No man or woman could hear it without being inspired by the heroic Infidel manhood and womanhood coming down to us as a rich inheritance through the dreary ages of the past, and pointing with glorious hope to the "New Heaven and Earth." J. F. BECK.

I believe I express the unanimous sentiment of all when I say that for a lecture of its character, Mr. Putnam has never been surpassed and seldom equaled on our platform—a platform famous for the talent it affords. "The Glory of Infidelity" fairly bristles with good things, and each sentence is an epigrammatic Secular sermon.

E. A. STEVENS, Secretary American Secular Union.

—PRICE 10 CENTS.—

Address *FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

SOMETHING NEW

—THE—

"COSMIAN HYMN BOOK."

—A COLLECTION OF—

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS
(WORDS AND MUSIC)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies,
For Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price$1.50

Address orders to
L. K. WASHBURN,
Revere, Mass.

Orthography and Rhyme.

A young lady sings in our choir,
Whose hair is the color of phoir,
But her beauty's unique,
She has such a fair chique
That I always enjoy sitting nhoir.

Whenever she looks down the aisle
She gives me a beautiful smaisle,
And of all her beaux
I feel that she sheauxs
Her preference for me all the whaisle.

Last Sunday she wore a new sacque,
Fur-trimmed at the front and the bacque,
And a lovely bouquet
Worn in such a cute wuet
As only few girls have the knacque.

Some day I'll complete my design,
And ask the fair maid to be mign.
If she's not a coquette
Which I greatly regrette,
I shall wed her for whom I now pign.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm " " Diamond* 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, PUTNAM & MACDONALD, 04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE FIELD-INGERSOLL DISCUSSION.
Faith or Agnosticism.

A series of articles

—from—

The North American Review.

—by—

REV. HENRY M. FIELD, | ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

The discussion upon which are based the Remarks of Hon. W. E. Gladstone.

Price 50 cents. Sold by the FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters

impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 2.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, JANUARY 11, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - JANUARY 11, 1890.

NEWS AND NOTES.

Rain, rain, rain every day, and no prospect of clearing off on this the Christmas day. I went to the station on Monday, the 23d, to take my departure for Perris and San Jacinto. But there were no trains that day, nor since, going out or coming in, no mails and no passengers since Sunday. We are practically shut out from the world; and still it pours. The melancholy skies and the melancholy sea, and the shadowy houses and muddy thoroughfares are all that meet the view. Hundreds are detained, and the hotel corridors are crowded with anxious inquirers as to the state of the weather. It is an unquestionable case of trusting in providence. Man can do nothing. The elements are in full control. Bridges are down, the iron-horse is idle, and the only consolation is the Christmas turkey, which is just as palatable here as elsewhere, and will no doubt enable us to forget our disappointment. Bad weather can be endured so long as there is good digestion.

I am at the New Carleton Hotel, W. A. Dorris, proprietor, and one could not find a more hospitable place of sojourn while the storms are raging. Mrs. Dorris is thoroughly Liberal, and the home atmosphere prevails. The traveler rejoices in sunshine within, if not without, and Merry Christmas is sparkling, even if the heavens are gloomy. The stranger in San Diego will enjoy his visit whenever he drops into the New Carleton, and may it ever flourish.

There were three days of blessed sunshine after my arrival in San Diego, and Sunday morning was as resplendent as one's heart could possibly desire. But Sunday noon it began to cloud up, and the winds blew from the south, and since Sunday night there has been but little cessation of the rain. It is impossible now to tell when the railroad will be in a condition to allow of our departure.

The Lafayette Hall was filled on Sunday afternoon, and almost as many were present in the evening in spite of the threatening skies. There is a large Liberal element awaiting to be developed in San Diego. A committee with Ranford Worthing as chairman was appointed to take the steps for organization and undoubtedly, as times grow better, there will be a large Freethought association here. I should like nothing better than to stay for a month or so, and see what could be done. I always find a cordial reception at San Diego, and am certain that as the city grows, Freethought will find a prosperous field. Considering all the circumstances, I was quite encouraged with the attendance Sunday afternoon and evening.

Ranford Worthing is well known for his labors in behalf of co-operation and Freethought. He is a born reformer and can't help going ahead. He is thoroughly interested in various plans for social and industrial improvement. He believes in making things better, and that Freethought should be something more than an idea; it should be life and progress in the world. I had the pleasure of spending Sunday in his agreeable home, where culture gives its blessing to toil. He has a violin made in 1617, and its wonderful sweetness of tone is indeed an inspiration for the battle of life. There are times when one must revel in these beautiful strains, or give up the struggle, and friend Worthing knows how to touch the according string.

H. L. Shaug is building a lovely residence at Chule Vista, where one looks out upon the broad sea and superb mountains. I went down on Friday to catch him at his work, but he had disappeared, gone for the Christmas turkeys, and I missed his jolly congratulations, and am afraid now that I shall have to wait sometime for a hand-shake. However, I found W. A. Allen on the spot and Hugh Shaug, and as it was most dinner time when I arrived, Hugh did the cooking in royal style, and the tea and bacon and beans went to the spot. It was like camping-out times, for the house is not yet finished, and we took our meal amidst the implements of labor, with the shavings for a carpet and a box for a seat. Allen has had some awful hard luck since I saw him last. He came near being smashed up by a fall of eighteen feet upon a hard floor. He has recovered and bates no jot of heart or hope. But he doesn't trust in any deity.

I was over to National City to see A. N. Burgess, Watts Burgess, etc. The Burgesses will stick to the ship and keep the colors waving. They are a jolly company, no matter what happens. Under their pilotage I went to see Slater on Thursday evening. I knew I wouldn't lose my balance in such level-headed company, no matter what Slater did. It is remarked that Slater is the wonder of the nineteenth century. I do not see it in that light. Nothing that he does needs to be ascribed to spirits. His private sittings are entirely unsatisfactory, at least to the skeptic, and there is where the test avails; not with the believer, but the unbeliever. The believer accepts upon almost any evidence, but the unbeliever demands unquestionable evidence, which evidence only has scientific value. Slater is a kind of mental telephone, as Worthing says. He has such a sensitive organization that he can, to a certain extent, feel what is going on in a person's mind and sometimes picture it. In combination with this en rapport he has a wonderful knack of acting. He can make the most of every coincidence. He is a master of what in stage parlance is called "business." He has much magnetism and what the French call "chic." He has no gift of language; his grammar is that of a child ten years old, but the very recklessness of his delivery throws a spell upon the audience. Is he a fraud? I am not prepared to say that. With Hamlet I am ready to affirm "there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in our philosophy." Nature is not measured yet, nor our humanity. The full relation of mind and matter is unknown. Neither has yet been defined. Slater may be a link to something new. He is a curiosity, however; not a force. He perplexes, but he does not inspire. He is like a minstrel show. There is no symphony, no eloquence. He offers $5000 to be proved a fraud. The demonstration isn't worth that, for no matter how sincere he is, he does not give a particle of evidence of the immortality of man. He does not solve one social problem. He gives a very interesting entertainment, and it is worth twenty-five cents to see it.

The latch-string is always out at James Bidwell's, and the Secular Pilgrim can linger here the pleasant hours away. For over half a century our friend walked outside the churches in the sunshine and flowers of reality, and Mrs. Bidwell has accepted the same way of life and thought, and so I could not find a better companionship while waiting for the storms to blow over. Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Rowe are always ready to bear the brunt of the battle and give good cheer, no matter whether fortune smiles or frowns; and their door is open wide for the pioneer, and music greets the wayfarer. Miss Etta Hinman, of Poway, a Liberal young lady, whose parents are also in the advance ranks, helps to make the Saturday evening delightful with melody, while Mr. H. Rodgers and Miss Bertha Rodgers and Miss Lilla M. Rowe gather around the circle. Rodgers is an old soldier and throws in his war reminiscences with brilliant effect. His adventures while escaping from the rebel prison would make a notable romance. How the heart thrills as the drama of war is brought to the mind's eye with flashing and strange colors.

Mrs. Mary A. White is discouraged at no fortune whatsoever. She works on with the calmness of a philosopher and the enthusiasm of a poet. If one thing does not succeed, then she tries another, and the march of improvement is unimpeded. She will never fall from the ranks at any summons, except of death, and that will be a summons to action still, she says. It does one good to meet with such a deathless reformer.

The thanks of Liberals is due to Miss Lulu Pelton, who charmed the audience with exquisite music on Sunday evening, the mystic song that from the unfathomable world evokes the imageries of that which is undying.

Thus though storm-bound, and dark days wheel their battalions along the frowning heavens, I find animation and courage among these many and cordial friends of San Diego. The world moves, hope grows, and morning shines.

Thursday, the 26th.—I have waited from Monday, the 23d, to Thursday, the 26th, for a chance to get away, but the reports are worse than ever, and if I travel by Saturday or Sunday, I shall think myself lucky. I shall have to give up the lectures at Peris and San Jacinto; in fact, about one-half of my lectures have had to be postponed on account of the bad weather. I hope to be more fortunate another time. Nature, however, is impartial. The churches have not had the favor of a divine providence any more than myself. I am willing, therefore, to take the chances.

I have been fortunate while at the New Carleton to strike acquaintance with A. F. Cate, of Fallbrook, a staunch Liberal. He is a noble six-footer, and the churches are extremely desirous to make him a pillar of the church. They have organized a Bible class for his especial benefit, and the discussion has become so important that they have a special meeting on week days to carry on the battle. This is a good sign, and I sincerely hope that the clergy will stick to the fray. But I much fear that the Bible class will give up the ghost the moment it is discovered that the old creed cannot stand the attacks of modern criticism. My coadjutor Cate is doing a splendid work by thus putting the spirit of investigation into the very heart of the church.

Fallbrook is one of the finest fruit-growing sections in the state. I went with Mr. Cate to the chamber of commerce, San Diego, where there is a large exhibit of the productions of the country. Almost anything can be raised in this country, from the apple of the northern clime to the guavos of the tropics. Fruits, berries, vegetables, grains, and grasses can be grown here. Garden stuff is abundant all the year round. Tomatoes on the highlands become perennial. Strawberries, potatoes, and green peas may be had in midwinter. Among the exhibits of the chamber of commerce is a pumpkin weighing 150 pounds, a sweet potato weighing 36 pounds, a watermelon, 103 pounds, a beet, 80 pounds, and nine pears, all from one tree, together weighing 18 pounds. I wonder if any of my Eastern friends will think this is a California lie. However, let them come and see. The pumpkin weighing 150 pounds is seen at W. H. Doud's, D street, where the best guesser of the number of seeds it contains will be entitled to a $200 set of furniture. I guessed 491 seeds, and Mr. Cate guessed 479. I thought I would go him twelve better. One man, however, was so overcome by the majesty of the pumpkin, that he guessed 580,000 seeds. Such a guesser as that must believe the story of Jonah and the whale, and that Jonah swallowed that whale. This tremendous pumpkin is the production of Fallbrook. Fallbrook would be a good place for a Yankee to spend Christmas. But Mr. Cate, like myself, had to eat his turkey in San Diego. The New Carleton is not behind hand when it comes to a Christmas dinner. The well-laden tables presented a brilliant appearance.

There is a spicy little paper published here every Monday morning, entitled "The Enterprise." It is radical to the core. Its editors are Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Biddle, both devoted to the Liberal cause. Success to the "Enterprise." It is a sparkling ally.

A. McCrimmons, of the San Diegan; Joseph Ryan, removed from National City to San Diego, formerly of London and the English Secularists; his wife, an excellent artist; R. Swaile, whose fortunes are now in Okaloma, at present residing in San Diego; Mrs. S. M. Brady, Fred Hamman, Mrs. S. W. Garwood, Mr. and Mrs. Parse, F. F. Wright, Val. Fink, and many others in the ranks of Freethought, have made my labors in this vast field, where sea and land are radiant with promise, labors of hope; and the glowing outlook is brighter as the spirit of comradeship drops its magnetic influence upon the advancing world.

Saturday, December 28, the clouds roll off and it is a brilliant day. But the railroads are impassable, and I must take my chances on the freight boat, Santa Maria, which being lightly laden, tosses over the waves much like a little skiff, and it is with the utmost difficulty that I can prevent my head from swimming. However, B. A. Stevens, of Los Angeles, is with me, and by our combined exertions and a species of "Christian science," that is, making up our minds that we won't be sick, we endure the changeable sea. Others, however, were not quite so successful, and it was amusing to see how quickly they retired. As we roll over the vast and sparkling billows, the prospects are enchanting. We always keep in sight of land, and the mountains present an ever-varying aspect, while the illimitable ocean plays and dances on the curving shores. The sea-gulls follow us persistently, as if they had an idea that we might fall overboard and give them a chance for "pickings and stealings," if the sharks were not too numerous. The dolphins heave their glittering sides along the ship's pathway, and the pelican, with one straight dash from aloft, catches the fish and swallows it at a gulp. The long day passes, but the panorama is never the same. The sweeping sea, like a deft magician, is continually charming the world to new beauty. The night comes and the stars make brilliant our course. At eleven o'clock the light of Redondo Beach gleams upon the view. Here, after waiting an hour for transfer, we take the cars and arrive in Los Angeles at 2 o'clock Sunday morning. I didn't awake very early, but when I did, I found that the heavens were almost cloudless, and that a California day in all its glory was marching from the gates of the east. The evening for the lecture was one of unsullied splendor; the moon and stars were all out on full dress parade, and at Illinois Hall quite a large audience was present, between three and four hundred; and so amidst the storms I had some bright experiences. I am not discouraged at the outlook of Los Angeles, but there is plenty of hard work to be done, and it is "the sweet by and by" for the time being. There are earnest workers and Liberals here who do the best they can under the circumstances, and it is always a pleasure to greet these comrades. I enjoy the hospitality of John Riggin until Tuesday morning, when, there being no prospect of railroad transportation, I take the boat for San Francisco. I enjoy the passage very much. The weather was delightful, and while the whales were blowing in the distance, I ate the New Year's turkey with a salt sea appetite.

With its haps and mishaps, and infinite variety of locomotion, the month's journey in Southern California has been one of progress. The pulse of freedom is beating.

Now for the Convention. I hope that as many as possible will attend and aid in every possible way. The organization of Freethought is absolutely necessary as a measure of defense.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

ST. JAMES ON TRIAL.

It is claimed that all civil law is based upon the Bible. Every Christian minister makes that statement and regards it as an argument in favor of retaining the Bible in the public schools and making it the supreme law of the land. We notice, however, that when civil law and so-called divine law come in conflict, the Bible is thrown out. A case in point is at hand. Some days since, a man was arrested in Brooklyn, N. Y., charged with having caused the death of his child through neglect. He was a firm believer in the prayer cure, and had refused to administer to his sick child the medicines prescribed for her relief. The laws of New York make such neglect a criminal offense, and, when death results, attach the penalty of manslaughter. But when the accused was brought into court he pleaded the duty he owed to the higher law which he found in the Epistle of St. James, as follows:

"Is any sick among you? Let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord; and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him."

Now, what do the Christian judges intend to do about this case? The "divine" law prescribes one thing, and the civil law another. It is of course very easy to tell what ought to be done. The man should be set at liberty and informed that he is merely a victim of popular religious superstition. He should be instructed that the epistle of James was written by some fanatic who was governed by his imagination instead of his knowledge. All the judges, lawyers, and most of the ministers know that the prayer (if faith will) will not heal anybody who is really sick. It may in some cases quiet the nerves of the one who does the praying, but it can have no permanent effect on another person. Common sense teaches all but religious people that the healing of sickness requires the administering of such material remedies as experience with similar cases has shown to be efficacious; and intelligent clergymen adopt this method until health is restored, when they again begin preaching the efficacy of prayer, which they have not sufficient faith in to give it a trial in their own cases. This incongruity is so conspicuous that everybody ought to be able to see it. Probably the fact that it is an every-day occurrence is the reason why it does not excite comment. People long habituated to humbugs accept them at last as truths until they reach the point of putting them in practice, when, unless fanaticism has supervened, as in the case of the Brooklyn man, they quietly ignore their faith and rely upon knowledge and experience.

The Brooklyn father who permitted his daughter to die for want of medical treatment has acted consistently with his belief; and for a Christian community to condemn him would be like a father administering liquor to a child and then punishing him for being intoxicated. In this case it is not the poor fanatic but the Christian religion that is on trial.

WEAK ARGUMENT.

The editor of the Argonaut says that "many random and careless readers and thinkers, who have never devoted an hour of patient thought to the study of revealed religion in their lives, inveigh against the Bible, and wage a crusade of malignant traduction against the Christian religion." The writer also states that "Tom Paine confessed that when he wrote his 'Age of Reason' he had not read the New Testament through."

We will venture to say that when the editor of the Argonaut wrote the foregoing he had not read the "Age of Reason" at all. Paine's "confession" was that when he wrote the first part of the "Age of Reason," he had "neither Bible nor Testament to refer to," but having afterwards provided himself with both, he "found them to be much worse books than he had conceived." Supposing, therefore, that Paine had not read the New Testament through (though we have no evidence that he had not), what has the Argonaut gained by stating that alleged fact? Nothing at all. It has simply stated the sort of half truth which it so unsparingly condemns in others. If a man tastes an apple and finds it bitter, he is under no obligation to eat the whole of it in order to convince himself that it is not sweet.

"WOMAN AND FREETHOUGHT."

This is the subject of Mrs. Addie Ballou's lecture next Sunday evening at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, before the Freethought Society. Music will be furnished by Miss Evangeline Ballou, Miss Mate Hildebrande, and Mrs. Eugenia Wheeler Clark, for this and the succeeding Freethought meeting. Also for the Convention and the Paine Celebration. All are cordially invited.

SUNDAY NIGHT'S LECTURE.

The San Francisco Freethought Society opened the season of 1890 with a well-attended meeting last Sunday evening at Union Square Hall. Mrs. Eugenia Clark played the piano brilliantly and sang sweetly. Mr. Schou presided, and introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. S.P. Putnam, who was cordially greeted. The lecturer proceeded in an extemporaneous manner to review some of the proceedings of the late convention of Catholics at Baltimore, and to point out the significance of the resolutions there passed. He also, by quotation from both Catholic and Protestant writers, showed the tendency toward a union of the two branches of the church for the avowed purpose of suppressing their common enemy, the Agnostics and unbelievers.

At the close of the lecture a committee consisting of Mrs. Macdonald, Mr. Lemme, and Mr. Putnam was appointed to make arrangements for the Paine celebration on the 29th.

Next Sunday evening the meeting at the same place will be addressed by Mrs. Addie Ballou on the subject of "Woman and Freethought."

FAITHFUL TO HIS TRUST.

When the good Mrs. Elizabeth H. Church died the only relative near was her nephew, the Rev. Edward B. Church, principal of the Irving Institute of this city. It was Mrs. Church's wish that her funeral services should be of a purely secular character, and that Mr. S. P. Putnam should conduct them. Her wish was confided to her nephew, and he has been faithful to the trust. He at once notified Mr. Putnam, and in every way showed himself the fair-minded gentleman. He was present at the services, and has been generous enough to write the following letter:

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 5, 1890.

MR. S. P. PUTNAM, My Dear Sir: I wish to express to you my sincere appreciation of your kind words and the tasteful manner in which all exercises of to-day were conducted. I am sure if the dear, good lady had been living to witness them she could not have wished them otherwise. The music throughout was in perfect harmony with the occasion and exquisitely rendered. Please express my grateful thanks to all who so generously assisted.

The bequest of $100 to yourself, the editors of the Twentieth Century, the Secular Thought, and the Freethinkers' Magazine will be paid as soon as I can get the authority from the probate court.

Again thanking you for your great kindness and expressing my appreciation, I am Very sincerely yours,
EDW. B. CHURCH.

We have not heard of nobler or more generous action on the part of a clergyman than that of the Rev. Edward B. Church.

A VICTIM OF FAITH CURE.

Advices from Attleboro, Mass., state that a seven-year-old girl lies at the point of death in her father's house in that town. She is sick with malignant typhoid fever, and for fourteen days has been unable to sleep or eat and at times to speak. To increase her misery an abscess has formed on her side. She is slowly but surely dying, the physicians say, for the want of medicine, which she cannot have, because her father, the Rev. George R. Perry, trusts in God to drive away the terrible disease. He believes that prayer and anointing with oil are more efficacious than drugs, and he means to let the disease run its length. His fellow townsmen are much exercised over what they claim is a case of absolute cruelty. Doctors without number have offered their services free of charge, but only to have them refused. Mr.

Perry says he has been cured by faith divers times and instances a number of cases of similar character, which had come under his observation. He receives letters from all over the country from ministers urging him to accept the advice of physicians. He is also a member of the Christian Alliance, and has received several letters from fellow members upholding him in his position.

It is about time that this sort of thing was stopped, not by law but by common sense. A cure is needed for the "faith-cure," and that cure is at hand, namely, Freethought and reason. How long will it be before people adopt it, and how many more innocent lives must be sacrificed to the Moloch of Christian superstition?

ON FOR WASHINGTON!

The Liberals of Washington desire the services of Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel at the Seattle Convention, and the word is that she must go and the Liberals of California will wait until March and April. It is only fair to divide up, and when the time comes the golden state will give a cordial welcome to this lecturer. In view of the rainy weather perhaps it is better to postpone until spring. Old Pluvius by that time will undoubtedly come to the conclusion to take a vacation. We hope he will get la grippe, or the ministerial bronchitis, and take a trip to Europe.

Meanwhile the Liberals of Washington are marching on and will no doubt have a rousing convention. Miss Blaisdell of Portland is preparing for them a beautiful banner. May this be the emblem of enthusiastic interest throughout this new state whose future is so brilliant.

As soon as arrangements are completed notice will be given of Mrs. Krekel's lecture tour in California.

COME TO THE CONVENTION!

Arrangements are being perfected for one of the most interesting Liberal Conventions ever held in the country. Good speeches will be made and good music will be given. It will be a social gathering, as well as intellectual. It will be for humanity and reform. The new FREETHOUGHT headquarters will be open for inspection. The shelves will be laden with the newest and best publications. "Freethought" is now being printed in gold letters on the front window. All are invited to these spacious rooms. Let there be a rally and hand-shake that never was before.

WHEN the Unity Society of Fresno was organized on a purely Liberal basis, and people of all shades of religious belief were invited to co-operate in the search for truth, we were in hopes that it would prove a permanent success and a valuable educator. We were all the more hopeful because the society had a good Liberal for president in Judge J. W. North. But it seems that the Unity Society was too good a thing for Liberalism. It grew and flourished and became respectable, and religious people, who were afraid to attend its meetings at first, finally came to think they owned it. The result is that sectarianism has got in and Liberalism has got out. Judge North has resigned the presidency, and the Unity Society is off the track. The brief experience of the organization seems to prove that Jesuits are Jesuits, whether Unitarians or Catholics.

A COUPLE of misguided people were united in the bonds of matrimony at the Spiritualistic meeting in Metropolitan Temple last Sunday night. Mrs. J. J. Whitney officiated, and after placing the ring on the bride's finger, remarked: "By this act of joining hands you solemnly promise before God and the spirits who witness this marriage, to love, honor, and cherish each other as long as you live." So it appears that the spirits witness marriages. It must be embarrassing to the contracting parties until they get used to it.

OBSERVATIONS.

I hinted a few weeks ago that if I received sufficient encouragement I might collect some of the vagrant pieces which I have written and publish them in the form of a book—at the request of Many Admiring Readers. Only one admiring reader has as yet taken the hint, and his interest is contingent if not commercial. Here is his letter:

GEO. E. M., S. F., Cal.: Your gentle hint is cognized. Yes, publish "Some Casual Observations," by all means. We will gladly notice a copy, and will also sell the very valuable work if you will give us a sufficiently generous discount. Fraternally, E. C. WALKER.
Valley Falls, Kan.

Putnam came back from the southern part of the state last week by boat. His clothes looked as though they had been rained on, but he was in good health and spirits and claims to have made expenses during his absence. He does not explain, however, why he walked up from the ferry instead of taking a car. He didn't know that we had moved, but when he found our locality he appeared pleased because it was so near the Palace Hotel. Then when night came he yanked an emigrant mattress out of the closet and camped on it. I surmise that the trip south was not a financial success.

Two days before he left San Diego Mr. Putnam mailed his "News and Notes," and two days after he arrived the manuscript had not got here. In discussing the matter he was more profane than I had ever known him to be previously. Said he: "If I have to write that copy over again I shall be put out about it. And if just after I have rewritten it the first copy gets here, I shall be still more deeply disturbed. But if I don't rewrite it, and the mail don't bring it, then blank the enchanted mail service, and hurrah for anarchy!" He was saved to law, order, and the republic by the ultimate arrival of the belated manuscript.

It may not be generally known that the Rev. John Jasper, the colored theologian of Virginia, is now in San Francisco; and I am not certain of it myself, but I met a man the other day who answers his description, and I think his name must be Jasper. He was discussing religion with Newton Parnell in front of the Sentry Box on Market street. Said he:

"You gentlemen" (including myself) "are all go'n to hell and burn forever suah, an' doan you make no mistake."

Parnell said: "How do you know?"

"Bible says so."

"Do you believe it?"

"Every word on it, sah! Bible's all the authority I want for faith or works."

"Do you accept its astronomy?"

"'Stronomy, geometry, barometry—all on it. Bible's good nuff for me."

"You think Joshua knew more than Copernicus, eh?"

"Never heerd of Coterminus. Some fool, I suppose. Used ter be er fool myself, but got over it."

"Are you sure you got over it?"

"Huh?"

"Do you think the Bible is authority in all branches of science—better authority than Darwin, for instance?"

"Darnin, Darrun—oh, Darwin—nevah heerd of hi n, sah. What fool thing does he say?"

"He holds that men are descended from the lower forms of animal life."

"Well, he must be a fool, wuss'n old Tom Paine. Live in San Francisker, does he?"

"No; he died several years ago."

"Well, that's the curusest thing I ever heerd on, and I've heerd a good deal of curus preachin'. So they's some folks be-leives that, is they? Hi, yi, yah, yah—wow!"

The Rev. Mr. Jasper was so happy at Darwin's expense that we withdrew and left him enjoying himself. He expects to attend the meetings of the Freethought Society this winter and refute the sophistries of Infidelity. Meanwhile he will instruct a local colored congregation in the truths of religion and science.

A valued subscriber residing in Oregon—a school teacher, and no doubt a good one—sends FREETHOUGHT a poem of eight stanzas, with the request that, if worthy, it be published in these columns. The lines are entitled "Mind's Day," and have poetry enough in them for a volume, but they haven't any more rhythm than a boiler factory. I will quote the first two stanzas:

Alone! The enchanting scene broods
O'er mind's deep contemplative moods,
And the carol of force, silent and soft,
Searchingly draws the attention oft.

Hill and mountain, cone covered peak,
Whereon crystalline dewdrops bespeak,
With jeweled valley's variegated green
Of beauty in consummation seen.

Of these eight lines there is but one—the second—that has anything like a rhythmic swing. That line is written in the style called iambic, and has four iambs; thus:

O'er mind's | deep con | templa | tive moods.

It will be observed that in this style of verse the accent falls on the second or last syllable of each foot. Now let us throw our correspondent's rhyme into the fourth form of iambic verse, and see what advantage he might have taken of his moment of poetic inspiration:

Alone! The enchanting aspect broods
O'er mind's deep contemplative moods,
And songs of force, sung low and clear,
Attract the attentive listener's ear.

On hill and mountain's conic peaks
The crystal dewdrop shining speaks;
In jeweled valley's varied green
Is beauty's consummation seen.

That the writer of "Mind's Day" had no conception of the stern necessities of versification is shown by his concluding stanzas:

Emerald vistas, lovely near and far away
Make more glorious the dawning day
When into sublimity man is of science born
And cradled by intelligent love o'er life's morn.

Beauty and splendor now are all around,
If character forces base passions aground,
While science turns evolution's wheel
And gives birth to love and life that are real.

Merely pausing to remark that "wheel" and "real" do not rhyme, for the reason that the latter is not pronounced "reel," we will see if the above lines can be made rhythmical:

Bright vistas near and far away
Lend added glory to the day
When, great and noble, man is born
And love and judgment 'tend his morn.

With beauty's splendor clothed about,
The baser passions put to rout,
The wheel of evolution turns
And life with real lustre burns.

I do not claim to have made immortal verse out of the foregoing lines. I am not a poet, and rhyme and rhythm are not poetry; they are merely the mechanical arrangement of words so that they can be read in a sing-song tone of voice. Neither can poetry be dashed off hit or miss in a blaze of inspiration. Impromptus are generally poor stuff. So also it is a mistake to

Dem the framing of a deathless lay
The drowsy pastime of a summer's day.

Poetry, as I regard it, is mathematics illuminated by the imagination—the figures of speech, so to say, instead of the figures of arithmetic. No teacher who expected the school committee to give him a certificate would attach his name to the solution of a problem incorrectly worked out, nor would he attempt a sum until he had looked at the rules for doing it. If intelligent writers who contemplate dropping into poetry for the edification of our readers will get an ordinary six-bit grammar and familiarize themselves with that portion of it which comes under the head of "Prosody," their rhymes will find their way into the paper instead of the basket.

I get the hereunto appended letter from a clergyman in Montana:

DEAR SIR: I have observed from reading your writings that you are heavily loaded with religious thought, and that you sometimes give advice to correspondents. Now, dear sir, I am an inventor and I want to do something to fetch the sinners down from the perch of Infidelity upon which they have recently lighted onto, and at the same time make an honest dollar out of the scheme. Do you know whether any patent has ever been taken out on methods of salvation? I guess not. Probably if Talmage, Sam Jones, or that feller Small had thought of it they would of took out a patent on their style, but I don't believe they ever thought of it, ary one of them. It strikes me that the old methods are getting played out. The boys are all dead onto them here. We have lots of back number orthodox preachers that are fat and charming, but they are looked on as passay. They haven't made a patentable improvement on their system of heading off sinners for a hundred years, and they never will unless we get John Wanamaker in at the head of the patent office.

My scheme is to get out of orthodox grooves as much as possible, and if I make a success off of it, I believe I am entitled to all the money there is into it. Then, gentlemen of the cloth, just pack up and mosey off my claim, while I pile up dollars to your cents.

I call my method the Come-off-the-Perch system. I am a violinist after a fashion—not that I tackle Baytoven or Vogner's compositions, but ordinary every-day fiddlin. I can play her up brisk and call off, so that the swarays I have performed into has always been described as enjoyable occasions.

After I have put in my application for a patent I expect to go out as an itinerant. When I approach myself into one of the jay towns around this country I shall put out a lot of dodgers announcing the advent of the only Patent Right Preacher of the world, the intellectual repository of the latest discoveries of science and revelations of divine truth. I shall probably slosh round and slop over some in the usual way in opening up the services. Oh, I am a roarer to exhort, and you can gamble on it; and when I get the congregation all on their feet ready for conversion, out comes the fiddle and gives a squeak or two; that will attract their attention. Then I shall address the intelligent audience which I see before me something after this fashion:

"LADIES AND GENTS: This is a religious revival, and it is my duty to distribute to you the bread of life, the proofs of amazing grace, and the glad tidings of great joy. But effete methods is played out. That is what the word effete means—played out—and I am among you, dearly beloved, to interjuce something new. The offertory will be a march, and every gent that desires to participate in subsequent events will now come forward and drop something in the hat, and have his name wrote in the lamb's book of life. You will then take your partners for a cotillion, and dance off your pent-up religious enthusiasm. Meetings will be held every evening this week, providence permitting, beginning at early candle-lighting to give time for the experience meeting. And may the grace of God, the love of Christ, and the fellowship and communion of the holy ghost be and abide with you now and forever. One more side wanted. There you are. Sets all full. Amen. Address partners. Go it, you ransomed heirs of perdition, and know that your redeemer liveth."

When the contrite sinners have conducted their devotions as long as I think they ought to, I shall give them the doxology and send them home a saved multitude. So I send you my scheme to see if you think it is a good one and worth taking out a patent on. If you say go-ahead I'm going to put her through, or down goes McGinty. Yours in the bonds of Christian endeavor, (Rev.) WHOOPLA GEWHILLIKENS.

"The Story of an African Farm," a good Freethought novel, by Olive Schreiner. Price, 25 cents.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

Seven persons were killed and several buildings were destroyed by an avalanche at Sierra City on Friday morning of last week. Among the structures demolished was a Catholic church.—The San Francisco Turn Verein had its yearly festival last Sunday afternoon and evening. The afternoon was devoted to an exhibition of the work accomplished during the year, and the evening to merry-making and dancing.—Heavy gales have greatly delayed incoming vessels at this port, and nearly wrecked some of them.—The coldest weather ever known has prevailed in the northern part of the state. At Truckee twenty-five inches of snow fell in twenty-four hours. Trains have been blockaded and passengers nearly frozen.—The Single-tax Society has appointed a committee, consisting of James G. Maguire, David Farquharson, Joseph Leggett, A. H. Sanborn, James H. Barry, Thomas Watson, and John A. Maynard, to make arrangements for the reception of Henry George, who is expected to arrive in this city on the 3d of next month.—Dr. H. W. Harkness has been re-elected president of the Academy of Sciences.

Paul Blouet, known to literature as Max O'Rell, is in America and will deliver fifty lectures.—There has been an increased death rate in New York city on account of the mild weather, coupled with the filthy condition of streets and sewers. The death list last week reached 1202.—A Brooklyn, N. Y., man whom the papers describe as an Anarchist, a Swede 40 years old named Francken, killed his wife and child last week, and then shot himself. He was doubtless insane.

Tirard, the French premier and minister of commerce, has sent a circular letter to the Chamber of Commerce throughout France asking if they would support a bill giving women engaged in any trade the right to vote at the elections for the judges of commercial tribunals.—The divorce suit in which Parnell, the Irish leader, is involved as co-respondent is making a good deal of talk, but it is thought that the case will not come to trial. The question is being asked, however, Who will succeed Parnell in the event of his downfall?—A Toronto special says: The separate school election for trustees, which took place Wednesday, caused much comment in Canada. The Roman Catholic clergy opposed the use of the ballot for the election of trustees for their schools, and all who offered themselves for election on the ballot platform were defeated. Several priests were returned as trustees, defeating men who were in favor of the ballot. Against the return of one of these, Father Gibbons, his defeated opponent entered a protest on the ground of undue influence by priests.—The Rev. Francis Bying, chaplain to Queen Victoria, has disappeared. His flight is due to pecuniary difficulties. He had indulged heavily in betting and leaves many creditors to mourn his absence.

THE MOVEMENT IN WASHINGTON.

As secretary of the central committee on state organization of Washington Liberals, I desire to call the attention of all the advocates of our principles to the fact that the active workers in this grand new state of Washington have determined to hold a state convention in the city of Seattle on the 28th, 29th, and 30th of January, 1890.

In forming a practical organization, money and talent are very essential, and we hope all who have enough and to spare of the above necessities will prove themselves Liberals by showering their accumulated stores in liberal quantities upon us, that our efforts in behalf of equal rights, equal taxation, and free speech may gloriously triumph.

Right here I must say I have very little respect for the believers in our principles as laid down in the "Nine Demands" who will not do all in their power to have them enforced.

Let all who have a mite to spare towards helping our convention inclose the same by letter to Peter Wickstrom, Treasurer, corner Eighth and Columbia streets, Seattle, Washington.

C. B. Reynolds is working night and day, might and main, to make the coming convention a success, and any word of encouragement will be thankfully received by him at 1214 Second street, Seattle.

The hall has been secured, and a fine programme arranged, and all who can come will find it both pleasant and profitable; besides, it will more than pay any one to visit the coming great city of the Northwest.

Arrangements are being made with the railroad companies so that delegates may have reduced rates to and from the convention.

Geo. M. Boman is doing as much good, solid, practical work for our cause as any man in Washington, and should receive the thanks of every Liberal in the state. His "wood cut"—designed by that genius, Watson Heston—"The Taxed and the Untaxed" is a splendid and happy thought and will set all classes to thinking.

I shall close this short letter by earnestly appealing to all the Liberals in Washington and elsewhere to aid us in permanent organization.

Address all communications to R. J. WILSON, secretary State Central Committee, box 816, Seattle, Washington.

MEMORIAL SERVICES

IN HONOR OF MRS. ELIZABETH H. CHURCH.

Freethought friends gathered together Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock in Union Square Hall, to honor the memory of Mrs. Elizabeth H. Church. The coffin was placed in the centre of the hall, upon it a simple wreath of flowers. The services began with music by Miss Mate Hildebrande, a funeral march. Miss Evangeline Ballou rendered the beautiful song, "Tired:"

The shadowy gloaming draweth nigh,
'Tis time for the evening light,
I am ready to go to rest at last,
Ready to say good night.

"Thanatopsis" was then read by Samuel P. Putnam, and "The Lost Chord" sung by Miss Ballou.

It flooded the crimson twilight,
Like the close of a mighty psalm,
It lay on the fevered spirit,
With a touch of infinite calm.

It quieted pain and sorrow,
Like love overcoming strife,
It seemed the harmonious echo
From our discordant life.

It linked all perplexed meanings
Into one perfect peace,
And trembled away into silence,
As if it were loth to cease.

The following memorial address was then given by Samuel P. Putnam:

Death is the sublimity of life, the heart of its mystery and glory. Without death there would be no birth, as without night there would be no day. It is the inevitable sorrow, but the sorrow that jewels life with infinite possibilities. It opens the realm of the boundless. It mingles eternity with time.

We must meet death. It is in the pathway of all. Its majesty is for the humblest. Its stroke is for the greatest. The king is nothing to its sceptre. All earthly honors fail in its presence. But the lowest is crowned with its mystic splendor. None can escape its gloom. None can avoid its wreath of glory.

Having passed the day, let us meet the night with hope and courage. Let us not fear the unknown journey, but walk with royal step to the sepulchre of the mightiest. Let us greet the stars with lofty brow beyond the sunset's sea of gold.

The morning comes with its wondrous fire and exquisite joy, but it passes. Youth is too sweet, too beautiful, to endure. Because so fleeting, it gathers all the colors of heaven in its rainbow of promise.

The noonday comes with soft and solemn tenderness, and peace, and rich music of achievement. The flowers are blooming then in radiant content. The shadows are bright, for the sun is high in heaven.

The evening flows on, and takes in its bosom the fruit and excellence of toil. The accumulated wealth of day shines in its ranks of gold. The flame of life is tipped with a thousand colors.

The sunset goes out in night, as the morning into noonday, and the noonday into evening. But what is the night? Who has measured its realm, who has counted its stars, who has reached its measureless heights?

We wait in the humility of knowledge, in the wonder of ignorance. We claim nothing, we deny nothing. But we sink not to the ground in despair. The glory of life shall interpret for us the gloom of death. Upright and with no coward heart we confront the destiny of all.

Memory and hope are our angels, memory clothed with morning hues and noonday radiance, memory laden with golden hours. Memory fills us with delight.

Hope is the child of love. We hope because we are not alone, because our life mingles with the life of others. It is love that binds death to life and creates within it the star of immortality. We love and we hope and hope ceases not amidst the shadows of the tomb. Love is married to eternity, and gives eternity to every object of its passionate adoration.

Our humanity is the supreme divinity. It is our humanity that conquers death. It is human love and human justice and human virtues that shine beyond the grave. It is in our humanity that we trust, in the spirit that nature gives it, in the wisdom with which science endows it, in the deeds which make memorable the ages gone before—our humanity, not that which is in ourselves alone, but in the millions that lived and toiled yesterday, in the millions that live and toil to-day. We live together, we labor together, we hope together, we die together, and in that unity of life and labor and hope and death we find the immortal joy. It is not given to us from above. It springs from that which is within.

Out of human sympathy flow the fountains of consolation. It is eyes that we see, hands that we touch, and voices that we hear that make endurable the pain and suffering of life, that make endurable the awful calm of death. We come together to the grave, and the flowers bloom from our mingling tears.

Our friend is dead. We pay to her the last sad rites of respect and affection. The body returns to the dust, but our hearts retain the life that has been lived. That passes not away; that is not dead; there is no tomb for that.

Truthfully, nobly, bravely our friend has lived. The crown of age is upon her brow. Peacefully the last hours came. Peacefully her eyes closed in slumber. She saw the morning, the noonday, and the evening. She was not cut down in the midst of her duties. She saw the harvest ere she took the hand of death.

She was a woman without superstition. She dwelt in the clear light of reason. She recognized the limits of human knowledge. Her faith was faith in man. The truth to her was sacred, but not the baseless creeds of ignorance. She dared to disbelieve, and to assert the dignity of her own nature. She was loyal to herself, to her own convictions. She would not condemn any on account of differences of opinion. She did the right for the right's sake, because she loved to do it. She was philanthropic. She was devoted to humanity, to progress. She sacrificed for liberty and justice. She defended the cause of labor. She was an ardent supporter of democracy, a friend of the people. She would like to make this world a happy world, to abolish poverty; She would consecrate wealth and leisure to the removal of vice and crime and falsehood. She was kindly in her judgments of men and women, but unbending in her allegiance to Freethought, and unswerving in her condemnation of those savage systems of theology which sprang from fear. Whatever was humanitarian touched her deeply.

Thus we can remember her with honor and with joy. Thus we can place upon her grave the tribute of heartfelt respect. Her example shall be an inspiration. Born of noble and Freethought ancestry, true to the bright inheritance, she passes from life to death a beautiful influence. She now belongs to humanity, to its immortal part; she has passed to the heavens of thought, of aspiration, of accomplished virtue, the heavens which overarch our earthly toil, which makes our pathway blessed here, which gives music and love to home, and glory to the harvest field.

Farewell, comrade, brave and cheerful worker in the varied path of life. We place upon thy last resting-place the flowers of hope and sympathy. The light of remembrance is on thy grave, and dissipates its gloom. Thou hast been true to humanity, and humanity shall bear thy spirit on its boundless course. Farewell thy body mingles with the dust, it vanishes in the blue dome, it becomes a part of the flower and root, but on the measureless stream of time that which makes the world nobler, happier, sweeter, shall keep the deathless record of thy life.

Friends, from the voiceless dead let us go forth to the living with loftier spirit. It is for us to make death glorious with the earnestness of our own work. We cannot abolish death. It is universal; but we need not crouch before it as the king of terrors. With magnanimous soul, with hands that have labored for the welfare of humanity, that have committed no wrong, with eyes that look onward still, we can meet death with unshaken manhood. We stand before the unknown, not with savage fear, but with the confidence that comes from truth, sincerity, honor, and consecration to the good of all.

Like our dear friend who has gone, let us believe in the progress of mankind, in the victory of the truth, in the sacredness of humanity; let us strive to make the evil less and the good stronger; let us feel deeper than ever the bond of fellowship; let us look into the ever-brightening future of this world, and through the glory of our living now set the stars of hope in the untraveled hereafter.

The services were closed with music by Miss Hildebrand and Miss Ballou, "The Heart Bowed Down:"

The mind will in its worst despair
Still ponder o'er the past,
On moments of delight that were Too beautiful to last.

The body was then borne away to become a part of nature's frame in the purifying touch of fire.

Elizabeth Hannah Church was born in Paris, France, on the 24th day of April, 1809. Her father, Edward Church, Jr., was U. S. consul at L'Orient and ports adjacent in Brittany, and her grandfather, Edward Church, was U. S. consul-general at Lisbon, Portugal, during Washington's administration, and wrote a number of Liberal tracts in which Freethought was ably advocated.

The subject of this sketch, at a very early age, refused to accept the generally received views of those about her. Coming to America with her parents, as a young lady, she resided with them in Lexington, Kentucky, and in Northampton, Massachusetts, till 1858, when she was married to an Italian gentleman of culture and refinement, but of unbalanced mind. Being deserted by him after several years of married life, she was divorced and took back her maiden name. Returning to Paris, her native city, she resided there until the close of the Franco-Prussian war, always an ardent and radical republican, using her utmost energies to bring about the downfall of the empire, and favoring earnestly the object of the commune, not as falsely and generally represented, but with the true and patriotic aim of giving to Paris free and liberal municipal self-government.

Feeling the effect of age, she sought a milder climate, and made her home in the little principality of Monaco, lodging in close proximity to the Monte Carlo Casino, where she could enjoy the finest of music twice a day, during the entire season.

Detesting, however, the gambling table, and seeing the vast harm wrought by it, she often asserted that she had never placed even a five franc piece on the table, nor had any desire to do so.

Finding the infirmities of age coming fast upon her, she came to San Francisco, in 1886, to spend her last days with a relative. She was interested to the last in all of the leading questions of the day, and ever hopeful that the advance of Liberal ideas should reform all abuses and bring in the highest happiness of which mankind are capable. To express in an humble way her approval of their work, she has made small bequests to the editors of several of the leading Freethought periodicals, and requested that her funeral services be purely secular, and that they be conducted by Mr. Samuel P. Putnam, of the San Francisco FREETHOUGHT. Believing, also, that the dead should be so disposed of as to do the least injury to the living, she requested that her remains be cremated at Los Angeles, in hopes that the day is not far distant when every city shall have the same facilities for disposing of their dead.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Under this appropriate heading Mr. George Boman, of Seattle, has collocated the wise remarks of many eminent men on the subject of church exemption. The various extracts read as follows:

"In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened."—WASHINGTON'S Farewell Address.

"Every man who conducts himself as a good citizen is accountable alone to God for his religious faith, and should be protected in worshipping God according to the dictates of his own conscience."—GEORGE WASHINGTON.

"The government of the United States is not in any sense founded on the Christian religion."—GEORGE WASHINGTON, Treaty with Tripoli, 1793.

"To compel a man to furnish contributions of money for the propagation of opinions which he disbelieves is sinful and tyrannical. Be it therefore enacted by the General Assembly that no man shall be compelled to frequent or support any religious worship, place, or ministry whatsoever."—THOMAS JEFFERSON, in General Assembly of Virginia, 1785.

"Religion is not in the purview of human government. Religion is essentially distinct from government, and exempt from its cognizance. A connection between them is injurious to both."—JAMES MADISON.

"When a religion is good, I conceive that it will support itself; when it cannot support itself and God does not care to support it, so its professors are obliged to call for help from the civil power, it is a sign, I apprehend, of its being a bad one."—BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, October 9, 1780.

"I would also call your attention to the importance of correcting an evil that, if permitted to continue, will probably lead to great trouble before the close of the nineteenth century. It is the acquisition of vast amounts of untaxed church property. In 1850, I believe, the church property of the United States, which paid no tax, municipal or state, amounted to $87,000,000. In 1860 the amount had doubled. In 1870 it was $354,483,587. By 1900, without a check, it is safe to say this property will reach a sum exceeding $3,000,000,000. So vast a sum, receiving all the protection and benefits of government, without bearing its proportion of the burdens and expenses of the same, will not be looked upon acquiescently by those who have to pay taxes.

"The accumulation of so vast a property as here alluded to, without taxation, may lead to sequestration without constitutional authority, and through blood. I would suggest the taxation of all property equally."—Gen'l GRANT'S Message, 1875.

"The divorce between church and state ought to be absolute. It ought to be so absolute that no church property anywhere, in any state, or in the nation, should be exempt from equal taxation; for if you exempt the property of any church organization, to that extent you impose a tax upon the whole community."—President GARFIELD to Congress, June 22, 1874.

"I would like to see all church property throughout this land taxed to the last dollar's worth, not merely as a matter of justice, but in the interest of religion itself."—Rev. DR. SHIPMAN, rector of Christ's church, New York city.

"We have never been able to see the slightest difference in principle between the appropriation of a certain sum of money raised by tax to a particular church, and a release of that church from a tax on its property to the same amount. The cost of the benevolent act in either case falls upon the tax payers generally. In the one case the sum is levied directly upon all but the church property. In the other case all property but that of the church is obliged in consequence of this exemption to pay a larger share of the expenses of the government."—WM. CULLEN BRYANT, editorial in New York Evening Post, commenting on above extract from sermon of Rev. Dr. Shipman.

"It cannot be denied that wealth gives political power, and such power is all the more dangerous to the public safety when it is in the hands of corporations whose business in life it is to promulgate opinions."—Rev. G. E. GORDON, Church of the Redeemer, Milwaukee.

"Depend upon it, we shall never worship God in the true fashion until we bear our just share of the public burden, and so earn the protection we now enjoy without paying for it."—Rev. C. W. WENDTE, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Reader, please answer the following leading questions from a Baptist paper:

"Has civil society a right to give the public money outright to a religious or ecclesiastical body, to a missionary or tract society, or to a church?"

"Is there any difference between releasing one from a debt of ten dollars—which he is bound to pay—and giving him ten dollars?"

"Is there any difference whatever between paying out money from the public treasury and remitting taxes that are coming into the public treasury?"

It is an astonishing fact that the total value of all the property invested in school-houses in the United States, amounts to only $212,252,491, while the exemptions of church property, in the state of New York alone, amount to more than double that sum.

LETTERS ON THE LAND QUESTION.

The following letters, reprinted from the London Times of recent dates (from November 7 to 15, 1889), are of great interest on account of the light they throw upon some of the more important aspects of the question of land nationalization, and on the problems of Socialism in general.—EDITOR.

MR. SPENCER'S FIRST LETTER.

To the Editor of the Times:

SIR: During the interview between Mr. Morley and some of his constituents, reported in your issue of the 5th inst., I was referred to as having set forth certain opinions respecting land-ownership.* Fearing that, if I remain silent, many will suppose I have said things which I have not said, I find it needful to say something in explanation.

Already within these few years I have twice pointed out that these opinions (made to appear by those who have circulated them widely different from what they really are, by the omission of accompanying opinions) were set forth in my first work, published forty years ago; and that, for the last twelve or fifteen years, I have refrained from issuing new editions of that work and have interdicted translations, because, though I still adhere to its general principles, I dissent from some of the deductions.

The work referred to—"Social Statics"—was intended to be a system of political ethics—absolute political ethics, or that which ought to be, as distinguished from relative political ethics, or that which is at present the nearest practicable approach to it. The conclusion reached concerning land-ownership was reached while seeking a valid basis for the right of property: the basis assigned by Locke appearing to me invalid. It was argued that a satisfactory ethical warrant for private ownership could arise only by

*Extract from the Morley Interview.

MR. LAIDLER said their method of dealing with the land would be that the present owners should hold it for their time, and that it should revert back to the state. They remembered that Mr. Herbert Spencer had said that the land had been taken by force and by fraud. That gentleman had also said that to right one wrong it takes another.

MR. MORLEY.—Has Mr. Spencer said this?

MR. LAIDLER.—Yes; we all know.

MR. MORLEY.—You are aware that he has recalled some of the things he has laid down?

MR. LAIDLER.—If he has stated truth and recalled it, the truth will prevail.

MR. MORLEY.—Do you include houses?

MR. LAIDLER.—We include land, not houses. In houses there is labor, but in land there is not.

MR. MORLEY.—Not?

MR. LAIDLER.—There may be labor exerted in land, but as far as the labor is in the land we believe it ought to belong to the laborer. As the land has been obtained by the method I have named—by force and fraud, as Spencer says—we contend that the land ought to be taken back by the community and handed over to the municipalities and county councils to be used in such democratic manner as the people may elect those bodies for.

MR. MORLEY.—I can not think that what is commonly called nationalization of the land is anything but what it was called the other day—either robbery or folly. I have really no more to say on that subject, contract between the community, as original owner of the inhabited area, and individual members, who became tenants, agreeing to pay certain portions of the produce, or its equivalent in money, in consideration of recognized claims to the rest. And in the course of the argument it was pointed out that such a view of land-ownership is congruous with existing legal theory and practice; since in law every land-owner is held to be a tenant of the Crown—that is, of the community, and since, in practice, the supreme right of the community is asserted by every Act of Parliament which, with a view to public advantage, directly or by proxy takes possession of land after making due compensation.

All this was said in the belief that the questions raised were not likely to come to the front in our time or for many generations; but, assuming that they would some time come to the front, it was said that, supposing the community should assert overtly the supreme right which is now tacitly asserted, the business of compensation of land-owners would be a complicated one:

One that perhaps can not be settled in a strictly equitable manner. . . . Most of our present land-owners are men who have, either mediately or immediately, either by their own acts or by the acts of their ancestors, given for their estates equivalents of honestly earned wealth, believing that they were investing their savings in a legitimate manner. To justly estimate and liquidate the claims of such is one of the most intricate problems society will one day have to solve.

To make the position I then took quite clear, it is needful to add that, as shown in a succeeding chapter, the insistence on this doctrine, in virtue of which "the right of property obtains a legitimate foundation," had for one of its motives the exclusion of Socialism and Communism, to which I was then as profoundly averse as I am now.

Investigations made during recent years into the various forms of social organization, while writing the "Principles of Sociology," have in part confirmed and in part changed the views published in 1850. Perhaps I may be allowed space for quoting from "Political Institutions" a paragraph showing the revised conclusions arrived at:

At first sight it seems fairly inferable that the absolute ownership of land by private persons must be the ultimate state which industrialism brings about. But though industrialism thus far has tended to individualize possession of land while individualizing all other possession, it may be doubted whether the final stage is at present reached. Ownership established by force does not stand on the same footing as ownership established by contract; and though multiplied sales and purchases, treating the two ownerships in the same way, have tacitly assimilated them, the assimilation may eventually be denied. The analogy furnished by assumed rights of possession over human beings helps us to recognize this possibility. For, while prisoners of war, taken by force and held as property in a vague way (being at first much on a footing with other members of a household), were reduced more definitely to the form of property when the buying and selling of slaves became general; and, while it might centuries ago have been thence inferred that the ownership of man by man was an ownership in course of being permanently established, yet we see that a later stage of civilization, reversing this process, has destroyed ownership of man by man. Similarly, at a stage still more advanced, it may be that private ownership of land will disappear. As that primitive freedom of the individual which existed before war established coercive institutions and personal slavery comes to be re-established as militancy declines, so it seems possible that the primitive ownership of land by the community, which, with the development of coercive institutions, lapsed in large measure or wholly into private ownership, will be revived as industrialism further develops. The regime of contract, at present so far extended that the right of property in movables is recognized only as having arisen by exchange of services or products under agreements, or by gift from those who had acquired it under such agreements, may be further extended so far that the products of the soil will be recognized as property only by virtue of agreements between individuals as tenants and the community as land-owner. Even now, among ourselves, private ownership of land is not absolute. In legal theory land-owners are directly or indirectly tenants of the Crown (which in our day is equivalent to the State, or, in other words, the community); and the community from time to time resumes possession after making due compensation. Perhaps the right of the community to the land, thus tacitly asserted, will in time to come be overtly asserted and acted upon after making full allowance for the accumulated value artificially given. . . . There is reason to suspect that, while private possession of things produced by labor will grow even more definite and sacred than at present, the inhabited area, which can not be produced by labor, will eventually be distinguished as something which may not be privately possessed. As the individual, primitively owner of himself, partially or wholly loses ownership of himself during the militant regime, but gradually resumes it as the industrial regime develops, so possibly the communal proprietorship of land, partially or wholly merged in the ownership of dominant man during evolution of the militant type, will be resumed as the industrial type becomes fully evolved (pp. 643-646).

The use of the words "possible," "possibly," and "perhaps" in the above extracts shows that I have no positive opinion as to what may hereafter take place. The reason for this state of hesitancy is that I can not see my way toward reconciliation of the ethical requirements with the politico-economical requirements. On the one hand, a condition of things under which the owner of, say, the Scilly Isles might make tenancy of his land conditional upon professing a certain creed or adopting prescribed habits of life, giving notice to quit to any who did not submit, is ethically indefensible. On the other hand, "nationalization of the land," effected after compensation for the artificial value given by cultivation, amounting to the greater part of its value, would entail, in the shape of interest on the required purchase-money, as great a sum as is now paid in rent, and indeed a greater, considering the respective rates of interest on landed property and other property. Add to which, there is no reason to think that the substituted form of administration would be better than the existing form of administration. The belief that land would be better managed by public officials than it is by private owners is a very wild belief.

What the remote future may bring forth there is no saying; but with a humanity anything like that we now know, the implied reorganization would be disastrous.

I am, etc., HERBERT SPENCER.

Athenæum Club, November 6.

(To be Continued.)

PRACTICAL WORK IN WASHINGTON.

One of the most able and successful business men and earnest Liberals of Washington is George M. Boman, of Seattle, member of the Central Executive Committee for the convention to effect practical organization of the Liberals of Washington, to convene at Seattle, January 28, 29, and 30. Realizing the need of prompt action to defeat the subtle schemes of the combined church organizations, and that delays are dangerous, he has anticipated some of the work of the state organization. He commissioned Mr. Heston to design a cartoon to show most forcibly the gross injustice of exempting church property from taxation, and under the title of "Taxed and Untaxed," most ably has Mr. Heston filled the order. Then, compiling "Words of Wisdom" from the most distinguished statesmen and churchmen, he has had five thousand of the cartoon and compilation printed as leaflets, and I am helping in the good work of distributing them throughout the entire state.

Mr. Boman desires that every Liberal in the state of Washington shall be supplied free with a sufficient number of copies to send one to each member of the legislature from their precinct, and to supply copies to all intelligent Christian friends who will so send them. Each leaflet should have written on it the name and address of the sender.

Whenever Liberals of the state can induce friends, not known as avowed Liberals, to judiciously circulate copies of the leaflet among Christians, they can be supplied postpaid, by writing me the number of leaflets they require.

There is no word in the leaflet that can offend Christians, no intimation of its emanating from Infidel source, yet it is a wonderful educator, a grand thought provoker.

Mr. Boman, during the Constitutional Convention at Olympia, had handsome photograph copies made of a cartoon published in the Truth Seeker, of the same title, "Taxed and Untaxed," and mailed a copy to every member of the convention, and it had powerful influence in defeating the church organizations in their endeavors to engraft exemption from taxation of all church property on the constitution.

Now, with every member of both houses of the legislature deluged with this new "Cartoon Leaflet," signed by voters of their respective precincts (a gentle hint that if they fail to work and vote for right and justice, the voters sending the leaflets will fail to work and vote for them next election), and with the more intelligent Christians thus educated on the facts, the victory for right and justice is insured. If one man can thus accomplish so great and grand a work, what may we not effect when all the Liberals of this young giant state of Washington are effectively organized.

It would be almost impossible to circulate these leaflets, and send copy to every Liberal in the state, as I have done, only for the initiative work done by the Wala Walla Liberal Club; they obtained names and addresses of all the Liberals of the state. There is great enthusiasm in regard to the convention, and earnest purpose to effect real practical organization.

Now is the time for action, "now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation," salvation from the despotism and tyranny of priestcraft, from misrepresentation, injustice, denunciation, hate, and ostracism.

By the memory of the noble, brave hearts that suffered so much to secure for us the liberty we do enjoy, let us prove worthy of the priceless heritage of freedom. Let us unite in self-sacrificing endeavor to secure freedom to our children, and earn the plaudits of generations yet unborn, because by our zeal and self-sacrifice we secured for them the eternal elevation of "The Flag above the Cross." C. B. REYNOLDS.

JUDICIAL OATHS.

In the plot of Ramayana, one of the great epic poems, Rama, the son of the king, who refuses to let his father break a rash promise, says: "It is good conduct that makes a man to be noble or ignoble, heroic or a pretender to manliness, pure or impure. Truth and mercy are immemorial characteristics of a king's conduct. Hence royal rule is in its essence truth. On truth the world is based. Both sages and gods have esteemed truth. The man who speaks the truth in this world attains the highest imperishable state. Men shrink with fear and horror from a liar as from a serpent. In this world the chief element in virtue is truth. It is called the basis of everything. Truth is lord in the world. Virtue always rests on truth. All things are founded on truth; nothing is higher than it."*

Max Muller also says: "Were I to quote from all the law-books, and from still later works, everywhere you would have the same key-note of truthfulness vibrating through them all. . . . I say once more that I do not wish to represent the people of India as two hundred and fifty-three millions of angels, but I do wish it to be understood and accepted as a fact that the damaging charge of untruthfulness brought against that people is utterly unfounded with regard to ancient times. It is not only not true, but the very opposite of truth. As to modern times, and I date them about one thousand years after Christ, I can only say that after reading the accounts of the terrors and horrors of Mohammedan rule, my wonder is that so much of native virtue and truthfulness should have survived. You might as well expect a mouse to speak the truth before a cat as a Hindoo before a Mohammedan judge."†

In the religion of the Hindoos the controlling ideas were truth and manliness of character. The modern doctrine, that men, especially Christian men, will tell the truth only when they imprecate divine vengeance on themselves here or hereafter, was no part of their belief. Whatever the form of their oath, if oath was required of their witnesses at all, it was no doubt but a simple promise to tell the truth. As is well known now, the Germans descended from Aryan stock, and the high regard for truth in the tribes that conquered England shows that the oaths, if any, taken by the ancestors of the English nation were of the same character as those of the parent Aryan race. Witnesses were not considered competent because superstitious, and belief in hell-fire was not the key that unlocked the witness box.

Max Muller, in his Science of Religion, says: "The fact cannot be disputed away that the religion of Buddha was from the beginning purely atheistic. The idea of the godhead, after it had been degraded by endless mythological absurdities, which struck and repelled the heart of Buddha, was, for a time at least, entirely expelled from the sanctuary of the human mind; and the highest morality that was ever taught before the rise of Christianity was taught by men with whom the gods had become mere phantoms, and who had no altar, not even to the unknown God."

*India, by Max Muller, 79.

†India, What It Teaches Us, 81.

It was the opinion of Lord Bacon, who was no Atheist, that "Atheism leaves men to sense, to philosophy, to natural piety, to laws, to reputation, all of which may be guides to outward moral virtue, though religion were not; but superstition dismounts all these and erecteth an absolute monarchy in the minds of men. Therefore Atheism never did perturb states, for it makes men wary of themselves, as looking no further; and we see the times inclined to Atheism (as the time of Augustus Cæsar) were civil times; but superstition hath been the confusion of many states, and bringeth in a new primum mobile that ravishes the spheres of government."

"Belief in future punishment" is not essential to competency in witnesses. This is expressly held in Omichund vs. Barker, 1 Atkyns, 41.

"Belief in God" as a test of competency varies with the individual. The Presbyterian believes in a God of vengeance, capable of avenging himself now or hereafter at his option. The Jew believes in the god of Moses; the Catholic in a god influenced and controlled by Christ, by the Virgin Mary, by the intercession of the saints, and by the offices of the priesthood—a god propitiated by masses, penances, and gifts. The Mohammedan has faith in one god, whose prophet is Mohammed, and whose revelation is the Koran. When the belief of other than Christian people is examined, it is found to differ from the Christian faith and definition. Herbert Spencer says: "To say that the words which in various languages are the equivalents of our word God are originally descriptive words will be a startling proposition to those who, unfamiliar with the facts, credit the savage with thoughts like our own; and will be a repugnant proposition to those who, knowing something of the facts, yet persist in asserting that the conception of a universal power was possessed by man from the beginning. But whoever studies the evidence without bias will find that the general word for deity was at first a word expressive of superiority. . . . Applied alike to animate and inanimate things as indicating some quality above the common, the word is in this sense applied to human beings, both living and dead; but as the dead are supposed to have acquired mysterious powers of doing good and evil, the word becomes to be more especially applicable to them. Though god and ghost have with us widely distinguished meanings, yet they are originally equivalent words, or rather there is but one word for the supernatural being. Besides being shown this by missionaries, who have found no native word for god which did not also mean ghost, demon, or devil; besides being shown this by the Greeks and Romans, who used for the spirits of deceased relatives the same word which they used for their great deities; and besides being shown it by the Egyptians, in whose hieroglyphics the same 'determinative' means according to the context, god, creator, august person; we are shown it by the Hebrews, who applied the word elohim not only to their supreme supernatural being, but also to ghosts; indeed, giving as they did the same name to living persons of power, they show us, just as primitive people at large do, that superiority of one or the other kind is the sole attribute ascribed." (The Evolution of Ceremonial Government).

As the judicial oath is of an international character, to be taken according to the views of the witness, who may believe in a god or may not, belief in a deity is not essential to competency—manhood is the test.

It was made a question in the age of Grotius whether treaties made by Christians with heathens were obligatory upon Christians. "This discussion," says Vattel (book II, ch. 12, sec. 161) "might be necessary at a time when the madness of party still darkened those principles which it had long caused to be forgotten; but we may venture to believe it would be superfluous in our age. The law of nature alone regulates the treaties of nations. The difference of religion is a thing absolutely foreign to them. Different people treat with each other in the quality of men, and not under the character of Christians or Mussulmans. Their common safety requires that they should treat with each other, and treat with security. Every religion that should in this case clash with the law of nature would bear upon it the marks of reprobation, and it would not come from the author of nature, who is always constant and faithful. But if the maxims of religion tend to establish by violence and to oppress all those who will not receive it, the law of nature forbids the favoring of that religion, or our uniting ourselves without necessity to its inhuman followers; and the common safety of mankind invites them rather to enter into an alliance against madmen and to repress the bigoted fanatics who disturb the public repose and threaten all nations."

This doctrine of the supremacy of the law of nature over the dogmas of religion is no less true in the law of a republic than in international law. The men who impose religious tests as the measure of the competency of men to enjoy civil rights are no less fanatical, and their bigotry no less cruel, no less in conflict with the law of nature, than the creed of the priesthood condemned by Grotius and Vattel. The competency of witnesses is to be determined by manhood, not by their beliefs about religion. In a free government no man is authorized to decide for his fellow-men whether there is a god and what his nature is; nor to compel belief in his own conception of deity. The rule of the Dark Ages is not the rule of to-day. With the fall of the crown in America perished the dogma that the chief business of the government was the regulation of the religion of the people. The government created was not a joint partnership between the crown and the cross, but a government of the people, where men met as men and legislated for the equal rights of all men. Christians are protected as men, not as Christians. Infidels and Atheists have an equal right not only to free thought and a free press, but to the enjoyment of all civil rights, without regard to their beliefs. Under such a constitution the true form of judicial oaths is a simple promise to tell the truth under the pains and penalties against perjury. This is recognized in section 1, Revised Statutes of the United States, that "a requirement of an oath shall be deemed complied with by making affirmation in judicial form."

W. S. BUSH.

JAMIESON'S WORK.

The lecture by W. F. Jamieson was attended by a large audience on Sunday evening in the court house. The speaker said he maintained the right of every man to his own religious opinions, but that no man had the least right to break up our free school with his religion. The common schools, where the children of the rich and poor are on a level, should be guarded by the American people. The free common school is absolutely necessary to the prosperity of this republic, the best and freest under the shining sun. If it is to be preserved secular education must be protected; the common school, the corner stone of the republic, must remain. All religions and no religions stand on the same level, which ought to satisfy every citizen. But this equal right of all does not satisfy some. Glad am I there are Christians like Rev. Alonzo T. Jones, of Oakland, Cal., who ask no right that they are not willing to grant. If the free schools are saved, the Protestants must be willing to omit Bible-reading and religious hymn-singing in the school-room, which should never be made a debating arena on the subject of religion. Let the schools be forever free from religious interference. As much as I love debate, and I fully believe in it, I say there is room enough outside for debates. Religious parents have a right to teach their own children religion in their Sunday schools, in their churches, or at home. Is this not enough? Why should anyone try to force his religion upon the children of other people? Why should the Jew, the Infidel, the Catholic, be compelled to listen to religious exercises in which they do not believe? The Catholic has as much right to his religion in this country as the Protestant. My fight is not against persons. I concede the equal right of all. This is why I claim no right above a Catholic, a Jew, or a Gentile. For justice I plead; and so I say to the Protestants, while yet they are in the majority, do the magnanimous thing: omit Bible-reading and Protestant hymns in the free common schools of our country. Do not give Catholics the least excuse for dividing and breaking up our common school system. Reasonable Catholics will help save it; although I am sorry to say the Roman Catholic church is against our common schools. But lay not the entire blame on them. You Protestants have endangered the schools by furnishing the astute, logical Catholics their premises. If majorities rule in matters of conscience—which should never be admitted—then the time is rapidly approaching when the Catholic church will take you at your word and by majority vote exclude your religious exercises and substitute their own, even the mass. How will you like that? You have insisted when you are in the majority that King James's Bible must be read to the children of Jews, Infidels, and Protestants alike. Does this not outrage your conscience to trample on theirs? When the change comes, how then? When Catholics, who now number nearly ten millions, gain the majority, as they are likely to do, and read their Douay Bible in place of your King James, and require your children to recite their catechism, will you submit? You will do as Catholics are now doing, establish separate schools. That will be the death of our splendid free school system. There is now an army of six hundred thousand children in Catholic parochial schools. Cardinal Antonelli said "he thought it better that the children should grow up in ignorance than be educated in such a system of schools as the state of Massachusetts supports," the best in the world with the exception of our young state of Colorado; "the essential part of education was the catechism; and while arithmetic and geography and other similar studies might be useful, they were not essential."

Let that principle prevail, and our republic will cease to exist save in name. Any man who places his religion above his duty as an American citizen stands ready to wreck this nation, which, with outstretched arm, has welcomed to her protecting bosom the oppressed and persecuted of all nations. The state has a right to educate all its citizens to preserve itself. Ignorance and immorality are twin evils. If either must be destroyed, the church or the state, which must it be? The state, this American nation, never oppressed any church. The church always oppresses, when given power. All should stand together, shoulder to shoulder, as was done to preserve the Union, to maintain our free school system, free from the dominion of a church. We say to any church, if you will not submit to the right of this government to self-protection, to diffuse secular education, to insist that all its children should be trained to make good citizens, you will be made to, just as sure as secession was buried deep. Compulsory education is necessary to secure efficient labor, general thrift, and wide-spread intelligence.

The moral well-being of the people is shown by facts and figures to be best secured by secular education, the surest preventive of pauperism and of crime of all sorts. Ten times the crime is committed by illiterate over those who have received only the elements of a common school education.

The speaker gave abundant figures to substantiate all his statements, gave copious quotations from General Grant to show that in order to avoid a strife, which Grant said may have to be settled "through blood," but which the lecturer hoped might be settled by appeals to the reason of the masses, the church and state must be kept separate.—Democrat, Seward, Neb.

DAN. DOUGHERTY CORRECTED

Daniel Dougherty, in his address at the Baltimore centennial, said that in colonial times "the only religious martyrs in America were Catholics. They were spurned, slandered, vilified, and the highest honors of the republic denied them by a prejudice as strong as a constitutional enactment." It is true that the Puritan governors of Massachusetts, Belcher and Endicott, persecuted the Catholics, but the Puritans persecuted the Quakers even to the extent of hanging some of them. Anne Hutchinson and Mary Dyer were persecuted by the Puritans; Roger Williams was driven into exile, Corey was pressed to death by the Puritans for refusing to testify. There was nothing done to the Catholics in colonial days that was worse than these cruelties. In later times a Catholic religious asylum was burned by a mob in Charleston, Mass.—a foul deed but not worse than the sacking of the home for colored children by the Catholic mob during the draft riots of 1863. The truth is that the bigotry, ignorance, and brutality in America have not been confined either to Protestant or Catholic circles. Abner Kneeland was mobbed and jailed in Boston for editing a deistical newspaper; Garrison was mobbed for publishing an anti-slavery journal. Both in Europe and America bigotry, brutality, superstition, and ignorance have committed awful crimes, and neither the Protestant nor Catholic church can show clean hands in this respect. Where power and opportunity have been present persecution has done work in both churches.—Oregonian.

TO THE LIBERALS OF CALIFORNIA.

All who are in favor of the total separation of church and state; of the American Republic founded upon the Declaration of Independence; of equal rights and impartial liberiy, are cordially invited to meet in Convention at San Francisco on Saturday and Sunday, January 25 and 26, 1890, at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, for the purpose of discussing the issues forced upon the people by ecclesiastical encroachments, and preparing measures for the establishment of a purely Secular government in the state of California, and throughout the nation.

The main question which is now presented to the Liberals of California, and which demands, on their part, persistent and united action, is the Sabbath question. "At a recent meeting of the American Sabbath Association of California it was resolved to proceed at once with a vigorous and well-directed campaign to restore, by state legislation, the weekly day of rest to its proper position." This is the declaration of the ecclesiastical party. The California Liberal Union is opposed to any Sabbath legislation, and the purpose of its Convention is to arouse the people to the threatened danger and, by the force of an enlightened public opinion, to guard against the passage of any laws by the state legislature for the enforcement of the Sunday as a Sabbath.

All Liberals of other states who are visiting San Francisco at the time are cordially invited to be present; and will be welcomed as members of the Convention if they so desire.

There is no creed, no religious belief or non-religious belief in the platform of the Liberal Union. It stands simply and solely for human rights irrespective of creeds, and it expects the co-operation of every American, without regard to belief or non-belief.

RANFORD WORTHING,
W. F. FREEMAN,
PHILIP COWEN,
WM. SCHROEDER,
W. S. RODGERS,
JOHN ROBINETT,
MRS. KATE PARKER,
J. E. CLARK,
L. MAGENHEIMER,

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, President,
EMIL S. LEMME, Secretary,
A. H. SCHOU, Treasurer,
J. W. NORTH, First Vice-President.

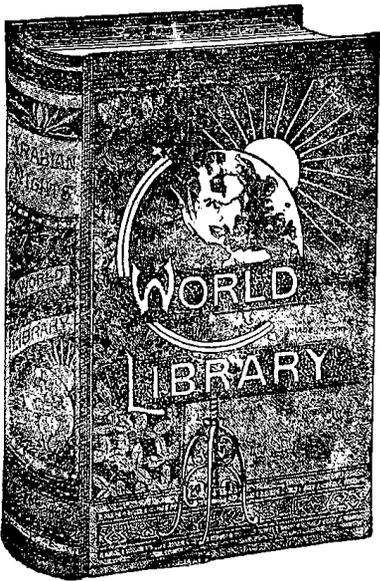

Executive Committee.

Mr. Gardner Again Communicates.

Dear Mr. George Macdonald,
I trust you'll be so kind
As to send Truth Seeker Annual,
To read which I'm inclined.
Inclosed you'll find a two-bit piece
To buy Havana good,
Or any other brand you wish,
According to your mood.
Then while you are consuming it,
In answer to your pardner,
You'll smile and say you got the price
Of this from old Fred Gardner.
May you enjoy your New Year's gift,
While cares dissolve like vapor,
And may you live a century
To guide the Freethought paper.

FRED GARDNER.

COL. J. D. STEVENSON, who has just celebrated his ninetieth birthday, takes his whisky at regular intervals every day. In making this statement, he remarked that he never tasted intoxicating liquor until he was nineteen years old. Then he has been a "drinking man" for only seventy-one years. We commend his case to W. C. T. U. who may prevent the "habit" growing on him.—Weekly Star.

PREMIUM!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRAIG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY.

A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be Obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESS.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last an heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavilion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTY'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder-worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portrayal of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. PRESCOTT.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll) with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated late scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALLOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POE'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

The Village Blacksmith.

Beneath the slab shed, hour on hour,
The Punchtown blacksmith stands;
A small "goatee" on his chin
And corns upon his hands.
He smokes his dear old corn-cob pipe,
And hammers all the day;
He cares not how the wide world goes,
Nor what the preachers say.
He has his maxims, just and old.
They are plain, but mighty true,
"A damned tough horse, I'll tell you boys,
That Becker fails to shoe."
—B. W. Huffman.

Thoughts On the Late War.

I was for the Union—you, agin it.
'Pears like, to me, each side was winner,
Lookin' at Now and all 'at 's in it.
Le' 's go to dinner.
Le' 's kind o' jes set down together
And do some partnership forgettin'—
Talk, say, for instance, 'bout the weather,
Er somepin fittin'.
The War, you know, 's all done and ended,
And ain't changed no p'int's o' the compass;
Both North and South the health 's jes splendid
As 'fore the rumpus.
The old farms and the old plantations
Still occupies the's old positions.
Le' 's get back to old situations
And old ambitions.
Le' 's let up on this blame', infernal,
Tongue-lashin' and lap-jacket vauntin',
And git back home to the eternal
Ca'm we're awaitin'.
Peace kind o' sort o' suits my diet—
When women does my cookin' for me.
Ther' was n't overly much pie eat
Durin' the Army.
—James Whitcomb Riley, in The Century.

A KENTUCKY gentleman, who recently came to Washington to consult with his member of Congress about an office under the new administration, was asked yesterday by a gentleman from Boston whether it is really true that the people of Kentucky are so very bibulous. "Bibulous!" said the Kentuckian; "bibulous! I don't reckon you could find a dozen Bibles in the whole state!"

HISTORY OF CHRISTIANITY.

An important work by Gibbon, the historian. Comprising all that relates to the progress of the Christian religion in "The History, of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," and a Vindication (never before published in this country) of some passages in the 15th and 16th chapters, by Edward Gibbon, Esq., with a Life of the Author, Preface and Notes by the Editor, including variorum notes by Guizot, Wenck, Milman, "an English Churchman," and other scholars. Handsome 12 mo., 864 pages. Cloth. With Engravings. Price, $1 50.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL'S

GREAT CENTENNIAL ORATION

On the Declaration of Independence. Also, the immortal document, The Declaration Itself, and the national anthem entitled "Land of Liberty." Price, 10 cents, 5 copies, 25 cents; 25 copies, $1.

THE SYSTEM OF NATURE,

Or, Laws of the Moral and Physical World, by Baron D'Holbach. A new and improved edition, with notes by Diderot. Two volumes in one. Price, $1.

PUTNAM'S WORKS.

The New God. 10c. The New God was made by an artist hand, guided by a poet soul. It is as perfect as sculpture. The creator makes his "god" in his own image, and breathes into his nostrils the breath of his own life.—L. K. Washburn.

Golden Throne. A romance. Price, $1 00. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words, the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Walls and Wanderings. A new American story. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1 00. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—John Swinton's Paper.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc, worth $35. for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from our catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do., $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
" " Forks	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" " Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded. Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

IF YOU WANT TO KNOW

All about the human body, its health and disease, nature's secrets revealed, How life is perpetuated, health maintained, disease induced, death delayed, How to marry your own mate, and transmit wealth of health to posterity, Read the most popular, comprehensive and useful book treating of which Dr. Eadon declares to be "priceless in value, new, startling and very instructive." The latest edition is more complete and valuable than ever, having been re-written in important parts. It contains AN APPENDIX of great practical utility made up of

MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

OVER 200 PRESCRIPTIONS OR RECIPES

For Acute and Chronic Disorders Common to Adults and Children, a complete table of poisons and their antidotes (from highest authorities), illustrated directions for resuscitating the drowned (prepared for Health Boards), and hygienic rules for care of infants; also

ORIGIN OF LIFE AND DEVELOPMENT OF MAN,

tracing the embryo from conception, through all stages to birth, illustrated by Over 20 Beautiful Colored Lithographs, on fine plate paper, such as are to be found only in high priced, imported medical works; and to illustrate the anatomy, and relative positions of important parts, each book is also embellished with

THREE ELEGANT CHROMO CHARTS OF VITAL ORGANS.
Murray Hill Publishing Co., 129 East 26th St., N. Y.

Circulars Free. Address
Pr

Men, Women, and Gods.

A Short History of the Bible.

By Helen H. Gardener. Introduction by Robert G. Ingersoll. Price, 50 cents.

Being a popular account of the formation and Development of the Canon. By Bronson C. Keeler. Price, 50 cents.

NEW BOOKS.

Any of the following works may be ordered through this office, and will be sent postpaid upon receipt of price.

FUNDAMENTAL PROBLEMS. The Method of Philosophy as a Systematic Arrangement of Knowledge. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, $1.00.

"The book is of most excellent spirit and great ability."—Public Opinion.

"Dr. Carus with an ingenious and artistic hand unites the rival theories of the Idealists and Realists."—Watts's Literary Guide.

"Dr. Carus expounds the principles of Monism in a most able manner, and with so little technicality as to enable all ordinary readers to follow him with pleasure."—Secular Thought, Toronto.

THE PSYCHIC LIFE OF MICRO-ORGANISMS. A Study in Experimental Psychology. By Alfred Binet. Price, 75 cents.

"The essays constitute a powerful and masterly argument, thoroughly supported by observed facts."—New York Tribune.

THREE INTRODUCTORY LECTURES ON THE SCIENCE OF THOUGHT. By F. Max Müller. Price, 75 cents.

"They are the ripe expression of a life-long labor in the study of the Science of Language."—Scotsman, Edinburgh.

THE IDEA OF GOD. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, 15 cents. Being a disquisition upon the development of the idea of God in human thought and history.

"An effort to purify our idea of God."—Literary World, London.

"The writer defines God as "The Ethical Life of Nature," and supports his definition with much solid argument."—Watts's Literary Guide, London.

MAKING BREAD DEAR. A Controversy between Wheelbarrow and Sympathizer. Price, 10 cents.

"In the controversy both sides are fairly represented and some new ideas advanced which clear the atmosphere of the clouds that frequently dim the honest mind."—Elite News, Chicago.

A REGULAR EDUCATED AND LEGALLY QUALIFIED PHYSICIAN, and the most successful (in his specialty) as his practice will surely prove. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men such as seminal weakness, impotency, &c., resulting from indigestion and ignorance of youth. Those who are ailing should send ten (10) cents for his book, "Private Counsellor," setting forth an external Application—

A POSITIVE CURE

The book is worth many times its cost, and should be read by the young for instruction and the afflicted for relief.

All Communications Strictly Confidential.

Plain Envelopes used. The book spoken of sent sealed. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, NEW JERSEY. Say where you saw this Advertisement.

(From the Washington National View.)

Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, New Jersey offers his valuable services to all those in need of a kind, sympathetic and skillful physician. Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been assailed and exposed by the press, but, Dr. Fellows, a specialist, in his line, stands foremost in his profession, and the encomiums showered upon him publicly as well as in private, are flattering evidences of the high appreciation and confidence his long and conscientious devotion to his specialties in his profession have so justly merited for him, and it is safe to trust him.

A Testimonial.

WEST LIBERTY, O., Aug. 12, 1888.
DR. R. P. FELLOWS—Dear Sir: The remedy you sent is working like a charm. I am completely surprised the way it acts upon the organs. Have only been using it one week, and that weakness, (seminal weakness) is coming out all right.
Yours respectfully,
J. R.

REMARKS—The above is a fair sample of the hundreds of testimonials received from all parts of the United States, from young, middle aged and elderly men, suffering from various kinds of sexual complaints, but who are now cured by my External Application, the greatest of all known remedies for this class of diseases. As I am an out-and-out Liberal I trust the Freethinkers of the Land will give me their patronage, and not waste their time and money on Christian doctors.
DR. FELLOWS.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future

Republic of North America

BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1. Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

CHURCH AND STATE

THE BIBLE IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—THE NEW AMERICAN PARTY,

A Criticism by "Jefferson."

Price, 10 cents. Address

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

ROMAN RULE OR RUIN.

BY Z. SHED.

A Summary of the atrocities committed by the Catholic church.

Price, 10 cents; four copies, 25 cents; ten copies, 50 cents. Address

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

Why Priests Should Wed.

BY JUSTIN D. FULTON, D.D.

A startling book, particularly to those unacquainted with the character of the confessional. Price, $1.50.

Address this office.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

The Open Court.

A Weekly Journal of Reverent Freethought.

Discussing Problems in Science, Philosophy, Ethics, and Religion.

Subscription for twelve months, $2.00.

Specimen Copies free on application.

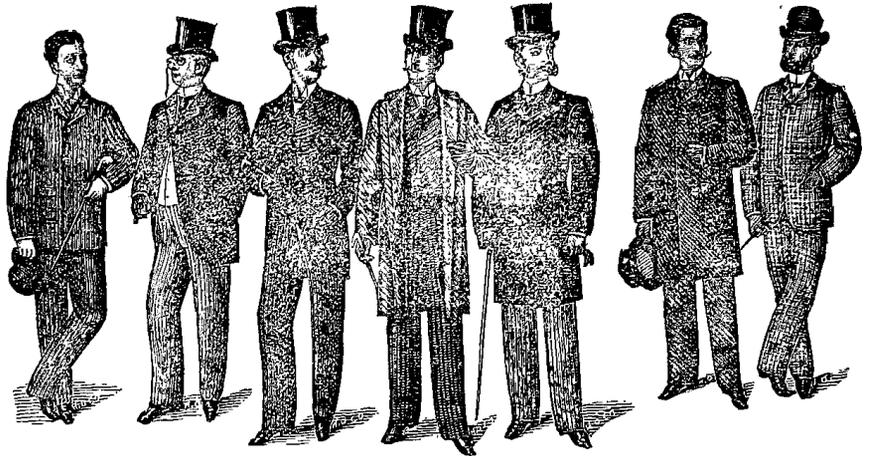

THE OPEN COURT PUB. CO.,

169-175 La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois. P. O. Drawer F.

THE ORDER OF CREATION,

A Discussion between Gladstone, Huxley, Muller, Linton & Reville on the Conflict between Genesis & Geology. Price, 50 cents.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.
TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.

OLIVER HINCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED, 375 Natoma st., cor. 5th, S. F.

F. A. CLARK.

CHAS. W. CLARK

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS,

NURSERYMEN.

Catalogs for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines.

Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice.

Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address

CLARK BROS.,

P. O. Box O,

San Jacinto, Cal.

REMSBURG'S WORKS.

False Claims. Price 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Anti-slavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic.

Fathers of the Republic Paine, Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. Price 15 cents.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

WASHBURN'S WORKS.

The False Teachings of the Christian Church. Price, 10 cents.

Sunday and the Sabbath. Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. Price, 10 cents.

The Catholic Church and the Public Schools. Price, 5 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

==THE NEW YORK DRESS CHART,==

A system of easily-comprehended rules and Chart by which any one can readily learn to cut Dresses, Basques, etc., in the most perfect manner. It contains the best ideas resulting from thirty years experience with Dress Charts and Tailor systems. It is adapted to the modern requirements of dress, and is used and indorsed by the best professional dressmakers of the East. It is as far superior to old methods as the steam car is to the stage. Price of the Chart, with full instructions, $10. By special arrangement we are able to offer the readers of FREETHOUGHT a liberal discount, for a short time. Write for particulars if you are at all interested in matters of household economy. This chart will save any family five times its cost in a single year. Send 25 cents with bust and waist measure and number of inches from natural waist up as high as you wish the dress underneath the arm, for a sample pattern drafted to order, with full directions for making up, if you wish to test the system. To take the first measure correctly, place the tape above the bust, underneath the arms, and straight across the back, drawing it very tight. Write figures plainly. Address, Agents } DRESS CHART AGENCY, } 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal. } Care of FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year$1.50
Six Months75
Three Months25

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,
Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.
Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.
PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,
536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San Francisco.

THE SABBATH IMPOSTURE.

BY HARRY HOOVER.

Proving that there is no authority for the Sunday laws, either Human or "Divine."

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies 50 cents. Address this office.

JUST PUBLISHED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE GLORY OF INFIDELITY

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

"The Glory of Infidelity" was one of the poet-secretary's happiest efforts, and ranks with the best speeches of the Congress.—New York Truth Seeker.

Putnam's "Glory of Infidelity" is one of the ablest defenses of Freethought to which I have ever listened. JOHN E. REMSBURG.

The lecture was "The Glory of Infidelity." No man or woman could hear it without being inspired by the heroic Infidel manhood and womanhood coming down to us as a rich inheritance through the dreary ages of the past, and pointing with glorious hope to the "New Heaven and Earth." J. F. BECK.

I believe I express the unanimous sentiment of all when I say that for a lecture of its character, Mr. Putnam has never been surpassed and seldom equaled on our platform—a platform famous for the talent it affords. "The Glory of Infidelity" fairly bristles with good things, and each sentence is an epigrammatic Secular sermon.

E. A. STEVENS, Secretary American Secular Union.

—PRICE 10 CENTS.—

Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

SOMETHING NEW

—THE—

"COSMIAN HYMN BOOK."

—A COLLECTION OF—

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS
(WORDS AND MUSIC)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies,
For Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price$1.50

Address orders to
L. K. WASHBURN,
Revere, Mass.

The list of prizes at the Paris Exposition shows that royalties are in business as well as common folks. The Duc d'Aumale took a prize on the Zucco wine made on his Scilley estate; the King of Holland took a medal on his beer, and Cardinal Lavigerie was awarded a grand prize for his Algerian wine. They all seem to run to liquid refreshments.—Alta.

The greatest question now is, "Should clergymen use tobacco?" We think not. The clergyman is absolutely overworked testing and testimonializing patent medicines. We shouldn't expect too much even of the clergy.

"Bible Contradictions," 15 cents.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 00
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm " " Diamond* 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, PUTNAM & MACDONALD, 04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE FIELD-INGERSOLL DISCUSSION.
Faith or Agnosticism.

A series of articles

—from—

The North American Review

—by—

REV. HENRY M. FIELD, | ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

The discussion upon which are based the Remarks of Hon. W. E. Gladstone.

Price 50 cents. Sold by the FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters

impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Vol. III—No. 3.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, JANUARY 18, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - JANUARY 18, 1890.

NEWS AND NOTES.

The pulse of Nationalism still beats high. The meeting at the Metropolitan Temple on Friday evening, January 10, was a magnificent affair. Every seat was occupied, and as the newspapers said, "There were two thousand sensible people present." The programme was exceedingly interesting and held the attention of the vast audience for over two hours. The questions were discussed in an able and eloquent manner. The opening chorus by the German Maennerchor of fifty voices was given with brilliant effect, and the soft and exquisite strains of the violin under the skillful touch of Prof. Otto Blankart, with the piano accompaniment of Miss Lizzie Blankart, was a pretty marriage of art to industry; and the vocal solo by Mrs. Percy Ross was a delightful prelude to a plain business talk by T. V. Cator. Mr. Cator was thoroughly interested in his subject, "Nationalism and Spring Valley." There was no vituperation, but a statement as to how about twenty-five million dollars might be saved to the city. In making this issue the Nationalist Club is certainly benefiting the community. After Cator's animating speech a recitation was given by Walter Leman, a famous actor of the old Pacific coast times, who always drew crowded houses. He is much like Warren of the Boston Museum, and his rendition of "The Love Chase" was received with tremendous applause, so much so that he was obliged to break the rule and recite the story of the heroic captain who gave his life-preserver to a poor castaway and himself perished in the billows, a noble contrast to the infamy reported of Captain Healy.

Hon. E. D. Wheeler then made a most stirring address. He is a young-looking man, but he is a forty-niner for all that, and his eloquence had a good deal of the vim and color of early California life. I don't think he is a full-fledged Nationalist, but he is in favor of cheaper water and the governmental control of transcontinental railroad and telegraph lines. So far as these questions are concerned the Nationalists would have the support of an immense number who would not indorse as yet the whole platform.

Ralph Waldo Emerson's "Hymn of Labor" was given by Miss Evangeline Ballou, accompanied by Miss Mate Hildebrandt. This aroused the audience to the utmost enthusiasm. The singer fitly voiced the glory of the hymn. Music made a shining wreath for the pathway of toil.

Burnette G. Haskell gave his "word or so" with his usual vivacity, and the audience responded with cheers. "The Tramp and the Millionaire" was a surprise indeed. The tramp came on the stage just as we see him in real life, and the jaunty millionaire also, as happy as a full stomach and a fifty-cent cigar could make him. The tramp sang his song and the millionaire responded. Finally as the music rolled on in its glorious melody the tramp and the millionaire walked off arm in arm, a grotesque but happy prophecy of the good time coming. The Maennerchor then gave a magnificent closing chorus, and the vast audience dispersed.

There was no religion and no theology in all that was given in this varied and splendid programme. It was humanity and work in the place of deity and prayer. So far it is a good thing. So far it helps to the solution of pregnant questions. So far it stands for unity—not for sectarianism. I hope that it will not hereafter crystallize into any creed, but remain a broad and comprehensive movement, an industrial agitation free from any outside issues whatsoever. Mrs. Addie Ballou, the president, realizes the genius of the movement, and would interpret it as an effort for the rights and dignity of labor, in which all who believe in justice and improvement can join hands without reference to any belief on other matters.

On Saturday evening Metropolitan Temple was again filled to its utmost capacity, and hundreds were obliged to go away. But few women were present, but there ought to have been as many women as men at a meeting of this kind. It was a protest against a huge injustice perpetrated by Captain Healy upon three seamen. These seamen did not belong to Captain Healy's vessel, and he had no right to inflict punishment upon them. All that he had a right to do was to confine them for trial. But he inflicted the most barbarous tortures. If such things are tolerated in the United States service, then the rules and regulations of that service need a pretty thorough overhauling. Is not the "thumb screw" out of fashion yet? These American citizens, without trial, no charges made against them, were "triced up," that is, shackles were put upon their wrists, so that they penetrated the flesh; the arms are thus tightly bound behind. A rope is fastened about the manacled wrists, and the victim is lifted almost from the floor. The whole weight of the body presses upon the iron-bound limbs. The torture is inexpressible, and would produce death if the victim was not released in a few minutes from the atrocious punishment. After this outrage they were bound to the ship's stanchions for forty-two hours and then landed upon a desolate shore to take care of themselves.

No wonder that the Coast Seaman's Union gathered together this immense audience to protest against a wrong like this. The workingmen's organizations were represented in great numbers, and at the head of the several delegations was a band of music, and flags and banners were placed along the stage, and in the centre a picture representing the victim as he was strung up by this brutal commander. It was an imposing assemblage, and must have great influence upon public opinion. The speeches were of the first order, among the best I have ever heard, and there was a sufficient variety to make the display of oratory as interesting as a drama.

J. B. McCabe, editor of the Coast Seaman's Journal, called the meeting to order, read the history of the outrage, and made some pointed remarks. He said it was the first time he had ever addressed an audience; but he did it well. He had something to say and he said it. The Rev. Dr. Cruzan followed him, and made an excellent plea for the American sailor. Speaking of a vessel in a storm when the captain was scared and ran down into the cabin and fell upon his knees and went to praying, Cruzan said, "I believe in prayer, but that was no time to pray. The captain ought to have been at the helm instead of on his knees." That was a good bit of Secularism, and was received with round after round of applause.

Charles A. Sumner was the next speaker, and he has a good deal of the splendid earnestness of his namesake, and he can talk too, with a rugged eloquence that carries the audience. Herman Gudstadt, of the Cigarmakers' Union, spoke next, and was followed by the Rev. Dr. Harcourt. The doctor is a dude clergyman indeed. He looked as if he had just come out of a band-box. There wasn't a particle of dirt on him, or a wrinkle either. His eye-glasses were most delicately poised, and the way he beamed upon the audience through their crystal clearness was captivating. He was master of himself. He knew he was going to make a good speech, and he did it, too, and a downright liberal speech it was. He said he didn't believe in any religion that wouldn't make a man better. He believed in God, in the flag of our country, in humanity, and the rights of all. He is a good story-teller, has much dramatic ability, and looks like a jovial companion. He has studied the art of oratory. He makes the "rhetorical pause" to perfection. He holds his audience in hand as easily and as gracefully as he does his eye-glasses. He closed with the following story:

The boy is like a good many theologians. Said boy was vehemently thrashing a dead dog. "What are you doing that for?" inquired an old farmer who happened along. "Because," said the boy, as he continued the thrashing of the defunct canine, "I would have every living dog know that there is such a thing as punishment after death."

Robert Ferral is a newspaper man and lawyer, and he spoke after Dr. Harcourt; his manner was as opposite as the poles to the reverend orator, but it was equally effective and brilliant. Ferral speaks right on like Mark Antony, with no graces of speech, but he is as breezy as the north wind, and stirs like a trumpet. The other addresses were good, too, and the resolutions passed unanimously by the audience called for a thorough investigation and punishment of the outrage.

A couple of sailors who witnessed the punishment and were compelled to aid in the matter gave an account of the occurrence, a "round, unvarnished tale." There can be no doubt of the cruelty inflicted. There can be no doubt also that in many cases sailors are treated like brutes, and, as Dr. Cruzan says, this really makes them brutes.

I hold that these public meetings are a benefit. They call attention to abuses. While there should be an impartial trial for all parties, these indignation meetings are a method of enlightenment that gives a force to the common sentiment which otherwise could not be. There should be a fair trial for Captain Healy, but should not the sailors also have the same privilege? Many sailors were present at this meeting, and they were a fine-looking set of men—stalwart and brave, as if they could meet any storm. These are men whose rights should be respected, for in them is the manhood of the race.

How the rain did pour down on Sunday evening! It was a struggle to get to 421 Post street, and the umbrella was scarcely a shield against the driving storm. A few gathered at the hall, and it was decided that the lecture of the evening, "Woman and Freethought," should be postponed until the next Sunday. Mrs. Ballou, however, was present and gave a very interesting discourse upon Nationalism, its objects and methods, and Mr. Putnam delivered a few observations upon the problem of government, and in spite of the tempest outside and the great fire that made red the heavens a profitable hour was spent. All Secularists will agree that the problem of government, of industry, is one of supreme importance. When the government has become purely Secular, what then shall we do with it? Make it merely a police force, as Herbert Spencer says, or shall it to a certain extent be an economical power, and aid the industry of the world? To my mind these questions are not to be settled in a moment, or by mere theory. After all, we must keep trying, "and if at first we don't succeed, try, try again." The lesson of the boy is also the lesson of the man.

The efficiency of the post-office is not always so good as it might be. Perhaps if Wanamaker would have less religion and more business, arrangements might be better. Over two months ago some letters were mailed to me from San Francisco to Waldo Hills, Or. The officials should have known at once that the address was wrong and returned the mail according to the directions plainly printed upon the envelope. Where the letters went to I guess nobody knows. They must have wandered about like Noah's dove, not knowing where to drop. Finally after more than two months they come back to the original starting-point, where they ought to have been five days after mailing. I suppose some of my correspondents will wonder why I haven't answered their letters before. The reason is now stated. Among these belated communications is one from my valued friend, Colonel Kelso, of Longmont, Colorado, and I am sorry on account of the nature of his letter that it was so delayed, for I might have been of some service in carrying out his wishes, and perhaps now it is not too late. He desires on account of his health and the health of his wife, Mrs. Etta Dunbar Kelso, to come to California; but to do so he must dispose of his beautiful home in Colorado, Glen Etta Home. I have been there myself, and it is one of the loveliest places along the Rocky mountains, a farm of 320 acres of the finest land in the state, a paradise for those who can enjoy the climate. There is every convenience on this farm—fine buildings, furniture, library, etc. Perhaps some of our subscribers are thinking of Colorado for a home where they can look forever upon the splendor of the hills, while the fruitful plains are spreading before them in the glittering sunshine. If any one wants an ideal home, and is rich enough in this world's goods to pay the price, I should say to such a one, Write to John R. Kelso, of Longmont, Colorado, and they will get a statement of what the farm is, terms, etc. They can not find a better place to buy, nor a better man to deal with on the square than comrade Kelso.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PLEASE RESPOND.

The following are the contributions already made toward the expenses of the State Convention:

A. Schell.....	$5 00
A. Derming	1 00
N. R. Wilkinson	1 00
John Dumbacher.....	2 00
F. E. Neubauer	2 00
Jas. Williamson.....	1 00
R. W. Barcroft.....	1 00
David Hughes.....	1 00
J. C. Purdy.....	1 00
A Friend	50
John Dibble.....	1 00
Lewis Kaiser.....	1 00
John McGlashan.....	1 00
H. P. Replogle.....	1 00

It is hoped that every California Liberal will send what he can at the earliest moment for the expenses of the Convention.

WOMAN AND FREETHOUGHT.

This lecture, which was to have been given by Mrs. Addie Ballou last Sunday evening, was postponed on account of the weather. It will be given next Sunday evening at 421 Post street, Union Square Hall. All are cordially invited. Music by Mrs. Evangeline Ballou and Miss Mate Hildebrandt and Eugenia Wheeler Clark.

HOW IS THIS ?

An Oakland subscriber writes:

To the Editors of Freethought:

"Inclosed in my copy of FREETHOUGHT of January 4 I found a paper called The Word, which I found to be a smutty, obscene sheet, containing things unfit to be read by my daughters, or any decent woman, for that matter. Perhaps you were not aware of its contents, or else you would not have put our standard-bearer into such bad company."

We would assure our correspondent that we have never mailed copies of the Word to anybody. Our explanation is that Mr. Heywood, publisher of the Word, observed our subscriber's name in FREETHOUGHT, and mailed him a sample, which the letter carrier shoved into the wrapper with FREETHOUGHT for convenience of delivery. If this theory is correct, the fault is not ours or Mr. Heywood's, but the carrier's, and complaint should be made at the Oakland post-office.

We receive the Word monthly, and regard it as unnecessarily offensive to the average reader, though assured by the publishers that they mean well.

OUTRAGEOUS PERSECUTION.

Captain Otto Thomson, the associate of Victor E. Lennstrand in the publication of "Fritankaren," the Swedish Freethought paper, writes us as follows:

ESKILSTUNE, SWEDEN, Dec. 19, 1889.

MESSRS. PUTNAM & MACDONALD, Dear Gentlemen: I have the painful duty to inform you that my friend and partner, Mr. Victor E. Lennstrand, has been sentenced for one of the three remaining prosecutions for blasphemy to six additional months' imprisonment. Three months is no longer sufficient, for each time they have now taken to the geometrical progression. My feelings are lacerated on account of the prolongation of my friend's sufferings in prison; but I am not depressed, but rather more invigorated and determined to continue and in front of the battle. In a day or two I shall remove to the metropolis, Stockholm, to be able to work more for "Fritankaren." The flag of Freethought in Sweden shall not be lowered. "Fritankaren" can be starved to silence, but never scared. I hope our friends will sustain our endeavors and that we shall not be forsaken by our friends at home and abroad.

Yours sincerely, OTTO THOMSON.

There are many of Mr. Lennstrand's countrymen on the list of FREETHOUGHT, and they will not be alone in sustaining their brother in this time of persecution. We shall be glad to see a general movement in the way of expressing material sympathy for Victor Lennstrand, and will receive, acknowledge, and forward donations for his benefit, or subscriptions to "Fritankaren."

ADVERTISE.

William Noble, 1222 Stockton street, merchant tailor, has agreed on behalf of the coming Convention, to see that it is thoroughly advertised in the Call, and to pay what expenses are necessary. This is a splendid help for the Convention. Now who will take charge of each of the other papers, the Chronicle, Examiner, Alta California, Evening Post, Report, etc? There ought to be one volunteer for each of these journals. To advertise thoroughly is requisite to success—to large meetings. There are thousands to be reached. Will not every subscriber in California see that a notice of the Convention is put into his own courtly and city paper? A little personal effort, and there can be a good deal of advertising done with but little outlay of cash.

JOB PRINTING.

The FREETHOUGHT office is supplied with a large assortment of display type and one of the best job presses in the state. We are therefore prepared to do any work in the line of letter-heads, bill-heads, business cards, programmes, circulars, etc. Of course the prices will be reasonable, and the work guaranteed satisfactory. Let us have your orders—anything from a visiting card to a full-sheet poster.

THE Methodist, Baptist, and Presbyterian churches of Flemingsburg, Ky., decided to observe last week as a week of prayer in a series of union meetings. They got along very well until the Presbyterian clergyman was called upon to pray, but instead of praying for general results he proceeded, in the course of his invocation, to introduce some of the doctrinal points peculiar to his denomination. The Baptist clergyman, following, laid down the doctrines of his church as the only ones worthy of credence or sufficient for salvation. The Presbyterian interrupted him, and received a sharp retort, when the two began bombarding each other with scripture texts, and, without rising from their knees, were about to clinch and have it out, when the audience interfered. The Methodist clergyman, meanwhile, took the pulpit and ruled the proceedings out of order. The congregations of the two dissident preachers stand by their respective pastors and are ready for the fray, while scoffers assert that the church members of Flemingsburg need converting to the ways of humanity and brotherly love.

IN a late sermon, the Rev. Mr. Sasia, head of the Jesuit organization of California, speaking of the Catholic church, said: "The Catholic church is a splendor in the world. It is a beacon light for generations. Outside of it men are groping in the dark. Who can gainsay its wonderful unity and evidence of divine power when 250,000,000 rational beings live up to the teachings of the same supreme being? In the church are 1,000 bishops, subject to the one head; 10,000 priests, subject to the bishops, and millions of faithful ones who are subject to the priests." He also remarked that the Roman Catholic church was a divine institution, and that "it alone can enable man to reach eternal life in heaven." According to these figures and the appended statement there are but 250,000,000 people in the world who are destined to reach heaven, and they are all subjects of the pope of Rome. And yet there are people who believe this nonsense, some of whom are regarded as reasonable beings!

An exchange prints this paragraph and credits it to the Catholic Banner:

"Thank God, we at last have turned towards the times when those who propagated heretical doctrines were punished with exemplary punishment. The re-establishment of the holy tribunal of the inquisition must soon take place. Its reign will be more glorious and fruitful in results than in the past. Our Catholic heart overflows with faith and enthusiasm; and the immense joy we experience as we begin to reap the fruit of our present campaign exceeds all imagination. What a day of pleasure that will be for us when we see anti-clericals writhing in the flames of Inquisition!"

This has the true Catholic ring to it. There is no doubt that a revival of the Inquisition is what the church really desires, but we did not suppose that any Catholic would be candid enough to say so.

THERE was a debate in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association in this city last week on the question, "Does Protection Tend to Keep up Wages?" The association furnished the orators for the affirmative side, and the Single-tax Society sent two representatives to present the free trade argument. Leaving the merits of the question out of consideration, the single-taxers had the best of it all the way through, and the audience by a rising vote gave them the victory. The result shows the superiority of labor clubs over religious organizations as a means of education.

THE Freethought Publishing Company is indebted to C. P. Farrell (Colonel Ingersoll's publisher), Helen H. Gardener, H. L. Green, and Peter Eckler for gifts of valuable books.

PAYING UP FOR SHARES.

We give this week several scores of letters from shareholders in the Freethought Publishing Company. The number of those who have invested is now not far from one hundred and forty, whose investments aggregate about $2,200, or four hundred and forty shares. There are, however, a great many more who have promised to take shares, but who have thus far failed to remit. We hope to hear from these soon.

There has been no delay about inaugurating the business enterprise for which this money is subscribed. The location, as previously announced, is selected. Fixtures are in place. Nearly one thousand thousand dollars' worth of printing material occupies the room set apart for that purpose, a new press and an assortment of type having been purchased during the past few days. Also nearly a thousand dollars' worth of books, stationery, and fancy goods are either on the shelves or on their way from the publishers. The Freethought Publishing Company is therefore in the swim, and prepared for business, but it has scarcely as large a stock as should be carried in order to insure a good trade. We would like to have such an assortment of books that anything in the Liberal or scientific line could be found upon our shelves and supplied without delay. To do this it is necessary that a few more shares be sold, and that those who have already agreed to take shares should forward the money for them. We are sure that none who have promised or who intend to invest will need a further reminder.

Now therefore, friends, let us make another rally—a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether. Some who have taken shares are able to take more; many who have not subscribed may do so at once, and those who have given us their promise to subscribe are invited to forward the amount set against their names. We are entering upon the largest enterprise in Liberal work ever begun upon this coast. Let us make it a glorious success.

Please enroll myself and wife for one share each of the Freethought Publishing Company.—W. M. ANDERSON, Stella, Wash.

I send you herewith $25 for five shares of stock.—W. S. BUSH, Seattle, Wash.

Inclosed find post-office order for $5 to pay for one share of stock in your company.—S. CRUMRINE, Orient, Iowa.

Inclosed find $20 to pay for my four shares of the capital stock of the Freethought Publishing Company.—GEORGE G. SVENSSON, Kalama, Wash.

To fulfill my promise I hereby send you $5 for one share.—CHAS. L. HOTTENDORF, Escondido.

Inclosed find $10 for two shares in the Freethought Publishing Company—one for myself and one for P. B. Davis, both of Prineville, Or.—C. ROGERS.

Please put me down for one share in the Freethought Publishing Company. Inclosed find $5 for same. I believe the age of reason is coming.—V. G. COSTON, Calpella.

Please find inclosed $10 for two shares of the capital stock of the company, and in return please send me certificate as a stockholder. With my best wishes for the success of Pacific coast Freethought.—PETER RAUCH, Silverton, Or.

Please find inclosed $20. Send me shares in our book concern to the amount. Hope to do more in the near future if necessary, for Freethought and Universal Mental Liberty must progress. A merry Christmas and a happy New Year to you all.—B. B. ROCKWOOD, San Pasqual.

Please find inclosed $10 as my subscription for two shares in the book and publishing company. I would have responded earlier, but owing to washouts, etc., on railroad we have been cut off for over a week. Wishing you much success.—ALFRED H. SMITH, Del Mar.

Inclosed please find $5 for one share in the Freethought Publishing Company. I am more than pleased with the success you have had, for I know it will be a great help to the Pacific slope. With highest hopes of great success.—ALMIRA SWEET, Hamilton, Oregon.

You will find inclosed $6—$5 for one share in the Freethought Publishing Company and $1 for books.—JONAS MYERS, Christine, Cal.

Inclosed please find money order for $5 in payment for one share of stock in your company. I hope the enterprise will prove a grand success.—G. W. DOANE, Bloomfield.

Inclosed find $5 for one share of stock.—CHARLES BARTA, McCanna, N. Dakota.

Inclosed please find check for $25 to pay for five shares of stock in your company.—O. R. HARMON, Boulder Creek.

Please find $10 for two shares to Freethought Publishing Company.—E. C. BRAINARD, Union, Or.

Please find inclosed $5 for one share in your company.

Wishing you unlimited success, I remain yours truly, Mrs. M. PEPPERLE, Caldwell, Idaho.

You will find inclosed $5 for one share in the Freethought Publishing Company. I cannot but feel proud of your success.—Mrs. L. P. LANGLEY, Santa Barbara.

Please find $5 as payment for one share of stock in the Freethought Publishing Company.—M. L. SIMS, Stockton.

I inclose $5 to pay for one share of the stock of the company.—JOS. M. DOAN, P. M., Boca.

Inclosed find postal order for $5 to pay for my share in the Freethought Publishing Company.—JOHN MEWHINNEY, Pomo.

Inclosed please find $10 to pay for two shares of stock. I am pleased to see so much interest taken in the enterprise, and from the outlook I think success will meet our most sanguine expectations. Long life to Freethought.—R. H. ENDICOTT, Oakdale.

Inclosed you will find $10 to pay for two shares. I shall take more shares after a while, and will put money, as I am able, from year to year, into the business of publishing and distributing Freethought literature.—A. H. HOYT, El Monte.

I have only time to express a hope that the Freethought Publishing Company will have become a reality when this reaches you. I wish that Colonel Ingersoll could arrange his business to take a month off, and go out and give your people half a dozen broadsides and make the company a success from the start. Inclosed find $500 for one hundred shares.—N. F. GRISWOLD, Meriden, Conn.

Please find inclosed a check for $50. If I can I will do some more to help the good cause. Three cheers for the Freethought Publishing Company and all the good Infidels who help along the cause.—H. F. EBERS, Cazadero.

Inclosed please find $5 for one share in the company. Please send certificate of stock. Success to the enterprise.—CHAS. M. JEFFERIS, Helena, Mont.

Inclosed find order for share of stock in Freethought.—L. SCHLEGEL, University, Los Angeles Co.

Inclosed herewith please find $5, my subscription to the stock of the new company. Wishing it every success.—L. F. LONG, Largo.

Inclosed please find $10 in payment for the respective shares taken by Geo. Hinrichsen and the undersigned.—HENRY DOPMAN, San Lorenzo.

Herewith is check for $10, for the establishment of a Freethought Publishing Company, for which you will please send me the certificate. My best wishes for success.—L. MAGENHELMER, San Jose.

Inclosed find draft for $10 to pay for two shares of stock.—H. C. COMEGYS, Snohomish, Wash.

Inclosed please find $25, covering five shares at $5 each in the Freethought Publishing Company. Success in all your undertakings is the wish of your fraternal friend.—JOHN ENGSTROM, Aspen, Col.

Please find inclosed $5 for one share in the Freethought Publishing Company. Would like to invest more.—CHARLES G. CASPARY, Wagner, Or.

Inclosed find $27—$25 to be applied on five shares of Freethought Publishing Company, and $2 for my subscription for 1890.—JAMES A. GREENHILL, Clinton, Iowa.

Inclosed find $5 in payment for one share.—C. W. SAUNDERS, Portland, Or.

Inclosed please find $25 for five shares, and if there is nothing in your by-laws to prevent it, I desire that the five shares shall be issued in my boy's name, Adolphe Bessette, who is a little over two years old now. And if Adolphe and FREETHOUGHT live fifty years, the boy will then be a man, and the oldest shareholder in Freethought in the Rocky mountains. I, for one, expect to keep those shares in Freethought, pay assessments, if need be; or receive dividends if declared in the future, as the ship of Freethought happens to sail along.—A. BESSETTE, Argenta, Mont.

Find inclosed $25 for the cause. Jas. Wardwell, $10; Andrew Kelley, $5, Wm. Sayne, $5, Geo. Deitz, $5.—Emmett, Idaho.

Please find inclosed $30 for shares for myself. The other parties will send in soon.—ROBERT LARAMORE, Fresno Flats.

I send inclosed check, $5. May do better later.—A. W. POOLE, Grub Gulch.

I send you this day $5 for the share.—JOE CRANE, Fresno Flats.

I inclose $16 to cover payment on A. Wickersham's subscription to your paper of which $1 has been paid, $5 to pay his share of stock, and $10 to pay my own subscription to stock.—COKE EWING, Buckley, Wash.

Inclosed find $10 for two shares in the Freethought Publishing Company; and $2 to renew my subscription to FREETHOUGHT. With my best wishes for the success of the new company, I remain—CHAS. DE LA BAUME, Uintah, Utah.

Inclosed please find $5 for one share. I am very sorry that circumstances will not permit me to take more.—ANDERS CARLSON, Randolph, Or.

Inclosed find $7 to pay for one share of your company, also $2 for paper for one year.—F. SHODL, Romley, Col.

Find inclosed $5 for one share in your Freethought Publishing Company.—HENRY C. YAEGER, Helena, Mont.

Please find inclosed $50 for stock in the new company. I will send you another $50 on my return to Denver. I was sorry to have missed Mr. Putnam here. I was stopping at Lakeside, and could not get to town on account of the railroad track being washed out.—AUSTIN W. SMITH, San Diego.

You will find inclosed $5 for a share.—J. D. KAUFMAN, Boulder Creek.

Inclosed you will please find my check for $50. I have not the least doubt the higher up the Publishing Company will get, the better showing it will make. My best wishes accompany you and the Company.—A. SCHELL, Knight's Ferry.

Inclosed please find check for $50 to pay for ten shares in the Freethought Publishing Co.—ED. WEGNER, Sonoma.

I am very much gratified to see the stock company so well supported. It shows that Liberals as a whole begin to tumble to the fact that union makes strength. Inclosed find my remittance of $20, which squares my pledge. Hoping you will meet deserved success.—DE LESPINASSE, M.D., Orange City, Iowa.

Please find draft for $25 for five shares, two for Mrs. Mark and three for me.—F. MARK, Marshfield, Or.

Within find $10 for two shares in the Freethought Publishing Company.—JACOB NEWMAN, No. Powder, Or.

I will take one share, and herewith inclose $5 for the same. A Freethought publishing house is just what we need on this coast. It will bring our forces together, and will act as an influential organizer. I am pleased to see the Liberals take such active interest in this movement, and hope every Liberal who can afford it will join this grand company. Sincerely hoping the Freethought Publishing Company will thrive and prove most successful, I remain yours most respectfully for truth and justice.—ELVA E. DAVIDSON, Oswego, Or.

I am half pleased and half angry at the evidences of success which I see by FREETHOUGHT has attended you since casting anchor on the far-off Pacific coast. Pleased because I can't help being pleased at the success of those who deserve success; angry, or half so, because I have never yet become sufficiently Christian to fully eliminate that wicked trait of selfishness born in me. The truth is, "Put" and "Mac," I have never quite forgiven you for putting three thousand miles of earth between you and the friends you left behind. I wanted you close at hand where I could hear "Put" laugh, and get my eyes on George's badge pin now and then. But I see now that there is no use "kicking against the pricks" any longer, so will accept the inevitable as gracefully as possible, and hereafter wish you that success you so justly deserve. You are making a good paper and a strong fight in a glorious cause, and hereafter my blessings shall attend you. I hear you both say, "Can't live on that," so I inclose subscription for FREETHOUGHT, and a $50 check. As ever your friend—A. VAN DEUSEN, New York.

Inclosed you will find $5 for one share of stock in the Freethought Publishing Company.—JOHN KRUSE, Wilsonville.

Inclosed find $25, paying for five shares in the Company.—A. ROSENOW, Walla Walla.

Inclosed is $10, which please place to credit of Mattie Blaisdell, Portland, Or., one share, and Mattie P. Krekel one share. When I am able will do more.—MATTIE P. KREKEL, Portland, Or.

Inclosed find $5 for one share in the Freethought Publishing Company.—W. S. BIRKETT, So. Butte, Mont.

Inclosed find $10 for my two shares in the Freethought Publishing Co.—JOHN DUMBACHER, Calistoga.

I inclose $10 for two shares of the Freethought Publishing Co. Success to the Company.—I. K. GARRETT, Stockton.

Please find inclosed $50, the amount for ten shares of Freethought Publishing Company stock.—JOSEPH BLABON, JR., Crescent City.

Inclosed find $5, for which please send me certificate for one share of stock in the Freethought Publishing Company.—A. K. COWARD, Norwalk.

I herewith send you money order for $5 for one share in the Freethought Publishing Company.—J. P. MILLER, Deep River, Wash.

Mr. Willard T. Jones has given me a draft on Wells, Fargo & Co. for $10 for two shares of stock. Inclosed I send you $10 for two shares. Please make out certificate to J. C. and Clara Keep Gage.—J. C. GAGE, Stockton.

Inclosed please find $10, subscribed by me for the new departure of FREETHOUGHT. Hoping that it will prove a grand success, yours.—R. W. BARCROFT, Hornitos.

Inclosed please find $27—$25 for shares and $2 for FREETHOUGHT for 1890. I am very much pleased that the plan has been successful, and fondly hope to see grand results, even in the near future, of the unselfish and energetic pioneer work of Mr. Putnam and yourself. Indeed, I think we are already seeing the beginning of such results.—JOHN ROBINETT, Nipomo.

Inclosed please find $12—$5 for one share for Joseph Van Hoeter; $5 for one share for Mrs. P. Van Hoeter, and $2 for one year's Freethought. If after a month or two you have not disposed of all your stock, please let me know. I may perhaps take some more.—MRS. P. VAN HOETER, Grass Valley.

I received your circular announcing that the Publishing Company is ready for business. Inclosed please find my check on the El Paso National Bank for $50. You can forward certificates to my address below. Let me congratulate you on the prosperity of the enterprise and wish you eminent success.—P. F. GARRETT, Roswell, N. M.

I inclose herewith post-office order for $25 to pay for five shares of stock subscribed by W. F. Freeman one, Mrs. M. D. Freeman one, Chas. Haas one, Mrs. Chas. Haas one, and Mrs. J. E. McKenzie one. I expect to be down on the 25th and think we shall observe the 29th inst. here.—W. F. FREEMAN, Stockton.

Inclosed please find $33, which apply as follows, viz: J. Henry Schroeder, four shares stock, $20; Jas. McNaughton, one share stock, $5; J. Henry Schroeder, W. C. Ballard, Matt Johnson,

Jas. McNaughton, each $2 renewals to FREETHOUGHT. We are preparing for a Paine celebration at Coquille City, and hope to make it as successful an event as the one at Myrtle Point last year.—J. HENEY SCHROEDER, Arago, Or.

Your favor of the 6th inst. states that you have got fully organized and ready to receive subscriptions. Please find $5 inclosed.—A. B. KLISE, Molalla, Or.

OBSERVATIONS.

I cannot conceal that the below printed communication expresses my own thoughts quite forcibly:

This new nonsense known as Nationalism must, like la grippe, have its run and monopolize attention until something else is sprung upon the general public. It is now having a mild rage in this section, and many whose hopes and emotions affect their judgment profess to see the millennium rapidly approaching. Having read the dream on which great expectations find a basis, I was influenced by mild curiosity to attend several of the weekly meetings held in this city to enlighten the people and save the world from impending ruin. On each occasion I was so completely nauseated with the religious nonsense and Bible foolishness there dispensed by the speakers that I sought and found relief, when I went out, in expressions of profanity.

On a recent Sunday the opening speaker chose for his subject, "Nationalism in the Light of Prophecy;" and going back to the book of Isaiah, he satisfied himself that the "good time coming" was there predicted thousands of years ago. During his wearying efforts to mix Bible and Nationalism he let drop some expressions not strictly orthodox, though I failed to detect it, and a Christian member of the society, who had just joined it, could hardly wait for the discourse to end before he jumped on the speaker with both feet—figuratively speaking—and said he was told before he joined the society that Infidels and Agnostics would not be permitted to speak in the meetings, and if they were, he should withdraw at once. Oil was then poured on the troubled waters, and his organ of religious combativeness resumed its normal placidity before the next speaker closed, for his remarks, with slight changes, would have been very appropriate at an evening prayer-meeting or a Sabbath-school convention.

Thus is Nationalism being placed before the people of this city, and the foundation laid for industrial changes that shall insure plenty to all; and from time to time the public is invited out by the advertisement that the next lecture will be, "The Relation of Christianity to Nationalism," or "The Teachings of Christ in Harmony with Bellamy's Dream," etc. Such subjects naturally make an Infidel jump to get there, and Nationalism assumes an importance second only to the salvation of his soul. But don't it beat sheer how hard it is for people to loose their grip on the dead Jesus and what somebody declares he said centuries ago! Starve the people; grind them down by conditions which the exercise of common sense would remove; force them to suffer and endure, and still they neither want nor seek relief unless it can come in accordance with opinions held by the long-lamented myth from Nazareth.

I fully agree with the junior editor of FREETHOUGHT that Nationalism is a "semi-religious craze," and have no faith in its ever producing desirable or beneficial changes. Even were it possible to eliminate the religious insanity which seeks union with it, the visionary theories then remaining would never materialize in practical results. The scheme is too utopian to fit the inharmonious and incongruous elements in human nature; and one of its greatest defects is its failure or inability to provide a plan for action among the great majority of American people—the scattering but ubiquitous farmer. For some reason he has been entirely ignored and the scheme confined to thickly settled communities, where, if individuality could be crushed out, and mortal man be made to assume the characteristics of a puppet, the thing might work. The race question in the South is one that the "dream" offers no solution for, and this country is yet to be convulsed with both race and religious conflicts which industria conditions will neither hasten nor prevent. A happy, harmonious family-nation is too bright an expectation to realize this side of an orthodox heaven; and, as man is a fighting animal whose sluggish blood was never stirred by anything nameable as martial music stirs it and visions of conquest, we can safely conclude that history will continue to repeat itself and the world will as now and heretofore be the abode of endless strife in the human family, where the serious and perpetual struggle for existence is varied by alternate periods of peace and warfare under the blessed consolation derived from religious superstition and the cheering thought that we may possibly live again in another and a better world. Sic est vita.—C. SEVERANCE, Los Angeles.

Mr. Eugene Hough has written a poem and had it published in a contemporary journal. I have not seen it, but Bierce of the Examiner quotes one stanza; thus:

In the bosom of a continent wide,
Leagues and leagues from the sand of ocean's tide,
While delving far beneath the light of day—
There in a niche, curious and rare, lay
A shell!

These lines are a trifle off in their mechanical construction, and standing alone their significance is not apparent, but that their author did the best he could there is no reason to doubt. It was therefore unkind in Mr. Bierce to add:

On a continent—on the western side—
In a cooler place than he'd find if he died,
While writing his rot, with his pride for pay—
Lived (though all wished he was under the bay)
A fool.

That is no way to deal with an amateur poet. If a man writes verse and writes it incorrectly, he should be instructed how to improve his style, and not be pronounced a fool off-hand. It is the province of the journalist to instruct or amuse, and to call a man a fool is neither edifying nor funny. In order to convince reasonable people like Mr. Hough that they are wrong, we must point out their error. It would have been a very easy thing for Mr. Bierce to show Mr. Hough that his first line could not be scanned, for the reason that he has introduced three unaccented syllables, namely, “-som of a;” that the second line has an excess of accented syllables; that in the third line he has dropped into a style of verse wholly different from that of the two preceding; and that the fourth line is prose.

Being himself a rhymester, Mr. Bierce would have had little difficulty in making rhythmical if not lyrical verse of Mr. Hough's stanza; as, for instance:

In the bosom deep of a continent wide,
Leagues and leagues from ocean's tide,
And fathoms away from the light of day,
Rich and rare, in a niche there lay
A shell.

Thus arranged, the lines offer no violence to the ear of the reader, and present their leading idea in a manner calculated to excite poetic reflection. A seashell discovered leagues away from the shore and at the bottom of a shaft raises at once the question how it got there, which was no doubt the object Mr. Hough had in view when he wrote the verse under criticism.

The superiority of my method of dealing with defective poetry is shown by the fact that Bierce has made an enemy of Mr. Hough, while I have written his name on the subscription list of this journal.

A Canadian lady has looked across the continent to find a vehicle for her thoughts. She writes:

Since you have opened your columns to all, I desire space to give my views on religion. My only creed is the fatherhood of the Eternal and the brotherhood of man. And my belief in this rests on this—that I have felt His power in my soul so powerfully that I cannot doubt. But others can feel it as well as I, if they will wait for it and listen to its teachings and obey them. For He speaks to all. If any have not heard the voice it is because it is not heard so easily in the tumult of life, and they are not looking for it. But look backward for a little and think. Have you not sometimes had an impression that if followed brought some good or averted some evil? If any one will watch, these little beginnings will grow into a teacher that will teach as no man or mortal spirit can teach.

I speak not as one ignorant of the teachings of Materialism, Spiritualism, or modern theology.

Whitby, Canada.

SARAH A. ORVIS.

If there is anything new or startling in the foregoing, those who recognize it will doubtless be glad to see the letter in print. The fatherhood of the Eternal is to me an aged chestnut with wool on it, and the brotherhood of man has grown whiskers since I first heard it propounded as a declaration of principles. The Eternal is perchance our primitive male ancestor, the Everlasting being his conjugal partner. If so, we may look back with pride, if not with filial affection, to our respectable progenitors. So the Eternal speaks to all, does he? What has become of the old lady, Everlasting? Has her conversation mill been closed down? That all mankind are brothers naturally follows from the common parentage above established, and the way they quarrel proves it. I have often noticed that brothers fight each other with an enthusiasm rarely shown toward strangers, and that slight differences which would not lessen their courtesy to others, will bring them to the verge of a knock-down and result in life-long coolness if not enmity. There is a good deal of humbug about brotherhood; and while I esteem my own brother above other men, I am confident that, other things being the same, I should have an equal regard for him if our parents had never been introduced to one another. I am inclined to rebel against the obligation to like any one better on account of consanguinity. The fact that a man is a man is sufficient excuse for dealing fairly with him. He is our brother, of course, and so, saith the poet, is the insensate clod.

Speaking of impressions, I would say I never had any. I have not felt the “power.” If I ever do I shall regard it as the premonitory symptoms of an epileptic seizure, and consult a physician.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

Six convicts, one of whom is a murderer, dug their way out of our county jail last Saturday night, and some of them are still at liberty.—The Girls' High School building at Hyde and Bush streets was burnt Sunday night. The building and contents foot up a loss to the city of about $36,000.—Snowslides have interfered with railroad travel in Oregon and Washington.—The fact has just come to light that in September last, J. L. Patterson, of Calico, San Bernardino county, was held up and robbed of $10,000 in cash, and that the robber, one Dodson, was tracked and shot to death in the Mojave desert.—A missionary lately returned from China reports that the opium habit is rapidly spreading among the Chinese.—C. R. Bennett, of the Vice Society, is happy over the seizure of some walking-sticks with horrifying pictures in the heads of them.—The Nationalists are holding crowded meetings of late, and public interest is being attracted to Socialism.—There were 124 deaths in this city last week.—It is believed that mails from Boston, New York, Washington, and St. Louis were burned at Sidney, Neb., Jan. 10.

The usual worst storm of the season was reported from St. Louis and Kansas City the first part of the week. Communication with the South was cut off by a cyclone destroying telegraph wires. In Tennessee, several lives were lost and four churches demolished.—Specials from eighty-three towns in Ohio outside of the large cities showed four thousand cases of la grippe and 86 deaths Jan. 12.—Hamilton Carter, a Sunday-school man, a church-member, and a professor in a religious institute, has been arrested at Cleveland, O., on a charge of burglary. He broke into a drug store, and also stole a missionary contribution taken up in a Presbyterian Sunday-school.—The W. C. T. U. will memorialize Secretary Windom to make officers who drink ineligible to command vessels, and Postmaster Wanamaker not to employ drunken letter-carriers.—Dolly Dutton, the famous midget, is dead. She has been an inmate of the Worcester, Mass., insane asylum for seven years. Her weight was fifteen pounds.—The wind overturned a church in Brooklyn, N. Y., last week, and several people were buried in the ruins.

A Paris dispatch says: It is a sad and demoralizing feature of the influenza epidemic in Paris that ladies and gentlemen very partial to alcohol escaped, while those leading temperate lives were the worst sufferers. Physicians noting this immediately advised the use of warm alcoholic drinks, with the result that 1500 persons were arrested in the streets within three days for drunkenness. Of this number 1200 declared that they were simply following the treatment prescribed for the influenza

INGERSOLL ON CHRISTMAS.

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll has written an essay on Christmas. It appears over his own signature in the New York Tribune. "My family and I," he says, "regard Christmas as a holiday—that is to say, a day of rest and pleasure—a day to get acquainted with each other, a day to recall old memories and for the cultivation of social amenities. The festival now called Christmas is far older than Christianity. It was known and celebrated for thousands of years before the establishment of what is known as our religion. It is a relic of sun worship. It is the day on which the sun triumphs over the hosts of darkness, and thousands of years before the New Testament was written, thousands of years before the republic of Rome existed, before one stone of Athens was laid, before the Pharaohs ruled in Egypt, before the religion of Brahma, before Sanscrit was spoken, men and women crawled out of their caves, pushed the matted hair from their eyes, and greeted the triumph of the sun over the powers of the night.

"There are many relics of this worship—among which is the shaving of the priest's head, leaving the spot shaven surrounded by hair, in imitation of the rays of the sun. There is still another relic—the ministers of our day close their eyes in prayer. When men worshiped the sun—when they looked at that luminary and implored its assistance—they shut their eyes as a matter of necessity. Afterward the priests looking at their idols glittering with gems shut their eyes in flattery, pretending that they could not bear the effulgence of the presence; and to-day, thousands of years after the old ideas have passed away, the modern parson, without knowing the origin of the custom, closes his eyes when he prays.

"There are many other relics and souvenirs of the dead worship of the sun, and this festival was adopted by Egyptians, Greeks, Romans, and by Christians. As a matter of fact, Christianity furnished new steam for an old engine, infused a new spirit into an old religion, and, as a matter of course, the old festival remained.

"For all of our festivals you will find corresponding pagan festivals. For instance, take the eucharist, the communion, where persons partake of the body and blood of the deity. This is an exceedingly old custom. Among the ancients they ate cakes made of corn, in honor of Ceres, and they called these cakes the flesh of the goddess, and they drank wine in honor of Bacchus, and called this the blood of their god. And so I could go on giving the pagan origin of every Christian ceremony and custom. The probability is that the worship of the sun was once substantially universal, and consequently the festival of Christ was equally widespread.

"As other religions have been produced, the old customs have been adopted and continued, so that the result is this festival of Christmas is almost world wide. It is popular because it is a holiday. Overworked people are glad of days that bring rest and recreation and allow them to meet their families and their friends. They are glad of days when they give and receive gifts—evidences of friendship, of remembrance and love. It is popular because it is really human, and because it is interwoven with our customs, habits, literature, and thought.

"For my part I am willing to have two or three a year—the more holidays the better. Many people have an idea that I am opposed to Sunday. I am perfectly willing to have two a week. All I insist on is that these days shall be for the benefit of the people, and that they shall be kept not in a way to make folks miserable or sad or hungry, but in a way to make people happy and to add a little to the joy of life. Of course, I am in favor of everybody keeping holidays to suit himself, provided he does not interfere with others, and I am perfectly willing that everybody should go to church on that day, provided he is willing that I should go somewhere else."

READ our Premium List on page 45.

PRIEST AND SCIENTIST.

These two characters lead and direct mankind. They are in the front ranks as instructors, authorities, and benefactors, or supposed to be.

The scientist goes to nature for his facts. He is careful that they are facts. He knows well that the least error is fatal. A railroad train will not move unless all the principles of its construction are clearly observed. Fact brings success, and error failure. There is no deception. He relies on no miracle, no mystery, nothing but demonstrable truth. He regards all else as of no value. It will not work. It gives no good results. It is useless.

The priest is of another stamp. He has no facts. He is devoted to some revelation from some other man, to some God, that he regards with awe, serves with fear and trembling, and teaches others to bow and kneel to the unknown, the mystery, the miracle, the paradox that asserts the absurd, and protests that the more absurd, the more sacred and true.

The priest never looks at science only to oppose and destroy. He is afraid of facts. He abhors the light of reason. He dare not let the sunshine in upon his mysteries, lest they all appear as cobwebs, flimsy and worthless. He is inclined to be morose, to seek the shade, to keep out of the light; for even his garments lose their sacred tints when too well-known.

He has been educated to his peculiar faith. He was selected as a priest, because he never raised a doubt of its truth. He has been promoted from a mere acolyte to a priest, bishop, archbishop, and cardinal, because of his sturdy faith. He is sure that his religion is true; and when the human mind will not accept it, he declares that that mind is perverse, crooked, obtuse, and reprobate. He would quench the sun, rather than its beams should expose his ignorance.

Science is his abhorrence, and the scientist a "devil's imp" in his estimation. He quenches the light wherever he can; and the scientist too. If nothing else will do, he cuts out his tongue, puts him in a dungeon, ties him to stake, piles the fagots around him and makes a burnt offering to his deity.

The scientist never looks upon the priest's religion but to find it "the baseless fabric of a vision," all the same, or cross, or crescent, differing but in name. He finds no facts at the bottom. A vision, a dream, a network of the imagination, all proven "by competent false witnesses," entered into the sacred books to be believed forever; and he cannot believe a word of it.

There is nothing morose about your scientist. He just revels in the sunshine. He invents telescopes and microscopes to get a better view of things. He is not afraid of the light; he loves and covets the most brilliant rays. He may be a lawyer, doctor, soldier, statesman, or traveler. No matter! he is all the same, rational, polished; he is easy of access and open to reason.

The two characters are perfect antipodes. The scientist is a rational and practical being, while the priest is either insane or educated out of all sense and all humanity. One of them is a perverted human being, soured to man, under the pretext of serving God.

Look at the conduct of the two, the world over, and you will find a demonstration of this fact in every page of history. The priest, under the mask of serving God, is trained to become the enemy of his fellow-man. He is the enemy of truth, liberty, progress, cheerfulness, and general happiness. He stands at the gate of our paradise, and says, "Enter not! God forbids!"

The spirit of the two is well illustrated in the proceedings of a council, and a convention, both of which met within the past hundred and ten years, for a business of the utmost importance to all the world.

The council was the grand ecumenical council at Rome, in Italy. It consisted of priests, bishops, and cardinals, the quintessence of priestly rank, learning, and religion. All of them were chosen vessels of rank, talent, and faith. There was not a heretic there. All were Christian priests. The council came sixty or seventy years after the convention, and had all the additional light of those years, besides that shed by the convention.

The convention was the constitutional convention of the United States in 1787. No priest was there. The scientists had

LETTERS ON THE LAND QUESTION.

MR. GREENWOOD'S LETTER.

To the Editor of The Times:

SIR: Mr. Herbert Spencer's letter in the Times of to-day carries with it a heavy lesson to political philosophers. They are taught to remember that this is an age of popular education, as well as of social unrest; that their books are read not only by students like themselves, who often find their chief interest in a display of intellectual subtlety or athleticism, but by thousands of men who are ever on the alert for warranted theories of social reform that will better their condition. And if such theories should happen to be ill-considered before publication, or unaccompanied by a strong and clear recital of whatever reasons are fatal to their application in this work-a-day world, the mischief they may do is enormous. How clearly Mr. Spencer himself must see this now! And how sorry he must be for having so terribly misled, not Mr. Laidler and the Labor party of Newcastle alone—that is not imaginable—but many other poor men also who habitually hang on the authority of great men like himself.

It was when Mr. Morley was so delicately heckled at Newcastle that a member of the Labor party deputation asked him what he thought about the nationalization of the land. Mr. Morley demurred. Mr. Laidler said the Labor party had its own plan. "They remembered that Mr. Herbert Spencer had said that the land had been taken by force and fraud; that gentleman had also said that to right one wrong it takes another." "Why," replies Mr. Morley, "has he said this?" "We all know he has," rejoins Mr. Laidler. "But you are aware that he has recalled some of the things he has laid down?" "Yes," rejoins Mr. Laidler; "but if he has stated truth and recalled it the truth will prevail." There we are. This little bit of conversation is precious beyond many pages of "absolute political ethics," judged by the standard of usefulness; and it will be useful to nobody so much as to writers like Mr. Herbert Spencer.

For what has he to say to it all? He says that the opinions quoted by Mr. Laidler were set forth forty years ago in a work "intended to be a system of absolute political ethics; or that which ought to be, as distinguished from relative political ethics, or that which is at present the nearest practical approach to it." These opinions were accompanied by others which forbid the interpretation sometimes put upon them. But yet, on reflection, they satisfied Mr. Spencer so little, he thought them so little guarded or corrected by those other opinions of his, that for the last fifteen years he has not allowed the book that contained them to appear in any language. "Though I still adhere to its general principles, I dissent from some of the deductions"—those, perhaps, which Mr. Laidler regards as truth once uttered and never to be recalled. Besides, what Mr. Spencer said on this subject "was said in the belief that the questions raised were not likely to come to the front in our time or for many generations;" and it did include the statement that, if the community took the land, the necessary business of compensation would be a complicated one. "To justly estimate and liquidate the claims" of our present land-owners "is one of the most intricate problems society one day will have to solve." Since "Social Statics" was published, however, Mr. Spencer has come to revised conclusions; and these he now sets forth in the Times. Permit me to quote a few sentences from this statement:

Though industrialism has thus far tended to individualize possession of land, while individualizing all other possessions, it may be doubted whether the final stage is at present reached. Ownership established by force does not stand on the same footing as ownership established by contract; and though multiplied sales and purchases treating the two ownerships in the same way have tacitly assimilated them, the assimilation may eventually be denied. . . . There is reason to suspect that, while private possession of things produced by labor will grow even more definite and sacred than at present, the inhabited area, which can not be produced by labor, will eventually be distinguished as something which may not be privately possessed. . . . Possibly the communal proprietorship of land, partially or wholly merged in the ownership of dominant men during evolution of the militant type, will be resumed as the industrial type becomes fully evolved.

After quoting these and similar passages from his revised opinions, Mr. Spencer makes the following observations: "The full control. The delegates were elected by the people. They were lawyers, doctors, soldiers, statesmen, and farmers. They were elected by men to serve men. They were directed by science and common sense, and not by religion. They met for the service of man, and not of any deity, unless it were the eternal spirit of right, reason, and justice. This convention proclaimed, for the first time in the world, as the foundation of government, these principles:

"All men are by nature and right free and equal. All men have an equal right to think, speak, write, print, and act their own thoughts, respecting an equal right in all others; and to seek their own happiness in their own way. All men have inalienable rights which no man, and no government may infringe or set aside. All government should rest upon the will of the people. All law should be just and equal to all; and all have an equal protection of the law. No man shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property, save by due process of such just and equal law. Government should control no man's opinions. No thoughts are crimes. Government shall neither encourage, nor discourage any religion. Let truth and error grapple, and the fittest survive. When we adjourn we step down into plain citizens, with no rank, no place, and no pay, only as our equal fellows may select us for office."

This is all in the constitution, and is to-day the supreme law, though not strictly observed.

The council, sixty years later, decreed as follows:

"The pope, our high priest, is God on earth, infallible, the fountain of all power, and to be obeyed in all things. It is a damnable heresy to believe that government should rest upon the will of the people. Man has no inalienable rights; but God is supreme, our pope is God, and man has no rights he is bound to respect. Free thoughts are crimes, when they oppose our church, and should be severely punished. Laws should not be just and equal to all men. Our priests are above the law; and heretics should have no protection of law. Government should favor our religion, support it, and protect it by law. When we adjourn, we do so to be and remain the anointed and appointed priests of God, whom all men are bound to listen to, to obey and support. We alone can forgive sins, and hold the keys of heaven. And it is a crime to deny these rights of ours."

It is thus seen that this council of priests, sixty years later, distinctly denied every word spoken by the convention.

The convention adjourned without a word, a favor, or a privilege for themselves.

The priests claimed all for themselves; that they were the servants of God to be obeyed and paid forever.

Now one was right, and the other was as clearly wrong. How does it stand?

The convention was right, and the priests were wrong. Scientists set up truth and justice, and religion declared the opposite; science was modest and generous, religion was impudent and selfish!

The scientists of that convention were led by Thomas Paine. They enthroned his principles, but left out the man. They were no hero-worshippers.

The council was led by the infallible pope. They enthroned Christ, and the pope as his vicar; but left out all the principles of Christ.

The convention was the best that ever sat in this world, and the council of priests was the worst. It installed a despot, and declared the rights of man null and void forever.

Such are priests and scientists. H. L. KNIGHT.

Schiller at the Grave of Rousseau.

Mute relic of an age abhorred, disgraced,
Of genius, love, and noble worth misplaced,
O grave of Rousseau, dear thou art to me.
Repose be to thy ashes, loved and blest,
For in thy life thou vainly sought'st the rest
That here at last has been vouchsafed to thee.
Ah, when will ancient wounds be covered o'er?
The wise men died in heathen days of yore—
Now, though 'tis lighter, yet they die again.
Brave Socrates was slain by Sophists' hate,
Rousseau through Christian venom meets his fate—
Rousseau, who fain would make of Christians—men.

use of the words 'possible,' 'possibly,' and 'perhaps,' in the above extracts shows that I have no positive opinion as to what may hereafter take place." But of this Mr. Spencer feels sure: Nationalize the land on righteous principles of compensation, and the interest on the purchase-money would exceed the sum now paid in rent. Moreover, it is a "wild belief" that the land would be better managed—i. e., more profitably managed—by public officials than by private owners. "With a humanity anything like that we now know, the implied reorganization would be disastrous."

Weil, we have only to do with the humanity that we now know; and being what it is, surely Mr. Spencer should have taken pains from the beginning to consider its manifold weaknesses and temptations. Yet still he repeats that the individual ownership of land was established by force, the assertion that Mr. Laidler and the Labor party of Newcastle stand upon. While, as for his perhapses and possibilities, they are in fact expressions of doubt as to whether the community will or will not resume ownership of the land, but they are not necessarily to be taken in that sense, and any Mr. Laidler might be forgiven if he saw in them a suggestion of the right thing to do, or a prophecy the fulfillment of which it would not be wrong to precipitate. All the more reasonably might he think so when he sees that in these same revised conclusions Mr. Spencer likens the acquisition of property in land by individuals to the old-time "ownership of man by man." "The ownership of land was established by force;" it originated in robbery; at the root it is robbery still. That is the point for Mr. Laidler; and, writing for humanity as we know it, and as the next generation is likely to know it, it is a pity that Mr. Spencer did not guard at once and in the strongest way against the probable use that humanity, as we know it, would make of the assertion. The possible resumption of the land by some totally different generation of humanity, one that we know not of, should not have been committed to print as the righting of a wrong, without the clearest warning that, till that generation comes, land nationalization must be an exceeding great folly, amounting to absolute disaster. For the good of humanity, that was always the most important point to insist upon. It is to be feared that some thousands of Laidlers will not think so much of it now. So much does it become political philosophers to be careful. Some medicines are also poisons; such medicines should never be issued over the counter to any and every purchaser without a warning label; and this I hope I may say without seeming disrespect for Mr. Herbert Spencer.

Your obedient servant,

FREDERICK GREENWOOD.

PROF. HUXLEY'S LETTER.

To the Editor of "The Times:"

SIR: I have read with very great interest the "heckling" of Mr. Morley, the letters of Mr. Spencer and of Mr. Greenwood, and your editorial comments on this triangular duel. But, if I may speak in the name of that not inconsiderable number of persons to whom absolute ethics and a priori politics are alike stumbling-blocks, permit me, borrowing a phrase which a learned judge has immortalized, to say that "you have not helped us much."

Let me explain the nature of the further help we require by putting a case which is not altogether imaginary:

A score of years ago, A. B. bought a piece of land; he paid the price asked by the vender, and all conditions required by the law were fulfilled in the transference of ownership. The transaction was as much a free contract as if A. B. had gone to market and bought a cabbage. At the time that A. B. handed over his money he believed that the state was a copartner in the contract, in so far that it undertook to maintain his rights of ownership against everything and everybody who should attempt to invade them, except an act of the legislature, or the orders of the commanding officer in war-time, or a police officer legally authorized. A. B. has gone on paying his taxes to the state all these years, in full conviction that the state contracted, among other things, to afford him the protection thus defined.

A. B.'s lawyers assured him that the title to the land was perfectly good. This means that, for several centuries at least, neither force nor fraud has intervened, but that the land has passed from owner to owner by free contract. At the same time, A. B., who is somewhat pedantic in the matter of historical accuracy, admits that, for anything he knows to the contrary, in the reign of King John his bit of land may have belonged to Cedric the Saxon; and that possibly the son-in-law of that worthythane, after the quarrel with Rowena, related by a historian of later date than Scott, may have taken forcible possession of it, and, in virtue of his favor at court, kept it for himself and his descendants.

Now, my friends and myself, having no better guides than common morality and common sense, are of opinion that, supposing Ivanhoe to have behaved in this scandalous fashion, the fact makes not the smallest difference in justice or in equity to the title of A. B.; and that, if it did, the state, which has contracted to defend A. B.'s title without the least reference to such antiquarian contingencies, would commit a gross fraud if it broke its contract on any such flimsy pretenses.

The right to compensation is not in question; what we deny is the right to disturb A. B. on such a ground.

It would appear, however, that there is some better guidance than that of common morality and common sense; "absolute political ethics" is an unfallible indicator of what we ought to do—whether the action indicated is possible or impossible.

Now, what we want is this very light as to what we ought to do in such a concrete case as that I have mentioned. The dictum that "ownership established by force does not stand on the same footing as ownership established by contract," I must repeat, "does not help us." Construed strictly, it is a mere truism; construed broadly, it may cover Mr. Laidler's view.

What we want to know is this: According to "absolute political ethics," has A. B. a moral as well as a legal right to his land or not?

If he has not, how does "absolute political ethics" deduce his title to compensation? And, if he has, how does "absolute political ethics" deduce the state's right to disturb him?

No question is raised here as to the right of the state to deal with A. B.'s land or anything else he possesses on grounds of public utility or necessity; nor do we want to know what may be done by the wisdom or the folly of future generations. "Absolute political ethics" should be independent of time and space; and it ought to be able to tell us whether, in foro conscientiae, A. B., if he continue to hold his land under the circumstances supposed, is an honest man or a receiver of stolen goods.

I intervene in this discussion most unwillingly, but I have long been of opinion that the great political evil of our time is the attempt to sanction popular acts of injustice by antiquarian and speculative arguments.

My friend Mr. Spencer is, I am sure, the last person willingly to abet this tendency. But I am afraid that, in spite of all Mr. Spencer's disclaimers, the next time Mr. Morley visits his constituents his pertinacious "heckler" will insist that, after all, the younger and the older philosopher are not disagreed in principle; and that the difference of "footing" between ownership primarily based on force and other ownership can not be cured by efflux of time, and justifies the state now, or at any future period, in dealing differently with the two.

In Ireland confiscation is justified by the appeal to wrongs inflicted a century ago; in England the theorems of "absolute political ethics" are in danger of being employed to make this generation of land-owners responsible for the misdeeds of William the conqueror and his followers.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

T. H. HUXLEY.

SUPERSTITION AT TABLE.

The talk of Brussels, and also of Paris, has been the very remarkable dinner given by the Prince Joseph de Chimay, who is King Leopold's minister of foreign affairs, to the Antislavery Commission and the members of the diplomatic corps of the different nations stationed at the Belgian capital. The Prince de Chimay is a most devout Catholic, and is rigorous in his observances of the rules and regulations of the church. Unfortunately the only day on which the banquet could be given was Friday. The serving of meat to his Catholic guests on that day would have been an act of discourtesy and disregard of their prejudices of which the prince was incapable. At the same time, it was difficult to ask his non-Catholic guests to content themselves with a fast-dinner. The difficulty was at length solved in a singularly happy manner. Two tables were set in the great dining-room. Both were loaded with massive plate and decked with a profusion of flowers. At one a diner maigre alone was served, the menu comprising eight courses, in which the finny tribe were the principal ingredients of many a delicate dish. At this table sat the host and his Catholic guests. The other table was reserved for the "heretics," to whom a magnificent repast was given, at which meats of all kinds were on the elaborate menu. At dessert the guests were asked to rise and adjourn to another room, where Catholics and Protestants united at one large table, on which were served the ices, entremets, and dessert.

THE INQUISITION.

Spain had a handy implement, planned and perfected on her soil, which enabled her to deal in a way of her own with these learned, noble, but pernicious heretics. It was for the benefit of Jews and Mohammedans that the Inquisition had been set up. In its earliest days it had done a large and successful business in them. Torquemada, the first inquisitor-general, is said in sixteen years to have burned 9,000. His successor, Diego Deza, was a less active man of business, for in eight years his murders were only 1600. But he induced Ferdinand and Isabella to expel the Moors as Torquemada had caused them to expel the Jews. Nearly 2,000,000 of the most industrious and able subjects were thus driven by these sovereigns from their country; a blow was self-inflicted on Spain from which she has never recovered; indeed, the whole policy of the Inquisition was the means of dragging down Spain from the highest to the lowest place among the kingdoms of Europe.

Their highnesses of the Inquisition saw that to put down the rising spirit of Protestantism they must bend the whole resources of their institution, in the most merciless and relentless fashion, to stamp out at once and forever every spark and vestige of heresy. And their resources were simply appalling. They had lately received a great extension of powers, and were practically able to arrest, confine, torture, convict, and burn whomsoever they pleased and perpetrate upon them the most inhuman cruelties. Once within their clutches their victims were practically helpless. Attempts have been made to show that it was otherwise, but historians of their own confirm what we have said. No doubt in their prisons there were cells that were fairly comfortable, but these were reserved for adulterers, pirates, smugglers, or political offenders who were not very dangerous to the church. But for heretics the places of confinement were usually underground dungeons, dark, damp, and dreary, never warmed by the comfortable glow of a fire, hardly reached by a straggling sunbeam, uncleansed and putrid, breeding disease that, perhaps in mercy, ended the life of many a prisoner before he was condemned to the fire.

At the dead of night the victim would be summoned to stand his trial in a dismal chamber where his merciless judges would be found, while the "familiar of the Inquisition" moved about, executing their orders, their faces covered by garments with two holes opposite their eyes, as if to disguise their very humanity. If the accused person would not confess his guilt, or would not disclose the names of others whom he knew to be heretics, he was ordered to the torture. The forms of torture were varied, but two obtained pre-eminence—the rack and the pulley.

The rack was a hollow machine of wood, with no bottom, but a bar against which the body lay, while the limbs were fastened by tight cords that often cut through the flesh to the bone, and on the mouth a cloth was placed on which water slowly descended, causing a most irritating sensation and a struggle for breath that often broke blood vessels in the lungs. In the pulley the victim had heavy weights attached to his feet, his arms were bound behind, he was hoisted by a rope to the roof, then by the slacking of the rope allowed to drop with a jerk so violent that sometimes every joint was wrenched from its socket. If the first application of the instruments of torture was ineffectual the victim was flung back into his horrible cell to digest his agony as he might, and called out perhaps next day to undergo a repetition of the process. Sometimes it would be repeated day after day for many days in succession, and sometimes years upon years would be spent in captivity with an occasional touch of torture to break the monotony of the confinement.

Then there was the auto-da-fe—a sort of masterpiece of inquisitorial terror. In a large square in some important city a platform was erected, covered with tapestry and other luxurious appliances for the accommodation of the inquisitors, and of such bishops, nobles, or members of the royal family as might desire to enjoy the spectacle. In front of the platform was a raised scaffold, on which the burning was to be done. An imposing procession of military with flowing banners first appeared, then the condemned, in single file, barefooted and ragged, their bodies seamed with the effect of tightened cords, or distorted by the pulley, each covered with a loose frock, called the sanbenito, bearing figures of devils and busts consuming in the flames, to denote the destiny of the worst class of heretics. Following the prisoners came the magistrates, the nobility, a crowd of ecclesiastics, and finally the inquisitors, followed by the familiars. The next part of the performance was a sermon on the awful sins of heretics by some distinguished preacher. The inquisitor then administered an oath binding all present to honor the inquisition and defend its privileges to the very uttermost. The offenses of the heretics were next read out and those who were prepared to recant knelt down, confessing their most grievous and unnatural sin, and received absolution, accompanied probably with confiscation of their goods, perhaps imprisonment for life. Then came the men and women destined for the fire. No brutality of treatment could altogether destroy the bearing of men who fear not those that kill the body. In a little while they were fastened to their several stakes, the pile of fagots was kindled around them, and the sudden cry of anguish was met with the exultant yells of the savage crowd.—The Quiver.

TO THE LIBERALS OF CALIFORNIA.

All who are in favor of the total separation of church and state; of the American Republic founded upon the Declaration of Independence; of equal rights and impartial liberiy, are cordially invited to meet in Convention at San Francisco on Saturday and Sunday, - January 25 and 26, 1890, at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, for the purpose of discussing the issues forced upon the people by ecclesiastical encroachments, and preparing measures for the establishment of a purely Secular government in the state of California, and throughout the nation.

The main question which is now presented to the Liberals of California, and which demands, on their part, persistent and united action, is the Sabbath question. "At a recent meeting of the American Sabbath Association of California it was resolved to proceed at once with a vigorous and well-directed campaign to restore, by state legislation, the weekly day of rest to its proper position." This is the declaration of the ecclesiastical party. The California Liberal Union is opposed to any Sabbath legislation, and the purpose of its Convention is to arouse the people to the threatened danger and, by the force of an enlightened public opinion, to guard against the passage of any laws by the state legislature for the enforcement of the Sunday as a Sabbath.

All Liberals of other states who are visiting San Francisco at the time are cordially invited to be present; and will be welcomed as members of the Convention if they so desire.

There is no creed, no religious belief or non-religious belief in the platform of the Liberal Union. It stands simply and solely for human rights irrespective of creeds, and it expects the co-operation of every American, without regard to belief or non-belief.

- | | | |
|--|---|--|
| RANFORD WORTHING,
W. F. FREEMAN,
PHILIP COWEN,
WM. SCHROEDER,
W. S. RODGERS,
JOHN ROBINETT,
MRS. KATE PARKER,
J. E. CLARK,
L. MAGENHEIMER, | } | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, President,
EMIL S. LEMME, Secretary,
A. H. SCHOU, Treasurer,
J. W. NORTH, First Vice-President.

Executive Committee. |
|--|---|--|

REDUCTION OF FARE.

Delegates to the Washington Convention, Seattle, January 28, 29, and 30, are earnestly requested to assemble at Freed's Hall, on Ninth street, between Olive and Pine streets (electric street-cars run within a few steps of the hall), on Tuesday morning, Jan. 28, at 9:30 sharp. The sessions will be held at 9:30 A.M. and 2 P.M. each day. There will be a banner presentation and an address by ex-Senator R. Winsor at 3:30 Tuesday, the 28th. Evenings will be devoted to public lectures. An admirable and most attractive programme has been arranged.

All coming over the Northern Pacific railroad will purchase regular ticket, and ask for certificate for delegates to the "Washington Convention of Secularists at Seattle." Such certificates, when signed by C. B. Reynolds at the Convention, entitle bearer to return ticket for one-fifth fare. Be sure to get "delegate's certificate" when purchasing ticket. The same reduction is promised on the Hunt system. R. I. WILSON, Sec.

In the Nick of Time.

To the Editors of Freethought:

I received yours of December 6, yesterday. I assure you I am glad that everything works so well. The time to strike is when the iron is hot, and I think you improved that time. I intended to take more shares in case that the cause should lack assistance, but seeing that the cause is supported freely, I will only take what I promised. I would much rather that every Liberal on the coast would take a hand in the enterprise, than that the company should be made up of a few, as it forms a kind of bond of union. I think the idea was a most fortunate one. Of course I intended to send my mite again in case you ran behind last, or rather this year, but this is much the better plan, as many who will take shares would not have contributed one cent toward making up a deficiency.

I, for my part, do not care whether the company ever will declare a dividend or not; but as the majority are not situated as I am, I should be glad for their sake if the venture proved remunerative. I consider the forming of the company as the raw material, and the profits as the cement to hold it together.

I inclose draft on Pacific Bank for $52, for which please send me certificate for ten shares, and subscription to FREETHOUGHT for next year. Eureka, Cal. ROBERT GUNTHER.

Mrs. Waisbrooker.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Our society, the Portland Secular Union, has recently had the pleasure of several lectures by Lois Waisbrooker, author of "Helen Harlow's Vow," "Perfect Motherhood," and other works. These lectures were delivered at Central Hall and in her usual forcible, convincing, and at the same time pleasing manner. They must make a deep impression on all thinking persons who hear them. For depth of thought, for clearness of expression, and for the information contained, these lectures we have seldom, if ever, heard excelled.

We hear she intends taking a lecturing trip through Oregon and Washington, and we think any societies wishing to advance the cause of Liberalism cannot do better than to engage her for a course of lectures. Her address at present is box 269, East Portland, Oregon.

MATTIE BLAISDELL, Secretary.

The Wagner Liberal Club.

To the Editors of Freethought:

The Liberal club of this place promises to be a success. Meetings are held every second Sunday with C. N. Wagner, chairman; Miss L. Wagner, secretary; Miss M. Hayden, treasurer; W. Collins, editor of paper. A library of Liberal tendencies will be established out of common funds and private donations of Freethought publications.

Wagner, Or. CHAS. G. CASPARY, Correspondent for Club.

It is reported that the Topolobampo colony has reached a final collapse. The land grant to the colony has been revoked by the Mexican government, and all the forfeit money of the company is lost. This report comes through the daily papers, and may be erroneous.

SECOND ANNUAL CONVENTION

OF THE

CALIFORNIA STATE LIBERAL UNION,

UNION SQUARE HALL, 421 POST St., SAN FRANCISCO,

Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 25 and 26, 1890

PROGRAMME.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 25, 8 P. M.

MUSIC,	Mrs. Eugenia Clark.
SONG, Ada and Violet Wheeler, Mrs. Clark, and Mr. E. T. Hannaford.
ADDRESS OF WELCOME,	Samuel P. Putnam.
ZITHER DUET,	The Misses Haelke.
BUSINESS—Appointing of Committees, etc.
SONG,	Miss Lillie Arper.
ADDRESS,	W. S. Bell.
CLOSING SONG,	Mrs. Eugenia Clark

SUNDAY, JANUARY 26, 10 A. M.

PIANO SOLO,	Miss Mate Hildebrandt.
ADDRESS,	Laura deForce Gordon.
SONG,	Miss Evangeline Ballou.
ADDRESS,	Hon. F. B. Perkins.
MUSIC,	Prof. Gustav Schultheis.
SONG, Ada and Violet Wheeler, Mrs. Eugenia Clark, and Mr. Hannaford.
ADDRESS,	J. L. Hatch.
ZITHER DUET,	The Misses Haelke.
SONG,	Miss Evangeline Ballou.

2:30 P. M.

MUSIC.
REPORT OF SECRETARY,	Emil S. Lemme.
REPORT OF TREASURER,	A. H. Schou.
REPORT OF COMMITTEES.
ELECTION OF OFFICERS.
MUSIC.
ADDRESSES, H. L. Knight, W. F. Freeman, Jas. Battersby, Mrs. A. Lindal.

SUNDAY EVENING, JANUARY 26, 8 O'CLOCK.

MUSIC,	The Misses Haelke.
SONG, Mrs. Clark, the Misses Wheeler, and Mr. E. T. Hannaford.
ADDRESS,	Hon. A. Schell.
SONG,	Miss Lillie Arper.
ADDRESS,	Mrs. Addie Ballou.
SONG,	Miss Evangeline Ballou.
CLOSING REMARKS,	By the President.

GRAND PAINE CELEBRATION

UNION SQUARE HALL, 421 POST STREET,

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JANUARY 29, 1890,

UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE

SAN FRANCISCO FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

PROGRAMME.

1. GRAND CHORUS, United German Singing Sections of San Francisco, under the leadership of Prof. F. Fischer.

San Francisco Turn Verein,
San Francisco Krieger Verein,
Germania Club,

Harmonie Gesang-Verein

Vorwärts Verein.

2. ADDRESS, Herbert Miller.

3. SONG, Mrs. Clark, the Misses Wheeler, and Mr. E. T. Hannaford.

4. ADDRESS, Mr. F. Schuenemann-Pott.

5. RECITATION, Miss Lillie Arper.

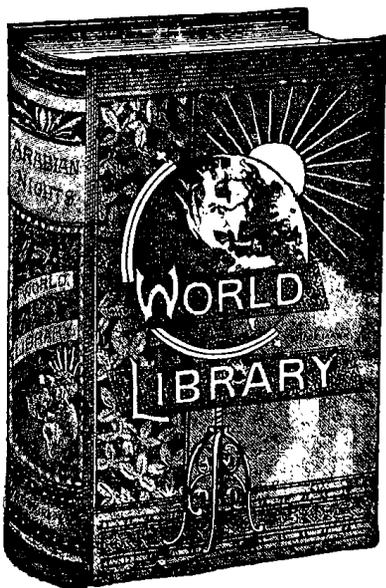

6. ADDRESS, Thomas Curtis.

7. RECITATION, C. F. Burgman.

8. SONG, Miss Evangeline Ballou and Miss Mate Hildebrandt.

The exercises begin at 8 o'clock sharp, and will be closed with a sociable and dance from 10 to 12 o'clock.

COMMITTEE OF INTRODUCTION.—Mr. and Mrs. Schou, Mrs. Grace Macdonald, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Eastman, Mr. Emil S. Lemme, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Faust, Geo. E. Macdonald, F. L. Browne.

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRAIG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY.—A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be Obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESU.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last an heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALL AN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavillion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the Invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir. Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder-worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portraiture of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. PRESCOTT.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll), with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated late scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POE'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

She Assisted.

Mr. Profoundly sat at the breakfast table, and between sips of coffee discoursed ponderously as follows:

"It is the silent forces of nature that are most potent. The silent streams run deep, the silent power of solar heat brings forth the flower and grain, the silent moon heaps up the ocean tides, and—and——"

"The silent sow gets the most swill," said Profundity's wife, helping him out as he hesitated for similes, and spilled a soft-boiled egg on his manly bosom.—Arkan-saw Traveler.

A Poser.

Bennie—Mamma, do people really buy babies?

Mamma—Of course, child, of course. Run out now and play.

Bennie (in a brown study)—Then why is it, mamma, that poor people buy more of 'em than anybody else?—Northwest Magazine.

A tipsy Scotchman was making his way home on a bright Sunday morning when the good folk were wending their way from the kirk. A little dog pulled a ribbon from the hand of a lady who was leading it, and as it ran from her she appealed to the first passer-by, who happened to be the intoxicated man, asking him to whistle for her poodle. "Woman!" he returned with that solemnity of visage which only a Scotchman can assume, "woman, this is no day for whustlin'."—Ex.

A LADY tells us that she heard a colored preacher say: "De fo' part of de house will please sit down, fo' de hind part cannot see de fo' part if de fo' part persists in standing befo' de hind part, to de uttah obsclusion of the hind part by the fo' part."—Christian Advocate.

SHE put on my hat;
Did she know what it meant?
On the sofa we sat
As she put on my hat
(It was long ere I went);
Yes she knew what it meant.

HISTORY OF CHRISTIANITY,

An important work by Gibbon, the historian. Comprising all that relates to the progress of the Christian religion in "The History, of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," and a Vindication (never before published in this country) of some passages in the 15th and 16th chapters, by Edward Gibbon, Esq., with a Life of the Author, Preface and Notes by the Editor, including variorum notes by Guizot, Wenck, Milman, "an English Churchman," and other scholars. Handsome 12 mo., 864 pages. Cloth. With Engravings. Price, $1 50.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL'S

GREAT CENTENNIAL ORATION

On the Declaration of Independence. Also, the immortal document, The Declaration Itself, and the national anthem entitled "Land of Liberty." Price, 10 cents; 5 copies, 25 cents; 25 copies, $1.

THE SYSTEM OF NATURE,

Or, Laws of the Moral and Physical World. By Baron D'Helbach. A new and improved edition, with notes by Diderot. Two volumes in one. Price, $2.

PUTNAM'S WORKS.

The New God. 10c. The New God was made by an artist hand, guided by a poet soul. It is as perfect as sculpture. The creator makes his "god" in his own image, and breathes into his nostrils the breath of his own life.—L. K. Washburn.

Golden Throne. A romance. Price, $1 00. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words, the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Walls and Wanderings. A new American story. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1 00. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—John Swinton's Paper.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc, worth $35, for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do., $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
" Forks	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded. Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

NEW BOOKS.

Any of the following works may be ordered through this office, and will be sent postpaid upon receipt of price.

FUNDAMENTAL PROBLEMS. The Method of Philosophy as a Systematic Arrangement of Knowledge. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, $1.00.

"The book is of most excellent spirit and great ability."—Public Opinion.

"Dr. Carus with an ingenious and artistic hand unites the rival theories of the Idealists and Realists."—Watts's Literary Guide.

"Dr. Carus expounds the principles of Monism in a most able manner, and with so little technicality as to enable all ordinary readers to follow him with pleasure."—Secular Thought, Toronto.

THE PSYCHIC LIFE OF MICRO-ORGANISMS. A Study in Experimental Psychology. By A. Fred Binet. Price, 75 cents.

"The essays constitute a powerful and masterly argument, thoroughly supported by observed facts."—New York Tribune.

THREE INTRODUCTORY LECTURES ON THE SCIENCE OF THOUGHT. By F. Max Müller. Price, 75 cents.

"They are the ripe expression of a life-long labor in the study of the Science of Language."—Scotsman, Edinburgh.

THE IDEA OF GOD. By Dr. Paul Carus. Price, 15 cents. Being a disquisition upon the development of the idea of God in human thought and history.

"An effort to purify our idea of God."—Literary World, London.

"The writer defines God as 'The Ethical Life of Nature,' and supports his definition with much solid argument."—Watts's Literary Guide, London.

MAKING BREAD DEAR. A Controversy between Wheelbarrow and Sympathiser. Price, 10 cents.

"In the controversy both sides are fairly represented and some new ideas advanced which clear the atmosphere of the clouds that frequently dim the honest mind."—Elite News, Chicago.

A REGULAR EDUCATED AND LEGALLY QUALIFIED PHYSICIAN, and the most successful (in his specialty) as his practice will surely prove. The Doctor treats all these peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men such as seminal weakness, impotency, &c., resulting from indiscretion and ignorance of youth. Those who are alling should send ten (10) cents for his book, "Private Counsellor," setting forth an external Application—

A POSITIVE CURE

The book is worth many times its cost, and should be read by the young for instruction and the afflicted for relief.

All Communications Strictly Confidential.

Plain Envelopes used. The book spoken of sent sealed. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, NEW JERSEY Say where you saw this Advertisement.

[From the Washington National View.]

Dr. Fellows of Vineland, New Jersey offers his valuable services to all those in need of a kind, sympathetic and skillful physician. Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been assailed and exposed by the press, but, Dr. Fellows, a specialist, in his line, stands foremost in his profession, and the encomiums showered upon him publicly as well as in private, are flattering evidence of the high appreciation and confidence his long and conscientious devotion to his specialties in his profession have so justly merited for him, and it is safe to trust him.

A Testimonial.

WEST LIBERTY, O., Aug. 12, 1888.
DR. R. P. FELLOWS—Dear Sir: The remedy you sent is working like a charm. I am completely surprised the way it acts upon the organs. Have only been using it one week and that weakness, (seminal weakness) is coming out all right.
Yours respectfully,
J. R.

REMARKS—The above is a fair sample of the hundreds of testimonials received from all parts of the United States, from young, middle-aged and elderly men, suffering from various kinds of sexual complaints, but who are now cured by my External Application, the greatest of all known remedies for this class of diseases. As I am an out-and-out Liberal I trust the Freethinkers of the Land will give me their patronage, and not waste their time and money on Christian doctors.
DR. FELLOWS.

IF YOU WANT TO KNOW

All about the human body in health and disease, nature's secrets revealed, How life is perpetuated, health maintained, disease avoided, death delayed, How to marry your own mate, and transmit wealth of health to posterity. Read the most popular, comprehensive and useful book treating of MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

which Dr. Eadon declares to be "priceless in value, new, startling and very instructive." The latest edition is more complete and valuable than ever, having been re-written in important parts. It contains AN APPENDIX of great practical utility made up of

OVER 200 PRESCRIPTIONS OR RECIPES For Acute and Chronic Disorders Common to Adults and Children, a complete table of poisons and their antidotes (from highest authorities), illustrated directions for resuscitating the drowned (prepared for Health Boards), and hygienic rules for care of infants; also

ORIGIN OF LIFE AND DEVELOPMENT OF MAN, tracing the embryo from conception, through all stages to birth, illustrated by Over 20 Beautiful Colored Lithographs, on fine plate paper, such as are to be found only in high priced, imported medical works; and to illustrate the anatomy, and relative positions of important parts, each book is also embellished with THREE ELEGANT CHROMO CHARTS OF VITAL ORGANS.
Murray Hill Publishing Co., 129 East 25th St., N. Y. ©

Circulars Free. Address Price, cloth bound, by mail, $1.50; Liberal Discounts to agents.

Men, Women, and Gods.

A Short History of the Bible.

By Helen H. Gardener. Introduction by Robert G. Ingersoll. Price, 50 cents.

Being a popular account of the formation and Development of the Canon. By Bronson C. Keeler. Price. 50 cents.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future

Republic of North America

BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1. Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

CHURCH AND STATE

THE BIBLE IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—THE NEW AMERICAN PARTY,

A Criticism by "Jefferson."

Price, 10 cents.

Address

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co.,
838 Howard street, San Francisco.

ROMAN RULE OR RUIN.

BY Z. SHED.

A Summary of the atrocities committed by the Catholic church.

Price, 10 cents; four copies, 25 cents; ten copies, 50 cents. Address

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co.,
838 Howard street, San Francisco.

Why Priests Should Wed.

BY JUSTIN D. FULTON, D.D.

A startling book, particularly to those unacquainted with the character of the confessional. Price, $1.50.

Address this office.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

The Open Court.

A Weekly Journal of Reverent Freethought.

Discussing Problems in Science, Philosophy, Ethics, and Religion.

Subscription for twelve months, $2.00.

Specimen Copies free on application.

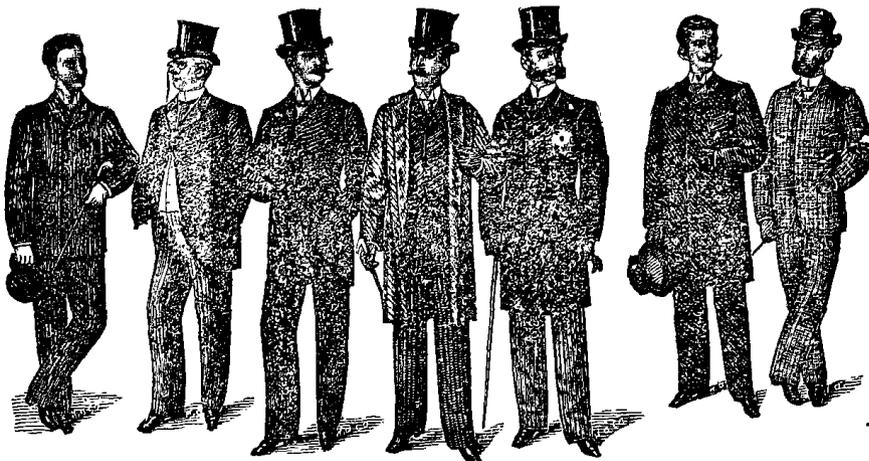

THE OPEN COURT PUB. CO.,

169-175 La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois.

P. O. Drawer F.

ASTHMA DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE DR. TAFT BROS., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR..... $25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.

OLIVER HINCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma st., cor. 5th, S. F.

P. A. CLARK.

CHAS. W. CLARK

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS,

NURSERYMEN.

Catalpas for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines.

Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice.

Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address

CLARK BROS.,

P. O. Box C,

San Jacinto, Cal.

REMSBURG'S WORKS.

False Claims. Price 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Anti-slavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic.

Fathers of the Republic Paine, Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. Price 15 cents.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

WASHBURN'S WORKS.

The False Teachings of the Christian Church. Price, 10 cents.

Sunday and the Sabbath. Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. Price, 10 cents.

The Catholic Church and the Public Schools Price, 5 cents.

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

THE NEW YORK DRESS CHART.

A system of easily-comprehended rules and charts by which any one can readily learn to cut Dresses, Basques, etc., in the most perfect manner. It contains the best ideas resulting from thirty years experience with Dress Charts and Tailor systems. It is adapted to the modern requirements of dress, and is used and indorsed by the best professional dressmakers of the East. It is as far superior to old methods as the steam car is to the stage. Price of the Chart, with full instructions, $10. By special arrangement we are able to offer the readers of FREETHOUGHT a liberal discount, for a short time. Write for particulars if you are at all interested in matters of household economy. This chart will save any family five times its cost in a single year. Send 25 cents with bust and waist measure and number of inches from natural waist up as high as you wish the dress underneath the arm, for a sample pattern drafted to order, with full directions for making up, if you wish to test the system. To take the first measure correctly, place the tape above the bust, underneath the arms, and straight across the back, drawing it very tight. Write figures plainly. Address, Agents } DRESS CHART AGENCY, wanted. } 838 Howard st. San Francisco, Cal. Care of FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.

THE WEEKLY STAR.

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
Six Months......75
Three Months......25

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,
Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.
PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,
536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Francisco.

THE SABBATH IMPOSTURE.

BY HARRY HOOVER.

Showing that there is no authority for the Sunday laws, either Human or "Divine."

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies 50 cents. Address this office.

JUST PUBLISHED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE GLORY OF INFIDELITY

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

"The Glory of Infidelity" was one of the poet-secretary's happiest efforts, and ranks with the best speeches of the Congress.—New York Truth Seeker.

Putnam's "Glory of Infidelity" is one of the ablest defenses of Freethought to which I have ever listened.

JOHN E. REMSBURG.

The lecture was "The Glory of Infidelity." No man or woman could hear it without being inspired by the heroic Infidel manhood and womanhood coming down to us as a rich inheritance through the dreary ages of the past, and pointing with glorious hope to the "New Heaven and Earth."

J. F. BECK.

I believe I express the unanimous sentiment of all when I say that for a lecture of its character, Mr. Putnam has never been surpassed and seldom equaled on our platform—a platform famous for the talent it affords. "The Glory of Infidelity" fairly bristles with good things, and each sentence is an epigrammatic Secular sermon.

E. A. STEVENS, Secretary American Secular Union.

PRICE 10 CENTS.

Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

SOMETHING NEW

—THE—

"COSMIAN HYMN BOOK."

—A COLLECTION OF—

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

(WORDS AND MUSIC)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies,
For Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price.....$1.50

Address orders to

L. K. WASHBURN,

Revere, Mass.

AGNOSTIC (argumentatively)—"You say that you believe in the immediate efficacy of prayer?" CHRISTIAN FRIEND (firmly)—"I do." AGNOSTIC—"Well—now suppose a mother kneels down and prays fervently for favoring winds to blow her son's ship safe home from China, and another prays for winds to blow her son's ship safe into China, and these ships are passing each other on the same course, do you mean to tell me that both these prayers can be answered satisfactorily?" CHRISTIAN FRIEND—"I—er—" LISTENING BOY (triumphantly)—"Why, of course, pa; don't you see? That's what makes so many cyclones."

"Bible Contradictions," 15 cents.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond" 14 00

"This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,

PUTNAM & MACDONALD,
04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE FIELD-INGERSOLL DISCUSSION.
Faith or Agnosticism.

A series of articles

—from—

The North American Review

—by—

REV. HENRY M. FIELD, | ROBERT. G. INGERSOLL.

The discussion upon which are based the Remarks of Hon. W. E. Gladstone.

Price 50 cents. Sold by the FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters

impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 4.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, JANUARY 25, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

THE CREED OF METHOD.

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - JANUARY 25, 1890.

SECOND ANNUAL CONVENTION

OF THE

CALIFORNIA STATE LIBERAL UNION,

UNION SQUARE HALL, 421 POST ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 25 and 26, 1890

PROGRAMME.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 25, 8 P. M.

MUSIC, - - - - -	Mrs. Eugenia Clark.
SONG, Ada and Violet Wheeler, Mrs. Clark, and Mr. E. T. Hannaford.
ADDRESS OF WELCOME, - - - - -	Samuel P. Putnam.
ZITHER DUET, - - - - -	The Misses Haelke.
BUSINESS—Appointing of Committees, etc.
ADDRESS, - - - - -	W. S. Bell.
CLOSING SONG, - - - - -	Mrs. Eugenia Clark

SUNDAY, JANUARY 26, 10 A. M.

PIANO SOLO, - - - - -	Miss Mate Hildebrande.
ADDRESS, - - - - -	Laura deForce Gordon.
ADDRESS, - - - - -	Mrs. R. H. Schwartz.
SONG, - - - - -	Miss Evangeline Ballou.
ADDRESS, - - - - -	Hon. F. B. Perkins.
MUSIC, - - - - -	Prof. Gustav Schultheis.
SONG, Ada and Violet Wheeler, Mrs. Eugenia Clark, and Mr. Hannaford.
ADDRESS, - - - - -	J. L. Hatch.
ZITHER DUET, - - - - -	The Misses Haelke.
SONG, - - - - -	Miss Evangeline Ballou.

2:30 P. M.

MUSIC.
REPORT OF SECRETARY, - - - - -	Emil S. Lemme.
REPORT OF TREASURER, - - - - -	A. H. Schou.
REPORT OF COMMITTEES.
ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

MUSIC.
ADDRESSES, H. L. Knight, W. F. Freeman, Jas. Battersby, Mrs. A. Lindal.

SUNDAY EVENING, JANUARY 26, 8 O'CLOCK.

MUSIC, - - - - -	The Misses Haelke.
SONG, Mrs. Clark, the Misses Wheeler, and Mr. E. T. Hannaford.
ADDRESS, - - - - -	Hon. A. Schell.
RECITATION, - - - - -	Miss Lillie Arper.
ADDRESS, - - - - -	Mrs. Addie Ballou.
SONG, - - - - -	Miss Evangeline Ballou.
CLOSING REMARKS, - - - - -	By the President,

There is a tendency among some reformers to insist upon a creed of method—to put the emphasis upon one line of effort to the neglect of others. If their particular plan is adopted, the world is saved at once, they declare. Give us the single-tax, says one. Give us the greenback, says another. Give us Bellamy, says a third. Give us Socialism, says a fourth. Give us Anarchy, says the next, and so on. Thus Reform is apt to narrow itself, to get into “ruts,” to become machine-like. Now, there may be a partial good in all the “isms” of Reform, but as there is no universal remedy for disease, so there is no universal solvent of the problems of life. The difficulties in the way of progress are immense. It is only by constant effort in every direction that advancement can be made. Sometimes one reform has an opportunity that others do not possess, attracts attention, and seems to be the only reform. But that is only for the time being, and what is popular to-day ceases to be popular to-morrow.

The true reformer must recognize that methods as well as ideas must be manifold, that the application of truth is as varied as its original perception. As we do not see things alike, so also we cannot do things alike. The work of one man is not always the work of another. Reform, as a whole, is a sphere, rather than one line. There are a thousand lines reaching to the ultimate goal. He who thinks the line he is pursuing is the only line makes the same mistake as he who thinks that his idea of the universe is the only idea worth having.

The single-tax is no doubt a valuable aid towards reform; it is a help, provided other things are also attended to. But many, in their ardor for single-tax, overlook the other necessities of the situation and neglect if not condemn other methods of procedure. The single-tax might be worse than the present tax if there was a union of church and state in the government. The single-tax might be an arbitrary impost under ecclesiastical domination. The single-tax, to be an improvement on present methods, must be according to purely secular principles of government. But many in their eagerness for single tax ignore the necessity of secular reform.

The Nationalist movement of to-day is a splendid impulse. It deals with great ideas and great sentiments. It appeals to many a dream that has haunted the mind of man. So long as it remains a broad and general movement, cultivating sympathy and brotherhood, and representing the dignity of labor, it will undoubtedly carry the world onward. But if it crystallizes into a creed, if it insists upon a certain method to the exclusion of other methods, if it does not allow for the infinite variety of human nature and the many-sided qualities of civilization and improvement, if it becomes a political machine instead of a free and open movement, it would lose the “promise and potency” of its fair beginning.

One should guard against narrowness of method, as well as against narrowness of idea. The demands of life are enormous. Each man can only do a little, can only know a little; but he can do and know that little in the spirit of universal wisdom. If he sees only his own work and his own way, with no bond of sym-

AN OPEN COURT PETTIFOGGER.

The "Open Court," a weekly journal published in Chicago and "devoted to the work of conciliating religion with science,"

OBSERVATIONS.

The San Francisco Freethought Society held a meeting last Sunday evening under the auspices of rainy weather and la grippe. Every seat was filled, however, and it was an enjoyable occasion. Vice-President Lemme occupied the chair. Mr. Putnam opened proceedings with some remarks upon the approaching convention. He apologized for the absence of the singers, who were suffering from influenza. His own remarks were impeded by a severe cold in the head, so that his language flowed intermittently like molasses from a cask when the vent is closed. Mrs. Addie Ballou followed with the lecture of the evening on "Woman and Freethought." Mrs. Ballou spoke of the popular malady wherewith she was afflicted, and was answered by a sympathetic cough from various persons in the audience. She began her address upon the higher part of the platform, and when Mr. Knight, who is hard of hearing, requested her to come forward where she would be more audible, she did so with the remark that men had been asking women to step down ever since she could remember. She told a story, however, of a woman who stepped up. It was the wife of Andrew Jackson Davis. Speaking in a church where the pulpit was so high she could not see over it, Mrs. Davis placed the large Bible upon the floor and stood on it while delivering her discourse. Mrs. Ballou thought that other women should follow this example of Mrs. Davis's and rise by placing the Bible under their feet. The speaker referred to the services of women in bringing about all kinds of reforms, and said that she, though a Spiritualist, and a believer in heaven, liked the Freethinkers and Secularists because they were in favor of equal rights for both sexes. When she got to the next world she would see to it that a warm corner was reserved for the Freethinkers. According to popular orthodoxy such a corner is already reserved for heretics, but the audience let that point pass and accepted the offer in the spirit in which it was made.

Mrs. Ballou referred to Annie Besant as a victim of religious opposition to woman's equality—a woman who had had her child taken from her because she was an Atheist. The women in the colonies of Australia, she said, were as steadfast as the men in defending freedom of thought and speech. One of them was Mrs. Symes, who had uncomplainingly seen her household furniture sold to pay the fine of her husband for conducting Freethought meetings Sunday nights in a hall to which an admission fee was charged. The women in the late war did quite as much for the Union as the men, for though they did not carry a musket they preserved the lives of those who did, and thus answered the argument of opponents of woman suffrage who held that if women voted they must also bear arms.

At the close of the lecture Mr. Schou received the offerings of the people. Dr. E. B. Foote, of New York, made a brief address in which he spoke of Mrs. Annie Besant, whom he had met. He described her as a woman with all the gentleness of a lady and the force and strength of a man.

Mrs. Julia Schlesinger was introduced as the editor of the Gleaner, a paper devoted to women's rights. Mrs. Schlesinger stated the objects of the publication and said she expected to glean much material from the Freethought press.

Adjournment was then had till Saturday night, when the Convention opens.

OBSERVATIONS ON STREET CARS.—A Montgomery-avenue street car bowls and wobbles along up the hill by the Cogswell fountain. A heavy man wearing a badge-pin and a large bundle under each arm desired to ride in the car. The gripman slows up perceptibly, and the heavy man steps on the dummy. In doing so he places his foot on the smooth head of a bolt, and is flopped suddenly upon the seat. The gripman gives a twist to his wheel; the car goes ahead with a yank. The seat is formed of half-round pieces of wood, laid transversely, and the heavy man goes bobbling over them to the end of the seat, as though running the scale on a xylophone, bringing up suddenly against a leather bag of United States mail at the side of a letter carrier on his way to the North Beach. The letter carrier looks surprised but not angry, and kindly remarks that if the new passenger desires the whole seat he will get off. As aforesaid, the car bowls and wallops along up Montgomery avenue. The gripman takes a fresh turn at his wheel; the conductor conceals his joy at the rear platform, and, in reflecting upon the rapid movement of the heavy man, quite forgets to collect his fare, though the latter rides a mile.

It is another day. The prematurely corpulent man enters a horse-car where the only available room is occupied by a sombrero-covered, lanky, wild-west looking person who wears no suspenders or waistcoat over his gray-flannel shirt, and whose boots reach to his knees outside his trousers. He sits cross-legged, resting his arm on the window-sill, and covers seat room enough for several persons. The heavy man touches the stranger's knee gently, indicating a wish that he should move up. The stranger rouses himself slightly, glances at his disturber coolly and somewhat impudently, and says: "If you want me to move, move me—that's all, pardy." Thus affectionately addressed, the other places his foot underneath the lanky individual's legs and swings them out of the way. He then takes a seat. Mr. Sombrero thereupon hauls himself together and subsides. This shows how a man who refuses to yield his point altogether can sometimes be induced to accept a compromise.

It is another day later than the one of which we have previously spoken. The wide man is in a front seat of a Powell street cable-car, and feels as though he were on the bow of a yacht, as the vehicle rises and pitches over the hills. The seat is just his size, though ostensibly built for two persons. The car stops, and a large Spanish beauty with high and upholstered front climbs aboard. She carries an umbrella, a satchel, and a shawl. She sits down partly beside but more upon the party heretofore mentioned, and in the same seat. He is enveloped, extinguished, obliterated. He endeavors to grow small without material success. He places his arm over the side of the seat, but withdraws it when the gripman bangs that member with the lever of his brake. The senorita is unconscious of his presence, and knows naught of the great drops of perspiration she is squeezing out of him. He would escape if he could, but cannot, so he resigns himself and prays for a railroad disaster. Just before he is fatally smothered the towering and overwhelming beauty gets off and lets him up. Thereafter he never takes a front seat on the car.

Once again, it is a rainy day. This description fits all days this winter. The subject of these memoirs is in a Montgomery street horse-car, seated midway, with others beside him. Opposite him a dozen people are wedged together. Gradually those upon his side of the car drop off, until he is left alone, seated midway as aforesaid, while the people opposite remain wedged together, and all gaze critically at their solitary vis-a-vee. He realizes that he is in the position of a Sunday-school teacher facing an intelligent class of potential angels, and contemplates drawing the catechism on his pupils and inquiring what is the chief end of man, but the car stops, they break ranks, and the agony is ended. Such is life to him who goeth down to the city in a street-car to save the expense of walking.

In these observations I do not often seek controversy or intentionally say aught calculated to offend; but when I run across anything so obviously idiotic as an editorial which appears in the Pacific Union, the Nationalist organ in San Francisco, I become reckless, and would be pleased rather than otherwise to have the writer know that I regard him not only as a man without reason, but also as a man without education or literary ability enough to teach a district school in Arkansas. I know it will be wasted space, but I am going to put this brainless man's slush in right here, where people can see what sort of hog-wash the readers of Nationalist papers have to swallow. Mr. Hines, editor, drools and drivels thus:

In the last number of the Arena, Col. Robert G. Ingersoll gets in his periodical confab with God. Many of his admirers had been supposing that the redoubtable Robert had pulverized his great adversary long, long ago, but since Priest Lambert gave him such a fearful dressing down, the colonel, it seems, has been greatly tormented with foreboding fears, that, after all, there may exist something or somebody superior to himself. This time he thinks he sees a plan to elevate his ancient enemy into undue prominence, so he mounts his fiery war-steed and rushes in to head off the divine coup d'état. This is the way he heralds the grand onset: "If God is allowed in the constitution, man must abdicate. There is no room for both." Well, for a small bit of superlative Agnostic twaddle, that surely caps the climax. What horrible hobgoblins fill the air before the excited imagination of this great Bombastes! [sic.]

We will suppose a case, and then leave it to Mr. Ingersoll himself to say if it would have made the least difference in the meaning or form of the document. Suppose, when Thomas Jefferson wrote the preamble to the Declaration of Independence, he had added one word and put it thus:

"We hold this truth to be self-evident, that God has created all men free and equal." That this form of statement would not in the least have done violence to either the opinions of the man or the import of the document itself is obvious to every candid and well-informed student. That Jefferson believed in a supreme lawgiver is evidenced by his well-known statement when speaking thus of the institution of slavery: "I tremble for my country when I think that God is just."

We are inclined to the opinion that Robert has been sorely disappointed sometime when he really thought a little divine help might have saved him from defeat and mortification. If we mistake not, it was about the time Brother Lambert was prodding him with his invincible logic, until, in a fit of despair, he concluded to go off to Europe, "and give up theological controversy."

Look at this little bit of profundity: "Government is founded upon force, and force should never interfere with the religious opinions of men." We had formed the opinion that our constitution and government was founded upon reason and justice. Force is not the fundamental principle in government, either human or divine. Force may be incidental to the administration of government, an element of conservation; but there is no place found for force in government until its functions are antagonized by the exercise of personal will. Here it is again, as smart as ever: "If a nation is Christian, will all the citizens go to heaven?" Why of course, Robert, where should they go? Hope you are not so hard-hearted as to wish them to go to the other place. Turn the question a little and see how it looks. Put it in this form: If the citizens of a nation are Christians, will they go to heaven? Well, that surely is profound; none but a simon-pure Agnostic could measure up to such wonderful heights. And thus rattles on the ship-shod reasoning, confounding proper and well-known definitions and distinctions, brushing aside the most obvious and settled principles of interpretation, all to show what a man can be when he says "in his heart there is no God." The main thing which should concern the people of this country at the present time is not so much to put God in the constitution as to keep the devil out. It will be found, we have no doubt, that God is abundantly able to take care of himself.

The reason why I judge that Mr. Hines is ignorant and illiterate is because he does not appear to know what he is talking about, or how to express the childish fancies which he mistakes for ideas. Hear the infant talk about Ingersoll's confab with God! I will risk a doughnut against Mr. Hines's life (which is giving him tremendous odds) that when he wrote that sentence he did not know the meaning of the word "confab." Then we have "foreboding fears," two words never used in that way by anyone but Mr. Hines? The writer doesn't seem, either, to understand ordinary military tactics. If Ingersoll is merely heading off a coup d'etat (not a coup d'tat) he is not making the onset; the attacking party does that. Nor can the word which "heralds" cap a climax. The heralding precedes, while the climax follows. A climax cannot be capped until it is reached. It follows the argument, and is not introduced in the proposition.

I beg leave to submit that if Mr. Jefferson, when he wrote the preamble to the Declaration of Independence (provided he is its author), had declared that "God has created all men free and equal," he would have done more than to add one word; he would have added a theological declaration for which he had no authority. There is a vast difference between saying that men are created, and telling who created them. The preamble, as it stands, leaves the reader free to decide whether men are created by God, nature, or their progenitors. To say that God created them is to say that neither of the others had a hand in the process. It does not require a "candid and well-informed student" to recognize this, so that even Mr. Hines ought to see it. But I beg leave, further, to submit that the Declaration of Independence is not under discussion. Colonel Ingersoll was objecting to God in the Constitution, an entirely different document. It differs from the Declaration as a legal statute differs from a general indictment. Mr. Hines, confounding the two, shows, as I said, that he does not know what he is talking about.

Government is founded upon force. If Mr. Hines thinks it is not, let him break a law, and then meet the judges with the plea that reason and justice are on his side. Was there reason or justice in the institution of slavery? Certainly not, yet our government once upheld it. Is there reason or justice in monopoly?

Our government certainly protects it. If our government is founded upon reason and justice, why replace it with Nationalism. Behind every law is the policeman's club and the convict's cell, and behind the ballot is the bullet. A government not founded upon force would be a mere system of ethics, a moral code, a chapter of beatitudes. It would be to our present government what the ideal is to the real; that is, what the plan of a house is to the building itself. As a general proposition, a clear-thinking person will write clearly. When a man muddles his words it is a pretty sure sign that his ideas are muddled also. So when we find Mr. Hines saying, "Well, that surely is profound; none but a simon-pure Agnostic could measure up to such wonderful heights," we recognize at once that he is ignorant of the meaning of the words he is using. He should know before writing for others to read that the profound reaches downward, and does not "measure up." He should know that the slipshod does not rattle; that the confounding of the proper and the well-known is not necessarily an offense against good morals, and that "brushing aside the most obvious and settled principles of interpretation" is a meaningless phrase.

As to God in the constitution, Colonel Ingersoll is right, for if God is the supreme ruler the people are not. The rule of God is a theocracy; of the people, a republic. In the one case government derives its powers from a source supposed to be higher than man, and public officials are servants of God, not of the people. It is the Catholic church over again. In the other case "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." Of course a man who cannot distinguish between profundity and height cannot be expected to recognize this important distinction.

Mr. Hines's closing remarks, that the main thing which should concern the people of this country is not so much to put God in the constitution as to keep the devil out, and that God can take care of himself, are a good example of the non sequitur. They have nothing to do with the case, though they form about the only coherent portion of the whole article.

But I grow weary. Mr. Hines makes me tired. Such defenders of the faith would fatigue the infinite.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

Snow continues to fall in the vicinity of Dunsmuir near Mt. Shasta, and all appliances for clearing the railroad tracks make small impression on the immense drifts. Roads are blockaded so that freight from the East is likely not to reach this coast for a month. For several days no mail arrived in San Francisco over the Central Pacific or from Oregon.—The disease known as influenza or la grippe is still spreading and is attended with fatal results in some cases where complicated with heart disease or pulmonary affections.—Three of the county jail breakers have been recaptured, among them the murderer McNulty.—The celebration of the Chinese new year began last Monday. It lasts about a week.—The rainfall for the season in California now amounts to 30 inches.—The Senate committee on appropriations at its meeting Jan. 18 agreed to report favorably the bill by Senator Hearst appropriating $1,000,000 for the purchase of a post-office site at San Francisco. This bill, it is generally understood, will supersede the Morrow deficiency bill for making good the $800,000 appropriation.—Gen. M. G. Vallejo, the veteran and pioneer, died at Sonoma Jan. 18, at the age of 82 years.—The University regents are discussing the proposition to erect a hotel on Mt. Hamilton for the accommodation of visitors to the Lick Observatory.—The influenza has attacked our Chinese population, and the sufferers complain of "too much hot inside."

An attempt was made to close the saloons of Denver last Sunday, but proved a failure, as 411 out of 418 of the saloons remained open.—A scheme is afoot to introduce Chinese hod-carriers and street workers in New York city to replace white men.—Walker Blaine, son of Secretary J. G. Blaine, died last week at Washington.—General Master Workman Powderly was arrested at Scranton, Pa., on the 18th charged with conspiracy. He will prosecute his prosecutor, Callighan, for malicious libel.—William Whitney Seymore, a prominent Gentile ranchman in Ashley valley, Utah, has been found dead in his bed, where he evidently had been shot while asleep. It is believed that the murder was committed by the Mormon Danites.

John Ruskin, the famous English critic, is pronounced insane.—It is now said that the scandal in which Sir Charles Dilke was implicated was a conspiracy, and that Dilke may yet be cleared and reinstated in politics and public esteem.—The German Parliament has rejected the bill proposing to exempt theological students from military duty.—Premier Crispi of Italy has caused the national legislature to pass a law secularizing some 2400 charitable institutions which have heretofore been in the hands of the Catholic clergy, and which have enjoyed an annual income aggregating $30,000,000. The pope is wild over the affair.

LETTERS ON THE LAND QUESTION.

SIR L. MALLET'S LETTER.

To the Editor of "The Times."

SIR: Mr. Frederick Greenwood's letter, and the leading article in "The Times" of to-day, on Mr. Herbert Spencer's recent letter upon this subject, leave little more to be said on several aspects of the question, but there are one or two points upon which I should be glad of an opportunity of adding a few remarks.

The passage in the "Political Institutions" quoted by Mr. Herbert Spencer has been long familiar to the students of his writings, and to some of them, who, like myself, are among his sincere admirers, has always been a subject of surprise and regret.

The whole extract should be read, but to save your space I confine myself to the concluding sentences, which are enough for my purpose:

There is reason to suspect that while private possession of things produced by labor will grow even more definite and sacred than at present, the inhabited area, which cannot be produced by labor, will eventually be distinguished as something which may not be privately possessed. As the individual, primitively owner of himself, partially or wholly loses ownership of himself during the militant regime, but gradually resumes it as the industrial regime develops; so, possibly, the communal proprietorship of land, partially or wholly merged in the ownership of dominant men during evolution of the militant type, will be resumed as the industrial type becomes fully evolved.

The analogy here suggested between the ownership of man by other men, or slavery, and the private ownership of land, with the inference drawn from it, that as the first has been abolished in civilized countries, the second may possibly share its fate, has always appeared to me essentially fallacious.

The principle of private property, so far as the term is applicable to human beings, has not in their case been abolished—the contrary, it has been signally vindicated.

The destruction of slavery asserted the right of every man to property in himself, while prohibiting the ownership of man by other men, both individually and collectively. It was the restitution of a right of property from a wrongful to a rightful owner. In order to render Mr. Spencer's analogy applicable, it seems to me that the right of ownership in one man by another, instead of being abolished altogether, should have been transferred, as it is proposed to do in the case of land, from the individual to the state.

But, however this may be, it seems clear that the principle which excludes the ownership of one man by another, rests upon the same grounds as that which includes private property in land—viz., that the general interests of society are best promoted by personal freedom.

There seems to be sufficient evidence that compulsory labor is less productive than free labor; and if this is so we may conclude, even setting aside all considerations of humanity or morality, that the interests of society are better promoted by free labor or property in one's self, than by slavery or property in others.

This is usually admitted, but it is necessary to insist upon what is always forgotten by those who declaim against private property in land—that this last institution also is an essential condition of personal freedom, as by no other means short of coercion can a due relation be maintained between demand and supply.

Whoever holds the land holds that which, being limited in extent (the only assumption on which the question arises), imposes on its possessor the function and duty, which he is bound in the interest of society, no less than his own, to perform, of restricting an undue pressure on the soil, whether for agricultural or urban purposes, whether for food or shelter, by the increasing wants of the population.

If the family is the economic unit, this object may be effected by the exercise of the personal responsibility and authority of its head in regulating supply, and by a gradual augmentation of its price and rent in restraining demand. When the limits of production or supply are reached, any additional population must migrate or be supported, if possible, by charity.

But whenever the economic unit is extended so as to include a whole community, this personal responsibility, and with it personal liberty, disappears. In a small district (a village or canton) where the conditions approximate to family or patriarchal life, the evil is mitigated; but in a large and complex society, to vest the property of the soil in the state—i.e., in a central government removed, as it must be, from all personal contact with individuals—is to throw upon it the paramount obligation of either regulating the increase of population or of providing food and shelter for increasing numbers by progressive inroads upon the accumulated capital of the country—in short, upon the net product, which is the only source of a progressive civilization. The first of these alternatives cannot be better described than in the words of Bastiat:

* Ce serait créer le plus faillible, le plus universel, le plus immédiat, le plus inquisitorial, le plus insupportable, et disons, fort heureusement, le plus impossible, de tous les despotismes que jamais cervelle de pacha ou de mufti ait pu concevoir.

The second course could only lead to the gradual pauperization and ultimate bankruptcy of any country which had the folly to embark in it. Such an experiment would be only comparable to that of a vast joint-stock company in which all comers were entitled to shares without paying for them.

The distinction drawn by Mr. Herbert Spencer, in common with the late Mr. Mill, between private property in land and private property in things produced by labor is one which I believe to have no economic justification whatever. It ignores the fundamental principle, on which the institution of private property is grounded—viz., that a due relation between demand and supply can be maintained in no other way consistently with personal freedom.

From this point of view the fact that the supply of land is practically limited, and that it is, therefore, a natural monopoly, renders it not less but more necessary that it should be allowed to be the subject of private appropriation.

Sir Henry Maine has summed up the whole question in a few words, which cannot be too often repeated:

There are two sets of motives, and two only, by which the great bulk of the materials of human subsistence and comfort have hitherto been produced and reproduced. One has led to the cultivation of the Northern States of the American Union from the Atlantic to the Pacific; the other had a considerable share in bringing about the agricultural and industrial progress of the Southern States, and in old days it produced the wonderful prosperity of Peru under the Incas. One system is economical competition, the other consists in the daily task, perhaps fairly and kindly allotted, but enforced by the prison or the scourge. So far as we have any experience to teach us, we are driven to the conclusion that every society of men must adopt one system or the other, or it will pass through penury to starvation. ("Popular Government").

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,
LOUIS MALLET.

THE new government of Brazil is said to be largely Masonic, and the Monitor (Catholic) thinks this state of affairs is bad for the country. Perhaps the Monitor would hold up Catholic Spain as a model nation.

THE widely read and popular list of books, the Humboldt Library of Science, is for sale at the office of FREETHOUGHT; single numbers, 15 cents; double numbers, 30 cents.

* That would be to create the most fallible, the most universal, the most immediate, the most inquisitorial, the most insupportable, and let us say, very fortunately, the most impossible of all the despotisms that ever the brain of pacha or of mufti has been able to conceive,

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

Before the ninth annual convention of the State Bar Association at Albany, N. Y., last Monday Col. Robert G. Ingersoll delivered an address upon the subject of "Crimes Against Criminals," in which, at the outset, he demonstrated that punishment by torture and death have failed to abate crime. Crimes were committed, said he, to punish crimes, and crimes were committed to prevent crimes. It is safe to say that governments have committed far more crimes than they have prevented. Colonel Ingersoll said: We know that diseases of flesh and blood are transmitted from one generation to another. Are diseases of the brain, deformities of a soul or mind, also transmitted? I am perfectly satisfied that there are millions of people incapable of committing certain crimes, and it may be true that there are millions more incapable of practicing certain virtues. We do not blame a man because he is not a sculptor, a poet, a painter, or a statesman. Are we certain that it does not require genius to be good?"

Coming down to the question of what can be done for the reformation of the criminal, Colonel Ingersoll said he should be treated with kindness. Every right should be given him consistent with the safety of society. He should neither be degraded nor robbed. Why should the state take without compensation the labor of criminals, and why should they, after having been imprisoned for years, be turned out without means of support? Would it not be far better to pay these men for their labor, lay aside their earnings, put this money at interest, so that when a convict is released he would have not merely enough money to pay his way back to the place from which he was sent, but enough to keep the wolf of crime from the door of his heart.

Referring to the question, What shall be done with hardened, habitual criminals? the speaker said: "Put one thousand hardened thieves on an island, compel them to produce what they eat and use, and I am almost certain that the large majority would be opposed to theft. Such a community would be self-supporting. Keep the sexes absolutely apart. Those who are beyond the power of reformation should not have the power to reproduce themselves. They should dwell apart, and dying, leave no heirs.

"The death penalty inflicted by government is a perpetual excuse for mobs. The greatest danger in a republic is a mob, and so long as states inflict the death penalty mobs will follow their example. If we are to change the conduct of men we must change their conditions. Extreme poverty and crime go hand in hand. Tenements and flats and rented lands are, in my judgment, enemies of civilization. They put a few in palaces and many in prisons."

In closing, Colonel Ingersoll said:

"Ignorance, filth, and poverty are missionaries of crime. As long as dishonorable success outranks honest effort, as long as society bows and cringes before great thieves, there will be little thieves enough to fill the jails."

IMMORTALITY A PRINCIPLE OF NATURE.

To the Editors of Freethought:

I through the favor of a friend several copies of FREETHOUGHT have fallen into my hands, and while I approve of its motives, allow me to say the "Materialistic" limits to which it is confined seem too narrow, hard, and finite to suit facts of infinitude which everywhere in nature do abound and speak unto our minds.

While the various laws of motion, change, and progress are everywhere in activity, evolving the higher from the lower, still there is nothing lost, even of the cruder elements and substances which we call real. Matter is immortal. And whether it always remains matter or is, in accordance with the evident tendency of all things, evolved into finer and more subtle, but none the less real, elements and forces of nature, such as the imponderable agents, vital energy, intelligence, and spirit, still we must believe, to be consistent, that the same immutable law of immortality preserves all

And if we admit, as we must, that matter in its lower or cruder forms is immortal, why should we doubt that the finer, the higher, the nearer perfect forms are obliterated? Is nature itself a failure? Are its laws trifling? Is reason a falsehood? If not, why this floundering in the dark?

In the light of natural law, in the face of instinctive truth, how can the enlightened reason or man doubt the immortality of that power, intelligence, wisdom, and will, which are the most evident and manifest of principles and realities within the comprehension of the living mind of man?

Now as to man's spirit. Is it not real? Is it not something? Is it not the superior of all earthly things, the real man himself? Materials have been called crude spirit, and the law of evolution seems to bear out the assertion.

In man's living body spirit is individualized. Though the body must resolve back to its elements, it is no proof that the subtle spirit will lose its individuality and identity, and be reabsorbed into the substances or vital forces of cruder nature. Even were such the case it is none the less immortal in principle and in fact, for nothing is lost.

Now, as to the religion of the Bible or any other book, creed, or ism, it is true or false just so far as it accords or is at variance with nature in fact, principle, or law. And just so far as you, my friends, aid in refuting error and in establishing truth you are doing what is duty and right. But remember your nature is just as human as others', and while we condemn in others superstition, intolerance, bigotry, narrowness, etc., see that ye bear no malice to others while you strive to avoid what in them you blame. Ditto your obedient servant,

S. H. HERRING.

Summit Santa Cruz Mountains, Los Gatos, Cal.

BIERCE ON THE CONSTITUTION.

As a coquette surviving her charms becomes a prude; as a rake shorn of his powers sets up as a moralist; so the Argonaut, outlasting its Pixley, has experienced religion. It is making a fight for the "recognition of God in the constitution;" but after reading what it has to say in the matter, God will, I think, regret that he has obtained recognition in the Argonaut.

The quality of the logic employed by the infinite ass conducting God's case in the Argonaut may be judged by the following sentence with which he concludes his latest, and let us hope his last, plea for the petitioner:

While we do not believe that it was necessary to raise this question at all, yet, now that it is raised, we hold that to exclude God from the constitution, by refusing to recognize him there, would be unconstitutional inasmuch as it would be giving a constitutional and governmental recognition of and pre-eminence to the no-God religion of the Atheists.

Let us analyze this. Acts of individuals are neither constitutional nor unconstitutional; nor can one "refuse" to do what he has not the power to do. We must assume, then, that this extraordinary writer means that it would be unconstitutional for congress and the state legislatures (I shall speak of them for convenience as the amending power) to refuse so to amend the constitution as to recognize God. But until the amending power is asked to amend it cannot "refuse;" that is to say, until an amendment is introduced and rejected, the constitution, as it stands, is constitutional. But not afterward; the rejection being unconstitutional, the constitution, lacking the unconstitutionally rejected amendment, would be unconstitutional!

The refusal to amend, being unconstitutional, would be void, invalid, inoperative; therefore, the rejected amendment would be a part of the constitution! By following the Argonaut person's logic to its legitimate conclusion we come to this interesting proposition: Whenever the recognizing amendment shall be formally submitted to the amending power, whatever action that power may take or not take is affirmative and adopts the amendment, or rather, submission and adoption are the same act and the amending power has nothing to do with it. Yet this measureless idiot, thinking that way and partly conscious that he so thinks, regrets the raising of the question! This is abnegation itself, but is it not also a hardy and indignant betrayal of his client?

I cannot willingly let go my hold of this uncommon animal—rhinaughtycurio innominatus: he seems all tail. Observe: The reason that it would be unconstitutional to refuse to "recognize God in the constitution," if asked to, is that the refusal would favor "the no-God religion of the Atheists." As no one can have a religion who does not believe in a God, there can be no such thing as a "no-God religion" to be favored. The refusal, therefore, would be unconstitutional because it would give "a constitutional governmental recognition of and pre-eminence to"—something which has not the advantage to exist!

INGERSOLL ON THE ADMINISTRATION.

The clubs at Washington are laughing over a remark attributed to Colonel Ingersoll, that this administration reminded him of a dispute between a man and his wife as to what they would have for their Christmas dinner. The man wanted turkey and the wife demanded duck, so they compromised on cabbage.

"I told Mr. Harrison the other day," the colonel is quoted as saying, "what I thought of his way of running things. He has been wasting the people's time in examining into the claims of every applicant for a place, from the cabinet secretaries down to the door-keepers. He has been in office more than ten months now, and he is still worrying over some of those cases that were laid before him the day he entered the White House. The longer he waits the more applicants arise, and when there are twenty applicants for one place the effect of his final decision is to make nineteen enemies and one friend, and what a friend that is!

"Why, a neighbor of mine who was among the first applicants for a certain office was kept waiting so long that he finally forgot all about it. The other morning I met him on the street and he called out: 'What news do you suppose I got to-day? That fool Harrison has appointed me.' When I told that story to the president he inquired, solemnly: 'Colonel Ingersoll, who was that man?' 'Mr. President,' I replied, 'you don't need to have me tell you. You've appointed a couple of thousand men, more or less, to office; just think that over and make a guess; you can't fail to hit the right one.'"

THE CLERGYMEN AND THE LEGISLATORS.

The clergymen of Washington, D. C., seem to have a notion that if they are diligent in business they will stand before congressmen if not before kings. A Washington paper says that one of the surprises the new congressman encounters upon his arrival in Washington is the interest manifested in his spiritual welfare. The surprise comes with the Saturday evening or Sunday morning mail. When the member picks up the big tinted envelopes, carefully superscribed, he is liable to imagine that social duties are about to be thrust upon him. The stationery is built upon the order of that used for receptions, dinners, weddings, and events of such character. But when the envelopes are opened and the heavy pasteboard is unfolded the congressman reads a cordially-worded invitation to attend church. The sanctuary, the hours of worship, the name of the pastor, and not infrequently some information about the subject of the discourse are set forth.

Leading churches of the various denominations in Washington maintain the invitation bureau as a part of their organization. The zealous officials in charge of this work keep track of all the prominent arrivals at the hotels and see to it that they receive invitations to attend church, if they are to be in the city over Sabbath. How well the work is done may be illustrated by the experience of Congressman Frank, of St. Louis, who arrived only yesterday. When he came down to breakfast this morning he found beside his plate five invitations from as many churches, and no two of them from the same denomination. Each inclosure assured the new member of the pleasure it would afford the church to see him in the congregation at to-day's services.

The Bookstore is Opened.

Our live and Liberal contemporary, FREETHOUGHT, has found more commodious quarters at 838 Howard street, where it is the intention to open a Liberal bookstore in connection with the paper. The office is on the ground floor, and the handsome sign in the window enables friends to find it readily. This change in the affairs of FREETHOUGHT indicates a prosperity which Messrs. Putnam and Macdonald well deserve.—Carrier Dove.

THE YOUNG PREACHER AND THE FREETHINKER.

The Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones recently preached a sermon in Chicago on "A Search for an Infidel," in the course of which he said:

Some eighteen years ago, in the earlier years of my ministry, I was in the way of hearing much of a famous Infidel, who lived in the southwestern part of Wisconsin. He was an old pioneer, who had endured the privations of territorial life, acquired position and influence, drawn to him the free-thinking element of the county, and they were accustomed to gather for many years on each Fourth of July in a great Infidel picnic, to commemorate the life of Thomas Paine and to study his words. These picnics became famous throughout that part of the state. The ablest speakers available were always employed. Something like this were the reports that came to me through the lips of an old neighbor and admirer of this famous Infidel. Preachers, after years of praying for him and arguing with him, had learned to leave him alone, to avoid him. I felt a growing curiosity to see this man. I wanted to look into his eyes, to feel of his hand, to see and hear for myself how a real Infidel would look and talk. And so I started out on a journey of a hundred and fifty miles, forty or more of them over land, by one of those rickety old stages that are rapidly passing out of the world. Well do I remember the tremor and hesitation, the inward quaking with which I traveled over the beautiful rolling prairies of his county. How my inexperienced heart dreaded to meet him, and how I cudgelled my brain that long day, trying to find out what to say to that group of Infidel farmers. For I was to speak in the evening, in the little hall at the cross-road. This famous Infidel was to be my deacon for the evening. For miles before I reached my destination, I encountered, to my consternation, hand-bills tacked up on school-house doors and on the guide-boards, heralding my coming. When the stage arrived at the little village, the platform of the one tavern in the place was occupied with quite a group of curious people who had come to see what kind of a preacher it was that Father Weatherly would be interested in. It was a chilly but bright and beautiful autumnal evening, the sun was just setting in the west. They showed me the home-like farm-house in which my Infidel dwelt, and I lost no time in finding my way to him. I see the Infidel now in his white shirt sleeves, tall, erect, venerable, for he was nearly eighty; his long white hair gave him a prophet-like appearance. I found him in his barn-yard, with the sheep, cattle, and horses pressing around him with the fearless familiarity that bespeaks kind attendance. So he came to me—his penetrating blue eye seemed to pierce quite through me. He did not quite feel at ease evidently in the presence of a preacher not bent on polemics, but when he found how much worse scared I was than he, his voice became very tender and his ways so fatherly. "Come to the house," he said, "I think you and I can talk without quarrelling." They were precious hours, and all too few, that I spent in the presence of that independent soul; hours in which he revealed to me his loneliness, and disclosed his rich humanitarian interests, his love of liberty, which evidently had hardened in many spots into a stalwart defiance to conventionalism, and a severe intolerance of the intolerant. That evening's discourse was a poor enough affair. I only remember that I had a keen sense that I did not succeed in saying the word most needed by such a man; he had lived deeper, longer, and in many directions broader than I, but I found a sermon in seeing how the young girls and boys loved the old man, how they snuggled up to him for a word, or a caress. It was like reading a chapter out of the gospel of St. John, to see how he knew by name each one of the turbulent raft of boys that come and go at such meetings. Sore with dissatisfaction with myself, his words fell as a benediction when he said, "If somebody had told me when I was a boy that a preacher would be permitted to talk like that, I think I would have been a preacher myself." "You would have been a good one if you had, I tell you," responded a neighbor. "When I was a boy," he continued, "they read one out of the church because he thought it more important to prove that a black man had a soul than to sing hallelujah tunes; because a few weren't going to be burned forever with the great crowd." I have never been at that town since, but a dozen years later, or so, I assisted in the dedication of a soldier's monument at the country-seat of that county, and I remember what a magnificent record the town had written for itself during the war. Father Weatherly had been gathered to his rest, I was told, for many years, but I fancied that between the lines of that record I could hear the ringing sentences of Paine's "Rights of Man." I fancied that those Fourth of July picnics that enforced the searching principles of the "Age of Reason" must have had something to do with the enkindling of that love of freedom in the hearts of the young men who marched away so willingly to die for the "equal rights of men."

I went to see an Infidel but didn't find him. The very colts in the pasture denied the charge. However others on that noble prairie may have showed their faith without works, Father Weatherly showed his faith by his work. I have taken many a missionary trip since that one of eighteen years ago, but never one that left a more sacred and helpful memory, for there I learned with something of the surprise of Peter in the centurion's house, "that God is no respecter of persons, but that in every nation, they that work righteousness are accepted by him," although I had supposed I had known it before.

THE EXPLANATION.

FREETHOUGHT, a Liberal paper published in San Francisco, says:

Are not the Mormon church, the Catholic church, and all other churches perfectly consistent in claiming supreme power? If God is supreme and if the churches are the custodians of his word, why should they not speak with authority? That is the question.

No church calling itself Christian is consistent in claiming supreme power. God alone has such power, and he has never delegated it to any man or to any body of men. The church can of right, as a church, have nothing to do with earthly governments. The great head of the church himself declared, "My kingdom is not of this world," and his followers cannot go beyond his word without forfeiting the right to call themselves by his name. Christ gave but one commission to his church, namely, to go into all the world and make disciples; this the apostles did by persuading men, and that is as far as the authority of the church extends. Any church which claims more than this is not Christian, though it may be so called, but anti-Christian. God has promised this world to his people, that is, to the meek (Matt. v, 5), but he has not yet made them lords over it, much less has he authorized them to take it for themselves. The true Christian is a missionary, not a politician.—American Sentinel.

THE WRONG SIDE OF THE BOULDER.

When I read in the Argonaut of January 6 the criticism on Ingersoll's recent article, "Why I am an Agnostic," I was at a loss to surmise whether the able and distinguished editor had been seized with a severe attack of "la grippe," had been to Oakland, heard Mrs. Woodworth and got "the power," or, which is most probable, the many hundred masses he boasts of having purchased had begun to take effect while he is yet in the flesh. A favorite Sunday pastime with me when a boy was to climb a lofty peak of the Sierras, and with pick or bar detach a block of slate or granite boulder, and watch it roll and crash down the mountain side. I could roll a boulder down that a thousand men could not roll up the mountain. The ability of the editor aforesaid is frankly conceded, but from my standpoint he seems to be on the wrong side of the boulder. He says, "Man is under obligation carefully to collect and calmly consider all the evidences in the case;" that he should get his "mind in that state of mental polarity," etc. This is also admitted. But I would like to ask him if after having carefully collected and calmly considered all the evidences in the case, he finds it possible to reach that state of mental polarity that enables him to believe the New Testament account of the birth of Christ, and is the polarity sufficiently vivid to make his faith strong in the Gadarene miracle, on which occasion devils enough were extracted from one man to demoralize and drive into the sea two thousand hogs. I presume it is because I am so wicked, but my sympathy has always been with the poor fellows that lost their pork; and as I gaze at my scantily furnished larder, and think of that amount of deviled ham buried beneath the "sad sea waves," sadness comes o'er my spirit, and I exclaim in the language of the psalmist:

What a pile of bacon there might have been,
If those devilish pigs had been kept in a pen!

Mr. Pixley having assumed the character of "defender of the faith," I would like to ask him by what course of reasoning he reaches the conclusion that man's morals are improved and civilization promoted by a belief in an absurdity? Does he find in his study of history, the civilization produced by sixteen centuries of Christianizing influence much superior to that prevailing in Greece and Rome prior to the advent of Christ, when gods were much more numerous than at present, and apparently fully as powerful to avert calamity and alleviate human suffering?

Would he be willing to exchange the skepticism that produced Humboldt, Darwin, Ingersoll, Pixley, for Christianity that produced Constantine, Torquemada, John Calvin, Henry the Eighth, Father Gleeson, and Sam Jones? Does he consider it evidence of ignorant depravity that the largest halls of our great cities will hardly accommodate the audiences that invariably greet the man, the "hight and front of whose offending" is that he earnestly advocates human liberty?

He closes his criticism with the assertion that "God still lives." Was that fact apparent during the long, gloomy night of terror, the reign of the Inquisition, when devout believers in the same God whose cause he so ably defends were exercising their ingenuity to extract all the agony possible from the bodies of their helpless victims? Was it quite evident to Servetus, while being slowly roasted by command of that pure Christian, John Calvin?

Was the power and loving kindness of the God that "still lives" conspicuous in the Johnstown disaster?

Could he have averted that calamity, and would not, or would he and could not? As one or the other must have been the case, will Mr. Pixley kindly inform us which horn of the dilemma he takes; and then state the points of superiority in his God to some of the ancient deities that have ceased to exist? Other holy men have hurled their little boomerangs at "liberty's champion." Father Lambert accuses him of both mendacity and plagiarism. The Rev. Patrick Cronin, in a very dignified manner, calls him "the little fraud." The G. O. M. hurls thunderbolts at his devoted head; and now comes their most powerful ally. The invincible Frank couches his lance, and the "pope's Irish" get a rest for a week. We tremble for the fate of our noble leader, while there is a malignant grin along the whole saintly line. Father Gleeson sends a pressing invitation to the recent convert to come over and partake with him a glass of "rale ould poteen." His holiness Leo XIII. ceases making faces at the Bruno monument long enough to cable his blessing with the earnest injunction to hurry up and die while his zeal is yet warm and his salvation certain. The G. O. M. expresses his gratitude for so able a coadjutor. Sankey sings with renewed fervor, "Where is My Wandering Boy To-night?" while the angelic host in harmonious unison joyously respond, "213 Grant avenue."

Quoting again the illustrious editor, Ingersoll "still lives;" his eye has the same merry twinkle, and his girth diminisheth not. Try the other side of the boulder, Mr. Pixley, and see how much easier it rolls.

A. W. P.

HENRY GEORGE will deliver a lecture on the Land Question, in Metropolitan Temple, corner Fifth and Jessie streets, on Tuesday evening, February 4, 1890, under the auspices of the Single Tax Society. Tickets can be procured from any member of the Single Tax Society, or from any of the following committee of arrangements: James G. Maguire, 334 Kearny street; H. L. Pleace, Nineteenth and Castro streets; David Farquharson, corner Powell and Eddy streets; Jos. Leggett, 420 California street; A. H. Sanborn, county surveyor's office; Thos. Watson, 945 Howard street; Jas. H. Barry, Weekly Star, 429 Montgomery street.

GRAND PAINE CELEBRATION

UNION SQUARE HALL, 421 POST STREET,

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JANUARY 29, 1890,

UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE

SAN FRANCISCO FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

PROGRAMME.

1. GRAND CHORUS, United German Singing Sections of San Francisco, under the leadership of Prof. F. Fischer.

San Francisco Turn Verein,
San Francisco Krieger Verein,
Germania Club,
Harmonie Gesang-Verein
Vorwärts Verein.

2. ADDRESS, Herbert Miller.
3. SONG, Mrs. Clark, the Misses Wheeler, and Mr. E. T. Hannaford.
4. ADDRESS, Mr. F. Schuenemann-Pott.
5. SONG, Miss Lillie Arper.
6. ADDRESS, Thomas Curtis.
7. RECITATION, C. F. Burgman.
8. SONG, Miss Evangeline Ballou and Miss Mate Hildebrande.
The exercises begin at 8 o'clock sharp, and will be closed with a sociable and dance from 10 to 12 o'clock.

COMMITTEE OF INTRODUCTION.—Mr. and Mrs. Schou, Mrs. Grace Macdonald, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Eastman, Mr. Emil S. Lemme, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Faust, Geo. E. Macdonald, F. L. Browne, Mrs. C. A. Frost.

ONE, TWO, THREE, AND THERE YOU ARE.

Mr. Bertram Keightly, the London disciple of Madam Blavatsky, has recently been lecturing in San Francisco, where he has found large audiences. His last lecture was on the "Three Stages of a Theosophist's Life," in which he discoursed as follows:

"The Theosophical Society is not a school of magic and has nothing to offer to those bent on purely selfish ends. Yet it must not be supposed that we expect the Theosophist to be free from selfishness at the beginning of his membership. There are three stages of his life.

"We find in the first stage students who have joined through finding in Theosophy a clue to much that is dark in the Western system of metaphysics; students of science who have joined for the sake of light on the genesis of man and the elements, on the relation of the moon to the earth and kindred topics; together with others who have joined through interest in its teachings as to religious symbolism. These find in one another's society sympathetic and elevating influence, yet they gradually become satiated with intellectualism, with words and phrases, and come to think that they are making no headway and that Theosophy is all empty talk. They are to blame for this satiety. When a man has taken a certain amount of knowledge he cannot receive more without giving out some of his store.

"When they come to understand this truth and to act upon it they progress to the second state. In this state the Theosophist desires to experience a love of the universal brotherhood of mankind, and, therefore, wants to serve his fellows and to learn how best to do so. To this end it is that he now seeks for broader knowledge. And just as he works for others does he improve spiritually. His sympathies quicken, his grasp of spiritual truth grows firmer, and his consciousness of spiritual joy grows more acute. Then it is that possibilities of usefulness to the human race productive of pure delight superior to worldly wealth and honors open more and more clearly to his view. The most of our members are in this state, and for them the dawn of spiritual perfection has come. The results of the Theosophist's life in this stage are calm self-study, growth of charity, increase of tolerance and a readiness to take truth wherever found. With the deeper insight into spiritual law comes less resentful feelings as to the trials and sorrows of the world. Hope grows as he comes to see the true path more clearly, and there comes besides determination to so prepare conditions as to increase his usefulness to others in the lives that are before him.

"Progressing, he passes by self-study into the third state, where the main object of life is not his fame, fortune, family, or the like, but the service of the whole human race, life being dedicated to duty. In this stage the Theosophist must neglect no duty to his fellows even to promote his own spiritual welfare. Few have yet attained to this stage, and few of the few—perhaps only one or two—have reached the true unselfishness, which is the desideratum of Theosophy."

"LOGIC IS LOGIC."

The Jesuit father, Joseph Sasia, lectured in St. Ignatius College Hall, the other evening, on "Modern Warfare against Catholicism," before a very large audience.

Among other things, as reported in the Chronicle, he said:

Lately a new enemy has entered the lists to combat the church. Scientists dispute divine revelation as taught by the church of Rome. Her Christianity, they say, had been weighed in the balance and found wanting. They say if we would study the wonders of this world we must renounce all hope of the possession of a better. But from them Catholics had nothing to fear. There was no conflict between science and religion. Those who maintained that there was no God, had to admit that there was no religion, which was the worship of God. Therefore, if there was no religion, science could have no conflict with it.

Here is logic for you. It forcibly reminds one of a proposition made by a down East crank to keep the squirrels from poaching on the corn-fields. He said he had noticed that the squirrels invariably began with the outside rows. He proposed to circumvent them by having no outside rows!

Later in his lecture, Father Sasia said: "Science and religion (Catholicism) are twin-sisters and go forward hand in hand." The logic of facts, which is the logic of this age, shows that these "twins" have been and now are anything but amicable. History demonstrates that for hundreds of years science and religion instead of walking forward together, hand in hand, have faced each other threateningly with clenched hands, fighting ever by the way, and that while science has gone forward, religion has retreated and is fast being driven to the wall.

"Logic is logic," says Oliver Wendell Holmes, in his "One Hoss Shay;" but there is no logic like the logic of facts. Father Sasia, like many another lecturer, in the church and out of it, draws upon his imagination for his facts, and not upon passing events or the pages of authentic history. In short, Father Sasia, while a popular lecturer and a brilliant rhetorician, is no logician. So far as facts are concerned, and legitimate conclusions founded on those truths, he is all at sea. He either does not aim at telling the truth, or he shows an admirable skill in missing the mark. Being a Jesuit, he probably does not aim at it, but considers it not only allowable but commendable to lie—lie publicly and emphatically—for the glory of God, or what with him is the self-same thing, the good of the Catholic church.

J. L. H.

PREACHING TO PREACHERS.

Every Sabbath morning the preachers of the various denominations, says the Salt Lake Tribune, assume the right to tell their congregations of the love of God and the wickedness of the world. While that is just the thing for them to do, the thought hardly ever strikes any one that a layman has as much right to preach to a preacher as the preacher has to preach to the laymen. Taking advantage of that right we have thought best to preach a little to the preachers to-day.

Just now, brethren, you have in your thirst to hunt out sin and strangle it, discovered that the Sunday newspaper is one of the children of Satan and must be downed. We read that in one eastern city the clergy have combined; they are going to boycott all who advertise in or subscribe for the Sunday paper; they are going to hire carriages and rush from church to church on Sunday evening and deliver half a dozen sermons each on this theme, and try to rouse the people to a sense of the awful sin of reading the daily newspaper on the Sabbath day.

Dear brethren, permit us to assure you in advance that you will ignominiously fail. The reason is because you ought to. In the first place, your method is both cowardly and unlawful. The boycott comes from lands that have been priest-ruled and king-ruled until the people are utterly wretched. There is nothing American about it, and when you invoke it the result will be a boomerang. You will singe your own pulpits. You will never hit the mark you fondly aim at. In the next place, your hiring carriages and rushing around like mad, on a Sunday night and trying to unload one sermon upon half a dozen congregations will be a failure, for it betrays an arrogance and intolerance on your part which the American people are too fair to approve of.

Again, brethren, you are revealing a narrow-mindedness which is pitiable. You cannot, if you try, stifle the thoughts of people; you cannot lay a spell on men's minds on Saturday night and hold it there until after the clock strikes at midnight on the next night, and the Sunday morning paper is the breakfast which the man of affairs enjoys as much on Sunday morning, as he does his beans and hot brown bread. If you but knew it, the ordinary mortal goes to hear one of you preach on a Sunday morning in a great deal better frame of mind after reading the morning paper than he would without it.

Again, brethren, you have been a long time trying to convert the world, and still there is a vast host outside who belong to the church universal. As you have in your churches some hypocrites and cowards, so outside are a good many men and women in the great host, who have hearts as gentle as your own, impulses as tender and generous, and to many thousands of these the Sunday paper comes like a balm. If they did not have it they would read something worse. Not having it would not induce them to go and listen to you, but having it they might run upon one of your sermons and read it with pleasure and profit.

Again, brethren, did you never stop to think that, maybe, as the steam engine, the magnetic telegraph, the electric light, and the labor saving machine were given to man in these latter days for his good, so, perhaps, the daily paper was permitted to be born for a like reason. Now in the first years of the steam engine many boilers exploded, many lives were lost and much property destroyed. Was the engine boycotted and ruled out on that account? Hardly, but the efforts were to learn the habits of the invisible fluid and to improve the mechanism of the boiler. So now many a line-man is killed in using electricity through imperfect knowledge. But the use of it is not abandoned; rather the effort is to master what is still a secret about it.

So, brethren, would it not reveal more wisdom on your part to struggle to make the Sunday paper better until it should become a supplement to your work in making mortals better in this life, and in giving them more hope for the life to come?

(While the collection is being taken up, we will read the hymn commencing—

Of all God's gifts to sinful man,
Sweet charity is best;
It fills with grace his narrow span,
It makes his life most blessed.
He sees but good in every plan
That promises more light to man.

Benediction).

—Salt Lake Tribune, Sunday, Jan. 5.

WHY I AM AN AGNOSTIC.

In an editorial of the Argonaut, Jan. 6, I find some remarkable statements. It seems almost incredible that a journal so widely read should contain such unmitigated rot as I shall now lay before the readers of FREETHOUGHT. Among the first sentences of the editorial criticism we find this:

"This article (Why I am an Agnostic), like all of Mr. Ingersoll's articles, smacks more of the won't believe than the don't believe spirit. . . . There is such a thing as color-blindness, and there is such a thing as truth-blindness, and the sadness and danger of it all is that in both cases the victim is unconscious of his deprivation.

"Mr. Ingersoll opens his article with the following: 'The same rules or laws of probability must govern in religious questions as in others. There is no subject and can be none concerning which any human being is under any obligation to believe without evidence.'

"But," protests the Argonaut, "men are under obligations to carefully collect and calmly to consider the evidence in the case. Tom Paine confessed that when he wrote his 'Age of Reason' he had not read the New Testament through." A Daniel come to judgment! This falsehood about Thomas Paine has been exposed and exploded a thousand times in the Liberal journals of the country. Mr. Paine never said that he had not read the New Testament through when he wrote the Age of Reason. He never wrote anything like it.

There is no excuse for repeating this mouldy chestnut of orthodoxy. Especially is there no excuse for it by a writer who preaches to us the necessity of duly finding out the truth before making affirmations. Hear him: "But men are under obligation carefully to collect and calmly to consider the evidence in the case."

The writer who can thus stultify himself in two sentences is certainly overworked. He should have a vacation. The verdict against him is in his own words: "There is such a thing as color-blindness, and there is such a thing as truth-blindness, and the sadness and danger of it all is that in both cases the victim is unconscious of his deprivation."

Among other brilliant utterances of this writer is the following: "The existence of an intelligent Being who transcends our comprehension is quite demonstrable."

It did not, however, occur to the writer as of sufficient importance to shed the power of his electric light on the subject, nor did he even kindly refer us to any writings of other men similarly endowed with himself who had made the demonstration. Is it a matter of wonderment, then, that orthodoxy should remain what it is, when it must subsist upon such pabulum as this—slander and stupidity?

W. S. BELL.

Oakland, Cal.

ELDER CRUZAN'S PLAIN TALK.

"The Cry of the Children" was the subject chosen by Rev. J. A. Cruzan for his sixth lecture in the "Plain Talk" series at the Third Congregational church last week. He prefaced his remarks by saying that the neglect of children produces physical results that are alone begetting a race of pigmies.

In the English armies it has been found necessary to reduce the standard of height because the yeomen are not the class they were fifty years ago. At the last French conscription one-half the men drawn from the factories were rejected as unfit for service.

"The same physical conditions," he continued, "exist in this country. Visit the jute mills and observe the boys engaged there. Their ages range from eight to sixteen years. Few have received any education, and the work makes them poor physically.

"The moral and physical decay among girls employed in mills is driving them into saloons. They come out of the mills so tired in body and mind, that all their thoughts are concentrated on something to drink. There are shops where the air is redolent with tobacco smoke, and it is a disgrace to apprentice little ones in these places.

"Listen to the cry of children that comes out of the slums of every great city. What is to be done with this lowest stratum of society? We must act on these children or they will act on us. If children grow up in squalor and neglect they will form armies of brazen women, and besotted, stunted men. These will take possession of our society. There is a terrible force in depravity. The well-being of each individual is the vital well-being of all individuals.

"Between the greed of employers for cheap labor and the poverty of parents, millions of children are deprived of an education. If we are to have a good support for our government, these children should be in public schools.

"Our public-school system needs revision. For fifteen or sixteen years the state puts your boy through all the grades of the grammar and high school. Then what does he know? Can he earn his living? Of the inmates of the state prison 22 per cent are illiterate, while 53 per cent never learned a trade. There are three ways of getting a living: Working, begging, and stealing.

"The first and second methods are closed in our public schools, and the third means San Quentin or Folsom. There is no such thing as a boy learning a trade now as he did twenty-five years ago. The state prison seems the place for that."

A PIOUS LUNATIC.

News has been received at Raleigh, N. C., that Carson L. Powell, a Baptist missionary to Algiers, North Africa, has murdered his daughter. He went out distributing Bibles on December 21, returned to his house, took up a Bible and began reading. Little Ruth, his three-year-old daughter, sat on his knee, as was her custom, and was prattling to him, when he suddenly took a knife from his pocket and cut her throat.

Dr. Leach, of New York, who is also a missionary working with Powell, happened to be in the house at the time, and did everything possible to save the life of the child, but without avail. Powell is now confined in a French hospital in Algiers.

Powell had frequently given evidence of possessing an unsound mind. Once at a Baptist state convention here, he demanded that he be sent to Africa as a missionary, but his application was refused. He procured some gayly colored calico, ribbons, and hairpins, returned to the church, went into the basement, stripped himself of his clothing, wrapped the calico and ribbons about him, fastened them to his body by sticking pins deep into the flesh, and then walked into the auditorium while the convention was in session.

He secured some work as a missionary in North Carolina. While traveling he met a young woman and they became engaged. The day preceding the one set for the marriage he tried on his wedding suit and found the coat too small. He regarded this as an indication from the Lord that he should not marry, and positively refused to fulfill the engagement. His fiancée became insane over this, and afterward died in an insane asylum in Raleigh.

It is Still in Progress.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Without committing myself to any popular craze (especially woman suffrage), I am willing to do all in my power against holy treason, and for the protection of personal rights and individual liberty. I hope to see FREETHOUGHT a permanent success. The bookstore enterprise I conceive to be a grand idea. To my opinion, such an establishment, which can restore to the reading public all the old poetical and infidel writings which have been suppressed by the venality, cowardice, and religious toadyism of the times, will do more for the advancement of Liberalism than anything yet undertaken. If the enterprise is still in progress, you can call on me at any time, for $10—the price of two shares. Yours very respectfully, J. C. P.

From Utah.

To the Editors of Freethought:

It is so long since I saw in FREETHOUGHT, whose weekly visitations are indeed welcome, a line from Utah, that a few items may not prove wholly without interest, so if you can find anything readable in the following notes, they are at your disposal.

Last Friday one of our hit-'em-from-the-shoulder Liberals walked up to the court house with a gracious smile on his honest face and a loving form leaning on his manly arm. The purpose of the visit was matrimony, and the interested parties were H. S. Brooks and Emma Keyte, of Lake Shore. Our gentile probate judge tied the knot that made the twain one, but the writer refused to sign the marriage contract, because he was not allowed to kiss the bride. Long life and happiness to Mr. and Mrs. Brooks, as they tread the rugged path of life. May love be their constant companion, and reason their never-failing guide!

This winter, Dave Clarke, whom Mr. Putnam will doubtless remember as the foremost Liberal at Payson, has, with his family, removed to Provo. Mr. Kinison, also of Payson, has likewise cast his lot with us. A number of other Liberals from Colorado and Kansas settled in the town, but they don't seem to be intensely active in the cause. We have no organizations here, which is very much to be regretted.

Provo is booming just now. It is a beautiful place—a veritable gem of the mountains, as it is facetiously dubbed. The gentiles are pouring in, and we expect within two years to redeem the town from the rule of Mormon priestcraft.

Liberalism seems to have gone to sleep since the campaign of 1888-1889. During those two years we had with us, for a season, such bright Liberal lights as Messrs. Putnam, Underwood, Reynolds, and Bell. Dr. York and Mr. Ellis labored many weeks in the territory. The work of those men bore good fruit, but not a single voice has been heard for months in the advocacy of Freethought and its principles.

It was, therefore, all the more refreshing to read in last Sunday's Salt Lake Tribune, the great gentile paper in Utah, a sound and splendidly written editorial entitled "Preaching to Preachers." I have clipped it from my paper and inclose herewith, in the hope that you will think it of sufficient merit to reprint it in FREETHOUGHT.

Before closing, I wish to express my good wishes for your sturdy paper, and may it grow in circulation, power, and influence during the coming year, E. M. 290. Yours fraternally, A. B. TOMSOM.

Provo, Utah, January 7.

Not the Last nor the Least.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Inclosed you will find a money order for $25, the amount of my subscription to the Freethought Publishing Company. I suppose I am about the last subscriber to pay up; wish I could have done it sooner, but we can always draw some crumbs of comfort from our disappointments. So I console myself with the thought that if I am the last to pay, there must be some money in the Freethought treasury by this time. I received a copy of Secular Thought a few days ago and wish I was able to subscribe for it. I was born near where it is published, fifty-seven years ago. As I sit here writing and look out on the mountain covered with snow I can imagine that I am back in Canada this Sunday morning and hear my father's command, "Come, get ready and go to church." No matter how deep the snow or how cold the weather might be, I had to go. How little he thought that at fifty-seven his son would be standing on the very outposts of the advanced thought of the age. Had our friend Watts undertaken to publish Secular Thought in those days he would have found the climate of Toronto too hot for him. Well, thanks to the fearless courage of a few, the human race is improving. Even the Canadians will get there after awhile.

With my best wishes to all in the FREETHOUGHT office, and a hope that it will prove a success in every way, I remain yours in friendship. Felton, Cal. I. H. CURTIS.

[Mr. Curtis is by no means at the rear of the procession in the matter of remitting for shares. The long siege of rainy weather and the consequent hard times have had a serious effect upon the Liberals of the coast, as upon others; but as the skies brighten again we hope there will be a corresponding brightening of the financial horizon.—ED.]

San Jose Secular Union.

To the Editors of Freethought:

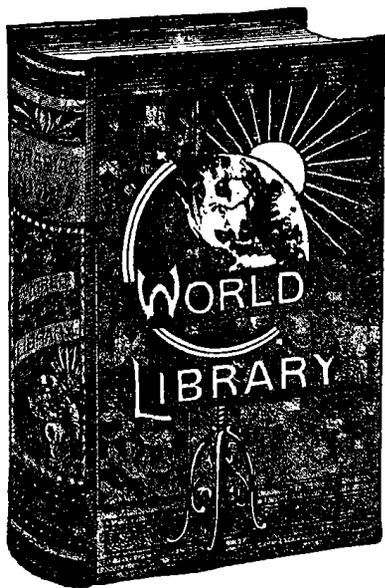

A very enthusiastic meeting of the San Jose Secular Union was held in our city last Sunday. Upon motion of one of the members, the same officers, who have so faithfully served during the past year, were re-elected for the year 1890, as a whole, viz., R. H. Schwartz, president; A. R. Woodhams and L. R. Titus, vice-presidents; L. Magenheimer, treasurer; Mrs. R. H. Schwartz, secretary. A great deal of interest is felt in your new enterprise, the Freethought Publishing Company, as well as the convention to be held in your city, the 25th and 26th inst. With the best wishes of our society for the success of this convention, we inclose $5 toward the expenses of the same.

San Jose, Jan. 18.

MRS. R. H. SCHWARTZ, Secretary.

Plain Home Talk.

The Freethought Publishing Company has on hand a large number of these books, "Plain Home Talk," in both English and German (Offene Volks-Sprache und Gesunder Menschen-Verstand). And our present stock has a history. Some time ago a Catholic publishing house in this city ordered a large lot from the Murray, Hill company, and received the books. Before selling them, however, the proprietor submitted a copy to his priest, who at once placed it on the index expurgatorius and prohibited its sale by Catholics. Under the circumstances, the Catholic dealer never paid for the books, and they have fallen into our hands. As we do not enjoy the benefit of a priestly censor, we shall send the book to any address at the regular price, $1.50, postpaid. We may add that "Plain Home Talk" is a splendid work and deserves the circulation of hundreds of thousands which it has attained.

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRIG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY. A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAME.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDFORD.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be Obeyed."

KING SOL MON'S MISSIONS.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESU.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last an heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALL A QUARTER IN THE HEART OF AFRICA.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW WAR BIAN NIGHS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavillion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the Invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder-worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portraiture of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. PRESCOTT.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll,) with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated late scientific discoveries.

TRIP OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

ÆSOP'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

PLAIN HOME TALK

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

FREETHOUGHT

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Samuel P. Putnam, Lecturer and Editorial Correspondent | Geo. E. Macdonald, Editor and Business Manager.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

Freethought Publishing Co

This journal is devoted, religiously, to the eradication of all forms of superstition, Christian or otherwise; and politically, to the advocacy of those principles inculcated by the

Nine Demands of Secularism.

FREETHOUGHT is not committed to any of the current methods of social reform, but its columns are open to the discussion of all of them. It welcomes agitation and discussion of all subjects, religious, political, ethical, and social.

Its Correspondents are all who have anything valuable to say on the above questions; who know how to express their thoughts in readable English, and who desire for an audience several thousand of the most intelligent people of the country.

FREETHOUGHT has no set list of contributors of articles written to order. It aims to give the news of the Liberal movement everywhere. It believes that the seeds of Freethought have been planted, and that the great work now before us is to cultivate their growth.

The paper circulates from Florida to Alaska, and from this coast to Maine.

ADVERTISERS

who wish to reach large numbers in all parts of the Pacific Slope will find space in its columns a remunerative investment.

EVERY LIBERAL THINKER

should read FREETHOUGHT. They will find it lively and at the same time in dead earnest; plain and direct, without being offensive.

Subscriptions—One year, $2; Six months $1. Four new subscriptions in one remittance, $5.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT
WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc, worth $35 for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do., $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send, line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
" " Forks	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" " Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded.

Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

IF YOU WANT TO KNOW

All about the human body, in health and disease, nature's secrets revealed, How life is perpetuated, health maintained, disease induced, death delayed, How to marry your own mate, and transmit wealth of health to posterity, Read the most popular, comprehensive and useful book treating of which Dr. Eadon declares to be "priceless in value, new, startling and very instructive." The latest edition is more complete and valuable than ever, having been re-written in important parts. It contains AN APPENDIX of great practical utility made up of

MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

OVER 200 PRESCRIPTIONS OR RECIPES

For Acute and Chronic Disorders Common to Adults and Children, a complete table of poisons and their antidotes (from highest authorities), illustrated directions for resuscitating the drowned (prepared for Health Boards), and hygienic rules for care of infants; also

ORIGIN OF LIFE AND DEVELOPMENT OF MAN,

tracing the embryo from conception, through all stages to birth, illustrated by Over 20 Beautiful Colored Lithographs, on fine plate paper, such as are to be found only in high priced, imported medical works; and to illustrate the anatomy, and relative positions of important parts, each book is also embellished with

THREE ELEGANT CHROMO CHARTS OF VITAL ORGANS.

Murray Hill Publishing Co., 7129 East 28th St., N. Y.

Circulars Free. Address

Price, cloth bound, by mail, $1.50; Liberal Discounts to agents.

PROFESSOR (to class)—There is, of course, no one thing, that can be called a key to knowledge. One of the big girls—Then what use is there for a Locke on the Understanding?

The Usual Way.

Quevedo—I hear that Joughnes has oined the church.—Curtis—Yes, he was writing funny paragraphs about the grip; then he got it. Now he has reformed.

SOMETHING NEW

—THE—

"COSMIAN HYMN BOOK."

—A COLLECTION OF—

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS
(WORDS AND MUSIC)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies,
For Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price$1.50

Address orders to
L. K. WASHBURN,
Revere, Mass.

ROMAN RULE OR RUIN.

BY Z. SHED.

A Summary of the atrocities committed by the Catholic church.

Price, 10 cents; four copies, 25 cents; ten copies, 50 cents. Address

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co.,
838 Howard street, San Francisco.

A REGULAR EDUCATED AND LEGALLY QUALIFIED PHYSICIAN, and the most successful (in his specialty) as his practice will surely prove. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men such as seminal weakness, impotency, &c., resulting from indiscretion and ignorance of youth. Those who are ailing should send ten (10 cents for his book, "Private Counsellor," setting forth an external Application—

A POSITIVE CURE

The book is worth many times its cost, and should be read by the young for instruction and the afflicted for relief.

All Communications Strictly Confidential.

Plain Envelopes used. The book spoken of sent sealed. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, NEW JERSEY Say where you saw this Advertisement.

[From the Washington National View.]

Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, New Jersey offers his valuable services to all those in need of a kind, sympathetic and skillful physician. Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been assailed and exposed by the press, but, Dr. Fellows, a specialist, in his line, stands foremost in his profession, and the encomiums showered upon him publicly as well as in private, are flattering evidences of the high appreciation and confidence his long and conscientious devotion to his specialties in his profession have so justly merited for him, and it is safe to trust him,

A Testimonial.

WEST LEBERTY, O., Aug. 12, 1888.
DR. R. P. FELLOWS—Dear Sir: The remedy you sent is working like a charm. I am completely surprised the way it acts upon the organs. Have only been using it one week, and that weakness, (seminal weakness) is coming out all right.
Yours respectfully,
J. N.

REMARKS—The above is a fair sample of the hundreds of testimonials received from all parts of the United States, from young, middle-aged and elderly men, suffering from various kinds of sexual complaints, but who are now cured by my External Application, the greatest of all known remedies for this class of diseases. As I am an out-and-out Liberal I trust the Freethinkers of the Land will give me their patronage, and not waste their time and money on Christian doctors. L.
DR. FELLOWS.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future

Republic of North America

BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1. Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 00
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm Diamond* 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, PUTNAM & MACDONALD, 04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

REMSBURG'S WORKS.

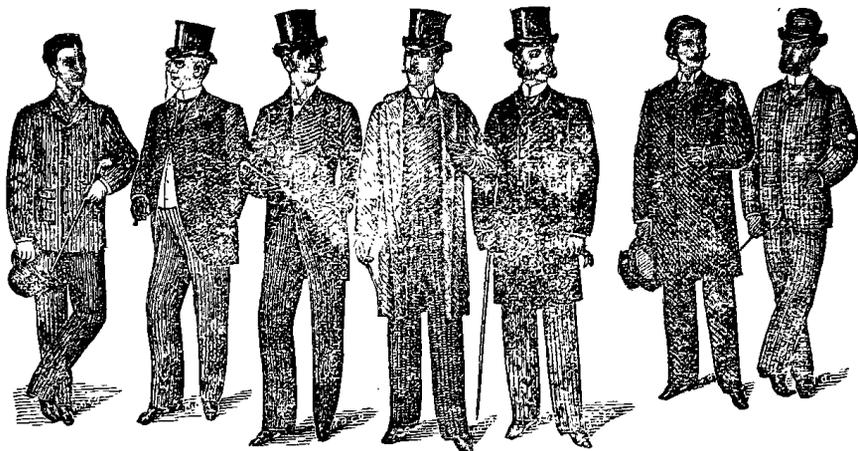

False Claims. Price 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Anti-slavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic.

Fathers of the Republic. Paine, Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. Price 15 cents.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
 DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
 PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,
CHAS F. BURGMAN.
 TAILOR,
 —101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.
 OLIVER HINCKLEY - SUPERINTENDENT
 Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.
 N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
 Telephone 1950.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED, 375 Natoma st., cor. 5th, S. F.

P. A. CLARK. CHAS. W. CLARK

DIAMOND VALLEY

NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS,
NURSERYMEN.

Catalogs for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines.
 Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice.
Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address CLARK BROS.,
 P. O. Box C, San Jacinto, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
 Six Months..... .75
 Three Months..... .25

EDITED BY
 F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:
 429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!
 Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
 PAPER BAGS, TWINE.
 Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
 414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,
 536 CLAY STREET,
 Below Montgomery. San Francisco.

Wm. W. NOBLE,
 Merchant Tailor,
 1222 STOCKTON ST.
 Bet. Pacific and Broadway.

DRESS SUITS A SPECIALTY
 Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass by.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,
 Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
 Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.
 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

PRINTING!

Having procured one of the best Presses manufactured and a large assortment of display type, and employing competent workmen, the Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

Letter-heads,
Bill-heads,
Programmes,
Envelopes,
Business Cards,
Postal Cards,
Tickets,
Placards,
Receipts,
Posters,
Dodgers,
Circulars,
Etc. etc.

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Star and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.
ALL FOR $1.20.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.
The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Bill Nye's Latest Poem.

FIRST VERSE.

O my darling, O my darling,
Wilt you ever think of me?
For my darling, for my darling,
I will oftentimes think of thee
And my darling, oh my darling,
When I oftentimes think of thee.
It will be indeed a pleasure,
If you erstwhile think of me.
Thus my darling, oh my darling,
Should you erstwhile think of me,
Whilst my darling, oh my darling,
I shall oftentimes think of thee,
We will think about each other
Till the bright eternity.

SECOND VERSE.

It is fun to write a poem
While I pause to think of thee,
For I know you'll not forget me
While you pause to think of me.
Thus adown life's sunburnt pathway
Loiter I to think of thee,
For I hope and trust that also
You may sometimes think of me.

THIRD VERSE.

It is not so very wearing
On the thinker, I can see,
Just to think of you, my darling,
As you doubtless think of me.
So, my darling, as I stated,
If your thoughts are true to me,
I will do some heavy thinking,
Oh my darling, just for thee;
And we'll think about each other,
Till the bright eternity.

Goes Easy About It.

A worthy deacon in a Vermont country town was discovered by his pastor one Sunday morning sawing an armful of wood for the kitchen stove. The surprise of the discovery caused the deacon to drop his saw in consternation.

"I—didn't suppose you'd see me, parson!" he faltered.

"Ah," replied the good man, severely, "you must remember, deacon, that there is one higher than I, who sees every act you commit."

"Yes, parson," assented the deacon, "but then, he doesn't make such an awful fuss about it."

Needless Outlay.

The Rev. Mrs. Poorlypaid—If you want me to fix your trousers, darling, you'll have to go down town and get some buttons.

The Rev. Mr. Poorlypaid—Oh, that's a needless expense, my dear. I am going to take up a collection for foreign missions to-morrow.

Men, Women, and Gods.

By Helen H. Gardener. Introduction by Robert G. Ingersoll. Price, 50 cents.

Why Priests Should Wed.

BY JUSTIN D. FULTON, D.D.

A startling book, particularly to those unacquainted with the character of the confessional. Price, $1.50.

Address this office.

I HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE

Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.

13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order.

The Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is entirely damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thief resisting. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that, ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only.

Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

The Open Court.

A Weekly Journal of Reverent Freethought.

Discussing Problems in Science, Philosophy, Ethics, and Religion.

Subscription for twelve months, $2.00.

Specimen Copies free on application.

THE OPEN COURT PUB. CO.,

169-175 La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois.

P. O. Drawer F.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

THE SABBATH IMPOSTURE.

BY HARRY HOOVER.

"Showing that there is no authority for the Sunday laws, either Human or 'Divine.'"

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies 50 cents. Address this office.

GOD IN THE STATE

By E. A. Stevens, Ex-Secretary of the American Secular Union.

—:O:—

This is the best presentation of the argument against God in the Constitution, ever prepared in a pamphlet of its size.

—:O:—

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies, 50 cents.

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co.,
838 Howard street, San Francisco.

"Bible Contradictions," 15 cents.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters

impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 5.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal. as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - FEBRUARY 1, 1890.

THE CONVENTION.

The Second Annual Convention of the California State Liberal Union held its sessions in Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, San Francisco, on Saturday and Sunday, January 25 and 26. The first meeting—that held on Saturday evening—was not largely attended by members from outside of San Francisco. All places more than a day's journey from the city were cut off by landslides, washouts, or snowdrifts, and it must be said that Liberals residing at a distance manifested their sanity by not attempting to get here. But while the absence of these friends was noted and regretted, the seats reserved for them were occupied by local Secularists, so that the main floor of the hall was well filled, while the gallery showed a fair sprinkling of people who wished to listen but did not care to be identified with the proceedings.

President Putnam called the meeting to order, and while the late comers were finding seats Mrs. Eugenia Clark gave a brilliant piano solo, and then led the trio of sisters in a song. These young ladies are getting to be great favorites with attendants at meetings of reformers here in the city, and are always greeted and sped with hearty applause, which they well deserve.

The president's address of welcome followed. Mr. Putnam said:

The object of this Convention is, first of all, companionship, to create the esprit du corps of Liberalism, and through this evoke enthusiasm and interest in the great cause. Our object further is to spread knowledge, to enlighten the people in regard to the condition of affairs, to point out the dangers that exist, and through knowledge to persuade to action. It is a great blunder on the part of Liberals to say there is no need of action. Christianity is an institution as well as an idea. As an institution it is stronger than ever. As an institution it presents a more united front than ever. Christians could not unite to-day upon any doctrine; they could not unite upon the Bible; but they can unite for the enforcement of a custom, of a law. Hitherto the philosophic Liberal has smiled at the idea of a union among Christians, seeing such a vast diversity of sects, but the unity is now an accomplished fact. The point of unity is the Sabbath question. The Catholic church and the Protestant church here strike hands. They have discovered that six days are lost to them forever. They are therefore making a desperate effort to retain one day for their own benefit, and to do this by force of law. The Sabbath is the bulwark of the church. All the Christian sects see this. If Sunday ceases to be a holy day, the vast hold of the churches upon the life of to-day is gone. The issue is vital and immense, both for Christianity and Liberalism.

The enforcement of the Sabbath by legislation is a direct violation of civil and religious liberty. California is now the battleground. It is free from Sabbatarian laws. But the ecclesiastical party is rallying its forces for the enactment of such laws. The churches are growing stronger in California. A constant immigration increases their support and wealth. Shall California wheel into line and with the other states be subservient to the churches, or shall it retain its present onward position, and be the most free and independent state in the Union?

The secretary of the American Sabbath Union declares that the last year is a "year of wonders" in behalf of Sabbath legislation. It is said that fifteen million of the American people have been enrolled in favor of this legislation. A large number of labor organizations have indorsed the Sunday Rest bill. The convention of Roman Catholic laymen has signified its desire to join with non-Catholics for the maintenance of Sabbath laws. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has won the praises of the church by its untiring devotion to its political interests.

In Cincinnati the committee of "five hundred" has put its iron heel upon personal liberty. The same victory of ecclesiasticism has been achieved in Pittsburg. On the line of Sabbath observance the church has shown a vast power within the last few months. Along this line the battle must wage for many years. The whole force of church tyranny is concentrated here. If defeated here it is eventually defeated everywhere. The destruction of sacred days is the destruction of the priesthood. The maintenance of sacred days, of church days by law, is a perpetual threat to free institutions.

It is for the purpose of understanding this issue, of enlightening the people in regard to it, and for legislative action when necessary, that the California Liberal Union is organized. It has no creed other than the civil and religious rights of all citizens: The purpose of this Convention is to arouse attention, and to unite our forces. Every Liberal should realize the gravity of the situation. Liberty is the life blood of progress. The will and intelligence of man himself are vast and profound factors in the world's improvement. Evolution is not merely a blind force. In it and of it is the choice of man. If we do not do the best, then the best will not be achieved. If we fight not for liberty, then liberty will not be ours. Not simply vigilance, but eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. We must always pay that price. We must always stand guard. We must always be ready to be up and doing. We ask the co-operation of every man and woman without regard to differences of opinion. This is not a question of opinion, but of rights. The platform of Freethought is as broad as justice and humanity can be. Equality, fraternity, a true republic, a genuine democracy, a government of the people, is the purpose of our organization. Its success is the success, not of a part, but of all.

The business of appointing committees being next in order, the following selections were made:

COMMITTEE ON NOMINATIONS—J. W. Ostello, Mrs. R. H. Schwartz, D. Buckingham, H. W. Faust, T. F. Hagerty, W. H. Eastman.

COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS—W. S. Bell, Dr. E. B. Foote, George E. Macdonald.

Mr. Bell then took the platform. He remarked that he had been under the impression that he was to speak at the Paine celebration, and his address was prepared accordingly. Then he sailed in.

MR. BELL'S ADDRESS.

Upon the questions of church and state Thomas Paine was, for his day, a profound thinker. He perceived not only the corruptions of these two institutions, but he also discovered that they both were evils per se. If the church was the outgrowth of man's ignorance and weakness, so too was the state. Each was a vampire living upon the life-blood of the people.

In these days when the air is full of cries for Nationalism, Socialism, and Anarchism, it certainly may prove interesting if not instructive to listen to the voice of him who devoted his life to the study of the rights of man and the despotism of governments.

I will read several selections from the "Rights of Man."

A great part of that order which reigns among mankind is not the effect of government. It had its origin in the principles of society, and the natural constitution of man. It existed prior to government, and would exist if the formality of government was abolished. The mutual dependence and reciprocal interest which man has in man, and all the parts of a civilized community upon each other, create that great chain of connection which holds it together.

Government is no further necessary than to supply the few cases to which society and civilization are not conveniently competent; and instances are not wanting to show that everything which government can usefully add thereto, has been performed by the common consent of society, without government.

For upwards of two years from the commencement of the American war, and a longer period, in several of the American states, there were no established forms of government. The old governments had been abolished, and the country was too much occupied in defense to employ its attention in establishing a new government; yet, during this interval, order and harmony were preserved as inviolate as in any country in Europe. There is a natural aptness in man, and more so in society, because it embraces a greater variety of abilities and resources, to accommodate itself to whatever situation it is in.

The instant formal government is abolished, society begins to act. A general association takes place, and the common interest produces common security.

So far is it from being true, as has been pretended, that the abolition of any formal government is the dissolution of society, it acts by a contrary impulse, and brings the latter closer together.

Formal governments make but a small part of civilized life; and when even the best that human wisdom can devise is established, it is a thing more in name and idea than in fact. It is to the great and fundamental principles of society and civilization—to the common usage universally consented to, and mutually and reciprocally maintained—to the unceasing circulation of interest, which passes through its innumerable channels, invigorates the whole mass of civilized man, it is to these things, infinitely more than anything which even the best instituted governments can perform, that the safety and prosperity of the individual and of the whole depends.

The more perfect civilization is the less occasion has it for government, because the more does it regulate its own affairs and govern itself; but so contrary is the practice of old governments to the reason of the case, that the expenses of them increase in the proportion they ought to diminish. It is but few general laws that civilized life requires, and those of such common usefulness, that whether they are enforced by the forms of government or not, the effect will be nearly the same. If we consider what the principles are that first condense men into society, and what the motives that regulate their mutual intercourse afterwards, we shall find by the time that we arrive at what is called government, that nearly the whole of the business is performed by the natural operation of the parts upon each other.

Man, with respect to all those matters, is more a creature of consistency than he is aware of, or than governments would wish him to believe. All the great laws of society are laws of nature. Those of trade and commerce, whether with respect to the intercourse of individuals, or of nations, are laws of natural and reciprocal interest. They are followed and obeyed, because it is the interest of the parties so to do, and not on account of any formal laws their governments may impose or interpose.

Never in the history of the world have there been so many indications of unrest and agitation among the people at large as there are to-day. We boast of the civilization of the nineteenth century, and point with pride to the achievements of science in the mechanical arts. But these modern triumphs are not so real, not so fundamental as they appear. We speak of the wonders of steam, telegraph, and ten thousand inventions, but do not see the evils of our civilization which are also assuming vast proportions and a more marked variety of forms. We have not only progress and poverty, but also progress in disease, insanity, and in commercial dishonesty. The people everywhere are becoming alive to these facts, and they are discussing all phases of society; they are seeking some remedy for the ills they suffer.

The political arena is filled with single-taxers, Prohibitionists, Socialists, Anarchists, Woman's Rights party, not to say anything of the Republican and Democratic parties, which, like two giants, struggle with each other to see which one of them shall save the country from the treason and corruption of the other. However palpable the fraudulency of the old hack party politics and party government may be to the masses, yet they continue to be the childish dupes of knaves and thieves who corrupt and deceive them.

If the political outlook presents nothing but turmoil and discontent, the religious status indicates more disturbance and more indications of immediate efforts at revolution. Science and the spirit of investigation are increasing the thoughtfulness of a large and always increasing class, and at the same time it is deadening their superstitions on all supernatural aspects of religion. But while this is true on the one hand, it is equally true on the other that there is a mighty effort being made to reinstate religion as a power in the minds of the people by legislation. Accordingly we see the God-in-the-Constitution party, the Sunday-Law party, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union party, and others.

The signs of the times indicate a transformation of society through the media of science, philosophy, and humanity. This is not to be accomplished without violent reactions, such as we see in all Christian legislation to support its dying superstition. But a free press points out the doom of all superstition. It is a question of time. Both church and state have outlived their usefulness. They have ruled in the name of God; they have ruled in the name of king, and they have ruled in the name of the people; but whether in the name of God, the king, or the people, they have always ruled—always ruled at the expense of the people.

Look at it from whatever point of view we may, we shall find that in its very nature and in whatever form it may exist, either in church or state, government is a despotism. All governments spring into existence through violence, and maintain themselves by violence. Such a thing as a good government never existed. There never has been any democratic or republican government. It is, however, an exceedingly pretty form of speech to talk of a government of the people, by the people, and for the people. It were a vast deal nearer the truth if we should speak of our own government as a government of politicians, by politicians, and for politicians.

But to speak of a government of the people appeals to our vanity and weakness, and politicians are not slow to take advantage of our weakness in this direction. We forget that all governments spring into existence through conquest of some sort. Is it not folly, then, to prate about governments deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. When did you and I consent to our government, to our constitution, to our laws? Perhaps it may be urged that our fathers instituted this government and we inherit it from them. Is this the way we consented—our fathers consented, therefore we consented? But how did our fathers consent? A war separated the colonies from Great Britain, and after their separation forms of state and general government were instituted after being formally submitted to the people.

But all the engineering and wire-pulling done in the matter of getting up a constitution was done by a comparatively few men. The people at large had small aptitude for making constitutions or forming governments; but they had immense qualifications for being duped, robbed, and set on edge, one against another, by party zeal and fanaticism, just as our voters to-day have towards those who support an opposition candidate.

But suppose we should admit that our government was founded by the consent of the whole people, would not the fact of our national degeneracy prove that government is in and of itself an evil? The fact that our government, from the days of Washington until now, has gone down steadily, becoming worse and worse, is not because the people themselves have been so greatly demoralized, but because it is in the very nature of government to grow always worse. Founded upon violence and injustice, it puts a premium on corruption and thievery; while, with a mockery of justice, it says, "Let no guilty man escape," yet it gives him time and opportunity to do so.

Man's consent to be governed is not asked by the government; but government commands him, as the police do, to "move on." That mountebank preacher of Brooklyn, Talmage, says, "If you don't like our laws, if you can't move on with the rest of us, then move out of the country." We are not asked to give our consent to the government under which we live, but we are commanded to submit to it, to obey its laws and to support its officers. All the liberty we have respecting the state is to obey its behests—to pay taxes.

Government is not based upon principles of justice extended to all citizens, but upon privileges snatched by a few under the serious mockery of voting. It is not justice that obtains in any department of government, not even in the so-called courts of justice, or in the manner of appointing or selecting judges and juries.

Privilege characterizes all parts of the state. Privilege is inseparable from government. Despotism, privilege, and robbery are integral parts of the system. The monopolies are proof of it. The banking monopoly, railroad monopoly, telegraph monopoly, land monopoly, Standard Oil monopoly, associate press monopoly, and all sorts of trusts, are like pythons squeezing the life out of the unprivileged citizen. These monopolies and trusts are not fungi, but the genuine fruit which the governmental tree has always borne. It never has failed to produce this crop. It is in the very nature of government to rob labor and protect capital. How could it be otherwise, when it not only has the power to make laws looking towards its own self-preservation but when it has the power and disposition to enforce all such laws at any expense of blood and treasure. It is seldom that the people get justice in the courts. Officials generally have their minds upon two objects, namely, to continue in office, and how to secure more plunder or spoils of office and not be found out.

Many years ago, we had a great rebellion, and there were two privileged classes in the country, namely, those who went to war, and those who staid at home. The privileged class that could go to war and be shot had the privilege of staying at home and be shot. The other class could stay at home, and had the privilege of paying three or four hundred dollars as bounty. While the horny-handed sons of toil were facing the cannon's mouth, the privileged gentry at home were making laws for the good of the nation. They were fine workers, too, for they made two kinds of money for the country, a cheap kind in which the government paid off the soldiers (it was called rag money), and another kind made of shining gold to pay the bankers with.

Mr. Brown, on hearing of the high-handed ways of monopolies, bankers, and trusts, exclaimed, "Why the men who compose these trusts, banks, and monopolies, run our government, don't they?" "Oh, no," said Mr. Smith, "they are our government."

The people are gullible. In fact, they seem to want to be humbugged. What are our elections but farces? See what scheming and wire-pulling there is among certain voters to get their favorite nominated. And after a candidate is up, see what promises he will make—in fact, promises anything you ask, for your vote. If elected, he does not want to meet you, and if he does, he can now promise you nothing. He says he'll see about it and gets away from you.

What roguery and rascality are practiced to overthrow a rival candidate. In all this political skullduggery the people themselves have had almost nothing to do. They have been fooled into doing what they have done. It is true that they have held caucuses, but the roughs and toughs, with the aid of whisky and beer, have carried the caucus. Because of the dishonesty and rowdyism of the caucus, the best citizens do not attend it; I mean the caucuses of large cities. After the work of the caucus and convention comes the campaign. I am now speaking of the presidential campaign. On these occasions the poor voter is inflated with the importance of his franchise. His vote will count as much as the vote of a Vanderbilt. His vote can offset the vote of the president of the United States.

All this and much more of the same style of vanity puffs up the voter with a vast amount of self-importance. When the campaign is on I have seen ten thousand men turn out to a torch-light procession. The political hacks seduce young men and old men of very light calibre to swell the ranks of the procession, by promising or actually giving them a red flannel shirt. Some are bought up with a half holiday, others are bribed with money, and a vast number are inspired with whisky; and still others are rendered exceedingly patriotic by bad arguments and an appeal to their bad blood. And all this passes for a love of liberty, a love of country.

And all this is the outcome of the glorious elective franchise. The truth is, that when we come to look at it seriously, voting cuts no figure at all in the management of the affairs of the state. The vote is a toy, a plaything which the victim of despotism is allowed to amuse himself with.

When I was a child my father would sometimes in the evening, as I sat on the carpet before the fire, give me several silver dollars to play with. It was a rare treat to have real dollars, to look at them, to jingle them in my hands, roll them on the floor, toss them in the air. It was rare sport. At last, when he thought I had exhausted my gushing enjoyment, he would quietly ask me to hand them back to him. Then I could see them go back into his pockets. The ballot is like the dollars. The voter can play with it, nothing more. For the kingdom and the power and the glory belong to the government, and government will never entrust its life in any other hands than its own. It may appear to do so, but it is only in appearance.

It is constantly asserted that government is instituted to protect men in their rights. This statement is not true, because governments are set up by the war power. And if it could be shown that sometimes they are not, still it would not avail, for it matters not how governments are set up, for they cannot maintain themselves except by the war power. Therefore it is not true that governments are instituted for the protection of man in his rights.

The rights of men are invaded by governments. Governments cannot exist without dispoiling some one. To talk about a government doing equal and exact justice is a delusion. If government does anything for one person, that is, if it gives anything to the citizen, it is because it has taken away from another what it has given the first.

All new laws enacted for the benefit of corporations and trusts are ostensibly enacted for the benefit of the dear people. The modern Solons go on gulling the people by talking about the public welfare, public prosperity, the public weal, the public interests, etc.

The demagogue frightens the little man by telling him that personal interests must not stand in the way of the public good. He has much to say about "national" liberty, "political" liberty, "republican" liberty, "democratic" liberty, "constitutional" liberty and "liberty under law," and all other kinds of liberty except "individual" liberty. Our government does not tell us that individual liberty means freedom from all compulsion to do anything whatever except what justice requires us to do, and freedom to do everything whatever that justice permits us to do.

Government is a relic, a most fruitful and pestilent relic, of barbarism. In no way can it be disguised that the foundation stone of government is, might makes right. In its eyes man has no inalienable rights. Any and all of his rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, may be disregarded at the will of this phantom. He can be taxed to a point of starvation; his life may be thrown away before the cannon's mouth to save the barbarous ghost of the barbarous past. Yes, the government owns him, body and soul—he is a slave—common property. Yet he fancies himself, on the Fourth of July especially, as enjoying the greatest, grandest liberty imaginable, in this "the land of the free and the home of the brave." This reminds me of the Irishman who stood looking at the steam plow. After eyeing it for some time he broke out with, "Oh, ye's can puff, puff, and whiz, whiz, but ye can't vote—ye's can't get on the perlice force." The Fourth of July orator and the Irishman are twins.

Government assumes to possess all rights, and any such things as commonly pass for rights of man are only conventional—they are privileges granted the individual by the phantom government, which it may resume at any moment. A war arises, and the little Fourth of July man, all bloated up with the liberty he enjoys, is called upon to face the deadly cannon of the enemy, and Pat, who could vote, must keep him company. Whether they have objections to being killed in this fashion is immaterial—and that they have conscientious scruples about going out to kill somebody else, who has done them no wrong, is equally immaterial. If they don't go, they may be shot, and if they do they are almost sure to be shot. Government denies man the right of property, because it takes his property as well as his person and uses it and him to their destruction. As far as the principle is concerned, this is a denial of man's right to exist on this planet, as it is a denial of man's natural right to those things that are necessary to his existence.

This address by Mr. Bell proved to be somewhat of a startler. It held the closest attention of the audience, who accepted its rather disagreeable truths with much good nature, and gave the speaker many a cheering round of applause.

SUNDAY MORNING.

This session was attended by perhaps one hundred and sixty persons and floods of sunshine, the first of the latter article seen for days and days. Miss Mate Hildebrande enlivened the opening with a finely executed piano music; the Misses Wheeler and Mrs. Clark gave one of their always beautiful songs, and the Hon. F. B. Perkins delivered an address upon the relation between the development of the individual mind and the progress of the race. As Mr. Perkins took the stand the janitor threw the blinds open and great streams of sunlight came flowing in, whereat the orator remarked that he had great pleasure in introducing his majesty the sun, whose presence on this occasion he regarded as a greeting of the universe to the second annual convention of the California State Liberal Union.

MR. PERKINS'S ADDRESS.

Mr. F. B. Perkins gave a sketch of "A Study in the Natural History of Rationalism," being an outline biography of the mind of one brought up in Puritan beliefs, and experiencing a natural reaction into rationalism. The person he described was of pure Anglo-Saxon and old New England ancestry; brought up in the strictest Calvinistic Congregationalist beliefs and practices; taught to believe the Bible and Christianity without knowing anything whatever about them, except the orthodox views of revelation and inspiration. This training lasted for pretty much all the first twenty years of his life, being the first of three chapters, so to speak, of about twenty years each. The second chapter began as soon as the youth left home and began to think for himself. By natural unconscious mental action he began so criticise religions, and especially the Bible. He found at once that as the result of having had the Bible, as it were, rubbed into him all his life so far, he had lost all power of really seeing it; just as a man who should lay his nose against a building could not perceive its general design. Upon this he shut the book and kept away from it for about twenty years more, devoting his time and labor to mental training and to active life. Thus passed the second chapter of his life. The third chapter opened with his being employed by a publisher to examine the whole Bible, verse by verse, and to arrange each verse under its appropriate topic in a prescribed classification of subjects. He now found that his twenty years of abstinence had recovered for him a healthy appetite; he could see the Bible; could distinguish the differences of style and purpose; could see what was historical, what mythical, what legendary, what poetical, what dogmatic. He could judge intelligently of its truths and its errors, of its history and real meaning. And the result was, that during the whole of the third chapter of his life, thus far, he has been a rationalist from study and deliberate reasoned conviction.

The application made of this account was to draw an analogy between the natural process of independent unbiased study and thought in this one mind, and a corresponding process in the mind of the community. This process is the office of the Liberal Union to promote and hasten.

The solo by Miss Evangeline Ballou, which ensued, was a rare bit of singing. The young lady has a remarkably rich and strong contralto voice, which she uses with fine effect. Both those who are able to judge critically and those who, like the present writer, judge a thing by its general results, joined in placing Miss Ballou's songs among the most attractive numbers of the whole programme.

Laura de Force Gordon seems to have been detained with the rest by either the weather or her engagements, and was not present, but her place was well-filled by Mrs. R. H. Schwartz, of San Jose, who had surmounted all difficulties in coming to the Convention.

Her address pleased the audience greatly. She said:

In the call for this Convention, "all are invited who are in favor of the total separation of church and state; of the American republic founded upon the Declaration of Independence; of equal rights and impartial liberty. It states that there is no creed, no religious or non-religious belief, in the platform of the Liberal Union, it stands simply and solely for human rights, irrespective of creeds, and it expects the co-operation of every American." This is certainly broad enough, and every true American, every true man and woman should co-operate in preparing measures for the establishment of a purely secular government. The time has come when the co-operation of woman is necessary to the success of all movements, especially in this movement. Although we lack the power which the ballot gives, yet we can do much toward moulding public opinion. This has been proven by the Women's Christian Temperance Union. These women have banded together for a purpose and gained a strong foothold by their perseverance and determination. While they have done much good, their religious zeal has blinded them to the real welfare of this government, according to the statement of their president, who said, "The Women's Christian Temperance Union, local, state, and national, world-wide, has one vital, organic thought, one absorbing purpose, one undying enthusiasm; it is that Christ shall be the world's king—king of its courts, its camps, its commerce; king of its colleges and its cloisters, king of its customs and its constitutions." She adds, "Concerning the platform of our next national prohibition convention, I am content to leave it substantially as it is, save that it should declare Christ and his law the true basis of government and of supreme authority in national as in individual life." If these women can be so absorbed in a purpose that would overthrow our government, why should not the women who see the necessity of the separation of church and state, unite in one undying purpose—to save our government, save our constitution and leave the Declaration of Independence as a heritage to our children without a blemish upon its fair pages.

The indifference of the people in regard to the Sabbath question is startling; they really have been made to believe that it is not a religious measure but instigated solely for the protection of the laboring man's rights. It reminds me of the sudden interest the political office-seeker takes in the laboring man. Just before election he links his arm familiarly in that of the working men and invites them up to a drink. After the election is over he forgets all about their brief acquaintance. So it will be if the Sabbath law is enforced. The laboring man will look in vain for his friends; he will find every door of recreation closed, and if he should dare to chop a stick of wood on Sunday he will be arrested for violating the holy Sabbath. This has been done again and again in some states. So I would say to the laboring classes, while I sympathize with you most sincerely, and hail with delight anything that will benefit you, do not be fooled by this Sunday rest, but use all your efforts, and especially your ballots, against it; but let me tell you where to lend all the aid you can: that is, support Nationalism. This offers hope; its principles carried out will add to the comfort not only of Sunday, but of every day in the week. Instead of curtailing your freedom, it will enlarge all your opportunities.

Now, the object of this Convention is to arouse the people to a sense of the danger that threatens this government. We want to bear in mind that our coin is stamped with the words: "In God we trust," that in Delaware, Georgia, Indiana, Maine, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Tennessee the unbeliever is not permitted to testify in a court of justice; that a boy was arrested and fined for playing marbles on Sunday in Boston; that Tennessee does not allow barbering on Sunday; that Seventh-day Adventists are frequently arrested for working on the orthodox Sabbath. I am aware that most of you know all this and much more than I can tell you, but there are always some in every audience that do not know anything about it. Comparatively few seem to be aware that the attempt made to establish a national Sunday law is but the entering wedge of the God-in-the-Constitution party. When we consider what they have already done while not yet in power, we can see that the outlook is not very promising if they carry the day and put God in the Constitution. I have told you how the Women's Christian Temperance Union stands on this question. The Young Men's Christian Association and the Prohibition party all stand in line. Let me say to you who have through your strong desire for reform on the liquor question been led to give your aid to the Prohibition party, bear this in mind, the Prohibition party and the God-in-the-Constitution stand as a unit. Prohibition will not do what you want to see accomplished; this can only be done by education and by the removal of the causes of intemperance, which are principally poverty and ignorance, and this Nationalism proposes to do, so I would say to you as I have said to the laboring classes, use all your efforts against Prohibition, especially your ballots, and give your aid to the furtherance of the principles of Nationalism. No one realizes the curse of intemperance more than I, and no one is more anxious to see the curse removed, but I do not consider the Prohibition movement practical, and in removing one evil I do not believe in the establishment of another evil. Our public schools are secular institutions, yet religious sentiment permeates many of the studies, and the songs sung in many of our schools are those used in church and Sunday school, and this secular government gives millions of dollars annually to the support of the church from our public treasury. Now, my friends, it is too late in the day to sit down and tamely assert that the God in the Constitution party can never get in power, but it is time that every thinking man and woman be up and doing, determined that if their efforts are of any avail, they shall not. The various journals published in the interest of Freethought have kept us posted in regard to the workings of the National Reform Association. This Association, as you all know, demands that the existing Christian features of this American government shall be maintained, that our constitution shall be so amended as to declare the nation's allegiance to Jesus Christ, and its acceptance of the moral laws of the Christian religion, and place all the Christian laws, institutions and usages of our government upon an undeniably legal basis in the fundamental law of the land. Any observing person can readily see that the work of this association is being actively carried on by the clergy.

Mr. Thos. Arper gave a few words on the difficulty of getting old ideas out of the mind after they had once been educated into it.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

The afternoon of Sunday was devoted to business, and the singers and musicians were given a vacation. The first thing on the programme was Secretary Lemme's report, which Mr. Lemme read as follows:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

To the Convention of the California State Liberal Union:

The California State Liberal Union was organized in this city in January of last year. The convention was held in Irving Hall, some two hundred persons being present at the opening. The delegation from the country was large. On Sunday evening, January 27, the number in attendance was estimated at nearly one thousand. An extensive programme for the general work was prepared, resolutions adopted, and officers for the year were elected. These proceedings have been incorporated in this report, but as they would take up too much time I shall omit them here. If anyone desires to read the report he may find it in the files of last year's FREETHOUGHT, together with the list of officers elected.

On the same date, the Turnerbund of this coast had a convention also; and sent to the Liberal organization their delegates bearing words of greeting from our German co-workers. The greeting was accepted, and the response indorsed by a unanimous rising vote. Messrs. Schou, Lund, and Putnam were appointed a committee to bear the response to the Turnerbund. The Paine celebration that closed the first convention was largely attended, over fifteen hundred persons being present. Addresses and recitations were given by prominent speakers of California; the programme was well-filled with good music. A social and dance closed the celebration, and the first convention proved to be a great success.

The anti-Sunday law meeting held at Avon theater, Stockton, the 10th of January, 1889, under the auspices of the Turn Verein Society and the Liberal Union, was a success in numbers and influence. Addresses were made by Mr. F. Schuenemann-Pott and Mr. Samuel P. Putnam. After the meeting, the petitions and Demands of Liberalism and articles of organization of the California State Liberal Union were numerously signed.

A bill had been introduced in the California Senate and Assembly, entitled, "An Act to add three new sections to the Penal Code, to be known as sections 299, 300, and 301, respectively, relative to Sunday amusements where liquors are sold, and keeping open places of business on Sunday." Both the Senate and Assembly referred the bill to a Committee on Public Morals. Here are its provisions:

299. Every person who on Sunday gets up, exhibits, opens, or maintains, or aids in getting up, exhibiting, opening, or maintaining any bull, bear, cock, or prize fight, horse-race, gambling-house, or saloon, or any barbarous and noisy amusement, or who keeps, conducts, or exhibits any theater, melodeon, dance-cellar, or place of musical, theatrical, or operatic performance, spectacle, or representation, where any wines, liquors, or intoxicating drinks are bought, sold, used, drunk, or given away, or who purchases any ticket of admission, or directly or indirectly pays any admission fee to or for the purpose of witnessing or attending any such place, amusement, spectacle, performance, or representation is guilty of a misdemeanor.

300. Every person who keeps open on Sunday, any store, workshop, bar, saloon, banking-house, or other place of business, for the purpose of transacting business therein, is punishable by fine not less than twenty nor more than one hundred dollars.

301. The provisions of section three hundred do not apply to persons who, on Sunday, keep open hotels, boarding-houses, barber-shops, baths, markets, restaurants, taverns, livery stables, or retail drug stores, for the legitimate business of each, or such manufacturing establishments as are usually kept in continued operation.

The meetings at Sacramento on March 10 and 17 were largely attended in spite of the rain. Our president gave two lectures. Many signatures to the Demands of Liberalism were received. Sacramento has a large element of Liberalism, and it gradually increases in power and prominence. The series of lectures has opened the field for larger and more fruitful work.

As one of the good results and natural outcome of the California State Liberal Union, the San Francisco Freethought Society was organized the 31st day of March, 1889. Several efforts have been made to secure a suitable hall, when at last Union Square Hall was adopted for the location. The membership, although small at the beginning, increased rapidly during the meetings, which were held throughout the summer. Prominent speakers from the Western and Eastern States gave lectures to the generally well-attended meetings. The Liberals of this city have largely contributed to this organization to secure its progress and success.

The San Francisco Freethought Society elected the following officers for one year:

President, P. O. Chilstrom; secretary, Henry J. Breuer; assistant secretary, G. E. Macdonald; treasurer, A. H. Schou; vice-presidents, W. H. Eastman, Mrs. Emma Reguin, and Emil S. Lemme.

The meetings at San Diego on March 31, and April 7, were quite successful; a large number attended. Our president delivered two lectures, and the Demands of Liberalism were numerously signed. This city has a large Liberal element and its local organization is rapidly progressing.

The meeting at Los Angeles Turn Verein Hall, April 21, 1889, was a grand success. Nearly a thousand people were present. Our president spoke upon "Moody and Jones Reviewed." The second meeting on the following night was also largely attended. A strong organization has been the result. Los Angeles has thousands of Freethinkers, but it seems from later reports that a few must do all the work, take responsibilities and chances. A continuous effort will do a great deal of good. A large number of signatures were obtained here.

From the meetings at San Diego and Los Angeles at the end of last year still greater results have been reported. At the following places, which our president, Mr. Putnam, has visited, the work of the Liberal Union has been also progressive; namely, Livermore, Grass Valley, San Piusqual, San Jacinto, Escondido, Santa Ana, Anaheim, Norwalk, Lemoore, Visalia, Boulder Creek, Santa Cruz, Raymond, Grub Gulch, Fresno Flats, Hornitos, New Sanel, Ukiah, Covelo, and others. The Demands of Liberalism were numerously signed, so that at present the membership roll of the California State Liberal Union has altogether over three thousand signatures.

Among the other good results, which are mainly caused through the influence and efforts of our Liberal Union, I may mention the successful convention at Oregon, which will soon be followed by a convention in Washington.

The executive committee of the Turnerbund of the Pacific district, sent to each one of their members a circular inviting them to become members of our organization.

As another of the good results produced by the Union, the Freethought Publishing Company has been established. The number of stockholders are already one hundred and sixty. A bookstore and general headquarters for Freethought throughout the Pacific coast has been started in this city. It publishes the weekly journal FREETHOUGHT, and has a large stock of reform and Freethought literature for sale. This makes one of the most important and powerful organizations for the advancement of the work of Secularism. Respectfully submitted,

EMIL S. LEMME.

The foregoing report was adopted unanimously without opposition.

The report of Treasurer Schou was brief but comprehensive. It gave a list of items of receipts amounting to something over $50 and of expenditures reaching about $45; balance, $6 and odd. The report was adopted, with the supplementary statement of the president that as much as one thousand dollars, in the aggregate, had been applied to the work in various places throughout the state, but as it was raised by local subscriptions, and expended in the locality where it was raised, it had not passed through the hands of the treasurer. It should, however, be credited to the Liberals of California, and reckoned as belonging to the general fund.

The Committee on Resolutions reported through Mr. W. S. Bell, thus:

1. Resolved, That while this Convention welcomes and would encourage improvement in all departments of government, it holds that the reform fundamental to all others, and of first necessity, is the absolute divorcement of church and state; and that no method of social regeneration can be worthy of adoption or advocacy, or can be depended upon to produce perfect results, that does not include as a primary step the total separation of the functions of religion from those of politics and government.

2. Resolved, That we send greetings to all organizations whose work is in behalf of human liberty and advancement; to the Secular Unions of Oregon and elsewhere; to our co-laborers and allies, members of the Turn Vereins of the Pacific Coast, to Liberal associations everywhere, and especially to the Washington Secular Union now forming in our sister state.

3. Resolved, That we regard with gratification and hope the lately formed corporation known as the Freethought Publishing Company; that we look upon such an organization and the establishment of a Liberal bookstore in San Francisco as one of the most important achievements in Secular work accomplished during the past year or during any preceding year upon this coast; and we hereby recommend this enterprise to the patronage and support of all who recognize in Freethought a power working for civilization and enlightenment.

4. Resolved, That the merit or demerit of an act depends upon the quality of the act itself, and not upon the particular day of the week when it is performed; that that which is just and right on any of the six week days, loses none of its virtue on Sunday; that there is no authority in reason, morals, or even the scriptures, for enforced observance of Sunday as a holy day; and we therefore pledge determined opposition to the effort now making in California to secure the passage of so-called Sabbath laws. These laws as they exist in other states are un-American and undemocratic, and are used as instruments of persecution and extortion. We therefore hold it to be the duty of the voters of California to see that the statute books of this state are kept free from laws that, by prohibiting work or amusement on Sunday, make a crime of that which in itself is innocent and commendable.

5. Resolved, That we reiterate our condemnation of the enforced performance of religious ceremonies in the common schools of the state, in the shape of either Bible reading, prayers, or hymns. We recognize that since the reading of the Bible is a Protestant and really anti-Catholic exercise, the practice is as sectarian as would be the study of the Romish catechism. It furnishes the Catholic church with its strongest argument against our school system, the only answer to which is, the complete relegation of religious teachings to the home, the church, or the school supported by private funds.

6. Resolved, That, without expressing an opinion upon the policy of abolishing by law the manufacture and sale of liquor, we look upon the so-called Prohibition party as essentially a religious organization, being officered largely by the clergy and having for its object as much the bringing about of ecclesiastical legislation as the suppression of the liquor traffic. In this state it has struck hands and joined forces with the National Reform or God-in-the-Constitution party, the American Sabbath Association and the Women's Christian Temperance Union, all of whose objects are opposed to the principles of Secular government. While differing individually on the subject of prohibition, the members of the California State Liberal Union are as one in their opposition to all sacerdotal encroachments, whether they are advocated openly, or are introduced under the hypocritical guise of temperance reform.

7. Resolved, That we protest against the further appropriation of public funds for the support of charitable institutions of a sectarian character. Since these institutions are not conducted in the interests of humanity in general, but of the particular sect or religious division to which their projectors and managers belong; since many of them are speculative enterprises, relying for their profit upon appropriations from the state; since they encourage dependence and pauperism, through the fact that their existence depends upon the securing of inmates and the consequent per capita allowance from public moneys;—we therefore urge that secular and religious interests be separated; that the wards of the state be provided for by the state, and that private and sectarian institutions be left to the care of those sufficiently interested to support them.

8. Resolved, That the fathers of the republic, in the establishment of the postal system, exhibited admirable prudence in the framing of the constitution when they delegated to Congress simply the power to establish post-offices and post roads, and that every fair-minded citizen must view with painful apprehension the unconstitutional enactment by Congress of postal statutes having for their ostensible object the exclusion from the United States mails of written or printed matter because of its alleged immoral character. Such measures, under the administration of corrupt or bigoted men, may be used for the suppression of a free press, and would have been so employed in the early days of the anti-slavery cause, had such postal laws existed at that time. We are unqualifiedly in favor of free speech, free press, and free mails.

W. S. BELL,
DR. E. B. FOOTE,
GEO. E. MACDONALD.

These resolutions were unanimously accepted, together with a supplementary one favoring the enfranchisement of woman. Mr. Putnam explained that the position of Liberals generally on the question of woman's equality was pretty well understood, and being outside the specific objects of the Secular Union, the resolution was not strictly in order. As the audience either did not see or did not care to regard this point, the resolution passed.

The Committee on Nominations then reported.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON NOMINATIONS.

The Committee on Nominations submits the following names of members of the State Liberal Union for the ensuing year, and recommend their election:

President, S. P. Putnam, Secretary, Emil S. Lemme,
Treasurer, A. H. Schou.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Ranford Worthing, San Diego, W. F. Freeman, Stockton,
Philip Cowen, Petaluma; Wm. Schroeder, San Francisco,
W. S. Rodgers, Boulder Creek, John Robinett, Nipomo,
Mrs. Kate Parker, Anaheim, J. E. Clark, Los Angeles,
R. H. Schwartz, San Jose.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

J. W. North, Oleander, N. D. Goodell, Sacramento,
F. Schuenemann-Pott, S. F., A. Schell, Knight's Ferry,
John Riggan, Los Angeles, H. L. Shaug, Del Mar,
N. Woolsey, Messina, Samuel McHenry, National City,
P. A. Clark, San Jacinto, W. H. Pepper, Petaluma,
R. F. Grigsby, Napa, John McGlashan, Ukiah,
Thomas McCowan, Ukiah, Rufus Butterfield, Sacramento,
O. T. Davies, Brighton, S. Littlefield, Anaheim,
Robert Gunther, Eureka, Mrs. L. P. Langley, Santa Barbara,
John E. Jones, Round Valley, H. W. Faust, San Francisco,
B. B. Rockwood, San Pasqual, H. W. Walker, San Francisco,
W. A. Chess, Monrovia, Charles French, Pomona,
Mrs. D. J. Broneer, Oakland, W. P. McCord, Hanford,
H. L. Haelke, Oakland, D. Buckingham, Raymond,
James Beazell, Livermore, Leonard Parker, Anaheim,
Robert Laramore, Fresno Flats, Mrs. E. M. Hansson, Merced,
A. K. Co ward, Norwalk, Laura deForce Gordon; Lodi,
Mrs. R. H. Schwartz, San Jose, Charles Rodgers, Boulder Creek,
Charles Haas, Stockton, J. C. Gage, Stockton,
L. R. Titus, San Jose, Freeman Parker, Petaluma,
Ed. Wegner, Sonoma, Theodore Gerner, Livermore,
Wm. Burgess, National City, A. N. Burgess, National City,
E. A. Denicke, San Francisco, R. H. Nason, Gilroy,
John Dibble, Santa Clara, R. H. Bliss, Camptonville,
R. W. Barcroft, Hornitos, Mrs. P. Van Hoeter, Grass Valley,
J. R. Horsley, jr., Oakdale, Samos Parsons, San Jose,
T. J. Conley, Visalia, D. W. Perkins, San Jacinto,
T. W. Brooks, Pomona, J. M. Voss, Los Angeles,
Joel Parker, Orange, C. Severance, Los Angeles,
Herman C. Fry, Nipomo, John Mewhinney, Pomo,
Mrs. Scott Briggs, San Francisco, J. B. Wheeler, Oakland,
Herbert Miller, Berkeley, Thomas Curtis, San Francisco,
J. W. Ostello, Benicia, C. F. Burgman, San Francisco,
G. W. Thurston, San Francisco, Jerome A. Anderson, San Francisco,
T. C. Tandy, Hanford, M. S. Wahrhaftig, Esperanza,
James Bidwell, San Diego, Mrs. Florence Porter, Santa Ana,
F. B. Perkins, San Francisco, T. F. Hagerty, San Francisco,
Mrs. Addie Ballou, San Francisco, H. L. Knight, San Francisco,
Dr. L. Moore, Lemoore, Mrs. Fox, Lemoore,
Mrs. John Robinett, Nipomo, Lewis Kaiser,
L. Magenheimer, San Jose, John Beaumont, San Francisco,
Wm. S. Ray, San Francisco, R. R. Swain, San Francisco,
R. H. Taylor, San Francisco, J. Donbavand, Livermore,
R. Guy McClellan, San Francisco, A. J. Forbes, San Francisco,
E. Fair, San Francisco, W. S. Bell, Oakland.

The above list of officers is nearly the same as last year, and all were re-elected amid applause. The committee also recommended the appointing of a Special Committee on Sunday Law Legislation, and submitted the following names of members to compose such committee: Geo. E. Macdonald, W. H. Eastman, and F. B. Perkins, of San Francisco; A. Schell, Knight's Ferry; W. F. Freeman, Stockton; R. Butterfield and N. D. Goodell, Sacramento. These were elected. The business having thus been transacted, short addresses followed.

Col. H. L. Knight spoke upon the familiar topic of our constitutional fathers, who repelled the advances of priestcraft. He recurred to the convention where the constitution was adopted, and compared it with the council of priests who decided the question of papal infallibility. The sympathies of Mr. Knight, it was plain to be seen, were with our revolutionary sires.

W. F. Freeman, of Stockton, gave one of that kind of addresses which, while not rhetorically ornate, get home to the reason and sense of the listner. He remarked that he had never experienced the disadvantage of a Sunday-school education. He had never been a great talker, which, in earlier life, he regretted, but which in later years he found was for the best after all. He had noticed that most of the speakers were hard up financially, and if he had been gifted with oratory he might now have been in the same condition. By looking after the loaves and fishes he had got a little ahead and was able to offer pecuniary assistance to those who do the talking. Mr. Freeman referred to FREETHOUGHT and the publishing business just established, and assured his hearers that they could do no more effective work than by the circulation of Liberal literature.

Mrs. A. Lindal, who is a native of Denmark, an accomplished linguist, and withal a lady of education, refinement and good sense, spoke concerning the imprisonment at Stockholm of Victor E. Lennstrand, editor of the Swedish Freethought paper. After referring to the honors recently paid to Giordano Bruno in Rome, she said:

At the same time we rejoice in the memory of friends that are no more among us, I wish to attract your attention to a living friend and ally of ours, who from the gloomy cell of a prison in far-off Sweden sends his greetings to us—a young man whose name is echoed with sympathy throughout Europe and also on this continent—a hero whose crime is that he had the manliness and vigor to advocate his and other's most sacred right, the right to speak the truth, the right to tear asunder the fetters with which the human mind and intelligence has too long been chained to the feet of spooks and phantoms of by-gone ages. It is Victor E. Lennstrand. Sweden is a respectable country, with a populace as moral, intelligent and enlightened as can be found in any land, but priestcraft prevails there as it does in every monarchy cursed with an established state church. A clause in the constitution provides that the king and all who hold government office must belong to the Lutheran church. This is the bulwark of clerical power. It is a risky act to work openly against the church, though, really, most of the officials are unbelievers, or at least doubters, but they dare not acknowledge it. They would be in danger of losing their position if they did. Mr. Lennstrand commenced a few years ago to lecture against Christianity, exposing its errors and thorough worthlessness, historically, intellectually, and as a moral guide, for which he was arrested and put on trial. The jury acquitted him. He was tried several times on sundry charges for blasphemy, but with the same result—an acquittal. At last, however, through judicial wranglings he was convicted and sentenced to three months' imprisonment. He stood his unjust punishment with the sturdiness of an innocent man, and after leaving the prison he lectured anew against the trash from the pulpits, and also started a liberal journal, that he named Fritankaren, which means The Freethinker. Charges of blasphemy were preferred against him anew, and after he had again been acquitted, proceedings were re-entered against him, and a jury, who undoubtedly acted under priestly influence, found him guilty, and he was sentenced to six months' imprisonment. He wrote a letter to the king, Oscar the Second, in which he stated that he had delivered his lectures in good faith, after mature consideration and with the firm conviction that the opinions he expressed were in full accordance with the principles of sense and science; that his aim had been to remove religious dogmas, the absurdity of which did not agree with modern civilization, and he appealed to the king to interfere in his behalf, as the sentence pronounced upon him was unjust and a violation of individual rights. But the king ignored the appeal. He affirmed the judgment, and Lennstrand sits now the second time in a criminal's dreary dungeon. His energy, however, does not forsake him. From inside the prison's walls he speaks to the outer world through his journal Fritankaren, which cannot be suppressed, and he declares that no adversity is able to darken his mind or weaken his love of truth and enlightenment. He further says that when his term of undeserved punishment is out, he will continue the beneficial labor he has commenced, and without fear or favor brave the malice of the ministry, even if a prison stares him in the face a thousand times.

There was excuse for the popes of yore, who ordered scientists and reformers to be burnt at the stake. They knew no better. They really believed that Bruno and the rest were heinous blasphemers, possessed by devils, and it was a holy duty to rid the world of them. They acted according to their own conviction. But what excuse is there for the enlightened king of Sweden? Does he act according to his own conviction? Does he think it right to inflict on Lennstrand one of the most malicious outrages that can be committed against a sensible human being—deprive him of his liberty and thereby place him in class with dangerous criminals? Most certainly not! The king of Sweden knows well enough that he is persecuting an honest man who tells the truth. The king of Sweden believes no more in the pulpit twaddle than I do. It was, moreover, a poor piece of diplomacy King Oscar on this occasion was performing. The thrones of Europe are shaking. The royal grounds are growing more volcanic every year. An eruption is ahead, and if its stormy waves should strike the Scandinavian peninsula, which is by no means impossible, King Oscar will verify that the liberal party in Norway and Sweden is stronger, better organized, and more united than he is aware of now. The principles of the liberals is to be peaceable, law-abiding, and to stand by their sovereign in every thing that is in harmony with the constitution of the land. The king's duty is to protect the personal rights of all his subjects; but King Oscar has violated his obligation to one liberal, and thereby to the whole party, thus practically freeing them from their obligations to him. In case of a political emergency the liberals will desert him and rally to the standard of an administration under which a noble hearted man can speak a proven truth and hoist the banner of mental independence without being crushed under the wheel of sacerdotal juggernaut which priestcraft created, and kingcraft is upholding. King Oscar would better beware. The free-minded, undaunted Swedish people, who in the year 1523 said: "Down with Christian the Second!" and in 1809 said: "Down with Gustav the Fourth!" may possibly this year, or one of the following years, say, "Down with Oscar the Second!"

We can do nothing material for our friend Lennstrand at present; but we can in spirit extend our hand to him across the ocean with the warm sympathy that binds true liberals to each other, and, as live seed find their own ground, we feel assured that the glorious plant Victor E. Lennstrand, with heroic self-sacrifice, is nursing, will spread its roots and fruits throughout his native land, and eventually force priestcraft and bigotry to draw its last breath under the whip of the true light in the unfettered hand of awakened humanity.

Mrs. Lindal spoke with great animation, and although handicapped by a slight foreign accent, made her points clear and held the close attention of the audience.

Dr. E. B. Foote, of New York, said that the most cheerful place he had found in San Francisco was the store and office of the Freethought Publishing Company. In traversing the block upon which these quarters were located he had discovered a sombre gospel shop or Gospel Hall, as it was called, in close proximity. It reminded him of his journey overland, when one night he went to sleep among the clouds and storms of the Sierras, and in the morning awoke in the salubrious climate of Oakland. Such was the difference between the foggy atmosphere of orthodoxy and the bright sunlight of Freethought.

The president here read the following letter from Judge J. W. North, of Fresno, first vice-president of the California State Liberal Union:

739 Q STREET, FRESNO, Jan. 15, 1890.

FRIEND PUTNAM: It would give me great pleasure to be with you at the annual meeting, and at the Paine anniversary again, but I shall not be able to do so this year. I have watched with much interest the progress that has been made the past year, all along the line. Good work has been done in the new states, and in the older ones as well. Light is spreading everywhere, the old platforms of orthodoxy are crumbling, the champions of the church are wandering like sheep without a shepherd, the comforting doctrine of eternal punishment has got misplaced, and they know not where they have laid it.

Doctor Field and the New York Evangelist seem strangely lost without either Hell or Calvinism; Doctor McCosh and Howard Crosby are searching for a new Confession of Faith, but whether to call it a new probation or a new purgatory they are not quite certain. Hell must certainly take on milder forms than heretofore, but whether it is our duty to love it still puzzles the theologians. Preaching goes on with increased vehemence, but the old doctrines are strangely confused. They still are eager "to run, but they have no tidings." They still cry, "Master, let me run," and still the answer comes, "Wherefore would ye run when ye have no tidings?" It is hard to pitch the tune of an unending hell to the gospel of love and good will. Election, reprobation, and eternal decrees jar strangely with God's eternal love, and infant damnation still grates on the ears of even tough old Calvinists as they look and long for something better.

But what are the poor churches to do? Calvinism must necessarily be Calvinism. Hell must always be Hell, and eternal perdition can hardly take on a milder climate. It is by no means certain that the perplexed religionists will not, after all, falter and hesitate long before they extricate themselves from their absurd position.

But whether others do or not, we at least will enjoy the privilege of professing belief in the great truths of science, to which there is no dead past or uncertain future.

But the good time coming is already upon us when the joy of a living present, with its light and life and abundant beauty, shall diffuse its brightness over all the paths of life.

J. W. NORTH.

Mr. Marshal Wheeler gave a brief and rapid talk. He said that the monopolists owned everything, and that the church owned the monopolists. His objection to the church was the gag put upon the congregation. The clergymen in the pulpit might insult every person in his audience, and they could reply only under penalty of arrest and punishment. Mr. Wheeler would have this legal gag removed from the mouths of church attendants. He would never enter a hall or sanctuary where the privilege of replying was denied him.

Mrs. Schwartz arose to inquire why more of the Liberal women of San Francisco were not present. She held that every Liberal should bring his wife, daughter, or best girl with him, and if he could not do that he should follow the example of Mr. Schwartz—stay at home and send the woman anyway.

This session closed about the time twilight was coming on.

SUNDAY EVENING.

It was manifest at half past seven o'clock that the evening meeting would be well attended, and at eight there was a big audience present, and the enthusiasm was unbounded. There was good reason for this, as every number on the programme was worth an encore. A brilliant piano solo by Mr. Van Aalst was followed by a zither duet, in which the Misses Haelke captured the audience and evoked the heartiest cheers as yet heard in the hall. The president, however, decided against a recall, and quieted the tumult by promising more of the same music on Wednesday evening.

The Hon. A. Schell, of Knight's Ferry, gave the address of the evening, on "Brains, Science, and Civilization." Mr. Schell, although he has recently celebrated his golden wedding, appears still in the prime of life, as does also his estimable better half, who accompanied him to this city and to the Convention. He spoke with vigor and marked clearness, and not a word of his address could have been misunderstood by any person in the assemblage. The lecture occupied fifty minutes. It will be revised and published in FREETHOUGHT, and afterwards in pamphlet form.

The next number consisted of a recitation by Miss Lillie Arper, the remarkably pretty daughter of Mr. Thomas Arper, of this city. It was perhaps Miss Arper's first appearance before an audience of Liberals, and her repertory had previously consisted of recitations better adapted to church sociables; but when she began Putnam's "Why Don't He Lend a Hand?" and gave it all the meaning of the author, with the added embellishments of good elocution, she struck a sympathetic chord at once, so that applause came in as a chorus to every stanza.

Mrs. Addie Ballou made her address a sort of feminine and spiritual supplement to Mr. Schell's lecture. She said that "Brains, Science, and Civilization" was all right from an intellectual point of view, but needed a certain amount of the emotional rubbed into it. It might be that the size and complexity of the human brain determined its intelligence and activity, and if so, then man must be the superior being, but she held that women with smaller brains had superior intuitive faculties, and could reach conclusions while men were still arguing over the premises. Mrs. Ballou always speaks a good word for her sex, not, as she explains, that she loves man less, but that she loves woman more.

A piano solo by Miss Hildebrande and a song by that beautiful singer Miss Evangeline Ballou were the closing numbers. Miss Ballou is a smaller edition of her eloquent mother. She is a member of the Emma Juch Opera Company, and missed an engagement at the Baldwin theatre in order to sing for the Liberal Convention.

The president closed the Convention and dismissed the audience with an invitation to return and have a good time at the Paine Celebration. The friends lingered for a few minutes to shake hands and congratulate one another over the success of the gathering, the good music and good addresses.

There were not so many present from the country this year as attended a year ago. Among those who came were Philip Cowen, of Petaluma; C. W. Hendel, superintendent of the Excelsior Drift Gold Mine in Sierra county, who left his field of labor covered with fifteen feet of snow; R. Butterfield, of Sacramento, financial agent of the same mine; W. F. Freeman, the man who leads the Liberal movement in Stockton; William Burgess, of National City; D. Buckingham, of Raymond; Mr. Robertson and wife, of Haywards; Mr. Ostello, of Benicia; Mrs. Schwartz, of San Jose; Mr. Schell and wife, of Knight's Ferry, and a fair delegation from Oakland. It was simply impossible for others to reach San Francisco, and the situation had to be accepted. We have tried to give a report covering the principal features of the occasion, so that the absentees may not altogether lose the benefit of the proceedings; but they have missed the sociability, good cheer, and enthusiasm which prevailed, and that is irreparable.

COLONEL INGERSOLL'S IDEA.

There is one point in Colonel Ingersoll's views on penology, says the Morning Call, which is new; and which, at any rate at first blush, appears to be sound. It is that prisoners confined for terms of years in penitentiaries and set at work, should be credited with regular wages for their work, and that these should be paid them in a lump sum when they are discharged from prison. That seems to be a pretty bright idea.

The defect of our penal system is that it breeds criminals. There is no place in the world for an ex-convict. He is a pariah, an outcast, a creature to be repelled, eschewed, driven away. No one wants to know him, much less to employ him. He cannot earn his living honestly, except by moving to some distant place, concealing his antecedents, and assuming a false name. Conscious of this fatal flaw in our system, persons of benevolence have for many years conducted associations which undertake to care for ex-convicts and to procure for them employment at honest labor. The New York and the Ohio associations have been conspicuously active in reclaiming ex-prisoner. But it is due to truth to say that, as a rule, the movement has proved a failure. A few ex-convicts have obtained work through the agency of the societies, but the great bulk of them have either slipped through the hands of the managers of the institutions or have found it impossible, even with their aid, to obtain congenial employment. It is the normal destiny of an ex-convict to drift back to the prison where he was first confined. At San Quentin 70 per cent of the prisoners are serving their second, third, or fourth term.

Under Colonel Ingersoll's plan, the ex-convict would not be exposed to the temptation which often leads to his second offense. Want of means and the impossibility of earning an honest living in many cases lead criminals to break the law. A thief does not usually steal from a love of thieving; he steals to live. Take away his motive and he will perhaps lead an honest life. Under the plan which Colonel Ingersoll recommends, a man sent to San Quentin for five years, which good behavior would reduce to something like four and a half, would receive from the prison authorities a sum of perhaps $500 when he got his discharge. With this he could make his way to some locality where he was unknown, and once there would have a little capital to embark in a small business. He would not be driven to theft to procure a meal. If he did relapse into his evil courses, his backsliding would not be the fault of the authorities, but would be the fruit of his innate depravity, or as Colonel Ingersoll calls it, of his congenital moral deformity. Society's skirts would be clear.

The objection which will be made to the Colonel's plan is that it puts a premium on crime. Many a workman, starting in life, would be glad to be assured steady work for four or five years even at a low rate of wages, and doubly glad if a parental employer prevented him from squandering those wages as he earned them. But this objection is more specious than solid. No man born in this country deliberately covets the cell of a felon. There is a self-respect in the American breast which can be relied upon to prevent any considerable number of persons sighing for the refuge of a penitentiary. The disgrace of such a home outweighs its creature comforts.

Dr. "J. C. P." Prescribes.

To the Editors of Freethought:

We learn by the papers that physicians have recommended whisky as a cure for influenza. It now only needs the testimonial of some "well-known clergyman" to become a popular remedy. Clergymen, however, will hardly testify to a remedy which, if successful, may give another set-back to Prohibition, and cause the old constipates to worry through another week of prayer. Be that as it may, now that the season for colds, coughs, influenza, etc., is upon us, it may be well for all to know, as well as experienced old-timers, that "rum and gum" is a remedy for these complaints, which, if properly used, seldom fails to cure.

I find that men who have experienced the vicissitudes of climate, and suffered the effects of heat and cold—of sand-storms, rain, and snow, and a damp and changeable atmosphere—men who suffer from long hours of labor, and from the fatigue, sweat, and hardships of out-door life, all agree that this is an effectual remedy, without the testimonials of clergymen, whose experience is chiefly confined to their comfortable studies or well-carpeted drawing-rooms.

"Rum and gum," as a cure for these complaints, has no equal, except, perhaps, the "prayer cure." Of these the "W. C. T. U." can take their choice—the latter of course.

J. C. P.
Turlock, Cal.

THE NATIONALISTS.

The eleventh public reception of the Nationalist Club was well attended. Mrs. Addie Ballou, president of the club, occupied the chair.

The proceedings opened with an overture on the organ by Prof. Richard J. Wilmot. James H. White delivered a brief address on the condition of the laboring classes, and recited "Why We Go over the Hills to the Poor House" and Gerald Massey's "The People's Advent."

W. C. Owen, the speaker of the evening, gave an exposition of the principles of Nationalism and the methods by which it can be realized in human development. He emphasized the moral aspects of the movement and its broad and general outlines. He objected to dwelling upon details at present. The single tax, the currency question, etc., could not be thoroughly understood by the masses in the intellectual conditions of to-day, but all can understand the principle of co-operation; that the people as such can do for themselves what the monopolists are now doing; that they can join hands, and united attain far greater happiness than under the existing state. Mr. Owen endeavored to harmonize Nationalism with Individualism and to show that the individual would be better taken care of under Nationalism than he is now. He referred to the overthrow of slavery as the enlargement of individual liberty. However, the cases are not analogous. The overthrow of slavery was a restriction of the function of government, taking away the power to hold property in man, while Nationalism is a stupendous enlargement of the functions of the state. Whether this enlargement, this control of vast individual interest, can exist without a serious infringement upon the individual is a question that presses with great weight upon the independent thinker. Would the success of Bellamy's scheme be the triumph of art, of music, of poetry, of romance? all of which depend upon the utmost individuality for their transcendent expressions.

Mr. Owen spoke well, and he has evidently thought widely and deeply on the subject of reform. He deals more with the philosophy than the politics of the matter. I think, however, he made a mistake in neglecting the criticisms of FREETHOUGHT upon the movement and some of its representatives as "carping criticisms." These criticisms were made simply in the spirit of inquiry and for the purpose of elucidating the truth. Nationalism and workers in it must not be placed on an orthodox pedestal to be free from criticism. Criticisms are always in order and are of the utmost benefit. No matter how harsh, they serve to bring out what is of real value. If Mr. Owens had been a student for awhile in the New York Liberal Club, he would have learned the benefit of criticisms. The only way to discover the strength of anything is by criticism. Don't let Nationalism or Mr. Haskell be treated like babies. No reform can be nursed into empire, and no man is fit to be a leader who can't bear all sorts of criticisms. Let there be no begging off. Let Mr. Haskell meet the issue fairly and win by achievement. Anonymous and private attacks on character are despicable, and should be resented by every honorable man, but open, frank, and above-board criticism should be welcomed by every one who has faith in his work. If the criticisms are true, he can profit by them; if not, he can pass them by—they can't hurt. I don't think that Haskell, like poor Keats, will let himself be "snuffed out by an article," but, like Byron, he will give as well as take, and be more audacious than ever. FREETHOUGHT will continue to criticise, for it believes in criticism; it believes in pointing out faults as well as virtues, in showing the weakness as well as strength in any movement. The curse of history is that as at present written it is an epitaph—all praise and no blame—and history to-day is one big lie, as Wendell Phillips says: Washington himself would be surprised to read his own biography. I don't think he would recognize himself. Give us the evil as well as the good of men, the frailties as well as virtues, and history will then be a lesson to humanity and help it to better things. As it is written now, it is mostly a mere spectacle, a display of wax figures instead of living human beings. The object of FREETHOUGHT is to give life, history, civilization exactly as it is. Don't let Nationalism be a "goody-goody affair." Let it be like the oak and grow lofty and far-spreading, because it does wrestle with the storm.

After Mr. Owen's excellent address, which was received with great applause by the audience, Mr. Bernard Schaff rendered a violin solo, with piano accompaniment by Miss Mate Hildebrande.

Mrs. Addie Ballou then made a brief and eloquent address, speaking of the work to be done for woman as well as for man, and for little children, too, who should not be placed in houses of toil to earn a bare pittance, twenty cents a week, for the benefit of poverty-stricken homes, but should have the sunlight and the blue heavens in order that they may be sources of strength to coming generations, and not of weakness and crime. If goodness leads to happiness, even so does happiness lead to goodness, said the speaker. Make people happy and they will be good, was the applauded sentiment.

The proceedings of this interesting meeting were closed with an organ solo by Professor Wilmot.

I hope Nationalism will go ahead, but FREETHOUGHT will continue to criticise. Honor where honor is due, but truth always. Anything that can't bear opposition is in its grave-clothes already.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

LETTERS ON THE LAND QUESTION.

MR. SPENCER'S SECOND LETTER.

To the Editor of The Times:

SIR: As Prof. Huxley admits that his friend A. B.'s title to his plot of land is qualified by the right of the state to dispossess him if it sees well—as, by implication, he admits that all land-owners hold their land subject to the supreme ownership of the state, that is, the community—as he contends that any force or fraud by which land was taken in early days does not effect the titles of existing owners, and a fortiori does not effect the superior title of the community—and as, consequently, he admits that the community, as supreme owner with a still valid title, may resume possession if it thinks well, he seems to me to leave the question standing very much where it stood; and since he, as I suppose, agrees with me that any such resumption, should a misjudgment lead to it, ought to be accompanied by due compensation for all artificial value given to land, I do not see in what respect we disagree on the land question. I pass, therefore, to his comments on absolute political ethics.

"Your treatment is quite at variance with physiological principles," would probably be the criticism passed by a modern practitioner on the doings of a Sangrado, if we suppose one to have survived. "Oh, bother your physiological principles," might be the reply. "I have got to cure this disease, and my experience tells me that bleeding and frequent draughts of hot water are needed." "Well," would be the rejoinder, "if you do not kill your patient, you will at any rate greatly retard his recovery, as you would probably be aware had you read Prof. Huxley's 'Lessons on Elementary Physiology,' and the more elaborate books on the subject which medical students have to master."

This imaginary conversation will sufficiently suggest that, before there can be rational treatment of a disordered state of the bodily functions, there must be a conception of what constitutes their ordered state; knowing what is abnormal implies knowing what is normal. That Prof. Huxley recognizes this truth is, I suppose, proved by the inclusion of physiology in that course of medical education which he advocates. If he says that abandonment of the Sangrado treatment was due, not to the teachings of physiology, but to knowledge empirically gained, then I reply that if he expands this statement so as to cover all improvements in medical treatment he suicidally rejects the teachings of physiological principles as useless.

Without insisting upon that analogy between a society and an organism which results from the interdependence of parts performing different functions—though I believe he recognizes this—I think he will admit that conception of a social state as disordered implies conception of an ordered social state. We may fairly assume that, in these modern days at least, all legislation aims at a better; and the conception of a better is not possible without conception of a best. If there is rejoicing because certain diseases have been diminished by precautions enforced, the implied ideal is a state in which these diseases have been extinguished. If particular measures are applauded because they have decreased criminality, the implication is that the absence of all crime is the ideal. John Morley, M. P., to ascertain his opinions on certain political and social topics, I was intrusted by my fellow-members of their election:

President, S. P. Putnam, Secretary, Emil S. Lemme,
Treasurer, A. H. Schou.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Ranford Worthing, San Diego, W. F. Freeman, Stockton,
Philip Cowen, Petaluma; Wm. Schroeder, San Francisco,
W. S. Rodgers, Boulder Creek, John Robinett, Nipomo,
Mrs. Kate Parker, Anaheim, J. E. Clark, Los Angeles,
R. H. Schwartz, San Jose.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

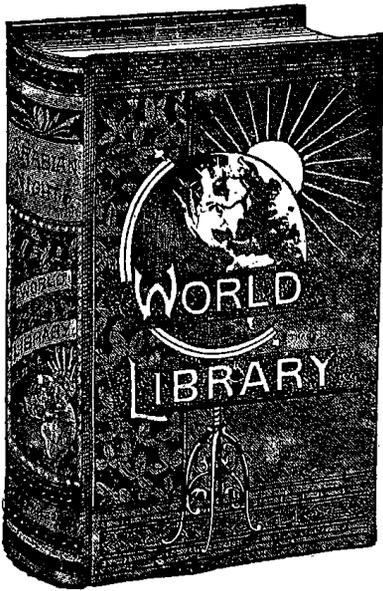

J. W. North, Oleander, N. D. Goodell, Sacramento,
F. Schuenemann-Pott, S. F., A. Schell, Knight's Ferry,
John Riffin, Los Angeles, H. L. Shaug, Del Mar,
N. Woolsey, Messina, Samuel McHenry, National City,
P. A. Clark, San Jacinto, W. H. Pepper, Petaluma,
R. F. Grigsby, Napa, John McGlashan, Ukiah,
Thomas McCowan, Ukiah, Rufus Butterfield, Sacramento,
O. T. Davies, Brighton, S. Littlefield, Anaheim,
Robert Gunther, Eureka, Mrs. L. P. Langley, Santa Barbara,
John E. Jones, Round Valley, H. W. Faust, San Francisco,
B. B. Rockwood, San Pasqual, H. W. Walker, San Francisco,
W. A. Chess, Monrovia, Charles French, Pomona,
Mrs. D. J. Broneer, Oakland, W. P. McCord, Hanford,
H. L. Haelke, Oakland, D. Buckingham, Raymond,
James Beazell, Livermore, Leonard Parker, Anaheim,
Robert Laramore, Fresno Flats, Mrs. E. M. Hansson, Merced,
A. K. Coward, Norwalk, Laura deForce Gordon, Lodi,
Mrs. R. H. Schwartz, San Jose, Charles Rodgers, Boulder Creek,
Charles Haas, Stockton, J. C. Gage, Stockton,
L. R. Titus, San Jose, Freeman Parker, Petaluma,
Ed. Wegner, Sonoma, Theodore Gorner, Livermore,
Wm. Burgess, National City, A. N. Burgess, National City,
E. A. Denicke, San Francisco, R. H. Nason, Gilroy,
John Dibble, Santa Clara, R. H. Bliss, Camptonville,
R. W. Barcroft, Hornitos, Mrs. P. Van Hoeter, Grass Valley,
J. R. Horsley, jr., Oakdale, Samos Parsons, San Jose,
T. J. Conley, Visalia, D. W. Perkins, San Jacinto,
T. W. Brooks, Pomona, J. M. Voss, Los Angeles,
Joel Parker, Orange, C. Severance, Los Angeles,
Herman C. Fry, Nipomo, John Mewhinney, Pomo,

question of papal infallibility. The sympathies of Mr. Knight, it was plain to be seen, were with our revolutionary sires.

W. F. Freeman, of Stockton, gave one of that kind of addresses which, while not rhetorically ornate, get home to the reason and sense of the listener. He remarked that he had never experienced the disadvantage of a Sunday-school education. He had never been a great talker, which, in earlier life, he regretted, but which in later years he found was for the best after all. He had noticed that most of the speakers were hard up financially, and if he had been gifted with oratory he might now have been in the same condition. By looking after the loaves and fishes he had got a little ahead and was able to offer pecuniary assistance to those who do the talking. Mr. Freeman referred to FREETHOUGHT and the publishing business just established, and assured his hearers that they could do no more effective work than by the circulation of Liberal literature.

Mrs. A. Lindal, who is a native of Denmark, an accomplished linguist, and withal a lady of education, refinement and good sense, spoke concerning the imprisonment at Stockholm of Victor E. Lennstrand, editor of the Swedish Freethought paper. After referring to the honors recently paid to Giordano Bruno in Rome, she said:

At the same time we rejoice in the memory of friends that are no more among us, I wish to attract your attention to a living friend and ally of ours, who from the gloomy cell of a prison in far-off Sweden sends his greetings to us—a young man whose name is echoed with sympathy throughout Europe and also on this continent—a hero whose crime is that he had the manliness and vigor to advocate his and other's most sacred right, the right to speak the truth, the right to tear asunder the fetters with which the human mind and intelligence has too long been chained to the feet of spooks and phantoms of by-gone ages. It is Victor E. Lennstrand. Sweden is a respectable country, with a populace as moral, intelligent and enlightened as can be found in any land, but priestcraft prevails there as it does in every monarchy cursed with an established state church. A clause in the constitution provides that the king and all who hold government office must

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRAIG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY. A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESS.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last a heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavilion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERLEY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir. Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portrayal of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. PRESCOOT.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll,) with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated late scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALLOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POE'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

PLAIN HOME TALK

ABOUT THE Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

—BY— EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1 50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

FREETHOUGHT

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Samuel P. Putnam, Lecturer and Editorial Correspondent. | Geo. E. Macdonald, Editor and Business Manager.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

Freethought Publishing Co

This journal is devoted, religiously, to the eradication of all forms of superstition, Christian or otherwise; and politically, to the advocacy of those principles inculcated by the

Nine Demands of Secularism.

FREETHOUGHT is not committed to any of the current methods of social reform, but its columns are open to the discussion of all of them. It welcomes agitation and discussion of all subjects, religious, political, ethical, and social.

Its Correspondents are all who have anything valuable to say on the above questions; who know how to express their thoughts in readable English, and who desire for an audience several thousand of the most intelligent people of the country.

FREETHOUGHT has no set list of contributors of articles written to order. It aims to give the news of the Liberal movement everywhere. It believes that the seeds of Freethought have been planted, and that the great work now before us is to cultivate their growth.

The paper circulates from Florida to Alaska, and from this coast to Maine.

ADVERTISERS

who wish to reach large numbers in all parts of the Pacific Slope will find space in its columns a remunerative investment.

EVERY LIBERAL THINKER

should read FREETHOUGHT. They will find it lively and at the same time in dead earnest; plain and direct, without being offensive.

Subscriptions—One year, $2; Six months $1. Four new subscriptions in one remittance, $5.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc, worth $35, for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do., $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
" "	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded.

Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

IF YOU WANT TO KNOW

All about the human body, in health and disease, nature's secrets revealed, How life is perpetuated, health maintained, disease induced, death delayed, How to marry your own mate, and transmit wealth of health to posterity, Read the most popular, comprehensive and useful book treating of which Dr. Eadon declares to be "priceless in value, new, startling and very instructive." The latest edition is more complete and valuable than ever, having been re-written in important parts. It contains AN APPENDIX of great practical utility made up of

MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

OVER 200 PRESCRIPTIONS OR RECIPES

For Acute and Chronic Disorders Common to Adults and Children, a complete table of poisons and their antidotes (from highest authorities), illustrated directions for resuscitating the drowned (prepared for Health Boards), and hygienic rules for care of infants; also

ORIGIN OF LIFE AND DEVELOPMENT OF MAN,

tracing the embryo from conception, through all stages to birth, illustrated by Over 20 Beautiful Colored Lithographs, on fine plate paper, such as are to be found only in high priced, imported medical works; and to illustrate the anatomy, and relative positions of important parts, each book is also embellished with

THREE ELEGANT CHROMO CHARTS OF VITAL ORGANS.

Murray Hill Publishing Co., 129 East 28th St., N. Y.

Circulars Free. Address

Price, cloth bound, by mail, $1.50; Liberal Discounts to agents.

In court—"Prisoner, have you anything to say in your defense?" "Your honor, I beg you to consider, before pronouncing the sentence, that the only reason I steal is so as not to be loafing about the streets all day."

MARBERRY (holding baby on train, a good deal flustered)—"M. dam, I was perfectly willing to hold you baby for a moment, but now that he's swallowed my locket, I should like to know whether you want to buy or sell."

SOMETHING NEW

—THE—

"COSMIAN HYMN BOOK."

—A COLLECTION OF—

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

(WORDS AND MUSIC)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies,
For Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price$1.50

Address orders to

L. K. WASHBURN,

Revere, Mass.

ROMAN RULE OR RUIN.

BY Z. SHED.

A Summary of the atrocities committed by the Catholic church.

Price, 10 cents; four copies, 25 cents; ten copies, 50 cents. Address

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,

838 Howard street, San Francisco.

A REGULAR EDUCATED AND LEGALLY QUALIFIED PHYSICIAN, and the most successful (in his specialty) as his practice will surely prove. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men such as seminal weakness, impotency, &c., resulting from indiscretion and ignorance of youth. Those who are ailing should send ten (10) cents for his book, "Private Counsellor," setting forth an external Application—

A POSITIVE CURE

The book is worth many times its cost, and should be read by the young for instruction and the afflicted for relief.

All Communications Strictly Confidential.

Plain Envelopes used. The book spoken of sent sealed. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, NEW JERSEY Say where you saw this Advertisement.

[From the Washington National View.]

Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, New Jersey offers his valuable services to all those in need of a kind, sympathetic and skillful physician. Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been assailed and exposed by the press, but, Dr. Fellows, a specialist, in his line, stands foremost in his profession, and the encomiums showered upon him publicly as well as in private, are flattering evidences of the high appreciation and confidence his long and conscientious devotion to his specialties in his profession have so justly merited for him, and it is safe to trust him.

A Testimonial.

WEST LIBERTY, O., Aug. 12, 1888.
DR. R. P. FELLOWS—Dear Sir: The remedy you sent is working like a charm. I am completely surprised the way it acts upon the organs. Have only been using it one week, and that weakness, (seminal weakness) is coming out all right. Yours respectfully, J. R.

REMARKS—The above is a fair sample of the hundreds of testimonials received from all parts of the United States, from young, middle-aged and elderly men, suffering from various kinds of sexual complaints, but who are now cured by my External Application, the greatest of all known remedies for this class of diseases. As I am an out and out Liberal I trust the Freethinkers of the Land will give me their patronage, and not waste their time and money on Christian doctors. DR. FELLOWS.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future

Republic of North America

BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1. Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond"..... 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, PUTNAM & MACDONALD, 04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

REMSBURG'S WORKS.

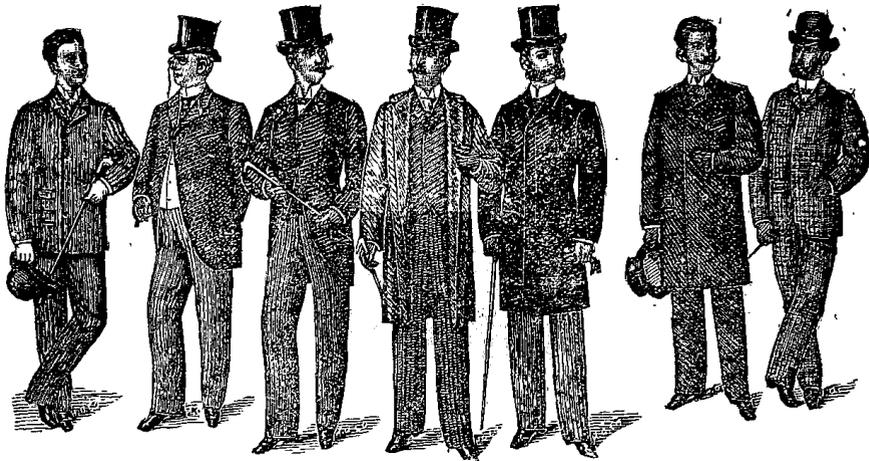

False Claims. Price 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Anti-slavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic.

Fathers of the Republic. Paine, Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. Price 15 cents.

Bible Mora's. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR..... $25.00
 DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
 PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.
 TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET,
 OLIVER HENCKLEY - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
 Telephone 1950.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED, 375 Natoma st., cor. 5th, S. F.

P. A. CLARK.

CHAS. W. CLARK

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS,
NURSERYMEN.

Catalpas for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines. Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice. Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address CLARK BROS.,
 P. O. Box C, San Jacinto, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
 Six Months......75
 Three Months......25

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
 414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Francisco.

Wm. W. NOBLE,

Merchant Tailor,

1222 STOCKTON ST.

Bet. Pacific and Broadway.

DRESS SUITS A SPECIALTY

Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass-by.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
 Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

PRINTING!

Having procured one of the best Presses manufactured and a large assortment of display type, and employing competent workmen, the Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

Letter-heads,

Bill-heads,

Programmes,

Envelopes,

Business Cards,

Postal Cards,

Tickets,

Placards,

Receipts,

Posters,

Dodgers,

Circulars,

Etc. etc.

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.
ALL FOR $1.20.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.
The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year. The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, room 109, Montgomery Block.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND.

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 24 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and 26.

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1463 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.
Rapp & Debarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment, cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schroetzler, 303 Kearny st.
Otto Siuz, 320 Kearny st.

Why Priests Should Wed.

BY JUSTIN D. FULTON, D.D.

A startling book, particularly to those unacquainted with the character of the confessional. Price, $1.50.

Address this office.

PUTNAM'S WORKS.

The New God. 10c. The New God was made by an artist hand, guided by a poet soul. It is as perfect as sculpture. The creator makes his "god" in his own image, and breathes into his nostrils the breath of his own life.—L. K. Washburn.

Golden Throne. A romance. Price, $1 00. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with many thoughts, expressed in many words, the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Walls and Wanderings. A new American story. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1 00. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—John Swinton's Father

I HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE

Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.

13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order.

The Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is entirely damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thief-resisting. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that, ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only.

Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

The Open Court.

A Weekly Journal of Reverent Freethought.

Discussing Problems in Science, Philosophy, Ethics, and Religion.

Subscription for twelve months, $2.00.

—Specimen Copies free on application.—

THE OPEN COURT PUB. CO.,

169—175 La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois.

P. O. Drawer F.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth, obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

THE SABBATH IMPOSTURE.

BY HARRY HOOVER.

Showing that there is no authority for the Sunday laws, either Human or "Divine."

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies 50 cents. Address this office.

GOD IN THE STATE

By E. A. Stevens, Ex-Secretary of the American Secular Union.

—:0:—

This is the best presentation of the argument against God in the Constitution, ever prepared in a pamphlet of its size.

—:0:—

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies, 50 cents.

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,

838 Howard street, San Francisco.

"Bible Contradictions," 15 cents.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters

impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Vol. III—No. 6.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - FEBRUARY 8, 1890.

THE SAN FRANCISCO FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The next meeting of the San Francisco Freethought Society will be held at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, Sunday evening, February 9, at 8 o'clock. A lecture will be given by Marshal Wheeler, Esq.; subject, "The Earth—Its Third Motion." Admission is free, and all are invited.

A BRUNO MEMORIAL MEETING.

Sunday, the 16th, being the anniversary of the martyrdom of Giordano Bruno, the San Francisco Freethought Society will hold a meeting at Union Square Hall (large auditorium) to commemorate the event. There will be a good musical and literary programme, and addresses by Thomas Curtis and S. P. Putnam.

THE OUTLOOK.

The Convention has been held. The work for the year is now spread before us. In spite of the weather, which to all kinds of business has been an immense drawback, the Convention was a success—a success in itself, in number, enthusiasm, and in the addresses of able and eloquent speakers, men and women who are devoted to the cause. The larger success of the Convention lies in its influence, which must be inevitably felt throughout the coast. The reports of the Convention will be in many newspapers and Liberal journals. Those who were not present will read these reports, and there will thus be a constantly broadening effect of the work of the Convention. The general public will realize the growth of Liberalism. Liberals themselves will be more united. There will be less indifference. The principles at stake will be better understood and greater responsibility will be felt by those who recognize the duties of American citizenship. An advance has been made. This everyone can see. Liberalism is more powerful, better equipped to-day than a year ago. It has shown its capacity to meet difficulties. It can endure the storm.

Of course we are at the beginning still in the pioneer work. A more than "seven years' war" confronts us. There is many a long campaign before the stacking of arms. We must climb hills and plunge through forests. The way is not clear. The hope of success is ours, and hope is the greatest inspiration of the human heart. Hope burns brighter. In the old as in the new world the hosts of freedom progress. The marble front of Bruno, with sunshine on its brow, faces the Vatican, and the pope prays and fasts in the darkness of his own dungeon. The flags of Freethought toss over the Eternal City. The czar trembles in his palace, Lennstrand is in prison, but the fires of Freethought burn on, and the prison is illuminated with victory. The forehead of the king is branded with shame. The Westminster Confession of Faith begins to skulk away. It is wounded in the house of its friends. It has become a skeleton in the closet to the churches. They want to hide it away. The pulpits feel the thrill of thought. The ambassador of God becomes a Lucifer, and steps down and out, and the congregation applauds and follows.

So hope brightens. Light flashes from a thousand points around the world. But we must not be blind to the immense opposition that exists to the triumph of liberty. Think of the millions who are still ignorant and bigoted and superstitious. Think of the vast organizations rooted in the past that still exploit the curse of religious authority. Think of intelligent men and women still professing to believe the rib story and the whale story. The belief is absurd and hypocritical, but what does it mean at bottom? It means ecclesiastical despotism still. Those who accept this belief as a matter of conformity, and not of conviction, are ready to enforce it upon others by law. All these retrograding forces exist, even in the midst of intelligence and culture, and not immediately will the old wrongs be righted.

So hope brightens, but the burden of work is not removed. Without hope we could not labor, but with hope, the cheering rays breaking from every quarter, we can keep up the conflict and await the "long result of time."

We work with hope, but the utmost energy must be put forth in order to win. Freethought has fought a brave fight, and maintained itself at the front. It means to keep there even if the heavens do fall and another deluge comes. But the only way to overcome disasters is to push on to fresh successes. It won't do to wait. It won't do to drift. We must catch every favoring breeze. We must double our ranks, increase our ammunition. Think of the enormous struggle that has been going on since the days of Hypatia. She was the representation of philosophy and science. Crowds followed her illustrious footsteps, and yet she was torn to pieces by a furious mob. The same battle exists to-day. The same bigotry, the same barbarism, exists to-day. The same danger threatens to-day. Philosophy and science are not yet triumphant. Only the few are with us after all. It is the same as a thousand years ago. There are a horde of savages lurking in dark corners ready to burst forth when the word is given, just as ready to-day to slay the fair and beautiful, as in the time of the noble Hypatia. Realizing this, and realizing all that is good and glorious in the world, realizing the splendid triumphs that have been achieved, we must see the giant forces that are arrayed upon the other side, and what has been achieved is but the beginning of what must be achieved for truth, for reform, and for freedom.

FREETHOUGHT IN BOUND VOLUMES.

The bound volumes of FREETHOUGHT for 1888 are no longer procurable, but we have just received from the binder's

BOUND VOLUMES OF FREETHOUGHT
FOR 1889,

which we can furnish to those desiring them at $3 each. It is a very large and handsome volume, embracing 832 pages and being finely bound in cloth with leather back and corners. Every subscriber will remember the hundreds of good articles it contains, and it is a marvel of cheapness at $3.

SASIA ON EVOLUTION.

The head of the Jesuit order in California, Rev. Joseph Sasia, has lately given a lecture entitled "The Modern Theory of Evolution." He remarked that the latest alluring idea with which scientists were undermining society was the doctrine called evolution, which was in direct opposition to the teachings of Catholicism. This specious doctrine, said the reverend speaker, according to the Call's reporter, teaches that man is the final result of "a protoplasm—a nucleus of matter which, as ages succeeded ages, evolved, first the lower forms of inorganic life and gradually developed into successive orders from the mineral to the animal, from the animal to the intelligent being."

If Mr. Sasia spoke as above represented, he has given the most remarkable exposition of the theory of evolution the Christian world has ever been favored with, and his subsequent assertion that the leading scientists of the day "condemn these statements in no unmistakable terms" need cause no surprise. A theory which rests on evolution from "a protoplasm" to the "lower form of inorganic life" may well excite the denial of the scientific world. As explained by its advocates, evolution involves the integration of matter and concomitant dissipation of motion, attended by a continuous change from indefinite, incoherent homogeneity to definite, coherent heterogeneity of structure and function, through successive differentiations and integrations. But Dr. Sasia's version of the theory, by proceeding from the organic to the inorganic, reverses the process completely. And then the long step which he takes from the mineral to the animal is one never before attempted, and one which has no parallel in natural history since the creation of Adam from the dust in the Garden of Eden. Evolutionists, as a general thing, interpose plant life between the mineral and the animal, and since Dr. Sasia has overlooked that important domain it is scarcely to be wondered at that he failed to discover the missing link which he deems necessary to a full conclusion. His next step, "from the animal to the intelligent being," is a short one, man being an animal and possessing intelligence in some cases where that gift is not totally destroyed by superstition.

Of course evolution fails to explain what power caused the first protoplasm, but its adherents might easily supply this deficiency by borrowing a phrase from the church and calling it a mystery. A totally incomprehensible mystery is all any reasonable Catholic can demand in default of an explanation.

It is regrettable that Dr. Sasia did not vouchsafe the "incontestable arguments" which prove the fixity of species. He might also have enlightened a benighted world by naming the leading scientists who reject evolution as generally understood; but he seems inclined to leave his hearers and readers in ignorance of these things. Therein, however, he makes a mistake. If he were to give particulars, most Catholics would accept them unquestioningly, but if he leaves the matter open, curiosity might lead some good Catholics to investigate, and then they would find out that what Father Sasia has told them is not true.

HOW TO KEEP BUSINESS MOVING.

The past three months have formed a period of unprecedented business depression in California. Continuous rains have thrown thousands of mechanics out of employment. Sickness and death have claimed more victims than ever before in the same length of time, and a death rate averaging about one hundred per week was last week raised to nearly one hundred and fifty. The mail service has been crippled for a month, freight traffic is at a standstill, and East and North have been cut off from us since New Year's.

Of course all this has had a depressing influence upon FREETHOUGHT. And right here we may say that except for the formation of the Freethought Publishing Company the paper could not have survived. Under the best of circumstances there has never been a surplus, and with mail delivery cut off, the lecture receipts wholly stopped, and business depression everywhere, we should have been stranded. But the sale of five hundred shares, amounting to $2,500, has saved the day, and, to use a familiar phrase, has set us up in business.

But the work has just begun, and all Liberals must desire to see it go on to success. To this end incessant activity is necessary.

First, we wish to largely increase the circulation of FREETHOUGHT, which may be done by every subscriber putting forth a little personal effort. We offer as a premium two books to be selected from the list printed on another page. These books do not cost us a dollar each, but they are worth that as books go, so that even if the subscriber sets no value at first upon the paper he will get his money's worth in another way. We hope that friends will do what canvassing they can for subscribers, or at least send a list of names of those who might subscribe upon receipt of a sample.

Second, give us your orders for books. We have every work in the Liberal line to be found on the coast, and can procure anything handled by the trade here or elsewhere. No matter what the name or nature of the work you want, give us a chance to fill your order.

Third, we would like to have all our friends become stockholders in the Freethought Publishing Company. Not alone will their investment enable the Company to enlarge the scope of its work, but, by establishing a common interest, it will bring them closer to the other members of the Liberal fraternity.

THERE was a fine Paine celebration in Stockton last week. "People began coming in early," says the Stockton Mail, "and by the time the orchestra played its opening selection the house was jammed from the pit to the rear by an audience from among Stockton's best people. Some were there out of respect to the memory of Thomas Paine and others to enjoy the entertainment. All were well satisfied with what was presented them." W. F. Freeman presided. There was an address by George E.

Church, of Fresno, and good singing and recitations by talented artists. Our Stockton friends have a business way of doing things that challenges the emulation of Liberals everywhere.

A MAN with a camera happened along the other day and dragged the inmates of this office into the street for the purpose of photographing them, together with the front elevation of the Freethought Publishing House. Shortly thereafter he returned with a photograph of such quality that we have ordered a few finished up for the benefit of those who desire to know how the place looks to a person standing outside. The detail of the show window is excellent; the bold sign and number appear to advantage; the likeness of Putnam has a familiar look; that of the junior editor is as good as could be expected; Vice-President Browne gazes amicably forth, while the intelligent lady compositor adds a graceful figure to the group. The card is 8x5 inches in size, and we are able to offer the picture to purchasers for 50 cents each.

FREETHOUGHT has recently received a circular from Wilbur F. Crafts, field secretary of the American Sabbath Union. It is made up of reports of progress achieved by the movement to engrave a Sabbath law on the Constitution of the United States. But the most remarkable thing about it is that it came in an envelope without a postage stamp. It looks as though our pious postmaster-general, Wanamaker, had given Sabbath literature the privilege of the mails without money and without price. How is it? Is Mr. Crafts sending his Sabbath circulars all over the country at the expense of the people?

THE great question before the national House of Representatives, and which has occupied the attention of that body for about a week, is whether a member can be accounted as present if he does not vote. Meanwhile the great question before the People is how long they can afford to pay three hundred and fifty men $13 per day each to wrangle over a matter which at best is of very slight importance.

THE Business Directory now published in FREETHOUGHT should claim the attention of those having occasion to purchase anything in the line of the advertisers; and merchants desiring custom should send us their name, calling, and place of business. It costs but one dollar a year.

IF our readers west of the Rockies want any Liberal book that they see advertised anywhere, and want it at once, let them send to this office for it. Now that the snow blockade is broken it can be but a few days before our new stock arrives, and purchasers will save time by ordering from the Freethought Publishing Company.

WE have put W. S. Bell's address at the late Convention in tract form under the title "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," to sell at the rate of two copies for five cents. It is a thought-provoker.

HENRY GEORGE was greeted by a crowded audience at Metropolitan Temple last Tuesday night, and there was no end of enthusiasm. He spoke in explanation of the single-tax and in defense of free trade.

THE Blair Educational Bill is expected to be up before Congress shortly. The bill provides for teaching the Christian religion in all public schools.

THE other day Henry George was asked, "What do you think of Bellamy's 'Looking Backward'?" and he replied, "I think it is a castle in the air."

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The long blockade on the railroad is broken at last, and Eastern trains are coming through. But there is no prospect of the road opening north for a month.—The shooting sensation of this city last week was the killing of one Garness, a broker, by a man named A. Nold, of Colusa. The murder is the culmination of a family scandal. This week, by way of a murder, we have the shooting of Mark M. Herr, vice-president of the Guaranty Endowment Society, by John F. Naughton, secretary of the same institution.—Another snowslide has occurred at Sierra City, costing several lives.—Thousands of cattle have perished in the snow in Nevada.—The senate of the High School at San Jose has recently decided by debate that Sunday laws are unjust.—Vlarho Bausin, an Austrian waiter, aged 30, was committed to Agnews one day last week by the insanity commissioners. He is very violent, and recently tried to force his way into the house of Peter Jorgensen. The man is suffering from religious dementia, and believes he has a mission to kill all Protestants for having crucified the redeemer. Michael Malony was sent to the Home of the Inebriates. He also is crazy on religion.

The house of B. F. Tracy, secretary of the navy, at Washington was destroyed by fire last Monday morning. Mr. Tracy was removed from the burning building in an unconscious state, but his wife and daughter were burned to death.—There was a small church riot at Buffalo, N. Y., last Sunday over the attempt of an unpopular Catholic priest to hold services in the Polish church. The rioters were women, who attacked the police with all kinds of missiles. Two hundred officers were required to quell the disturbance, and many of them fared badly at the hands of the fanatical Catholic "ladies."—The Rev. B. M. Neal, described as a preacher of wonderful power, now residing at Mt. Vernon, Mo., is charged with bigamy, but declares it to be a case of mistaken identity.—Mrs. Colonel Coppinger, Secretary Blaine's eldest daughter, died at her father's residence in Washington on Sunday morning.—Ten people were burned to death in a Boston tenement house on North street Feb. 1.—Rev. Samuel Maxwell, rector of Trinity Episcopal church, the wealthiest and most fashionable church in Pittsburg, Pa., has sued the vestry and church officials for cumulative damages for breach of contract. The congregation desire his resignation, and refuse to release him the parsonage; hence the suit.—The Rev. E. C. F. Ernst of St. Jacob's church, Buffalo, N. Y., is accused of misappropriating $4700 which he collected to defray the expenses of the organization of a grand musical festival to aid the building fund of the church.—Seth R. Johnson, a lawyer and superintendent of Brooklyn Sunday-school, was arrested lately charged with the forgery of a $500-note on a Chinese society. He gave bail in $5000. The case grows out of Johnson's connection with the forger Chu Fong, one of Johnson's Sunday-school pupils, who is in prison on a charge of uttering $40,000 in forged notes.—The Rev. W. H. Pollard was arrested at Saratoga, N. Y., on complaint of the Rev. Mr. Hartley and Mr. Rice, charged with wilfully and maliciously disturbing the peace. It grew out of speaking on the street. Mr. Pollard says he had a perfect right to speak, being a Christian minister.

The Sun correspondent at Lyons, France, sends the following cablegram: An action at law has arisen here about the skull of a saint. The needy scion of an old family being pressed for money sold the skull of Bishop Soanen, an ancient prelate of the Basses Alpes, who had been canonized, to a dealer in bric-a-brac. The purchaser consulted a friendly broker, who told him he knew a lady who possessed the jawbone of the same saint, and introduced the dealer to the lady, who bought the skull for $200. The broker demanded half as commission. The dealer refused, and the matter is now thrown into court.—The latest about Boulanger, the French impostor, is that he was a frequent visitor to the house on Cleveland street in London where the English aristocracy were wont to entertain each other with immoral practices.

OBSERVATIONS.

There were high jinks at the meeting of the San Francisco Freethought Society last Sunday night. The hall was filled to overflowing shortly after half past seven, so that, all the audience possible being present, the solemnities were inaugurated ahead of time.

Deacon Walker was full of business, hunting up extra chairs, and then looking for a place to put them.

The exercises consisted of a debate between Col. H. L. Knight, Deist, and S. P. Putnam, Atheist, on the question naturally arising from their differences of opinion, to-wit, "Is there a God?" Vice-President Lemme occupied the chair, introduced the combatants, and called time.

Mr. Knight led. He is a relic of the Mexican war, and the moustache and imperial which he wears give him a soldierly aspect. Mr. Knight has discarded that article of clothing called a vest, and when he signalized a point by putting his hands in his trousers pockets and bowing smilingly to the audience, he displays an expanse of well-ordered shirt front, which holds the close attention of all within the sound of his voice.

By way of exordium, Colonel Knight observed that the question of the existence of God was one of great importance to the human race, and had attracted the attention of many eminent philosophers previous to the present occasion. He believed he could prove that there was a God from circumstantial evidence. There were phenomena in nature which it was evident sunshine, air, and earth combined could not produce. Hence God must have produced them. At any rate it satisfied him to say that God did it. He believed that there was a supreme divine mind that moves the atom to its purpose. When all statements that could be made concerning any thing were demonstrably absurd except one, it followed that that one must of necessity be true. Such was the rule followed by law-courts. It is not reasonable to suppose that things could come as they are without God. There was a time when the great phenomena of nature had no audience. Then came eyes. How were these produced without God? It is said that actinic rays and so forth acting upon the spot where eyes were expected had finally produced sight. The speaker would have somebody expose their shoulder to these influences and see whether an eye could be produced by that method. He believed it was God who made the eye and the other organs of sense. Again, the five different races of men, originating wide distances apart, yet reaching practically the same estate, showed the work of an almighty hand. We are obliged to assume the priority of either the hen or the egg. Mr. Knight placed the hen first, and held that God made the original father and mother of each species.

This opening address occupied half an hour. Colonel Knight is full of the kind of fun that keeps an intelligent audience in good humor, and did not fatigue his hearers.

Then Putnam took the floor. He differed widely with his learned opponent concerning the importance of the question under discussion. For practical purposes it made no difference whether there was a God or not, since if he existed, we were ignorant of the fact and unable to recognize him. Discussion of the question could amount to no more than intellectual amusement. The universe, the speaker said, is a riddle. No one professes ability to solve it except theologians, who explain it by attributing everything to God, who is a still greater riddle. Scientists do not deal with the origin of things except as light is thrown upon the subject by a study of the processes of nature. Mr. Putnam would not contend that evolution could produce an eye on the shoulder of a man, such an operation being unnatural. It ought, however, to be an easy thing for God to do, and if Mr. Knight could show him a man with an eye in his back, produced by exposure to actinic rays, it would be a better proof of a miracle-worker than any evidence yet offered. The same circumstantial evidence relied on to demonstrate the existence of God was multiplied a hundredfold by the evidence going to prove a devil. He was surprised to hear his opponent bring up the old argument of the hen and the egg, when any one's reason must teach him that the egg was first. Mr. Putnam maintained that Mr. Knight had introduced no evidence to show that there was a God, and that therefore there was none for him either to examine or rebut.

A general discussion followed. Mr. Thomas Curtis approved the view of Mr. Putnam, and cited many interesting facts in nature to support it.

Dr. E. B. Foote referred to new species in animal and vegetable life which went to show that Mr. Knight's scientific knowledge was not all-embracing.

Mr. Hambley, captain of the Nationalist forces in this precinct, said that he formerly believed in God, but had read Paine's "Age of Reason" and upon the strength of it had discarded that belief.

A young man who gave a name which sounded like Debanker, and who stated that he was from New Zealand, started in well to support the affirmative proposition, but soon lost his grip. Said he, the prostrate man need not be told that love of God is better than gold. The applause following this sentiment so rattled Mr. Debanker that he was unable to proceed, and, remarking to Mr. Lemme that he guessed he was "bowled out," he waved the chair a "tough" adieu and subsided.

Mr. G. W. Thurston told a funny story about a little girl who, after having been impressed with the omnipresence of God, observed her pet dog following her, and sent him home at once, saying it was quite enough for her to have God tagging her around all the time, without the addition of a dog.

Mr. Adams followed with some Atheistic reflections, and then the opening speaker, Mr. Knight, recurred. Mr. Knight was candid enough to say that were he the judge he should unhesitatingly give the victory to Mr. Knight, since the argument of Mr. Putnam was defective and insufficient. He then pointed out how his opponent had wandered from the question under discussion and had failed to meet the conclusive and overwhelming argument advanced against his position. It was by this method that Mr. Knight kept his audience amused.

If there had been time, some half dozen more addresses would have been made.

At the next meeting Mr. Marshal Wheeler discusses the third motion of the earth, which, he holds, explains many otherwise unsolvable problems.

As it often happens that the disciple is more skilled in popularizing a new doctrine than the originator himself, I read Mr. Hugh O. Pentecost two years ago in the hope that he would throw upon the single-tax doctrine the light which I had not been able to get from a perusal of Henry George. I have always been free to confess that I cannot understand how the shifting of taxation from one class of property to another would lessen the burden borne by the producer; or how the proprietorship of improvements on land would differ practically from ownership of the land itself, since the improvement is inseparable from the soil, and control of the land is necessary to their enjoyment. I say I read Mr. Pentecost in order to get more light, but about the time his critics had driven him into the place where he must defend the single-tax doctrine effectually or give it up, he gave it up. Then he announced in italics the new and, as he claimed, unassailable proposition that ownership of vacant land was indefensible and the root of all evil. This was six months ago or more, and I have been waiting patiently ever since for the argument to show the practical difference between proprietorship based upon use and that based upon a title deed. His proposition, as I understand it, is that land belongs to the person who occupies it, instead of the one who bought and paid for it. He does not, I believe, undertake to inform us what constitutes vacancy in land, or to decide what is occupancy or use.

To take an example: Suppose that, in New York, proprietorship of land is based upon ownership, and suppose that in New Jersey it is based upon use or occupancy. In New York, then, if Mr. Pentecost should proceed to cultivate land which he had not purchased, the owner, i. e., the tenant of the state, would say, "Get off this land; I own it." Crossing the river to New Jersey, where the new order prevails, he would again strike his plow into the sward, and if the first greeting he received was not, "Get off this land; I use it," then I am a convert to the vacant-land doctrine.

A wise writer, treating of the persistency of superstition, once made the remark that any theory, in order to permit of perpetual advocacy, must be not only unproved but also incapable of demonstration. It seems to me that Mr. Pentecost must have apprehended this truth when he launched upon the world the proposition which he now advocates. The question, "What constitutes use of land?" admits of endless debate, and Mr. Pentecost's heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns may discuss it forever without reaching a determination. Hence its value as the fundamental dogma of an economic sect.

PAINÉ ANNIVERSARY.

"Despite the weather," says the San Francisco Morning Call, "there was a very large attendance at the Paine Celebration held under the auspices of the San Francisco Freethought Society in Union Square Hall Wednesday evening January 29, the occasion being the one hundred and fifty-third anniversary of the birth of Thomas Paine, the great Freethinker and writer."

The entertainment began with a zither duet by Miss Laura and Miss Clara Haelke, of Oakland, and this charming melody put to defiance the spirit of the storms, and light and hope blazed within, though the heavy mist was draping the sky without.

Prof. Herbert Miller was sick with "la grippe," and was unable to deliver his address on Thomas Paine.

Mr. Thomas Curtis was introduced. He said that for more than fifty years he had been celebrating the birthday of Thomas Paine, and he expected to do so as long as he lived, and if he turned up on the other side of Jordan he expected to continue it there. Fifty years ago, if any one had got up in an English city and said that Thomas Paine was a perjurer, scoundrel, false writer, etc., everybody would have given him applause. If on the contrary any person said that he was a truthful writer and an honest man, struggling for men's liberties, everyone would have given him a blow, and if he had been found with a copy of Paine's works in his pocket he would have been fined $25 in addition to being imprisoned.

This is all changed now, and the speaker was glad of it, for when a thing goes a certain way for fifty years it is bound to keep on going in the same direction. The key-note of the speaker's remarks was that grand sentence of Paine's, which he considered far superior to anything to be found in the Bible, the sentence beginning: "The world is my country; to do good my religion." He proceeded then with a eulogy of Paine's life and work, and the great progress made by Freethought during the last half century. Referring to those who are in the habit of denominating the great Freethinker as "Tom Paine, the Infidel," the speaker said they should be more gentlemanly and speak of him in a respectful manner. "How would it sound if we were to speak of St. John and St. James, as 'St. Jack' and 'St. Jim' or of St. Peter as 'Pete?' It would at the least be very unmannerly, yet it is a similar case when Thomas Paine is referred to as 'Tom Paine, the Infidel.'"

Mr. Curtis was loudly applauded when he finished.

A piano solo was then given by Mr. Aalst, which, like the rest of the musical programme, was a brilliant attraction for the evening.

This was followed by a song by Mrs. Eugenia Clark and her sisters, Miss Ada and Miss Violet Wheeler, and these favorites, as usual, received the warm applause of the audience for the strains that fire the heart.

A recitation, "The Three Preachers," by Charles Mackay was then given by C. F. Burgman, who eloquently voiced the radical and progressive sentiments of the poet.

Miss Lilly Arper sweetly sang "From Over the Sea," and the romance of the verse was fitly rendered in exquisite tone.

Mr. Schuenemann-Pott was unable to be present on account of sickness, and Mr. Putnam gave an address on "The Signs of the Times" reading an extract from a daily paper containing an account of the secession of Rev. Dr. Cave from the Christian church. Mr. Putnam said that Mr. Cave in his statement of principles concerning the inspiration of the Bible and character of God occupied exactly the same position that Paine did a hundred years ago, and without doubt if their honest opinion was expressed it would be the position of a majority of the intelligent clergy of to-day. Paine said, "I believe in one God and hope for a life beyond the grave." God and Immortality were in the creed of Thomas Paine. Do enlightened Christians of to-day profess anything more? Paine wrote his book, "The Age of Reason," to vindicate the character of God. He accepted a divine revelation, but that revelation, he said, was in all the frame of nature, in every age, in every clime, in the thought and hope of man. Paine believed in a good God, a just God, a God worthy of the reverence of intelligent beings. The God of the Bible is a savage God. It was to overthrow the conception of such a God, to remove its terror from the human mind, that Paine wrote his book. It was written in behalf of reason, of justice and liberty. We honor Paine because he dared to be ahead of his time, because he dared the vengeance of the priesthood in the cause of humanity. Thomas Paine stood for the dignity of human nature, for universal sympathy and brotherhood, for the true reverence which sees a glory in all life. The work of Thomas Paine is as enduring as the ages. He staked everything on the triumph of freedom. He has been covered with obloquy. But the day is coming. Superstition is disappearing. The flame of reason brightens. Humanity begins to respect itself. It looks forward. Christianity is born of the past and is devoted to the past. It does not belong to the living present or to the glorious future. Freethought hails the beaming light. Freethought believes that this world is better and happier to-day than it was yesterday and that it will be better and happier to-morrow than it is to-day. In Thomas Paine we honor the spirit of truth, the spirit of progress, the spirit of liberty, and the nobility of man.

The musical exercises were concluded with a piano solo by Miss Mate Hildebrand, and a song by Miss Evangeline Ballou, and the enthusiastic response of the audience testified its appreciation of the deft fingers and melodious voice.

Then came the merry dance and festival. Young and old remained to enjoy the brilliant occasion. The notes flowed on. The grand march changed to the lancers, and the lancers to the schottische, and the schottische to the quadrille, and the quadrille to the waltz, and the waltz to the Spanish dance, and the Spanish dance to the polka, and the polka to the Virginia reel, and just as the hands of the clock pointed to twelve the assembly broke up, and homeward bound was the order of their going.

So the one hundred and fifty-third anniversary of Thomas Paine has gone upon the roll of time illuminated with a hundred celebrations from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The memory of Paine grows brighter. Ere long the hearts of millions will beat to the refrain of his noble work, and he will occupy his true and honorable position among the fathers of the republic.

"GOD SO LOVED THE WORLD—"

THAT HE DAMNS NINE AND SAVES ONE.

In round numbers, says the New York Sun, the earth has a population of 1,300,000,000, of whom 300,000,000 are professed Christians, the other 1,000,000,000 being Mohammedans, Buddhists, Jews, pagans, and heathens. The whole race was condemned to eternal punishment for the sin of Adam. This was the fall of man, from which there was and is no redemption save through the death of Christ. Biblical chronology gives the earth a period of about 6000 years. From Adam's time to Christ was 4,000 years, during which period no human souls were saved. The population may then have averaged 1,000,000,000. Three generations, or 3,000,000,000, pass away in each century. Forty centuries, therefore, consigned 120,000,000,000 men to eternal fire, and, for all we know, they are there now.

In 1900 years, which have elapsed since the birth of Christ, 57,000,000,000 more of human beings have lived and died. If all the Christians, nominal and real, who have ever lived on the face of the earth have been saved, they would not number more than 18,000,000,000.

Now if we deduct this latter number from the grand total of 177,000,000,000 we find 159,000,000,000 of souls who are suffering the torments of hell fire, as against the 18,000,000,000 who have escaped. But this is not the whole truth. Nobody believes that more than 10 per cent of the professed Christians are saved.

Calvinists themselves say the elect are few. If this is a fact heaven contains but 1,800,000,000 against a population in hell of 175,000,000,000.

BRAINS, SCIENCE, AND CIVILIZATION.*

BY THE HON. A. SCHELL.
PART I.

Man, standing at the head of intelligent creation, demands our profound attention. I shall not attempt to dive deep into the science of anthropology, or to show just how, when, and whence man originally came; but that an instantaneous adult is a physiological impossibility must be apparent to all. Nature never does things abruptly. Invariable and immutable law, without suspension or intermission, governs the universe. Chaos never ruled the hour; for where law is there can be no chaos. Chaos is the absence of law. But, finding man on the earth, I take him as I find him; whether living in caves, in hollow trees, in crevices of rocks, in the top of trees, in holes dug in the ground; whether living in baronial halls on the banks of the Danube, in cottages on the banks of the Rhine, or in palatial residences on Nob hill; come he from Eden, New York, London, Paris, or any other place in the world's wide domain; whether I find him eating snakes, snails, bugs, insects, shell-fish, or roots grubbed from the soil; whether naked, clothed in rags, skins of wild beasts, armed with stone hatchet and sharp stick as implements of attack and defense; whether eating wheat bread, fruit cake, roast beef—clothed in broadcloth, silk, and satin—armed with Sharp's rifle, Paxton gun, shrapnel and shell, as implements of attack and defense, he appears to me the self-same, original, mysterious and wonderful being.

But whence comes his power? Wherein lies his greatness? In what consists his superiority? Why stands he at the head of creation? He is a thing that thinks! is my answer.

"Cogito ergo sum"—I think, therefore I am—or, sum ergo cogito—I am, therefore I think. Take it which way you will, Descartes says, thought is the ultimate principle of man—it is the last element to which analysis will carry us. In more senses than one it is a great thing to be a man. Man is not now the instantaneous product of creative power, as is alleged was the case in the primitive days of the creation. Babies are now created and grow to be men. Flesh, blood, legs, arms, hands, nose, mouth, eyes, all these put together do not make the man; the brutes possess all these; it is the brain that makes the man.

A man is a thing that thinks. But how? Between the body and brain of man and a galvanic battery there is great similitude. The battery is composed of two metallic surfaces, zinc and copper, which are operated upon by an acid. These surfaces are connected with two corresponding poles of the battery, one negative, the other positive, and these poles are united to a helix of wire which conducts the galvanic fluid generated by the action of the acid upon the metallic surfaces to the magnet of the battery, and there a spark flies off—the eye can see it. That spark is the thought of the battery. No one can tell what it is; we call it electricity or galvanism.

In the human body there are two surfaces also, the mucous and the serous, corresponding with the two metallic surfaces, zinc and copper in the battery, operated upon by the oxygenated blood, which, again, corresponds with the acid in the battery; one is negative, the other positive. These surfaces are connected to a helix or system of nerves that conduct what physiologists call the nervous fluid, which corresponds with the electric fluid in the battery, to the brain, the great magnet of the nervous system; and as the poles approach each other this fluid passes from one to the other, and in its passage thought, the spark of brain corresponding with the spark in the battery, is evolved. We call it thought, and thus and in this way the brain thinks.

The great similitude between the body and brain of man and the galvanic battery goes far to establish a close relation or identity between thought and the correlated vital and physical forces of nature. Thought is purely the production of brain function, or the oxidation of nerve force.

Show me the man who can think without brain, and I will show you the arm that can move without muscle.

The oxygen of the atmosphere oxygenizes the blood in the lungs; the heart propels the blood thus oxygenized to the brain, where it loses its oxygen in the production of thought, and from thence it comes back again to the lungs in a venous condition to receive another supply of oxygen, and then it starts off again, propelled by the heart on another cycle of revolution to furnish the brain with the necessary element of further thought, and the moment the supply of oxygen to the brain ceases, that moment the brain ceases to think, thus establishing the fact in a conclusive manner that thought is the product of organized matter.

It is a fact well known to physiologists that in life the slightest perturbation in cerebral circulation is enough to completely suspend all thought and sensation. To show that I have not overstated the effect of oxygen upon the brain, I refer to the experiment of Brown-Sequard made in the year 1858 at the suggestion of Legallois. This skilled physiologist beheaded a dog, taking pains to make the section below the point at which the vertebral arteries enter their bony sheath. Ten minutes afterwards he sends the galvanic current into the different parts of the head thus severed from the body without producing any result of movement. He then fits to the four arteries, the extremities of which appear in the cutting of the neck, little pipes connected by tubes with a reservoir full of fresh oxygenated blood, and guides the injection of this blood into the vessels of the brain. Immediately irregular motions of the eyes and facial muscles occur, succeeded by the appearance of regular harmonious contractions seeming to be prompted by the will. The head has regained life. The motions continue to be performed during a quarter of an hour, while the injections of blood into the cerebral arteries lasts. On stopping the injections the motion ceases and gives place to the spasms of agony and then to death.

It appears to me that oxygen is the great underlying principle of life and its various attending phenomena in every form. Hence arises the query, Is not oxygen life? Sound, a flood of air-pulses falling on the ear? Light, a flood of ether-pulses falling on the eye? Touch and feeling, the resistance of matter? Taste and smell, which in some respects are similar, the arrangement of the molecules in an odorous substance, at least in isomeric bodies?

When we undertake to think and speak of science and civilization, we can only think and speak of them in relation to man. Before man was, there was no science, no civilization, for the reason that there was no brain, no organized condition of matter susceptible of intellectual manifestations.

Ages upon ages rolled round in the eternity of the past, ere the footprints of man were seen on the face of the earth. For ages, away back in the incalculable past, the morning stars sang in glory together, ere the voice of man resounded through the valleys, or echoed from the hills. For time immeasurable the fawns bounded over the hills and drank the waters of babbling brooks, before the ruthless arm of man was raised to injure them. Go back with me to the dawning and the unfolding of life, whether by supernatural power, or the forces of nature, and then travel down with me along the ages to the development of mental consciousness, and then tell me, ye who can, the time that elapsed from the dawning of such life to the full developed brain of Plato! Professor Gunning, in his "History of our Planet," says: "There were 380,000,000 of years without consciousness; 40,000,000 more of life without brains;" 420,000,000 years! Did the globe, having got life, wait 420,000,000 years for brain? Did it take creation 420,000,000 years to get under headway? And I have sometimes thought when talking upon these subjects, that this vast period of time was too short for some people—they have got no brains yet.

Thought is a mental phenomenon resulting from the development and physical condition of brain; and man's superiority is entirely due to the greater complexity of his brain. Brain, other things being equal or in a normal condition, is the measure of intelligence, of thought, and is the storehouse of accumulated knowledge.

* An address delivered before the Second Annual Convention of the California State Liberal Union.

Brain is a potential factor in the question of science and civilization, but it took brain an immense length of time to emerge from the grand center of life, as it for the first time appears in the vertebrata type, during the Devonian subdivision of the Paleozoic period.

The brain of man advanced to its present perfect and complex condition by the slow progress of growth or development, passing through all the lower forms of brain in the inferior animals. It is said by some that man fell! Yes! man did fall, but he fell upstairs—from the cellar to the garret—and he is still falling in that direction; for man has not yet attained the highest culminating point of intellectual development.

Fletcher, in his "Rudiments of Physiology," says: "It is a fact of the highest interest and moment that as the brain of every tribe of animals appears to pass, during its development, in succession through the types of all those below it, so the brain of man passes through the types of those of every type in the creation. It represents, accordingly, before the second month of utero gestation, that of an invertebrated animal; at the second month, that of an osseous fish; at the third, that of a turtle; at the fourth, that of a bird; at the fifth that of one of the rodentia; at the sixth that of one of the ruminantia; at the seventh, that of one of the digitigrada; at the eighth that of one of the quadrumana; till at length, at the ninth, it compasses the brain of man."

"This, then, is another example of an increase in the complexity of an organ succeeding its centralization; as if nature, having first piled up her materials in one spot, delighted afterwards to employ her abundance, not so much in enlarging old parts as in forming new ones upon old foundations, and thus adding to the complexity of a fabric the rudimental structure of which is in all animals equally simple."

I refer to these facts as showing that the brain of man contains all the rudiments of the brains of the lower animals, and that the intellectual superiority of man is owing to the greater complexity of his brain. The quadrumana next in resemblance in the scale of physical development and intelligence to man, has also a brain next in point of complexity to man. We have now the full accomplished brain of man—the storehouse of knowledge; the great magnet and grand center of radiating thought.

Thought in its flight has no equal; in its velocity, no competitor. Quicker than lightning and swifter than light, it transcends the most subtle forces of nature.

Having a never-failing capital and motive power in this wonderful organ, we are prepared to investigate the causes underlying civilization. And in the beginning, at the very threshold of investigation, I find that the progress the world has made from savagery to civilization is entirely due to intellectual laws, or to the intellectual activity of mankind.

It is said that Egypt was the cradle of ancient civilization—a civilization that at one time outshone in brightness, splendor, and grandeur, the boasted civilization of the nineteenth century—a civilization that had existed and had flourished long anterior to the Christian era.

Of the manners and customs, mode of life, and social conditions of the ancient Egyptians, we can form a very satisfactory opinion from the representations on their monuments. In architecture they occupy the most distinguished place among the nations of the earth. No people has equaled them in the grandeur, the massiveness, or the durability of their structures.

Alexandria became the capital of Egypt—was a superb city, adorned with magnificent edifices, and pre-eminent throughout the civilized world as a seat of learning, science, and art. The museum of Alexandria and its famous library, both founded by Ptolemy Soter, were under him and his son at the height of their prosperity. Demetrius Phalereus, the most learned man of his time, was librarian.

Euclid was teacher of geometry in the school of mathematics in Alexandria. He prepared a work on geometry that challenges the contradiction of the whole human race. For more than 2,200 years it has stood a model of perfection and a standard of exact demonstration. Euclid was a pagan and wrote his work on geometry long before the Christian era; and to-day his geometry is used in our schools.

Great as was the fame of Euclid, it is eclipsed by that of Archimedes, born 287 years before Christ. His connection with Egyptian science is testified to by tradition, and his inventions of the screw intended for raising the waters of the Nile attest his scientific attainments.

The poets, Theocritus, Callimachus, and Philetas were reckoned among the ornaments of the court. The Alexandrian museum assumed the character of a university. In it great libraries were collected, the pride and boast of antiquity.

Side by side, almost in the king's palace, were noble provisions for the cultivation of exact science. Under the same roof were gathered together geometers, astronomers, mechanics, and engineers. Such a comprehensive organization for the development of human knowledge never existed in the world before nor since.

Women were here treated with great respect, and the laws and customs prevailing under the wise governments of the Ptolemies seem to have been so favorable to them that their condition in Egypt was much higher than in any other nation of antiquity. Some were highly educated and gave public lectures in their schools of philosophy. Among them was a beautiful young woman, by the name of Hypatia, the daughter of Theon, the mathematician, who had distinguished herself by her lucid expositions of the doctrines of Plato and Aristotle, and by her learned comments on the writings of Apollonius and other geometers.

Each day before her academy stood long trains of chariots; her lecture room was crowded with the wealth and fashion of Alexandria. They had come to listen to her discourses on those questions which in all ages had been asked, but which never yet had been satisfactorily answered: "What am I?" "Where did I come from?" "Whither am I going?" "For what purpose am I here?" "What can I know?"

Her lectures gave offense to the Catholics. They were denounced by St. Cyril, bishop of Alexandria. On her way to her academy she was assaulted by a mob of monks. Amid fearful yellings of bare-legged and black-cowled fiends, she was dragged from her chariot, and in the public street stripped naked. In her mortal terror she is haled into an adjacent church, and in that sacred edifice her brains are beat out with a club. The corpse is cut to pieces, the flesh is scraped from the bones with shells, and the remnants are cast into the fire.

Draper says: "Thus, in the 414th year of our era, the position of philosophy in the intellectual metropolis of the world was determined; henceforth science must sink into obscurity and subordination. Its public existence will no longer be tolerated. Indeed it may be said that from this period for centuries to come it altogether disappeared. The leaden mace of bigotry had struck and shivered the exquisitely tempered steel of Greek philosophy. The fate of Hypatia was a warning to all who would cultivate profane knowledge. In Athens itself, philosophy awaited its doom. Justinian prohibited its teachings and caused all its schools in that city to be closed. Men of learning were accused of magic and put to death; the profession of philosophy became a dangerous thing; it was made a state crime. And there arose a passion for the marvelous, a spirit of superstition; Egypt exchanged the great men, who had made her museum immortal, for bands of solitary monks and sequestered virgins with which she was overrun."

The dark ages have now set in, and mental darkness, darker than midnight, settled like a pall over the civilized world to last a thousand years.

No longer was heard in her halls of science the sweet voice of Hypatia in her expositions of the doctrines of Plato and Aristotle, or in her comments on the writings of Apollonius and other geometers. No longer before her academy stood long trains of chariots; no more was crowded her lecture room with the wealth and fashion of Alexandria, who had come to listen to her discourses on questions, What am I? Where did I come from? Whither am I going? For what purpose am I here? What can I know?

There lies the mangled corpse of the lovely and intellectual Hypatia. Her voice is stilled in the slumbers of death—murdered by an infuriated mob of monks, excited to the deed by a bishop of the church of Rome.

O execrable heavenly prelate, thou didst kill and murder as much of goodness and greatness as could dwell on earth in one of God's noble creatures; and thou didst send thy hungry vultures, he monks, to pick the flesh from off the bones of thy victim, and didst consign all that was left—all that was mortal of her on earth—to the furnace of cremation. Thou couldst not reach the soul or thou hadst destroyed it—it had fled affrighted from earth away, beyond the reach and power of man—beyond the ethereal blue, and there it shines, and shine it will forever as a brilliant jewel in the constellation of intellectual loveliness.

NEW YORK LETTER.

New York had been on tip-toe of expectancy. It had been assured that the "Gondoliers" was the equal of "Pinafore" and "Patience," and that la grand D'Oyly Carte would send over an incomparable company to present it to Gotham. A goodly crowd wended its way to the New York Theater on the opening night, only to be disgusted with Gilbert, Sullivan, and D'Oyly Carte. The opera is a dismal failure. There is nothing distinguishing in the libretto; the music is thin, although there are some "catching airs" in it. With a good company it would live, and possibly gain a reputation, but Mr. Carte sent over a lot of cadrs, male and female, who can neither sing nor act—that is, acceptably to a New York audience. His wonderful soprano has a virginal voice, which does not win sympathy: and so on through the list. What this manager was thinking of when he shipped these people is unintelligible. He has had experience enough with American audiences to know that mediocrity will not win here. In Paris this company would be hooted off the stage, but here absence and unfavorable criticism is doing its work.

That the company has got to be reconstructed is conceded. Sullivan and Carte are coming over to look at the situation. They cannot come too soon to save their reputation, to rescue this operetta from an untimely death.

Had the angel of death passed over Wall street, he could not have produced a greater blight than the new year has brought. The looked-for activity has not come. The dullness of '89 continues at the expense of prices. The closeness in money at the end of the year has given place to ease and plenty of loanable funds in the street, but this change for the better has had no influence to advance prices. The unseasonable weather has been crushing out the retail trade, to the injury of commission houses. Men are not buying heavy overcoats, or women wraps. The coal bins are not eaten into as in former winters. The coal roads are consequently loaded up with the products which they ought to have sold last fall. These properties are great factors in the speculation of Wall street. They are heavy and apparently must go down. The late Mr. Gowen found the Reading railroad some twenty-five years ago a prosperous corporation—paying seven per cent dividends and selling somewhere about 107. He was an ambitious man, a young American with "broad views." The old foggy management was distasteful to him. He extended, he bought coal lands, he increased the debts of the company, and in time these resulted in bankrupting the road, and it passed into the hands of a receiver. The usual methods of reorganizing were gone through, such as assessing the stockholders and issuing income bonds, scaling down the interest while increasing the debt. Some three years ago the road was taken out of the hands of the receiver, and Austin Corbin, a live New Hampshire banker, was elected its president. Now comes the interesting part. It is charged that Corbin has told the friends of this property that the road had earned the interest on the income bonds and would be paid. It has not been paid; it has been passed, and the books show it has not been earned. This was a staggering blow to the street. Disgusted holders sold out, and men already out say there is no use buying any railroad stock while such monkeying is going on. London is angry, remains out of our market, and even threatens to return the shares she holds. This Reading episode is paralyzing. There is another black spot in the financial horizon—the tight money market in London. The Bank of England has lately put up the rate of discount to seven per cent, and has absolutely refused to sell gold bullion. Exchange is up here to almost a shipping point of goods. These things are causing havoc in the street, that is, driving the public out. The broker cannot live without clients, and clients cannot live without honest dealings between the stockholders and railroad officials.

Our maidens are not through talking about Ward McAllister's ball. That he put Steve Fisk's "in the shade" no one questions. Ward dressed his flunkies in knee-breeches and white silk stockings. This is a move in the right direction. There is no reason why a servant should be dressed in the evening dress of his master. It was Jim Fisk who first put the officers on the Fall River boats in uniforms. Then the idiotic public sneered. It don't sneer to-day. The penny-a-liners are now sneering at knee-breeches. They won't five years from now. The older we grow the more we ape Europe in our social ideas. New countries are aggressive in their notions. To-day Dakota can teach Boston in etiquette, fifty years hence she will copy her. Theodore Thomas has been welcomed at the new Lenox Lyceum. His Sunday evening concerts are a success. Since he abandoned his garden on 7th avenue and 59th street, a change for the better has been going on, and now Mr. Thomas finds an audience capable of appreciating his classical music. Some of your readers will remember the circular building on the corner of 59th street and Madison avenue, where the battle of Yorktown was exhibited. This has been changed to this concert hall—Lenox Lyceum.

Our dudes have another "new wrinkle"—a smooth face. This innovation has some good reason for it. It is not as brainless as most of their fads. This "rara avis" is to-day a beautiful thing to feast the eye on, with his "pants" as big as two gunny-sacks sewed together, a coat, short and small, and a hat as large as a thimble on his head, carrying a stick as large as his spindle legs. This lah-de-dah, "ah-ha" fool is the leader of our fashions, the swell of our fashionable society. There is no doubt that he is a diluted specimen of the old dandy of our fathers.

The friends of Ohio's new senator—Brice—are already talking of making him the Democratic candidate for president in 1892, their theory being that Governor Hill and Ex-President Cleveland will kill each other off. There is one thing certain, no man stands higher in the estimation of his friends than Calvin Brice; they all say that he is the salt of the earth. He is young, rich, brainy, and ambitious. He has been boarding in this city for a number of years. Some of my friends are his friends. I have never met him, and have no sympathy with him politically, but I am happy over his good luck.

The twenty-third annual report of the Board of Charities of this state was issued on October 1, 1889. From it we glean the following interesting items: The appraised value of property held by charitable institutions is $59,695,499.27, an increase of over $3,000,000 during the year. The amount of money devoted to these institutions was $16,156,466.66. The number of inmates on October 1 was 67,781, an increase during the year of 3,459. The inmates were, namely, insane 15,482; idiotic 1330; epileptic 884; blind 657; deaf and dumb 1028; orphans and dependent children 20,949; etc. "During the year the various dispensaries and hospitals of the state furnished medical and surgical relief to 443,341 out-door patients, of whom 26,097 were visited and gratuitously heated at their homes." There was expended in this way $671,671.36.

After more than two years' litigation there has been effected a settlement between Judge Hilton and the heirs of the late Mr. Stewart. The judge turns over to them some $6,000,000. When the plaintiffs rested the judge's counsel assumed that they had no evidence to offer, and consequently they also rested. Since then each side has yielded a point or more, and a compromise and settlement made. Thus ends a suit remarkable for the amount involved and the talent arrayed on both sides.

How Hilton got his influence over Stewart is a mystery, and how he obtained the same over his widow is easily conceived. While he was a hard-headed North of Ireland man, as cold as an iceberg, as unsympathetic as a mule, she was a kind, simple, brainless old woman. He ruled men, created trade. She was ruled, and obedient being ruled. Hilton is a fair lawyer, a pleasant companion, and a man of culture.

Under the agreement 134 pieces of real estate are transferred by Judge Hilton to the heirs. Among these are the Stewart mansion, the Park, the Metropolitan hotel, and the store at 9th and 10th streets. The judge retains all that he received during

Mrs. Stewart's life time. I do not understand that he has surrendered any of his claims except $987,357.86 due him from Mrs. Stewart at her death. I do not see how either side has gained or lost much. Hilton is out $987,000, and the heirs are in that amount, otherwise it looks to "a one eyed man" as though the whole thing ends in a division of the property as willed by the old lady.

Harrigan has obtained a plot of ground for his new theater. It is on 35th street just east of 6th avenue. A colored church occupies it now. He gets possession on May 1, and doubtless will have it ready for use by early fall. It will be small, just what he wants. He gave up the New Park because it was too large. His theory is a small theater well filled is better than a large one half full. This man is a success in low Irish comedy—probably without a rival.

It is to be hoped that our new broom will "sweep clean." Horace Loomis succeeded James Coleman as commissioner of street cleaning. He is a practical engineer, and is said to be an active and honest man. Any one would have been an improvement on Coleman, who was inefficient, and I think dishonest. The heavy rains the past year did more to clean our streets than Coleman's gangs of Italians. Uptown, the citizens were obliged to clean their streets themselves. The question is, where did $1,200,000 go to? No one believes it was honestly spent. It is said that Coleman paid more attention to running Manhattan Club than to his department. County Democracy claims that there is politics in his removal. If there was we like such politics and hope Mayor Grant will give us some more of it. Much will be expected of the new commissioner, and there will be some howling if he don't do his duty.

It is reported that the Stock Exchange has bought an interest in Mackay's Commercial Ticker Company. If there was any brains running that institution we should expect to see some arrangement by which the bucket shops would be reached and crushed, but with the light weight on deck nothing of the kind can be looked for. If they attempt anything they will surely do the wrong thing. The brainy men in the Exchange are never elected its governors. "The boys" always get there. Money is working easier, but business continues dull. The sugar trust has had for the past few days a depressing influence on the market. Its exact status is still undefined. Its legality is unsettled. What is it? It holds property and has issued stock. Where are the stockholders and what do they hold? The bears raid this stock and hammer other securities with it. The disagreeable weather continues, and the death rate continues large. The influenza seems to be losing its grip, but pneumonia is making sad havoc with the young as well as the old. The want of snow will be felt by the lumber trade the coming year. The want of zero weather is exciting our ice companies, and even the milk men are already talking of increasing prices if no ice is housed, as if such a thing is possible. The winter is not over. It is a long time before the first of May. EUDORUS.

CALVIN'S GOD OR NONE.

Two weeks ago I said that the question now up for settlement in the intellectual world is: Is there such a God as John Calvin described or is there no God? I said that if we hold to the existence of a personal God, things being as they are, we are forced to the logical conclusion that he is a bad God.

Some of my hearers and readers cannot see that what I said is true. They do not believe in Calvin's divine monster, but they do not see why we may not reasonably believe in a good God, a God of love. They do not see why we may not have a kind-hearted Heavenly Father who cares for us in this life and who will finally take us to a pleasant heaven if we are good, if we do the best we can. They know that we are not good, that we do not do the best we can, and that we do not even try to do the best we can. But still they do not see why God cannot forgive us our sins and take us to heaven.

They know that the Bible says that God hardened Pharaoh's heart because he wanted to destroy him; that he sent lying prophets to some of Israel's kings to tempt them on to ruin; that he sends strong delusions to persons whom he wishes to turn into hell, to make them believe destructive lies. They know that the Bible says that Jesus was betrayed by Judas and cruelly murdered by the Jews and Romans, in accordance with God's will and plan, and that yet all the actors in that drama were guilty of sinning against God. They know that Paul says that God has the same power over men that a potter has over the clay; and that if he chooses to make some men to be saved for his glory and others to be damned for his glory, nobody has any right to object. They know all this, but they object to Calvinism, which simply puts all this in logical, doctrinal form.

These Bible doctrines have become tough sayings to the average Christian who takes the trouble to think about them at all. And yet I do not see why they should be. Anthony Comstock, who is a good Christian, I am sure, sends docoy letters through the mail for the purpose of tempting persons to violate the law. And many of our devout Christian policemen put on citizens' clothing and go into saloons, whose owners will not "fix" the captain of the precinct, on Sunday morning and tempt the bar-keeper to break the law by selling him liquor. And a Philadelphia judge has just decided that what Mr. Comstock does is all right, no matter how obscene the letters that he sends may be, because when he breaks the law for the purpose of tempting somebody else to break it, it is to prevent the law from being broken; it is to further the ends of justice; it is for the pious purpose of compelling people to be good—to be like Anthony Comstock and the other Christian detectives and policemen.

Now, if our sweet, pure, Christ-like government is carried on in this altogether sneaking and damnable manner, I do not see why we should object to God's being a very large Anthony Comstock. But folks are queer, and now many believers in God are beginning to dislike the idea of his being an infinite detective who tempts people to sin and an almighty policeman who sends them to hell for doing what he makes them do, all for the sole purpose of showing what he can do when he tries.

People are getting so enlightened now that they do not like to worship an almighty Dogberry, Jeffreys, and Bonfield all rolled into one. They think it is rather hard to damn innocent infants and ignorant heathen. And so they want a good, loving Heavenly Father to put in the place of Calvin's God, who is, it must be remembered, the Bible God.

Now, I am going to try to show you that this cannot be; that you must have Calvin's God or none. But first I am going to try to show you that it is impossible to prove the existence of any God at all; that it is probable that there is no God; that all that we know tends to prove that there is no God.

What do I mean by God? Not the forces and phenomena of nature, but an infinite being with a distinct personality, who existed before there was any matter, who would exist if matter were destroyed, who exists apart from matter, who is all powerful, whose will is the supreme law of the universe, who can do whatever he pleases, who can supersede, contravene, violate the order of sequence between cause and effect, who can and does answer prayer, who bears a special relation to individual human beings and they to him, who is the first cause and the last effect, who created all that is and can destroy it.

I submit to any intelligent person whether that is not a fair description of what Christian people have always called God, but it is not possible to prove the existence of such a being; it is not probable that he exists; all that we know of the universe tends to prove that he is a wholly imaginary being. An infinite being is inconceivable, and, therefore, cannot be predicated or assumed, except arbitrarily. It is impossible to imagine force, life, or being apart from matter. We know and can know nothing of these things except in association with matter. It is absolutely impossible to think that a chunk of dirt is God, or a part of God, because an infinite being can have no parts. And it is absolutely impossible that there can be an infinite being and a chunk of dirt besides in the universe at the same time. It is impossible to think that I am God or a part of God. I do not seem to myself to be God, and if I am a part of God, it would be a great satisfaction to know which part I am. And it is impossible that God and I can be in the universe at the same time. Either there is no deific personality or I am not a person, for there cannot be an infinite person and another person besides.

It is impossible to show that this universe is controlled by an infinite arbitrary will. All that we know or can know goes to show that matter always was; that there can have been no first cause—a causeless cause being unthinkable: that every effect has always had a natural cause; that the orderly sequence between cause and effect never was, is not, and never will be broken; that prayers are never answered, and that individuals are taken no account of by anybody or anything in the universe, except other individuals. Cancers grow, ships are wrecked, murderers kill, cold freezes, the body succumbs to hunger and thirst, electric shocks destroy industrious men, floods and winds devastate peaceful communities, worthless tyrants sit on thrones, greedy man-starvers and child-killers roll in wealth, pure girls are waylaid and ravished, the best people of the times were burned at the stake and had their tongues pulled out by the worst men of the times, some of the noblest of their kind now languish in prison or rot in graves where they were flung by Christians in loathsome power, and since the beginning of history it is not known that prayer ever had power to affect any of these doings one way or the other. There is not one well established fact to show that any God knows or cares about any of these things.

I am aware that the Free Religionists, Unitarians, and some of the Progressive Orthodoxists have created a new definition of the word God. They use that word, and they even insist upon the idea of personality; but when they say God they mean nature, and when they say personality I do not know what they mean, except that they do not mean a separate personality as I am separate from you. They seem to mean that God is a person who includes all other personalities, which extends the old-fashioned doctrine of the trinity into a doctrine of the billionity. They seem to mean that God is not himself and his son and the holy ghost at the same time, but that he is, rather, himself and the whole of the Smith, Brown, and Robinson families and everybody else at the same time. They pile one philosophical statement on top of another until the outcome of it is this: Everything that is is God, and the universe is a Person. But this philosophy is too high for one of my calibre. When you tell me that this universe is a person, you do such violence to the English language that you might as well tell me that I am dearly loved by a bag of coffee and that a summer squash is my familiar friend.

These very estimable Free and Progressive Religionists are simply working the well known theological trick of reading new meanings into old words. I do not think they are quite conscious of it, but the fact is that without the word God the church and religion would disappear, and while they have really given up the idea of God, they are clinging desperately to the word.

I insist upon it that unless there is a God who will answer my prayers, who will prevent me from getting ill or heal me when I am ill, who will save me from drowning, who will prevent me from being robbed by my employer and the politician, who will at least say or do something to enable me to distinguish him from the changeless forces of nature, which take no account of me as an individual, there might as well be and, so far as I am concerned, there is, no God. There is some sort of comfort in Calvin's God, if one can believe himself one of the elect and be selfish enough to be glad that he is saved, even if his little child is roasting in hell forever. But there is no kind of comfort in the Theist's God because, although he is God, he is powerless in the hands of his own laws and does nothing for anybody.

Now, my position is that all that we know of this universe indicates that there is no being either in it or out of it who is fairly entitled to the name of God. I say that religionists have no right to do all they can to prevent science from telling her story, and then, when the world is leaving the church, pack up this name—God—and carry it over to the camp of reason and say: "We believe just what you do, and we mean to call it God, just as we have called everything that we have ever believed in, from a crooked stick to Jehovah, God. You say there is no personal God? That does not bother us. Look at this dirt, and those blazing suns, and that drunken tramp. It is all God. We have lumped the whole thing, the good and the evil, angels and devils. It is all natural; it is all the universe, and the universe is a Person." To my mind, there is no sense in that. It is the last ditch of theology, and I do not see why great and good men are so willing to take refuge in it. I do not see why it is not more honest, more truthful, to say: "So far as we know, there is no God. The idea must be given up. Whence this universe came, what keeps it going, what will become of it, what is the meaning of life, we do not know, but we shall keep on trying to find out. And meanwhile we will drop all this meaningless humbug that is attached to the name God; a name that has served whatever purpose it may have had, and ought now to be allowed to go into retirement—whether honorable or dishonorable will depend upon the way you look at it."

But, now. Suppose we admit that there is a God. It is very clear that he must be bad.

Do you believe there is a devil? If so, where did he come from? God must have made him, and nobody but a bad God would have made a devil. Do you believe in hell? Well, God must have made that too. Do you believe that there is evil in this world? God must have made it. You know the story of the past, with its oceans of blood and its whirlwind of groans and sighs? God is responsible for it all. Do you like the sultan of Turkey, who impresses young men into his army and young women into his harem? God placed him and keeps him upon his rotten throne. Is the cruel czar a man after your own heart? He is God's man. How about the bombastic jackanapes on the German throne, and the fleshy old lady of England, and her notorious son who will, D. V., ascend the throne after her majesty's slow departure? All these are God's little pets. And our own choice and assorted lot of rulers and politicians—what about them and their guileless ways?

Calvinism stands manfully up to the rack and squarely declares that God did make the devil and light the fires of hell and does place these awful persons on their thrones. That is why I admire Calvinism. It is brave and honest. Modern theology is silent upon the subject, but there is not a church in Christendom that dares to say that the devil made himself or that the czar's reign is contrary to the will of God or that our pale Presbyterian president was not seated by God. That would be too illogical.

But never mind about Calvinism or the churches. If there is a God he is almighty, his will is supreme. If he is to get the credit for the flower he is to be blamed for the earthquake. If he lifts the patient from his couch, he is responsible for the cancer. If you can see him in the rich man's child's blue eye you must see him also in the poor widow's child's bent spine. If he is in the hand that dispenses charity he is also in the arm of the man who beats his wife. If he wafts one person into heaven he slams the other into hell.

All this is by logical necessity. People are too good to God. When the man is fed he thanks God. When he goes hungry in spite of his prayers he blames the devil or himself or the monopolists. But that is absurd. There cannot be an almighty God and a still more almighty devil in the same universe. If God cannot answer a good man's prayers because the millionaires will not let him, in heaven's name let us worship the millionaires.

People say God wishes to save everybody but, man's will is free and he can ruin himself. There cannot be an almighty will and ten million more powerful human wills in the same universe. Calvinism is right. If there is a God man has no free will. A supreme divine and a free human will is a logical absurdity.

The problem of evil in a world ruled by a good God, of God's sovereignty and man's free will are called mysteries. But they are not mysteries. They are impossibilities. Whenever theology runs across a flat impossibility it is called a mystery. There could not be any evil in a world ruled by a good God. There can be no free will in a world governed by an all powerful God. If you allow a man to be killed when you can prevent it without injury or even inconvenience to yourself you are an inexcusable murderer. If God allows you to ruin yourself when he can prevent it, greatly to the increase of his own happiness, he is worse than the devil.

If there is any God he is to blame for poverty and crime. It is unthinkable that there can be a good God considering what the history and daily experience of this world is. If you were God would you allow the managers of the Spring Valley coal company to starve the miners into unjust submission? Would you allow the Siberian mines to remain filled with the flower of the Russian youth? Would you allow the daughters of this land to prostitute themselves by loveless marriages or in the open streets because it is so hard for an honest woman to make a living? Would you allow pious Pharisees to get rich off the labor of factory children? Would you allow this world to be taxed, robbed, and oppressed by the scoundrels and imbeciles who are now in power and always have been? Would you allow honest thinkers to lose you and only those who will not think honestly to find you?

Things as they are can be accounted for perfectly, either upon the theory of the Calvinistic monster, or upon the theory that there is no God. But if you tell me that you believe in a good God, you cannot hold your position any longer than it will take me to ask why when a young man deceives and ruins a trusting girl, she is forever a blighted outcast while he may become a minister of the gospel.

If Calvin was right everything is clear enough. And if there is no God everything is clear enough. If Calvin was right everything is running according to the will of God and it is none of our business. God runs the thing to suit himself. If there is no God, then we understand that everything in the mineral, vegetable, and animal world has been getting along the best it can, and that human beings have been doing the same.

Calvin's God does not suit me, and so I reject him. But as there can be no other God but Calvin's, I believe in none. I do not know where I came from nor where I am going to. But I know that things in society are not right, are not arranged for my happiness, nor the happiness of others, and I mean to do my infinitesimal part to get them right while I am passing along this way.

I admit that it is provoking not to know any more about the whence, why, and whither of things than we do; I admit that it is sad to be so ignorant; I admit that it is sometimes a mental torture not to know. But I think it is best that it is so, and I do not see how it could be otherwise. And I think it is wicked for a man to sit down and pity himself because he does not know things when so many are miserable, because they do not have things. The use of the vacant land would be far better for the world just now, than to know where it came from. To break up the governmental monopoly of money, would do more good than to get at the source of life. To rescue children from factory hells, and redeem women from the horrid slavery they now endure, would be better than to find God. To worship a God whom we have not seen, and who, if he exists, is so careless and hard-hearted, does not seem to me half so important as to be of use to our suffering brothers and sisters.—HUGH O. PENTECOST, in the Twentieth Century.

BLOCKADED LETTERS.

MR. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, Dear Sir: I received your invitation to attend the Convention of the California State Liberal Union, and I am sorry to say that I cannot at this time accept the invitation. I am happy to inform you that I contemplate a protracted visit to the Pacific coast next summer, when I shall have an opportunity to greet you in person. You are certainly doing a good work, and I wish you all the success that you can possibly desire.

We are getting along as well as can be expected in the affairs of the American Secular Union, and expect to show a good report at the end of the year. Wishing you great success, I am Yours truly,

R. B. WESTBROOK, President A. S. U.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 14, 1890.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, ESQ., President California Liberal Union, Dear Sir: Your kind invitation to me to be present at the San Francisco Liberal Convention of January 25-26, was duly received. I regret that I cannot be present in the body; but I shall be with you in spirit, and shall wish you all success.

I think this movement for a closer organization among Liberals everywhere, but especially on your coast, is a good thing. The guerrilla warfare of Liberals hitherto has had some advantages, in making it possible for the weakest to harass the enemy; but in the end, it has put Liberalism at a decided disadvantage, by reason of the superior organization and discipline of the orthodox army. The non-orthodox element is largely in the majority in America, but it seems to lack cohesion; and so its untrained forces go down like a loose pile of bricks in the wind before the numerically weaker but better disciplined enemy. Not until the large proportion of Freethinkers become willing to compromise sufficiently on their pet hobbies to organize under leadership, will there be effective work done in the checking of ecclesiastical aggressions.

In your favored California, so free from the cut-and-dried rigidity of Eastern habits of thought, it ought to be possible to organize more readily than here. The American Secular Union officers will await with interest the news of what your convention accomplishes, trusting that it will open the way to a more organized union among us all for what we are individually working for—religious liberty. With my best wishes, I am Yours very truly,

IDA C. CRADDOCK, Corr. Sec'y, A. S. U.
Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 19, 1890.

The Oregon State Secular Union.

To the Editors of Freethought:

The Board of Directors of the Oregon State Secular Union has elected F. Ames, Esq., of Silvertown, treasurer, until the next annual convention. Resignations and declinations have caused this long delay.

I will take this occasion to say that I intend to make the next convention the most important and beneficial to the cause ever held in the United States, and I want every member of the Union to write or say something to go into the Journal of the Proceedings, which will be published.

C. BEAL, Pres. O. S. S. U.

Portland, Or.

THE CONVENTION FUND.

REPORT OF RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES.

The following contributions to the expenses of the late Convention of the California State Liberal Union were received at the office of FREETHOUGHT:

A. Schell.....	$5 00	J. H. Ostello.....	1 00
A. Derming.....	1 00	A. K. Coward.....	1 00
N. R. Wilkinson.....	1 00	Murray Home.....	1 00
John Dumbacher.....	2 00	Geo. Hogan.....	1 00
F. E. Neubauer.....	2 00	Fred Paulsen.....	50
Jas. Williamson.....	1 00	L. Schlegel.....	1 00
R. W. Barcroft.....	1 00	Mr. Woodhams.....	1 00
David Hughes.....	1 00	Mrs. A. Lindal.....	1 00
J. C. Purdy.....	1 00	Marshal Wheeler.....	1 00
A. Friend.....	50	Walter Newman.....	1 00
John Dibble.....	1 00	A. Friend.....	1 00
Lewis Kaiser.....	1 00	P. McLachlan.....	1 00
John McGlashan.....	1 00	H. W. Faust.....	1 00
H. P. Replogle.....	1 00	A. Friend.....	1 00
San Jose Secular Union...	5 00	W. T. Jones.....	1 00
L. R. Titus.....	1 00	Mr. Robertson.....	1 00
Joel B. Parker.....	1 00	W. M. Noble.....	1 00
Samuel Gracey.....	1 00	L. Magenheimer.....	1 00
Jos. W. Wilkinson.....	1 00	Jos. Larsen.....	1 00
M. Lueders.....	1 00	A. Friend.....	1 00
W. Gordon.....	1 00	Robert Gunther.....	1 00
Theo. Gerner.....	1 00	Ed. Wegner.....	2 00
Chris. Schmidt.....	1 00	B. B. Rockwood.....	1 00
A. W. Poole.....	1 00	John Robinett.....	1 00
John Mewhinney.....	1 00	J. H. Curtis.....	1 00
L. Larsen.....	1 00	Fred Gardner.....	1 00
Jno. Hubbell.....	1 00	Herman Ditjens.....	1 00
E. F. Otto.....	1 00	Mrs. S. M. Brady.....	1 00
Chas. Eckard.....	1 00	C. Severance.....	1 00
J. J. Hardy.....	2 50

$70 50
86 70

Collections by A. H. Schou,

Total receipts

$156 50

The expenditures were as follows:

Hall rent.....	$80 00
Music, vocal and instrumental.....	34 00
Advertising.....	26 50
Cartage.....	1 00
Printing institutions.....	8 75
Stationery.....	2 75
Circulars.....	1 25

Total expenditures..... $154 25

Contributors will please look the above list of receipts over carefully, and, if any omission has been made, notify the treasurer, A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth street, Oakland, or the president, S. P. Putnam, 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

The Three Preachers.*

There are three preachers ever preaching,
Each with eloquence and power;
One is old with locks of white,
Skinny as an anchorite;
And he preaches every hour
With a shrill fanatic voice,
And a bigot's fiery scorn:

"Backward, ye presumptuous nations;
Man to misery is born!
Born to drudge, and sweat, and suffer—
Born to labor and to pray;
Priests and kings are God's vicegerents,
Man must worship and obey.
Backward, ye presumptuous nations
Back!—be humble and obey!"

The second is a milder preacher;
Soft he talks as if he sung;
Sleek and slothful is his look,
And his words, as from a book,
Issue glibly from the tongue.
With an air of self-content,
High he lifts his fair white hands;
"Stand ye still, ye restless nations;
And be happy, all ye lands!
Earth was made by one almighty,
And to meddle is to mar;
Change is rash, and ever was so;
We are happy as we are;
Stand ye still, ye restless nations,
And be happy as ye are."

Mightier is the younger preacher;
Genius flashes from his eyes,
And the crowds who hear his voice
Give him, while their souls rejoice,
Throbbing bosoms for replies.
Awd they listen, yet elated,
While his stirring accents fall—
"Forward, ye deluded nations,
Progress is the rule of all.
Man was made for heartfelt effort;
Tyranny has crushed him long.
He shall march from good to better,
Nor be patient under wrong!
Forward! ye awakened nations,
And do battle with the strong."

"Standing still is childish folly,
Going backward is a crime;
None shall patiently endure
Any ill that he can cure;
Onward! keep the march of time.
Onward while a wrong remains
To be conquered by the right;
While oppression lifts a finger
To affront us by his might;
While an error clouds the reason;
While a sorrow knows the heart;
While a slave awaits his freedom,
Action is the wise man's part,
Forward! ye awakened nations!
Action is the people's part."

Onward! there are ills to conquer—
Ills that on yourselves you've brought;
There is wisdom to discern,
There is temperance to learn,
And enfranchisement for thought.
Hopeless poverty and toil
May be conquered if you try;
Vice and wretchedness and famine
Give beneficence the lie.
Onward! onward! and subdue them!
Root them out; their day has passed.
Goodness is alone immortal;
Evil was not made to last.
Forward! ye awakened people,
And your sorrow shall not last."

And the preaching of this preacher
Stirs the pulses of the world—
Tyranny has curbed its pride;
Errors that were deified
Into darkness have been hurled;
Slavery and liberty,
And the wrong and right have met

*By Charles Mackay. Read by C. F. Burgman at recent Paine celebration in San Francisco.

To decide their ancient quarrel.
Onward! preacher; onward yet!
There are pens to tell your progress,
There are eyes that pine to read,
There are hearts that burn to aid you,
There are arms in hour of need.
Onward, preacher! Onward, nation!
Will must ripen into Deed.

The Difference.

Mrs. Beacon Hill (in an icy whisper)—I beg your pardon, but this is my pew.

The intruder (gently reproachful) I am a sister in Christ and this is my father's house.

"Er—doubtless. But I have to pay the rent, don't you know."

"Oh, dear Harry likes flowers so much and has such a nice hothouse," remarked Mrs. Litebrane, "that I've just bought him the 'Field-Ingersoll conservatory.' He'd like to know how those great men keep their gardens."

WANTED. YOUNG man (25) wishes situation on a farm or ranch. Willing to make himself generally useful. Temperate, good reference. Address this office. [466

A HAND-BOOK
OF FREETHOUGHT.

—BY—

W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form, a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR.

C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.
PARKER PILLSBURY.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.
CHARLES WATTS.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.
J. H. BURNHAM.
JOHN PECK.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.
H. O. PENTECOST.

HELEN H. GARDENER.
ARTHUR B. MOSS.
L. K. WASHBURN.
CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
LUCY N. COLMAN.
FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
MATTIE P. KREKEL.
W. F. JAMIESON.
SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

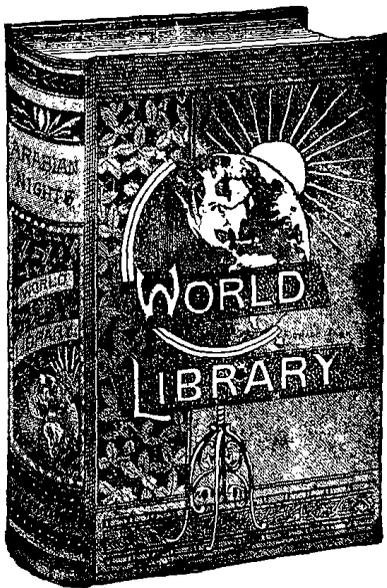

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRAIG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY. A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be Obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESS.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last an heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavilion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the Invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder-worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portraiture of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. FRESKOTT.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll,) with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated late scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POE'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

PLAIN HOME TALK

ABOUT THE Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

—BY— EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

FREETHOUGHT

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Samuel P. Putnam, Lecturer and Editorial Correspondent. | Geo. E. Macdonald, Editor and Business Manager.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

Freethought Publishing Co

This journal is devoted, religiously, to the eradication of all forms of superstition, Christian or otherwise; and politically, to the advocacy of those principles inculcated by the

Nine Demands of Secularism.

FREETHOUGHT is not committed to any of the current methods of social reform, but its columns are open to the discussion of all of them. It welcomes agitation and discussion of all subjects, religious, political, ethical, and social.

Its Correspondents are all who have anything valuable to say on the above questions; who know how to express their thoughts in readable English, and who desire for an audience several thousand of the most intelligent people of the country.

FREETHOUGHT has no set list of contributors of articles written to order. It aims to give the news of the Liberal movement everywhere. It believes that the seeds of Freethought have been planted, and that the great work now before us is to cultivate their growth.

The paper circulates from Florida to Alaska, and from this coast to Maine.

ADVERTISERS

who wish to reach large numbers in all parts of the Pacific Slope will find space in its columns a remunerative investment.

EVERY LIBERAL THINKER

should read FREETHOUGHT. They will find it lively and at the same time in dead earnest; plain and direct, without being offensive.

Subscriptions—One year, $2; Six months $1. Four new subscriptions in one remittance, $5.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc, worth $35. for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do., $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
" Forks	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded. Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; set rings, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

IF YOU WANT TO KNOW

All about the human body, in health and disease, nature's secrets revealed, How life is perpetuated, health maintained, disease induced, death delayed, How to marry your own mate, and transmit wealth of health to posterity, Read the most popular, comprehensive and useful book treating of which Dr. Eadon declares to be "priceless in value, new, startling and very instructive." The latest edition is more complete and valuable than ever, having been re-written in important parts. It contains an APPENDIX of great practical utility made up of

MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

OVER 200 PRESCRIPTIONS OR RECIPES

For Acute and Chronic Disorders Common to Adults and Children, a complete table of poisons and their antidotes (from highest authorities), illustrated directions for resuscitating the drowned (prepared for Health Boards), and hygienic rules for care of infants; also

ORIGIN OF LIFE AND DEVELOPMENT OF MAN,

tracing the embryo from conception, through all stages to birth, illustrated by Over 20 Beautiful Colored Lithographs, on fine plate paper, such as are to be found only in high priced, imported medical works; and to illustrate the anatomy, and relative positions of important parts, each book is also embellished with

THREE ELEGANT CHROMO CHARTS OF VITAL ORGANS.

Murray Hill Publishing Co., 129 East 28th St., N. Y.

Circulars Free. Address

Price, cloth bound, by mail, $1.50; Liberal Discounts to agents.

A MINISTER of the gospel in Lansing, Mich., drew $5,000 in a lottery, and next day was gulled out of $3,000 of it by a sharper, who pretended to sell him lands in Kentucky. Preachers who draw lottery prizes should have guardians appointed at once.—Alta.

There is a minister in Minnesota who thinks Monday paper can just as well be prepared Saturday night. His congregation should keep a sharp lookout on him. A man with a notion of that kind is quite capable of ringing in a ten-year-old sermon on his people for a fresh one.

SOMETHING NEW

—THE—

"CO MIAN HYMN BOOK."

—A COLLECTION OF—

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS
(WORDS AND MUSIC)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies,
For Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price $1.50

Address orders to

L. K. WASHBURN,

Revere, Mass.

ROMAN RULE OR RUIN.

BY Z. SHED.

A Summary of the atrocities committed by the Catholic church.

Price, 10 cents; four copies, 25 cents; ten copies, 50 cents. Address

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co.,

838 Howard street, San Francisco.

A REGULAR EDUCATED AND LEGALLY QUALIFIED PHYSICIAN, and the most successful (in his specialty) as his practice will surely prove. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men such as seminal weakness, impotency, &c., resulting from indiscretion and ignorance of youth. Those who are ailing should send ten (10) cents for his book, "Private Counsellor," setting forth an external Application—

A POSITIVE CURE

The book is worth many times its cost, and should be read by the young for instruction and the afflicted for relief.

All Communications Strictly Confidential.

Plain Envelopes used. The book spoken of sent sealed. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, NEW JERSEY. Say where you saw this Advertisement.

[From the Washington National View.]

Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, New Jersey offers his valuable services to all those in need of a kind, sympathetic and skillful physician. Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been assailed and exposed by the press, but, Dr. Fellows, a specialist, in his line, stands foremost in his profession, and the encomiums showered upon him publicly as well as in private, are flattering evidences of the high appreciation and confidence his long and conscientious devotion to his specialties in his profession have so justly merited for him, and it is safe to trust him.

A Testimonial.

WEST LIBERTY, O., Aug. 12, 1888.

DR. R. P. FELLOWS—Dear Sir: The remedy you sent is working like a charm. I am completely surprised the way it acts upon the organs. Have only been using it one week, and that weakness, (seminal weakness) is coming out all right. Yours respectfully, J. R.

REMARKS—The above is a fair sample of the hundreds of testimonials received from all parts of the United States, from young, middle-aged and elderly men, suffering from various kinds of sexual complaints, but who are now cured by my External Application, the greatest of all known remedies for this class of diseases. As I am an out-and-out Liberal I trust the Freethinkers of the Land will give me their patronage, and not waste their time and money on Christian doctor

DR. FELLOWS.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future
 Republic of North America
 BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1. Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 00
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm Diamond* 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, PUTNAM & MACDONALD, 04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

REMSBURG'S WORKS.

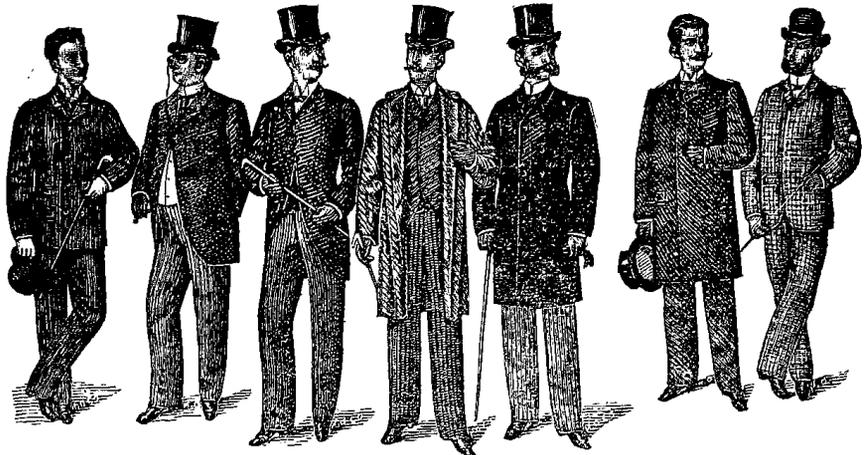

False Claims. Price 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Anti-slavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic.

Fathers of the Republic. Paine, Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. Price 15 cents.

Bible Mora's. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
 DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
 PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,
CHAS F. BURGMAN.
 TAILOR,
 —101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.
 OLIVER HENCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT
 Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.
 N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
 Telephone 1950.

J A. REED.
 FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED, 375 Natoma st., cor. 5th, S. F.

P. A. CLARK. CHAS. W. CLARK

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS,
NURSERYMEN.

Catalpas for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines.
 Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice.
Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address CLARK BROS.,
 P. O. Box C, San Jacinto, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!
 Per Year.....$1.50
 Six Months..... .75
 Three Months..... .50

EDITED BY
 F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.
 OFFICE:
 429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,
 Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
 PAPER BAGS, TWINE.
 Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
 414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.
PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,
 536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San Francisco.

Wm. W. NOBLE,
 Merchant Tailor,
 1222 STOCKTON ST.

Bet. Pacific and Broadway.
DRESS SUITS A SPECIALTY
 Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass by.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,
 Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
 Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.
 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

PRINTING! BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

Having procured one of the best Presses manufactured and a large assortment of display type, and employing competent workmen, the Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

- Letter-heads,
- Bill-heads,
- Programmes,
- Envelopes,
- Business Cards,
- Postal Cards,
- Tickets,
- Placards,
- Receipts,
- Posters,
- Dodgers,
- Circulars,
- Etc. etc.

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph.D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M.D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parrshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.
ALL FOR $1.20.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND.

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 24 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and 26.

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.
Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1463 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.
Rapp & Debarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment, cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schroetzler, 303 Kearny st.
Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

ASTHMA DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENÉ never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE
DR. TAFT BROS., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

PUTNAM'S WORKS.

The New God. 10c. The New God was made by an artist hand, guided by a poet soul. It is as perfect as sculpture. The creator makes his "god" in his own image, and breathes into his nostrils the breath of his own life.—L. K. Washburn.

Golden Throne. A romance. Price, $1 00. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words, the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Walt's and Wanderings. A new American story. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1 00. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—John Swinton's Pader

I HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE

Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.

13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order.

The Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is entirely damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thief-resisting. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that, ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only.

Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

The Open Court.

A Weekly Journal of Reverent Freethought.

Discussing Problems in Science, Philosophy, Ethics, and Religion.

Subscription for twelve months, $2.00.

—Specimen Copies free on application.—

THE OPEN COURT PUB. CO.,

159-175 La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois,

P. O. Drawer F.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

THE SABBATH IMPOSTURE.

BY HARRY HOOVER.

Showing that there is no authority for the Sunday laws, either Human or "Divine."

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies 50 cents. Address this office.

GOD IN THE STATE

By E. A. Stevens, Ex-Secretary of the American Secular Union.

—:O:—

This is the best presentation of the argument against God in the Constitution, ever prepared in a pamphlet of its size.

—:O:—

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies, 50 cents.

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,

838 Howard street, San Francisco.

"Bible Contradictions," 15 cents.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters

impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Vol. III—No. 7.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - FEBRUARY 15, 1890.

THEODORE TILTON lives alone upon an island in the river Seine in France. He declares that Beecher ruined him, that he never desires to see a human face again, and that he is a martyr and exile for truth's sake.

FRIENDS who have failed to receive communication from this office will please accept the explanation with which we have to satisfy ourselves—that every thing is safe, somewhere, in the hands of the public carriers, and will have a glorious resurrection when the mails give up their dead letters.

THE Rev. R. Heber Newton thinks that the Presbyterian confession of faith should be placed on the retired list. "The dust of ages," he remarks, "will gather comfortably over it, and its sleep will be sweet." He might have added that all religious creeds will soon join it, and that their sleep will be like the sleep of those who lodge in graveyards.

FREETHOUGHT has received, too late for publication this week, a report of the Washington Convention of Liberals. We can only name here the officers elected, as follows: President, Hon. Richard Winsor; secretary, C. B. Reynolds; treasurer, George M. Boman; directors at large, Albert Rosenow and R. J. Wilson. The convention was well-attended.

THE San Francisco Polyclinic has addressed a communication to Mayor Pond in which the offer is made to give free instruction to policemen in "first aid" to the injured. This is a good move. Policemen should know how to stanch a wound, to apply splint bandages to a fracture, to aid persons suffering from fainting, fits, drowning, etc. Now let our Bar Association offer the same policemen free lectures and instruction in law, human rights, and constitutional liberty. We suggest that Col. H. L. Knight be engaged to deliver the opening discourse on these subjects.

A CHILD has just died in San Diego as a victim of Christian science or faith cure. Concerning the case the Chronicle observes that "the law is practically powerless to deal with the people who make experiments on unfortunate children." We are not surprised to hear that such is the fact. Law never was able to correct the effect of either too much or too little faith, though it has been tried in all ages, particularly on those who were regarded as deficient in belief. While all churches unite in teaching that duty toward God is more important than duty toward man, and that faith is necessary to avoid perdition, Christian parents will continue to experiment on the bodies of their children for the good, as they believe, of their own souls.

It is reported that over one hundred Conservative members of the English House of Commons are opposed to free schools on the ground that popular education leads to Anarchism, and they will accept the proposition only with the proviso that all free schools shall be under the control of the clergy. Mr. Gladstone, although a "Liberal" in politics, supports this view, and believes that schools will be best managed under the direct influences of the churches. On the other hand the Radicals will not have education made free unless the schools are withdrawn absolutely from the control of the clergy and governed wholly by the civil authorities. These disputants might take a lesson from America. Here we have free schools, ostensibly controlled by the civil authorities, but religion dominates them just the same.

THE BRUNO CELEBRATION.

There will be a Bruno celebration at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, Sunday evening, February 16, at 8 o'clock. Music will be furnished by Miss Evangeline Ballou, Miss Mate Hildebrande, Mrs. Eugenia Clark, Ada and Violet Wheeler, Misses Laura and Clara Haelke, and W. D. Suffren. Miss Lillie Arper and J. H. White will give recitations; Thomas Curtis and S. P. Putnam are to deliver addresses. This affords a fine and brilliant programme. Every Liberal and Freethinker should attend to honor the Martyr of Science, Giordano Bruno, who was burned at the stake Feb. 16, 1600. Invite friends to come. Seats are free.

GOD BEFORE MAN.

The pope's latest encyclical is now claiming the attention of the religious world. He is a skillful old sophist, is Leo the Thirteenth. He admits that rulers of states, while unobstructed by the church, should at the same time be guided by it; but—and notice the difference—"the direction of souls has been given the church alone, and political power has no right of interference with the church." That is to say, the church should direct the state, but the state should have no control over the church. This is indeed no union of church and state, for union implies some sort of equality; it is simply putting church and state in the position of master and slave—the church, of course, being the master.

Furthermore, admits this crafty old impostor, the church must not give patronage or favor to aspirants for public office, but at the same time, only those men should receive her favor who deserve the Christian name; for there is not the least reason why men should be preferred "who are filled with evil intentions toward religion." Expressed in a word this advice would read, "Vote only for Catholics."

A short time ago some Mormons in Utah were denied the right of naturalization on the ground, practically, that they placed allegiance to their church before their allegiance to the state. We then pointed out that the Catholics occupied the same attitude; and Pope Leo's encyclical confirms that view. Says he: "If the natural law ordains that the Catholics should protect with particular affection the land in which they are born and reared, with greater reason ought they to be animated with similar sentiments toward the church, the city of the living God, from whom she has received her constitution. The land in which we have received this mortal life has then to be loved, but it is necessary to love with more ardent love the church, to which we owe the immortal life of the soul, because it is right to prefer the welfare of the soul to the welfare of the body, and to regard our duties toward God as more sacred than our duties to men."

There it is. Of course everyone understands that God, as used by the pope, is a synonym for the church, and "men" means the state. Indeed, he declares: "It is the chief duty of Christians to suffer themselves to be ruled and guided absolutely by the bishops, and particularly by the pontiff." The use of the word "absolutely," which means without condition, limitation, relation, or dependence, leaves no chance for self-government, or for deference to public opinion or the good of mankind. All these are a secondary consideration, or, rather, they are not to be considered at all.

Liberals are no advocates of the supremacy of the state in matters of religion. They hold, however, that the state has as much authority as the church in that domain. The pope is right when he declares that the state should not interfere with the church, but he is viciously wrong when he asserts that man's duty toward God is greater than toward man.

A PURCHASING AGENCY.

Our country readers frequently commission us to purchase for them some article of merchandise which they may happen to want and cannot obtain at home, and we have always been happy to accommodate them by hunting up and forwarding such articles.

These little transactions have suggested to us the establishment at FREETHOUGHT headquarters of a General Purchasing Agency for the convenience of all our patrons residing at a distance from the source of supplies. They know, of course, that we keep a line of books, stationery, and fancy goods, such as albums (autograph or photograph), scrap-books, etc.; also children's games, playing cards, rubber stamps, and all that sort of thing, to list which would fill the paper. We have now been in the city long enough to know about where to look for anything wanted, and the dealers here in various kinds of goods are getting acquainted with us. Besides we have the advantage of the business directions of a well-known merchant whose name is a guarantee of good faith at almost any commercial house in the city. It will therefore give us pleasure to serve our friends in this way.

Let it be understood that we shall charge customers nothing for our services, and that they will receive goods bought through us at the same price they would be obliged to pay the dealer.

Their only added expense will be express, freight, or postal charges, which are much less than the cost of a trip to the city. Address the FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY, 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

THAT RESOLUTION.

The Sentinel, published at Hanford, Tulare county, finds itself in a state of mind over the eighth resolution passed at the late convention of the California State Liberal Union. The resolution reads as follows:

"Resolved, That the fathers of the republic, in the establishment of the postal system, exhibited admirable prudence in the framing of the constitution when they delegated to Congress simply the power to establish post-offices and post roads, and that every fair-minded citizen must view with painful apprehension the unconstitutional enactment by Congress of postal statutes having for their ostensible object the exclusion from the United States mails of written or printed matter because of its alleged immoral character. Such measures, under the administration of corrupt or bigoted men, may be used for the suppression of a free press, and would have been so employed in the early days of the anti-slavery cause, had such postal laws existed at that time. We are unqualifiedly in favor of free speech, free press, and free mails."

How an intelligent person who understands the occasion of this resolution can find anything in it to object to is beyond our comprehension. It is simply an expression of opinion concerning the constitutionality of certain postal statutes under which a great amount of injustice has been done. The question is not whether vicious literature should be suppressed, but how to do it. Hence the editor of the Sentinel is irrelevant when he says:

"What any society of believers, political, religious, or non-religious, can expect to gain by advocating the throwing open of the mails to the transmission of matter of an immoral character is a question the silver-tongued Putnam and his society had better stand up and explain."

All Liberals agree that matter of an immoral character ought not to be circulated by the mails or otherwise. They object, however, to an espionage over the mails which constitutes Anthony Comstock and his henchmen censors of the mails and gives them power to say what shall or shall not pass through the post-office. The question is not one of object, but of method.

To say that those who deny the constitutionality of the Comstock laws are in favor of obscene literature is equivalent to asserting that the well-meaning opponents of capital punishment advocate murder.

WITH INTENT TO DECEIVE.

The Evening Post of February 10 contains this paragraph:

"It is a regular coincidence that the Grand Italian Opera Company, of which Adelina Patti is the great attraction, will open at the Grand Opera House to-night, on the very stage where exactly three years ago to-day an attempt was made to take the life of the diva. A daring and murderous effort to throw a bomb on the stage by a socialistic crank calling himself Dr. James Hodges, the President of Free Thought, was made on the night of February 10, 1887. It was one of the worst shocks that a San Francisco assemblage ever received."

It is true, as we understand the facts, that some years ago a man calling himself Dr. Hodges did explode a bomb in the Grand Opera House where Madam Patti was singing, but that Hodges was a president of Freethought or in any way identified with Freethought is unqualifiedly denied. He never spoke in Freethought meetings, did not attend such meetings, did not espouse Freethought, and was unknown as a Freethinker by any of the Liberals of San Francisco. He was a little, irascible, cranky imbecile, with communistic tendencies, and in so far as he was not an imbecile he was insane. The name of Hodges which he adopted is known to have been assumed, but his real name nobody in this country ever discovered. Beyond the fact that he came from England, was a crank and a semi-idiot, and had no affiliation with the Liberals of San Francisco, his history is immured with him in the Stockton asylum, where he is now confined. The article in the Post was evidently written by some zealous enemy of Freethought, who was willing to deceive, not so much for the especial glory of God as from lack of moral sense.

A GRAND BLUFF.

The husbands of the former Mrs. Victoria Woodhull and of Miss Jennie C. Claflin have gone to the expense of issuing for gratuitous circulation the following offer:

“£1000 REWARD.

“Mr. John Biddulph Martin and Sir Francis Cook will pay the sum of one thousand pounds sterling to anyone who shall reveal the names of the person or persons concerned in the conspiracy to defame their wives, Mrs. Victoria C. Woodhull Martin and Miss Tennessee Claflin, now Lady Cook, and who shall give such evidence as shall secure a conviction.

“Twenty pounds will also be paid by the above named gentlemen for the name of any paper, issued in England, that has published a recent libel against their wives.

“All communications to be addressed either to 17 Hyde Park Gate, London, England, or to 142 West-70th street.

“Jan. 1, 1890.”

Messrs. Martin and Cook have taken needless trouble to discover the names of persons who have made their wives infamous. All they require is a file of Woodhull and Claflin's Weekly of twenty years ago. The accused at that time performed the service over their own signatures, and have since aggravated their offense by libeling those who attempted to make their course appear justifiable. Instead of trying to vindicate themselves, these notorious women should be engaged in making restitution to the better people they have maliciously defamed. Having accomplished this, they should subside.

CERTAINLY.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Will you read the inclosed, and out of respect to the memory of a great and good woman, call the attention of your readers to a neglected duty and a national disgrace?

MARION HARLAND.

19 West 22d st., New York.

We have read the “inclosed.” It is an appeal to the people of the country to complete a monument to mark the grave of Mary, the wife of George Washington, at Fredericksburg, Virginia. Miss Harland's proposition is to receive subscriptions to the Home-Maker, a paper of which she is the editor, and to devote a certain portion of the proceeds to erecting the monument. We wish the Home-Maker and the monument great success.

We publish with pleasure the letter from Dr. Paul Carus, editor of the Open Court, which will be found in another column. While we dissent from a great deal that he says, we recognize that Dr. Carus is working outside the pale of superstition and that, as a general thing, his labors are in the right direction. For this reason we seek no controversy with him. In the article which we criticised, the Open Court described what it characterized as a “typical Liberal.” We at once recognized the description as a misfit, and asked if a certain noble and earnest Free-thinker, whose death we mourn with others, could be instanced as an example of the deleterious effects of Liberalism. If we made a mistake in so doing, Dr. Carus has made a still greater one in alluding to a clergyman's son whose zeal and love of truth illustrated the value of religious parentage. We all know that Mr. Ingersoll's youth was no prophecy of his manhood, and that he is much greater as a parent than he was as a son. But our point was made in the article to which Mr. Carus objects, namely, that the typical Liberal's son is not necessarily a vagabond, and that the charge that such is the case has no evidence to support it.

THE mobbing of the Salvation Army by hoodlums on the streets of this city and Oakland, coupled with the indifference of the authorities concerning the matter, is a disgrace to Christian civilization. The members of this army are a generally harmless lot of fanatics. They attend strictly to their own affairs, keep out of politics, relieve suffering in some cases, and once in a while they reform a drunkard. They are, in fact, the only branch of the Christian church that has any apology or excuse for its existence. Their fanaticism should be met with education, not persecution. We know an intelligent young man, once a member of this army, who is now a Freethinker, a Nationalist, and a useful member of society. But it was Paine's “Age of Reason,” not the hoodlum's brickbat, which convinced him of his error.

THE Truth Seeker got a good advertisement at the Howard street Methodist church last Sunday evening. Dr. Harcourt, the pastor, was discussing old notions of hell and salvation, and exhibited a copy of the paper to illustrate his remarks. The illustration was a cartoon by Heston representing some murderers being launched into eternal bliss by a priest, while their unconverted victims writhed in the flames of hell. Dr. Harcourt said that the picture was the best illustration of the barbarous doctrine he had ever seen, and his congregation, which is among the largest in the city, appeared to agree with him.

MAIL and express matter are still piling up at Redding in Shasta county, and very feeble efforts are being made to clear the blockade. It is now over a month that mail communication has been cut off from the north. Is it not about time for the railroad company to abandon its penurious policy, which is the cause of the delay, and get some men to clear the track?

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM will deliver a series of Freethought lectures at Calistoga, February 22, 23, and 24. The lectures at Fort Bragg are postponed until the middle of March on account of bad weather. Lectures will be given at Fresno Flats the latter part of March. It is possible that Mr. Putnam may visit Texas in April and May.

THE genial face of Dr. Foote of New York has disappeared from among us, and is set again toward the East. The only solace for his departure is the hope that he will come again.

W. S. BELL has produced a most useful work in his “Handbook of Freethought.” To say that it fills a long-felt want would not be an original remark, but it is a truthful one, which is better.

MR. THOS. P. TURNER should have been credited with a donation of one dollar toward the expenses of the late convention of Liberals in San Francisco.

NATIONALIST IDEAS.

The Nationalist Club held its twelfth public reception at Metropolitan Hall Thursday evening, Feb. 6. John C. Gore was the first speaker, having "What Nationalism Is" as a theme. It was described as a new movement in the life of the nation. Under the present system of labor every thrifty man must become to a certain degree a capitalist. Capitalists own the results of the labor of the community. The remedy is the control by the government of the great national industries.

Mrs. H. R. Houghton is a pretty and eloquent reformer and intensely enthusiastic, and talks like a woman with romance and business delightfully correlated. She gave a sparkling paper on "Nationalism and the Public Health." "Nationalism," she said, "is a remedy for the economic ills of the nation. Many of the processes of manufacture now-a-days are injurious to the health of the operatives. There are enormous adulterations of food. Bad bread and diseased meats are constantly in the markets. This comes of the fierce competitions of trade. Nationalism, by removing competition, removes the motive for these evils. Nationalism means good bread, good beef, good sugar, healthful milk, and clean butter. By thus making man physically happy it prepares him for a higher plane of intellectual and moral life."

Arthur W. Dowe made a few remarks. He declared that the accumulation of trusts, syndicates, and monopolies threatens the liberties of the people more seriously than anything before, and it was the duty of the people to put an end to this dangerous condition of affairs.

John H. Redstone discoursed on "The Relations of Nationalism and Public Education." He asserted that Nationalism developed the higher instincts and faculties of man. There would be no starving poor and no idle brains in the new republic.

The musical programme was rendered by Segismund Bluman, Miss Jessie Grant, Geo. H. Ames, Miss Mate Hildebrande, and Miss Evangeline Ballou. Miss Ballou sang Sankey's famous melody of "The Ninety and Nine," to which were set words contrasting the conditions of the rich and poor, the poor being the "ninety and nine." The new interpretation was applauded to the echo.

The president, Mrs. Addie Ballou, closed the meeting with a spirited address, which left the audience both in good humor and radiant enthusiasm. She stated that there were now in this city 25,000 unemployed working-people. "Nationalism," she said, "means helping these by giving them work, not with charity, but with justice. We want to support that government which will make enforced idleness impossible, but equity triumphant."

MARSHAL WHEELER'S LECTURE.

The rooms of the San Francisco Freethought Society were filled to overflowing on Sunday evening. The lecture was given by Marshal Wheeler. His subject was, "The Earth—Its Third Motion; A New Theory." Mr. Wheeler is a pleasant-looking gray-haired man, with a scholarly face, and has evidently done a great deal of thinking upon the problem which he discussed. He stated that he could look back to the time when many of the wondrous inventions and discoveries of to-day were unknown, and judging by the past there might be equally vast changes in the future, and the new theory might be accepted.

The third motion of the earth is by no means unreasonable, and it does explain many facts. This third motion consists in the earth's turning upon its own centre in a direction at right angles with the planes of its two known motions. At present it is acknowledged that the earth goes round the sun and wheels upon its axis. Mr. Wheeler claims that at immensely long intervals the earth rolls over sideways, and the poles become the tropics and vice versa. Such a motion is not unnatural. Whether it actually occurs or not is for science to determine. It is admitted that where the poles now are was once a tropical climate. All over it are the remains of flora and fauna which could only have been produced in hot climates. Mr. Wheeler detailed many interesting facts which he claimed were in support of his theory. That there have been enormous cataclysms nobody denies. They might have come about by the third motion. The third motion does away with the creation theory and accounts for the many legends of the deluge, etc. This third motion prevents the over-production of life.

The last turning-over happened about 4000 years ago, in the great astronomical year, the date of creation according to the Bible. But it was not creation, but the third motion. This third motion or turning of the earth will take place in about 15,000 years hence. By that time, according to the present increase of the race, there will be about thirty people to the acre. The third motion will send the seas flying over the highest mountains, there will be vast volcanic eruptions and crashing of rocks, and the now temperate regions will be bound in eternal ice. Millions upon millions of animals will be destroyed; a few of the human race will survive to begin again the march of civilization with fresh opportunities.

As a solvent of the labor problem, the third motion, if true, is certainly effective. What can the single tax do for the laboring people with thirty to inhabit every acre? What would become of Bellamy's dream with such a population to take care of? The third motion gives a new chance to those who survive, and if millions have got to die, it is better to be drowned at once than slowly starve.

Those who desire to study carefully Mr. Wheeler's interesting hypothesis can purchase his pamphlet at FREETHOUGHT office. The audience was delighted on Sunday evening at his eloquent and pithy presentation of his matter, and gave him a vote of thanks. Mr. Wheeler thinks that the third motion will knock the priesthood higher than a kite. Probably it will, and in much less time than 15,000 years.

The meeting of Sunday evening was promising in numbers and interest. Next Sunday evening will be the Bruno memorial meeting, and Sunday after a lecture is expected from Prof. Herbert Miller. A rich programme is being prepared for March. The Freethought Society is growing prosperous.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

Orchardists predict that 1890 will be a bonanza year for them in this state if the rains do not produce a premature development of fruit to be ruined by frost.—There were earthquake shocks in the southern part of the state on Sunday. At Los Angeles a slight landslide occurred, burying a portion of Bellevue avenue to a depth of several feet.—A fire at Seattle swept away $42,000 worth of property on the 9th.—There is still a blockade on the northern road between Mott and Dunsmuir at which a few Chinamen are working. White men will not accept the wages or food offered by the railroad company.—The losses by flood at Oregon City, Or., are estimated at $125,000.—Our Democratic county committee is considering the proposition to remove the Chinese from their present residence to South San Francisco.—The hoodlums of Oakland have been mobbing the Salvation Army.—Henry B. Williams, a pioneer and one of San Francisco's best-known business men, died at Santa Barbara Feb. 8, aged 70 years. He was a native of Woodstock, Vt.—Patti, the great singer, is in San Francisco: She opened her engagement at the Grand Opera House last Tuesday in "Semi-ramide," an opera said to be founded on one of Voltaire's.—It is considered as settled that Idaho and Wyoming will be admitted to the Union as twin states.—Mrs. Woodworth, who has been doing business in Oakland as a revivalist, has left that town, and the people are glad to be rid of her.

The South Dakota legislature has passed the Prohibition bill. While the prohibition folks feel jubilant they regret the fact that two important features of the bill have been stricken out, viz., requiring physicians to state the nature of the complaint liquors are required for in making out prescriptions, and giving the authorities the right to search private dwellings for liquor.—The North Dakota legislature has passed a bill legalizing lotteries.—Some Mormon elders were recently tarred and feathered and then set on fire in Marion county, Ala. The elders jumped into a creek and that was the last seen of them.—The gentiles carried the elections in Salt Lake City last Monday, routing the Mormons in their stronghold.—The Chicago Presbytery has voted to revise the Confession of Faith. The Philadelphia Presbytery votes to retain it as it is.

Salamanca, captain-general of Cuba, died last week and was buried at Havana on Sunday with military honors.—The influenza is epidemic in the City of Mexico, 143 dying from it in one day.—Cardinal Pecci, brother of the pope, is dead.—It is said the emperor of Germany is making overtures to secure the support of the Socialist party.—The London Daily Telegraph says: "The report of the Parnell commission will be published the first week of the Parliament session. It is precise and vigorous in dealing with the forgeries, but finds it impossible to exonerate Parnell from failure to separate political organizations from organizations that were openly criminal."

OBSERVATIONS.

After Mr. W. S. Bell had read his address before the late convention he took a seat near me with the inquiry, "Well, did I get there?" I do not hesitate to say that, in my opinion, Mr. Bell got there. I have since heard complaints that the address was anarchistic, that the speaker was knocking the props out from under our institutions, and that the next thing would be dynamite. In regard to which I would remark that the word "anarchistic" has been so variously applied as to describe everything except God in the Constitution and a high protective tariff; that a good many of our institutions need letting down; and that the dynamite of an enlightened public sentiment is much more to be feared by the politicians than any mere combination of infusorial earth and nitro-glycerine.

If there is any conspicuous evil that should be done away with as fast as possible, it is so-called government. Thomas Paine called it a necessary evil, and declared that in its best form it could be nothing else, but since his time people have got in the habit of treating government as though it were something to be proud of. They dress the government in fine clothes and parade it through the streets as the Chinamen do their devil. They give it the best buildings in the country, and do not appear to realize that the state house is half-brother to the penitentiary.

No good reform comes through legislatures—the tendency is the other way. Are the people enjoying some liberty, at once a bill is introduced to restrict it. If people desire more chains, the legislature will hasten to accommodate them; if they desire more liberty, they must fight for it. The people of this country fought for their independence from Great Britain, for the rights of citizens in foreign countries, for their protection on the high seas, and for the abolition of human slavery at home. These epochs marked by wars are the only periods when liberty has been achieved or personal rights guaranteed. It seems to be the function of the people to win their liberty and of legislative bodies to gradually filch it away. Thus legislatures give us Sunday laws, oath laws, blasphemy laws, Comstock laws, "protective" statutes, medical laws, unequal taxation, and all that sort of thing. The legislature kindly takes from us a part of our earnings for its support, and another part for the support of superstition. It lets us pay for religious services for its own so-called benefit and for the benefit of all inmates of public institutions. It gives us the privilege of voting if we are males of twenty-one years and upwards, and denies suffrage to females of all ages. Where it got the right to grant the one or deny the other is an unsolved question. Our legislators know that the ballot amounts to nothing in the hands of a man in any large community where it is worth using, and that they should withhold it from women is explainable only on the theory that they never make even a seeming concession to the people until the worthlessness of the concession has been demonstrated.

But why proceed? Who does not know the facts? And who does not know that the reason why we have such bad government is because we have so much of it? Without the slightest call for an election we go through the process annually, biennially, or quadrennially, as the case may be. Without sense or reason our public officers go on "legislating," and expanding codes into libraries. Governments degenerate from the same cause that makes royal families run out. Our legislatures have no reason for their existence; they have nothing useful to occupy themselves with, and thus fall into bad habits, and do the mischief that the devil always finds for idle hands. They are overcrowded with time; their constituents expect them to do something, and so, there being no necessary legislation to enact, they enact a lot that is unnecessary and consequently mischievous.

There is a remedy for this state of affairs so simple and easy that it is wonderful that nobody has suggested it; namely, keep the legislators at home until some issue arises of sufficient moment to warrant calling them into active session. Then, their attention being occupied with important matters, they will have no time for jobs. To say that a state needs legislation every year is to say that a man needs a periodical dose of medicine, whereas the time to doctor him is when he is sick.

I maintain that respectable and well ordered society requires governing no more than a healthy man requires drugs. Municipal and police officers, courts, and jails appear to serve a useful purpose, but kings and houses of lords, presidents and senates, and legislatures, except for extraordinary occasions, lag superfluous on the stage. Above all, the practical politician is a nuisance. He subsists on the diseases of society, which he aggravates and makes merchandise of the people's weaknesses and wickedness.

I presume no one will say that I am objecting to law and order. I am merely objecting to the superfluous law and the disorder which come from making legislation a perennial business and developing it into an industry. It is a sort of pious doctrine to hold that public office is a public trust, but it isn't. It is a private enterprise, wherein, under pretense of serving them, the robber class live in mischievous idleness at the expense of the people.

Three young men came into the office of FREETHOUGHT recently, and inquired for somebody to commune with. Mr. Putnam volunteered his services, when one of them took him apart and told him confidentially that another of the party was under conviction of sin, and only required a little encouragement to make full confession and ask pardon of the Lord Jesus Christ. "May be," said he, "you could talk to him or let him have a tract that would touch his feelings and help him along toward his savior." Mr. Putnam said, "Yes, of course," and rowed out a copy of "Ingersoll Catechised." The young man looked at the tract, and discovering it was a Freethought document, remarked that he had probably called at the wrong place; he was looking for Gospel Hall. Then he led the sin-stricken and penitent companion hence, and they have not since returned.

It strikes me that about the jolliest, happiest company that assembles in San Francisco is made up of members of the Golden Gate Lodge of Bohemians. Every year they get together in Union Square Hall, shake hands all around, talk to one another in their native tongue, listen to their own patriotic music, and dance their national dances. Three times, by the kindness of Mr. J. Vostrovsky, of San Jose, I have had the pleasure of being present at these annual reunions. The last one was held Saturday evening, February 8. The hall was decorated as I guess it never is for any other event, and filled with a flock of young folks who came to dance and older ones who got their money's worth by looking on. I understand that the Korbel Brothers, the shipowners, are instrumental in organizing and maintaining this yearly festival.

In attending a meeting where the principal feature is dancing I am prevented from enjoying the festivities as much as I otherwise would by my unacquaintance with any of the figures or steps employed in skipping the trala-la-loo. And when I come to think of it, this is not altogether my fault. As long ago as 1872, when I resided with Deacon Jonathan Shelley, in Westmoreland, N. H., I engaged myself for a course of dancing lessons at Craig's Mutton Hill Academy, but the deacon declined to pay me my wages to be spent for such ungodly pastime, and I had to stay at home. Again, in 1886, I bought a ticket entitling me to twelve lessons in the art of dancing from Professor Cartier, of New York, and took several. The professor was a little skipjack of about one hundred and twenty-five pounds, while I was much heavier. He found himself unable to control my motions, and so made offensive remarks, of which I ultimately waxed weary.

Our relations grew more strained as our acquaintance increased, and his criticisms became more offensive, until one cold winter evening I gave him the alternative to be civil or to be lightly tossed over the banisters of the stairs by means of which his hall was reached. He disappointed me by keeping silent thereafter, and I left him at about the time I imagined I was getting the motion. Two years later I was taken in hand by the best-looking half of my family, and given an hour's instruction nightly, our orchestra being a music box. It played but one tune, and when I could dance that with my hands otherwise employed, I essayed to waltz at a public ball, but the orchestra sprung another tune on us, and I was left. Thus from childhood's hour has one thing or another stood in the way of my becoming an accomplished dancist.

Nevertheless I enjoyed myself at the Bohemians' ball. There was great good cheer; the orchestra played lively tunes; Mr. Vostrovsky made a speech in Bohemian, which I could tell was a fine one by the way those cheered who understood it; and Putnam and myself went in and hilariated to the best of our ability. We endeavored to forget that we didn't know how to dance, but I think the others must have noticed it. The band was playing all the night, and if feet were heavy hearts were light. The music told the tale of him, yclept McGinty, who never rose, since he went down into the swim, dressed in his Sunday suit of clothes. Then it related, with toot and blare, how the rollicking, razzle-dazzle boys went wandering off on a terrible tear, and awoke the night with their joyful noise. And we danced and chatted and took no note of the flight of time, nor of care or pain, drank pink lemonade till our teeth were afloat, then danced and chatted and drank again. Ah! life is a dance and the figure a reel; Time is the fiddler, gray and grim, whose music we follow with toe and heel, till foot is weary and eye is dim. We waltz and polka, fast or slow, chasseur and balance, cross over and turn. New faces arrive and old ones go, but the set moves forward in unconcern. Which last reflection I once wrote in the album of a young lady in the East, and subscribed myself, "Yours for the whole figure." Such, however, is the fickleness of the human heart, that I am now another's.

THE COMING CONVENTION OF LIBERAL WOMEN.

There is a movement on foot to assemble the prominent Liberal Women of the country in Washington, on February 24-25, in a convention to be held for purposes of organization.

The hour is eminently ripe for such a movement. For some time past, our orthodox brethren and sisters—especially the sisters—not satisfied with their legitimate churchly works of mercy and peace and the right (inherent in every human being) to moral suasion, have assumed an aggressive position, and are seeking to cram their religious opinions by main force down the throats of those who differ with them. By a resolution of the late Chicago Convention, the W. C. T. U. women declared that Christ should be recognized in our laws as the king of nations; and by this and by similar utterances, they have placed themselves in line with the American Sabbath Union, with the advocates of the Blair and Breckenridge bills, and, in short, with all the various branches of that "God-in-the-Constitution" party who are planning to destroy the corner-stone of our republic—i. e., religious liberty.

When the women of a community have been once roused to concerted action upon any moral question, their success is usually but a matter of time. Unlike men, they are not, as a rule, held in check by business or political considerations. The training of centuries, which has stimulated the feminine emotional nature out of all proportion to its intellectual nature, has also compelled it to seek an outlet along higher levels only. The result is, that, when once it precipitates itself from these high table-lands upon the brutality, the immorality, or other wickedness along the lower levels, it does so with an appalling and well-nigh irresistible torrent that sweeps everything before it. We have a striking example in this same Women's Christian Temperance movement, which is now sweeping over our country in an ever-deepening flood. One by one, the old bulwarks of intemperance totter and fall before our eyes; and it looks just now as though every saloon, with its baleful influence, were doomed to final submersion and overthrow by the raging waters.

But, alas! the flood does not cease here. Mingled with this torrent of righteous indignation are powerful currents of church fanaticism, which already threaten the very foundations of religious liberty upon which our republic rests—currents which are making themselves felt by the unconscious help of the flood of philanthropy along whose channel they run.

It is against such fanaticism as this, that the Liberal women of the country are called to organize in February. And it is to be hoped that our thoughtful and broad-minded women everywhere will respond to this call, in so far as they are able.

The time has come when the irregular, guerrilla warfare of Liberals must be replaced by co-operation and discipline, if any really effective battle is to be waged against ecclesiastical aggression. Liberal leagues and radical clubs are all well enough, as far as they go. They cultivate the intellectual side of Liberalism, and furnish a place of exchange for progressive thought. But, as to influencing the emotional nature of the community in favor of Liberalism, they are almost useless.

We can learn a lesson from our orthodox brethren in this matter. What has been the secret of their success?

Certainly not their numerical strength, as compared with the numbers of non-church-goers. The most hopeful among them admit that but a small minority of the older business men are active sympathizers; that but from seven to ten per cent of the young men in a community are church members; and that but from fifteen to seventeen per cent of young men ever see the inside of a church. The majority of the mature male population are non-church-goers. The main dependence of the orthodox church is upon its women; there being—according to a recent speech by Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop before the W. C. T. U.—but one man to four or six women at the regular church services, and but one man to fourteen or fifteen women at prayer-meetings. The reason for this predominance of women over men in church work probably lies in what we have indicated above—that the training of women through long centuries has compelled an emotional outlet along higher levels only. But, whatever the cause, the fact is indisputable, that it is the women who have carried on both the philanthropy and devoteeism—in short, the emotional work—of the orthodox church. And of late years, since its women have learned organization and business methods, the church has advanced with giant strides. Like the Democratic party in politics, these orthodox women "vote solidly." And they work solidly, too, each woman doing her level best for the church she believes in—be that best, little, or much—and acting with her fellow-women under some accredited leader. Under this leadership, they get up tea-parties, tableaux, fairs, and entertainments of various kinds, and work like Trojans, well content if they "make" but a very few dollars above the general expenses; they sell tickets, distribute circulars and tracts, besiege rich people until the pursestrings are loosened, organize "Lend a Hand" clubs among the boys and girls, and keep the young men and women going at some sort of delightful social coadjutorship which shall finally bring in money or recruits for "the cause." It is little wonder that all this energy, this faithfulness in detail work, this organization under competent leadership should win so many orthodox successes.

Compared with their sisters in the church, what are our Liberal women doing? Almost nothing.

It is high time that women outside of orthodoxy awakened to the sense of their powers, as have already their sisters within the pale of the church. It is high time that they realized the mission to which they are called in this nineteenth century, and which they alone can accomplish—the carrying of the human race not alone upward, as their orthodox sisters are seeking to do, but forward to the broader sweep and clearer outlook of Liberalism.

It is for this purpose that the Convention of Liberal women is called in February. And it is to be hoped that everyone of our women will do her best to help along that purpose.

Whether the Convention will elect to organize independently of previous societies, or to form an auxiliary branch of some one of those already active, remains to be seen. The auxiliary plan has much in its favor; and, if this meet with the Convention's approval, it seems as though the American Secular Union might confidently expect to be the one with which our Liberal women would hasten to ally themselves. The American Secular Union has three things especially to commend itself as a rallying-point for the new society.

1. The nine principles which it advocates, and which are lineal descendants of the famous "Nine Demands of Secularism."

2. That "Non-Partisan" clause in its constitution, whereby it "welcomes all persons, of whatever faith or party, to its membership, on the basis of 'no union of church and state.'"

3. Its article on "Local Auxiliary Societies," which states that such organizations "shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their affairs," and that "the effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient co-operation of the freest kind with the American Secular Union and with other local societies."

IDA C. CRADDOCK, CORR. SEC'Y A. S. U.

IGNORANCE AT THE VATICAN.

At present, says the New York Tribune, English is practically an unknown tongue at the Vatican. The pope can neither speak it nor read it. Cardinal Rampolla, the secretary of state, is in the same plight. So is Monsignor Mocenni, the under secretary. Cardinal Simeoni, chief of the propaganda, who has charge of all the English-speaking countries cannot speak a word of our language. Monsignor Jacobini is learning it. Of the Italian cardinals only one, Cardinal Mazella, can talk English, and he is a Jesuit.

CONSTRUCTIVE LIBERALISM.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Your journal contains in Vol. III., No. 4, a criticism of an editorial article of the Open Court, to which I wish to make a few remarks in reply.

It is very wrong to drag unnecessarily the names of people that are dead into a debate and mingle their private affairs with the opinions of the debaters. Let us hope that in a further evolution of the ethics of discussion such a policy will be considered as an inexcusable mistake. There are many Liberals who left their homes for the sake of liberty, and the author of the much-abused article is one of them. Yet it is unjustifiable, in consideration of the facts that the late Mr. Ernst Prussing "enlisted in a company of volunteers that swore fidelity to the revolutionary principles of 1848" and that "he was compelled to leave his native land," to consider him as a Liberal of that typical class characterized in the article.

We here gladly take the occasion, so inappropriately forced upon us, to state that Mr. Ernst Prussing was a Liberal of truly constructive tendencies. This he not only proved in life, but even in death, leaving generous legacies to the Lehrer-Seminar of Milwaukee and the Society for Ethical Culture in Chicago, of which he was a member. Both institutions are energetic attempts toward the realization of constructive Liberalism.

What are the Ethical societies but modernized churches? They are still in their infancy, and their members are not numerous. Their religious position is not as yet clearly understood. But I see a great promise in their aspirations; and if the churches remain deaf to the many voices that appeal to them and try to rouse them from their slumber, the ethical societies will become the church of the future. It is certain that only that church or congregation or society will in the end survive which fulfills the duties that are demanded.

We may have dissented from Mr. Prussing in many points, in the usage of terms, and in the conception of philosophical problems. Yet I am sure that his Liberalism was not satisfied with mere negations. He wanted to preserve the good and to build up the positive ideals of Freethought.

* * * * *

The criticism of FREETHOUGHT is a broadside, of irrelevant questions, such as whether I was ever "intimately acquainted with the sons of any great number of clergymen?" and, if so, whether I "find them better than other boys?" I suppose that I am not expected to answer any questions which might lead me away from the points at issue. But let me state in answer to the question quoted that I know of many sons of clergymen who distinguished themselves in some way or another. Mr. Ingersoll is one of them, and although I have not the pleasure of his personal acquaintance, yet I know that he must have inherited from his father some great qualities, of which I mention his love of truth, his brilliant oratory, his rhetorical style, and the enthusiastic zeal for his cause which, if it were used in the reverse direction, would undoubtedly be called "religious."

* * * * *

It is perhaps natural that the Open Court will find opposition in both quarters, among the orthodox as well as among those Liberals who are merely destructive. We are in sympathy with both and recognize in both the honesty of their intentions and good-will to serve humanity. We observe that they antagonize and often vilify each other, and we wish to conciliate both parties. We see that in the evolution of mankind both are necessary factors to build up our future ideals, and we invite them to leave aside personal abuse, insinuations, and invectives, and to join in the work of constructive Liberalism, which will bring good-will among men and peace upon earth.

I am willing to listen to any argument, and, if it be strong enough to convince me, I shall freely acknowledge it. I trust that fairness in debate and the sincere wish of a mutual understanding will help us to arrive at practical results by which the debaters as well as their readers can profit.

PAUL CARUS.

● Chicago, Ill., Jan. 30, 1890.

"The Truth Seeker Annual" is out at last. That is, it is out here—one copy. About the time the market is supplied, our order of two months ago may be delivered by the railroad company, which has had our Eastern books in charge for the past few eons of duration. But that is immaterial to the merits of the work, which is the best yet. The table of contents is as follows:

Calendar for 1890; Freethought in the United States, 1889; Faded Flowers, poem by J. E. Remsburg; The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue, T. B. Wakeman; Mostly Fools, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin); Record of the Spanish Inquisition; Dates of the Fabrication of Some Roman Catholic Dogmas; The Boler House Mystery, Nearly a Tragedy, with a Moral, Helen H. Gardner; The Middle Ages, illustrated—The Priest, The Supernatural World, The Reformation, Future Terrors—The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity, illustrated; Freethought Journals in the United States; In Search of a Spirit, E. M. Macdonald; Why I Left the Church, H. O. Pentecost.

Without making any comparisons, it may be said that two of these contributions are of especial merit and interest. Mr. Remsburg's poem, "Faded Flowers," is a classic. The title is not new; the rhythm is not faultless, but the sentiment appeals irresistibly to the heart of the reader. The other, "In Search of a Spirit," by E. M. Macdonald, is an account, very amusingly written, of the editor's attempt to get proof of spirit communication, wherein it is shown that his failure to reach his object was due wholly to the mediums and not at all to the investigator or to his friend, Mr. Charles McArthur, who instigated the search.

LATER.—Freight has arrived. Truth Seeker Annual, 25 cents.

The principal feature in the Transatlantic, of February 1, is a translation into English verse of Francois Coppee's poetical one-act drama, "Le Pater," which was recently forbidden by the French censorship on the eve of its production by the leading theatre of France. A portrait of the author of the poem appears on the cover of the magazine. In this number is begun a series of new papers, entitled "Vagrant Life." The opening paper is a criticism of the Paris Exposition, and especially of the Eiffel tower. The same magazine begins the publication of a newly-discovered manuscript by Schopenhauer, the father of Pessimism. (328 Washington street, Boston. $2.00 a year).

The Truth Seeker's symposium on constructive Freethought is headed by Colonel Ingersoll in the issue of February 8. Other contributors to the same issue are R. B. Westbrook, R. C. Adams, E. B. Foote, Jr., George E. Macdonald, and several more. The symposium will occupy three numbers of the paper.

BRAINS, SCIENCE, AND CIVILIZATION.*

BY THE HON. A. SCHELL.
PART II.

Alexandria was the world's arena for mental combat. Here the giants wrestled in friendly contest for intellectual supremacy. Here the disciples of Aristotle, the followers of Plato, the admirers of Socrates could meet on common ground in friendly communion. Students flocked hither from all parts of the world. At one time, during its palmiest days, fourteen thousand were in attendance at her schoolrooms, lecture rooms, and halls of science. Oh! it was a grand and glorious epoch in the world of science. Here things ethereal and things material were subjected to the crucial test of the alembic of science. Here the different schools of philosophy were taught. Here was collected a library of 700,000 manuscript volumes. Never before nor since was there concentrated at one spot of earth such a comprehensive and vast amount of human knowledge. Here mind came in collision with mind, and from the concussion were struck rich coruscation and dazzling scintillations of thought, bright as the spark struck by the collision of steel with adamant.

But a great cycle of time had rolled around. The hour-hand had traversed every point on the dial plate of the human intellect. The sun of science having reached its highest point was driven across its summer solstice into the dreary regions of the dark ages by the fagot and the sword, not again to return to illumine the mind of man for a thousand years. Henceforth learning was suppressed, individuality extinguished, freedom of thought strangled, science crucified, and the great temple erected under the auspices of a pagan philosophy, dedicated to knowledge, was razed to the ground by the ruthless arm of bigotry. Not a stone of that colossal and magnificent edifice was left unturned, and upon its ruins was built an edifice dedicated to faith.

The demonstrations of Euclid, the teachings of Apollonius, and the lectures of Hypatia were supplanted by holy water, wax candles in broad daylight, oracles, rites, mummeries, incantations, and ceremonies.

Go back with me to the banks of the Nile—to the tops of the pyramids, the wonders of the world; and then, O Time in your flight, go back with me to that period of glory, splendor, and grandeur of Egyptian civilization that had flourished and prospered and had been the focus of learning, of art and science for hundreds of years under the auspices of a pagan philosophy, and compare it with the Egypt of the present under the auspices of a modern philosophy, and then tell me, ye who dare, that civilization does not depend upon the number of truths disclosed to the human mind and the freedom with which they pervade all classes of society. Egypt of to-day, under the khedives and pachas, is but a relic of what Egypt was in its glory, under the Ptolemies and the Pharaohs.

In the history of civilization we now stand on the brink of darkness, whose appalling and forbidding features are intensified by the brilliancy of the light it extinguished. We stand upon the abhorrent shores of the Dark Ages, and as we look across the sombre abyss we find that science has been a wanderer and a fugitive for a thousand years, hunted down by the fagot and the sword. At length we see the faint glimmer of light on the far distant shore shoot up like the silver streamers of the morning twilight announcing the approach of his imperial majesty, the glorious orb of day.

Copernicus, in the year 1507, advanced the heliocentric theory of the universe and established the earth's position with regard to the sun. It completely overthrew the geocentric, and changed the face of astronomical science; but the great discovery lay buried in the secret chambers of his brain for thirty-six years; public opinion was not yet prepared to receive the great truth.

In 1632 Galileo published his book entitled "The System of the World," its object being the vindication of the Copernican doctrine, and he was thrown into prison for doing so. But it was of no use; henceforth and forever the world ceased to study geography from a flat surface—the angels ceased to drag the sun behind a high mountain at sunset—nor did they longer drag him out at sunrise, and the waters of the Nile no longer ran up an incline.

Science, having barely survived the crisis of the Dark Ages, was resurrected from its deathbed by the discoveries of the Copernican system and the subsequent discoveries of Kepler and Newton.

The year 1687 presents an epoch in European science as well as in the intellectual department of man. The year is marked by the publication of the "Principia" of Newton, an incomparable work, in which he established the law of gravitation and demonstrated that attraction is as to the mass of matter and inversely as to the square of the distance.

Leibnitz declared that Newton had dethroned God—had robbed the deity of his attributes, and had sapped the foundations of natural religion. True as to the God who stopped the sun and moon in mid-heaven at the command of Joshua; true as to the religion based on the fall of man in the garden of Eden and the miraculous conception; true as to the attributes of a God who sends his children to hell to suffer throughout an endless eternity.

I believe Newton to have been the most intellectual man that ever stood upon this earth. His discoveries in astronomy forever settled that long-disputed question with the church for which Bruno was burned at the stake and Galileo imprisoned. He stands a tower of strength upon the ramparts of astronomical science.

There should be inscribed to his memory the grandest and most sublime epitaph ever written on the tombstone of the dead—

Nature and nature's laws lay hid in night;
God said, "Let Newton be," and all was light.

We now have science on horseback, firmly seated in the saddle, with foot securely fixed in the stirrup; and he who would not be crushed under the wheels of progress and sabred in the conflict must stand from under.

I might refer to the origin and art of printing, electric telegraphy, the telephone, the invention of gunpowder and kindred explosives, utilization of steam-power, building of railroads, ocean steam navigation, etc., would time permit—all bearing upon the subject of civilization. But the scope of my present lecture is intended to embrace a period of time in the distant past, rather than the near present.

In conclusion I propose to refer briefly to the immediate causes underlying the French Revolution and the Revolution itself, than which nothing has done so much to give impetus to the physical sciences and civilization of the present day.

The three most important correlated forces in nature are light, heat, and electricity. The French devoted themselves to the investigation of these forces with pre-eminent success.

Provost applied himself to the study of the law of the radiation of heat, while Fourier established the laws of its conduction and eventually raised thermotics to a science. D'Alibard and Coulomb made experiments in electricity which brought electrical phenomena under the jurisdiction of mathematics. To our knowledge of double refraction important additions were made by the labors of Malus and Fresnel. Malus discovered the polarization of light, a splendid discovery in optical science. Newton analyzed a beam of light and established the seven primary colors in the solar spectrum. Hook, Huygens, and Young promulgated the undulatory theory of light, which finally overthrew the corpuscular theory of Newton.

It was to the writings of a generation of great thinkers that the French Revolution is attributable, and when the revolution came the recoil was tremendous. It lifted the brakes free from the wheels of progress—wheels that had been blocked for nearly a thousand years. It elevated the lower and middling classes to a higher plane of progressive improvement.

Buckle says: "The three real sources of superiority—the superiority of morals, of intellect, and knowledge—began to be recognized by the French people as the true foundation of merit in the teachings of her learned and scientific men several years before the outbreak of the revolution. The first great blow to the privileged classes of France, who stood in the way of intellectual progress of the people, was the unprecedented impulse that was given to the physical sciences through the teachings in in the form of lectures by learned and distinguished Infidels. Those vast discoveries made and the great number of truths disclosed to the human mind under their teachings not only stimulated the intellect of thinking men, but even roused the curiosity of the thoughtless parts of society. The lectures of chemists, of geologists, of mineralogists, and of physiologists were attended by those who came to wonder as well as those who came to learn. In Paris the scientific assemblages were crowded to overflowing. The halls in which the great truths of nature were expounded were no longer able to hold their audiences, and in several instances it was found necessary to enlarge them. The sittings of the Academy, instead of being confined to a few solitary scholars, were frequented by everyone whose rank or influence enabled them to secure a place. In 1768 Antoine Petit began his anatomical lectures in the great amphitheater of the Jardin du Roi. The press to hear him was so great that not only all the seats were occupied, but the very window ledges were crowded.

* An address delivered before the Second Annual Convention of the California State Liberal Union.

"Fourcroy's lectures on chemistry began in 1784. Such were the crowds of men and women who flocked to hear him that it was twice necessary to enlarge the size of his lecture room. The same may be said of lectures on geology, mineralogy, physiology, botany, and electricity. Even women of fashion, forgetting their usual frivolity, hastened to hear the discussions on the composition of a mineral, on the discovery of a new salt, on the structure of plants, on the organization of animals, on the properties of the electric fluid. A sudden craving after knowledge seemed to have smitten every rank. The largest and most difficult inquiries found favor in the eyes of those whose fathers had hardly heard the names of the sciences to which they belonged. The brilliant imagination of Buffon made geology popular. The same thing was effected for chemistry by the eloquence of Fourcroy, and for electricity by Nollet, while the admirable exposition of Lalande caused astronomy itself to be generally cultivated. In a word, it is enough to say that during the thirty years preceding the Revolution the spread of the physical sciences was so rapid that the Hall of Science became the temple of democracy. People began to see that the greatness of men has no connection with the splendor of their titles or the dignity of their birth, and men refused to take off their hats to royalty or to bend their knees to the nobility." The French Revolution itself is a potential factor in the history of civilization.

The discoveries of Galileo, Kepler, Boyle, and Newton gave a favorable impulse to the minds of men and prepared the way for great thinkers and expounders of the physical sciences who appeared in the latter half of the eighteenth century, and whose writings precipitated a revolution upon Europe which for magnitude and stupendous results has not a parallel in history, either in ancient or modern times—a revolution which rended the very foundations of society asunder, shook Europe to its very center, gave birth to the soldier of fortune, the man of destiny, who, by his original genius and force of intellect, planted the imperial standard of France, sooner or later, upon the ramparts of every capital on the continent of Europe. It broke the adamant chains which had bound the human intellect to the juggernaut of superstition for centuries and elevated man to a higher, nobler, and surer plane of liberty.

The French Revolution demonstrated the fact that brain is a positive power, and that the aristocracy, the nobility, and the ruling classes had not an exclusive monopoly of the thing. From the lower and middling classes, which heretofore had been ignored, men of brilliant and transcendent genius suddenly sprang up; and being actuated by the spirit of the Revolution and the spirit of the times, soon carved out on the field of battle, at the forum and tribune, their own destiny. Upon her banner was inscribed, "Beneath the flag of France all men are free"—free to think, free to investigate, and free to become enlightened. In her fundamental law was incorporated words that have thrilled the world, "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity," the grandest and most sublime words that ever fell from the lips of man. Henceforth knowledge moved upward and onward along the line of humanity with accelerated velocity until it penetrated the remotest recesses of the hidden laws of nature and developed a standard of truth and civilization not dreamed of by the boldest thinkers of antiquity.

During that period of political convulsions revolting scenes of anarchy and bloodshed occurred at which the human mind stood appalled. Yet the sons of France performed prodigies of valor and deeds of heroism, and with the richest blood flowing in the veins of her bravest men saturated the soil of France that liberty might live and tyranny might die. Millions were aroused from their lethargy, from among the masses of the people, to assert those inalienable rights, life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, to which all men, as rational beings, are justly entitled.

Those who claim that Christianity promoted science are either dishonest or ignorant. If honest, they are not familiar with the pages of history. Science in all ages had to struggle for an existence—had to grapple with the power of theology, which put forth its long arms and countless tentacula to crush knowledge in its infancy. When one reads ecclesiastical history and learns the eternal warfare that Christianity has waged against science, is it not enough to sour the human heart against the long robe, the black frock, and the surplice of the priest? The heart involuntarily shrinks from the sickening recitals contained in ecclesiastical history. It creates hatred and contempt for the church, makes Infidels and Atheists of us all, and Freethinkers and Liberals of the rising generation. It saps the very foundation of our belief in inspiration and revelation.

Draper says: "As to the issue of the coming contest can there be any doubt? Whatever is resting on fiction and fraud will be overthrown. Institutions that organize imposture and spread delusions must show what right they have to exist. Faith must render an account of itself to reason. Mysteries must give place to facts. Religion must relinquish that imperiousness, that domineering position which she has so long maintained against science." There must be absolute freedom of thought.

Therefore exercise the high prerogative of thought. Think, and emancipate yourselves from the clutches of superstition—from the dogmas of the church, from the traditions of antiquity, and rely upon your own standard of enlightened reason, and upon the dignity and supremacy of your own intellects.

†

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

Before this reaches you Mr. Bradlaugh will probably have returned to England from India. Freethinkers all over the world will rejoice to know that the sea-voyage has restored him to health. He must not again presume upon his strength. There is no doubt he has greatly aged in appearance since he was permitted to take his place in the House of Commons. All through his life he preserved his soldierly habit of "early to bed and early to rise." Visitors in the old days could find no better hour than eight o'clock in the morning to catch him up and doing. The late hours of the House of Commons I consider largely responsible for his break-down. His popularity, too, stands in the way of his taking sufficient exercise. His house, 20 Circus R., St. John's Wood, has no garden, and he cannot venture out without taking a cab, or he is followed about by noisy gamins anxious to show to others the great Bradlaugh. The consequence is that but for a little fencing and his late illness, he would be uncomfortably stout.

It is only too certain that Mr. Bradlaugh will at the special meeting of the National Secular Society, called for Feb. 12, insist upon the necessity of his resigning the presidency. Although many would like for him to reconsider this decision, there is no likelihood that it will be altered. But no one who knows Mr. Bradlaugh will suppose that he will be less devoted to the Freethought cause. Such a supposition would reflect upon his gratitude towards a party who in all his struggles never deserted him. But there is little doubt that with his Parliamentary duties Mr. Bradlaugh has his hands sufficiently full, and he has indeed been overworked for years past.

The recent Theosophic tergiversations of Mrs. Besant have thoroughly lost for her the confidence of the Freethought party, and even if she had not expressed her intention not to again take office in the National Secular Society, there was no likelihood of her being elected to the place vacated by Mr. Bradlaugh. Although among the vice-presidents of the society there are many men distinguished for their services to the Freethought cause, the only one likely to rally the bulk of the party is Mr. G. W. Foote, the editor of the Freethinker. Upon Mr. Foote's liberation from his year's imprisonment for blasphemy in 1884 he was indeed virtually pointed out by Mr. Bradlaugh as his successor in bearing the standard of the party. He is the only popular orator of sufficient militancy to meet the present need of the party, and his success in organizing the London Secular Federation, of which he is president, augurs well for the future of the National Secular Society under his leadership. No doubt some may look back to the presidency of Mr. Bradlaugh with the thought that "there were giants in the earth in those days," but there are many common-sized persons who will work all the better for not being so conspicuously overtopped by the giant.

The dinner with which the London Secular Federation formally opened its campaign for 1890 was a great success. Over two hundred partook of a sumptuous repast at the Bridge House hotel and a good few dollars were shelled out for propagandist purposes after dinner. You may be interested to learn that the toast "Our Comrades in Other Lands," proposed by my unworthy self, was drunk with the utmost enthusiasm.

The evangelicals have as usual been opening the year with a week of prayer, letting the almighty know exactly what they do and what they do not want during the ensuing year. I fear the fervent prayers of these righteous men and women will be of little effect until they get telephonic communication established direct with heaven. At present providence seems very deaf, or in the tantrums, for the week of prayer has been followed by increased severity of the influenza, which diminishes the audiences of the theatres and still more those of the churches. The fact that I am among the sufferers must be my excuse for the brevity of this epistle.

J. M. WHEELER.

OUT OF THE DARKNESS.

St. Louis, Mo., according to dispatches, is stirred up over a religious sensation that will become national in interest and importance, and of which mutterings have been heard, but which did not fully develop until lately.

The Rev. R. C. Cave is one of the most eloquent, if not the foremost, in pulpit oratory in St. Louis, and for some time past has been pastor of the Central Christian church. His congregation was composed of leading St. Louisans, and the church is situated in an aristocratic quarter of the city.

The first startling evidence that Dr. Cave had departed from the orthodox teachings of Alexander Campbell was found in a sermon delivered by him two months since, in which he flatly denied the inspiration of the Old Testament, and made a general attack upon the narrowness of creeds, his sermon being, as usual, couched in the most brilliant and graphic language.

Anticipating a revolt of the orthodox following to such utterances, Dr. Cave's immediate followers in the Central Christian church held a formal meeting, and strongly indorsed their brilliant pastor.

No action was taken by the orthodox element for some time, but the minister's addresses assuming a more pronounced vein of heterodoxy, his course could not be ignored. Even then the influence wielded by the magnetic pastor was apparent, for at a church meeting held some weeks since, a formal report and disapproval of his advanced teachings were coupled with the most emphatic expressions of appreciation of his talents.

Following this meeting Dr. Cave resigned his pastorate. His resignation was immediately followed by that of a large proportion of the Central church members who were faithful to him, and a hall being rented temporarily a new Christian church was organized under the name of the West End Christian church, with Dr. Cave as pastor.

Since that time the bold minister has delivered a series of sermons that have been widely reported and have attracted profound attention. He denies the inspiration of the scriptures and the divinity of Christ, scoffs at the miracles, and belabors the accepted dogmas of the church unmercifully. In consequence of such a revolutionary course Dr. Cave has been officially condemned by the organs of the Christian church and by other ministers as unsound and dangerous in his doctrine.

Sunday the secession sensation culminated when the undaunted Freethinker arose in his pulpit, and, with great emotion, announced that, in view of official condemnation, he felt it his duty to resign from the pastorate of the seceding church rather than have it and its members pronounced out of communion with all other recognized Christian churches.

This announcement was followed by a last and crowning evidence of loyalty on the part of his followers. It was a virtual repetition of the scriptural scene between Ruth and Naomi, and the declaration, "Whither thou goest I will go," was unqualifiedly made by every member of the bold congregation. It was agreed that if the pastor was heretical his parishioners were also, and all might as well be read out by "book, bell, and candle" together. The officers of the church state that the church was organized under the laws of the state of Missouri, and could continue its existence separated from all other religious bodies. Upon this basis the congregation has formally decided to withdraw from the orthodox Christian church and cling to the pastor. The organization will continue to be known as the West End Christian church, but will be severed from all connection with other religious bodies. It begins its startling existence as an independent religious organization, and its head and front is Dr. R. C. Cave.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MURDER.

This pleasant little city of Arkansas is in Cowley county, Kan., just on the border of the Indian territory. The line is five miles to the southward. At present our community is all torn up over a great miracle which the disciples of Christian Science tried to perform, but they made a mislick of it, and landed an estimable lady on the other side of Jordan. Mrs. T. C. White was well known to all of us. She was prostrated with the pneumonia, but under the treatment of a skillful physician passed the crisis of the malady, and was in a fair way to recover, when she received a visit from a pair of lady cranks of the Christian Science persuasion. They turned her nurse out of doors, persuaded her to quit taking medicine, removed a poultice from her chest, and got her up to join them in energetic prayers for her recovery. "God will take care of you, sister," they assured her. Well, he did take care of her, for if any reliance can be placed on "the good book," she is now playing a golden harp in that better land. She was dead the next morning. The two cranks, struck with horror at the result of their idiotic work, tried to lie out of their responsibility in the matter, but Mr. White and the professional nurse have published statements in the local papers setting all doubts at rest on that score. The poor woman was simply murdered. As a natural result, the faith-cure business is not having much of a boom hereabouts at present.

Did you notice that case in Wisconsin wherein a good Christian was sentenced to the penitentiary for life for killing a man for "scoffing at the Bible?" This practical apostle will get his reward in the next world.

The other night, at a Salvation Army meeting in this city, a female warrior of the band approached a sturdy Swede railroad laborer with the stereotyped question, "My friend, will you work for Jesus?" "No; I hab a job wid Hans Andersen on the section," was the apologetic reply.

PAGAN.

Arkansas City, Kan.

The Truth Seeker's Symposium.

A short time ago the editor of the Truth Seeker sent to some thirty Freethought writers these questions.

Is there an Affirmative, Positive, Constructive side to Freethought?

If not, the reason why?

If there be, in what, in your opinion, does it consist, and in what should it consist?

A large number of replies have been received, and on February 8 the editor will begin to publish them. Among the writers are W. Stewart Ross, editor of the London Agnostic Journal, L. K. Washburn, editor of the Boston Investigator, Capt. Robert C. Adams, F. M. Holland, J. H. Burnham, E. C. Walker, Lucy N. Colman, Parker Pillsbury, R. B. Westbrook, George E. Macdonald, H. O. Pentecost, Susan H. Wixon, Samuel P. Putnam, and others whose names are guarantees of the merit of their contributions.

PAINE AS A PATRIOT.

The Mail gives this synopsis of the address of George E. Church at the Paine celebration in Stockton:

George E. Church, the orator of the evening, delivered a short but entertaining address, confining himself to historical facts and a brief review of some of the statements made by Paine in his "Rights of Man" and "Age of Reason." The speaker said that he did not intend to make any blind eulogies of the one in whose honor the meeting was called. He did not intend to ask those present to worship Paine, but would simply present facts in regard to the misjudged but noble man, and leave his hearers to form their own opinions from the truth. The speaker then followed Paine through his stormy life up to the time of his death. The man, he said was not honored now for his belief but for his noble mind and acts. Other men who had held the same religious unbelief as Paine were not persecuted for it as he was. The president's chair has been filled by men who held the same belief as Paine.

The speaker touched on the subject of the Declaration of Independence, and said that Paine had been largely instrumental in framing that great document, which contained in a wonderfully concise form the fundamental principles of good government. "Let any one look upon Paine's ideas of freedom and say whether he should be honored or reviled," continued the speaker. "A man who had such a love for universal liberty as he had must have possessed some good qualities. You cowardly miscreants who now revile him, do you stop to think that perhaps to him you in a great degree owe the very liberty that you now enjoy?"

Speaking of Paine's life in France, the speaker referred to the time when he was thrown in prison on a charge of treason. The day came for the execution of several men, among them Paine. One of the prison-keepers went around marking the outside doors of the cells of those who were to be executed. Paine's door happened to be swung open, and was marked on the inside instead of the outside. When the men were taken out for execution Paine escaped. "That was not what some men would call an act of providence," said the speaker, "but was, as Paine said, the result of an immutable law which governs the destiny of all mankind."

"No one in the days of Paine could say aught against his morality. None could point a scornful finger at him and say that he had been guilty of immoral acts. The only time that he was ever accused of immorality the accusation recoiled on the accuser."

Christianity and Nationalism.

"The Rev. R. M. Webster, of Long Beach, will deliver the first of a series of four lectures on 'The Relations of Christianity to Nationalism' in Illinois Hall, corner Fort and Sixth streets, this evening."

MR. GEO. E. MACDONALD, Dear Sir: The notice given above appeared in the Los Angeles Times Sunday, Feb. 2, A.D. 1890. Should you happen down this way and feel interested in the subject, don't fail to drop in and learn how the combination will work in the good time coming.

Yours very truly, C. SEVERANCE.

Los Angeles.

Mission Creek.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Having considerable faith in the influence of the press for the best interests of the citizen, I wish to call the attention of your many readers, citizens, business men, and property holders to the condition of that long-disputed property lying along what is known as Mission creek. It is a question which concerns the health, happiness, and prosperity of the people of San Francisco. In 1860 Mission creek was capable of floating fifty or sixty tons. Now it is closed up, and that part of the city lying between Fourth and Nineteenth streets has become virtually a swamp, threatening the health of 350,000 people.

The remedy is, open up the creek again and restore to the city its natural artery of drainage. In my opinion, which is shared by every sensible business man, there is no enterprise to which our authorities could devote themselves promising such beneficial results as this, not alone from a sanitary, but a commercial point of view as well, for the improvement would greatly enhance the value of adjacent property. What is worth doing at all is worth doing well. Therefore let this creek be strongly piled on each side, filling in with rock and cement and dredging the channel to a depth of fourteen or fifteen feet. Thus improved the work would last for five hundred years, and there is no better time to do it than now.

CITIZEN AND TAX-PAYER.

San Francisco, Feb. 7, 1890.

Mrs. Krekel's Work.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Mr. Krekel has organized a Secular Union here with W. M. Luckey for president; Wm. Patterson, vice-president; H. Evans, treasurer; G. E. Dean, secretary.

Mrs. Krekel's lectures were well-attended, and many pronounced them the best they ever heard.

G. E. DEAN.

Ashland, Or.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel gave two lectures in the U. M. L. Hall of this place on December 28 and 29. On account of bad weather, bad roads, and other reasons, the audiences were not large.

She also gave three or four lectures in Ashland, and organized a Secular Union with thirty-two members. I hope that our Liberals will keep her busy, as she is doing a good work for the cause of freeing the minds of men from all forms of superstition. May the editors, FREETHOUGHT, and the new publishing house have a prosperous year. I hope to see the face of Friend Putnam before long, as I have an argument ready for him on "spooks."

Yours, WM. H. BREESE.

Talent, Or.

A Letter From a Woman.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Will you allow me to say a word to not only the working man but the working woman also? As I was sitting in the Temple last night listening to the eloquence of Mr. Henry George, I also listened to the talk of some of the men, as I was the only lady in that part of the hall. They said they would not give up their seats to the ladies, as they were not needed there, for they could not vote. I turned and asked them, "Who raised voters, some of whom we need not be proud of?" The thought came to me, Why do not our working women come out and help swell the crowd? If we can not vote, we surely have our influence. Who need a reform more than the working women? What drives women to commit moral suicide but low wages? Perhaps if the men get reformed it will help us a little—who knows? But I would rather have it as a right, not as a gift granted, to say how we shall be governed. Those of us that have outgrown the old fable that man was made first by some great God, therefore he should rule, etc, we see they have run the ruling power in the hands of the few; and when they talk about voting with pride it ought to be with shame, instead, to know the miserable failure they have made; making slaves of themselves, being driven to the polls like cattle (excuse the harsh term) by the bosses, and voting against their own interests—doing this year after year. When some nice politician gets up and tells them what wonderful things he is going to do for the poor working man, they swallow it with a gulp and go on digging and delving, half-clothed and half-starved; yet their condition is better than that of the working women who are making shirts at sixty-five cents per dozen in this city. Think of that, ye law-makers! That is why the working women should be first in all that tends to reform both government and man. When will they give us a chance to help rule, as the green earth belongs to woman as well as man by inheritance? In times of peace she may be frivolous, but when trouble comes she knows what to do and how to act.

This theme has been talked and written about by many able men and women, and it seems like hammering at the same old story; but when governments are stirred to their foundations, must the woman be silent? I say, no. We must talk, write, and keep the subject before the people, for they say continual dropping wears a stone. I hope that in the near future the working man and the working woman will join hands and lift the wheel of political superstition out of the old rut and roll it on to crush the monster that is trying to stop all progression and Freethought.

San Francisco, Feb. 8, 1890.

MRS. O. A. BENJAMIN.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

—BY—

W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form, a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works:

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND.

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and 26.

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1463 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.

Rapp & DeBarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment, cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.

Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

Standard Scientific Works

Works by Alexander Bain.

English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
Education as a Science.....1.75

Works by Charles Darwin.

Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00

Works by J. W. Draper.

History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75

Works by Ernst Haeckel.

The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00

Works by Huxley.

Lay Sermons.....$1.75
The Advance of Science......25
American Addresses.....1.25
More Criticisms on Darwin......50
The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00

Works by John Stewart Mill.

Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
On Liberty.....1.25

Works by Richard A. Proctor.

Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
The Moon.....2.00

Works by Herbert Spencer.

Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
Man versus the State......30
First Principles.....2.00
Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
Universal Progress.....2.00
Essay, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
Education.....1.25
Organic Evolution......75

Works by Andrew D. White.

Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
The Warfare of Science.....1.00

Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.

Body and Mind.....$1.50
Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50

Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.

Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

By Carl Marx.

Capital.....$3.00

By Asa Gray.

Darwiniana.....$2.00

By L. L. McLaughlin.

Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50

By John B. Henck.

Field-Book for Railroad Engineers.....$2.50

By C. Marcel.

Study of Languages.....$1.25

By Lester F. Ward.

Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00

By Frederick Overman.

A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00

B. F. G. Fairfield.

Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25

By W. B. Carpenter.

Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25

By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.

Evolution.....$1.50

By Sir John Lubbock.

Origin of Civilization.....$5.00

By Charles A. Abbott.

A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50

By Garrett P. Serviss,

Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50

By Nathan Sheppard.

Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50

English as She is Spoke.....$.30

English as She is Written......30

Thos. Carlyle—His Life, Books, Theories......30

Comedies for Amateur Acting......30

The Distracted Young Preacher......25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

Gone Before.

The wood was damp and the feeble flame
Was slow to make connections,
So she added a little kerosene to the same
And she went up to heaven in sections.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

ANDREW D. WHITE resumes his "New Chapters in the Warfare of Science" in the February Popular Science Monthly. The present chapter is on Comparative Mythology. It deals with the myths invented to explain strangely shaped or distributed rocks, taking the story of Lot's wife, which has gone through many curious variations, as a special example.

That trying cough and throat irritation cured by Dr. Scott's Electric Plasters. 25c. Of all druggists.—Adv.

THE judgment of Solomon was attempted by a judge recently. Two women claimed the same negro baby. The puzzled judge seized the baby, pulled the bowie-knife from his belt, and proposed to halve the child, with the unexpected result that both claimants rushed forward, exclaiming, "Boss, don't kill him; you may have him yourself."

A chronic cough was quickly cured by Dr. Scott's Electric Plaster. They are the best plasters ever made. Mrs. S. E. Peck, Cassopolis, Mich. All druggists.—Adv.

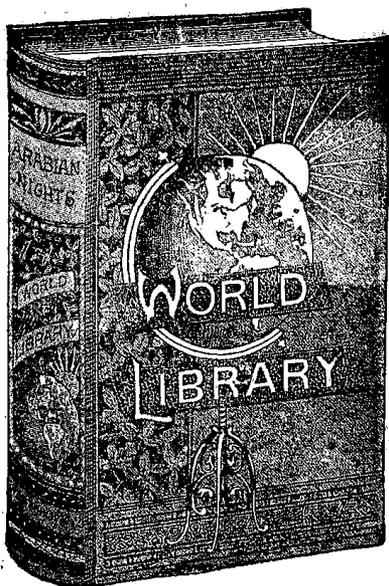

Exhorter—I tell you, young man, you are going straight to Hades.

Young Man—All right, old fel, I'll see you later.

Pains in my stomach were quickly cured by Dr. Scott's Electric Plasters.—L. M. Harmon, Toledo, Ohio.—Adv.

"EH, mon," exclaimed an elder, in a tone of pathetic recollection, "our late minister was the man! He was a poorful preacher, for in the short time he was among us, he knocked three pulpits to pieces and danged the guts out o' five Bibles!"

Dr. Scott's Electric Plasters remove pain instantly. D. S. Williamson, Springfield, Mo.—Of druggists.—Adv.

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRAIG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY.

A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce, but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESS.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last a heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavilion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERLEY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portraiture of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. PRESOTT.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll) with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; OR THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated late scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALLOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of Eng. and, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POE'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR.

C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

- COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.
- R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.
- PARKER PILLSBURY.
- JOHN E. REMSBURG.
- CHARLES WATTS.
- ROBERT C. ADAMS.
- J. H. BURNHAM.
- JOHN PECK.
- THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.
- H. O. PENTECOST.

- HELEN H. GARDENER.
- ARTHUR B. MOSS.
- L. K. WASHBURN.
- CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
- LUCY N. COLMAN.
- FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
- JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
- MATTIE P. KREKEL.
- W. F. JAMIESON.
- SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc, worth $35, for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do., $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
" " Forks	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" " Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded.

Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

- Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
- Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
- Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
- Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
- Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
- Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
- The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
- Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. D.
- Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
- Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
- Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
- Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
- Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
- The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
- The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.20.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

WANTED. YOUNG man (25) wishes situation on a farm or ranch. Willing to make himself generally useful. Temperate, good reference. Address this office. [416]

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

THE SABBATH IMPOSTURE.

BY HARRY HOOVER.

"Showing that there is no authority for the Sunday laws, either Human or "Divine."

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies 50 cents. Address this office.

PUTNAM'S WORKS.

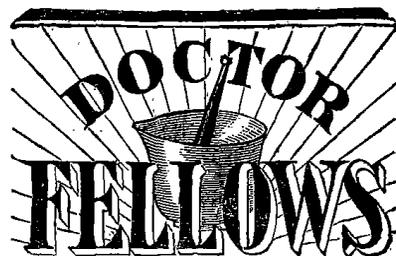

The New God. 10c. The New God was made by an artist hand, guided by a poet soul. It is as perfect as sculpture. The creator makes his "god" in his own image, and breathes into his nostrils the breath of his own life.—L. K. Washburn.

Golden Throne. A romance. Price, $1 00. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words, the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Walls and Wanderings. A new American story. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1 00. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—John Swinton's Paper.

Prometheus: A Poem. Price, $1. "It is crammed with life, thought and profound emotion, poured forth, it seems to me, with extraordinary richness and beauty."—Dr. Henry W. Bellows.

Gottlieb: His Life; or, Love Triumphant. A Romance of Earth, Heaven and Hell. Price, 25 cents. "To describe all the beauties of this simple, yet touchingly told little tale, would be a work of which I confess myself utterly incapable. To realize what it is, you must read the book itself. I have never read anything so exquisitely beautiful and good in all my life before."—Elmina Drake Slenker.

A REGULAR EDUCATED AND LEGALLY QUALIFIED PHYSICIAN, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will surely prove. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men such as seminal weakness, impotency, &c., resulting from indiscretion and ignorance of youth. Those who are ailing should send ten (10) cents for his book, "Private Counsellor," setting forth an external Application—

A POSITIVE CURE

The book is worth many times its cost, and should be read by the young for instruction and the afflicted for relief.

All Communications Strictly Confidential.

Plain Envelopes used. The book spoken of sent sealed. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, NEW JERSEY Say where you saw this Advertisement.

[From the Washington National View.]

Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, New Jersey offers his valuable services to all those in need of a kind, sympathetic and skillful physician. Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. Fellows, a specialist, in his line, stands foremost in his profession, and the encomiums showered upon him publicly as well as in private, are flattering evidences of the high appreciation and confidence his long and conscientious devotion to his specialties in his profession have so justly merited for him, and it is safe to trust him.

A Testimonial.

WEST LIBERTY, O., Aug. 12, 1888.

DR. R. P. FELLOWS—Dear Sir: The remedy you sent is working like a charm. I am completely surprised the way it acts upon the organs. Have only been using it one week, and that weakness, (seminal weakness) is coming out all right. Yours respectfully, J. R.

REMARKS—The above is a fair sample of the hundreds of testimonials received from all parts of the United States, from young, middle-aged and elderly men, suffering from various kinds of sexual complaints, but who are now cured by my External Application, the greatest of all known remedies for this class of diseases. As I am an out-and-out Liberal I trust the Freethinkers of the Land will give me their patronage, and not waste their time and money on Christian doctors. DR. FELLOWS.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future

Republic of North America

BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1. Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 00
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6-00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm Diamond* 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, PUTNAM & MACDONALD, 104 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

REMSBURG'S WORKS.

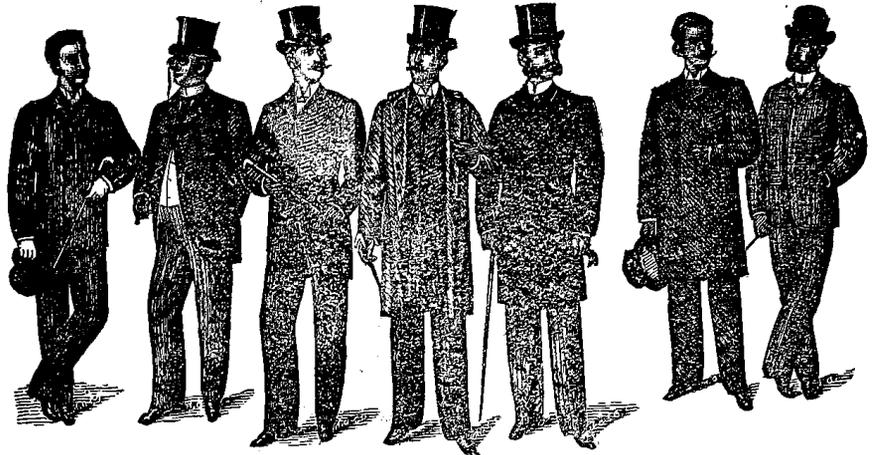

False Claims. Price 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Anti-slavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic.

Fathers of the Republic Paine, Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. Price 15 cents.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
 DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
 PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.

OLIVER HENCKLEY SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED, 375 Natoma st., cor. 5th, S. F.

P. A. CLARK.

CHAS. W. CLARK

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS,

NURSERYMEN.

Catalogs for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines.

Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice.

Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address

CLARK BROS.,

P.O. Box C,

San Jacinto, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50

Six Months..... .75

Three Months..... .50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills 414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Francisco.

Wm. W. NOBLE, Merchant Tailor.

1222 STOCKTON ST.

Bet. Pacific and Broadway.

DRESS SUITS A SPECIALTY

Kearny and Montgomery St. Car pass by.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1. Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co. 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

FREE WHAT IS IT? TO ALL

In order to quickly introduce the celebrated English Dr. Scott's Electric Porous Plaster readers of this paper, the Pall Mall Electric Association, of London, make the following liberal offer

GOOD FOR 60 DAYS
BUT FIRST ASK FOR THE PLASTERS IN YOUR DRUG STORE

and if you cannot get them remit $1.00 and you will receive four of these famous Electric Plasters by mail, postpaid, together with a pair of DR. SCOTT'S GENUINE ELECTRIC INSOLES FREE and a copy of that valuable Book, the Doctor's Story. Cut this adv't out and keep it to remind you

EVERY DRUGGIST WILL RETURN THE MONEY IF IT FAILS, SO WILL WE.

AGENTS WANTED.

DON'T DELAY.

Dr. Scott's Electric Plasters have established a wonderful reputation for their marvelous efficacy in CURING QUICKLY

COLDS, COUGHS, ALL CHEST AND LUNG TROUBLES,	NEURALGIA, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY, LIVER, STOMACH	TROUBLES, SPRAINS, ACHES AND BRUISES.
--	--	--

Price, 50 Cents.

A WORD ABOUT OUR ELECTRIC INSOLES.

They are simple in construction, astonishing in their effect, they prevent and assist in curing many forms of disease arising from wet and cold feet in winter, keeping the feet at one even temperature, prevent chilling, sweating and consequent discomforts. A grand adjunct when worn with our Plasters. Thousands suffer to-day the result of wet and cold feet which might easily and positively have been prevented by this simple remedy.

Remit $1.00 to Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y., mentioning this paper, and you will promptly receive, postpaid

FOUR PLASTERS,	Retall, - -	$1.00
ONE PAIR INSOLES,	Free, - - -	.50
ONE DR'S STORY,	Free, - - -	.25
		$1.75

Mention size of shoe you wear. Write us to-day. It is an opportunity that may never occur again.

I HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE
 Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.

13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order.

Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is fire, fall, and thievery damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thievery. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that, ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only.

Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

GOD IN THE STATE

By E. A. Stevens, Ex-Secretary of the American Secular Union.

This is the best presentation of the argument against God in the Constitution, ever prepared in a pamphlet of its size.

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies, 50 cents.

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

"Bible Contradictions," 15 cents.

Great Success.

Mrs. Gray—And has Rev. Mr. Black's ministry been a very successful one among the people here?

Mrs. White—Oh, yes, indeed! Why, he's had his salary raised no less than three times since he came!

My severe backaches were quickly cured by Dr. Scott's Electric Plaster. I confidently recommend them to all.—M. Miner, Ishpeming, Mich. Of all druggists.—Adv.

"OUR son William," said a fond mother, "is an awfully lucky boy. He bought a lottery ticket a few weeks ago, for the first time, and it drew a prize!" "How much did he pay for the ticket?" "Five dollars." What was the amount of his prize?" "Two dollars."

Had not left my room for months. Dr. Scott's Electric Plasters have made a new woman of me. They have worked wonders.—Jane M. Painter, Sciota, Ill.—Adv.

BRIDGET has a kitchenful of her company. Mistress (from the head of the stairs): "Bridget!" Bridget: "Yis ma'am" Mistress: "It's ten o'clock." Bridget: "T'ank ye, ma'am. An' will ye be so kind ez to till me whin it's twelve?"

My heart disease was greatly benefited by Dr. Scott's Electric Plaster. They are the best plasters ever made.—F. L. Bond, Afton, N. Y. Of all druggists.—Adv.

REV. MR. POSER: "I defy you to give me a single reason why the apostles should not be believed." Mr. Incredulous: "They were fishermen."

PRINTING!

Having procured one of the best Presses manufactured and a large assortment of display type, and employing competent workmen, the Free-thought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

- Letter-heads,
- Bill-heads,
- Programmes,
- Envelopes,
- Business Cards,
- Postal Cards,
- Tickets,
- Placards,
- Receipts,
- Posters,
- Dodgers,
- Circulars,
- Etc. etc.

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 8.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan., 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - FEBRUARY 22, 1890.

THE BRUNO MEMORIAL.

Last Sunday's clouds parted and the rain held up between seven and eight o'clock in the evening, and three or four hundred people took advantage of a half hour's settled weather to gather at Union Square Hall to honor the memory of Giordano Bruno. It was the two hundred and ninetieth anniversary of Bruno's martyrdom. Owing to the threatening sky the attendants were mostly men, but perhaps a hundred ladies were in the audience. The meeting was held under the auspices of the San Francisco Freethought Society, Mr. Putnam presiding. The exercises throughout were marked by ability on the part of the participators, and by deep attention from all the hearers. Mr. Van Aalst, a brilliant pianist, gave "Il Trovatore" as an opening piece and was recalled by hearty applause. The Misses Haelke, of Oakland, performed a zither duet, which grew upon the listeners until at its close they would be satisfied with nothing short of an encore. This the young ladies gave, and the audience cheered again as though loth to part with the gifted musicians. Mr. J. H. White followed in a well-rendered character song, and then the speaker of the evening, Mr. Thomas Curtis, a veteran of two-score years' battle for Freethought, was introduced. His subject was "Giordano Bruno." After a sketch of Bruno's career, in other lands, he gave this most interesting account of the return to Italy:

It is now ten years since he left his native land. His home, made more dear by persecution and exile, beckons longingly to the wanderer. Italy, his mother, is still beautiful as in the days of his youth. Her seas and skies are still painted by the same divine master, the vines cling lovingly around the valleys of her mountains, the songs and the singers may still be heard there which enchanted his youth and brought poetry into his soul. How they beckon to him! Italy, home once more. He went to Padua. The pope lived in Rome, but his hands stretched beyond the city gates. Padua was never suspected of heresy; the holy Inquisition was respected there, but Bruno left Frankfort in quietness and went to Padua. Why did he rashly venture there? Bruno was a poet; what greater love could he have than fatherland? Who can fathom the measureless depths of love of country? But although Bruno would have Padua, Padua rejected him; he had to fly for his life and went to Venice. Padua cast him forth and Venice opened her arms to receive him, but they were the arms of her jailer, and at last he had found a home in her terrible prison. It is a curious coincidence that at the same moment Bruno entered the prison at Venice, Galileo began to occupy the chair of mathematics at Padua, and the six years he taught in that city Bruno spent in his solitary cell. For six long years, without books or paper, without friends to visit him, he was kept prisoner. On his first confinement at Venice, the grand inquisitor at Rome sent one Thomas Morosini to demand him of the authorities; but he was not delivered to the Inquisition until six years afterwards, when he was sent to Rome to take his trial before the holy tribunal.

The prisons at Venice were not underground, but up close to the roof where the intense heat of summer and the cold of winter were almost unbearable.

At Rome every means was used to cause him to retract his heresies; he was charged with being a heretic and the friend of heretic princes; his writings had been condemned by the church, but threats were of no use, his spirit was unbroke, and he was more than a match for all the holy doctors. At last on the ninth of February, 1600, in the presence of the fifty cardinals and dignitaries of the church, he was forced to his knees and received the sentence of excommunication, which being ended, he was handed over to the civil authorities for execution with a "punishment without the shedding of blood." This must be understood as the cowardly formula of sentencing a human being to be burnt alive. When sentence was pronounced, Bruno, raising his head with haughty superiority, said, "I suspect you pronounce this sentence with more fear than I receive it." Bruno taught a system of Pantheism altogether opposed to the prevailing Christianity; he accused the clergy of ignorance and hypocrisy. He said God was the activity we call the universe. But God did not create the universe. He admitted the existence of only one intelligence which permeated all nature. His doctrines were somewhat akin to the latest conclusions of science.

It is known that Spinoza and Descartes were anticipated by him. Leibnitz and Schelling admit their great obligations to him. Goethe's Metamorphoses, and Shakespeare's wonderful teachings were caught from Bruno. Bruno elevated the claims of the natural world, saying "the worship of nature was the true heroism of the heart and that the lover of wisdom adored an ever perfect model of beauty," and much more of the same character.

Bruno was declared an arch heretic worthy of death. To do the work of their God on earth has ever been the great idea of the church. On the 16th or 17th of February, 1600, one week after his excommunication and sentence, an immense concourse of people were assembled in one of the largest open spaces of Rome, the "holy city." From the expectant, excited look of that almost silent crowd, it was evident that some important event was in progress. Old men and children, women of all ages and conditions, were there. In the center stood a pile of fagots from the midst of which arose a stake firmly imbedded in the earth. Cowed and shaven holy monks moved here and there among that vast assembly. Children pursued their gambols among the crowd. Young women talked in low tones, but without sympathy, to their husbands or fathers of the coming scene. Soldiers in bright armor and students with pale faces jostled each other, beggars met the wealthy without soliciting alms, for all were engaged in another task than the work of this world. "Holy Mother Church" was about to celebrate an act of faith. The Inquisition had an offering to make to God. The world, insulted by a man who dared to reason on forbidden topics, was to be avenged. A heretic and blasphemer was to get a slight foretaste of his endless doom.

Who shall say anything against the church? Hath not St. Peter the keys of hell as well as of heaven? That vast crowd were believers in the infallibility of the church, and in its judgments they believed themselves as well as their God vindicated. Giordano Bruno the poet, the heretic, the philosopher, was about to suffer death by fire. The crowd are hushed into silence, for on the air is borne the solemn chanting of the miserere by the monks. The holy procession approaches. Soldiers clear the way. In the center, calm and resolute, with head erect, walks the man just released from his six years' solitary imprisonment. It has not broken his manly spirit, nor shaken his noble resolution. The men say he is stubborn, the women exclaim, "How handsome." His countenance is pale but placid. The cross is offered to him to kiss, he refuses; the excited crowd tremble, some anathematize him, others cry "heretic;" he alone appears fortified. Some hopes are entertained that he will recant at last. He is chained to the stake. Priests and monks surround him to catch a last word of confession. A little hypocrisy will help him now, and save him at the last moment. Holy church ever opens her arms to receive repentant sinners. One last test is offered, the symbol of the dying savior on the cross is placed to his lips; he spurns it and those who tempt him with disgust—"Enough, light the pile"—determined, unalterable, and obstinate to the last, without a word or sigh, not a sign of change. The flames increase and roar, they surround his bound but not subdued body. The smoke curls upward followed by the forked fire. There he still remains, writhing in agony, but no shriek of pain, no groans are heard. The fierce crackling of the wood finds its only echo in the hearts of the cruel bigots who gaze on its work. A few short minutes and the work is accomplished, and the ashes of the man who created consternation in the church, are scattered by the winds or trodden under foot by the populace of Rome. Thus perished in the prime and vigor of his life, as many before him, Giordano Bruno, a martyr to the right of private judgment and Freethought.

We therefore cherish his memory and will hold him in everlasting remembrance.

This story was followed with the closest attention, and, as the Chronicle reported the next morning, it "so worked upon the feelings of the audience that at the conclusion of the narrative a loud burst of applause broke forth."

The next number was a song by Miss Evangeline Ballou, which, like the rest of the programme, won the enthusiastic recall which the young lady's singing always deserves.

Miss Lilian Arper's recitation of Charles Mackay's "Eternal Justice" fitted the occasion exactly, and could not have been better rendered.

They may veil their eyes, but cannot hide
The sun's meridian glow;
The heel of a priest may tread thee down,
And a tyrant may work thee woe;
But never a truth has been destroyed—
They may curse it and call it crime
Pervert and betray, or slander and slay
Its teachers for a time,
But the sunshine aye shall light the sky,
As round and round we run,
And truth shall ever come uppermost,
And justice shall be done.

Mrs. Eugenia Clark, of graceful figure, attractive face, and melodious voice, sang admirably a pathetic song; and then another in acknowledgment of the applause evoked by the first. Then Mr. Putnam closed the exercises with a short address, and by reading a poem prepared for the occasion by George Macdonald. He gave the lines very effectively, and the poem seemed to take, as no one left the hall during its delivery, and several applauded at the close.

Although this ended the evening's entertainment, and though nearly half the night was gone, the audience retained their seats until dismissed by a sort of benediction from the chairman, who thanked them all for their presence and for their respectful attention.

This is one of the best meetings the writer has ever attended. The addresses, songs, and recitations were of such high merit, the audience was so large, so attentive where close attention was called for, and so generous in awarding praise to its entertainers—everything indeed passed off so brilliantly and harmoniously, that many a day may pass before we see its like again.

A RELIGIOUS GOVERNMENT OF TO-DAY.

The monstrous horrors of the Siberian prison—the flogging to death of innocent women, the suicide of others—the revolt and the terrific scenes accompanying, are now the topic of a shuddering and indignant world; and universally against the Russian government there is the cry of execration and condemnation. The czar of Russia stands before the bar of mankind as the colossal criminal of the age. If anybody ought to be blown to pieces for wrong-doing, he certainly ought to be blown to pieces. If there is any place for dynamite it is in St. Petersburg. No wonder that the best blood and brain of Russia are devoted to the death of this man by any means whatsoever. He is a murderer, the ravisher of women. He is branded, and should suffer the penalty. May the deaths of these exiles and patriots be avenged upon this detestable villain who wears a crown to cover the heart of a fiend. Humanity abhors him.

The only possible salvation of Russia is rebellion and revolution. The sooner it comes the less bitter the way. The government of Russia is in itself a crime, a monstrosity. At heart it is a wild beast, suited only for the desert and the jungle. It does not belong to civilization. No war, however bloody, can be so bad as this government. It is the incarnation of barbarism. It is worthy only of the scaffold and dynamite.

Yet our government allies itself with this monster of the past. When the criminal is executed it sends its condolences, not to the victims of his cruelty, but to its supporter. It is exasperating to see the officials of the American republic weep when justice is done. Our flag should float over the exiles of Siberia and help to give them liberty—rather than twine its folds with the ensign of despotism.

It seems as if all governments were in secret alliance, realizing perhaps that they are usurpations more or less, and not the real expression of the people's will. If the issue were made to-day between the czar and the Siberian exiles, between despotism on one side and liberty on the other, between barbarism and civilization, we know where the American people would stand—but where would its governmental representatives stand? Cardinal Manning praises the wisdom and justice of the czar—hails him as the friend of the people. He has no word to utter against the atrocities of Siberia.

Yes, the ecclesiastics are all together—they are in a subtle and world-wide conspiracy—they join hands to uphold the cruelties of the past and maintain their own power—the ecclesiastics of America, of England, of Italy, and of Russia.

The government of Russia is essentially a religious government. That is why it is so cruel, so savage, and so terrible in its administration. If the czar were only a civil magistrate, clothed with civil authority, these murders and floggings would be impossible. It is because the czar calls himself divine, the ambassador of God, the vicegerent of the Almighty, that he feels called upon to perpetrate these infinite outrages. Who in all history has been so cruel as "God?" Wherever God is in any human government there are the dungeon and the stake, there are the sword and fagot, there are crimes innumerable.

The czar is "God;" he is clothed with religious authority, and that is why he is so inhuman and so infamous. If he only considered himself a man, he would be kindly and just. He could not be otherwise, for humanity would then be his strongest motive. But he considers himself above and beyond humanity, relieved therefore of human responsibility, and so capable of the greatest wrongs. This is why Cardinal Manning supports the despot, why the pope supports him, why many of our officials support him—because the bond of ecclesiasticism joins them. They are all in the same boat. They are all "servants of God," "ministers of the Most High," and they therefore have a common safety and a common danger.

It is religion that maintains the czar. It is the church universal that allies itself with him, be it in Rome or Washington. Strip the czar of his ecclesiastical position and he could not maintain himself before the indignant world.

These hideous barbarities of Siberia are the direct outcome of religion. Without religion they could not be. Without religion no one would have the heart to perpetrate these awful crimes. Who but an ecclesiastic would flog a woman to death? Russia is a religious government par excellence. Other governments are much less religious, and therefore none of them are quite so murderous as Russia. So far as they are stripped of religious authority they are civilized and humane. But Russia is church and state absolutely in one, and hence its capacity for crimes that astound the world. Russia confronts the civilization of to-day with the savage heart of old religion. In her we see the priesthood of the Dark Ages. She is a living example of the infinite curse of superstition. In most countries the fangs of religion have been extracted—they cannot hurt materially—but in Russia they are the forces of government itself, and we see how terrific they are. Russia shows what religion always has been, what religion always will be, when armed with power. After all it is not the assassination of the czar that will relieve, but the death of religion itself. That is the giant criminal—not the man, but the system. The dynamite of thought must be applied to this monster. It is the religion that must be blown to pieces, not merely the picture of it.

In Siberia religious authority has full sway. In Siberia we see just what religion is. In Siberia we see the terrific power against which we must contend everywhere. In Siberia we see the "naked truth" of religion. In other countries, in ours, it is covered up with the advantages of a civilization, against which it has fought, and to which it now submits and even pretends to make.

But in Siberia the mask is off, and in these crimes at which the world stands aghast we behold a religious government acting out its real nature.

THE SAN FRANCISCO FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The lecture before the San Francisco Freethought Society Sunday evening, February 23, will be delivered by Prof. Herbert Miller; subject, "An Old Freethought Poet." These meetings are held every Sunday evening at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street.

LEND A HAND.

The prevailing hard times continue to press heavily upon the people and the commerce of this coast, and are felt by all classes. Laborers are out of employment, and cannot pay their bills at the grocer's, the butcher's, and the small dealer's. As a consequence, the small dealer cannot pay the wholesaler, and the wholesaler is embarrassed. His business contracts instead of expanding, and he discharges instead of employing more workmen. Thus the workingman's poverty reacts upon himself. In the country the situation is not more favorable than in the city. Stock suffers from the inclemency of the weather, farmers are harassed by freshets, mines are snowed under or flooded.

We call attention to these facts for the purpose of pointing out the effect which the present state of affairs must inevitably have, and is having, upon FREETHOUGHT. Outside San Francisco our patrons are largely farmers; in the city, mechanics. And these two classes suffer most by the business depression. We receive every day letters asking for a little time on subscriptions, and this we are most willing to accord. It is of no use to ask for money from men who have not got it, no matter how willing they may be to pay. Consequently we must look to other sources at the present time and depend upon the promptness of those who have means to keep the flag flying until this depression lifts. We would like to see our well-to-do Liberals face the crisis and give us a lift over the difficulty.

DEATH OF PHOTIUS FISK.

Photius Fisk, the veteran Freethinker and philanthropist, died at his home in Boston February 7. His great age and an attack of influenza were the cause of his death.

Mr. Fisk was a native of Hydra, in Greece. His father's name was Ravasales, but an uncle who adopted Photius in youth gave him his own name, that of Fisk. He was educated for the ministry, and received the appointment of chaplain in the navy, which he held at the time of his death, though on the retired list. Of late years he had actively espoused the cause of Freethought, and was a generous contributor to its support. At the age of 85 he dies universally respected and mourned.

LECTURES IN OAKLAND.

W. S. Bell will deliver a free lecture in Dama Hall, corner of Eighth street and Broadway, Oakland, Sunday, February 23, at 3:30 P.M., on "Sunday Legislation."

S. P. Putnam will speak at the same place and hour on the following Sunday. Good music may be expected at both meetings.

We justly cry out against the barbarity of the spirit of Russian government, but how about barbarity here in our own country? Read this dispatch from Wheeling, West Virginia, dated Feb. 16, year of grace 1890: "The whitecap spirit seems to be coming to the front again in certain parts of this state. At Rockport, Wood county, Charles Wood and his wife were both taken from their home and unmercifully beaten on the back with hickory switches and compelled to leave the county and the state. They passed through Parkersburg yesterday and told a horrible story of their suffering and treatment. The wife says that after whipping her husband the mob caught her while she was trying to escape from the house with their children and tied her to a tree. She was then beaten until the blood came. Mrs. Smith says that the whole cause for the outrage was her resistance of the improper solicitation of a citizen of her neighborhood. At Clay Courthouse a woman was also driven away by a mob who visited her house, firing guns and revolvers, and tied a note of warning to her door."

THE Prince de Looz, described as a scion of one of the most powerful Catholic families of Belgium, is also what might in common phrase be termed a daisy. He was engaged to a young Portuguese lady, and went so far toward fulfilling the engagement as to be married to her by the civil authorities of Paris, and the papal nuncio stood ready, in consideration of the prince's high standing as a Catholic, to unite the couple with religious mummery; but before the second form was enacted, Mr. Looz struck his prospective father-in-law for ten thousand dollars, and refused to proceed with the ecclesiastical marriage until that sum was paid. The father declined, and the young lady is neither maid, wife, nor widow, which last estate, in view of the character of Prince Looz, would seem to be the preferable position.

MGR. DOANE, of Newark, N. J., who carries the title of "protonotary apostolic," whatever that may mean, has notified his parishioners that they must withdraw their children from the public schools and place them in parochial schools under penalty of excommunication and denial of absolution. The Catholic church in New Jersey has for several years been endeavoring to get the exclusive control of Catholic children, but has failed on account of the poor quality of the education offered by parochial institutions. It will, be interesting to observe how they will succeed under the present bulldozing methods.

THE Pioneers of Colorado lately held a reunion and banquet at Boulder. They were an intelligent lot of men, and made good speeches, but the one in which we take the greatest interest, not to say pride, is that of the Hon. Joseph Wolff. Mr. Wolff took "State Education" for his subject, and defended secular schools with a vigor and ability rarely surpassed. In closing he said: "The chiefest aim of the balance of my life shall be to defend, sustain, and encourage state secular education in its most comprehensive form, and to oppose with all the vigor of my nature every effort to cripple, prostitute, or destroy it, come from whatever source it may."

THE "Chronicles of Simon Christianus," the first of which we print this week, are from an English pamphlet republished by D. M. Bennett some fifteen years ago. It is intended as a burlesque on the manuscript-discovering mania which has heretofore afflicted the Christian world. The author claims that a portion of the manuscript was found in an ash-barrel and that the remainder fell direct from heaven. Its inspiration is therefore placed as far beyond doubt as that of any other manuscript.

THE admirable addresses of W. S. Bell and the Hon. A. Schell are now issued in tract form. The title of Mr. Bell's address is "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," of which we will mail four copies for ten cents. "Brains, Science, and Civilization" is the title of Mr. Schell's lecture. It makes a neat pamphlet of sixteen pages, at five cents per copy. Both are bright, original, and thought-provoking works, and should have the extended circulation which they deserve.

J. M. WHEELER, associate editor of the London Freethinker, has done a good work in compiling and publishing "A Biographical Dictionary of Freethinkers." The book will, as the author hopes, "do something to show how many of the world's worthiest men and women have been Freethinkers." With the exception that many Freethinkers who combined Spiritualism with Freethought are omitted, the book is as inclusive as could be desired. The price of the Dictionary in England is about $2, but the United States puts a tariff of 25 cents on each copy, presumably to encourage its republication in this country.

THE perennial messianic fraud is creating great excitement in South Minneapolis. A disciple of Schweinfurth, who calls himself Christ, and is accepted as such by numerous deluded people, has been breaking up families and leading the lambs of the flock astray. The disciple, whose name is Whitney, is the head of a Christian family, composed mainly of women, with whom his relations are the subject of scandalous report.

THE Sabbath Association is endeavoring to procure the passage of a Sunday law in the District of Columbia. Their work is unnecessary. The District already has a Sunday law, inherited from the state of Maryland, which makes Sunday labor or recreation punishable with a fine of two hundred pounds of tobacco. The law is slightly out of date, but it is as good now as it ever was.

SEVERAL HUNDRED SUBSCRIPTIONS TO "FREETHOUGHT" ARE NOW DUE. IT IS HOPED THAT THOSE WHO HAVE THE MEANS WILL AT ONCE SEND IN THEIR RENEWALS. DATES OF EXPIRATION APPEAR ON THE WRAPPERS OF THE PAPER.

THE Freethought Publishing Company keeps on sale the medical and hygienic works of M. L. Holbrook, M.D., of New York. Also the Buddhistic, Theosophic, or mental science works of W. F. Evans.

THE "California Nationalist" is the name of a paper just started at Los Angeles. It is edited with ability, but its typography is suggestive of the backwoods district.

THE San Francisco Presbytery refuses to revise the Confession of Faith, and "Infants be damned" will continue to be the motto inscribed upon their banners.

CONSULT our list of premiums published on another page. Any two of the books mentioned are given with every new subscription.

IF any Liberal or scientific book is desired, FREETHOUGHT office is the place to apply for it.

OBSERVATIONS.

I have just received a copy of Mr. J. M. Wheeler's "Biographical Dictionary of Freethinkers," wherein I find myself mentioned as "Macdonald (George), brother of the preceding." Which raises the question: If I had no elder brother, in what language could I be described?

Brother Wanamaker, postmaster-general, has proposed to Congress the inauguration of a postal telegraph system for general use. The prices are to be so scaled that a message of twenty words may be sent anywhere within twenty-five miles for the nominal sum of ten cents. If Wanamaker succeeds in getting this bill juggled into a law he will have performed a public service which the capitalists who allowed him to be put in office could scarcely have foreseen, or he would now be selling ready-made pants instead of postage stamps. There is no reason why the postal telegraph system should not be adopted, except such as may be offered by existing telegraph companies who have the distinction to stand in the way, and their opinions could not be regarded as disinterested. They would naturally object to having their business ruined. But there are two ways of getting out of the difficulty. First, offer the telegraph companies a fair price for their plant. If they accept, the problem is solved; if they decline, it must be solved in another manner which I have not heard proposed. The latter method is simply as follows: After passing the bill let both houses of the national legislature adjourn indefinitely. Then let each member provide himself with the necessary tools, and the whole force at once proceed to put up new telegraph lines from Washington to San Francisco. There are four or five hundred of them, and they would make a most impressive exhibition as they strung out for business. They ought to put up ten miles a day of good serviceable wire. And what a reception they would get from the people all along the line! It would be one grand triumphal march. Local legislators would follow their example, adjourn, procure picks and long-handled shovels, and make a bee of it in every state. Owners of timber would donate the poles, and wire men could do no less as regards the wares which they manufacture. A year's time would do the business, and when the august gang of senators and representatives, with President Harrison as foreman, reached this coast, they might expect and receive such a greeting as no mere party of junketers ever met with. Their board would not cost them a cent while they remained in the city.

This is a mere outline of the plan; let others fill in the details. There could be no greater sight placed before the people of our land than that of a body of legislators making themselves useful.

The papers devote a great deal of space to the talked-of contest between John L. Sullivan and Peter Jackson. The assumption is that the public would be interested in such a meeting, which is true as regards that portion of the public who would delight in witnessing a fight between a bulldog and an ourang-outang.

I acknowledge writing the appended poem. Those who applauded Mr. Putnam's rendering of it at the Bruno memorial meeting, and who now see it in cold type, may judge how much it owed to the way it was read on that occasion. For my own part I am glad to confess that the rhymer was lost in the reader:

In the smiling land where the Tiber flows
On its winding way from the mountains down,
The sun of a far-off day arose
On a seven-hilled city of past renown.

It shone on pillar and tower and arch,
On church and temple and statue fair,
On a mob of black-robed priests who march
To a chosen spot in a public square.

It sees the man they have brought and bound,
It sees them driving the martyr's stake,
And while they are piling the fagots round
Their curses and maledictions break.

We look, and the cowed and howling crowd
Of Roman ruffians and Romish priests
Scowl dark on their victim, angry-browed
With the brutal passions of savage beasts.

No friend is present to take his part,
Nor venture the protest of groan or sob,
Save that some woman of tender heart
Weeps low at the outskirts of the mob.

The hands of assassins have lit the fire,
But the martyr, erect, unawed, unbowed,
Looks out from the smoke of his funeral pyre
Serene as the stars look through a cloud.

The deed is done, and the crowds disperse,
And Bruno, the noble, once more is free,
For the waves of the Tiber, a sombre hearse,
Flow down with his ashes toward the sea.

Ah, this was Rome when the church had power
And owned the soil that the patriot trod;
This was the bloom of the papal flower—
Yea, this was Italy under God.

But the sun shines still, round goes the world,
And another era has dawned on Rome;
The vicar of Christ from the throne is hurled,
And the land of the popes is the free man's home.

On the spot where Bruno died that day
A marble statue confronts the eye,
While the priests in their cloister curse or pray,
And bemoan the worth of a time gone by.

And Italy's sons, while the Tiber flows,
Will guard that statue from break or fall,
And Bruno's lovers shall fame disclose,
As the noblest Romans among them all.

Ah, this is Italy, free at last
From the curse of the sacerdotal clan;
Undoing the crimes of a brutal past,
Lo, this is Italy under Man.

THE ELOQUENT RAVLIN.

The ex-Rev. N. F. Ravlin has returned to San Jose from the East, and on Feb. 9 addressed an audience too large for Odd Fellows' Hall. Among other things he said:

The mission of Liberalism is to overthrow the bigotry and persecutions of orthodoxy. It has in these years broken up the old darkness which brooded over the human intellect and filled the mind with superstition and the heart with fear and hate. So effective has this influence been that even the inner circle of orthodoxy has felt the genial glow of truth, and the most dogmatic are beginning to learn that the abominable doctrine taught of God and hell and damnation can no longer be inculcated among intelligent men. This influence is shown by the fact that the Presbyterians are now revising the Westminster Confession of Faith, and they have got so far that they admit that children who die in infancy do not go to hell forever. This is very good for the children. They were saved from damnation by a majority of three; but we are asked to believe that if this convention should vote the opposite way next year then the infants must go to hell again.

Liberalism has a mission outside of teaching common sense and reason to orthodoxy. That mission is to save the republic. All the churches are now clamoring for a union of church and state. In this demand Protestantism and Catholicism go hand in hand. Liberalism alone stands on guard to preserve the rights of men. Monopolies are endeavoring, by grasping all the wealth of the country, to establish an aristocracy, and to crush the people. Against this power also Liberalism wars incessantly. This, then, is the mission which we have before us. We must be vigilant, brave, and earnest to save the country from the insidious snares of clericalism and the bolder attacks of monopolists. The dangers that threaten us from these powers are greater than those of secession. Catholicism fights the public school, and Protestantism the liberal Sunday. They wish to have this idea of God inserted in the constitution and the Christian religion made the law of the land. To achieve these things they have organized their forces and collected their strength. The cries of the leaders urging their cohorts to the assault can be heard everywhere throughout America.

In Italy a few years ago a statue was erected to the memory of Giordano Bruno on the very spot where that noble martyr to science was burned at the stake by the church of Rome, and as it was erected the shouts of applauding thousands proclaiming the liberty of man and the triumph of truth, could be heard by the pope himself as he lay gnashing his teeth in his den. From this incident I am persuaded that the power of the pope is diminishing in Italy and is growing in America; and is growing so rapidly that it is a serious danger. It is time for us who are Liberals to rise and confront this danger and to say to this mighty foe, "Stand back; touch not the altars that are sacred to liberty." If Liberalism does not do this, then Protestantism and Catholicism, combined with the money power, will seize the country and we will have once more imposed upon men the old tyranny of church and state. Nor is this all. The big fish ever devours the little fish; and when once a religion has been established by law it will not be long before the big church of Rome will swallow the smaller churches of the Protestants one by one; a Catholic hierarchy will be established in wealth and ecclesiastical power above us, and the pope will issue his decrees from the White House.

I will address you next Sunday evening on the nine just and reasonable demands of Liberalism, but I cannot close this theme to-night without exhorting you to be watchful and active. Would to heaven I could impress upon Robert Ingersoll the great need which there is for his presence on the platform at this juncture. He should be made to know that it is to him that we look for leadership, for his is the majestic presence, the eloquent lips, the glowing eye, the strong mind, and the cheering words which alone can unite us and confirm us in our bond of union, our struggle for the liberation of the intellect, and our devotion to the republic in which we live.

BOOK REVIEW.

TRAVELING ALONE—A Women's Journey Around the World. By Lillian Leland. Pp. 358, price 30 cents. Sold at FREETHOUGHT office.

To travel is an art; to travel alone is a fine art. It requires more than courage or information. One must be born to it, as one is born to command. Only a woman can do it with absolute success. A man would be sure to blunder and thereby lose his head.

The art of travel is to see and to tell things. Someone showed Sidney Smith a stick. "This stick has been all round the world," was the remark. "Well," said Sidney, "it is only a stick now." Many travelers return the same as they started. They see nothing and tell nothing. Only sticks and nothing more.

This little lady traveler of twenty-five summers and no winters seems to have visual organs all over her head. She sees everything from centre to circumference. Her brain is a photographic machine. It takes pictures right along and keeps them, and flashes them upon the page with wonderful correctness, while the color is ever-changing. There is infinite variety. The tale is told like the running of a brook. It bubbles and sparkles with feminine vivacity. You must listen while "she talks" from scene to scene. Like Coleridge's Mariner, she holds you with her "glittering eye."

To travel is one thing. To see pictures, to receive impressions, to be in sympathy with ever-varying sea and sky, and the manners of men, and the thoughts of men, to understand all and translate into flowing language, this is another thing, and this is the art of Lillian Leland. She takes you with her an invisible companion, and with charming gossip tells you all about her world-wide wanderings. Like Walter Scott she tells her story without any "style" or rhetorical adornments. There is no "fine writing" in the book, no drowsy eloquence of description. It is downright talk, simple, plain, and clear as crystal. The author is a born story teller, and wastes no words in her picturesque delineations. She simply suggests, and does not weary "with words of learned length and thundering sound."

This is a book of life, of literature, and of art as well as of motion. It tells of the people as well as of the lands; of men and women and children as well as of mountains and seas. It tells of the homes as well as of the temples and palaces. It gives an inside view, not merely an outside show. All around, in every varying scene, in Japan, China, India, the Himalayas, by the Ganges and Jordan and the Bosphorus, at Rome, Berlin, Brussels, Paris, Petersburg, Moscow, the "Land of the Midnight Sun," London, New York, Yosemite, Yellowstone; it is not simply physical nature that is brought to view in stupendous and lovely and fascinating forms. The heart of humanity is blended with the magnificence of material things, and in every clime we discover the same nobility, the same weakness revealed by a bright, healthy, intuitive, and sensible woman, who looks straight at things, understands them, and has a tongue to tell exactly what she thinks and knows. Not only has she a most facile pen—a "fountain pen"—but also a mind of her own. There is no imitation. She does not describe or criticise like anybody else. She does not admire a temple, a monument, or a painting because the world admires or pretends to admire it. She is not afraid to criticise a "masterpiece" with nine chances to one that her judgment is right in the matter. She gives her own impressions with an audacity that is perfectly refreshing.

The book is worth reading from beginning to end. There is not a particle of religious, literary, or artistic cant in it. Every religion, however, is respected, and every nationality receives its due credit. But the author is an American—American in heart and brain, and the breath of the new world is in every one of her spirited pages.

She writes as a Freethinker without saying so. Those who are acquainted with the history of American Freethought know that Lillian Leland has the inheritance not only of genius but of liberty from one who has been illustrious in our own ranks. The book, therefore, can be recommended to every Freethinker as one of the best books of travels ever written, thoroughly interesting, reliable, instructive, sparkling with humor, brilliant with thought, a "jolly book," a book to make one feel better and have more faith in humanity than ever before, and a greater admiration for woman, who undoubtedly "can paddle her own canoe" "Traveling Alone."

GOLD MINING AS A NON-PRODUCTIVE INDUSTRY.

We have in this country—and other countries are similarly afflicted—a circulating medium called money based upon the precious metals, gold and silver. California being a mining locality, nothing could be more unpopular than the suggestion that this basis for money is in fact an injury not only to the people at large but to the state. Any one informed concerning the matter will admit that the gold and silver taken from the earth and coined into money would not pay more than laborer's wages to the successful and unsuccessful miners who have spent their time in prospecting and digging for it. And if the facts were otherwise the statement would still hold good that precious metals as a basis for money are a prolific cause of wasted labor. What gives these metals value? Certainly not their usefulness in the mechanic arts, since their places can be almost entirely filled by other metals. The real value of gold and silver indisputably arises from their scarcity and from their use as representatives of cost. It is because on an average a man can earn no more dollars at mining than he can at other industries that gold dollars retain their value, and this must always remain their measure.

The defect, therefore, of gold as money consists in the fact that it must be doubly earned—once by the miner and again by the others into whose hands it may subsequently pass. Supposing that on one side of a stream a farmer raises ten bushels of potatoes worth ten dollars, while across the stream a miner digs ten dollars' worth of gold. The miner may purchase the potatoes, but he has produced nothing; whereas if he had worked with the farmer he would have produced ten bushels of potatoes, and there would have been twenty bushels instead of ten. It will thus be seen that the miner is a non-producer because the result of his labor merely goes into circulation instead of into use; and yet the miner has worked as hard to obtain the symbol of value of the potatoes as the farmer has to obtain the potatoes themselves. The potatoes, then, have been twice earned—once by the farmer and once by the miner. The absurdity of the thing is equalled by the Athanasian conception of the trinity: "For there is one person of the father, another of the son, and another of the holy ghost"—each being almighty—"and yet there are not three almighties, but one almighty." So in this case there is the labor of the farmer, equal to ten bushels of potatoes, and the labor of the miner, equal to ten bushels; and ten bushels added to ten bushels are equal to twenty bushels; and yet there are not twenty bushels, but ten bushels.

And as the miner's relation is to the farmer, so it is to the manufacturer. Except for the slight mechanical and esthetic value of gold, the vast amount of labor expended in gold-mining is unproductive and therefore wasted, and the cause of it all is the use of gold as money.

Another absurdity connected with the case is the locking up of coin in the treasury vaults, and issuing paper certificates as an acknowledgment that metal is too unwieldy for convenient use as money. Why the certificates were not issued in the first place and the expense of mining saved, is a question which many may ask and find none to answer in a satisfactory manner.

MINER.

ATHEISM—MATERIALISM.

In denying a God, Atheists do or need not "assert" anything. Whether Materialists, Spiritists, or of other schools of thought, their attitude toward Theism is purely incidental or supplementary. Their Atheism is independent of any views they may entertain, rationally or otherwise, concerning abstract existence, or life. The Theist advances a theory absolutely absurd to the Atheist. The Atheist refutes every argument in its favor. This is sufficient to overthrow Theism; even should the Atheist insist that the moon is made of green cheese.

I am emphatically a Materialist, a Realist, or Naturalist. I know something exists, and this something, which comprises everything in the universe, is what I believe in. This admits of no cavil and proves itself. Let a God reveal himself in the skies; prove a devil and locate a hell; cause spirits to become objects of knowledge, and I will cheerfully add all these to the body of my belief. If real, Materialism embraces them all. How they came into existence—a profound and interesting problem—has nothing to do with refuting an old wife's fable and childish theory.

The Theist affirms there is a being, person, in the image of man, here or somewhere off in the universe, who, or which, can be in this town, in Chicago, with a man in his office, in China, in every part of the world, on the moon, on the sun, on each star in particular and every star in general; also, in ethereal space between these innumerable planets; in them and outside of them; in their stupendous orbits, when occupied by them, or otherwise; here and there and everywhere in the boundless universe, in person, complete—not in part—everywhere at one and the same time.

The assertion is equivalent to saying that a God—the entire God—can occupy the eye of a needle; that one God can occupy the eyes of all needles—a complete God in each; that he can fill all space occupied and not occupied by needles as well as the space occupied by all else. Because if God is not where other bodies are and other matter is, he is nowhere, since other bodies and other matter—not God—occupy all space now, have always occupied and will always occupy it.

Knowing, then, matter to fill all space, and to "possess the promise and potency of all life," we simply deny the Theist's wild assumption as utterly unthinkable, unreasonable, and absurd. Knowing matter to fill all space we know a God cannot fill all space. Knowing matter to possess or to be force and potency, we know also that a God is not needed to create cosmic phenomena and life. Knowing something cannot come from nothing we know matter is eternal, and knowing all phenomena to be natural we recognize no designer or creator.

Has God a brain? If so how can he be infinite, eternal, and not necessitate a progenitor like other beings? With no brain how can he be omniscient? Supposing fire were to consume all living organisms to-day, could any one logically affirm that psychic phenomena could possibly continue to manifest itself in the absence of physical life? And if no animal life is possible upon the burning planets, is intelligence, thought and its related sensations possible or even thinkable? No! Consciousness, mind, wisdom, love, being strictly functions of animal organisms and otherwise impossible, is it not unreasonable to postulate their independent existence in the absence of such animal organism? Are not body and mind cause and effect? If then the organism is dependent upon favorable conditions for its existence, does it not seem rational that when unfavorable conditions annihilate the physical, the functions of such physical bodies are non-existent also?

It is all nonsense to divest God of anthropomorphic outline. The Bible is the Christian's sole basis for a God. This plainly defines God as a person. Deny this and there is no God, or proof of a God.

Do you remember the hide-and-seek story of Genesis? One evening God called upon his first-born. "He walked in the garden at the close of day," but couldn't find Adam. He finally gave up the search and exclaimed, "Adam, where art thou?" All these modern theologians who are struggling to evolve a "New Theology" out of an old "Revelation" (an impossible task) and to rescue their God from destruction by divesting him of personality, should read the above chapter for proof that the Bible absolutely defines God to be a person; and, indeed, of such limited proportions that when "walking in the garden" he could not see Adam, who was hiding behind a tree a rod or two away!

So much to prove a negative. Now, to prove Materialism, Monism, Naturalism—all of which are one. Mr. Pentecost says: "Atheists believe that the universe evolved." Here he is in error. Atheists—say Materialists rather—believe the universe is eternal. It is to-day precisely as it has been forever. It resembles a huge kaleidoscope in motion, the detail (finite parts) forever changing, the vast whole forever in statu quo. Evolution implies beginning, growth, evolving to perfection; then retrogression, decay, change; again new forms, and this process repeated eternally. But this cannot be logically postulated of the universe, or the vast, infinite aggregate, or "The All" as the "Open Court" pleases to call it. This, to-day, must be precisely in the same condition of perfection as it was an eternity ago (if you can realize how long that is) and at that time precisely in the same condition that it was an eternity before that mystic time, and so on ad infinitum.

An eternity of time was, at any particular time in the past, sufficient time for the universe to accomplish at such particular time the identical degree of perfection it presents at the present time.

All matter is force—physical and chemical. This, "will-less, purposeless, senseless," is the sole cause of all cosmic phenomena and life. In inorganic aggregation—a chemical process—it evolves into the primary life-germ, then into higher animal forms, these, finally into a Humboldt, Spencer, and Bryant. As the origin of the child is purely a physical effect of purely physical causes—many times "unwelcome," and in spite of the will of its progenitors—so all other phenomena are evolved by the subtle but "senseless" forces prevailing each atom, gentle and humble in themselves, but gigantic and omnipotent in vast aggregation.

Topsy knew more about the true order of nature than the church; she "grow'd;" and this is much more philosophical than the theories of the church regarding man's origin.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, in the Twentieth Century.

THE BETHLEHEM MYTH.

Professor Pickering of Harvard University on being shown a dispatch dated Vienna, and announcing that the Star of Bethlehem would reappear this year, said: "I can scarcely believe that this story emanated from the astronomers at Vienna, for had there been the slightest intimation of the appearance of this star, it would have been cabled to us at once, as is always done in the case of astronomical news gathered in Europe. The report is probably the unauthorized revival of an old rumor that this star, erroneously called the Star of Bethlehem, was to make its appearance, but as this statement has been made several times since 1884, when the star was looked for by some astronomers, there is doubtless nothing in it.

"The star referred to was the one discovered by Tycho Brahe in 1572, and was named for him. It appeared quite suddenly in the constellation of Cassiopeia, and had a brilliancy greater than any of the planets, so much so that it was visible in the daytime. From certain records it was believed by some that this star had appeared in the same position 312 years before, or in 1260, and assuming this interval of appearance to be correct, it would have been visible about the time of the Christian era, and it was thus termed by some the Star of Bethlehem. If its return was after 312 years, the time of its reappearance would have been in 1884, but nothing has yet been seen of it, although many observers watched for it at that time. Such a phenomenon at the present day would have the highest value to astronomical science, for, by the use of modern instruments, observations could be taken and information gathered that would be of the greatest assistance in a series of experiments now in progress. There is, however, so much doubt in the matter that it is of little use to surmise as to the star's reappearance."—Boston Post.

Bound volumes of FREETHOUGHT, 1889, $3.

WASHINGTON SECULAR UNION.

Despite the long snow blockade, floods, washouts, and landslides on the railroads, and the fierce winds and severe storms making it disagreeable if not dangerous on the sound; despite la grippe, which held so many of our delegates, and ruthlessly seized the Rev. Mr. Copeland (so we got the telegram of his inability to come just before time for him to deliver the opening lecture of the convention); despite incessant downpour of rain during the three days and evenings of our meeting, the Washington Convention of Secularists, held at Seattle January 28, 29, and 30, was a grand success. While hopeful of a larger attendance of delegates (each evening the large hall was crowded and great enthusiasm manifested), we had regularly elected delegates from only twelve counties; yet their ability and the earnest devotion to the purpose of the convention which each and all manifested, dispelled any feeling of disappointment and inspired all with hope and confidence. Never was witnessed more earnest, intelligent discussion. In regard to every clause of the convention, each fully and freely expressed and contended for their own opinion. Yet there was no majority or minority, for when final vote was taken all were in harmony.

During the sessions of the three days of the convention (the evenings alone were given to public lectures, the entire day sessions being used by the delegates in perfecting the constitution and plan of organization) only one difference of opinion arose calling for standing vote. That was simply on a question of adjourning to dinner or continuing the work. The hungry ones were in a small majority, and the minority really enjoyed their defeat, thereby being able to enjoy their dinner.

When it came to the election of officers it was expected there would be such diversity of opinions that many ballots would be had before choice could be made, because the law just adopted in the constitution was most faithfully obeyed. No nominations for officers were allowed, no caucus, no slate, no possibility of undue influence from any section, clique, or person. Each delegate wrote on a ballot the name of his choice for the office and folded his ballot, with the name written thereon covered, before handing it to the teller. Nevertheless all five officers, each separately balloted for, were elected on the first ballot. For president the whole 31 votes were cast for R. Winsor.

WHO CONSTITUTE THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS.—President Hon. Richard Winsor, of Seattle, was for fifteen years a senator of Michigan. He is an able jurist, a cultured gentleman of means and influence, an earnest practical worker for the secularization of our government. He is the very best and most able presiding officer I have ever seen at any theological, political, Masonic, or any other kind of convention. Most emphatically, as president of the Washington Secular Union, the organization has placed the right man in the right place.

Treasurer George M. Boman is a self-educated man, the architect of his own fortune, a very able and successful business man, generous, whole-souled, energetic, with the courage of his convictions; quick perceptions, keen sense of justice, a heart easily moved by recital of sorrow or need. He has a clear head to advise, and a ready, liberal hand to administer relief. Modest, unassuming, yet, thanks to his indomitable energy and generous but discreet use of means, we have good reason to announce that there will soon be no exemption of church property from taxation in the state of Washington.

DIRECTORS AT LARGE.—One is elected east, the other west of the Cascades. Albert Rosenow, of Walla Walla, has for two years held the office of vice-president of the Walla Walla Liberal Club, and has proved himself a power for good. His noble manhood, high sense of honor, and kindly, generous nature have deservedly gained for him the title of "The Prince" among his host of friends at Walla Walla. In spite of his pronounced Infidelity he is loved and respected by all who know him; a successful business man, an able reasoner, zealous worker, heart and purse devoted to maintaining the flag above the cross.

R. J. Wilson, director at large for west of the Cascades, is one of Seattle's most deservedly successful young business men. He has for two years been the energetic promoter and chief burden-bearer in the Liberal ranks at Seattle, full of the zeal and ambition of young manhood. Doing what he does with all his might he is rapidly, by his ability, integrity, and industry, attaining fame and fortune. Yet even his very laudable desire and pride in business success cannot induce him to neglect a single opportunity to in any way work for or advance the cause of Liberalism.

These are in no sense flattering eulogies of the men, but simple descriptions of their well-known peculiarities as testified to by all who know them, alike Liberals, Christians, and nothingarians. Their peers may possibly, their superiors can not be found among the directors of any organization, either theological or political. These, with the old, half-worn-out war-horse, C. B. Reynolds, comprise the board of directors and executive and auditing committees, and have the management and control of all the affairs of the organization.

The secretary alone receives a salary, which is fixed by the following

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President, Hon. Richard Winsor; secretary, C. B. Reynolds; treasurer, George M. Boman. Directors at large, Albert Rosenow and R. J. Wilson.

OBJECTS OF THE ORGANIZATION.

The secularization of our government; to keep church and state forever separate and our flag above the cross; while the specific objects are: To urge the adoption of such measures as are necessary to effect complete secularization of the government in all its departments (as contemplated by its founders) and secure to all full liberty of opinion on the subject of religion; to advocate taxation of church property; discontinuance of religious instruction and worship in public schools; repeal of laws enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath; cessation of all appropriations of public funds for religious institutions or purposes; substitution of simple affirmation, under penalties of perjury, for the judicial oath; the non-appointment of religious fasts, feasts, and holidays by public authority; the practical establishment of simple morality and intelligence as the basis of purely secular government, and the adequate guarantee of public order and prosperity.

INDIVIDUAL BENEFITS.—To afford benefit and protection to its members, so that in case of religious persecution, injury, or injustice on account of opinions held or expressed on the subject of religion, or for refusal to conform to any religious rite or ceremony, the co-operative power of the united Liberals can more effectually be brought to bear in defending, securing, and maintaining the just and legal rights of its members.

HOW TO ACCOMPLISH THESE OBJECTS.

Membership.—Any person in sympathy with the objects of this organization may become a member by signing the constitution and the payment of one dollar each, six months in advance, by males. Payment of dues to be left optional with ladies, who become members with all and every right and privilege by signing the constitution.

All have equal voice, power, protection, and privileges. In every precinct where there are five or more Liberals, on becoming members of this organization, they may elect from their own number an executive officer and representative of this organization in that precinct. And each and all executive officers so chosen shall constitute the vice-presidents of this organization, and in all cases of religious persecution, injustice, or attempted deprivation of any member's religious rights or privileges shall be and act as one of the board of directors in the action of the organization in regard to all such matters that may arise in his or her precinct.

Resolutions, instructing the board of directors to take prompt action in regard to the gross violation of our constitution by the House voting pay for service of a chaplain; to at earliest secure incorporation of the organization, and of thanks to Miss Mattie Blaisdell for the very beautiful banner presented by her to the Union, and to Miss May Amunds, Miss A. Hanson, and Miss Jennie Houghton for the beautiful music furnished, were all the resolutions passed, delegates preferring energetic action to gushing resolutions.

THE PUBLIC SESSIONS.

The convention was held in Freed's Hall, on Ninth street.

The speakers' end of the hall was adorned in the center by a large picture, a mammoth copy in oil of a Truth Seeker cartoon, "Uncle Sam and His Parasites," loaned by G. M. Boman. Over this, in red, white, and blue, was the motto, "Keep Church and State Forever Separate." To the right, "Infidelity is Liberty—All Religion is Slavery."—R. G. Ingersoll. And to the left, surmounting a fine lithograph of Thomas Paine, "To Do Good is My Religion."

The first evening's programme was music and a trio by the choir and the announcement that the Rev. E. Copeland was suddenly gripped, and so could not deliver the opening lecture on "God in the Constitution," as promised. Ex-Rev. C. B. Reynolds filled the gap and spoke on the announced subject, after which Miss Jennie Houghton sang charmingly, her clear, sweet voice filling the hall with melody, calling forth the rapturous applause of the delighted audience.

This was followed by the most bewitching melodies by Miss May Amunds and Miss A. Hanson in a guitar duet that was the very perfection of art.

Then Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel, in a few well-chosen words, presented a splendid satin banner in behalf of Miss Mattie Blaisdell, of Portland, Or., to the presiding officer in trust for the Washington Secular Union when organized, and called out and presented the fair and generous young donor. Mr. R. Winsor, in his speech of acceptance and thanks, captured all hearts and was heartily applauded. Then the choir led and all joined in singing "America" and were so enthused and delighted that they utterly forgot the existence of la grippe or its victim, Rev. Mr. Copeland.

Wednesday evening, Jan. 29, Paine's birthday, the programme consisted of a few pithy and very humorous remarks by Dr. A. W. Calder, secretary of the Walla Walla Liberal Club, to whom the calling of the convention and organization of the Washington Secular Union was mainly due. There was music by the choir and a song and ballad by Miss Jennie Houghton. C. B. Reynolds read a stirring, suggestive letter of cheer from Mrs. Lois Waisbrooker, author of that most excellent book, "Perfect Motherhood." A guitar duet followed, by Miss Hanson and Miss Amunds, which was rapturously encored; and then a lecture on Thomas Paine by Mrs. F. C. Reynolds, during which, in the language of the Eye, she eloquently reviewed the biography of and eulogized that patriot, reformer, and so-called infidel, Thomas Paine, who has been so generally maligned by the enemies of progress and Freethought. After which the chairs were removed, the orchestra took possession of the speaker's stand, and gayly the dance went on.

THE LAST EVENING, JANUARY 30.

"Natural Morality Superior to Theological Restraints as a Safeguard to Society" was the subject of an address on the last evening by Mrs. Krekel, of Kansas City, whose poetic eloquence was only surpassed by the logic of her incisive arguments and the effectiveness of her illustrations. Mrs. Krekel cancelled dates for lectures in California in order to attend the convention, and will make a lecture tour of the sound before her return. She was followed by the ex-Rev. R. Rawson, of Olympia, who gave a humorous account of his experience as a saver of souls according to the Methodist and Campbellite patent rights, his disastrous debate with a young Liberal in "Arkansaw," and his final evolution into the Freethought ranks. Votes of thanks were extended to Miss Blaisdell for the beautiful banner, to those who had kindly furnished music for the meetings, to the various speakers, and to the Eye; and thus successfully ended the first annual convention of the State Secular Union.

About fifty crowded eagerly around the secretary's table after adjournment and succeeded in signing the constitution and paying the initial dollar. Our plan of work commends itself to every true Liberal, and demands their earnest, prompt co-operation.

Let vice-presidents be at once elected in every precinct, and let all take part in the battle, so that all may share the honors of victory. There is need of united action to right the gross violation of the constitution by the House in the appointment of a chaplain to be paid from the taxes of the people.

If those who love liberty and justice will rally to the organization, Washington will become the banner state for Liberalism, and our flag ever wave above the cross.

C. B. REYNOLDS, Sec. W. S. S. U.,
1412 Second st., Seattle, Wash.

THE BIBLE AND THE LODGE.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Having noticed that your paper has always been a fearless defender of liberty and justice, and having sent the following letter to Ivanhoe Lodge, No. 5, K. of P., and not being fairly dealt with at their hands, I ask and hope that you, in the cause of liberty and justice, will publish the same in FREETHOUGHT in order that my friends and the Knights of Pythias of the world may fully understand my position in this matter. By so doing you will greatly oblige

KAMP L. GENIUS.

San Francisco, Feb. 15, Year of America 398.

To Ivanhoe Lodge, No. 5, Knights of Pythias, San Francisco, Cal., and Knights of Pythias of the World.

SIR KNIGHTS: In justice to you and myself I have long deemed it my duty to tell you why I have not remained a member of your order.

Before joining your order I told the person who proposed my name that I would not be a member of any society, social, political, fraternal, or religious, that used the Bible in any of their ceremonies, or that was in any way connected with it; and I was told by him that the Knights of Pythias based their work solely upon the noble fellowship of Damon and Pythias, and that they did not use the Bible in any form. I then told him that if the order was in no way connected with the Bible I would like to become a member, and gave him permission to propose my name; but, I being initiated with quite a large number of other candidates, I was placed in such a position that I could not understand all of the ceremonies and I received the rank of Knight, without learning that the Bible was used. Had I known at the time of my initiation that the Bible was used (as I saw it used after) I should have protested then and there in terms that would have made the person who proposed my name feel guilty of a gross injustice to myself, and I should have stepped down and out at that time. But I did not learn until some time after, while quietly watching an initiation, that the order used the Bible. I then learned for the first time that you, claiming to be Knights of Pythias, accepted the Bible for your code of laws; and upon this night I left the so-called order of the Knights of Pythias, never to return, or at least not until you shall have cleft asunder your bond of allegiance to the Bible. For in accepting the Bible as your code of laws you have in reality become Knights of Christ, and have merely usurped the fair name of Pythias; for Pythias is as far above the Bible as truth is above falsehood, and in godliness Pythias is as far above Christ as rectitude is above iniquity, for he fulfilled the only supreme precept that God has ever given to man, and that precept is perfect justice; while Jesus Christ, with the arrogance of a malignant despot, proclaimed to the world, under the guise of assumed divinity, that all who refused to acknowledge the imperial authority of himself and apostles and did not accept the Christian religion should be condemned to eternal torture in a lake of fire that burneth forever and ever!—a proclamation that in injustice, cruelty, and fiendishness could never be excelled.

Thus, while Pythias stands as a noble defender of liberty and justice, Christ proclaims to the world a tyranny darker than eternal night, and more cruel and ghastly in its executive import than the most heinous murder; and in accepting the Bible as your code of laws you have enshrouded the good and noble name of Pythias with the biblical mantle of Christly priestcraft reeking with hypocrisy and drenched in the blood of untold numbers of just and innocent men and women, who have been murdered (at the instigation of Bible fiends) because they had the moral courage to raise their voices in defense of truth and justice. You have accepted the same book that the papal Bible fiends accepted for their code of laws when they condemned Giordano Bruno to be burned to death at the stake because he had the courage to cast off the cloak of papal tyranny and stand revealed before the world a knight of justice and an apostle of truth. You accept the same book that John Calvin, that villainous Bible fiend and instigator of murder, accepted for his code of laws when he condemned Michael Servetus to be burned to death at the stake for disbelieving the doctrine of the trinity.

Thus do you, Sir Knights, claiming to be Knights of Pythias, accept this book, black with infamy and murder, as your code of laws; and in doing so you have torn the noble monument of Pythias from the pedestal of eternal justice and dragged it down into the cesspool of superstition, error, and hypocrisy; and, while I am a Knight of Pythias at heart, I would suffer death as did Michael Servetus and Giordano Bruno before I would let the sons of America, born and to be born hereafter, think for a moment that I would accept the Bible for my code of laws; but I sincerely hope that there are enough knights of justice and sons of liberty within the ranks of your order to tear the shroud of biblical error from the noble form of Pythias, and, taking the balance in your right hand, raise it aloft toward heaven and proclaim to the world that you accept this emblem of infinite justice as the standard for your code of laws; for by so doing you will redeem the good name of Pythias and establish the then sublime order of the Knights of Pythias upon the everlasting rock of eternal justice.

With malice toward none and freedom for all, I remain in liberty and justice, truly yours,
KAMP L. GENIUS.
San Francisco, January, Y. A. 398.

CHRONICLES OF SIMON CHRISTIANUS.

CHAPTER I.

ENTITLED COSMOS.

The Roadway.—The Preacher.—The Hymn.—Blunt.—Conversation on the Three-One.

1. And it came to pass that I, Philo Aletheia, found myself wandering to and fro in a certain country the name whereof was Cosmos; and I know not how I came there, and I know not why I came there, neither do I know from whence I came.

2. Thither I came and dwelt many days, and busied myself with many things; and had joys and griefs, but the griefs prevailed. And I was an observer of such things as came before me, and a lover of truth.

3. And the country of Cosmos was very large and wide, and the borders thereof unknown, and the boundaries encompassed with unsearchable mystery; and within the country were great multitudes of men, women, and children.

4. Now, round about the boundaries of the country was a certain deep, and wide, and black river, over which no man could pass; and herein was the great and unsearchable mystery.

5. And all the people of the country did daily journey towards the river, and yet did none of them know where it was till they stood upon the brink thereof, whereupon there came forth a grim and fearsome monster and plunged them beneath the blackness of the waters, and henceforth they were not, and their kindred mourned.

6. And the name of the river was Oblivion, and the name of monster that plunged the people within it was Death.

7. And towards the river all the people of the country traveled, some quickly and in a straight course; and others with long and weary wanderings.

8. Some laden with great and heavy burdens, and others with lightness of heart and mincing steps.

9. And within this country of Cosmos there dwelt a certain ogresome beast, huge and shapeless, and without comeliness, and clothed in a garment of many colors:

10. Yea, very many colors; and he concealed his parentage, and had great need to do it.

11. But I, Philo Aletheia, having truly and faithfully examined his genealogy, have found that his father was a hideous and villainous fellow called Hopeogain, a giant of vast strength; and that his mother was dissolute woman of Gascony, called Falsehood.

12. And the beast, being a bitter enemy of the people of the country, did yet, by means of his mother, persuade them that he was their friend. And his name was Priestcraft, albeit his friends gave him another.

13. And the beast had with incredible pains and vast labor made a roadway through the whole country, even, as he said, down to the bleak river, and boasted to the people that those who went by his roadway were able, by means of a bridge which he had built, to pass over the river into a great and noble city beyond; the streets thereof were paved with pure gold, and the walls were of precious stones.

14. And he furthermore boasted that such as passed over his bridge into the glorious city were immediately crowned with one of the golden paving stones.

15. And that they were made kings, and sat upon thrones. But when I asked him where their kingdoms were, he spat at me.

16. And when some of the wiser sort of people said unto him, How is it that they are all made kings? And from whence come the subjects? he cursed them, and if they were little, and their friends not by, he kicked them.

17. Mayhap they had no kingdoms, lest they should be wearied with the cares thereof.

18. Verily, the beast was a wondrous liar, for it was at the behest of his father that he made the roadway; and though he cried aloud that his roadway was free, and the entrance open without money and without price, he did not, for that, fail to extort great and heavy toll of all that went by it. Nor was there any advantage in traveling thereby, but the contrary, for the path was exceedingly bleak and desolate and hard to be traveled, and the pilgrims that used it were continually, and by many devices, robbed by the beast and his servants; and were beaten, and bruised, and kicked, and terrified, and bitten, and spit upon, and tormented, and despoiled, and cheated, and scoffed at, and denied all comfort and all pleasure.

19. And when at last they came to the brink of the river, they found there no bridge, nor any city, but were seized upon by the monster, whose name was Death, and swallowed up by the gloomsome waves of the river, even as they were that came not by the roadway.

20. And the beast furthermore boasted that he had made a league with the king of the great and noble city beyond the river, even the king Jah, and was hand and glove with him in all things, and had agreed with him that all who came not by the roadway should be carried away by the monster of the river, and be plunged into a cauldron of fire, to be tormented with all manner of torments so long as this great and merciful king should live.

21. And for their greater comfort he told them that this great and merciful king would live forever, and that he had power to do whatsoever he would.

22. And I perceived that by these means the beast did persuade and terrify great numbers to go by the roadway, and by exacting from them much money, and much obeisance, he had become exceeding rich, and great, and powerful, and puffed up with pride, and insolent withal; and he hired great numbers of the baser sort of the people to be his servants, and paid them much money to persuade their fellows.

23. And they encompassed the whole country, and went through the length and breadth thereof, persuading and terrifying the people. And they went about continually, babbling upon every occasion, and upon none, and grew fat with the fare, and were clothed in fine cloth, and fared sumptuously every day.

24. And against those who refused to go by the roadway did the beast implacably bellow, and roar, and belch forth unspeakable wrath, and spake all manner of evil against them, and bitterly reviled them, and persecuted them with all persecutions.

25. And I, Philo Aletheia, set myself to watch, and to observe those that were persuaded; and that which by observing I became acquainted with, I have written; and that which I have written do thou read, and great will be thy profit.

26. About the time when the rivers flow seawards I took my journey, and suddenly I beheld a great multitude of people gathered together, and I began to wonder what might be astir.

27. And one told me, saying, These men thou hearest howling forth exhortations are some who not many days ago were accounted as but the scum and filth of the city; but having suddenly made a bargain with the worshipful beast—the master of the roadway—are become our guides and teachers, and are persuading great numbers of people to enter the roadway.

28. So I drew near to one of the babblers and listened. And the name of the babbler was Praisethelord, and thus spake he:

29. Men and brethren, hearken, I beseech you, to my speech, for it is the speech of a king, the most high king Jah, he who reigneth over the noble city beyond the river, and who, by me, maketh known to you his will.

30. Mine eyes have beheld him, and mine ears have heard him. In day-dreams I have looked upon him; and in visions of the noontide he hath spoken with me.

31. At this speech my heart melted; and by the light of his countenance my liver expanded. Woe! woe! to the men of this place and the women thereof. Woe! woe! to the young men, and the sucklings thereof; to the old men and the virgins thereof. Woe! woe! woe! even thrice-told woe to the scoffers, and those who make light of us, and receive not our sayings.

32. Cursed be they and their children, and their children's children to the tenth generation. And there shall be no mercy shown to them; their flesh shall be withered, and their bones ground to powder; evils shall be heaped upon them, and revilings multiplied unto them. Yea, the righteous shall bitterly revile them, and pour out curses upon them like water. Their sustenance shall be snatched from them, and their bread taken away. Their strong men shall be bowed down by want, and their little ones shall famish. In the hour of their extremity their wives shall have no succor, and their daughters have an ill name given them. The waters of confusion shall swallow them up, and the floods of desolation shall overwhelm them. Their destruction shall be swift, and their doom horrible. (See Psalm cix.)

33. Then will the pure in heart rejoice, and the righteous sing aloud for joy. Then shall the chosen ones triumph, and the servants of the holy one give a shout. Yea, we will rejoice exceedingly, and magnify our king who hath holpen us, and made our enemies to fall.

To be Continued.

TIMELY SUGGESTIONS.

The several attempts made within the last few years by church people to bring about a union of church and state, in one form or another, by legislation has often compelled the California Liberals to petition legislature to the contrary, and if the latter has not so far made any concessions to the hypocrites, it is because public opinion in this state is not in their favor, and petitions circulated by Liberals are filled with signatures of the most intelligent citizens. There is no doubt, however, that the church organizations are working slowly but surely towards getting into political offices such men as would absolutely ignore Liberal petitions. This the State Liberal Union ought to look into and prevent at all hazards, and this year is just as good as any other year to commence the work.

Let the executive committee meet and resolve to open a campaign fund, assessing or requesting every Liberal in this state to pay the big amount of twenty-five cents annually, and calling upon those who are able and willing to contribute more.

Empower and request all the vice-presidents in each county to meet at least six months before general, state, and other political elections, and discuss as to whether there were fears that existing parties would nominate and elect officers in favor, wholly or partly, of union of church and state, and if such fears existed, what would be the best possible means for resistance. Under any and all circumstances to resolve upon agitation on and discussion of the subject, "Total separation of church and state," during the campaign, so as to compel the candidates for offices, to publicly declare themselves in favor of it no matter what their political and religious convictions may be in other respects.

The executive committee should issue and publish tracts and pamphlets on the subject of total separation of church and state, defraying all expenses out of the campaign fund, and send them to the vice-presidents for free distribution during political campaigns and at any other time upon request.

The vice-presidents should be requested to report the results of their meetings and subsequent actions to the secretary of the state union for incorporation in his annual report to the convention.

Political campaigns in this country are great educators. It is then that people congregate and talk of matters of interest to all, and it is then that office seekers, their aids, friends, acquaintances, and fellow-partisans hunt for votes, are compelled to listen to everything said for or against them, and make themselves "friends with all."

These suggestions flashed upon my mind as my eyes met my name in the list of vice-presidents. An honor as it is to bear the title, and whatever right and privileges it may bestow upon a person so named, yet the honor would seem empty, and the rights and privileges vainly bestowed, if no duties are combined with it.

Render the title of vice-president serviceable, and upon the degree of fulfillment of duties let depend, in a measure, the re-election, or honorable discharge, of officers to the State Liberal Union.

I would like to see from all the vice-presidents and other Liberals, an expression of opinions on the above in the columns of FREETHOUGHT. M. S. WAHRHAFTIG.

MONOPOLY.

The monopoly of the resources of nature is a crime. It began in usurpation, and is perpetuated by fraud, bribery, perjury, and by trampling every noble instinct of humanity into the dust. The result, if allowed to continue, will be to degrade and enslave the masses and finally to extirpate the best and noblest portion of the human family.

In the name of "the people," in the interest of "humanity," for the sake of "liberty" (?) despotic decrees contravening justice, subverting equal rights, and demoralizing society, are formulated into "laws" which in their operation are mining the very foundations of our republic, enriching the non-producers who become millionaires; and pauperizing the honest laborer, who becomes a surfer, a vagabond, a "tramp," and subject to arrest and imprisonment for asking bread, which our "laws" have made a crime!

Can it be wondered at that criminals are multiplied, and that occasionally they resort to the highways for plunder when driven to desperation? It is hard to starve in the midst of plenty; it is a crime to beg! It is only a crime to steal and rob and here there is a chance to escape detection. Then also should they become wealthy, no one will question where their wealth came from, but all will bow before the golden calf and sound their praises to the ends of the world. Our "laws" have placed a premium upon crime, and the criminals alone can draw prizes. The only reward offered honest labor is penury and want. Our sons are driven to crime; our daughters to prostitution, and liberty, morality, and goodness are becoming empty names.

Yet we are gravely informed by would-be wise men and philosophers that all is serene; that there is no "conflict between capital and labor."

To strike for living wages is "criminal conspiracy" against the welfare of society that should be punished by severe penalties. Has man no rights? What rights has society as such? What idiots must our revolutionary fathers have been to declare that all rights are man's rights—individual rights—inalienable and equal.

Having brought the masses of honest toilers to the verge of starvation, they expect them to lie down and die without a murmur; failing to do this they become the lawful prey of brutal police, Pinkerton detectives, and the hireling-dude militia.

Shall this state of things continue? If so, then where is the hope for our once glorious republic? It must speedily cease to be, and liberty must take her flight to realms unknown. Our people, ceasing to be free, will become cringing slaves and sycophants on one side, and corrupt, heartless, and brutal masters on the other. This would be a state of degradation petrified, compared to which annihilation itself would be preferable.

G. W. THURSTON.

Hite's Cove.

MR. MACDONALD, Dear Sir: The population of Hite's Cove consists of three men, two women, and four Chinamen all told. I send one dollar for the convention. It costs twenty-five cents to get a letter from here to Mariposa, the roads being blocked with snow:

I hope that you will understand
The words I spell contrary.
For I'm a son of Anglesea
Without English dictionary.
Some seventy years ago at school,
We'd no grammatic fetters;
I only learned the ancient Welsh,
And sound the double letters.
And so I trust you will not laugh
At my odd Welsh and Celtic,
Because I try to do the best,
Madda fydd y meddig.
Inclosed please find a dollar piece,
Be careful how you use it,
For if it once slips from the hand
You're very apt to lose it.

Hite's Cove, Cal.

FRED GARDNER.

The Truth Seeker Annual

AND

FREETHINKERS' ALMANAC.

1890—(E.M. 290).

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS: Calander for 1890.
 Freethought in the United States, 1889.
 Faded Flowers (poem) By J. E. Remsburg
 The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue, by T. B. Wakeman.
 Mostly Fools W. Stewart Ross (Saladin)
 Record of the Spanish Inquisition.
 Dates of the Fabrication of some Roman Catholic Dogmas.
 The Boiler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a moral. Helen H. Gardener.
 The Middle Ages, Illustrated.—The Priest, the Supernatural World, the Reformation, Future Terrors.
 The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated.
 Freethought Journals in the United States.
 In Search of a Spirit, E. M. Macdonald.
 Why I Left the Church, Hugh O. Pentecost

115 pages, price 25 cents.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year. The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block; corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND.

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and 26.

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1463 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.
 Rapp & Debarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment,
 cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny-st.

Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

—BY—

W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form, a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Youth and Age.

In youth's bright morn he feels ambition's thrill
 And in the field of human strife engages,
 Resolved to make a glorious name that will Go thundering down the ages.

When age has carved its wrinkles on his brow,
 And he has drunk in life more gall than nectar;

He's very happy if he gets a place
 As Custom-house inspector.

"AND where are you going my pretty maid?"
 "I'm going to Canada, sir," she said.

"And why are you going up there, my dear?"
 "The old man, sir, is a bank cashier."

"And when are you coming back?" said I;
 "As soon, kind sir, as the clouds roll by."

"And when, pretty maiden, may that time be?"
 "When all the directors are dead," quoth she.

His Generosity.

Rev. Dr. Primrose—I was delighted to receive those cast-off garments for the poor of my parish. It shows that there is still some hope of your becoming a Christian.

Brown—Well, you see the old clothes man offered me only six shillings for the lot, and I would sooner have thrown them in the fire than be cheated like that.

Conclusive Evidence.

Little Willie—Is that the papa swan or the mamma swan?

Father—Which do you mean?

"Why, the poor thing that's had the feathers pecked off the top of its head, and that isn't allowed to have none of the biscuit, or nothing."

(Sadly)—"That's the papa swan, Willie."

SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHER—"Now tell me what the epistles are?" First Scholar—"I dunno." Second scholar—"I does." Teacher—"Well, Johnny, what are the Epistles?" Second Scholar—"The Epistles are the wives of the Apostles."

Standard Scientific Works

Works by Alexander Bain.

English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75

Works by Charles Darwin.

Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00

Works by J. W. Draper.

History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75

Works by Ernst Haeckel.

The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00

Works by Huxley.

Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00

Works by John Stewart Mill.

Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25

Works by Richard A. Proctor.

Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
 The Moon.....2.00

Works by Herbert Spencer.

Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 Man versus the State......30
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essay, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75

Works by Andrew D. White.

Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00

Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.

Body and Mind.....$1.50
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50

Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.

Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

By Carl Marx.

Capital.....$3.00

By Asa Gray.

Darwiniana.....$2.00

By L. L. McLaughlin.

Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50

By John B. Henck.

Field-Book for Railroad Engineers.....$2.50

By C. Marcel.

Study of Languages.....$1.25

By Lester F. Ward.

Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00

By Frederick Overman.

A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$.50

B. F. G. Fairfield.

Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25

By W. B. Carpenter.

Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25

By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.

Evolution.....$1.50

By Sir John Lubbock.

Origin of Civilization.....$5.00

By Charles A. Abbott.

A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50

By Garrett P. Serviss.

Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50

By Nathan Sheppard.

Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50

English as She is Spoke.....$.30

English as She is Wrote......30

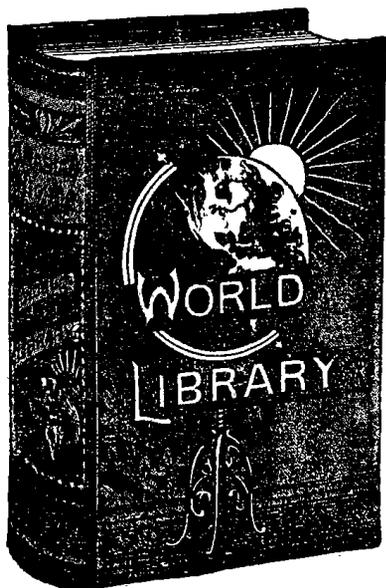

Thos. Carlyle—His Life, Books, Theories......30

Comedies for Amateur Acting......30

The Distracted Young Preacher......25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

MABEL—Sunday school teacher says we mustn't complain of our lot, an' that if we're good we'll get our reward hereafter."
 Maud—"Mother says if I ain't good she'll break every bone in my body."

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRUIK'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY. A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be Obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESS.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last an heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavilion on the Links, &c Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the native happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the Invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERYLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wears just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portraiture of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. PRESCOTT.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll) with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated late scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALLOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POE'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR.

C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

- COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.
- R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.
- PARKER PILLSBURY.
- JOHN E. REMSBURG.
- CHARLES WATTS.
- ROBERT C. ADAMS.
- J. H. BURNHAM.
- JOHN PECK.
- THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.
- H. O. PENTECOST.

- HELEN H. GARDENER.
- ARTHUR B. MOSS.
- L. K. WASHBURN.
- CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
- LUCY N. COLMAN.
- FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
- JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
- MATTIE P. KREKEL.
- W. F. JAMIESON.
- SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc, worth $35. for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do.; $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
" Forks	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded. Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Jaues.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert C. Eccles, M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Jaues.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.
ALL FOR $1.20.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

WANTED. YOUNG man (25) wishes situation on a farm or ranch. Willing to make himself generally useful. Temperate, good reference. Address this office. [46]

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

THE SABBATH IMPOSTURE.

BY HARRY HOOVER.

Proving that there is no authority for the Sunday laws, either Human or "Divine."

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies 50 cents. Address this office.

PUTNAM'S WORKS.

The New God. 10c. The New God was made by an artist hand, guided by a poet soul. It is as perfect as sculpture. The creator makes his "god" in his own image, and breathes into his nostrils the breath of his own life.—L. K. Washburn.

Golden Throne. A romance. Price, $1 00. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words; the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Walls and Wanderings. A new American story. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1 00. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—John Swinton's Pester.

Prometheus: A Poem. Price, $1. "It is crammed with life, thought and profound emotion, poured forth, it seems to me, with extraordinary richness and beauty."—Dr. Henry W. Bellows.

Gottlieb: His Life; or, Love Triumphant. A Romance of Earth, Heaven and Hell. Price, 25 cents. "To describe all the beauties of this simple, yet touchingly told little tale, would be a work of which I confess myself utterly incapable. To realize what it is, you must read the book itself. I have never read anything so exquisitely beautiful and good in all my life before."—Elmina Drake Slenker.

A REGULAR EDUCATED AND LEGALLY QUALIFIED PHYSICIAN, and the most successful (in his specialty) as his practice will surely prove. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men such as seminal weakness, impotency, &c., resulting from indiscretion and ignorance of youth. Those who are all-g should send ten (10 cents) for his book, "Private Counsellor," setting forth an external Application—

A POSITIVE CURE

The book is worth many times its cost, and should be read by the young for instruction and the afflicted for relief.

All Communications Strictly Confidential.

Plain Envelopes used. The book spoken of sent sealed. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, NEW JERSEY Say where you saw this Advertisement.

[From the Washington National View.]

Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, New Jersey offers his valuable services to all those in need of a kind, sympathetic and skillful physician. Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been assailed and exposed by the press, but, Dr. Fellows, a specialist, in his line, stands foremost in his profession, and the encomiums showered upon him publicly as well as in private, are flattering evidences of the high appreciation and confidence his long and conscientious devotion to his specialties in his profession have so justly merited for him, and it is safe to trust him.

A Testimonial.

WEST LIBERTY, O., Aug. 12, 1888.

DR. R. P. FELLOWS—Dear Sir: The remedy you sent is working like a charm. I am completely surprised the way it acts upon the organs. Have only been using it one week, and that weakness; (seminal weakness) is coming out all right. Yours respectfully, J. R.

REMARKS—The above is a fair sample of the hundreds of testimonials received from all parts of the United States, from young, middle-aged and elderly men, suffering from various kinds of sexual complaints, but who are now cured by my External Application, the greatest of all known remedies for this class of diseases. As I am an out-and-out Liberal I trust the Freethinkers of the Land will give me their patronage, and not waste their time and money on Christian doctors. DR. FELLOWS.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
 FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

PRINTING!

Having procured one of the best Presses manufactured and a large assortment of display type, and employing competent workmen, the Free-thought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

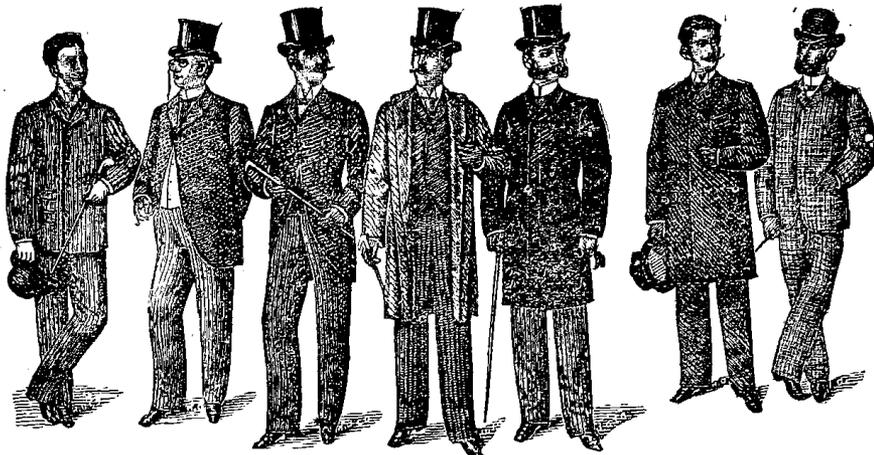

- Letter-heads,
- Bill-heads,
- Programmes,
- Envelopes,
- Business Cards,
- Postal Cards,
- Tickets,
- Placards,
- Receipts,
- Posters,
- Dodgers,
- Circulars,
- Etc. etc.

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

ASTHMA DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALEN® never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial CURED BOTTLE FREE
 DR. TAFT BROS., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR..... $25.00
 DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
 PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.

OLIVER HINCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
 Telephone 1950.

P. A. CLARK.

CHAS. W. CLARK

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS,

NURSERYMEN.

Catalpas for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines.
 Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice.
 Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address

CLARK BROS.,

P. O. Box C,

San Jacinto, Cal.

JOHNNY is having a good streak and is learning a new prayer. The other night he attempted to replace completely his old, "Now I lay me" with his new "Our Father who art in Heaven." He had begun all right, and had progressed as far as "on earth as it is heaven," when the slight nervousness of the occasion drove all the rest of the prayer out of his mind, so he groped vainly, "In heaven—well, Lord," said Johnny, nonchalantly, "I'm stuck."

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
 Six Months......75
 Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
 414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Francisco.

Wm. W. NOBLE,

Merchant Tailor,

1222 STOCKTON ST.

Bet. Pacific and Broadway.

DRESS SUITS A SPECIALTY

Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass by.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
 Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.
 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Vol. III—No. 9.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, MARCH 1, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal. as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howrad Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - MARCH 1, 1890.

DEATH OF J. W. NORTH.

Judge J. W. North, the humanitarian, the old-time abolitionist, the Freethinker, and first vice-president of the California State Liberal Union, is dead. He died at Fresno, Friday morning, February 21, in the 76th year of his age. He leaves a widow and six children. He was taken sick two months ago, ill-health preventing him from attending the state convention of Liberals, to which he sent a stirring letter published in FREETHOUGHT of February 1.

Our information concerning Judge North's death and funeral comes through the daily press.

No religious services were held over his remains prior to their leaving Fresno, but in place of such services the family and intimate friends gathered about the casket, and appropriate remarks were made by Dr. Chester Rowell. This informal gathering was held at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the late residence of the deceased, and his remains were then taken to the depot and shipped to Los Angeles, to be cremated. After cremation the ashes were conveyed to Riverside and interred in the cemetery lot of his son, John G. North. The remains, which were inclosed in a handsome rosewood casket, were escorted to Los Angeles by his two sons, John G. and Edward North. The cremation of his body is at his especial request, as were the absence of any floral or other display.

Following is a sketch of Judge North's life: John Welsey North was born at Sand Lake, Rensselaer county, N. Y., January 4, 1815. He graduated from the Wesleyan University at Middletown, Conn., in August, 1841. During his college life he became a zealous worker in the anti-slavery cause, and for two years lectured under the auspices of the Connecticut State Anti-Slavery Society. After leaving college he studied law in the offices of John Jay and Bendit & Boardman of New York and Forbes & Sheldon of Syracuse, and was admitted to the bar in 1845. In August, 1848, he was married to Miss Ann H. Loomis of Onondaga county, N. Y., who still survives him. In 1849, his health failing, a change of climate became necessary, and he moved to Minnesota, living the first year of his residence in that territory, on Hennepin island, in the Mississippi river, and seeing during that time the building of the first house on the site of the present prosperous city of Minneapolis.

In the fall of 1850 he was elected a member of the second legislature of the territory of Minnesota and introduced the bill chartering the Minnesota University, a well-endowed and useful educational institution still in existence at Minneapolis. He was largely instrumental in settling the town of Faribault, and he founded the thriving town of Northfield, so called in his honor.

In 1857 he was a member of the Constitutional Convention that framed the constitution of the new state of Minnesota. In 1860 he was chairman of the Minnesota delegation in the Chicago convention and was a member of the committee that waited upon Abraham Lincoln to notify him of his nomination for the presidency. In 1861 he was appointed surveyor-general of the territory of Nevada, and subsequently judge of the territorial district supreme court of Nevada. In the fall of 1865 he returned to the East, locating at Knoxville, Tenn., where he labored assiduously for the improvement and development of that state.

In March, 1870, he conceived the idea of establishing a colony of Eastern people in Southern California, and at once commenced the development and execution of his plan. How well he succeeded all who have visited or lived in Riverside can testify. This thriving city was the result of his scheme. Having seen the child of his fancy outgrow his fondest hopes, in 1879 he removed to San Francisco and the following year connected himself with the Washington colony, in Fresno county, which section he did much to settle.

Judge North died poor. His labors in developing the resources of the state and in making Fresno county what it is did not prevent unscrupulous courts, in the interest of corrupt men, from robbing him of property which he had acquired and improved. His latent enterprise in the way of Liberal work was the establishing of the Unity Society at Fresno, of which he was made president. Such was his hope for humanity and his faith in human professions that he believed an organization could be maintained in which believer and unbeliever could be given equal rights and prosecute harmoniously together the search for truth. But he soon learned from bitter experience that in opening the door for liberality bigotry had shouldered its way in, and his self-respect forced him to resign the presidency of the Unity Society.

In the language of his published obituary, "he died peacefully, in the midst of his family, his long life filled with good deeds, and leaving behind him that most priceless of legacies, a name without reproach. In character he was remarkably free from guile or pretense of any sort. Full of a courage that shrank from nothing in the redressing of another's wrong or the establishment of a principle, he was always found upon the side of the oppressed. Generous to a fault, he was always in the lead when private loss or public improvement stood in need of pecuniary aid, and his integrity and high moral standard made him a model man."

So passes away one of nature's noblest noblemen. He was a man without fear, without superstition, incapable of a dishonest word or act. "And as he lived he died. Proudly he entered the darkness—or the dawn—that we call death. Unshrinkingly he passed beyond our horizon, beyond the twilight's purple hills, beyond the utmost reach of human harm or help—to that vast realm of silence or of joy where the innumerable dwell; and he has left with us his wealth of thought and deed—the memory of a brave, imperious, honest man who bowed alone to death."

A COMPLACENT INFIDEL.

Mr. A. W. Craig, secretary of the Ida Livingston Gold Mining Company, and a resident of Oakland, writes FREETHOUGHT as follows:

Some time ago, about a year, I think, your publication, FREETHOUGHT, commenced coming to my residence, 177 Eighth street, Oakland, Cal. I do not know who caused the paper to be sent to me. I was never asked to subscribe for it, and do not remember of ever seeing the paper until I received the first number.

I presume the person who subscribed for me did not pay the subscription, and if not will you please send me my bill to date and stop the paper. I am an Infidel, but do not need a Freethought paper to encourage me in my convictions. They are too well founded for that. Neither have I the slightest fear that our religious liberties are in danger from the Christian or any other superstitious religion.

The Freethinkers are so many that that is impossible now and is rapidly becoming more so. Neither do I believe in the propaganda. When the time arrives that all are fitted to become Freethinkers the law of natural selection will make Freethought their religion. Until then those not so fitted will reach a higher development in the narrower confines of some other religion. Very respectfully, A. W. CRAIG.

Mr. Craig's complacency is quite refreshing, and if there were any ground for it, it would also be encouraging. But he makes a mistake common to many. He sees that the world is perhaps on the whole becoming more Liberal and enlightened; that old creeds and superstitions are weakening their hold on the minds of men and a few women, and that there is a professed respect for human rights among all classes. He sees these things, and ignoring their real cause, attributes them to what he calls the law of natural selection; and herein consists Mr. Craig's error, for he loses sight of the fact that all natural laws are modified by human intervention. To illustrate, being a mining man he knows that by natural law any stream of water running near the Ida Livingston Mine will follow its channel unless diverted, and flow on, a useless volume of water, except for drinking purposes, until, being diverted by human ingenuity, it serves the purpose of washing out the gold. If Mr. Craig were logical he would let the stream alone, ignore hydraulics, and wait patiently for the law of natural selection to flush his sluices. And an illustration similar to this could be drawn from every branch of human industry where man has mingled his thought with his labor, and where intelligence is employed in directing effort.

Mr. Craig avers that, his convictions being well-grounded, he needs no Freethought paper. But that is not the question. The question is, Does the world need a Freethought paper? Undoubtedly Mr. Craig is a good citizen who respects the rights of others voluntarily, so that, as far as he is concerned, he needs no such thing as law. Does he for that reason decline to support the law? Will he support nothing, however beneficial to others, merely because it does not directly benefit himself? Does selfishness run in Mr. Craig's family to that extent. If so, having been graduated, why support schools? Enjoying good health, why care for the sick? Living in easy circumstances, why help the destitute? Stroking a full stomach, why feed the hungry?

We do not believe that Mr. Craig or any other man possessing the common attributes of humanity is ready to stand by the logic of his remark, that the wants of one being supplied, the rest of mankind are to be left to take care of themselves.

Mr. Craig says he is an Infidel, and that his convictions are too well-grounded to need the strength to be derived from reading a Freethought paper. We are glad to know that such is the case. But he must believe that Infidelity is right, and we are at a loss to understand why he should desert its active promulgators. In our opinion, the right is always worthy of encouragement.

It is a quite comfortable state of mind to believe that there is no danger to religious liberty. Such may be the fact, but Mr. Craig may assure himself that he has had no hand in making it so. Men like him simply enjoy what others achieve. Fortunately for Liberty, her cause is not in his inactive hands. Fortunately for her she has champions who believe her cause is worth advocating.

MAGDALENE.

A Boulder Creek subscriber writes to inquire the meaning of the word Magdalene. What he desires to know is if the word of itself signifies a profligate woman reformed. We do not so understand it. On the sea of Galilee there was a town called Magdala, whence came a woman more or less connected with the gospel narrative of Christ, and coming from Magdala she was termed a Magdalene. Having read the narrative, we find no evidence that her reputation was off color. The Christian world, however, appears to have confounded her with the woman mentioned in Luke vii, 36-50, who was accounted a sinner.

THE SAN FRANCISCO FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The exercises before the San Francisco Freethought Society Sunday evening, March 2, will consist of a debate between Prof. D. C. Seymour and S. P. Putnam on "Spiritualism—Is it a Demonstrated Fact?" These meetings are held every Sunday evening at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street.

LECTURE IN OAKLAND.

S. P. Putnam will lecture at Dama Hall, corner of Eighth street and Broadway, Oakland, Sunday afternoon, March 2, at 3:30 o'clock. Admission will be free.

SENATOR STANFORD, of California, has discharged his vocal organ on the Blair Educational bill, which provides for the establishment and maintenance of public schools for teaching the Christian religion. Mr. Stanford thinks that such schools will help to secure the "ultimate realization of the creator's intentions for man." The creator should thank our senator for his kindly intervention, but he knows, if he knows anything, that Stanford does not represent the people of California on the subject of the Blair bill. Secular state schools are here regarded as quite sufficient for the educational needs of the rising generation, and it is held with General Grant that religious education should be left to the church, the family, and the schools supported by private funds.

CHICAGO has won the first fall in her wrestle with New York for the World's Fair of 1892. The national House of Representatives last Monday gave her 157 votes for the prize-winner against 107 for New York. If the Senate concurs and decides that the fair is to be held anywhere, which it may not do, Chicago will get the plum. We favor the Lake City as against New York because there is a better chance that in Chicago the exhibition may be kept open on Sunday, when those who work week days may be able to get some benefit from it.

THE Hon. F. M. Pfister, of San Jose, having recently died, a committee of his survivors have presented to the court, where he practiced, a number of resolutions setting forth that "it has pleased Him who is the ruler of our destinies to remove from our midst our late friend and brother," and adding, "The same is a public calamity." This is a queer view of God—that the bringing about of public calamities pleases him. None but a good Christian could see where the pleasantry comes in.

THE patrons of J. D. Shaw's Independent Pulpit, published monthly at Waco, Texas, have raised a fund of $3000 for the editor, payable in ten-dollar donations. The Pulpit is a good magazine and Mr. Shaw is a hard and effective worker. His readers have honored themselves in this pocketfelt recognition of his services.

THE Rev. Mr. Horne, of Larchmont, N. Y., just before his death, which occurred last week, preached his own funeral sermon in a phonograph, and at the funeral held by his friends on Monday, the instrument repeated the discourse in the dead man's own voice and words. It spoke highly of the deceased.

To our many subscribers in Washington who have failed to receive FREETHOUGHT, we can only say that the fault is not ours. The paper has been regularly mailed and the postage paid in advance. We are ourselves waiting for books from the East which were mailed a month ago.

WE note a fine illustration of the close relation of religion and morality in the case of the English Marquis of Ailesbury, who is the patron of twenty-one church livings in the Established church, while at the same time he is debarred from all race-tracks for cheating.

THERE is talk that the pope and the German emperor will cooperate "for the improvement of working men." At about the same time we may expect to see the fox and the wolf co-operating for the improvement of a flock of sheep.

OBSERVATIONS.

I am always pleased to see the hall where the Freethought Society meets well filled, but when on arriving a few minutes late I find all the seats occupied and distinguished citizens sitting on the steps of the platform, I feel as if those who come in simply to get out of the wet ought to put an occasional nickel in the hat so we could afford to hire a larger room. Besides, since I recovered from the grip I have not cared to be packed for perspiring purposes. But everybody had to stand it last Sunday evening, for the hall was crowded to the door, and Deacon Walker, with a fine bouquet in his buttonhole, looked without result for vacant chairs wherein late comers might find seats.

Mr. Eastman presided ably, and presented Prof. Herbert Miller to the audience. Mr. Miller's subject was "An Old Freethought Poet," which poet proved to be Lucretius, a didactic writer whose birth antedated that of Christ by nearly a century. Lucretius was a Roman and wrote in the Latin tongue. His poetry is said to be much superior to that of many persons who now express their thoughts in verse. Lucretius also had the misfortune to be unorthodox, and his opinions made him unpopular among the early Christians, and for that reason he was accused of such things as Christians of our days charge upon all heretics regardless of facts. His aim was to free men from their superstitions, which in all ages has been a thankless task. He adopted the atomic theory of Leucippus and, following Epicurus, taught that certain elementary particles, existing from all eternity and governed by fixed laws, combined to form the universe of matter; that the existence and active interference of a supreme overruling deity was not necessary to be supposed in order to account for the phenomena of nature; and that what appeared to be miraculous was in reality not so, but merely the result of certain fixed laws which operated with unerring precision and in a natural process. Thus it will be seen that nearly two thousand years ago he taught what Materialists and scientists have ever since been endeavoring to explain to the world. Professor Miller quoted from the works of Lucretius many bright sayings which orators and writers of the present day work off as their own without detection, owing to the time and the language which separate ordinary people from the real author.

Mr. Miller was listened to attentively by the audience. The professor does not look as robust as he did the last time I saw him previously, the influenza, like a worm in the bud, having fed upon the corpuscles of his cheeks, and hollowed them so that his forehead and full temples stand out more prominent than formerly. As he took his seat in a standing posture among the crowd at the back part of the hall, he was heartily applauded.

While the treasurer was extorting the usual collection, Mr. Cromwell sang a solo in a fine baritone of voice, so to speak, by that means making himself solid with the listeners.

The discussion which followed was participated in by Mr. Thomas Curtis, Mr. H. L. Knight, and Mr. Patrick Healy, and closed by the speaker.

Mr. Curtis, before discussing the lecture, announced the death of Judge North, of Fresno, and paid a deserved tribute to his worth. With reference to Lucretius Mr. Curtis said that Freethought was as old as religion. There had always been Freethinkers, though the devotees of superstition were in the majority as at the present time. The doctrine of the reign of natural law as taught by Lucretius was just beginning to be accepted by the world, whereas everything from a thunder storm to a pestilence was formerly attributed to the direct intervention of God. Theologians were gradually retiring God from business, so that the only deity now remaining was the one vaguely conceived of by Mr. Knight.

The last remark brought Mr. Knight to the platform, but he refrained from arguing the God question. He said he was not particular about defending God, who could take care of himself. God and religion were all right in their way, but trouble was introduced when priests set themselves up as God's mouthpieces and attempted to run the universe. Mr. Knight reviewed the pope's late encyclical letter and pronounced it a treasonable document. He remarked that our fathers were opposed to sacerdotal privileges, and retired the priests from politics.

Mr. Patrick Healy supervened. He held that the statements of Mr. Knight were erroneous and his argument fallacious. The priests were the most intelligent men in the world and Roman Catholic people so honest and happy that their condition was to be envied by those styling themselves Freethinkers. Mr. Healy proceeded to say that a reasonable conception of Lucretius' philosophy was the friction of two molecules of matter; from which impressive statement he proceeded drearily to the end of his allotted time. During the latter half of his aimless and wandering address he divided the attention of the audience with the clock, but the timepiece got the best of him, and he went down. He was dressed in his best suit of clothes.

Professor Miller, in closing the debate, said he was delighted to hear somebody from the other side. Mr. Healy had expressed himself as unsatisfied by the doctrine of the unknowable, but was the world satisfied by the doctrines of Christianity? Scarcely. The theory of evolution, said Mr. Miller, explains all that we know of the universe, and subsequent information will come in the same way. Of one thing we may be certain, all knowledge has been attained through study and investigation by the mind of man, and there has never been such a thing as a supernatural revelation.

President Eastman dismissed the audience with his blessing. Next Sunday evening Professor Seymour and Mr. Putnam will discuss Spiritualism. The professor will take the ground that spirits are a demonstrable fact, while Putnam, for the sake of argument, will hold to the contrary. When the discussion is concluded it is believed that their hearers will not know any less about the subject than they do at present.

The more information we get about the outrages committed by the Russian government officials upon the prisoners of Siberia, the more reason there appears to be why somebody should place a large bomb under the Russian throne and blow it through the roof of the royal palace. In considering this matter we are to bear in mind that the Siberian prisoners are not criminals—that is, they are criminals only to the extent that I am a criminal in writing these lines. But one number of FREETHOUGHT could be published in Russia, and by the time that number had reached its suburban subscribers the editor would be in Siberia or heaven. Those who protested against the proceeding would also be furnished a free pass to the same localities.

The case now before the world is that of a lady called Madam Sigida. This lady had observed that her fellow female prisoners were subjected to outrageous indignities by the minions of the czar placed over them as keepers. She sought and obtained an interview with the director of the prison in their behalf, and the wretch insulted her. She called him a villain, and, exasperated beyond endurance, slapped him in the face. Thereupon Madam Sigida was stripped and flogged to death. Thirty of the other women, learning her fate, attempted suicide.

I wonder if our politicians, who arise at a safe distance and twist the tail of the British lion on account of an eviction in Ireland, will pay any attention to these murders in Russia. I guess not. We shall doubtless continue to send congratulations to the czar, and missionaries to the heathen, who have not felt the humanizing influence of Christianity as he has. But it would be a good thing if two or three of the civilized governments of the world would form some sort of offensive alliance and memorialize the czar somewhat as follows: "Alexander, by grace of God despot, Greeting: You are carrying things with an elevated hand. You are an impostor, and you know it; and it is because you know it that you resort to barbarous methods to prevent exposure. But, in vulgar language, we are onto you. You have consigned all the brains, all the manhood, and about all of the virtue existing in Russia to Siberia, which is to your empire what hades is to the orthodox heaven—the best men are there. You have no respect for age, worth, or sex. But, unfortunately for you, other nations are not like yours, and if you do not mend your ways, we will arise and wipe your infernal despotism off the face of the earth. And your petitioners will ever pray, etc. Signed: France, Great Britain, and the United States of America."

This might not be international comity, courtesy, amenity, and so forth, but it would be justice nevertheless.

A correspondent who doubtless means well sends me this clipping, which he asks to have explained:

A friend asks me to multiply $5 by $5. I do so and announce the result as $25. Now multiply 500 cents, give the answer in cents, pure and simple, not as fractional parts of a dollar. I do so and am surprised to see the figures climb up to 250,000 cents, which is $2500. As $5 and 500 cents are equivalent, the result is puzzling. It cannot be urged that decimal marks should be used. A cent, as such, is as distinct a unit as a dollar, and as the result is to be announced in cents the decimal cannot be pleaded in extenuation of the rather surprising result. But there is clearly something wrong. What is it?

The something wrong which the narrator of the foregoing desires to locate is in his second sentence, where he asserts that he multiplied five dollars by five dollars. He might as truthfully have said that he multiplied five bushels of wheat by a bunch of bananas. A dollar is a concrete thing, and cannot be used as a multiplier. The romancer merely multiplied $5 by five. If he were to multiply five hundred cents by the same multiplier he would have the same product.

Dr. Lorrimer, described as a noted lecturer, surprised his audience at Holyoke, Massachusetts, by attacking the Catholic church, and denouncing its adherents as worshipers of images and statues. His hearers excused him on the ground that he had been drinking, while his friends explain his strange conduct by alleging that the aberration was caused by an overdose of quinine taken to relieve a chill. During the late war somebody approached Lincoln with the charge that General Grant was in the habit of drinking whisky, and Mr. Lincoln inquired if the complainant could inform him what brand Mr. Grant used, as he would like to procure some of it for his other generals. It might be useful for all lecturers to find out where Dr. Lorrimer got his quinine, and take a few doses of the same stimulant.

Captain Wadlia, of Colorado, has contributed to the Investigator a poem of which this is the closing stanza:

I'm going to skip this little device
Of those enthusiastic pessimists,
Tho' their pills be sugar-coated ever so nice,
With a bribe thrown in of a future bliss;
And ere I begin reading a piece, or a page,
No matter what the subject or design,
I'll examine its title, the name of its sage,
And scan the last verse, near the last line.

It will be quite proper for Captain Wadlia to "scan the last verse near the last line" of every poem before he reads it, but he should by all means scan his own lines before submitting them for publication. The sample here given has evidently not been subjected to that process. He is one of those misguided persons who drop into rhyme without realizing that metrical composition is an art necessary to be studied. He would probably be overwhelmed with surprise to learn that in poetry a verse and a line are identical, and that to scan a verse means to divide it into the feet of which it is composed. Horace Seaver would have given Captain Wadlia the above information and advised him to put his remarks in the form of prose.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

It is now claimed that the commission appointed to secure an appropriation for the new post-office site in San Francisco endeavored to secure $800,000 for property that had been offered them for $650,000. Hence a scandal.—There was a big flood at Walnut Grove, Arizona, last week, caused by the breaking of a dam, and forty persons are reported to have been drowned, among them the president of the company that constructed the defective dam.—Dillon and Esmonde, two leading Irish agitators, are in San Francisco.—Mrs. Woodworth, the mesmeric revivalist, is working in Santa Rosa.—Judge J. G. Maguire will prepare the Australian Ballot bill for presentation before the California legislature.—The rainfall in this city for the season is above 36 inches.

Members of the Anti-Poverty Society in New York object to having the world's fair held at that place because it will attract foreign laborers and cheapen wages, while rents will be raised and the expenses of the poor increased.—The supreme court of Colorado has decided that the state has a right to close saloons on Sunday, and last Sunday the law was enforced in Denver.—Many deaths from starvation have occurred among the Indians of North Dakota, where the winter is exceptionally severe.—The gallery of the Bromley Independent church, in New York, gave way on a recent Sunday, and twenty persons were injured, some, it is feared, fatally.—The women of Spickardsville, Mo., recently raided a saloon, spilled the liquors, and broke up the glassware. The women, who were led by a minister, were arrested and fined $5 each.—John Jacob Astor, the millionaire New Yorker, died Feb. 22 of heart failure. His estate is worth $200,000,000. He was 68 years of age.—Representative Hebbrows have proposed a meeting to raise funds for the protection of their race in Russia and other countries where they are persecuted.

Dom Pedro, the exiled emperor, is anxious to return to Brazil, and promises to support the republic.—The expenses of the London Times in the Parnell suit were nearly $1,000,000, and its circulation suffered a decrease of 25,000.—The Socialists have made great gains in Germany. In the last parliament they had 11 members; now they have 20.—Mormon missionaries have been mobbed in London.

THE NATIONALISTS.

Although the last meeting of the San Francisco Nationalist Club was its thirteenth public "reception," as the members call it, and although it was held on Friday evening, neither the unlucky number nor the unlucky day, with the rain added, had any influence in reducing the attendance. The crowd was great and the programme long and interesting. It may be that the crowd goes to hear the singing and takes the speeches as a sort of penance. Be that as it may, the crowd was there. Mrs. Addie Ballou presided and Mr. W. H. Wood delivered an address. Mr. Wood said this was the most remarkable century since the dawn of the Christian era. The serfs of Russia had been set free, slavery had been abolished in America, and many wonderful inventions had been made. But the great event was the rise of Nationalism. Abraham Lincoln had freed 4,000,000; the Nationalists would make freedmen of 40,000,000. "We do not believe," said the speaker, "that one man should live in luxury and nine hundred and ninety-nine should starve. Each man should have the proper reward for his labor. This is something to which all are entitled. Our educational system is wrong. The youth is taught to 'feather his own nest,' without thinking of any one else. Money is the great aim of all; it is the motive on which society is based. Every one is in the race for riches. Look at the low rate of wages paid to some people. Look at the very high salaries paid to government officials."

Albert Currin, editor of the Arbeiter Zeitung, spoke for ten minutes on "A Matter of Business." He read a series of resolutions pledging the moral support of the club to the American Federation of Trades and the unions affiliated with it in their efforts to get a reduction of the hours of labor. Mr. Currin said he appeared in the name of the workingmen, of the unemployed, and of the tramp, American citizens, sons and daughters of the American republic. "From east to west, north to south, thousands of men and women were begging for employment or a piece of bread. And this notwithstanding that this is the richest country in the world. When a man was willing to work he ought to be given labor. The workingman does not want charity; he wants labor. Can there be love of country, religion, or manhood in the country if our citizens must go to the poorhouse? Nationalism would improve the condition of the workingman, it would rid the country of tramps, and would save the boys from the rumshops and the girls from worse."

Burnette G. Haskell gave the benediction, in which he remarked that next November the Nationalists would carry San Francisco. In the good time to be then inaugurated knavery, rascality, and other forms of wickedness would cease, water would be free, bread supplied at cost, and people could dress in the best clothes at nominal expense. He then drew attention to the frauds now practiced upon the public, and observed that while his audience might call the same American intelligence he would be damned if he could give it that definition.

Other features of the entertainment were songs by the Norwegian Mannerchor, recitations by Mr. Hunter and Miss Reed, and singing by Miss Evangeline Ballou.

A JOKE ON THE COLONEL.

Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll would never be suspected of being a respecter of persons, for he has such a free and easy way of discoursing upon religious matters. His legal protegee was Judge Puterbaugh, then a judge of the Circuit court at Peoria, Ill. Upon one occasion, while the judge was engaged in fining a spectator for contempt of court, Ingersoll offered some gratuitous advice, which was resented with some show of indignation. Ingersoll retaliated by hinting that when the court was fishing in a political way after the ermine he had not been so chary about accepting his advice. This warmed the old man up in earnest, and he at once imposed upon the presumptuous advocate a fine of $10 and costs. Ingersoll fumbled in his pockets for a moment, then walked up to the bar with outstretched hand and said: "Puterbaugh, lend me $10!" The stern expression of the court never relaxed for an instant. Turning to the clerk, he said: "Mr. Clerk, let the record show that Mr. Ingersoll's fine is remitted. Peoria county can better afford to lose $10 than I can."

—New York Herald.

"NO MORALITY POSSIBLE WITHOUT RELIGIOUS DOCTRINE."

In the American Sentinel of January 30, 1890, is a long article under the above heading signed by A. T. J., which, being interpreted, means Elder Alonzo T. Jones.

The burden of the article is a criticism upon the action of the American Secular Union in offering a prize for the best essay embodying "the purest principles of morality without inculcating religious doctrines." Among other things in the circular containing the offer of a prize is the following general statement:

It is desired that the manual for which this premium is offered shall not be a reading book for schools nor a mere code of morals, much less a system of ethical philosophy, but rather a concise yet comprehensive and suggestive exhibit, with familiar and practical illustrations of those universal foundation principles and axiomatic truths which underlie all sound morality and rightfulness, thus developing and educating that inherent moral sense which is more or less common to all rational beings. In short, to show how to teach children the natural and essential difference between right and wrong, and the reasons therefor.

Upon this Mr. Jones makes a great many general statements:

It is perfectly proper to teach children, as well as older people, the essential difference between right and wrong; and every reasoning creature, not only desires, but absolutely demands to know the reasons therefor. But in moral things, in inculcating the principles of moral right or wrong, it is impossible to give reasons for it without inculcating a religious doctrine. The reason for that which is right or wrong must be based upon authority. But to leave out of these reasons all idea of any authority, except the authority of man, is to have, in fact, no basis for morality. The human conscience refuses to recognize the authority of man in the realm of morals. If it rests upon the authority of man, one man has just as much authority as another. Each man's idea of that which is morally right is, to him, more authoritative than any other man's idea of right can be.

I quote at length an article from Mr. Jones, in the American Sentinel of December 18, 1889, on "Morality in the Public Schools," to show that there is no such thing as morality. That is, that the grounds of morality cannot be determined, that each individual must be a "law unto himself."

MORALITY IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Upon the question as to whether morality should be taught in the public schools, we should suggest that it would be well for those who demand it, to agree upon what morality really is, what is its basis, and what are its sanctions. If this should not be clearly discerned and taught, even granting that it is the province of the state to teach morality, it is certain that the teaching would be no better than that which is now given in the public schools, and the probabilities are that it would be much worse. It is also certain that those who favor teaching morality in the public schools cannot agree upon what morality is, nor upon what are the grounds of moral responsibility. This question was studied "thoroughly and practically" for four years by the Evangelical Ministers' Association of Boston. "In 1882 an able committee of that body, composed of representative men of all denominations, was appointed for the purpose of preparing a book of morals for the public schools." Two of that committee were Drs. Jos. T. Duryea and Edward Everett Hale. The result of the four years' study upon the question by this committee was expressed by Dr. Duryea, in 1885, in a letter to the chairman of a committee, in New York, appointed to consider the same subject. The following is the material part of the letter:

"32 UNION PARK, Boston, Dec. 5, 1885:

"MY DEAR SIR: The committee appointed to consider the matter of a book of morals for the public schools, have been trying faithfully to find out what can be done. Difficulties have been met and not overcome. We are trying to evade them.

The desire was for a graded series. This would involve a book worthy to go into the high schools. This could hardly admit reference to the grounds of moral responsibility. The committee have seriously doubted the wisdom of debating the basis of moral choice and action before youth. To show them that apparently good men differ concerning the very foundation of morality, might be harmful before they are developed and informed sufficiently to understand how there can be differences as to theories, and yet substantial agreement as to practical morality.

"I think, now, the tendency is to admit that it is better to address the moral intuitions, and not to theorize about them; also to treat moral matters as they come up in the life of the pupils, and their associations in the school and on the play-ground.

"But it has been deemed practicable to prepare a book, or a series of books, after the pattern of the 'Book of Golden Deeds,' prepared for youth in England.

"The moral affections and sentiments might be exhibited in expression and moral principles might be embodied in characters, and concretely presented in deeds. An outline including all the virtues, and incidents under each of them, might be selected. Also deeds might be presented involving all the moral rules drawn out of the root principles of morality!

"This is as far as we have been able to go, with expectation of meeting with general approval, and securing the admission of the book or books.
"Yours truly,
JOSEPH T. DURVEA."

It is conceded, then, that morality as a system cannot be formulated, as "apparently good men differ concerning the foundation of morality." It did not occur to Drs. Hale and Durvea to construct a system of morality on religious grounds. Being men noted for their learning and intellectual abilities one would naturally suppose they would have found no difficulty in getting up a system of morality on a religious basis, if it were possible to do so, but they did not even hint that such a thing could be done. But Mr. Jones thinks otherwise. With him morality is based upon authority, or in other words, there is no morality except that which is based upon authority. But the word morality implies, if it means anything at all, that the "basis of moral choice" is reasonable, but to say that it is based upon authority is to deny that reason has anything at all to do with it. "Thus saith the Lord" is the foundation of the ethical code according to Mr. Jones. But thus saith the Lord is the religious grounds, and supplies religious motives to action, but that which passes for morality has always been supposed to rest on reasonable grounds. But rational morality has been a failure so far as forming any system of it is concerned. And Mr. Jones is fully aware of the fact, and is astonished that the Secular Union should attempt to give reasons for the right and wrong of conduct. "The reason," he says, "for that which is right or wrong must be based on authority." But that is simply to give no reason at all.

Let me ask the elder how he knows that the knowledge of right and wrong is based upon authority. On this point he is silent. His mere assertion is nothing more than assertion. It is too much like preaching and dogmatizing to keep company with his previous perceptions that there is no system of morality and can be none. Having demolished the old misconceptions it would be natural and certain to a man who was confident of his ground to make not only a statement of his side of the case, but also to support it with such an array of evidence as would leave his readers in no doubt as to what he meant; but our champion on the Sunday legislation question did not attempt anything of the kind. He well knew that the least said is the soonest mended, and so he said as little as he could by way of explaining the basis of morality. It seemed sufficient to say it was based upon authority. But that word, authority, gives his case away. It has played the tragedy of human life in this world, in all countries and in all ages. The authority of God! But we do not know what can be the authority of God, when there is no God. And if it were possible that Mr. Jones could make some showing for the probable existence of a God, it would not help his case in the least, because it would then be necessary to show that his God had made some sort of revelation of his will, and after he had done that it would be necessary to prove that the revelation had been preserved uncorrupted; it would be necessary, if corrupted, to be able to show just what part of the revelation was pure, and what was adulterated. But notwithstanding all this, Mr. Jones rests his system of morality upon authority. This is a contradiction of terms, as morality means a system or rule of human conduct, that is, giving the reasons for acting so and thus, but authority is a denial of all reasons. It confronts man with the command, "Believe or be damned."

There are no reasons to be given with commandments; if there were reasons, they would suffice, but inasmuch as there are no good reasons at hand, a commandment covers the case.

In some vague way Mr. Jones feels the necessity of some sort of explanation for authoritative morality, and the best reasons he can give are that the grounds of morality "lie beyond the natural and can be only spiritually discerned." Come off, Mr. Jones. You are preaching to us, you are dogmatizing, and giving us cant. When you assert such things, you elude logic, fact, and reason; you go into your hole and draw it in after you, and while it vexes us to have you do so, we have, however, one comfort left, and that is, that you will stay there.

Why have you said so little by way of explaining the grounds of your authoritative morality? I volunteer to answer that it is because you have no good reasons to give. The authority of the Bible is nothing, as it contains as much immorality, and more, than it does morality, taking these words in their ordinary sense. And the God of the Bible will not pass for good authority on the right and wrong of any question in these days, since in the past he has been so often on the wrong side himself.

In his last remark Mr. Jones says, "We sincerely hope that the (Secular) Union will favor us with the earliest copy of the prize manual that it can possibly send to this table," and we will add that we sincerely hope that Elder A. T. Jones will send us a clear statement of the grounds of morality based upon authority.
Oakland, Cal. W. S. BELL.

MR. BRADLAUGH HOME AGAIN.

Mr. Bradlaugh is home again. He is looking decidedly better and has put on some flesh. But he is far from being his old self. It is a pity he could not take a three months' instead of a six weeks' trip. He has his reasons for returning just now to the land of liberty—and rain and fog; but it will be a dreadful pity if he goes to work and overtakes his strength. He has the temperament of a man of action, and it must be hard for him to lie idle; yet his life is far too precious to waste, and we earnestly hope he will champ the bit, however impatiently, instead of starting off for the racecourse. Let him run when his strength comes back, and he will take many a prize before he retires from the field.

What struck us as most hopeful was the genial animation of Mr. Bradlaugh's face as he greeted us in his library on Tuesday. He was in good spirits, and that is half the battle. His trip had been a pleasant one, his reception in India was magnificent and touching, and he was naturally proud of the mementoes of his visit to dusky Ind. A beautiful rug lay on the floor; a fine shawl for Mrs. Bonner, sent by an Indian in memory of his own mother, hung from the back of a chair; and near by was a splendid silk turban, meant to give the "member for India" the appearance of a full-blown oriental. But these are only trifles. The principal things—caskets and other articles in silver and gold—had not yet arrived. They were being cleared, happily at the expense of the Indian Agency, and were coming on in a day or two. Mr. Bradlaugh has arranged to have them on view in the minor hall, upstairs, on February 16. Judging from the inventory, made out by Parsees in a good clerky hand, they will be well worth seeing. They will afterwards go to Northampton for inspection by Mr. Bradlaugh's constituents.

Now Mr. Bradlaugh has, for the first time in his life, a collection of plate, he will feel a new anxiety. Burglars don't go for books, but plate!—there is a fascination in the very word. Oh the lumpy feel of the swag, and the joys of the melting-pot! Mr. Bradlaugh will have to keep a good strong safe, and sometimes down at the House, about two o'clock in the morning, he will say to himself, "I hope the plate's all right."

Lecturing is out of the question with Mr. Bradlaugh for some time—no one knows how long. He has managed to cancel everything but an engagement at St. James's Hall, Manchester, which he will therefore fulfill. It is a mistake, however, if Mr. Bradlaugh will pardon our saying so. He ought not to go through the ordeal of three lectures in a monster hall in one day. If the engagement must be kept, we hope the lectures will be reduced to two.

Freethinkers will be pleased to see "the plate" on February 16, but ever so much more pleased to see Mr. Bradlaugh. Hearing about him is all very well, but they want to see him face to face. And it will be an eventful meeting. The old general—old in service at least—will bid farewell to the army. Fate beckons him away; and he must lay down the leadership. Would that it might be otherwise, but "there is no struggling against fate." The parting will be pathetic to both sides. Let it not be supposed, however, that Mr. Bradlaugh leaves us in any other sense than as our active leader. His sympathies will be with us, he will share our convictions, he will rejoice in our success, he will remain a member of our society, he will advise us in our difficulties, and he will stand by us in any dark hour of persecution. This mitigates the pang of separation. We lose our leader but only as a leader; not as a friend, not as a comrade, not as a counsellor; and though he cannot, alas, ride at our head, we can still say, "He is ours."—The Freethinker.

RELIGION.

Religion is not innate. The uneducated deaf mute has no idea of a supreme being, or of worship, in his mind.

Religion is a purely human invention, a theoretical machine, originally contrived by a few interested men, for selfish purposes, the parts and ramifications of which machine have been constantly added to and increased by succeeding men for ages, until now it has become of the most complex character.

The theory upon which this machine was based and built was and is absolutely false; that of a creator and a creation, the former without, the latter with a beginning.

Of the former it is not necessary, for the purpose of this article, to speak.

Of the latter reference is made to the basic assertion that the earth is a created body, having formerly existed either as an atom, or as an amorphous mass of nebulous material, floating in space.

Why this earth should ever have existed in a dissolved form, or why it was not formed sooner in the cycles of eternity, face to face with an eternally existing creative law, has never been known, nor even asserted.

So far as reason is concerned it is just as admissible to conclude that the earth has always existed in its present form, substantially, as in any other.

When it is remembered that this earth is not even a number among worlds that pervading all space are therefore as numberless as space is boundless, therefore without beginning or end, it is irresistible to conclude that creation is impossible.

In vain has the telescope of the astronomer searched "the heavens" to discover a world in progress of formation from an amorphous mass. The nebula large enough to make a world have all been resolved into already existing astral worlds—suns.

That there are masses of matter revolving in solar systems similar to this, as there is in this, is doubtless a fact. But that the presence of that matter is any evidence of an exploded planet, or of so much surplus left over after the completion of the system, is unknown.

The discovery of the earth's third motion, its periodical turning upon its center, every cycle of the apsides; as do also the rest of the planets, and probably the sun himself, fully accounts for the presence of that matter in the system, as well as other phenomena pertaining to the earth, and to the solar system generally.

The central turn of the earth is in a direction at right angles with the plane of its diurnal revolution, and ultimately stops at ninety degrees, reversing the position of the poles and equator.

Upon the central turning of the earth it becomes partially demagnetized, owing to the sun-currents crossing at right angles their former course, but owing to the continuance of the same amount of centrifugal force, matter is thrown off the earth's surface, which is loosened in its change of form to suit the new conditions, and is retained within the attractive power of the solar system until gradually taken up by the different planets in their orbital revolutions.

Christian chronologists have dated the creation of the world back to the time of the "astronomer's great year"—3958 B. C.—a time, really, when the earth, owing to the revolution of the line of the apsides, was in perihelion at the time of the autumnal equinox.

That a terrible cataclysm took place at that time there is evidence to prove, but it was not the creation of the world: it was simply one of its regular periodical central turns.

The line of the apsides completes an entire tropical revolution in 20,903 years, and this cycle measures the periods of the earth's central turnings. The next occurs in the year 16,945 A. D., 15,055 years hence.

These facts thus utterly destroying the sole foundation upon which the superstructure of the Christian system of religion was and is based and built, what becomes of the system itself?

There have been great minds in all of the Christian ages, minds imbued with the spirit of all candor and fairness, which could not accept the phenomenal tales of the Bible as facts, for the reason that they knew supernaturalism to be false, and impossible of existence, because abhorred of nature. The Bible tale of a created earth, founded upon the ignorance of mankind in a dark unlettered age of the world, has always been the chief bulwark of the Christian system of "religion." Accepting this theory, all the rest were natural consequences that followed, the supernatural creation of man, and of all the entities below him in the scale of earthly existence.

Though wandering in the dark, beating blindly about in total ignorance of those laws which govern the motions of the earth in their entirety, the intuitive innate consciousness of the higher intelligence of mankind has led it to reject this supernaturalism, and to welcome evolution as a possible factor of truth.

Acceptance of the theory of the eternal existence of all of nature's laws makes plain the fact that the countless environments of all things have forever existed, and will forever exist as eternal principles. These environments are no more nor less than so many wombs of nature, as multitudinous as those numberless entities which are but the expressions of the life principle.

These environments differ from each other in form and in capacity, and consequently limit the expressions of the life principle, as attraction is limited in the expression of its power by the different things it grasps. The measures through which the life principle acts in the production of a blade of grass, or a humming bird, is totally different in form and capacity from those used in the production of an oak tree, or the condor of the Alps. Neither of these latter two could possibly be produced through the diminutive measures of the former, nor vice versa.

Abortions are the result of incomplete environments, all of which, it may here be remarked, are more or less complex in their composition. Evolution, properly so-called, is therefore an impossibility, for these environments are eternal, unchanging individual principles. The life principle, acting through monkey environments, can only produce, at the very best, but a perfect monkey; neither the form nor the capacity permits the production of a human being, and the environment itself, being an expression of an eternal principle, can never change. This principle and action holds good with regard to all produced entities. The worlds of space are the expression of eternal permanence, for the reason that absolute space possesses nothing, and productive environments of worlds are therefore impossible of existence. The transformation of nothing will produce nothing; the transformation of germs will produce living entities, and this is all there is of so-called creation, simply expression; and this expression is no result of a beginning, but it is the result of the action of eternal law forever expressing itself through eternally existing environments wherever found, and whose infinite varieties run parallel to all the other of nature.

Accepting the theory of a creation, and rejecting the theory of supernatural action, was the parent of evolution.

Accepting the theory of eternal permanence renders unnecessary the theory of evolution, or of supernatural action (an impossibility), and makes plain the assertion that there is no beginning or ending to human or other existence as a family.

This foundation possesses the indestructible solidity of nature, and upon its common sense may take its stand, side by side with truth, with no fear of ever being shaken, much less overturned.

Religion is therefore a baseless fabric. There is no necessity for worship. There is necessity for knowledge of nature's laws, for by them we are governed, and their rule is unchanging and inflexible. They never forgive.

It needs not the vision of a seer to predict a grand time coming when religion shall surrender to knowledge, the scientist shall supplant the priest, and the temples of knowledge stand on the fallen fanes of human beliefs. Then an eternal farewell to the sombre error of the ages. Requiescat in pace.

MARSHAL WHEELER.

Bound volumes of FREETHOUGHT, 1889, $3.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA'S SUNDAY LAWS.

To justify their effort to secure the enactment of a Sunday law for the District of Columbia, the plea is made that the District has no Sunday law; and that to rescue this part of the United States from heathenism there must be enacted a civil Sunday law compelling people to act as though they were religious, and prohibiting everybody from doing any work on Sunday in order to prevent people from being forced to labor on that day. But this is all a hoax, the District of Columbia has a Sunday law; but for obvious reasons they dare not try to enforce it as it is.

The way it all comes about is this: The colony of Maryland had a Sunday law, enacted in 1723. When the colony became the state of Maryland the same laws continued. Then when that portion of Maryland was set off which became the property of the United States under the title of the District of Columbia, and subject to the jurisdiction of Congress, the following statute was enacted by Congress:

SEC. 92. The laws of the state of Maryland not inconsistent with this title, as the same existed on the twenty-seventh day of February, eighteen hundred and one, except as since modified or repealed by act of Congress or by authority thereof, or until so modified or repealed, continue in force within the District.—Revised Statutes District of Columbia, P. 9.

The law of Maryland (October, 1723), relative to Sunday was then as follows:

AN ACT,

TO PUNISH BLASPHEMERS, SWEARERS, DRUNKARDS, AND SABBATH BREAKERS, AND FOR REPEALING THE LAWS HERETOFORE MADE FOR THE PUNISHING OF SUCH OFFENDERS.

Be it enacted by the right honorable the lord proprietor, by and with the advice and consent of his lordship's governor, and the upper and lower houses of assembly, and the authority of the same, That if any persons shall hereafter, within this province, wittingly, maliciously, and advisedly, by writing or speaking, blaspheme or curse God, or deny our Savior Jesus Christ to be the Son of God, or shall deny the Holy Trinity, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, or the Godhead of any of the three persons, or the unity of the Godhead, or shall utter any profane words concerning the Holy Trinity, or any of the persons thereof, and shall be thereof convict by verdict, of confession, shall, for the first offense, be bored through the tongue and fined twenty pounds sterling to the lord proprietor to be applied to the use of the county where the offence shall be committed, to be levied on the offender's body, goods and chattels, lands or tenements, and in case the said fine cannot be levied, the offender to suffer six months' imprisonment without bail or mainprize: and that for the second offence, the offender being thereof convict as aforesaid, shall be stigmatized by burning in the forehead with the letter B and fined forty pounds sterling to the lord proprietor, to be applied and levied as aforesaid, and in case the same cannot be levied, the offender shall suffer twelve months' imprisonment without bail or mainprize; and that for the third offence, the offender being convict as aforesaid, shall suffer death without the benefit of the clergy.

SEC. 2. And be it enacted, that every person that shall hereafter profanely swear or curse in the presence and hearing of any magistrate, minister, the commissary-general, secretary, sheriff, coroner, provincial or county clerk, vestryman, church-warden, or constable, or be convicted thereof before any magistrate, by the oath of one lawful witness, or confession of the party, shall, for the first oath or curse, be fined two shillings and sixpence current money; and for every oath or curse after the first, five shillings like money, to be applied to the use aforesaid.

Sections 3 to 9 relate to drunkards and the enforcement of the law.

SEC. 10. And be it enacted, That no person whatsoever shall work or do any bodily labor on the Lord's day, commonly called Sunday, and that no person having children, servants, or slaves, shall command, or wittingly, or willingly suffer any of them to do any manner of work or labor on the Lord's day (works of necessity and charity always excepted), nor shall suffer or permit any children, servants, or slaves, to profane the Lord's day by gaming, fishing, fowling, hunting, or unlawful pastimes or recreations; and that every person transgressing this act, and being thereof convict by the oath of one sufficient witness, or confession of the party before a single magistrate, shall forfeit two hundred pounds of tobacco, to be levied and applied as aforesaid.

SEC. 11. And be it likewise enacted, That no house-keeper shall sell any strong liquor on Sunday (except in case of absolute necessity), or suffer any drunkenness, gaming, or unlawful sports, or recreations, in his or her house, on pain of forfeiting two thousand pounds of tobacco to his lordship, one half to the use aforesaid, and the other half to him that will sue for the same, to be recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, wherein no essoin, protection or wager of law shall be allowed.

SEC. 12. And be it enacted, That every parish clerk within this province shall procure a copy of this act, which the county clerks are hereby required to suffer the parish clerks to take without fee or reward, for which he shall be allowed in the parish fifty pounds of tobacco, and that the same shall be read four times a year, viz., on some Sunday in March, in June, in September, and in December, by every minister within this province, in their respective parish churches, between divine service and sermon, on pain of forfeiting one thousand pounds of tobacco for every omission, one half to the lord proprietor, for the use as aforesaid, and the other half to him who will sue for the same, to be recovered by action for debt, bill, plaint, or information, wherein no essoin, protection, or wager of law shall be allowed.—Laws of the District of Columbia, pp. 136-138.

These statutes have never been either repealed or modified by any act of Congress. On the contrary, provision has been made for their strict enforcement. The Revised Statutes of the District of Columbia says:

SEC. 335. It shall be the duty of the board of police at all times of the day or night within the boundaries of said police district—

* * * * *
Ninth, To see that all laws relating to the observance of Sunday are promptly enforced; and

Tenth, To enforce and obey all laws and ordinances in force in the District, or any part thereof, which are properly applicable to police or health, and not inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter.—Revised Statutes District of Columbia, p. 40.

It therefore stands conclusively proved that the District of Columbia has a full and sufficient Sunday law. But there is a serious difficulty about its enforcement. Although according to the act of Congress all these laws are of force, they cannot be enforced. The first one—the one relating to blaspheming—is clearly and doubly unconstitutional, in that (1) in forbidding a denial of the trinity it prohibits the free exercise of religion, and (2) it inflicts cruel and unusual punishments.

Then the Sunday statute being an inseparable part of the act, bears upon its very face the distinct religious features of all such legislation. The Sunday law advocates therefore have not the courage to undertake the enforcement of a Sunday law that stands so distinctly and inseparably connected with the barbarisms of a religious despotism. Consequently they hope to get the provisions of this Sunday section separated from its original and proper connection, by advocating the civil Sunday, and securing the passage by Congress of an act to prevent persons being forced to labor on Sunday.

By comparing the Blair and the Breckinridge Sunday bills with the foregoing Sunday section, it is easy to see the family likeness. The Blair bill, Section 5, reproduces that feature of the old law, Section 11, which proposes to hire people to sue the man who works on Sunday; with this difference, however, that whereas the old law gave half the fine imposed for Sunday work, the Blair bill gives all the earnings of the man who receives pay for Sunday work. There is another point in this reproduction of the old law that is worthy of notice: if it is not an intentional reproduction, it is to say the least

A MOST REMARKABLE COINCIDENCE.

Section 10 of the existing law imposes a fine of "two hundred pounds of tobacco," and the Breckinridge bill imposes a fine of "one hundred dollars;" Section 11 of the existing law imposes a fine of "two thousand pounds of tobacco," and Section 3 of the Blair bill allows a fine of "one thousand dollars." Now we find by inquiry of large dealers in tobacco in this city that the average retail price of average tobacco is fifty cents a pound. Thus the two hundred pounds of tobacco of Section 10 of the existing law at fifty cents a pound make the one hundred dollars of the Breckinridge bill; and the two thousand pounds of tobacco of Section 11 of the existing law at fifty cents a pound make the one thousand dollars of the Blair bill! We say again that if this point in the two Sunday bills now before Congress was not intentional, it is certainly a most remarkable coincidence; while the other points of resemblance between the old and the new bear strongly, almost irresistibly, to the conclusion that the old law was before the eyes and in the minds of those who originated the two Sunday bills that are now pending in Congress.

What is the use of the Sunday-law advocates any longer talking about "civil" Sunday laws? Sunday observance is religious and nothing else. It never was anything else and it never can be made anything else. Sunday laws are religious laws. They are laws enforcing the observance of a religious institution. They belong with an established religion. When, in the face of the evidence here presented, the advocates of Sunday laws, either State or National, make the plea that it is only civil Sunday laws that they want, the people will know just what to think of the plea. And, in view of the evidence here presented, when men advocate a Sunday law, either state or national, upon any plea whatever, the people may know just what estimate to put upon the plea, and also upon the men who make it.—A. T. J. in the American Sentinel.

ITEMS FROM SWEDEN.

THE LAND OF CHURCH-FEARING OSCAR THE SECOND.

TRUST IN THE LORD ALONE.—Recently a woman in Sundsvall applied for a life-insurance policy. It was granted her, but before she could take it out she had to go to the pastor and get a certificate of her age. Instead of this the pastor gave her such a severe lesson about the wickedness of being life-insured that she declared she would not risk the salvation of her soul by taking out the policy.

SEQUEL OF PIETY.—On the 8th of August last year, at 5 o'clock P.M., a conflagration occurred near Norkoping. By tolling the church chimes the firemen in Norkoping could soon have rushed to assistance, but divine service was being held, and therefore the alarm was postponed till 6 o'clock. The fire had meanwhile destroyed the country residence Johannisberg, the proprietor of which, who was sick in bed, was so badly burnt that it nearly cost him his life. The house was burnt to the ground.

THE LIBERALS NOT DISCOURAGED.—Last year V. Lennstrand was forbidden to lecture any more in Visby on account of the contents of two lectures he had given in that place before. The authorities had no legal right to undertake this step; but what do they care when the question concerns a heretic? Notwithstanding the prohibition, however, the lecture took place the 14th of August. A garden was rented a little outside the city, and tickets were distributed gratis to all who wished to come. To those who were thus invited Lennstrand delivered his lecture. The police who were not invited were obliged to stay outside.

A few days later, Sunday, the 18th of August, V. Lennstrand lectured on board the steamer Brage. There was no hall or place whatever to be got in or near Yrebro. But the Liberals were not irresolute. They rented the steamer Brage for an excursion to Lappe. After having anchored there, the lecture was delivered to as many as could find room aboard.—From Fritankaren, Stockholm, Sweden.

IS RELIGION A FAILURE?

That question depends upon the God you worship and creeds you believe in. If you worship the book-made God described in the Bible and the prevailing religious creeds, I think that both religion and the God worshiped are stupendous failures, for as a general over the hosts of heaven God was not as competent a general as was General Grant in our late rebellion, and as humanitarians we made a great improvement in the treatment of our enemies. God turned his enemies out of heaven; our traitors returned to their homes and were buried with their fathers. And as a parenthesis I would say if I could command omnipotent power one second of time I would have sent fire from heaven (or the other place) and consumed that rebel flag so peacefully folded on Jeff Davis's casket, and would have turned the twenty-surpliced priests then and there to pillars of salt, if I had not lost the receipt applied to Mother Lot.

Again, this God and religion are failures in making man as the masterpiece of God's mechanism, because God, the maker of man, could not direct him to the place he intended him to occupy, old Nick being met at every cross-road in man's journey of life and directed by him to the wrong place almost every time. Man as a mechanic will make a machine to run as he wills it to run.

Then as a reformer to change the habits of the people from their sins God was a failure, as related in the story of the cities of the plain, where Mother Lot was turned into salt, and Father Lot, his daughters, and a jug of whisky landed safe in the caves in the mountains, and the cities were consumed by fire from heaven. My pen refuses to record the acts of Lot and his daughters, but I will unhesitatingly say the plot, call it by what name you may, was a failure.

But now let us pause and contemplate the God of nature and the religion of humanity, and question their prophet, Euclid. Did they ever tell a lie or make a mistake? No; theirs is the true religion. Question them in any part of the world, and you receive the same answer, because their propositions are self-sustaining. They prove themselves every time. All that mankind needs to-day is a thinking-cap to study out this road to salvation, and the first thing to do to get a fair start on that road is to make an honest God, for that would be man's noblest work, name him the God of humanity, and issue his two commandments, not to sin against yourself; not to sin against your neighbor.

The power of this God and this religion is the agreement among men. Let us cry aloud, Vox populi vox Dei. Then let our enemies tremble, for if we, the people, can stand together we will soon learn that the power of agreement among men is the power that moves our political world by the vote of the people, as lightning does the will of God. This God of nature and religion of humanity must become as great a success as the old past religion has been a failure. Let us therefore establish a new religion; let the trinity of our God be the God of Nature, the Goddess of Liberty, and the Goddess of Humanity. Let maternity be the law of the land; let us try and have our children born right, saving the expense and trouble of the preacher to have them born again. Let us old sinners go and take the money used to convert the old sinners in our land, and give it to a maternal fund, so the mothers will not bear children with want birthmarks stamped in their being. This religion would bring forth a race of men that would not have failure written on their brows.

I would like to repeat a verse from Addison explaining a fact that never fails:

The unwearied sun, from day to day,
Does his creator's power display;

And when the evening shades prevail
The moon takes up the wondrous tale;

Forever singing as they shine,
"The hand that made us is divine."

DEPUY.

Elder Harrison.

Mr. Harrison likes billiards and plays a game or two with "Lije" Halford almost every day. Not many years ago an elder in the Presbyterian church playing billiards would have caused a painful shock to the religious community. Pious people would have held him guilty of a mortal sin. But times have changed; more liberal views of such matters prevail. Mr. Harrison himself is singularly free from that Puritanic narrowness which once denied to church members many innocent amusements. He thinks it is no sin to play a game of billiards; he permits wine drinking at the White House. He sometimes spends Sunday in recreation, such as yachting and driving, instead of worship, and, notwithstanding that he is a Presbyterian elder and that recent synods of his church have denounced the theatre as one of the chief allurements of Satan, and enjoined Presbyterians to shun it, he is frequently seen at the Washington theatres. The religious austerity in which Mr. Harrison was trained is rapidly disappearing, and his own example is not an unimportant contributor to the fact.—Ex.

MRS. MATTIE P. KREKEL has the following lecture engagements in California:

Sacramento, March 16 (Sunday); Lodi, March 19, 20, 21; Stockton, March 23 (Sunday); Boulder Creek, March 25, 26, 27; Santa Cruz, March 28; San Jose, March 30 (Sunday afternoon); San Francisco, March 30 (Sunday evening); Hanford, April 3; Lemoore, April 5, 6; Norwalk, April 9, 10; Anaheim, April 12, 13 (Sunday); Orange, April 15, 16, 17; Santa Ana, April 19, 20 (Sunday); National City, April 23, 24, 25; San Diego, April 27 (Sunday); San Pasqual and Escondido, April 29, 30, and May 1; Los Angeles, May 4 (Sunday); Oleander, May 7; Livermore, May 11 (Sunday).

RELIGION AND PRAYERS.

These are but the relics of barbarous ages when man, in his utter ignorance, was nearest to the brute—in fact, was but a brute himself. As such, cowed down by the terrifying phenomena surrounding him, destroying life and vegetation by storms, lightning, floods, indiscriminate swallowing and engulfing by earthquakes, in cracks and fissures his abode, and the dearest of his kind—he in his helplessness and ignorance—uttered groans and sought for help and protection in the unseen powers by some kind of supplication. It did not matter that help never came, or as it is to-day, when all are praying during such calamity, those who get saved quietly attribute it to their praying. The savage also persevered in his groans and senseless utterings. Ignorant yet cunning schemers—in later days called priests—created forms of prayers and offerings by which the masses in their vicissitudes were to be controlled in appeasing the wrath of these unseen powers; and, to place the origin of the terrifying phenomena and to assist them in their schemes, revelations and Gods were manufactured, suiting and fittingly made to harmonize with the ignorance prevailing.

The invention of such wrathful deities was quite a masterstroke for the coming ages, for all the idlers and the drones have ever since embraced the opportunity of peddling blessings and salvations off, to live a life of luxury and ease and comfort on tithings taken from the faithful, trusting masses. To perpetuate such imposition is the everlasting labor of the priests. HOMÖ.

CHRONICLES OF SIMON CHRISTIANUS.

CHAPTER I.—CONTINUED.

ENTITLED COSMOS.

The Roadway.—The Preacher.—The Hymn.—Blunt.—Conversation on the Three-One.

34. And I perceived that when the man had made an end of these words, that he put forth his hand and drank somewhat from a vessel that was hard by, and the color of that which he drank was as the color of water, but the smell thereof mightily assaulted my nostrils.

35. And I, Philo Aletheia, would barter mine ears for a false obolus to know what it was that he drank.

36. And when the man had finished drinking, he began to sing; and all the congregation with him. And they sang:

37. We praise our king to whom we know, the blessings of this life we owe. And for the hope (of which we boast) of joys to come, we'll praise the ghost.

38. We are his saints; he is our king, and loveth much to hear us sing. And when his praise employs our lungs, he maketh angels hold their tongues.

39. Then sing and shout, ye sons of grace; awake the echoes of this place. And by your voices strong and sweet, alarm the foe in his retreat.

40. If sinners will not join in praise, then we'll condemn their wicked ways. And thank our king, as we condemn, that we are not as bad as them.

41. And they who scoff at us to-day, and will not tread the king's highway, shall be o'erwhelmed in fire and flame, and live for aye a burning shame.

42. And when they had made an end of singing, I saw a certain man, whose name was Blunt, and oftentimes I perceived that he fell a laughing at the preacher and those who were with him.

43. And the preacher grew angry, and said unto the man, Wherefore laughest thou? Verily, thy laughter is unseemly, and not fitting before the servants of the holy one.

44. And Blunt made answer and said, Mayhap thou wilt tell me who this reverend holy one may be.

45. Then said the preacher, He is the king of the great city beyond the river, and my master.

46. And Blunt said, Prithee, what manner of man is he.

47. He is not a man, said the other.

48. And Blunt said, Then, mayhap, he is a woman?

49. He is not, said the other.

50. Is he, then, a child? said Blunt.

51. He is not a child, said the preacher.

52. Then, said Blunt, needs must, he is an eunuch, or a beast.

53. Thou hast an unruly tongue, and thy speech is unseemly, said the preacher. He is neither eunuch or beast.

54. Then, said Blunt, I beseech thee show him to me, that I may know what metal he is of; my very soul longeth to have acquaintance with him.

55. No man can see his face and live, said the preacher.

56. Then said Blunt, I have heard of a certain knave, Moses by name, who saw his rump, do thou, therefore, show me that, and I am contented.

57. Thou art unseemly, I tell thee, said the other.

58. Nay, said Blunt, of a verity I do earnestly desire to know this thy master. Prithee, what years hath he numbered?

59. His years are infinite, said the preacher.

60. Then said Blunt, Truly thou astonishest me; he is somewhat of a greybeard, then, and doubtless hath a noble family?

61. He hath an only-begotten son, said the other.

62. And Blunt said, Is his wife yet alive?

63. He hath no wife, said the other.

64. And Blunt spoke again saying, Ha, is it so, then he somewhat of a rover, and sporteth among the maidens, or how came he by his son.

65. And the preacher made answer and said, The son was from everlasting.

66. And Blunt was astonished and said, What, then, is the son of the age of the father? And this ghost of whom thou sang, what manner of thing is it?

67. And the preacher answered, saying, It proceedeth from the father and the son.

68. And Blunt said, Then, I beseech thee, tell which of the twain is the mother? And, while thou art speaking, tell me, why it is a ghost?

69. And the preacher answered him not a word.

70. And Blunt inquired further, saying, Of what sex is the ghost? And the preacher said, He is of none.

71. And Blunt said, Ah, then, he is doubtless an eunuch, and, mayhap, of the same age as the father and son? And the preacher said, I know not.

72. And Blunt said, Verily, it is a strange family; prithee, what authority hath the son in the kingdom? And the preacher answered, saying, He is king.

73. And Blunt said, What, hath he then deposed the old man? And the other answered, Nay.

74. And Blunt said, Then there are two kings? And the other said, Nay. And Blunt said, Yea, verily, thou saidest the father was king, and the son was king, therefore there are two kings.

75. And the preacher was angry, and said, I tell thee the three are but one.

76. And Blunt opened his mouth again, saying, Three, didst thou say, then is the ghost also a king? And the preacher said, Yea.

77. And Blunt said, Then, needs must, there are three kings, for one and one, and one over, being well and duly counted, will be no less than three, even though the sea itself be thirsty.

78. And the preacher answered, saying, I tell thee there is but one king.

79. And Blunt said, Mayhap thou meanest that the three do but altogether make a king, each being but a third part of a king.

80. And the preacher made answer and said, I tell thee, blasphemer, they are each of them kings, having all power and dominion.

81. And Blunt said, Then, how sayest thou there is but one king? And the preacher, answered, There is but one king.

82. And Blunt said, But thou saidest there were three kings? And the other said, There are three kings.

83. And Blunt said, Seest thou yonder ass? And the other said, I see it. And Blunt said, Seest thou this ass also? And the other said, Yea.

84. And Blunt said, Let, then, this ass be the father, and that the son, and thou shalt be the ghost; canst thou, then, be this ass, and that ass be this ass, and this ass be thee and the other two asses also?

85. And the preacher said, Yea.

86. And Blunt spake again, saying, And canst thou and the other ass be this one ass? And the preacher said, Yea.

87. And Blunt spake further, saying, And can that ass, and this, and thee, be no other than this? And the other said, Yea.

88. And Blunt spake yet again, saying, And wouldst thou be no greater an ass for having the other two joined with thee? And the other said, Never a whit.

89. And Blunt said, And there would be one ass only, and not three? And the preacher said, Yea.

90. And Blunt said, And yet there would be three asses, and not one only? And the preacher said, Yea, of a surety, there would be three.

91. And Blunt said, Tell me, I beseech thee, dost thou comprehend that which thou sayest? And the other made answer, saying, It is not needful, 'tis sufficient that I believe it.

92. And Blunt was wroth, and cried out, saying, Pack thee! pack thee! even as thou sayest, thou art a thrice-told ass! Get thee gone! Away! Avaunt! Avast! Begone! lest I vomit upon thee, for I am sick, even to the death, of thy babbling. Get thee gone, thou three-fold ass, I say, and take thy kings with thee—and, prithee, smother them and thyself in the nearest dunghill.

93. And the preacher looked upon Blunt, and was exceedingly dismayed, and his visage changed, and became yellow, and, mayhap, green; I cannot tell, though I steadfastly regarded him.

94. And the preacher went hastily aside.

To be Continued.

Mr. Hyland at the Washington Convention.

FREETHOUGHT FRIENDS: Please accept a few thoughts gathered on the way to the Convention which organized Washington State Secular Union. Leaving home by train, in a heavy rain, I came to Forest Grove on a sled over a foot of snow, and stopped at the Forest Grove Hotel and inquired about the situation of Secularism. They informed me that the people of that vicinity has raised a large amount of money for, as they supposed, a Secular school, but when they found that the Congregationalists, by purely Christian methods, had pocketed their money and captured their school and were only interested in teaching catechism and the many tricks of theological schools that rowdies delight in, they must then cast about for some practical school if any were to be found; but Secular schools are not here. So the next best must be tried, let the result be as it may. Some tried the Vancouver Catholic school and pronounced it far superior to the Protestant Bible-stuffing concern. Yet in our benighted Grove, I found some noble workers for humanity, although our friend, Mr. Todd, was dangerously sick, and deep snow and distance prevented my calling on them, and Mrs. Todd was prevented from coming to hear that most noble speaker, Mrs. Krekel, who delivered a lecture on Sunday morning, and in the evening another. The latter was the most pointed and logical lecture it has ever been my lot to hear, the speaker closing by pointing at a splendid picture of Thomas Paine and giving more reasons why we should honor the day that he was born than my small skull could comprehend, and filling the large audience with love and admiration for the subject and the speaker. Monday, the 27th, we ate in Portland, 363 Third street, home and place of business of that most noted banner-maker, Miss Blaisdell, and where also Mrs. Krekel assisted in the preparations for a night ride to Seattle. Three delegate's tickets were procured, and baggage checked, and we were lost in the dark, hunting the way from the street car to the depot, yet with smiling countenances we got there on time and met the representatives of Seattle, and the delegates of the state, all working in unison and harmony, while love and fraternity beamed from every eye, especially from that of the editor and publisher of the Snohomish "Eye."

In our conferences none seemed backward in denouncing those members of the legislature who voted for chaplains, as perjurers, as they had already been sworn to support the constitution. Those also were denounced who proposed to pass an appropriation for incidentals large enough to cover the chaplain's claim as deceivers and frauds! Then among the most enjoyable features was the presentation of the banner by Miss Blaisdell, whose industrious hands had made it, and whose spritely intellect made her capable and willing to deliver a most elegant address upon the presentation of the banner, which was straightway adopted, by unanimous vote, as the standard of the Washington State Secular Union.

January 29th, in the evening, Mrs. Reynolds gave us a recitation of writings, deeds, and sacrifices of Thomas Paine, accompanied by the date of each, and in such eloquent style that any fair-minded individual could not help saying, "To the shades with your saving Nazarene who neither wrote, did, nor sacrificed anything beneficial to humanity."

January 30th, at night, Mrs. Krekel was expected to lecture from the text, "Natural Morality Superior to Religious Morality." She had recovered from the hardships and vexation of a night's ride, in which she and Miss Blaisdell were crowded not only from the berths that had been procured for them in advance, but off of the car entirely on to a side track, necessitating their changing cars in the night, whereas they paid for a through sleeper. We don't like Christian morality even when applied by a railroad company. After announcing her subject, Mrs. Krekel astonished her greatest admirers by the masterly manner in which she presented so delicate a subject. She spoke to the point and logically proved every step, so that every word, gesture, and motion fell upon that vast audience with irresistible force.

B. F. HYLAND.

Darwin on Religion.

The late Mr. Darwin had been told by a student at Jena that in reading his works his (the student's) faith had perished and had been asked to state his own. Mr. Darwin penned the following short reply:

"SIR: I am very busy and am an old man in delicate health and have not time to answer your questions fully even assuming that they are capable of being answered at all. Science and Christ have nothing to do with each other, except so far as the habit of scientific investigation makes a man cautious about accepting any proofs. As far as I am concerned, I do not believe that any revelation has ever been made. With regard to a future life, every one must draw his own conclusions from vague and contradictory probabilities. Wishing you well, I remain your obedient servant,

CHARLES DARWIN."

"Down, June 5, 1879.

A Pacific Anarchist.

The most brilliant, if not the most powerful Anarchist in New York, says the St. Louis Republic, is Miss Dr. Kelly in Seventh street. She is a young woman of remarkable beauty, culture, and intellectuality. She is a very able physician, and enjoys a large and lucrative practice. She has been a student of political and social economy since her girlhood, and has at her tongue's end the works of Lasalle, Marx, Fourier, Godin, Blind, Mill, Holyoake, and Herbert Spencer. She has a personal following of about 800, whose faith in her is almost fanaticism. She is what is called a "pacific Anarchist," and does not believe in dynamite, poison, or bloodshed, but advocates the conversion of the community by lectures, essays, pamphlets, and books.

W. S. BELL lectured in the Dama Hall, Oakland, Cal., last Sunday, on Sunday legislation. Mr. A. H. Schou introduced Mr. Bell to the audience. Mr. Putnam lectures in the same place March 2. An effort will be made to organize a Secular Union in Oakland. Let our Liberal friends give Mr. Putnam a good audience.

THE "Individualist" desires to send a sample copy to each and every subscriber of FREETHOUGHT. The next number of that journal will contain matter of especial interest to the readers of this. Send for sample copy at once. Address F. Q. Stuart, proprietor The Individualist, 1653 Blake street, Denver, Colo.

WE are pleased to note that Mrs. E. D. Slenker, or Aunt Elmina, as she is affectionately called by thousands, has become an editor. Her paper is the Plaindealer, of Hastings, Mich., whereof Mr. Francis Graves is publisher.

READ on page 141 the list of premiums offered for new subscribers to FREETHOUGHT.

The Truth Seeker Annual

AND

FREETHINKERS' ALMANAC.

1890—(E.M. 290).

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS: Calander for 1890.
 Freethought in the United States. 1889.
 Faded Flowers (poem) By J. E. Remsburg
 The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue, by T. B. Wakeman.
 Mostly Fools W. Stewart Ross (Saladin)
 Record of the Spanish Inquisition.
 Dates of the Fabrica in of some Roman Catholic Dogmas.
 The Boiler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a moral. Helen H. Gardener.
 The Middle Ages, Illustrated.—The Priest, the Supernatural World, the Reformation, Future Terrors.
 The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated.
 Freethought Journals in the United States.
 In Search of a Spirit, E. M. Macdonald.
 Why I Left the Church, Hugh O. Pentecost

115 pages, price 25 cents.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year. The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND.

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and 26.

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Win. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1463 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.

Rapp & DeBarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment, cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.

Otto Sins, 320 Kearny st.

The Infant Understanding.

Some very funny answers are occasionally met with by people who have to do with school children, no matter of what age.

A government inspector was questioning a class of children, about six years of age, in one of the poorest London infant schools. The questions were on general matters, to test the intelligence of the youngsters. He got to the subject of birds, and found that most of the children only knew the names of two birds, the sparrow and the canary. "What are those birds that sing high up in the air, right in the clouds?" he asked. After a few moment's hesitation, he got the answer from a little girl—"Angels, sir."

Another inspector was questioning some boys on "Casabianca," the poem prepared for his visit, and asked, "Why did the boy stand there on the burning deck?" "Because it was too hot to sit down," was the answer he got from one boy.

"Give some account of the habits and customs of the early Britons" was the subject of an essay given to a sixth standard. One boy finished up with the following: "They slept together in caves, lying on the floor, quite naked, and with no covering over them, for they was so eminently social."

Perhaps the funniest answers are got in response to scriptural questions. Here are one or two examples. An account of the life of Joseph contained the following: "When his brothers saw him, they said, 'Behold, this dreamer cometh. Come let us kill him.' So they killed him, and took a goat and dipped it in his blood, and took it to their father, and said, 'We have found this. Tell us whether it be thy son or no.'"

In answer to the question, "How was Lot's wife punished?" one answer read: "She was turned into a pillar of salt by day and a pillar of fire by night."

The following has been given as the work of a sixth standard boy: "And Jezebel painted her face and tired her hair, and sat at the window of the palace. And Jehu rode up and said, 'Throw her down.' And they threw her down. And Jehu said 'Do it a second time;' and they did it a second time. And he said, 'Do it a third time.' And they did it a third time, and they gathered up the fragments that remained—twelve basketsful."

ONE very cold Sunday, a minister, in order to terrify or edify his congregation, likened the everlasting punishment to the torments of the wicked, in thick ribbed ice. On being taxed with the heterodox nature of such a view, he replied, cannily, "D'ye think I would try to scare sinners this could weather by making them think about a hot fire?"

EDITOR to printer—You've ruined me. In describing the great ball, I wrote that the famous lecturer on dress wore nothing that was remarkable. You've printed it: "Mrs. B. wore nothing. That was remarkable." Get your money of the cashier and go. We've no use for a man like you around here.

THE Rev. Dr. Chamberlain, of Brooklyn, told a laughable story in the course of his address before the Evangelical alliance. He said that a little Brooklyn girl returned home from Sunday school in a puzzled state of mind because she had heard there that Jesus was a Jew. She appealed to her mother for a confirmation of the report. "Yes, my dear, Jesus was a Jew," said her mother. "Well, mamma, he was the son of God, was he not?" "Yes, my dear." "Well," said the little one, "I don't see how it ever happened that Jesus was a Jew, when God himself was a Presbyterian."

AN elder was reading and commenting upon the 34th Psalm, and the book being printed in the old style, when he came to verse thirteen, which reads; "Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile," he read it "squeaking girls," and then remarked by way of exposition, "It is evident from this passage that scripture does not absolutely forbid kissing, but, as in Christianity everything is to be done decently and in order, we are here encouraged by the passage to choose rather those girls that take it quietly, and not those who squeak under the operation."

THE SAN FRANCISCO

FREETHOUGHT * * *

* * * SOCIETY.

Union Square Hall, 421 Post Street.

PROGRAMME FOR MARCH, 1890.

March 2—Debate. Question: Is Spiritualism a Demonstrated Fact? Prof. D. C. Seymour affirms, S. P. Putnam denies. General discussion.

March 9—"Freethought Around the World," by Lillian Leland, author of "Traveling Alone."

March 16—Lecture. Prof. W. S. Bell.

March 23—Lecture. "The Rights of Man," George Cummings.

March 30—Lecture. "Is Man Immortal," Mrs. Addie L. Ballou.

A cordial invitation is extended to all. Seats free. Sunday evenings at 8.

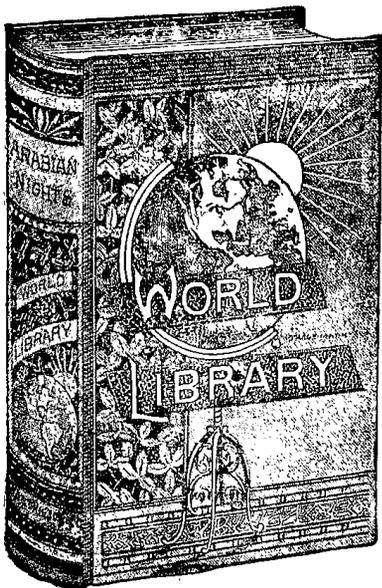

WASHBURN'S WORKS.

The False Teachings of the Christian Church. Price, 10 cents.

Sunday and the Sabbath. Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. Price, 10 cents.

The Catholic Church and the Public Schools. Price, 5 cents.

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRAIG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY. A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be Obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESS.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last an heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavilion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the Invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir. Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portrayal of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. Prescott.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll,) with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNN; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated late scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POET'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

F. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR.

C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

- COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.
- R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.
- PARKER PILLSBURY.
- JOHN E. REMSBURG.
- CHARLES WATTS.
- ROBERT C. ADAMS.
- J. H. BURNHAM.
- JOHN PECK.
- THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.
- H. O. PENTECOST.

- HELEN H. GARDENER.
- ARTHUR B. MOSS.
- L. K. WASHBURN.
- CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
- LUCY N. COLMAN.
- FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
- JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
- MATTIE P. KREKEL.
- W. F. JAMIESON.
- SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion, or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35. for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
• Gold do., $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
“ Forks	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
“ Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded.

Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Fotts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M.D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.20.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.
The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

WANTED. YOUNG man (25) wishes situation on a farm or ranch. Willing to make himself generally useful. Temperate, good reference. Address this office. [4c]

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOYNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.
12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

THE SABBATH IMPOSTURE.

BY HARRY HOOVER.

Showing that there is no authority for the Sunday laws, either Human or "Divine."

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies 50 cents. Address this office.

PUTNAM'S WORKS.

The New God. 10c. The New God was made by an artist hand, guided by a poet soul. It is as perfect as sculpture. The creator makes his "god" in his own image, and breathes into his nostrils the breath of his own life.—L. K. Washburn.

Golden Throne. A romance. Price, $1 00. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words, the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Walls and Wanderings. A new American story. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1 00. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—John Swinton's Paper.

Prometheus: A Poem. Price, $1. "It is crammed with life, thought and profound emotion, poured forth, it seems to me, with extraordinary richness and beauty."—Dr. Henry W. Bellows.

Gottlieb: His Life; or, Love Triumphant. A Romance of Earth, Heaven and Hell. Price, 25 cents. "To describe all the beauties of this simple, yet touchingly told little tale, would be a work of which I confess myself utterly incapable. To realize what it is, you must read the book itself. I have never read anything so exquisitely beautiful and good in all my life before."—Elmina Drake Slenker.

A REGULAR EDUCATED AND LEGALLY QUALIFIED PHYSICIAN, and the most successful (in his specialty) as his practice will surely prove. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men such as seminal weakness, impotency, &c., resulting from indiscretion and ignorance of youth. Those who are alling should send ten (10 cents for his book, "Private Counselor," setting forth an external Application—

A POSITIVE CURE

The book is worth many times its cost, and should be read by the young for instruction and the afflicted for relief.

All Communications Strictly Confidential.

Plain Envelopes used. The book spoken of sent sealed. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, NEW JERSEY. Say where you saw this Advertisement.

[From the Washington National View.]

Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, New Jersey offers his valuable services to all those in need of a kind, sympathetic and skillful physician. Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been assailed and exposed by the press, but, Dr. Fellows, a specialist, in his line, stands foremost in his profession, and the encomiums showered upon him publicly as well as in private, are flattering evidences of the high appreciation and confidence his long and conscientious devotion to his specialties in his profession have so justly merited for him, and it is safe to trust him.

A Testimonial.

WEST LIBERTY, O., Aug. 12, 1888.

DR. R. P. FELLOWS—Dear Sir: The remedy you sent is working like a charm. I am completely surprised the way it acts upon the organs. Have only been using it one week, and that weakness, (seminal weakness) is coming out all right. Yours respectfully, J. R.

REMARKS—The above is a fair sample of the hundreds of testimonials received from all parts of the United States, from young, middle-aged and elderly men, suffering from various kinds of sexual complaints, but who are now cured by my External Application, the greatest of all known remedies for this class of diseases. As I stand out and out Liberal I trust the Freethinkers of the Land will give me their patronage, and not waste their time and money on Christian doctors
DR. FELLOWS.

PRINTING!

Having procured one of the best Presses manufactured and a large assortment of display type, and employing competent workmen, the Free-thought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

- Letter-heads,
- Bill-heads,
- Programmes,
- Envelopes,
- Business Cards,
- Postal Cards,
- Tickets,
- Placards,
- Receipts,
- Posters,
- Dodgers,
- Circulars,
- Etc. etc.

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 00
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm " " Diamond* 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, PUTNAM & MACDONALD, 64 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

GOD IN THE STATE

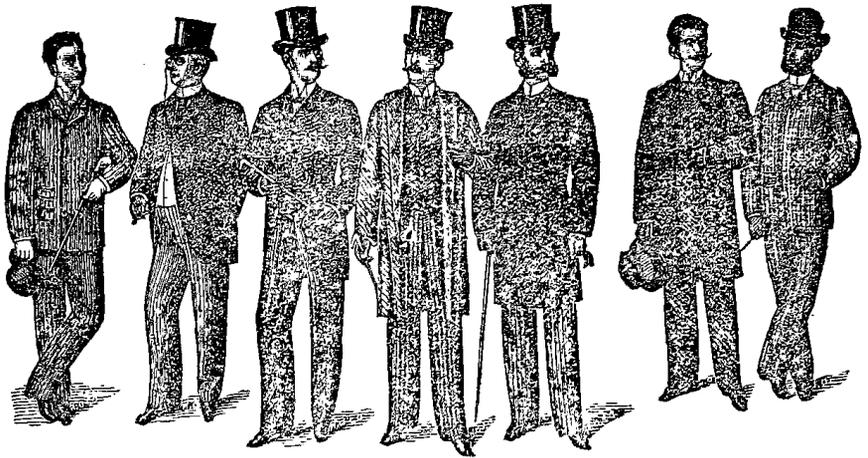

By E. A. Stevens, Ex-Secretary of the American Secular Union.

This is the best presentation of the argument against God in the Constitution, ever prepared in a pamphlet of its size.

Price, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies, 50 cents.

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard street, San Francisco.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....	$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....	35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....	6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.

OLIVER HINCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

P. A. CLARK. CHAS. W. CLARK

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS,
NURSERYMEN

Catalpas for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines. Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice. Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address CLARK BROS.,
P. O. Box C, San Jacinto, Cal.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma st., cor. 5th, S. F.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....	$1.50
Six Months.....	.75
Three Months.....	.50

EDITED BY
F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:
429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.
Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,
536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San Francisco.

Wm. W. NOBLE,
Merchant Tailor,
1222 STOCKTON ST.

Bet. Pacific and Broadway.

DRESS SUITS A SPECIALTY

Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass by.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,
Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

PLAIN HOME TALK

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

REMSBURG'S WORKS.

False claims. Price 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Anti-slavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic.

Fathers of the Republic Paine, Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. Price 15 cents.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

"Bible Contradictions," 15 cents.

Standard Scientific Works

Works by Alexander Bain.
English Composition and Rhetoric.....	$1.75
Education as a Science.....	1.75
Works by Charles Darwin.
Origin of Species, 2 vols.....	$4.00
Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....	2.00
Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....	4.50
Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....	2.00
Works by J. W. Draper.
History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....	$1.75
Works by Ernst Haeckel.
The History of Creation. 2 vols.....	$5.00
Works by Huxley.
Lay Sermons.....	$1.75
The Advance of Science.....	.25
American Addresses.....	1.25
More Criticisms on Darwin.....	.50
The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....	2.00
Works by John Stewart Mill.
Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....	$4.00
On Liberty.....	1.25
Works by Richard A. Proctor.
Other Worlds than Ours.....	$1.75
Our Place among Infinities.....	1.75
Light Science for Leisure Hours.....	1.75
The Moon.....	2.00
Works by Herbert Spencer.
Studies of Sociology.....	$1.50
Man versus the State.....	.30
First Principles.....	2.00
Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	4.00
Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	4.00
Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....	4.00
Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....	2.00
Universal Progress.....	2.00
Essay, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....	2.00
Education.....	1.25
Organic Evolution.....	.75
Works by Andrew D. White.
Paper-Money Inflation in France.....	$.50
The Warfare of Science.....	1.00
Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
Body and Mind.....	$1.50
Responsibility in Mental Disease.....	1.50
Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
Handbook of Household Science.....	$1.75
Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....	1.75
MISCELLANEOUS.
By Carl Marx.
Capital.....	$3.00
By Asa Gray.
Darwiniana.....	$2.00
By L. L. McLaughlin.
Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....	$3.50
By John B. Henck.
Field-Book for Railroad Engineers.....	$2.50
By C. Marcel.
Study of Languages.....	$1.25
By Lester F. Ward.
Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....	$5.00
By Frederick Overman.
A Treatise on Metallurgy.....	$5.00
B. F. G. Fairfield.
Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....	$1.25
By W. B. Carpenter.
Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....	$1.25
By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
Evolution.....	$1.50
By Sir John Lubbock.
Origin of Civilization.....	$5.00
By Charles A. Abbott.
A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....	$1.50
By Garrett P. Serviss.
Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....	$1.50
By Nathan Sheppard.
Darwinism Stated by Darwin Himself.....	$1.50
English as She is Spoken.....
English as She is Written.....	.30
Thos. Carlyle—His Life, Books, Theories.....	.30
Comedies for Amateur Acting.....	.30
The Distracted Young Preacher.....	.25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form, a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors. The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

I HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE
Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.
13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order. The Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is entirely damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thief-resisting. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that, ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only. Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future
Republic of North America
BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1. Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters

impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 10.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, MARCH 8, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - MARCH 8, 1890.

NEWS AND NOTES.

When I awoke Saturday morning, February 22, the rain was still pouring down, and it looked as if my trip to Calistoga would be draped with clouds and mists, and that only a baker's dozen would struggle out to attend my lectures. But as I crossed the bay the sun seemed to get the better of the storm battalions, and sent its thousand silver arrows along the shores and waters, and the snowy heights became luminous in the quivering rays. So I thought I might bear good luck with me on the journey, and that Freethought would have the credit of bringing fair days into the ranks of time. When I arrived at Calistoga the heavy clouds were rolling off, though with unwilling aspect, as if they hated to give the earth a chance to greet the sun-god. My friend, R. F. Grigsby, was at the station, having made arrangements for the lectures—two at Calistoga and two at Palisade Mines, in the new school-house, wherein no preacher had yet held forth, and the Secularist was the first to dedicate the temple of learning to liberty and justice. I had already arranged to be at Calistoga twice before, but the rains had made it impossible to fulfill the engagements. Grigsby is one of the sort that never gives up, and was determined this time that the flags should wave whatever the skies might portend.

I spent a few hours in Calistoga in making the acquaintance of several Liberal gentlemen, and I found that orthodoxy did not altogether have its own way in this pleasant mountain village. Calistoga is a delightful summer resort. The scenery about it is magnificent and lovely. The valley with vineyards and orchards and handsome dwellings, stretches to the base of the lofty hills, where Mt. St. Helena, clothed in glittering vesture, towers in the pride of a mighty monarch. Near by are soda and sulphur springs to which annually pilgrims throng for health, and it is in contemplation to build a mammoth hotel, the most elegant in the state. At present, the Magnolia hotel, under charge of mine jolly landlord, Cheseboro, gives a cordial and refreshing welcome to the traveler.

Just as the "evening shades prevail," and "the moon takes up the wondrous tale," the charming little nags, Dora and Moscow, take us out to the Palisade Mines. These are a couple of South American ponies unlike any other breed in the country, not much more than half as large as the ordinary horse, but most gracefully built, with the tiniest little twinkling feet as they go dashing along the mountain road. They never get tired, and apparently are as fresh at the end of a long journey as at the beginning. Mr. Grigsby has been offered three or four times what he originally paid for them. Everybody is attracted by their lively and beautiful appearance, but they are not for sale. Even if the men were tempted by the golden offer, the "women folks" would not allow it, for they dearly love these delightful novelties. Indeed I would put Dora and Moscow on the roll of fame and honor if I could, for it is a rare pleasure to be borne behind their fiery hoofs. Every part of their bodies enjoys the exhilarating motion.

Softly the sunset gleamed upon the snows and crags and trees and deep ravines which surround and overhang Palisade Mines, in the bosom of which friend Grigsby makes his home, while he digs into the heart of nature for its silver streams that crystallized long ago in the tumults of the prehistoric age. The whole family is here now—Mrs. Grigsby, Miss Meda, and Miss Lola and Arthur and Walter—and there is a Freethought fireside whose welcome along the rough toils of life is like a garden of flowers on the wild breast of the hills.

Sunday morning dawns gloriously. There is scarcely a cloud in the sky. Mt. St. Helena gleams like dazzling silver in the brilliant light. The rushing mountain torrent laughs all the way down the hills and runs sparkling into the broad valley that shimmers away to the distant horizon with ever-changing lustre. Providence, or something or other, is with us this time sure, and paves the way of pioneer thought with peace and beauty. The school-house is filled. Some of the audience are Christians. Even from these there was very little opposition to my discourse on "The American Republic." Quite a number became members of the State Liberal Union. In the evening I lectured at Calistoga. The attendance is very encouraging. The lecture was the first Freethought lecture ever given in the place, but it seemed to express the ideas of the majority present. The churches were in full blast with extra announcements which, no doubt, kept the "faithful," to a large extent, away. The subject chosen by the popular clergyman was "The Hog in Religion," or "Pork and Beans in American History." This being somewhat different from hell-fire, made quite an attractive title. I lectured Sunday evening on "The Bible and Modern Thought," and on Monday evening to a larger audience on "The New Heaven and Earth," to which the aforesaid clergyman will reply, giving "The Old Heaven and Earth." Tuesday evening I lectured again in the school-house, which was full. Many signatures were received for the state organization. The meetings were a success all through, and so far as Calistoga and vicinity is concerned, it can be said that Freethought has made a decided advance.

Palisade Mines is beginning to put on a lively appearance and will soon be worthy of the name, Palisade city. Quite a hamlet is now in and around these rocky ravines. An enormous amount of work has been done in developing the mines since Grigsby and Johnson and Bain took up the claims about seventeen years ago. A big excitement was about St. Helena at that time, and crowds rushed hither, and "Ragtown" was built up in a day. After a month the boom was over, and there was universal skepticism as to the existence of any silver in these mountains. But Grigsby and his partners had faith in the matter and held on. It was faith founded upon knowledge and so has proved successful. One of the best mills in the state has been erected here, and a large quantity of ore has been taken out. When one, however, considers what must be done in order to take out the ore and separate the silver and prepare it for market, it looks like a herculean task. They have to plunge with various tunnels, etc., hundreds of feet into the bowels of the earth, where water and heat must oftentimes be contended with in order to reach the vein. There are tons of waste rock to be taken out. I went down into the shaft. It was like going into Hades. It gets one quite used to the subterranean world. The lamps flicker amidst the gloomy recesses. The rocks drip with moisture. It is not a place to remain a great while with comfort. On the outside the mill makes a thundering noise as it grinds the ore to dust. The "roaster" has a peculiar attraction. It presents a first-class picture of hell-fire. It is a huge cylinder rolling slowly and slowly around, and the decomposing sulphur flashes fiery particles, while the burning dust drops from the revolving roof, and the flames leap and roar from the oven beneath. It would be a fine thing to scare people with in the "good old days" of Bible theology. The mill is now in full operation and the silver bars come forth from time to time. It is no slight undertaking, however, to grasp the secret of the hills and mould it to shining use. Here, indeed, is the victory of man over nature, compelling, whether it will or no, to unfold its ancient riches. A beautiful place it is all about these busy mines. Lovely scenes open on the view from hill and vale. The precipices tower in wild and splendid beauty. St. Helena lifts its brow against the sky in hoary majesty. Far down the green fields open, broadening and shining to the encircling blue. Amidst these varying pictures of beauty and grandeur, it is a keen joy, indeed, to feel the pulse of Freethought, and, with flaming dawn and golden sunset, behold the banners of eternal progress.

With such noble friends as I have met here, Mr. and Mrs. Grigsby and family, Wm. Grigsby, James Bain, Dan. Macdonald, John Dumbacher, J. J. Johnson, A. M. Gardner, and other earnest and generous supporters, I have enjoyed the beautiful days and the genial labor, and if the storms come they can't quench the hope "that springs eternal in the human breast." As out of the rocky bosom of the earth, its darkness and dampness, its heat and cold; as, with infinite labor and daring, the waste material is thrown aside, and the true vein is struck with the hammer of fire, and through grinding wheel and molten flame the silver splendor flashes and becomes the wealth of man for beauty and joy, even so from the ages of the past, out of its cruelties and barbarities and ignorance, out of its infinite toil and suffering, shall come the silver and golden splendor of truth, shall come at last the paradise of love and hope, shall come the beautiful virtues, heroisms sublime as the snow-capped mountains fronting the glorious dawn; shall come the noble heart, the splendid brain, shall come the clear and boundless day when every task shall be a delight.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

A REMINDER.

The Liberals of California, all of them, and particularly those of San Francisco, should subscribe for FREETHOUGHT—that is, provided they are interested in the advancement of the cause. This paper is not given to "blowing its own horn," but there are a few important facts that cannot be overlooked. Two years ago, when FREETHOUGHT was started, what was the condition of Liberalism in the state? It can be told in a very few words. The forces of Freethought were scattered, unacquainted, and unorganized. Has there been any improvement? We certainly think there has been. A state organization is formed, hundreds of lectures given, and hundreds of thousands of Freethought papers circulated. Here in the city meetings have been held most successfully for nearly a year, besides large conventions and celebrations, and the daily press, which had previously ignored or ridiculed Freethought gatherings, now gives them respectful and even favorable reports. It might be added, too, that a Freethought Publishing House has been established, and Liberal literature, never before obtainable in the city, brought almost to the doors of San Francisco Freethinkers.

In bringing about these gratifying results all must admit that FREETHOUGHT has been the main factor. It has advertised, agitated, and reported week after week and month after month. It has stood back of the local movement with word and deed and coin. It has assumed and met financial responsibilities far greater than the returns have ever been. It is satisfied with the outcome of its work, and does not complain, but it submits that the time has arrived for those who enjoy the benefit of its labors to do their share and act the reciprocal part. Many have done so, but not all. We claim that all ought to lend a hand, for the greater the circulation of FREETHOUGHT, the wider the spread of the movement, the deeper the interest, and the greater the result.

Therefore subscribe for FREETHOUGHT, advertise in FREETHOUGHT, and take stock in the Freethought Company, but first and foremost of all, subscribe.

THE CLERICAL FRAUD.

Occasionally the clerical fraud gets shown up, though not so often as he ought to be. He generally screens himself behind the cloak of sanctity, and goes clear. But this did not work in the case of the Rev. C. H. Scott, or Schuyler, formerly of Petaluma, Cal. Last November Scott went to Dexter, Mich., and became pastor of the Congregational church. He grew in the affections of the people, and the church was prospering under his guidance, when James Butler, of Chicago, went there to visit, and discovered that the Rev. C. H. Scott was none other than the Rev. C. H. Schuyler, who fled from Chicago last fall after obtaining goods under false pretenses from the McIntosh Illuminating Company. Butler notified the trustees, and the pastor was called upon for an explanation. Scott confessed that he had been living under an alias in the past, but assured his brethren that his true name was Scott. He offered to give up his pastorate, but some of the flock insisted that he was all right, and refused to permit him to resign. Parson Scott then appeared before his accusers, and the result was his complete vindication. Butler would not rest under the imputation that he was a slanderer, and began an investigation of Scott's career. The Chicago Theological Seminary reports that Scott's record prevented his being received as a member of the seminary. Letters from Petaluma, Cal., also show that he was compelled to leave a charge there because of crookedness in handling church funds. At Gosport, N. Y., he had pecuniary trouble, and after his congregation had paid his obligations he left.

THE FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

"Freethought Around the World" will be the subject of Lillian Leland's lecture at Union Square Hall, Sunday evening, March 9.

At the close of the lecture a business meeting will be held for the annual election of officers.

THE Signs of the Times says:

"When women can wear stockings so woven with gold, and embroidered with diamonds and emeralds, as to cost five hundred dollars, as is reported of Mrs. Sharon, wife of the California millionaire, it is no wonder the poor complain."

And the editor of the Golden Gate makes reply as follows:

"Why should they complain at this? The more money Mrs. Sharon or any other millionaire spends, the better for those who live by the labor of their hands. It isn't what the rich spend, but what they don't spend, of which the poor have reason to complain. Liberal expenditure of wealth means comforts for the poor; hence, the more wealthy people scatter their wealth the better it is for the world."

On the face of it Mr. Owen's political economy appears sound, but there is nothing in it. When the men who work for a dollar a day, and the women who work for a dollar a week, think of five hundred dollars' worth of diamonds glittering upon the stockings of Mrs. Sharon they know that they or their brothers and sisters earned the money that paid for the gems. What they want is to see this money returned to them in the form of better pay, lower fares, and cheaper freights. How in the name of common sense does it help the poor when Mrs. Sharon spends half a thousand dollars in dressing her legs?

THE Rev. Dr. Tobias Schanfaber lectured last Monday at Baltimore on "Religious Movements in Congress." He said: "The introduction of bills savoring of religion will shake the very foundations of our government and work for the establishment of anarchy. These legislators forget, in their zeal for their religion, that they are endangering the existence of the grand structure. The standards of their religion are pessimistic, full of darkness and gloom. Where its precepts are not strong enough to require adherence they would call in the strong arm of the government for their heavenly work. Not by all the Blair Sunday-rest and Educational bills that were ever devised will a condition of affairs be instituted to the credit of the government and mankind. Not by joining our free public schools to a church of non-sectarian Christianity will the millennium be brought about. Force is a poor weapon. We have enough law. We want more liberty. Chain the mind of free-thinking man and it will soon break through and hurt the tyrant." These are sentiments which the Blair faction would do well to consider.

THE Catholic church gets a big advertisement through Sister Rose Gertrude, who has gone to Molokai, one of the Sandwich Islands, to enter the leper hospital as an alleged nurse. In this the woman follows the example of Father Damien, who was for several years on the same island, and who is said to have contracted the leprosy, of which he lately died, through his indiscriminate relations with leper women. It is well-known by all familiar with the facts that these Molokai lepers do not need the services of outsiders as nurses, as those not disabled serve in that capacity towards the others. Sister Rose Gertrude simply acts as a sensational advertisement for the church, at the risk of her own health. If she has parents, guardians, or friends, they should interfere and protest against the imposition placed upon her in the name of religion.

A FEW years ago, says an exchange, Ingersoll was passing through Cincinnati, and at his hotel he was accosted by a working-man, who addressed him as follows: "Mr. Ingersoll, I am a poor hard-working man, having a family to support, and I want a favor." "Well," said Robert, "what can I do for you?" "I want to call a brand of my cigars after you, and permission to use your photograph," answered the man. "Certainly, my man, and I will give you a motto, if you desire." "I would thank you if you would," responded the man. Colonel Ingersoll gave it to him as follows: "We shall smoke in this world, but not in the next." Some months afterward, while passing through Cincinnati, Colonel Ingersoll was informed that the man made nine thousand dollars off the brand of cigars in less than a year.

A DISPATCH from Paris says: "A new semi-religious order called the Brothers of the Cross, will begin active operations here on the first of May. It will be in sympathy with the various labor demonstrations and stand on a platform of freedom in politics, but its main object will be to propagate religious socialism by a purely practical method and will aim at securing the well-being of humanity by a labor organization, reciprocal, fraternal, and universal in its character." Workingmen should be suspicious of religious crusades started ostensibly for their benefit. They are only attempts to secure the support of the masses for the peculiar sect inaugurating the movement.

THE Weekly Star asks: "Did God create this earth with the design of furnishing the few with the means of subsistence and pleasure while another portion were to pine in want and sorrow?" Alas! it would seem so, since things are thus. Furthermore he created a heaven where the few are to enjoy everlasting happiness while "another portion" spend an eternity in the fire that is not quenched. Good Christians have for hundreds of years been praying that the kingdom might come in this world as it is in the next, and it appears to have got here.

WHEN Governor Boies of Iowa was inaugurated on February 27 he devoted the larger part of his inaugural address to the subject of prohibition. He affirmed that the prohibition law had been a dead letter in the large cities of the state from the beginning; that the passage of the prohibition law was a violation of one of the most valued human rights; that millions of capital invested in the liquor business had been wiped out, and that the result of the last election showed that the sentiment in regard to it had changed.

MR. PENTECOST, of the Twentieth Century, says that an Anarchist is "one who believes that money should be issued by anybody who can get his money accepted." Of course, but what would those do for a circulating medium who could not get their money accepted? Don't the Anarchists believe in a co-operative currency, and if so, in what respect would it differ from that now in circulation?

SANTA ROSA is afflicted with more religionists than there is any call for. Mrs. Woodworth is there, together with the Salvation Army, the Holiness Band, and the Young Men's Christian Association Convention. Services are held on every street corner, and Mrs. Woodworth is drawing immense crowds. She has her followers from Oakland with her, and mesmerizes and entrances them at pleasure. As the whole business is done in the name of the Lord it would be unpopular to say that it isn't just what the city needs. Nevertheless it is a pestilential superstition.

UKIAH, Humboldt county, a city of twenty-five hundred inhabitants, was without mail communication with the outside world for twenty-five days previous to February 20. The fault was entirely with the railroad company, which ran trains from Cloverdale, but neglected to carry the mails. The editor of the Ukiah Dispatch remarks that the city is worse off than it was twenty-five years ago when Ukiah was a hundred miles from a railroad and the mail was carried on buckboards and pack-horses.

BUT a few days before his death, which occurred January 29, the late Joseph Sedgbeer, of Painesville, Ohio, sent to the Freethought Publishing Company a proposition to place with this company the sum of $500, to be used for the advancement of Freethought, the interest to be returned during the life of Mr. Sedgbeer or his wife, and the principal to pass to the company. When his letter got through the railroad blockade both Mr. and Mrs. Sedgbeer had gone to their last rest.

TALMAGE argues for a radical change in the Presbyterian creed, and says: "I move for a creed for all our denominations, made out of scripture quotations, pure and simple, that would take the earth for God, that would be impregnable against Infidelity." If Mr. Talmage will kindly formulate such a creed as he desires, there is no doubt that Infidels will consider it and shortly let him know whether or not it is impregnable.

ANOTHER miracle has been explained. A clergyman who spoke before the Presbyterian Ministerial Union in San Francisco last Monday argued that the story of Elijah, "who went up in a chariot of fire, and is safe in the promised land," meant that the prophet was cremated. The theory is ingenious, but what will become of the illustrated Bibles representing Elijah and his chariot on their way toward heaven?

MOSES HARMAN, editor of Lucifer (Valley Falls, Kan.) has been again arrested, charged with the mailing of obscene literature. The matter complained of is a letter from one Dr. O'Neil of New York. It is unutterably vile, though perhaps not intentionally obscene, and to defend its publication will tax the courage of Mr. Harman's most loyal supporters.

THE customs department of the Canadian government has finally retreated from its position that Paine's "Age of Reason" is contraband goods and not to be imported into the dominion. The officers of the Canadian Union threatened to test the legality of the exclusion in the courts, and the collector of customs gracefully weakened.

THE secret of the Catholic church's opposition to the Australian ballot system is revealed by the Catholic Review, which points out that under this system the man who cannot read his ballot cannot vote. As there are thousands of Catholics in this country who are unable to read, it is no wonder that the church denounces the system.

SAN FRANCISCO Nationalists have adopted the Pacific Union as their official organ. The Union is a nice pious paper, and when true spirituality is considered, the editorial paragraphs of the Rev. Mr. Hines fall but a short way behind the Rev. J. J. Owen's "Fragments" published in the Golden Gate.

SARAH BERNHARDT is rehearsing a play in which she is to appear as the "Virgin Mary." There is a quite striking similarity between the actress and the character she designs to impersonate, both having had offspring unclaimed by any paternal relative. It is a remarkable coincidence.

MOSES HULL, the Liberal-Spiritualist lecturer, is knocking about in the southern part of the state, and we may expect to hear of him soon in San Francisco. At San Diego he delivered the Paine celebration address, and excited the admiration of all hearers.

THE papers report that Mrs. Humphrey Ward, author of "Robert Elsmere," has started an "Agnostic church" in London, of which she is to be the high priestess. This is evidently a misconception. Mrs. Ward is not an Agnostic, but a Unitarian.

THE Ashland, Oregon, Secular Union, through H. S. Evans, publishes an able defense of Freethought in the Valley Record, the local paper. It seems that some "believer" has been indiscreet enough to pick a quarrel with the Ashland Liberals.

IF you have received a notice from this office that your subscription to FREETHOUGHT has expired, please respond by renewing. We cannot afford to stop your paper, because we know you cannot afford to do without it.

JOSEPH SEDGEBEER, of Painesville, Ohio, is dead at the age of eighty-nine years. His death followed immediately that of his wife and daughter. He was one of the most staunch and generous of Freethinkers.

FREETHOUGHT has received $1 from H. F. Ebers for the expenses of the last convention, and from Samos Parsons $5 for W. S. Bell, and $5 for the paper.

INGERSOLL's latest pamphlet, "Crimes Against Criminals," is for sale at this office, price 10 cents. It is a great work.

THE DISCUSSION ON SPIRITUALISM.

The hall where the Freethought Society meets lacked standing-room last Sunday evening. The janitor brought in all the chairs there was space for, and then struck work with the remark that if the society wanted more room it might go on the roof. The advertised exercises were to consist of a debate on Spiritualism between Putnam and Professor Seymour, but the professor's health failed at the critical moment, and Mr. Will C. Hodge was substituted—not to discuss Spiritualism, but to read a paper on the "Man-God or God-in-Man."

Vice-President Eastman occupied the chair, and called the meeting to order by rapping ably upon the desk. He then explained the situation. Miss Palanca, a bright and self-possessed young lady, gave a very good recitation on the superiority of work over prayer, and then Mr. Hodge was introduced. Mr. Hodge also argued against the efficacy of prayer, and attributed all achievements to the god-in-man instead of the man-god who is known among his acquaintances as Jehovah. Mr. Hodge's address was an excellent one, and he read it well.

The next feature of the programme was Mr. Putnam, who at the outset disclaimed any intention of attacking Spiritualism as a theory, a religion, or an inspiration. He did not propose to argue against its philosophy or to deny its phenomena. He would, however, seek to show that Spiritualism is not a demonstrated fact or entitled to be called a science. Spiritualism consisted of two things, namely, facts or phenomena, and an inference concerning those phenomena; said inference being that the phenomena were produced by the spirits of those whom we call dead. Mr. Putnam admitted that the theory explained the facts, but claimed that the facts in no wise proved the theory. He would lay down three scientific propositions which in his opinion left the spiritual theory without a leg to stand upon. These propositions were thus:

1. "In seeking to explain any phenomenon we are not to suppose a cause greater than is necessary to produce the effect."

The speaker argued that the phenomena of Spiritualism were too trivial to warrant us in supposing the existence of a spiritual world peopled by innumerable hosts of angels.

2. "In seeking to explain phenomena we must exhaust all known laws and causes before resorting to the unknown."

Here it was remarked that all the laws and possibilities of achievement by the mind of men still in the flesh had not been fully developed; and until that was done, he held, we are not justified in attributing natural phenomena to supernatural causes.

3. "If compelled to ascribe phenomena to an unknown cause we must ascribe them to a cause that can be proved independently of the phenomena sought to be explained."

Concerning this proposition Mr. Putnam asserted that outside of the phenomena of Spiritualism there was nothing to suggest such a cause as spirits. The cause could not therefore be scientifically proven. In support of Proposition 3 the speaker read the following extract from John Stuart Mill: "For this purpose, that is, the purpose of explaining, as is justly remarked by M. Comte (who of all philosophers seems to me to have approached nearest to a sound view of this important subject), it is indispensable that the cause suggested in the hypothesis shall be in its own nature susceptible of being proved by other evidence.

"This seems to be the philosophical import of Newton's maxim, so often cited with approbation by subsequent writers, that the cause assigned for any phenomenon must not only be such as if admitted would explain the phenomenon, but also be a vera causa. Mr. Whewell is clearly right in denying it to be necessary that the cause assigned should be a cause already known, else how could we ever become acquainted with any new cause? But what is true in the maxim is that the cause, although not known previously, should be capable of being known thereafter; that its existence should be capable of being detected, and its connection with the effect ascribed to it susceptible of being proved by independent evidence. The hypothesis, by suggesting observations and experiments, puts us upon the road to that independent evidence, if it be really attainable, and till it be attained the hypothesis ought not to count for more than a suspicion.

"It is perfectly consistent with the spirit of the method (of science) to assume in this provisional manner not only an hypothesis respecting the law of what we already know to be the cause, but an hypothesis respecting the cause itself. It is allowable, useful, and often even necessary to begin by asking ourselves what cause may have produced the effect in order that we may know in what direction to look out for evidence to determine whether it actually did. The vortices of Descartes would have been a perfectly legitimate hypothesis, if it had been possible by any mode of exploration which we could entertain the hope of ever possessing, to bring the question whether such vortices exist or not within reach of our observing faculties. The hypothesis was vicious, simply because it could not lead to any course of investigation capable of converting it from an hypothesis into a proved fact. The prevailing hypothesis of a luminiferous ether I cannot but consider with M. Comte to be tainted with the same vice. It can never be brought to the test of observation, because the ether is supposed wanting in all the properties by means of which our senses take cognizance of external phenomena. It can be neither seen, heard, smelt, tasted, nor touched. The possibility of deducing from its supposed laws a considerable number of the phenomena of light is the sole evidence of its existence that we have ever to hope for; and this evidence cannot be of the smallest value, because we cannot have in the case of such an hypothesis the assurance that if the hypothesis be false it must lead to results at variance with the true facts.

"Accordingly most thinkers of any degree of sobriety allow that an hypothesis of this kind is not to be received as probably true because it accounts for all the known phenomena, since this is a condition often fulfilled equally well by two conflicting hypotheses."

Mr. Putnam said he would rest his case here and ask the Spiritualists to show if they could that their phenomena were equal to the cause assigned for them; that they had exhausted all known laws before resorting to the unknown; and that the cause of so-called Spiritual phenomena could be proved independently of the phenomena themselves.

At the conclusion of these remarks Mr. E. Lund, who had arisen during their delivery to offer brief objections, assumed the platform. He had three affirmations to offer, namely, that man has a soul, that it is immortal, and that it can communicate with the living after the death of the body. Mr. Lund said that unless these affirmations could be disproved we were bound to accept them as true. He would like to debate the matter after due preparation.

Mr. Kellogg asked the attention of the audience while he produced some spiritual phenomena. It was granted him. At his further request the audience named Mr. James Battersby as a committee of one to investigate. Mr. Battersby, who is an avowed Spiritualist, was instructed to write some questions on slips of paper and to fold them carefully, all of the same size. While Mr. Battersby was attending to this, Mr. Kellogg performed an aria on the piano. Then the ballots were placed upon the table. Mr. Battersby sat at one side of the table, Mr. Kellogg at the other, so that they were about a yard apart and touched fingers. Mr. Kellogg picked up one of the ballots, held it to his head, and assumed an other-world expression of countenance. He soon inquired if the sifter felt any spiritual influences. Mr. Battersby did not commit himself on that point. Mysterious rapping occurred. Light dawned upon the countenance of Mr. Kellogg and he gave the name written on the ballot, read the communication, and then passed it to Mr. Putnam, still folded, and desired him to read it to the audience. The communication proved to be as Mr. Kellogg had rendered it, and Mr. Battersby acknowledged that such was the case. This test was performed by Mr. Kellogg while sitting with his back to the audience. He then repeated it in a reversed attitude and those who sat near enough could see how it was done. Instead of placing the ballot to his head, as he appeared to do, he dropped it skillfully into his left hand, with which he unfolded it, thus ascertaining its contents. Meanwhile Mr. Battersby held down beneath his finger on the table a piece of paper, which he supposed to be the ballot he had written, but which upon examination proved to be totally blank. Before leaving the platform Mr. Kellogg explained that he had learned the trick from a well-known professional medium now doing business in the city and making $15 a day when business is good. He added that Mr. Putnam was altogether too generous in admitting the phenomena of Spiritualism to be unexplained facts, as manual dexterity accounts for nearly all of them.

Mr. Curtis, following, objected to the use of the word god as used by Mr. Hodges, because it did not mean anything, there being no gods. Things ascribed to the god-in-man might as well be ascribed to the hocus-pocus in man. It was the man in man that Mr. Hodges was really talking about. Mr. Curtis announced in plain language that he was not a Spiritualist.

Mr. Knight thought that Mr. Putnam's propositions would not stand the test of examination, but did not explain why. Spiritualists had done much to overthrow Christianity by meeting Christians on their own ground and opposing miracle with miracle until the Christians were ashamed of their supernatural claims. He thought that further knowledge would explain present mysteries; that the fog would one day rise and the whole earth be illuminated by the sun of science.

Mr. Marshal Wheeler ensued and volleyed at Mr. Putnam and Mr. Kellogg with tremendous force. He attributed Mr. Putnam's attitude to his poverty of knowledge on the subject, and would give Mr. Kellogg a thousand dollars to duplicate phenomena which he (Mr. Wheeler) had witnessed within a week. Mr. Kellogg returned the fire, and said that after he had witnessed the phenomena he would repeat them or forfeit an equal amount. Mr. Kellogg desired Mr. Wheeler to produce his medium at any time before the present audience and he would put up $50 in coin, Mr. Wheeler to post a like amount, the whole to go to Mr. Wheeler if Mr. Kellogg did not beat the medium at his or her own trick, and to the society if he did.

At this point things were boiling pretty briskly, but both the disputants kept as cool as could be expected. Mr. Hodge recurred to assert his belief in Spiritualism; a few more verbal shots were fired in one direction or another, and there was no lack of enthusiasm. Mr. Eastman made an earnest address inviting everybody to join the society and setting forth the objects for which it was organized. Serenity prevailed; the meeting dissolved amicably, and everybody was ready to testify that it was a great occasion.

Next Sunday evening Lilian Leland speaks upon "Freethought Around the World," and the event will be duly reported in these columns.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The Neagle case came up in the Supreme Court at Washington last Monday. The question to be decided is whether California or the United States has jurisdiction over Terry's slayer.—The ironmolders of this city are out on strike and prepared for a long siege. The strike affects about 1000 workmen.—A Salvation Army girl is under arrest in this city charged with theft. She is demented on the subject of religion.—Benjamin Smith, who lived on a ranch near Central point, Merced county, was adjudged insane by Drs. Castle and Sherman last week. Upon the advice of the examining physicians he was placed in the County Hospital for a few days, in hopes that he would regain his reason, but was finally taken to the asylum at Stockton. His hallucination was of a religious nature.—J. Mervyn Donahue, president of the San Francisco and North Pacific Railroad Company, died at the Palace Hotel last Monday. Donahue was a native son, and only 31 years of age. His early death is evidently attributable to overtaking his constitution and endeavoring to crowd too much high life into a brief period. He was a Catholic.—The heaviest snowstorm ever experienced at the Lick observatory visited Mt. Hamilton last week. The scientists had to shovel their way out of the house, which was nearly buried in snow.

The report that Dr. Edward McGlynn is making overtures toward the Catholic church with the hope of being taken back, is denied by authority from the Vatican.—No services were held in the Greek church at Shenandoah, Pa., last Sunday. The Rev. Andrushowicz remained in the parsonage gazing upon the locked doors of the edifice. Forty of his friends, all armed, were in and about the parsonage all day, determined not to allow the friends of the Rev. Wolanski to take possession. Chief Burgess and forty policemen were also on guard to prevent a riot. The Rev. Wolanski and a large number of his followers attempted to enter the church, but desisted upon the advice of the police. Some of the parties are under arrest charged with conspiracy to murder.—Chauncey M. Depew says he does not expect to be nominated for president in 1892.—Senator Blair complains that his addresses before the Senate Committee have not been adequately reported by the press. The scribes claim that the speeches were not of sufficient interest to merit reporting.—The world's fair to be held in Chicago may be deferred till 1893.

The British steamer Quetta, from Australian ports to London, is reported lost with 200 passengers and crew on board.—Labouchere was suspended from participation in the proceedings of the English Parliament for one week for accusing Premier Salisbury of falsehood. The trouble arose out of the Cleveland House scandal, Salisbury being charged with screening the titled offenders.—Abbe Philbert of Paris, after renouncing the church and preaching Atheism, is to be taken back into the fold. He evidently finds the priesthood the more remunerative calling.

JUDGE NORTH.

THE FUNERAL ORATION BY DR. CHESTER ROWELL.

We have met in the presence of this lifeless body of our venerable friend, Judge J. W. North, to pay homage to his memory and as a tribute of respect to his surviving family. As his life was unostentatious and practical, so it was his desire and the desire of his family, that his decease should be followed by no ostentatious display or burial ceremony. But before parting finally with the material part of one who has so long occupied a conspicuous place in the community, it is not inappropriate to recall a few of the more prominent characteristics of his life, and bear testimony of our appreciation of his worth.

Judge North was born in Rensselaer county, New York state, something more than seventy-five years ago. The son of Christian parents, he himself grew up a member of the Methodist church, and received his education in a denominational college—the Wesleyan University of Middletown, Connecticut. Thus early in life, and before his graduation from this institution, he began to question the correctness of some of the dogmas of the Christian faith, and began that system of independent investigation that in riper years made him one of the most pronounced and vigorous advocates of liberal or rational religion.

To follow him through his life's work in behalf of Freethought would be beyond the scope of these remarks, but it may be said that from early life not a community in which he has lived but has felt the impress of his vigorous thought and practical religion.

To him religion was to do something to improve the condition of humanity. The establishment of institutions of learning, the formation of societies for intellectual or moral culture, the agitation of questions affecting the political and social equality of men, were all matters of life-long interest to him. He was one of the first of the antislavery agitators and in what was then the Far Northwest, in Minnesota, he was known as the one conspicuous advocate then of the abolition of human slavery in the United States.

He was a lawyer by profession, having read under the direction of John Jay, of New York. And in the Western states, in which most of his life has been spent, like most lawyers, he took part in politics, literature, public enterprises, or speculation. He was a member of the Minnesota legislature and a delegate to the national convention that nominated Abraham Lincoln for president. As chairman of his state delegation he was one of the committee selected to notify Mr. Lincoln of his nomination. He was afterward sent as surveyor-general to the newly organized territory of Nevada, and subsequently appointed one of its three territorial judges.

After the close of the war he went to Knoxville, Tenn., where he at once took an active interest in the development of an educational system for the Southern states, and especially in the effort to educate the recently liberated blacks. While here he was invited to attend the anniversary meeting of Liberal or Unitarian societies in Boston, which invitation he accepted, and when he was enabled to give such a statement of the possibilities and the needs of the freed men of the South, as to serve as a guide for the exercise of that broad philanthropy that characterized the Eastern people at the close of the war. Before leaving Knoxville Judge North had conceived the idea of establishing a colony or small farm community in California. He was the founder of the Riverside Colony, and the early settlers there were those who came in response to his circulars sent out from Knoxville.

The prosperity and growth of Riverside, and the prosperity and extent of the settlement at and around Oleander, in our Washington Colony, where he has resided since 1880, have been matters of just pride during his later life.

At Oleander, where most of us have known Judge North, he has been an active worker in every matter of general or public interest.

For several years he has been instrumental in keeping alive a public spirit in the community. They have maintained a literary society, where every Sunday afternoon the people have been able to hear lectures, sermons, discussions, music, and whatever was available to interest, instruct and improve them.

During the past year, since his residence in Fresno, his mind has been largely occupied in the investigation of moral and intellectual questions, and he was largely instrumental in organizing the Unity Society, of which, until recently, he was the president. His lecture to the society upon science and religion, though the last intellectual effort of his life, was one of the ablest that has been heard in Fresno, and is one of the most convincing proofs that ripe years sometimes bring ripe intellectual fruit.

To the immediate relatives and friends, death under ordinary circumstances brings a feeling of temporary sadness. But in the present instance, while the surviving family feel the loss of a devoted father, and those of us who are present the loss of an esteemed friend, there is consolation in the reflection that Judge North has lived even more than the average life of man and that he has finished in peace a life that all will admit has been both honorable and useful.

In accordance with the wish of Judge North, and to emphasize his convictions upon the subject, his remains will be sent to Los Angeles for cremation. That there may be no misconception of his religious convictions, I will read a passage from the writings of Felix Adler, which expresses in more eloquent words than I could express them, his conception of life and death:

"The individual passes but the race lives. There is a law in nature that no force is ever lost. The thousand varying forms that ebb around us are various only to our feeble vision. At the core they are one, transmuted, yet the same, changing yet changeless, perishing to rise anew. The law of the conservation of energy holds good throughout the entire domain of matter. And such a law, too, obtains in our spiritual life. The law of the conservation of moral energy is no less an abiding truth. We are not dust merely that returns to dust; we are not summer flies that bask in the sunshine of the passing day; we are not bounded in our influence by the narrow tenure of our years.

"Say not when the sod has been closed above those who have been dear to you that all is gone. Say not that the grace and loveliness and wisdom that once dwelt within the pallid form is breathed away like a hollow wind. Nor yet stand idly gazing upon the cloudland of the future, watching if you can trace perchance their shadowy lineaments fading into the dimness of untried worlds. The dead are not dead if we have loved them truly. In our own lives we give them immortality. Let us arise and take up the work they have left unfinished, and preserve the treasures they have won, and round out the circuit of their own being to the fulness of an ampler orbit in our own."

THE OREGON UNION.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Permit me again to give notice that L. Ames, Esq., of Silverton, Or., has been appointed treasurer of the Oregon State Secular Union. Resignations and declinations caused this long delay.

The Liberals of Washington have their attention called to the following resolution:

Resolved by this Convention, That the treasurer of this organization be authorized to refund all money received from Washington Liberals who so desire, and that the secretary be instructed to notify them of this resolution.

Parties interested will see that I have no jurisdiction in the matter; consequently I have persistently refused to interfere.

I believe that a very great mistake was made in not laying the foundation at least of a great Northwestern Liberal Union and endeavor to build a Liberal hall at Portland, and thus seek to insure its perpetuity. But the convention unanimously decided against me, and I graciously submit for two reasons: first, the majority have a right to rule, and second, I cannot help myself.

To save time here, let me say that Z. S. Derrick, of Eddyville, Or., sends one hundred and seven names for the Union from his voting precinct, and will soon send more. If every Liberal in Oregon would do the same, we would soon have one hundred thousand members, more or less, and not need any more territory, and be able to build a hall. Remember, friends, you pay no dues, have everything to gain, and nothing to lose. Come on.

C. BEAL, President Or. State Secular Union.
Portland, Or.

A SECULAR FUNERAL.

FRIEND FREETHOUGHT: We have this week lost an earnest worker in the cause of Liberalism. Averillo, wife of Charles Linn, died after a brief illness, fully understanding that she was going to that bourne from whence no traveler returns. She calmly gave directions that no superstitious ceremony should be held over her remains. And in accordance with her wishes, and the desire of her husband, both of whom have always been champions in the cause of truth, our friend Devine came over from Molalla, and another Secular funeral can be added to the list. Standing at the open grave, he spoke to the living and bade farewell to the dead as follows:

KIND FRIENDS: This is one of the saddest hours in our life's experience. There is no time so solemn as the hour of death, no service so mournful as when on occasions like this we meet to perform our last duties to a dear and loved friend. It is not mournful because of any danger that may be thought to await her who has just left us. It is not because we have a belief in any such chimera. No; our sadness arises from the necessity of parting with one so gentle and so kind as she whose remains now lie before us. Her life was one of usefulness, integrity, and true morality; a kind mother, a faithful wife, a true friend, and a woman without superstition. One who leads such a life as our friend has led has no need to fear death, nor what may and may not happen after death. The friend whose loss we mourn has yielded the struggle of life before old age drew near. She has left behind her a record for kindness and sympathy for her fellow beings in distress that will live in our memory until the time arrives when we like her will lay us down to rest. Those who have lived a life in which they have meant well and done well will have no dread of death.

If one side we fail to see the beautiful illusion of the pearly gates thrown open, to let her enter, we also fail to see that dark infernal pit filled with nameless horrors. None need fear the future but the unhappy victim of superstition. Our advent into this world is an unraveled mystery. Our whole life is an enigma, and we go confidently down into the great unknown untroubled. My friends, we will not lament the inevitable. We are all in the arms of our mother, nature, and we will preserve an abiding trust that she has abundantly provided for all the wants and conditions of mankind in life as well as in death.

To the household and family of our departed friend we tender our earnest sympathy, and cheer them with the truth that she who knew no evil has no evil to fear. Pain greets us at the threshold of life, and the soothing sleep of death is nature's welcome termination. And now to nature, the source of all, we surrender her who has passed away before us. And may all the sweet influences she has left behind her continue to bear fruit forever and ever. Amen.

Eagle Creek, Or.

H. WILBERN.

MR. PRUSSING A "DESTRUCTIVE LIBERAL."

To the Editors of Freethought:

Noticing the remarks in FREETHOUGHT referring to the late Ernst Prussing, whom I knew intimately for many years, I wish to add a word.

Mr. Prussing belonged emphatically to that class called "destructive Liberals." He was an Atheist, and he opposed religion in all its forms. He believed that religion and superstition were but different names for the same thing. His favorite paper to the end of his life was that "destructive" journal, the Boston Investigator. He helped the Ethical Society not because he was "constructive," but because he believed in morality without religion, and found that society teaching in that direction. He would have been better pleased if the society had been pronounced and aggressive against theology. With Mr. Carus's "constructive Liberalism" he had no sympathy, and for his methods the only word Mr. Prussing could use to express his feelings was "disgust." I know whereof I speak and can prove what I say. If Mr. Prussing were alive he would be displeased with any attempt to exclude him from the class called "destructive Liberals."

I was in conversation with him but a few weeks before his death, when he expressed himself very freely on different phases and representatives of Liberalism. Of course he believed in the principles of morality, and was himself a man of high character; but this is as true generally of the so-called "destructive Liberals" as of those who, under the name of Theism, Monism, or some other ism, use the words God, immortality, etc., and imagine or pretend they are therefore "constructive." Mr. Prussing was accustomed to regard the latter Liberals as either but half emancipated or timid and temporizing.

PHILO VERITAS

THE WASTE OF TIME IN CONGRESS.

It may be conceded, says Gen. M. M. Trumbull in the Open Court, that no people are so ingenious as the Americans in adapting physical means to ends. Since the days of Tubal Cain there have not been such cunning artificers in brass and iron; in silk, wool, cotton, and all material substances. They excel all other people in contrivances for saving time, labor, and money; but in the mechanism of legislation their genius fails. In the field of statesmanship they work, figuratively speaking, with a yoke of lazy cattle and a wooden plow. The Circumlocution Office, at the height of its pompous imbecility, never practiced with so much diligence as the American Congress the methods of "how not to do it."

The members of the House of Representatives now in session at Washington were elected in the month of November, 1888. In February, 1890, they had not yet agreed upon a code of rules. They had not even decided whether they were all properly elected or not, for the right of several rival claimants to seats in the house has not been settled. A foreigner examining the form of our legislative system might pronounce it admirable, if we concealed from him the mode of its operation. We might show him an American watch of such artistic design and elegant workmanship as to extort his praise, until he found out that the wheels were contrived so as to stop the springs, and that the springs were intended to hinder the wheels from turning; that, in fact, by a clumsy artifice the checks and balances were so arranged that the watch must go too fast at one time, and too slow at another. Then he would pronounce it ornamental, contrary, and inefficient. This handsome and inconsistent watch is the model of our legislative system.

The intention of the republic is that the legislature shall be close to the people and quickly responsive to the popular will. The means provided to carry out this intention have been ingeniously perverted so as to thwart the original design. Congress is elected biennially in November, and this election, in theory at least, is a message from the people commanding that certain measures of public policy be enacted quickly into laws; but the elected members do not meet for business until thirteen months after the election, although their term of office begins on the following 4th of March. By this arrangement more than a year is permitted to escape before the message from the people can be acted on at all. No other legislature in the world has ever adopted such a successful method of "how not to do it."

This hindering policy is the more astonishing because the American people never conduct their ordinary affairs on any such business principle. They would send a man to the lunatic asylum if he should hire 400 men to work for him thirteen months ahead, and give them nine months holiday on full pay out of thirteen; yet this is the way they hire their own political servants to work at law making. Our Congress is the most expensive legislature in the world, and the most unwieldy. It works like a giant in bonds.

Are the people cheated by their hired statesmen? A member of congress is paid ten thousand dollars for two years' service, but the actual sessions occupy only ten months of the two years, so that he is really paid at the rate of about a thousand dollars a month. This is good wages and it ought to secure good work. To be sure, the people never intended to pay him $1000 a month; they hire him at the rate of $5000 a year, but by the operation of "how not to do it," he manages to double his pay.

A legislative body so important as the United States House of Representatives ought not to be left unorganized for nine months after its election. Such a legislature is a solecism in government; and the custom which permits it is fraught with mischief, if not with danger. It is fruitful of corruption, and the result of it is always a great deal of hasty and inconsiderate legislation. The national legislature should be organized at the very beginning of its term, and all disputed election cases ought to be settled at the earliest moment possible, so that the House and all interested parties may know who the legally elected members are.

Under the present practice, a member legally elected may be kept out of his seat for many months, and perhaps until near the expiration of his term. Six years ago, a member from Iowa was kept wandering about the lobby for two years, waiting for the seat which was wrongfully kept from him by a man who was not elected at all. Not until the very last day of the term, on the 4th of March, a few minutes before that congress went out of existence, did the committee report upon his case and give him the seat which had been unjustly withheld from him. This wrong could hardly happen if congress should begin to work when it begins to charge for it.

There is a humorous side to this matter, as there is to many other serious things. The honorable members having taken nine months' rest before beginning rest, fall to quarreling as soon as they get together, and cover one another with reproaches for "wasting time." More time is spent in hurling these reproaches than in the work of legislation, yet they never complain of the "nine moons wasted," from March to December, when they did nothing at all, and paid themselves four thousand dollars each for doing it. The doctrine of "how not to do it" does not apply to the drawing of unearned salary.

The important work of congress is done in the closing hours of the session, and then it is badly done. There is excitement and inspiration in beholding the industry and activity of a dying congress. A few hours before its dissolution, bills are passed with frightful velocity, while the president of the United States sits in a room at the capitol signing them as fast as the clerks can bring them in. He may be signing his own death warrant for anything he knows about it, as there is no time to read the bills, for congress will expire at noon. This wasteful hurry gives a consistent finish to the whole proceedings, in dignified harmony with our legislative policy.

Just about one minute to twelve o'clock on the 4th of March the supernatural power of congress is manifested in a sublime and impressive way. An awe-stricken multitude watches an old magician, said to be clerk of the Senate, as he solemnly approaches the great clock and sets it back nine minutes. On the success of this legislative miracle are supposed to depend vast appropriation bills and other measures of critical importance to the people of the United States; greater interests than have affected any nation since the prophet Isaiah turned back the shadow ten degrees on the dial of Ahaz. There seems to be a little comic irony in this puerile miracle to gain nine minutes at the end of the session, after deliberately wasting nine full months at the beginning of it, without the assistance of any miracle at all.

GOD AND RELIGION.

The God idea in all ages has been the basis of religion, and religion has ever been a brake on the car of progress. It has very properly been said by an observant philosopher that "religion is a superstition in fashion, and superstition is a religion out of fashion."

Religion has always been conservative. It has tied its votaries to the dead past. It can find no congenial soil in which to flourish in the mind where science is rooted. It has been perpetuated by despotic power. Reason, philosophy, and science have always been its most hated and dangerous enemies. In its opposition to them it has hesitated at no crime against humanity. The thumb-screw, the rack, the fagot, are her inventions, her contributions to science. We might well call these inventions "Christian Science." They have constituted their chief, if not only, argument against unbelievers.

It is said by Jesuits and priests that the Romish clergy are well educated in the science and philosophy of our times. If so, why is it that they keep their dupes in utter ignorance of all science? Why are they so anxious to overthrow the public schools where science is taught and to establish in their stead their schools of theology, sophistry, nonsense, superstition?

Is it because they love humanity and wish to elevate their kind a little above the brutes, thereby making this world a place fit and desirable for human beings to dwell in? Why do they profess to love republican institutions and at the same time exert all their power to crush Father McGlynn and his adherents for trying their best as American citizens to perpetuate them?

Why should good American citizens be read out of the Romish church for asserting their citizenship, while editors of Catholic papers openly denouncing liberty can declare that the Inquisition is soon to be established in this country—that it is to have a “far more glorious” rule than formerly in Europe, and that nothing could “delight their Catholic souls so much as to see heretics writhing in the flames of the Inquisition?”

When we declare that noble, brave men in all ages of the world have been found who dared stand up and declare their honest convictions though death by torture awaited them, the Catholic priest points with derision at our paucity of numbers and with exultant pride at the millions of empty skulls that disgrace the bodies of those whom they have robbed of brains, rendered incompetent to reason and think, and harnessed like dumb brutes to the car of superstition.

Thomas Paine was right in declaring that religion was a human invention, got up to “terrify and enslave mankind and monopolize power and profit.” There is no good in it. It breeds canting hypocrites on one side, and slaves on the other. In the name of love it has enthroned hate. In the name of peace it has established war. It sunders family ties and sets parents against each other, the father against the son, and the son against the father. Proclaiming a gospel of “peace on earth and good will to men,” they have turned loose the dogs of war, have deluged the earth with human gore, and heaped it with mountains of the slain. Millions have writhed under the tortures of the thumb-screw, rack, and fagot—their only answer to the heretic—and we are gravely informed that millions more are to follow.

I ask, fellow citizens, is it not high time we were bestirring ourselves? Is it for this that America has extended her arms to the oppressed of all nations? Is it for this that she has enfranchised them and made them citizens? Has she not taken to her bosom and warmed to life a viper that is determined to thrust its venomous fangs to the heart's core of Liberty?

But the fact is, all Christian sects, consciously or unconsciously, are uniting to deal the death blow to liberty on this continent. They are uniting to make this a Christian government. A Christian government derives its power from God; it is a power assumed over the people. Not receiving its authority from the people, it is not amenable to the people. Of this class are all despotic and kingly governments. Russia is a sample; all empires and kingdoms are samples. They differ from that of these United States in this—their authority comes from God, while ours is derived from the people. The people are the fountain of all authority. Here, authority is accountable to the people; there, it is accountable to God, and exists in defiance of the people.

But as God cannot attend to these matters himself, all authority is delegated to men, and men never wield unlimited power for the general welfare—the general welfare is always sacrificed to private gain and love of power. True, we have in the world what is called limited monarchy; but if monarchy is a good thing, why limit it? If divine right to govern is a good thing, let it have full sway. If it is a good thing for man partially to emancipate himself from the divine ruler, it is a much better thing to free himself entirely. So thought the founders of our republic; therefore they put an end to divine right and fearlessly declared that all just governments derive their powers from the consent of the governed.

“God” is, in itself, a very harmless word, for it only expresses an imagination of the brain of ignorance. But God in the constitution is quite another thing. It annihilates the difference between this government and the despotisms of the old world. It is the Trojan horse idea repeated. The horse as a God was very innocent. The conquering Trojans in triumph welcomed him to their city, but the legion of soldiers contained in his belly opened the gates of their city to the enemy, who sacked and destroyed it. Troy was no more.

The enemies introduced by God in the constitution will overthrow our liberties, destroy the republic, and perchance light the fire of the Inquisition. Since we have been threatened, it is well enough to be on our guard. Had our constitution been enforced from the first, we should not now be menaced by danger. The constitution provides that no one holding allegiance to any foreign potentate or power can become a citizen of the United States. The pope of Rome is a foreign potentate and is a very formidable power. The constitution should be enforced against him and all his insolent emissaries.

Lafayette declared that if ever American liberty was overthrown it would be done by the intrigues of the Catholic priesthood. Lafayette was no stranger to Rome and knew well what he was talking about. Americans, be on your guard.

G. W. THURSTON.

WETTSTEIN'S ATHEISM.

IN FREETHOUGHT, February 22, you have an article from Otto Wettstein, in the Twentieth Century, on Materialism as opposed to the Theist or Deist. Otto is an Atheist of the most pronounced type—subtle, acute, bold, and outspoken. He seems to say, “There is no God, no need of God, and no room for God. Matter is all in all, a subtle but a senseless force.”

This is pure Atheism. It does not say, “There is no God,” but it does affirm that all attempts to prove a God utterly fail; ergo, the conclusion rests secure, “There is no God!”

Otto takes the very sound ground that when every other position is proven to be absurd, yours must be right. This is logic. It is admitted in science, in geometry, the most exact of all sciences, and in law, the most exact and exacting of all human studies. We make no dispute on this mode of argument. It is as perfect as human reason can attain.

Now, has Otto shown in that paper that all other conclusions are absurd? We opine not. We believe the boot is on the other leg. Atheism is the absurd, and Deism the grand truth that stands out in bold relief, and proclaims, “All other suppositions are absurd. Deism is the only rational explanation of the phenomena of the universe, the world, man, his power, his sentiments and his operations.”

Scientists are not necessarily Atheists. Indeed, the Atheist is the exception. The great mass of the scientists of to-day are profound believers in God, and see his finger in ten thousand works that no “subtle but senseless matter” can produce.

The trouble with Otto Wettstein is that he had “God in the form of man” in his mind all the time—God, local, “in one place, in some place,” as ignorant man imagined God to be. God is not that. This personality consists, not in a personal form, but in a consciousness of his own existence, and of all other things, a self-existent mind that knows all things, and does all that requires mind to do. Otto himself confesses the presence of God where he says all phenomena are evolved by the “subtle but senseless” forces of the atoms. Subtle and senseless are contradictory. Subtle is sensible. God is the subtle, and matter the senseless.

It is this God in the shape of man that Otto battles with, and finds absurd; and it is absurd. No scientist receives it. It is open to all of Otto's objections. It has been abandoned by all but the blind leaders of the blind. The God of the scientist is a part of the eternal, co-eternal with matter, in all space, with matter, the “subtle” but not senseless part of the universe, its mind, its God. In the needle's eye, in the needle, and where there is neither needle nor eye, in all space.

Otto says he knows matter to fill all space, and therefore God cannot. Here he ventures an affirmative he cannot prove, he does not know. Matter occupies space, and heat, light, electricity, noise, and other things go through it. So may God, more subtle than all.

Only this remains: We agree with Otto that time, space, matter, and its laws are all eternal, were never made, there never was a creation. Changes go on forever in details. None in the whole. Evolution is change. “Senseless matter” could do all that, we grant. Senseless matter could do all that is senseless, that displays no plan, no wisdom, no ulterior design.

But when we come to the origin of species, flora, fauna, and man, of distinct, unchangeable species, that reproduce their kind, that think of God, that have love, veneration, justice, and grand designs, we look for some subtle force that is not senseless matter, and we find it in the word God. God did it. All is explained. And all other explanation is absurd, is short, is unsatisfactory, not competent, ridiculous!

A world appears with five continents. On each a man,

They are thousands of miles apart with no means of communication. At last the means are found. They come together, and are of the same species. Alike in every particular that is essential. All talk, think of God, love alike, breed alike; in size, erect posture, age, all alike. They have religion, poetry, romance, music, painting, dress, houses, cook, make weapons and tools. They meet and intermarry, all as one.

In these races, and in all races, there seems to have been a special creation of the first specimens, and no change, and no other production, save from parents afterwards. Not a single fact to the contrary has been found.

This, as we think, indicates the finger of God, and makes every hypothesis absurd.

That objections may be raised against that theory we know, some serious ones, but to our mind all answerable.

The attributes of God, the form and manner of this existence, and the part he plays in man's affairs is another theme, apart from the naked fact of a divine intelligence. These are open questions, but raise no impediment to the solid fact that there is a God.

The early efforts of man to picture God after his own form, and the pretended revelations from God, are the mere dreams of a fevered childhood, and unworthy of attention.

Whatever God may be, it is manifest that man is to know nothing of God or nature but through the sciences with pain and labor. We are in the world to understand and to beautify it, and advance ourselves by a knowledge of absolute truth. No fiction need apply.

H. L. KNIGHT.

THE FRUIT.

"Here I am," said Abraham when Jehovah commanded him to offer his son Isaac. During matins on Christmas day in Dadesjo church occurred an incident that recalls the offering on Mount Moriah, and in which Jehovah certainly would have found satisfaction.

P. R. Lingren, a soldier from Betingetorp, had taken his eight-year-old son with him to church. He stopped with him just outside the church, drew a big knife, and with this weapon dealt his son a blow in the neck. The terrified boy tore away from the enraged father and ran screaming into the church, the blood gushing out of his gaping wound. He rushed up the aisle towards the altar and screamed: "Father has stabbed me; father has stabbed me!" This appearance of course created great consternation in the congregation, among which the boy's mother was found. They immediately cared for the wounded boy and removed him into the church-warden's house, where he received treatment.

At the exhortation of the unfortunate mother search was begun for Lingren, who was believed to have sought to take away his own life. He was found standing by a lilac hedge near the church, and had an even worse wound on one side of his neck, but was conscious. He admitted that he stabbed his son in the neck and gave as a reason that he would like to "save the little one's soul." He thought that "the boy would more certainly be saved if he died while yet in years of childhood."

He had to die himself, and since he did not die of the wound from the knife, he intended to drown himself in a well, but a touch of the cold water somewhat shook his resolution and he went and placed himself at the above mentioned hedge. Both father and son are under treatment in Vexjo hospital.—Translated from Fritankaren, Stockholm, Sweden.

A LAW-SUIT that is giving much annoyance to the pope has recently been begun against him by Count Ferretti, a nephew of Pius the Ninth, for the purpose of recovering a sum of four million lire, which he declares was left to him by his venerable relative. The count maintains that the amount was deposited by his uncle in an English bank just before his death, and that it formed a part of his private fortune. This, however, the Vatican declines to admit, and, declaring that it belongs to the Curia, refuses to surrender any part thereof.

Bound volumes of FREETHOUGHT, 1889, $3.

CHRONICLES OF SIMON CHRISTIANUS.

CHAPTER II.

THE JOURNEY.

The Start.—Simon kicked in.—Simon equipped for his Journey.

1. And, as I looked, there came forth a man from the multitude, whose name was Simon, and desired to be admitted into the roadway.

2. And the preacher gave a loud shout, and rejoiced, and taking Simon by the hand, said unto him, Seest thou yonder little gate?

3. And Simon said, Yea, I see it.

4. Then said the preacher, Do thou make haste thither; and when there, do thou knock, and the gate shall be opened unto thee.

5. And the preacher gave unto Simon a guide-book, and bid him God speed.

6. And Simon made haste towards the gate.

7. Now, the gate, which was the entrance into the roadway, opened into a certain wide and filthy conduit, which the beast, and his children, and their servants had made.

8. And the conduit passed through a certain high and lofty mountain, and led such as entered therein to the city of Conversion.

9. And the name of the mountain through which the conduit passed was Rationality; and the mountain was exceedingly steep, so that no man could have passed over it into the city.

10. And the beast, seeing that the mountain was impassable, had, with vast pains, made the conduit which passed under.

11. And in the conduit there dwelt some of the beast's children; to wit, a son whose name was Bigotry, and a certain lachrymose harlot called Contrition; she it was who presided over the gate and admitted the pilgrims into the roadway; and her mother's name was Fearohell, one of the beast's concubines, who had borne him many children.

12. And Fearohell, the beast's concubine, dwelt without the gate; albeit she had entrance when she chose to the conduit and the roadway, and that not seldom.

13. And through the conduit there flowed down to the city of Conversion a very filthy stream called Theology; and mixed with the stream was much lambs' blood, and not a little of a certain sticky slime called Graceogod, and many other abominations.

14. And when Fearohell perceived Simon coming towards the gate, she quickly took her scourge, and ran to him, and belabored him heartily therewith, for though she was old and withered she had yet much vigor in her limbs.

15. And Simon cried out amain, and ran for the gate, and the beldame scourged him with all good will.

16. And when he came to the gate, there came forth the lachrymose damsel; and Simon embraced her, and besought her to give him admittance.

17. And the lachrymose damsel, whose name was Contrition, opened the gate; and the beldame, lifting up her foot, lent Simon a kick, and he fell headlong into the mud and the slime and filthiness of the conduit, and the gate was shut.

18. And Simon gathered himself up, and shook himself.

19. And the beast's son, whose name was Bigotry, came towards him, and shook him by the hand, and bid him welcome.

20. And Bigotry took a certain vessel, and put therein some of the filthy stream called Theology and mixed therewith three handfuls of a certain ill-flavored powder called Biblical education, and, having added a little mother's milk, he made a paste, and therewith did anoint Simon, and plentifully besmeared him, even from head to foot.

21. And the name of the paste which Bigotry made was Prejudice.

22. And Bigotry charged Simon, saying, Take heed of the snares of our enemy, the evil one, who spreadeth deep nets for the unwary.

23. And Bigotry continued his discourse to Simon, and warned him when he came out of the end of the conduit, that he should neither look back nor loiter upon the way, but to get from the mountain with all speed, and by no means to stray upon the mountain, nor get out of the gutter, for that the mountain was full of pitfalls, and a woesome, dangerous place, inhabited by many terrible creatures, who were continually sending down great stones at the pilgrims.

24. And, in sooth, the great stones which fell from the mountain did well-nigh make the gutter impassable and block up the conduit.

25. And the stones which fell were called Arguments.

26. And there came another beldame to Simon, Credulity by name; and she was the sister of the beast, and old and hideous, and had but one eye, and squinted therewith horribly; and her mouth was like unto an open sepulchre, and her throat exceeding wide, so that she was a mighty swallower.

27. And Credulity gave Simon an eye-glass, wherewith to read his guide-book, and by which he might perceive his enemies.

28. And the name of this eye-glass was Imagination.

29. And Credulity bid him, when he would use this glass, to first dip it in the stream of Theology, and the slime thereof, so that he might see clearly.

30. And Simon put on his eye-glasses, and immediately the whole conduit appeared a delightsome pathway, and the filthy waters thereof clear as crystal, and the stinking mud as fragrant spices.

31. And Simon made haste, and bedaubed himself with mud and slime, and drank plentifully of the waters.

32. And when he had wallowed sufficiently therein he addressed himself to the journey, and went forward, manfully, drinking and bedaubing himself.

33. And when he came near to the end of the conduit, he began to be amazed at the stones which had fallen and been cast down from the mountain, for they well-nigh filled up the conduit, and he began to clamber over them with much labor, and grew afraid, and knew not what to do.

34. But there came forth one of the guides, and threw some of the mud and the slime of the gutter upon him, and bespattered him about the eyes therewith.

35. And the guide also took a certain rope called Sophistry, and fastened it about Simon, and drew him along over the stones therewith; and, albeit Simon many times fell down among the stones, and bruised himself very sore, yet was he at last dragged over them, and got out of the conduit and into the gutter which led to the city.

36. Then did the guide show him the city of Conversion, and bid him haste thitherward with all speed, saying, There is no safety for thee till thou hast entered the gate thereof, nor on this side wilt thou find any peace; and I do warn thee that thou take heed to thy footsteps, for thou art now on the domains of Ahri-manes, our great and bitter enemy.

37. Then began Simon to be sorely afraid, and said, Wherewithal shall I defend myself against so great a foe, if he appeareth unto me?

38. And the guide made answer and said, Fear not, my son; he will not harm thee, if thou wilt but bestir thyself and get thee into yonder valley, called the Valley of Repentance; at the extremity is the city of Conversion.

39. So Simon, taking heart, girded up his loins, and ran for the valley; but when he had run awhile, he began to slacken pace, and to look about him; and, seeing nothing terrible on the mountain, nor any danger near, he little by little got out of the gutter, and presently sat down to rest him somewhat, meaning shortly to go forward.

40. And forthwith he fell asleep and dreamed a dream.

41. And in his dream the Ancient of days appeared to him in his shirt.* And the Ancient one had no hair upon his head, but instead thereof a piece of white wool; neither had he any legs, but, instead thereof, two brazen wheels.

42. And the Ancient one sat upon a caldron of fire, and the flames thereof entered his body and issued forth at his navel; and from his nostrils came forth, as it were, a great stream of water; and the water was hot and scorching, being heated by the flame which proceeded from the caldron of fire.†

* Here the text is somewhat obscure, and we are unable to say whether the shirt here spoken of belonged to Simon or to the Ancient of days, but, from the context, we presume the latter.—TRANSLATORS.

† See Daniel vii, 9. Daniel's description of the "Ancient of days" is

43. And Simon admired exceedingly that the shirt was not consumed.

44. And the Ancient one looked upon Simon with a fierce and terrible look, and pointed towards the city of Conversion and immediately he vanished.

45. And Simon awoke, and was amazed; and, lo! the thunders pealed forth, and the lightnings ran swiftly hither and thither, and the cattle of the fields erected their tails and made to the water-pools for shelter.

46. And Simon quaked exceedingly, and ran towards the Valley of Repentance.—To be Continued.

BEATITUDES OF THE HOLY SINNERS.

(Appointed to be read in a loud tone of voice in the Church of the Holy Sinners, on the first Sunday in the calendar of Saint Dives, and fifty-one Sundays after that, and three times a day, before, after, and during services, and at other times when convenient and there is a big crowd present. To be read in all the churches that expect or hope to collar the shekels of the ungodly, or rake in the scads of the good, in the year of grace 1890.)

Now there was a certain rich man which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day.

Blessed forever be his memory; for he hath this day given $95,000 to the church societies, and hath $4,000,000 left for himself.

Shout his name mightily, and let it appear in four-line pica at the head of each column.

Blessed is the man who can give his check for three figures; his seed shall be mighty upon the earth.

But more blessed is he who can make it four; his name shall be written in the records and printed in the minutes of the association, and graven with the pen of a cunning scribe upon the chronicles of the conference. Yea, they shall call him Mister in the synod and Doctor in the convention.

But thrice blessed is he who can make it a ten and five noughts; his horn shall be exalted with honor; he shall be known in the congregation and on 'change, where he sitteth with the elders of the land. Yea, when he goeth forth a horn shall be blown before him, and when he giveth a dollar a gong shall be beaten in the sanctuary.

Lazarus shall behold him afar off, and make ready to vacate the premises in Abraham's bosom.

Abraham shall hear of it, and shall greatly enlarge his bosom, and have it newly furnished and re-upholstered throughout. Selah!

The praise of our lips shall set him on high; if it be so that he can not read, then will we call our colleges after him; and if it be that he signeth his name with a "mark," then we shall endow chairs of Egyptology and Sanscrit literature in his name.

FROM AN OBSOLETE GOSPEL.

(Extract from a strange manuscript found in an obscure country church, said to have been written by a man named Mark, but believed by our richest scholars, on account of the general air of improbability and the absurdly impractical and preposterous teaching enunciated therein, to be the invention of a satirist.)

And Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how the people cast money into the treasury; and many that were rich cast in much. And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two mites, which made a farthing. And he called upon his disciples, and saith unto them: Verily I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast in more than all they which have cast into the treasury; for all they did cast in was of their abundance; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living.—Brooklyn Eagle.

S. P. PUTNAM lectured at Oakland, Sunday afternoon. A good audience was present. Addresses were made by Mr. Johnson and others. A piano duet was given by the Misses Haelke, and a song entitled "Thomas Paine" by Mr. Youmans. Monthly meetings may be held hereafter.

evidently a bad translation of the one here given; and, as the learned Dr. Tresham Gregg surmises, both visions are a mystic and prophetic shadowing forth of that triumph of modern invention, the steam-engine.—TRANSLATORS.

CATHOLIC PRIESTS IN NEW YORK.

A New York Catholic priest is a sight for eyes which have not before looked upon him. The priest in Ireland knows that he is at best but the spiritual shepherd of a conquered and despised race. He is conscious of the existence of his "betters" in the enviroing gentry. In Italy, the priest is aware that the people have so near a view of the head of the church and of the fountains of faith and ecclesiastical power as not to stand greatly in awe of them. There are so many priests in the home and centre of Catholicism that the struggle for a lazy existence compels, in many cases, bare feet, rags, dirt, and other outward signs of sanctity. The Italian priest, living in a country whose people have fought the church and wrested from her their civil liberty, is apt to cultivate humility of mien, unless he has a sure thing in some monastery or about the Vatican.

In Paris, you see the priest in his unmasculine gown and preposterous shovel-hat slinking along the streets, lean of figure, with downcast eyes, giving the wall to everybody, and looked on with neither respect nor liking by anybody, save the old women.

But the New York priest! Here he comes, in his long-tailed black coat, flying free, his stride a swagger, and his bullet head topped with a tile as shiny as Boss Buckley's own, his shoulders as broad as Sullivan's, and his jowls as red and pendulous as those of ex-Sheriff Hopkins. There is bold, insolent authority in the close-set, mean little eyes, the pug nose, and in every line of the coarse, fat face. Authority! Only the stage policeman equals the New York priest in that. There may be ascetics among the fathers here, but I have yet to see a countenance among them all who stalk the streets that would not give a refined woman a shock of repulsion.

They live high, these butcher-bar-keeper-like padres. Yesterday, I dropped for luncheon into a little down-town restaurant, and two of them—mere ordinary privates in the priestly army—were seated, each with a bottle of champagne at his hand. Probably they had been on a begging tour and needed refreshment. The proprietor of the little place was obsequious, for I dare say he does not have in a week a dozen customers rich or extravagant enough to order champagne.—The Argonaut.

Shut Out by Bigotry.

To the Editors of Freethought:

About two years ago, Mr. Putnam, whilst on his organizing tour through Washington, visited Port Angeles and delivered one of his very interesting lectures, but was advised not to attempt the organization of a Secular society here, inasmuch as there was a colony project being attempted, which was at the time thought to be sufficient unto itself, and whose members did not wish to inaugurate a society within a society, holding that the rostrum of the Colony Society was, in fact, a Freethought platform—free alike to Christian and Infidel, science and religion, and to any and all isms. But as "well-laid plans of mice and men gang aft a-glee," so have the Liberals of this place found themselves mistaken in their ideas that such diverse elements would amalgamate, or that so broad a platform could be perpetuated here.

Last year a Congregational church society was organized here, and the project of building a church was at once set on foot. Several hundred dollars were donated by the Missionary Society, and the rest was raised here by donations of labor, lumber, money, etc., much of which was given by the Liberals on the promise that the building should be named Independence Hall, and should be free to the use of all. Some of us had heard that old, old fib before, and knew that as some of the money had been given by the church at large, they would not dare to give it such a name, and that, therefore, they were receiving money under false pretenses. The church was dedicated to the service of God, under the name of the Congregational church.

About one month ago a Secular Union was organized here, and to test the honesty of the promises so profusely made, a committee was appointed to wait upon the church trustees and ask for the building, one night in the week, for the use of the Union. Of course we expected to be refused, as we were, the preacher saying that our aims and objects would not be in harmony with the charter of the church, and he was opposed to creating antagonism, and therefore he was obliged to refuse our request.

But this sort of opposition is good for the health and growth of Freethought, it puts its advocates on their mettle. We shall make a strong effort to get a house of our own, and I hope we will name it Independence Hall, and mean what we say when we so name it.

Before closing this letter, which I fear has already grown too long, I wish to add that under the auspices of the union, Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel was with us, and gave us three exceptionally intellectual lectures on the 11th, 12th, and 13th inst.

We do not often have the pleasure of listening to such an able speaker, and we sincerely hope we may be able to secure her services again in the not distant future. Yours for Freethought, LAURA E. PETERS.

Port Angeles, Wash.

Port Townsend.—Its Lecture and Its Boom.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Mattie P. Krekel lectured at Red Men's Hall in this city, February 5, 6, and 7, to large audiences, including many of our first citizens. Mrs. Krekel is unquestionably one of the ablest speakers on the Liberal rostrum. She had no trouble to get an audience and none to deeply interest them in the subjects she discussed. In fact, from start to finish, the ear of every listener was all attention. No one twisted in his seat as if tired. No one's feet shuffled with impatience, and no one left; but all applauded vigorously her beautiful comparisons of creeds and strong utterances. Mrs. Krekel does not sputter when she talks, nor does she scatter. Every idea is put at you clean-cut and separated from all others; and she is so skillful in the selection of words that the one she uses fits exactly where she puts it, and requires no explanation afterwards nor apology. For myself, I do not remember to have ever met her superior in this respect. She simply seems to never say a thing other than what she meant; and there are but precious few with tongues so obedient to the will. The people here would love to be honored by the presence of Mrs. Krekel again and often. In fact, it has been suggested to build a church and parsonage for her, and keep her here; and if we can and she will accept, it would soon become the most popular church in the city. I know I have said a good deal in this letter in her favor, but she deserves it. She is not hot-headed. She is deliberate and deep. She is earnest, sincere, and dignified. Her reasons are hard sense told in words familiar to the multitude, and therefore convincing. She is not a jumping-jack talker. She did a great deal of good here, and will elsewhere; and let us hope she may be kept in the field for many years yet.

Port Townsend is still booming. Truly, etc., D. W. SMITH.

P. S. —I hand you herewith draft on San Francisco for $20, my first year's subscription to stock. Trusting you will win, I remains yours, Port Townsend, Wash. SMITH.

Dampness on the Willamette.

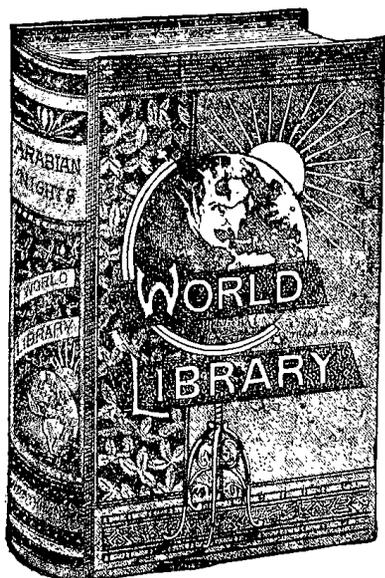

To the Editors of Freethought:

We have the biggest flood, I suppose, that ever was known. I have lost one chicken house, two stables, and my cow shed is under water. My horse is on an island with just enough land to stand on. The principal part of my property is under water. Your servant, Oregon City, Or. G. JOHNSON.

Pious Gambling.

It is evident that the lottery as an aid to religious enterprise is fully as popular still in Europe as it once was in the bucolic "church fair" of America. The German minister of the interior has recently given permission to the Evangelical Mission Society for East Africa to hold a lottery in Berlin for the purpose of raising funds to endow a mission hospital in Zanzibar. The prizes include a large number of paintings by prominent German artists. Two hundred thousand tickets will be sold at 25 cents each.

GIORDANO BRUNO is discussed at length in the March Atlantic Monthly. William R. Thayer, who writes the article which he devotes to the "Trial, Opinions, and Death of Bruno," quotes largely from his examination before the Inquisition, and shows very fairly his claims to be remembered. "Bruno," says Mr. Thayer, "did not prove that his convictions were true, but he proved beyond peradventure that he was a true man."

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRAYG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY. A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce, but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be Obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESS.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last an heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavillion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the Invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can lie on to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir. Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portraiture of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. PRESSCOTT.

BNJ FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll,) with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated late scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POET'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

TRAVELING ALONE
A WOMAN'S JOURNEY
AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

(Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Price, by mail, 30 cents.
Address The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

PRINTING!

Having procured one of the best Presses manufactured and a large assortment of display type, and employing competent workmen, the Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

Letter-heads,

Bill-heads,

Programmes,

Envelopes,

Business Cards,

Postal Cards,

Tickets,

Placards,

Receipts,

Posters,

Dodgers,

Circulars,

Etc. etc.

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc, worth $35 for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do., $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
" Forks	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded.

Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.20.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills.
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Francisco.

Wm. W. NOBLE,
Merchant Tailor.

1222 STOCKTON ST.

Bet. Pacific and Broadway.

DRESS SUITS A SPECIALTY

Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass by.

PUTNAM'S WORKS.

The New God. 10c. The New God was made by an artist hand, guided by a poet soul. It is as perfect as sculpture. The creator makes his "god" in his own image, and breathes into his nostrils the breath of his own life.—L. K. Washburn.

Golden Throne. A romance. Price, $1 00. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words, the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Walls and Wanderings. A new American story. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1 00. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—John Swinton's Pader.

rometheus: A Poem. Price, $1. "It is crammed with life, thought and profound emotion, poured forth, it seems to me, with extraordinary richness and beauty."—Dr. Henry W. Bellows.

Gottlieb: His Life; or, Love Triumphant. A Romance of Earth, Heaven and Hell. Price, 25 cents. "To describe all the beauties of this simple, yet touchingly told little tale, would be a work of which I confess myself utterly incapable. To realize what it is, you must read the book itself. I have never read anything so exquisitely beautiful and good in all my life before."—Elmina Drake Slenker.

A REGULAR EDUCATED AND LEGALLY QUALIFIED PHYSICIAN, and the most successful (in his specialty) as his practice will surely prove. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men such as seminal weakness, impotency, &c., resulting from indiscretion and ignorance of youth. Those who are ailing should send ten (10) cents for his book, "Private Counsellor," setting forth an external Application—

A POSITIVE CURE

The book is worth many times its cost, and should be read by the young for instruction and the afflicted for relief.

All Communications Strictly Confidential.

Plain Envelopes used. The book spoken of sent sealed. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, NEW JERSEY Say where you saw this Advertisement.

[From the Washington National View.]

Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, New Jersey offers his valuable services to all those in need of a kind, sympathetic and skillful physician. Similar advertisements from unreluctant practitioners have been assailed and exposed by the press, but, Dr. Fellows, a specialist, in his line, stands foremost in his profession, and the encomiums showered upon him publicly as well as in private, are flattering evidences of the high appreciation and confidence his long and conscientious devotion to his specialties in his profession have so justly merited for him, and it is safe to trust him.

A Testimonial.

WEST LIBERTY, O., Aug. 12, 1888.

DR. R. P. FELLOWS—Dear Sir: The remedy you sent is working like a charm. I am completely surprised the way it acts upon the organs. Have only been using it one week, and that weakness, (seminal weakness) is coming out all right.

Yours respectfully, J. R.

REMARKS—The above is a fair sample of the hundreds of testimonials received from all parts of the United States, from young, middle-aged and elderly men, suffering from various kinds of sexual complaints, but who are now cured by my External Application, the greatest of all known remedies for this class of diseases. As I am an out-and-out Liberal I trust the Free-thinkers of the Land will give me their patronage, and not waste their time and money on Christian doctor.

DR. FELLOWS.

The Truth Seeker Annual

AND

FREETHINKERS' ALMANAC.

1890—(E.M. 290).

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

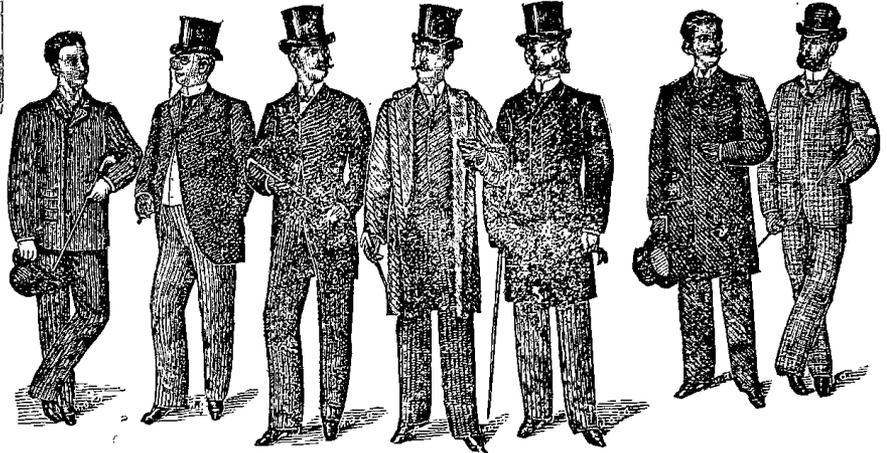

CONTENTS: Calander for 1890.
 Freethought in the United States, 1889.
 Faded Flowers (poem) By J. H. Kemsburg
 The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue, by T. B. Wakeman.
 Mostly Fools W. Stewart Ross (Saladin)
 Record of the Spanish Inquisition.
 Dates of the Fabrica in of some Roman Catholic Dogmas.
 The Boiler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a moral. Helen H. Gardener.
 The Middle Ages, Illustrated.—The Priest, the Supernatural World, the Reformation, Future Terrors.
 The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated.
 Freethought Journals in the United States.
 In Search of a Spirit, E. M. Macdonald.
 Why I Left the Church, Hugh O. Pentecost
 115 pages, price 25 cents.
 Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.
 The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

- Architects and Builders.
 F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.
Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.
 Hopper & Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.
Assayers.
 H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.
Cabinet-makers.
 A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.
Carpenters and Builders.
 A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND.
Contracting Painters.
 Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and 26.
Crockery, Glassware, Etc.
 Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.
Dentists.
 S. P. Chalfant, N E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)
Independent German Congregation.
 Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.
Lawyers.
 Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.
Lodging Houses.
 S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.
Merchant Tailors.
 Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.
 Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.
Magnesia Sectional Covering.
 C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.
Music Teachers.
 Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1463 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)
Physicians and Surgeons.
 G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.
 Dr. C. A. Bouesteele, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.
Stoves and Plumbing.
 F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.
Stoves (Gasoline).
 Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.
Upholstering and Furniture.
 August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.
Wine, Beer, and Liquor.
 Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.
 Rapp & Debarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment, cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.
 J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.
Watchmakers and Jewelers.
 Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.
 Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
 DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
 PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.
 OLIVER HINCKLEY SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
 Telephone 1950.

P. A. CLARK. CHAS. W. CLARK

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS, NURSERYMEN,

Catalpas for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines.
 Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice.
 Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address CLARK BROS.,
 P. O. Box C, San Jacinto, Cal.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
 375 Natoma st., cor. 5th, S. F.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5..... 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm " " Diamond*..... 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy.
 Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,
 PUTNAM & MACDONALD,
 04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
 Six Months......75
 Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

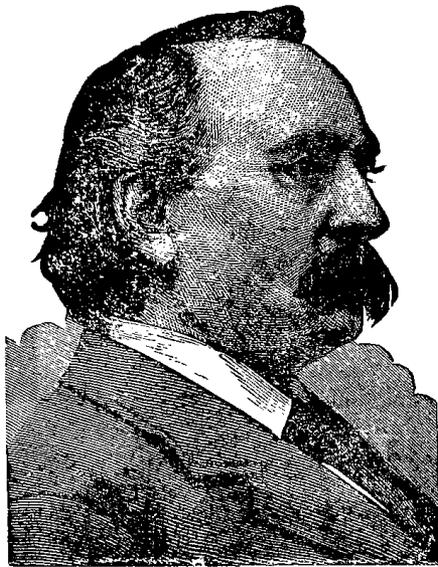

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
 Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.
 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Company.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

REMSBURG'S WORKS.

False Claims. Price 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Anti-slavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic.

Fathers of the Republic Paine, Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. Price 15 cents.

Bible Mora's. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

Standard Scientific Works

Works by Alexander Bain.

English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
Education as a Science.....1.75

Works by Charles Darwin.

Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin, 2 vols.....4.50
Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00

Works by J. W. Draper.

History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75

Works by Ernst Haeckel.

The History of Creation, 2 vols.....$5.00

Works by Huxley.

Lay Sermons.....$1.75
The Advance of Science......25
American Addresses.....1.25
More Criticisms on Darwin......0
The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00

Works by John Stewart Mill.

Principles of Political Economy, 2 vols.....$4.00
On Liberty.....1.25

Works by Richard A. Proctor.

Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
The Moon.....2.00

Works by Herbert Spencer.

Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
Man versus the State......30
First Principles.....2.00
Principles of Biology, 2 vols.....4.00
Principles of Psychology, 2 vols.....4.00
Principles of Sociology, 2 vols.....4.00
Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
Universal Progress.....2.00
Essay, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
Education.....1.25
Organic Evolution......75

Works by Andrew D. White.

Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
The Warfare of Science.....1.00

Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.

Body and Mind.....$1.50
Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50

Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.

Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

By Carl Marx.

Capital.....$3.00

By Asa Gray.

Darwiniana.....$2.00

By L. L. McLaughlin.

Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50

By John B. Henck.

Field-Book for Railroad Engineers.....$2.50

By C. Marcel.

Study of Languages.....$1.25

By Lester F. Ward.

Dynamic Sociology, 2 vols.....$5.00

By Frederick Overman.

A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00

B. F. G. Fairfield.

Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25

By W. B. Carpenter.

Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25

By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.

Evolution.....$1.50

By Sir John Lubbock.

Origin of Civilization.....$5.00

By Charles A. Abbott.

A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50

By Garrett P. Serviss.

Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50

By Nathan Sheppard.

Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50

English as She is Spoke.....$.30
English as She is Wrote......30
Thos. Carlyle—His Life, Books, Theories......30
Comedies for Amateur Acting......30
The Distracted Young Preacher......25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

—BY—

W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form, a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE

Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.

13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order.

The Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is entirely damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thief-resisting. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that, ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only.

Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future

Republic of North America

BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1. Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters

impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 11.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, MARCH 15, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - MARCH 15, 1890.

THE SAN FRANCISCO FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The meeting of the San Francisco Freethought Society Sunday evening, March 16, at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, will be addressed by W. S. Bell, on the subject of "Christian Crusades."

SENATOR STANFORD ON FINANCE.

The old-line Greenbackers and many other finance reformers will hereafter leap with delight whenever the name of Leland Stanford is spoken. Last Monday the senator from California introduced in the Senate a resolution instructing the Finance Committee to inquire if a loan may not be made by the government upon local state mortgages to bear a low rate of interest, say from 1 to 2 per cent per annum, and the government to reserve the power to call in a reasonable amount of its loan at its discretion.

Senator Stanford's argument is something as follows: That it is the duty of the government to issue currency upon the value of real property, or authorize the establishment of national banks with power to put legal-tender notes in circulation upon such security which would be guaranteed in their redemption by the treasury of the United States. "If a national bank," he says, "which purchases bonds issued by the government and to the extent of 90 cents on the dollar is authorized to put notes in circulation as currency, which the general government guarantees the payment of; if the bullion from the gold mines may be taken to the mint and have its value fixed by the impression of a die; if silver bullion may be accorded free coinage because of its standard and fineness, why may not the farms or town property of established, fixed, and certain value be used as the basis of a sound and healthful currency?" Why not, indeed?

"I can see no reason," Mr. Stanford goes on, "why land or town property having attained a permanent value indicated by the assessor's estimate, ascertained by impartial values, might not be used as a currency with as much confidence as the paper obligations of the government, or as the metals produced from the mines. I have seen the financial world twice driven from its prosperity by the fear that the excessive production of metals should prove valueless for use as money. The best money is that based upon the wealth of the nation and the property and honor of all its people. A currency that has for its security the real property of the country is more surely guaranteed than by the bullion produced from the mines and stamped at the national mints. The country owns no mines, and who shall say the time is far distant when private ownership shall hold in trust all the mines, and then of what value will be the constitutional provision that gives the government the right to coin money if it has neither gold nor silver to coin and stamp? To coin and issue money for circulation is not the most important function of the government: when it is considered that Congress, the legislatures of the several states, and the municipal bodies of incorporated cities are armed with the powers of taxation, and individual assessors are clothed with the right of valuation for purposes of taxation; that for the non-payment of taxes the tax-collector may sell property without judicial investigation or decree of court, or without any reservation of the rights of minors, absent persons, or persons of unsound mind, how much less significant seems the power to coin money and control its volume of circulation.

"Such an issue of national currency to a limited extent would have its first effect in quieting all apprehension of a panic or financial disaster that are sometimes more hard to bear and more ruinous in consequences than the resulting calamities would be possible to a financial panic. All disastrous possibilities would be made avoidable and all branches of business would have breathed into them new life. Danger of money panics locks the gold and silver (in coin or bullion) in the vaults of the banker and money-lender, and while gold and silver coin is unusable, it is valueless. No man is rich, and no community prosperous with hoarded gold. Money is like any other property, worthless until actively employed."

Senator Stanford says that he has gone over this plan in a general way with a number of senators, who were all apparently well pleased with it, though what its fate will be when our legislators act upon it in an official capacity is quite another matter. If the question is kept free from the taint of politics and personal interest, it is possible that some good may come from a discussion of it.

"FLEE TO THE MOUNTAINS."

They have a prophet in Oakland, and his name is Bennett. He was converted into a religious lunatic by Mrs. Woodworth, and now goes through the streets on a bicycle, crying in a loud voice, "Flee to the mountains." Occasionally he stops at a street corner to harangue the crowd, and then mounts his two-wheeled steed and goes upon his way like another John the Baptist.

The destruction foreshadowed by Bennett is to come in the form of an earthquake, and a tidal wave which will overwhelm San Francisco and Oakland and leave no trace of them standing.

Strangely enough, Bennett finds people who accept his dire prognostication, and really believe that on April 14 the wave will come as predicted. These people "gather in groups on the streets by day and by night to discuss the situation. They fall down and pray. They preach the coming doom. They hasten hither and thither and either with shouts or horrified whispers and uplifted finger give their awful warning to each and every passer-by. Indoor meetings are held at which the details of the coming cataclysm are being arranged and the plan of action by which the faithful are to escape is being carefully formulated."

So large is the following of Bennett that the crowds who gather to hear him block the widest streets, and, with the addition of "holiness bands" and the Salvation Army, Oakland bids fair to be filled with howling cranks. But a counter-irritant is at work in the person of one Captain Hunt, who follows the bicycle prophet about and endeavors to bring the people back to their senses. Here is a newspaper report of last Sunday's proceedings:

"To-day at the corner of Broadway and Eighth street the audience of Bennett, the bicycle prophet, completely blocked the streets, and had to be dispersed by the police, a large posse of officers moving constantly through the crowd and making them give way to pedestrians and teams.

At the same time Captain F. W. Hunt, the street orator who has entered the field to oppose Bennett and his prophetic warnings, commenced his exhortation on the opposite corner.

"Flee to the mountains and save yourselves!" cried Bennett.

"Stay where you are and behave yourselves!" shouted back Captain Hunt.

"All who believe in the prophecy and will escape before the day of doom will be saved, but every unbelieving sinner will be swallowed up!" shouted Bennett, the bicycle prophet.

"All who believe in the prophecy are cranks, and will be in the insane asylums before the day of doom arrives!" shouted back Captain Hunt, and for more than an hour this remarkable oratorical duel was fought from the opposite corners of the street.

It is said that the business men of Oakland are combining to support Captain Hunt in his good work. Certainly something should be done before all the weak-minded people of Oakland go daft entirely. Bad water and the influenza are evils enough for one city without the added infliction of an epidemic delusion.

Since writing the above we learn that Bennett is not the original prognosticator of the approaching flood. It was a man named Erickson, who, while living in the East, obeyed the scriptural command to forsake wife and children for the good of the cause. Mr. Erickson, however, was compensated for his sacrifice by finding another wife in Oakland, though at present his whereabouts are unknown, owing to the threatened presence across the bay of Mrs. Erickson No. 1. Of such, we may remark, is the kingdom of heaven.

THAT DISCUSSION.

Concerning the late discussion on Spiritualism before the Freethought Society, a correspondent of the Carrier Dove reports as follows:

"A lively time was had at the Freethought meeting held at 421 Post street last Sunday evening. A discussion had been announced to take place between Professor Seymour, Spiritualist, and S. P. Putnam, Esq., Materialist, with Spiritualism for a text. The serious illness of Professor Seymour prevented his appearance, much to his chagrin. Consequently Mr. Will C. Hodge, of Wisconsin, upon invitation, kindly consented to deliver a lecture upon the subject: 'The Man-God, or God in Man—Which?' It was an able lecture, and delivered with fine effect, calling down hearty applause repeatedly. At its close, Mr. Putnam took the platform and delivered the address which he had prepared for discussion. It was well wrought and solidly put together, and advanced many ideas worthy of consideration. Mr. Putnam understands the tricks of the talkers, consequently, when he left the platform he left his audience in an exceedingly high state of hilarity over his comic tales.

"A German gentleman present essayed a reply to the address, which, although good, was not fully comprehended by the audience, in consequence of its broken delivery. A traveling fakir next begged the privilege of taking the stand. He played the stale ballot trick disgracefully on an unsuspecting old man, and considered it glory. These vultures have their use though; they are the scavengers who clean the ranks of true mediumship of lying pretenders and brazen frauds. Mr. Curtis was next up, and — down. There is no argument in heartless ridicule. The gentleman said he had no soul, and the assertion met with the unanimous indorsement of the audience. Through invitation, Mr. Marshal Wheeler took the floor in reply to Mr. Putnam, and judging from the applause, he made a perfect success. With the conclusion of Mr. Wheeler's remarks the meeting closed with the best of feeling."

To the above report is appended this card from Professor Seymour.

"I learn from persons present at the Freethought meeting on Sunday evening, that S. P. Putnam, because I was (through serious illness—having had two attacks of pneumonia in four days) unable to meet him, was unkind enough to say to his audience that my sickness was trumped up, because I was afraid to meet him upon the issue, that Spiritualism is demonstrated by facts. I wish to say that I am ready to meet Mr. Putnam at any time on that question, for one night, or six nights, and feel perfectly able to lift him clear out of his materialistic boots and show him that life is not worth living if 'immortality is a dream.'

"D. C. SEYMOUR."

The Carrier Dove's report is tolerably fair, but Professor Seymour's card is a trifle misleading. Mr. Putnam did not accuse the professor of feigning illness. His remark was that a contemplation of the size of the contract he had undertaken had made Mr. Seymour sick. There is no doubt of the genuineness of the professor's illness. For some weeks he has been suffering from severe pulmonary troubles, and we can only wonder that, considering the precarious state of his health, he should have ventured to attend, as we understand that he did, a meeting of Spiritualists at Metropolitan Temple on the evening in question.

Another thing, in view of Mr. Wheeler's ability as a debater, as shown by his success in answering Mr. Putnam, it is to be regretted that he did not take the professor's place and lift the opposition orator "out of his Materialistic boots."

SOME of the workingmen of San Francisco have addressed a letter to the citizens' Committee for the Relief of the Unemployed denouncing the Executive Committee whose members are agitating for municipal aid. The letter says:

"The leading spirits of that committee are W. M. Willey, E. D. McKenley, William Steinman, a rabbi who had to leave San Jose, and two women—Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Scott Briggs. These people do not want work, and would not take it if offered, and the only interest they have in the needs of the idle men of the city is to put something in their own pockets, and sell out us poor men they have been addressing from day to day. They no more represent the honest workingmen, who are now unfortunately idle, than the vermin on a dog represents the dog. That they are traitors to the workingmen and to the city in which we all live, is proved by their false telegrams to Washington."

It is possible that the telegram sent to Washington, representing the people of San Francisco as in a starving condition, and asking help for God's sake, was a trifle absurd, but the earnestness of the Executive Committee should not be suspected. The very parties who are condemned were the beginners of the agitation in behalf of the unemployed, and if the unemployed get government or municipal aid it will be owing to the efforts of these persons,

In his resignation address Charles Bradlaugh called attention to a fact which English Freethinkers are somewhat slow about recognizing. He said: "One element of danger in Europe is the approach of the Roman Catholic church towards meddling in political life. I cannot believe that the skunk has changed his smell. Beware when that great church, whose power none can deny, the capacity of whose leading men is marked, tries to use the democracy as its weapon. There is danger to freedom of thought, to freedom of speech, to freedom of action. The great struggle in this country will not be between Freethought and the Church of England, nor between Freethought and Dissent, but—as I have long taught and now repeat—between Freethought and Rome."

SENATOR BLAIR has discovered the cause of his speeches in Congress not being more fully reported by the press. He has discovered, he says, that the press is under the control of Jesuits, and that the managers of papers are Catholics. As his Educational bill is essentially Protestant, it is of course opposed by the papal church, so that he has both Rome and reason to contend with. If Mr. Blair would expunge the clause of his bill which provides for teaching the Christian religion in schools, he might possibly gain the support of some Secularists, though many are rather jealous of the general government's interference with local affairs.

A "REGULAR SUBSCRIBER" inquires the value of church property in the United States, and whether it is not equal to the value of all our railroads. We have no statistics of the value of church property later than the last census, but it probably amounts to some twelve hundred millions of dollars. This sum, however, great as it is, does not equal the property owned by railroad companies. There were in operation, in 1880, eighty-five thousand miles of railway in the United States, which has increased to one hundred and fifty thousand miles, costing some $60,000 per mile, or say $9,000,000,000 in all.

It is claimed that there is an ulterior design in Senator Stanford's plan to have the government loan farmers money on their lands at one or two per cent interest. The alleged ulterior design is that the government shall also reduce the interest on the Central Pacific railroad's debt to a similar rate. Perhaps it would be more fair to wait awhile before jumping to any conclusion on the subject.

"WHEN a man comes before the judgment seat," said the Rev. J. A. Cruzan last Sunday evening, "the question asked there will not be 'Did you belong to the church; were you orthodox?' but, 'Did you feed the hungry and clothe the naked?'" This is good humanitarian doctrine, but it isn't orthodoxy by any means.

BISHOP FINK, of Kansas, recently fulminated a letter prohibiting Catholics from joining the Farmers' Alliance because of the religious ceremonies forming a portion of the proceedings of that organization. The Alliance has since abolished its mummeries, and the bishop's condemnation is withdrawn.

CHARLES BRADLAUGH has formally resigned the presidency of the National Secular Society, and Mr. G. W. Foote has been elected as his successor. Conceding that Bradlaugh is the ablest Secularist in England, Mr. Foote certainly holds the second place as an all-round Freethought advocate.

THERE is great confusion in the labor ranks in this city. While hundreds of laborers are asking the city for work, hundreds of others are on strike. There must be strong temptation on the part of the unemployed to take the places which the others have voluntarily abandoned.

MARTIN MULLEN went to sleep in a New York church last Sunday, and was fined ten dollars for the offense. If it costs a man ten dollars to go to sleep in a church, what would be the penalty if he should die there?

COLONEL INGERSOLL has a second contribution in the North American Review for March on "Why I Am an Agnostic." The readers of FREETHOUGHT will be treated to copious extracts from the article next week.

AMIDST all the religious excitement prevailing in Oakland, why is it that the voice of W. S. Bell is not heard in the highways and byways? There is a call in our sister city for the services of the iconoclast.

THE advertisement of Lilian Leland's new book, "Traveling Alone," will be found on another page. This is one of the most interesting books of travel ever written.

ARCHBISHOP RIORDAN has donated one thousand dollars to the unemployed laborers of San Francisco. It is low interest on the sums they give him every year.

MRS. MATTIE P. KREKEL will speak before the San Francisco Freethought Society on the last Sunday evening of this month.

OBSERVATIONS.

Lilian Leland bloomed on the platform of the Freethought Society last Sunday evening like a blossom in a hedge, and told in simple language the story of "Freethought Around the World." This was, I believe, Miss Leland's third appearance as a public speaker. She lectured first before the New York Liberal Club, and I remember getting myself into deep trouble by attempting to set her right on some historical points. But we were young then, and time has convinced both of us that we were right.

Mr. Lemme presided. He has not occupied the chair before since his trip to Los Angeles, whence he returned with a wife whose engaging appearance indicates that her native city is not inappropriately named. If an apology is needed for not previously mentioning Mr. Lemme's marriage, I may say that the event was a surprise party, and that I have just recovered sufficiently from the shock to record it.

Miss Leland prefaced her address by saying that she had the good fortune to be born of Freethinking parents, who left their children's minds unfettered by any creed or belief, so that the Sunday-school stories of cross and crucifixion took no more hold upon her untterrified mind than the fairy tale of Jack the Giant-killer. In her journey around the world the first heathen country she visited was Japan, whose people she found more ideally Christian than those she left behind. The Japanese were the kindest people on earth, and suffered more than they gained from the introduction of Christianity. She saw in Japan more missionaries than converts. In China the people were different. Their cities and their habits were indescribably dirty, and it was scarcely possible for the missionaries to make the inhabitants any worse—or better. She visited Benares, in India, the oldest and holiest city on the globe. It stands upon the Ganges, the dirtiest river in the world. In both India and Japan she was warned against the native who professed Christianity. The uncivilized Hindoo could be relied on for a certain amount of fidelity, but the converted Hindoo had lost faith in his own gods' power to punish and had learned hypocrisy. Palestine Miss Leland found the barest, poorest, stoniest country on earth, and Jerusalem the uncleanliest city, with the possible exception of a walled city in China. At the alleged tomb of Christ in Jerusalem warring Christian sects are prevented from killing one another by the presence of a Mohammedan soldier who guards the holy sepulchre. The three countries which, outside of Palestine, the traveler found the most pious and poverty-stricken, ignorant, and unwholesome, were Russia, Italy, and Ireland—the latter being infested with beggars who would follow you for miles with beseeching looks. In concluding, the speaker said her experience all over the world had taught her that it is a good thing to be an American, because independence in an American woman is not only forgiven, but admired, while it would subject an English woman to suspicion.

There was no discussion of the lecture. Mr. Putnam paid a brief tribute to the late T. C. Leland, father of the speaker, and said that the daughter was a worthy descendant. Mr. Thomas Curtis offered a resolution that the Christian parents of the country be invited to prove by comparison that as a result of religious training they could show a brighter example of womanhood, mentally, morally, and physically, than Miss Leland afforded as a result of Liberal education. The resolution was unanimously passed.

After this a business meeting was held. Mr. W. H. Eastman was put in nomination for president, but declined, and nominated Mr. Putnam. Mr. Putnam agreed to accept the office if Mr. Eastman would be first vice-president. Mr. Eastman assented, and moved that the assistant secretary be instructed to get into his place at the desk and record the fact. The assistant secretary did so, and Putnam and Eastman were elected. Then these officers were chosen in their turn: Second vice-president, Thomas Curtis; third, Herbert Miller; secretary, Emil S. Lemme; assistant, H. W. Walker; treasurer, A. H. Schou. Mr. Schou celebrated his re-election by reporting. He had received during the past year $317.60, and expended $299.55, leaving a balance of $18.05. It was voted that the president, three vice-presidents, and the secretary should constitute the board of management provided for by the constitution. The appointing of a Social Committee to provide music and occasional festivities closed the business, and the meeting adjourned after passing a vote of thanks to the retiring officers.

Mr. W. S. Bell lectures next Sunday on "Christian Crusades."

And the prayer of faith shall heal the sick.—Bible Crank.

"Prayer saves you," the clergyman said

To the sick man who lay on his baid;

So he prayed half an hour

To the heavenly Pour—

Then he stopped, for the patient was daid.

Mr. F. J. Gould, of London, has written a "Life of Bruno." I have not seen it, but Watts's Literary Guide contains an extended review of the work, written by Felix Greg. Mr. Greg says:

How the glory greatens and flings the glamour of romance on the otherwise prosaic theorizings of dignified and potent speculators, and even lends a new and enduring charm to the passion of poetry, is best left to the guiding hand of the capable instructor. . . . Mr. Gould's able and comprehensive "Sketch," as he far too modestly names his welcome achievement, distinctly out-distances previous and more pretentious reminders of one whose memory should be at once incentive and possession.

And now, may it please Mr. Greg, we would be glad to know what he has the honor to mean.

Mr. A. W. Poole, of Grub Gulch, played a joke last Sunday upon Mr. Putnam and myself, that merited the apology which he has since made. He happened, while visiting this office, to note a traveling Methodist minister named Berlyther gazing in at the window, and, opening the door, Mr. Poole invited the wayfarer to come in. When interrupted, the Rev. Mr. Berlyther was haranguing a few passersby on the mental defects of Col. R. G. Ingersoll, and he continued his discourse after he came inside. Mr. Poole made remarks enough to give Berlyther a text, and when he had him well agoing, he slipped out of the door, and left us at the mercy of the blooming imbecile. Berlyther's tongue wagged and flapped like a rag on a telegraph wire, and to reply was like answering the clatter of a windmill. In ten minutes he had become a nuisance, in half an hour he was an incubus, and at forty-five minutes, a nightmare. Still he gabbled on. "Now," said he, "there was Jonah. He went aboard a ship and a storm arose. He was thrown overboard; a great fish sent by the Lord carried him ashore. You say it didn't happen as recorded, but the book says it did. Now, what are you going to do about it? Then there is the resurrection of our Lord. He was dead, buried, and descended into hell, and on the third day arose and ascended up to heaven. You believe that, don't you? No! That's because it's a mystery and you look at it with the natural eye that cannot discern spiritual things." And so on—gabble, gabble, clatter, clatter. We got rid of him finally by luring him out into the street and running away from him.

My valued friend, Mr. C. Severance, of Los Angeles, writes thus under date of February 23:

Having a leisure moment this morning, I thought I would privately remark that the last issue of Lucifer is unusually interesting, and if one doubts that "Freethought has a positive and constructive side," Brother Harman's reproduction of "Dr. O'Neill's" sensational letter would disabuse his mind on that point. Ye gods! what an article to insert in public print; and what in the name of sense and sanity does the man expect to accomplish by parading such revolting tales before the general public? Is he a monomaniac on the subject, or does he earnestly and persistently seek martyrdom? Now, I think "Dr. O'Neill" is a fictitious character who has imposed on Harman's credulity to get him into Comstock's clutches, or else he is a consummate ass to request the publication of such a letter. Such tales spread broadcast will have no more influence in lessening the evils complained of than Walker's "autonomistic marriage" did in destroying the present marriage system.

As usual, my sentiments. But taking what Stephen Pearl Andrews called a "long-range view" of these things, I have to concede that Mr. Harman and also Mr. Walker are useful members of society. They are what might be called pickets or outside guards, and they naturally draw the fire of the enemy. If it were not for them the main body of reform would be harassed by the guerrillas of church and state. The pioneers always get the hardest knocks, and the most radical men of their day are offered up as vicarious sacrifices. I have myself at times given utterance to unorthodox sentiments, and so has Mr. Severance. If these sentiments were not overshadowed by the extreme unorthodoxy of others, their authors would be looking for bail as Mr. Harman often is. Thus I feel a certain gratitude toward the editor of Lucifer for making a target of himself, and receiving in his own person the missiles which might otherwise hit the undersigned.

For his own benefit, however, Mr. Harman should abjure expressions like those contained in the O'Neill letter, and adopt the innocuous four-letter euphemisms employed by Mrs. Angela T. Heywood.

THE NATIONALISTS.

The San Francisco Central Nationalist Club held an open meeting in Metropolitan Temple Monday evening. The attendance was large, filling every seat in the edifice. Mrs. Addie L. Ballou presided.

The first speaker was Dr. J. W. Moliere, who spoke upon the subject of "Communism vs. Nationalism." He maintained that there was a great distinction between the two. Communism is a death-blow to liberty and ambition, while Nationalism sought to relieve the present hardships which are afflicting the workmen of the world—the true representatives of manhood.

After a song by Miss Anna M. Wood, ex-Judge E. D. Wheeler delivered an address upon the subject of "Assisted Railroads." He touched upon the matter of trusts, which are, he said, the evil agents in this country. There are the oil, copper, railroad, and many other trusts. They must be eradicated. National freedom is one thing, but if there is no individual freedom the land is not a free one, no matter whatever it is—a republic or not. The speaker dwelt particularly on the cases of the Union and Central Pacific railroads, which he said had been built by the government, and the people's money. Yet now the men who are enriched by it are seeking to defraud the government out of the money which is due. The various points made by the speaker were heartily applauded.

Burnette G. Haskell then read the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted, after a preamble reviewing the measure before Congress, asking for an extension of the loans on the Pacific railroads:

Resolved, That Congress be requested to reject said proposition and to foreclose the government lien on said railroads, and

Resolved, That the said proposition is an outrage to be denounced by every honest man; and every Representative who will vote for it deserves to be politically buried beneath the waves of public scorn and indignation.

Resolved, That we have reason to fear that the recent proposition in the United States Senate to loan farmers money will prove but a device to aid the proposed loan to these railroads, as they know that the finance committee of the Senate will report adversely on the proposed loan to farmers after the railroad bill has been voted on.

Resolved, That we demand of Congress that no vote be taken on the Railroad Funding bill until after the report of the committee on finance on the Stanford resolutions as to loans to farmers.

Resolved, That to test the comparative power of railroads and farmers in Congress we demand that a provision to loan money to farmers to the extent of their present mortgages at 2 per cent be annexed to and made a part of the Railroad bill to be voted on at the same time.

Resolved, That loans to farmers are as constitutional as those to railroads, as either stand on the ground of possible advantage to support and move armies, and food is more necessary to armies than railroads.

After Judge Wheeler's speech a vocal duet was sung by the Misses Collison. A recitation was then given by Master Leo Reed which was vociferously applauded. It was entitled "The Deacon's Prayer," in which the advantage of potatoes over prayer was cleverly rendered, and a recall was the result; and "The Baby" was next on the programme. This was followed by a vocal solo, "The Day is Coming" (William Morris), by Miss Evangeline Ballou, Miss Mate Hildebrande accompanist, the sentiment and music of which were enthusiastically received. "The Three Clams," an idyl of San Francisco silurians, a recitation, was presented by I. F. Cheesewright, H. A. Sully, and F. D. Jackson, the lively satire of which was keenly appreciated by the audience. This closed the exercises of the evening.

GLASGOW—A MUNICIPAL STUDY.

The following is a synopsis of a remarkable article published in the March number of the Century:

Glasgow in 1888 had a population of 560,000. Its vigorous development has caused so generous an overflow that the whole community, including the continuously built up suburbs, now numbers little short of 800,000 souls. It claims the second place in the British empire.

As a type of the modern city with a highly developed and vigorous municipal life, Glasgow may well repay study. Glasgow has grown quite as rapidly as the large towns of America. In 1750 the population was less than 25,000. In 1800 it was about 75,000; in 1811, 100,000; in 1831, 200,000; in 1851, 329,000; in 1871, 478,000; in 1889, about 800,000.

Glasgow more than a hundred years ago entered deliberately upon the herculean task of making itself an important port by deepening its shallow river, the Clyde, into a harbor and ocean highway. It is peculiarly interesting to observe a city which, having made itself prosperous and mighty by well-directed organized municipal energy, at a later time applies the same energy to the solution of the dark social problems which seem the inevitable concomitant of the new material progress of communities.

GENERAL ORGANIZATION.

The whole government may be said to be exercised by a grand committee of fifty men chosen by the qualified electors. There are sixteen municipal wards, each of which elects three members of the town council. There are two ex-officio members of the council, namely, the "Dean of Guild," who represents the Merchant's House, and the "Deacon Convener," or chairman of the associated trade guilds.

The present number of men entitled to vote is 75,000, and of women 14,750, a total municipal electorate of 89,750.

The councilors of Glasgow come chiefly from the ranks of men of business, and are upright, respected, and successful citizens. No salaries are attached to such offices. It is deemed an honor to be selected to represent one's ward.

From their own number the councilors choose a "provost," usually called the "Lord Provost," and ten "bailies," or magistrates. The bailies sit as citizen magistrates in certain districts of the city upon a plan of rotation.

All appointments are made by the council itself. According to various acts of Parliament the fifty members of the town council are (1) water commissioners, (2) gas trustees, (3) market and slaughter-house commissioners, (4) parks and galleries trustees, (5) city improvement trustees, and (6) board of police commissioners. Each of these departments is organized separately.

The town clerk is the most important standing officer of all British towns. He is expected to hold his position for life.

THE SANITARY DEPARTMENT.

The department was established in 1870. The density of population made it necessary. The density of London is 51 to the acre, of Glasgow, 84. In some of the sanitary districts the average density is from 200 to 300. Localities are not a few where single acres contain a thousand or more people. The tenement house is almost universal. In some cases two or three hundred people use a common stair-case; 126,000 live in single-room tenements; 228,000 in two-room tenements. These are the figures for 1881.

Among these overcrowded tenements the epidemic inspectors are constantly at work ferreting out cases of contagious disease. Last year they discovered 3769. The nuisance inspectors reported 21,886 "nuisances," all of which were in consequence remedied. These had to do with defective drains, matters of water-supply, garbage accumulations, offensive ash-pits, and all sorts of structural defects, decays, and unwholesome conditions.

The "night inspection" is to prevent overcrowding. Fourteen per cent of the one-room houses, and 27 per cent of the two-room houses take lodgers. The average rent of one-room houses is almost exactly $2 per month, while that of two-room houses is about $2.60. The inspection of these houses is of immense public benefit.

EPIDEMIC HOSPITALS.

On the extreme edge of the city was a private estate called Belvidere, containing something more than thirty acres, and sloping beautifully down to the Clyde. It was purchased, and the mansion house was enlarged and transformed into quarters for the attendant physicians and nurses. Wards were hastily built of wood in the detached pavilion form. These have gradually been replaced by permanent pavilions of brick and stone. The establishment is now the most attractive and complete and the most satisfactorily administered of any in the United Kingdom, if not in the world. It has the resemblance of a lovely village, with its trees and lawns, its play-grounds and beautiful flower-gardens; with its separate and home-like private apartments, instead of common dormitories, and with convalescing rooms and every convenience attached to each sick ward. The average daily number of patients in 1887 was 332, and the total number received in the year was about 3000.

SANITARY WASH-HOUSE.

Not the least-important feature of the health department's work in Glasgow is the Sanitary Wash-House. In 1864 the authorities found it necessary to superintend the disinfection of dwellings, and a small temporary wash-house was opened with a few tubs for the cleansing of apparel, etc. Larger quarters being needed, a separate establishment was built and opened in 1883, its cost being about $50,000. In 1887 6700 washings aggregating 380,000 pieces were done. The establishment has a crematory, carpet-cleaning machinery, and arrangements for disinfection by steam, by chemicals, and by boiling.

THE CLEANSING DEPARTMENT.

The work of this department embraces (1) the scavenging of all courts and back yards; (2) the scavenging and watering of all the streets and roads; (3) the collection, removal, and disposal of all night-soil, general domestic refuse, and detritus.

The streets (181 miles) are swept nightly. The summer street-sprinkling is also done by the cleansing department. The sidewalks are left to be swept by owners and occupants, who are required to keep them clean.

It is the policy of the department to send out as manure to the farms just as large a proportion in bulk and weight of the street-sweepings and general refuse as can be made a marketable article. The amount of manure sold last year was 195,000 tons. It is sold in fifteen counties, much of it going sixty and seventy miles. The city owns its railway wagons (700 of them) and has an arrangement with all the roads by which the manure is carried for one cent per ton per mile, cars returned free. The net proceeds are from 25 to 50 cents a ton. The expenditure of the department last year was $370,000. Sales of manure amounted to $130,000. There remained only $190,000 of the general charge to be paid out of the rates—for a population of nearly 600,000, a cost per capita of about 35 cents.

THE IMPROVEMENT TRUST.

The council committee, under the Glasgow Police Act of 1866, purchased an area of 88 acres, and some other small areas in the crowded parts of the city. Tenements of great height ranged on either side of narrow lanes, with no back-yard space, were demolished.

Twenty-seven new streets have been formed, and twenty-four old ones greatly widened and improved. The city is to-day lorded on a large scale. The total cost of the purchases and improvements was $10,000,000. For lands sold there has been received $5,000,000. The property still held is valued at $3,400,000. Its rents bring in annually to the city $100,000. The improvement trust has given the city, among other things, the handsome new Alexandra Park.

MODEL TENEMENTS AND LODGING-HOUSES.

Early in their operations the council committee found it advantageous to build one or two tenement-houses as a model and example of proper arrangements and construction. Very recently the committee has gone into improved tenement-building. Whether wise or unwise this experiment is not upon a sufficiently large scale to have very significant results.

A much more important and interesting experience of Glasgow is the providing of common lodging-houses. The committee opened two model lodging-houses in 1870. Another one and temporary quarters was opened in 1874, to be replaced by a large and permanent one in 1876. Three more large houses were opened in 1878, and a seventh and last in 1879. They have continued to be an unqualified success. Their incidental advantage as a police measure in promoting the good order of the city can hardly be overestimated. The city's seven establishments provide about one-third of the total accommodation, having nearly 2000 beds out of a total of 6273 reported by the inspector. Every lodger is given a separate apartment or stall, has the use of a large common sitting-room, a locker for provisions, and the long kitchen range for cooking his own provisions. The charge per night is 7 or 9 cents, according to the lodger's choice of a bed with one sheet or two. Six of these houses are for men, and one for women. The six houses for men entertained during 1888 647,681 nightly lodgers, and the house for women 33,986. The cost of these houses is $450,000. They yield a net return of from 4 to 5 per cent on the investment.

PUBLIC BATHS AND WASH-HOUSES.

There are five large establishments in different parts of the city, the first of which was opened in 1878, and the last in 1884. Each includes under the same roof very capacious swimming baths for men and for women, and numerous small bath-rooms, every modern facility being provided; and also as a distinct feature an elaborate and extensive wash-house for the use of poor families that lack home conveniences for laundry work. The substantial character of these institutions will appear in the fact that, although honestly and economically built, they have cost more than $600,000. The number of bathers exceeds 400,000 a year. The charges are small—two-pence for the use of the swimming bath, and a little more for the private baths.

For the trifling sum of two-pence an hour a woman is allowed the use of a stall containing an improved steam boiling arrangement and fixed tubs with hot and cold water faucets. The washing being quickly done, the clothes are deposited for two or three minutes in one of a row of centrifugal machine driers, after which they are hung on one of a series of sliding frames, which retreat into a hot-air apartment. If she wishes, the housewife may then use a large roller mangle operated, like all the rest of the machinery, by steam power; and she may at the end of an hour go home with her basket of clothes washed, dried, and ironed. The number of washings done in these houses increased from 76,718 in 1885-6 to 96,832 in 1887-8.

THE CORPORATION GAS-WORKS.

In 1869 the gas-supply of the city was transferred from private hands to the corporation. The original cost exceeded $2,600,000. The quantity of gas sold has increased from 1,026,000,000 feet in 1869-70 to 2,427,000,000 in 1887-8—an increase of 140 per cent, while the population has grown only 20 per cent. More than 130,000 meters are in use. From $1.14 per thousand feet charged in 1869-70 the price has been reduced to 66 cents in 1888-9.

The gas department supplies gas cooking-stoves, either selling them at about cost price, or renting them at a moderate charge by the year, half-year, or quarter. For more than three years this business has gone on briskly, the city having from $60,000 to $70,000 invested in stoves. During the year 1887-8 there were sold 1193 heating and cooking appliances, and 1456 were rented.

THE STREET RAILWAY SYSTEM.

The first tram lines were opened in 1872; owned by the city and leased to a company for operation. The interests of the public as passengers are well secured. It was provided that in no case should the charges exceed a penny per mile. It was also specified that the morning and evening cars on certain important "runs" used by laboring men and large masses of the population should be run at half price—equal to one American cent. Since 1880 the dividends have been from 9 to 11 per cent. There is a total of 31 miles of tramways.

THE WATER-WORKS.

More than thirty years ago the city obtained exclusive control of Loch Katrine, in the highlands, and brought to the city through a great aqueduct a magnificent and inexhaustible supply of pure water. The great pressure in the mains, due to the high sources whence the water comes, suffices to extinguish nearly all the fires without the use of engines; and the annual saving in the fire department alone is more than enough to pay interest charges upon the cost of the water-works. Further, the pure and soft water cheaply furnished has made it possible to develop in Glasgow various important lines of manufacture that otherwise would have been driven to the rural districts.

PUBLIC ILLUMINATION.

The city some years ago entered upon the policy of lighting private courts and passages, as well as public streets, and further undertook the lighting of all common stairs in tenement-houses. A light is equal to a constable. The illumination of the dark passages has had a most marked effect in diminishing crime. The presence of public lights on the tenement staircases has added to the security of the population.

THE MARKET TRUST.

The council manages the city's important market properties. All the wholesale marts for produce, meat, animals, and fish are in the city's own hands. Belonging to this department are the great municipal slaughter-houses, which for many years have entirely superseded all private establishments, and are admirably appointed.

THE PARK SYSTEM.

Within the period of the recent improvements a park system has been formed, and its cost has in large part been defrayed by the re-sale at advanced prices of portions of the tracts originally purchased for park sites.

GALLERIES AND LIBRARIES.

Bequests of important collections of paintings have given Glasgow a municipal gallery of importance. Bequests have founded two libraries. The Mitchell library, though but a few years old, will soon have a hundred thousand volumes. It has the best-supplied periodical reading-room in Great Britain.

POOR-RELIEF AND PUBLIC EDUCATION.

These are not functions of a municipal corporation in the United Kingdom. Scotland, urban as well as rural, is divided into "parishes," each of which, through an elected board, has entire charge of the indigent. Elementary education in Scotland is now universal and compulsory. A magnificent array of public-school buildings has appeared in Glasgow since 1873, and admirable provision is made for technical education.

TAXES.

All municipal taxation in British cities takes the form of rates levied upon the rental value of occupied lands and buildings. In Glasgow the rates are divided between owners and occupiers. The general financial position of the city is excellent. Its debt is not large. The numerous undertakings of the municipality, far from imposing heavier burdens, promises in the years to come an income of growing proportions, to the relief of direct taxation.

EXEMPTION.

Another step by Congress toward legislating in behalf of religion appears in a bill—Fifty-first Congress, S. 1748—introduced by Senator Vance, of North Carolina, "For the Relief of the Sisters of the Holy Cross in the City of Washington, District of Columbia," which provides that—

From and after the passage of this act a certain piece of land in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, known as lot sixteen, in square two hundred and forty-seven of the plan of that city, and owned and occupied by the Sisters of the Holy Cross, and all the buildings and grounds or property appurtenant thereto and used in connection therewith, in the District of Columbia, shall be exempt from any and all taxes and assessments, national, municipal, or county; and all taxes or assessments, together with the interest and penalties now due and unpaid upon said property shall be, and they are hereby remitted.

Why should the property of "the Sisters of the Holy Cross" be exempt from all taxes and assessments any more than the property of everybody else? What is the particular benefit of the Sisters of the Holy Cross, over everybody else, to the nation, the city, and the county, that their property should be exempt from all taxes and assessments at the expense of everybody else in the nation, the city, and the county? It will doubtless be answered that this is church property, and that all church property is exempt. Then we would ask the same questions in regard to all the church property in the nation. Why should the people be required thus to pay tribute to the churches? If Congress can require that this measure of tribute shall be paid by the public to the churches, why can it not also require that all the revenues required by the churches shall likewise be paid by the public? If so much shall be done when it is asked, what is to hinder the doing of all the rest as it shall be asked? Our comments upon the bill concerning the clock and bells are to be applied to this bill also; and of this, too, we say, Let it be killed. And let every other like it be annihilated throughout the Union. —American Sentinel.

THE IMPROVED MAN.

The improved man will be in favor of universal liberty—that is to say, he will be opposed to all kings and nobles, to all privileged classes. He will give to all others the rights that he claims for himself. He will neither bow nor cringe, nor accept bowing and cringing from others. He will be neither master nor slave, neither prince nor peasant—simply man.

He will be the enemy of all caste, no matter whether its foundation be wealth, title, or power, and of him it will be said: "Blessed is that man who is afraid of no man and of whom no man is afraid."

The improved man will be in favor of universal education. He will believe it the duty of every person to shed all the light he can, to the end that no child may be reared in darkness. By education he will mean the gaining of useful knowledge, the development of the mind along the natural paths that lead to human happiness.

He will not waste his time in ascertaining the foolish theories of extinct peoples nor in studying the dead languages for the sake of understanding the theologies of ignorance and fear, but he will turn his attention to the affairs of life, and will do his utmost to see to it that every child has an opportunity to learn the demonstrated facts of science, the true history of the world, the great principles of right and wrong applicable to human conduct—the things necessary to the preservation of the individual and of the state, and such arts and industries as are essential to the preservation of all.

He will also endeavor to develop the mind in the direction of the beautiful—of the highest art—so that the palace in which the mind dwells may be enriched and rendered beautiful, to the end that these stones called facts may be changed into statues.

The improved man will believe only in the religion of this world. He will have nothing to do with the miraculous and supernatural. He will find that there is no room in the universe for these things. He will know that happiness is the only good, and that everything that tends to the happiness of sentient beings is good, and that to do the thing—and no other—that adds to the happiness of man is to practice the highest possible religion. His motto will be: "Sufficient unto each world is the evil thereof." He will know that each man should be his own priest, and that the brain is the real cathedral. He will know that in the realm of mind there is no authority—that majorities in this mental world can settle nothing—that each soul is the sovereign of its own world, and that it cannot abdicate without degrading itself. He will not bow to numbers or force, neither to antiquity nor custom. He, standing under the flag of nature, under the blue and stars, will decide for himself. He will not endeavor by prayers and supplications, by fastings and genuflections, to change the mind of the "infinite" or alter the course of nature; neither will he employ others to do these things in his place. He will have no confidence in the religion of idleness, and will give no part of what he earns to support parson or priest, archbishop or pope. He will know that honest labor is the highest form of prayer. He will spend no time in ringing bells or swinging censers, or in chanting the litanies of barbarism, but he will appreciate all that is artistic—that is beautiful—that tends to refine and ennoble the human race. He will not live a life of fear. He will stand in awe neither of man nor ghosts. He will enjoy not only the sunshine of life, but will bear with fortitude the darkest days. He will have no fear of death. About the grave there will be no terrors, and his life will end as serenely as the sun rises.

The improved man will be satisfied that the supernatural does not exist—that behind every fact, every thought and dream, is an efficient cause. He will know that every human action is a necessary product, and he will also know that men cannot be reformed by punishment, by degradation, or by revenge. He will regard those who violate the laws of nature and the laws of states, as victims of conditions, of circumstances, and he will do what he can for the well-being of his fellow-men.

The improved man will not give his life to the accumulation of wealth. He will find no happiness in exciting the envy of his neighbors. He will not care to live in a palace, while others who are good, industrious, and kind are compelled to huddle in huts and dens. He will know that great wealth is a great burden, and that to accumulate beyond the actual needs of a reasonable human being is to increase not wealth, but responsibility and trouble.

The improved man will find his greatest joy in the happiness of others, and he will know that the home is the real temple. He will believe in the democracy of the fireside, and will reap his greatest reward in being loved by those whose lives he has enriched.

The improved man will be self-poised, independent, candid, and free. He will be a scientist. He will observe, investigate, experiment, and demonstrate. He will use his sense and his senses. He will keep his mind open as the day to the hints and suggestions of nature. He will always be a student, a learner, and a listener—a believer in intellectual hospitality. In the world of his brain there will be continuous summer, perpetual seed-time and harvest. Facts will be the foundation of his faith. In one hand he will carry the torch of truth, and with the other raise the fallen.—ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, in the New York World.

READ on page 173 the list of premiums offered for new subscribers to FREETHOUGHT.

CHRONICLES OF SIMON CHRISTIANUS.

CHAPTER III.

REVELATION.*

Stars Impaled by the Dragon.—The Angel and the Flea.

1. And there appeared another great wonder in heaven; and behold, a great green dragon, having one eye, and seven elbows, and upon every elbow a row of teeth; and with his tail he impaled a third part of the stars of heaven, and carried them away.

2. And Abraham came forth, and when he saw what was done he cried aloud to his wife Sarah, and she came forth and kicked the dragon behind.

3. And the dragon was astonished, and fell down in a swoon; and Sarah released the stars.

4. And Abraham took soap and water, and bright steel, and burnished the stars afresh, and put them in their places.

5. And the harpers harped with their harps, till they brake their harp-strings, and the harpers ceased to harp.

6. And I saw, and behold, an angel came down to the earth; and he placed one foot upon the earth, and the other upon the sea, and his foot sank into the waters, and he fell into the sea; and when he had clambered out he lifted up his eyes to heaven, and cried with a loud voice, saying, Send Joseph the carpenter hither.

7. And Joseph the carpenter came, and bored great holes in the water with a gimlet, and drove in nails; and the angel put forth his foot, and the water was steadfast and firm.

8. And the angel took a scroll from his bosom, and began to read, but suddenly he began to stamp his feet, and to curse and rave, and put his hand behind him, between his shoulders, in much fury; and while I wondered, he called me, saying, Son of man look between my shoulders, where my hands cannot reach. So I rent his garments and looked.

9. And he said, Son of man, what seest thou? And I answered, and said, Nay, my lord, I perceive nothing save a small beast like unto a flea. And the angel cried out fiercely, I charge thee, lay hold on him.

10. So I lay hold of it, and gave it to the angel, and he regarded it with a terrible aspect, and, stooping down, drew from the bottom of the sea a huge rock, and placed it upon the dry ground, and upon the rock he placed the little beast, even the flea, and put down his hand into the sea for another stone, wherewith to put the flea to death.

11. And when he had found the stone, and would have sacrificed the flea, behold it was gone.

12. And the angel lifted up his eyes, and saw the flea about twenty and three leagues off, and he pursued, and I saw him no more.

13. And I saw a second angel descend, and in his hand were the keys of heaven, and hell, and death.

14. And he cried unto the first angel, saying, Wherefore hast thou not proclaimed the judgment?

15. And the first angel answered from afar off, saying, I will do it when I have finished the work I have in hand.

16. And the second angel cried, saying, Knowest thou not that the Ancient one awaiteth proclamation?

17. And the first angel answered and said, As the Ancient one liveth, and as my soul liveth, I will neither issue proclamation, nor even eat nor drink, nor rest night nor day, till I have executed my judgment and poured forth my fierce indignation upon the beast that hath tormented me.

18. And the second angel was greatly troubled, and returned and told the Ancient one.

19. And the Ancient one roused himself, and said to the angel, Verily, Gabriel hath done that which is not right in my sight. Have I not told my servant Daniel that judgment should come to pass at this time? and is it not so prophesied in the guide-book which I have caused to be written? Do thou see to it, that proclamation is made so soon as he shall return. It is not seemly that Gabriel should break his oath, seeing that he hath sworn by himself.

20. And the Ancient one returned to his slumbers.

To be Continued.

AS TO FAITH AND OTHER CURES.

To the Editors of Freethought:

I observe frequent communications like the following, accompanied with severe criticisms, in some of the Freethought as well as other journals: "A child has just died in San Diego as a victim of Christian Science or faith cure." May it not be possible that it died of the disease, if not from the want of proper care in the line of nursing? Or might not its death more properly be attributed to a "mysterious providence," as most cases are where they have died under the treatment of the regular orthodox physician? Where they have depended on prayer and faith in God, the death should be attributed to providence, if it ever should in any case.

Now, we have reports of thousands of cases of deaths where patients were under the treatment of doctors whose medicines were mostly of a poisonous nature (such as are resorted to by suicides), and who "experiment" with the knife, very frequently cutting the patient open (at the risk of life) to see what they can discover inside when they fail to understand the case from outward symptoms; yet these cases are never pronounced "murder," and in all of them where a cure might reasonably have been expected the "taking off" is laid to a mysterious providence.

It seems to me, from observation in that line, that thousands—perhaps tens of thousands—of deaths occur under the "faith" in regular doctors to where there is one under the so-called faith cure. I believe that if they would anoint with soap and water in a proper manner, instead of "oil," and give them enough of the pure air of heaven while their prayers ascended upwards, they would be the means of more cures than occur under the drug treatment. What is there in homeopathy but faith that they are taking medicine, when it is a mere excuse by means of which nature is kept unobstructed until it effects a cure?

There is more superstition in regard to medicine and the healing art than in all others combined. The worst of all superstitions is exhibited in the people's neglect to think for themselves on this subject and their putting faith in doctors to save them when they become sick, when, if they would only observe, they would see that those saved by the drug treatment are (comparatively) as few and far between as those to be saved from the orthodox hell by the blood of Jesus.

Give us Freethought on all subjects. Doctors are but men, and they do not agree any more than do theologians. It is time people should begin to see that it is nature that does the healing, and, if taken in time, it only needs assistance such as our feelings indicate, instead of counter action such as it usually meets under drug treatment. If people would look at this subject from a natural standpoint, they would soon learn to become their own doctors, just as Paine's own mind became his own church.

Since writing the above I notice the case of Mrs. T. C. White, of Cowley, Kansas, who, it was said, under skillful treatment was in a fair way of recovery, when she was visited by two cranks, etc. From what I know of the false reports concerning women doctors, and also of medical reformers of other days, I should say that the case was most likely exaggerated, if not entirely misrepresented. If true as reported, the women must have been lunatics; and the nurse and Mr. White, if not imbeciles, must have been more than reprehensible to have yielded up their trust and to have permitted such proceedings in the case.

I am not an advocate of the faith cure, though I think they may perform some cures, perhaps through magnetism. These women have been accustomed to reliance on others, to faith in doctors, and seeing that they fail them, they put their trust in prayer. Why may they not be allowed to experiment as well as the regular M.D.'s, who are endeavoring to force their practice on the people to the exclusion of all others? The "regulars" do not starve their patients, let fever consume them for want of water to cool it, eat them up with calomel, blister them with poisonous flies, leech and bleed them within an inch of their lives to the extent that they did in my early days. But they use opiates, which delude their patients into the belief that they are better, when the efforts of the system are only paralyzed, leaving the disease free to gain headway. And they use anesthetics and the knife to the extent of murdering thousands, if reports are true.

* This is one of several mysterious chapters having no apparent connection with the history of Simon. We underscore the word apparent, for we are convinced that there is some occult or hidden connection, though it may not appear on the surface; the very fact of the chapters being numbered consecutively ought to be sufficient proof of this to any one imbued with the feelings of reverence so loudly called for by the sacred origin of the MS. That this chapter is fraught with meaning of the direst importance will be denied by no one who reads it. The awful solemnity of the scene it describes; the vigor and terse beauty of the language employed, and its dread significance, stamp it at once as the masterpiece of the book.

I will cite two of the many experiments where death could only be expected to result. About a year ago, in Seattle, an inexperienced woman was informed by a doctor that she could not give birth to her child. Ether was administered, her side cut open, and the child extracted perhaps weeks before its time. It was a "neat performance," a "wonderful operation," but quickly following was the report of the death of mother and child. In this case there was no trial, no hangman's rope, and nothing said about the murder! There was only notoriety and a surgeon's fee.

The other case occurred in Tacoma this winter. A young lawyer, Houston, had stomach ache, and desiring to finish some writing on a case, he applied to a doctor for temporary relief. Morphine was given, he finished his writing, and when the drug was exhausted the symptoms returned; more morphine was given until the pulse was reduced to a minimum, when brandy was administered and the patient told that he must submit to an operation. Ether was given, an aperture of six inches was made, the intestines opened, and they discovered and extracted a date seed. Wonderful performance! Great notoriety! But death soon followed. Meetings were held in honor of the deceased, and resolutions of regret were passed that a "mysterious providence" had seen fit to call from their midst a young man of such promise and so worthy a citizen.

The above, in brief, is the substance of the reports as given by the doctors themselves, if the reporters are reliable.

It ought to be patent to every one that where an operation is most likely to end in death, the chances should always be given the other way.

Buckley, Wash., Feb. 25, 1890.

Respectfully,
R. B. EWING.

CZAR ALEXANDER REPLIES.

The last number of FREETHOUGHT contains an editorial denouncing in vigorous terms the outrages recently inflicted upon Siberian exiles. The writer of that article will, I trust, give me space to reply, on behalf of Russia, to the following words which you say should be addressed to the czar by "two or three of the civilized nations of the world:"

"Alexander, by grace of God despot, Greeting: You are carrying things with an elevated hand. You are an impostor, and you know it; and it is because you know it that you resort to barbarous methods to prevent exposure. But, in vulgar language, we are onto you. You have consigned all the brains, all the manhood, and about all of the virtue existing in Russia to Siberia, which is to your empire what hades is to the orthodox heaven—the best men are there. You have no respect for age, worth, or sex. But, unfortunately for you, other nations are not like yours, and if you do not mend your ways, we will arise and wipe your infernal despotism off the face of the earth. And your petitioners will ever pray, etc. Signel: France, Great Britain, and the United States of America."

REPLY.

France, Great Britain, and the United States of America:

MY DEAR SISTERS: Your message of March 1 fills me with unutterable surprise and pain, coming as it does from nations with whom I now stand in amicable relations, and whose closer affection I had hoped to secure (in my late Siberian exploits), by following the vigorous example of my more austere predecessor at whose death your grief was unconstrained.

France! I have admired your untiring vigilance in the suppression of free speech and press.

England! Your masterful management of the Irish Nihilists has won my envy and applause. The sufferings of your evicted, banished, and gibbeted rebels, has filled my heart with luscious feasts of joy and gratitude.

America! Of thee; thy vaunted liberty, loud dost thou sing. Thy colossal nerve proclaims my deeds despotic, thy duplicates, democratic. With Paine and Jefferson didst thou depart from God. I gladly welcomed thy return. Bennett, Heywood, Walker, Harmans, and scores of others have felt thy tightening grip. Thine all-engrossing mammon sway proclaims that the star spangled emblem of liberty waves o'er the land of the rich, and the homeless wage slaves. Thy crowning act of pious skill, performed upon Chicago Anarchists, coupled with my late gems of stately art, should weld our mutual admiration and love. But, alas! thou hast tears for Siberia's Nihilists, and prison bars and gallows for thine own.

"Unfortunately for you, other nations are not like yours."

This cool assumption of superior virtue on the part of these three graces, reminds me of the girl who, when on trial for having become a mother, appeared in her own defense, and holding her two-pound babe before the jury, said: "I do not deny the charge; but see! it is such a little one."

With profound admiration for your deeds, but with sincere regret at your consistent words, I am

Yours for law and order, God, and government, ALEXANDER.

(This may not sound well to the worshipers of Bartholdi's brazen goddess. But where is the Freethinker who can deny the consistency of Alexander's position?—H. W. YOUMANS.)

BRADLAUGH'S PHILOSOPHY.

ON ATHEISM AND PANTHEISM.

I. an Atheist, and X a Pantheist.

I.—You wish me to explain my Atheistic views, distinguishing them from the views you hold. The first I will do readily; and if you will also state your views I will try to make the distinction. I, as an Atheist, am a Monist. The Greek word monos is common as the prefix mono, and signifies oneness, unity, singleness. In saying that I am a Monist I mean that I affirm one existence.

X.—But as a Pantheist I too affirm one existence; wherein do we differ?

I.—In the theos; my pan is without theos. I only know phenomena. I think each phenomenon by its characteristics.

X.—That is, you are a materialist?

I.—If by "matter" you mean the equivalent for everything, yes.

X.—But is matter with you the equivalent for everything?

I.—By everything, I mean every phenomenon, all phenomena, all that is necessary for the happening of each and every phenomenon. I dislike using such words as "matter" and "spirit," because, instead of expressing agreed-on definitions, they are used with different and inconsistent meanings.

X.—What do you mean by phenomenon?

I.—Object sensated; as "chair," "book," "sun." I mentally condition, that is, I think each object by diversity of characteristic. Each thing apprehended is phenomenon. Everything is existence.

X.—But a chair is not existence.

I.—It is mode of existence; it is conditional existence.

X.—What do you mean by "mode"?

I.—Cognized condition.

X.—Is existence eternal?

I.—By eternal I mean indefinite, undefinable, duration. "Eternal" is not a word of description, it is a word implying inability to describe. If you mean, Can I conceive existence beginning, I answer no; for I should then have to conceive existence non-existent, a manifest absurdity. I can only think beginning, progress, and cessation of duration, when I think of phenomena.

X.—Is existence infinite?

I.—By infinite I only mean illimitable; the word falls into the category covered by the last answer.

X.—Is existence intelligent?

I.—Intelligence is a word describing complex characteristics. Characteristic, i.e. quality, is only thinkable of phenomenon. Intelligence is a word loosely applicable to characteristics of animals; possibly to characteristics of some vegetables. I cannot think intelligence as characteristic of metals or minerals. Nor is intelligence a word expressing sameness of characteristic in diverse modes: the intelligence of Negro is not precisely that of Caucasian; the intelligence of horse is distinguishable from that of spider, in the same human type the intelligence of child is not that of man.

X.—Is mode eternal, infinite, or intelligent?

I.—No mode is eternal or infinite; some modes are intelligent.

X.—How are you able to say that mode is not eternal?

I.—Because I sometimes know its antecedent and consequent, and the conception of mode necessarily involves the conception of its possible antecedent, and possibly also the conception of its concurrents and consequents.

X.—Thus distinguishing each mode from existence?

I.—No; thus distinguishing each mode from other modes.

X.—Your Atheism is therefore a purely negative position; you deny God.

I.—On the contrary, my Atheism is exactly the reverse. It is Positivism. I affirm existence. The affirmation is of everything known. The word "God" is either used without clear meaning, or to hide ignorance, or it is used in opposing meanings by differing Theistic sects, and almost every religious body would regard as Atheistic any proposition which did not in some terms separate its particular "God" from the universe.

X.—But in any case you deny "God"?

I.—Not unless you define the word; if you so define it as to conflict with existence, or if you so describe it as creator of existence, then I am compelled to deny your definition. I cannot think creation except as thinking change. I can think origin of mode. I cannot think origin of substance. But what is it that you mean by Pantheism? The mere word is "all theos." What is theos?

X.—Pantheism teaches that God is the universe; that the universe is God; that the universe is eternal, infinite, intelligent.

I.—With me universe is another word for everything. Does it mean with you the same or less?

X.—The same.

I.—Then does the word "God" make an additional or different description of everything from what would be conveyed by "universe," and if yes, what is the addition or difference?

X.—Pantheism, which does not separate God from universe, is a word of recognized meaning.

I.—Not quite; the Pantheism of the Vedas, the Pantheism of the Greeks, the Pantheism of Spinoza, surely differ. What do you mean by God?

X.—The eternal infinite, intelligent universe.

I.—What do mean by intelligence?

X.—First, as you have said that the word describes complex characteristics, state more fully your explanation, that I may see if we agree.

I.—Sensative ability in exercise is the foundation of each individual intelligence; that is, of the intelligence of each living organism. The perceptions are limited by the ability of the percipient, and by the sphere of its exercise. The memory of, and the distinguishment between, perceptions, are essential to the quantity and quality of intelligence. Perceptions are sometimes clear, distinct, precise; some are vague and blurred. Comparisons of, reflection as to, and judgment on, perceptions, are all, with other mental abilities, included under the word "intelligence." The ability to compare, reflect, judge, is limited by organism, and by life conditions, and varies in each animal. The word intelligence is therefore a word inapplicable to asserted unconditioned existence.

X.—Spinoza maintained the infinity of intelligence; do you contend that infinite implies unconditioned?

I.—Yes; and I affirm that it is impossible to think intelligence, except as characteristic or characteristics of organism or organisms. Nor is it possible to think infinity as perceiving; there would be no distinguishment between perceiver and perceived. Either the word "intelligence" used of infinite must have diverse meaning from the word used of man, horse, cat, or the infinite intelligence is plus the intelligences of man, horse, cat, which would limit infinity; or is identical with horse, cat. In the latter case the intelligence of man (Shakespeare) (Edison) must be precisely the intelligence of horse or cat; a manifest absurdity.

—CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

A LOUD CALL.

A religious paper called The Truth, published in San Francisco, prints this call for a clergyman:

Wanted, a first-class preacher, a wide-awake man, at Symposia, Ill. This is a cultivated community and we must have the best preaching talent in the market. The congregation is in fine condition, having only one burden, which is a very weighty and very necessary sense of its own unapproachable culture and selectness. Our preacher must please everybody, and especially giddy youngsters and the self-constituted bon-ton generally. He must be free and easy and full of fun, yet grave, solemn, and dignified. He must know everything except politics—yet spend all his time in making pastoral calls, with no time to pore over books, magazines, and papers. He must make things bounce and bound, yet must not "stir up" things much lest he should awaken unsavory odors. In short he should be a dozen different kinds of men all in one, and must do everything that is to be done in the church, being hired for that purpose.

We would refer applicants to our last preacher, but the fact is we have lost all trace of him. When last heard from he had just escaped from a certain benevolent institution out West, where in a room appropriated entirely to his use he amused himself in his loneliness by constantly preaching to the bare walls from the following singular text: "Go preach the Gospel, you fool; do all church work yourself; knock all opposition endways yet be sure to hurt nothing; please all and offend nobody; or be damned now and forever; on the princely salary of $700 a year—paid semi-occasionally and partly in damaged wood, potatoes, and butter by the angel of the church at Symposia. Amen; so be it, and may the devil take us all." He said that this peculiar text would be found in the forty-fifth chapter and seventy-fifth verse of "John's Third Revelation" to fool preachers on the way to the poor-house or lunatic asylum. Alas, this latest preacher of ours lost the balance of his mind, you see, in trying to serve us acceptably—not having by nature that invulnerable and imperious quality of brains necessary to meet the wants of Symposia church.

In conclusion, the right man can secure a salary of $700 a year at this place. Of course he will be expected to live up with the times on this very liberal salary. But at the same time he will be expected to guard against great and needless extravagance in food and clothing, especially if he is a man of family. If he escapes the poor-house or the lunatic asylum after serving us a year we will give him a splendid send-off to some other church.

A FEW IMPORTANT FACTS.

WHICH NO PREACHER CAN CONTROVERT.

This world has existed for unnumbered ages, and man has lived upon it for at least a hundred thousand years. From the remotest ages there have been religions, more or less plausible, and taught as a means of salvation for a future life. The Christian religion, the Bible, Moses, Christ, the prophets, and the apostles taught nothing new, made no new revelation, but every item was taught before their time.

In all nations and tribes of man religion existed before the dawn of history, and priests, preachers, men pretending to be the agents and messengers of God, have organized churches and assumed to be the lawful instructors of mankind. These men in every land have been the enemies of human freedom, have shackled the mind, prevented Freethought, arrested progress, and done their best to create a stagnant dark age, and keep it dark. There is no exception to this rule; and where priests have taken charge of government they have been the worst rulers ever known. They have proclaimed and maintained the most cruel and diabolical despotism man has ever known. They punished for imaginary crimes. Their courts, as the Inquisition, were a mere mockery of a trial; and their punishments the most cruel ever invented—burning at the stake was one.

The first step in progress has been to get rid of the rule of the priest. The Jews did it, and took refuge in a king. The Japanese did it, and elevated the mikado. The Italians threw down the pope for a king of Italy. Any government was better than that of the priest. Most of the nations of Europe threw off the pope long ago, and entered on the path of progress. The more complete the overthrow, the wiser and better are the people of those nations to-day.

This is the rule—the less priest the more light, liberty, progress, prosperity, and happiness; and the more priest the less of all these good things. And there is no exception, look where you will. The fathers of our republic were the true heroes of liberty. They refused all priestly advice or share or part in their government. They proclaimed the equality of man, all free to think, speak, and act in their own way, only respecting the equal rights of others; and that all government should rest upon the will of the people.

Soon after, a grand council of the Romish church met and proclaimed just the reverse, "The pope is the fountain of all power, and it is a damnable heresy to believe that it rests with the people."

We have lived now a hundred years under the Freethought rule. We have had more religious peace and quiet than any other nation on the globe. We have less rancor and ill-will on account of religion than any other people. We have prospered as no other nation ever did, under this Freethought. We are the most generous people on the earth. We are the most merciful and magnanimous. We spared rebels when they surrendered as no other nation ever did.

Freethought has brought invention, machinery, wealth, and power, and made us the leading nation of the world. But our men of God, so-called, our clerics, priests, preachers, want us to change the rule, put God in the constitution, make a rigid Sunday law, and declare that their religion is the law of the land. Why should we? What is to be gained by it? Shall we be made better in any respect? Can you point to any other land where priests rule, and they are better than we are? Why should we listen to these men?

Can we give them a little and rest there? No; the more you give the more they want. They are content with nothing less than supreme power. And where they rule freedom is blotted out. You must believe as they do, or be ostracized, disfranchised, persecuted in this world, and condemned to everlasting fire in the next. They seem to think that the service of God means the enslavement of man.

Let us remain as we are and nail the flag of our fathers to the mast to wave there forever, "Every man shall think for himself and cheerfully allow all others to do the same." That is peace, good-will, good manners, and social enjoyment.

H. L. KNIGHT.

THE CELESTIAL LEAF

At the dinner of the Legal Protective Association of Cigar Manufacturers at Delmonico's on the evening of Feb. 20, David Hirsh, in speaking for "The Cigar Industry," referred to Colonel Ingersoll as a divine who had dignified the gathering with his presence. Colonel Ingersoll kissed his hand in recognition of the cheers with which this compliment to him was greeted. General Woodford referred to his near neighbor as the Rev. Robert G. Ingersoll, and remarked that Time had hung both their scalps to his girdle. Colonel Ingersoll spoke for "Tobacco." "As to baldness being a sign of age," he said, "the youngest persons I ever saw were bald. Now as to my toast, I am called upon to speak for the divine plant called tobacco. I have loved it all my life—that is, since I was ten years old, and I liked the first chew of old plug I put into my mouth as well as I do now. There's too much hypocrisy about the use of tobacco; thousands use it and lie about it. I want you to use it and defend its use, because it adds something to the value and happiness of life. In spite of the thunders of the pulpit and the anathemas of physicians, its use is increasing, and this is because the brain of man craves it. What would we do without it? Think of waiting for a train without tobacco! Think of crouching in the deadly rifle-pit without tobacco! What would those do who add value to life by spanning the world with the rainbows of fancy without tobacco? All use tobacco and are the better for it. Have the courage of your happiness and defend its use. Tobacco is a luxury, and on that account I want the tax on it removed. No matter what necessities cost, I want cheap luxuries. They say luxuries should be taxed because the rich pay for them. Why, labor pays all the taxes in the world! It is the only solvent thing beneath the stars. The diamonds which glisten on the bosom of beauty are paid for by labor. I want tobacco absolutely free in these United States. Some want poor devils to do all the work in this world and smoke in the next. I want them to smoke in this. The fumes which arose from the pipe of peace of the Indian were as different from the clouds of war as heaven and hell—are there any such places? Tobacco is the best plant that grows on the face of the earth. Personally, I would rather do without an other vegetable. I pity the ancients, who had to do without it, and I envy Columbus, who was the first European to see its smoke rise over the fair isle of Cuba. This new world has given no better gift to mankind than the celestial leaf. Gentlemen, give us straight goods, and future generations will rise up and call you blessed."

In Memoriam—Josiah Lockhart.

It has ever been a custom, when a man of great reputation dies, to proclaim his demise to the world, dilate upon his virtues, and as far as possible perpetuate his memory. While, on the other hand, one who has threaded the obscure paths of life passes away as obscurely as he had lived, and to the world at large is no more than if he had never been. Could it be that the dead were within the reach of help or harm, great injustice might often be done by such neglect, for, be it remembered, the truest worth is often found among the lowly. Even as it is, love and sorrow (twin sisters of divinity) claim the right of utterance, and, it may be, answer posthumous need better than admiration and homage.

The writer recently lost a near and dear friend that possessed all those qualities that make us truly noble. To faithfully delineate his character, no language expressive of honest worth would be inappropriate. There was a pathos, a tenderness in his nature that, while it may not have been sufficiently felt in his living presence, shines out in golden beauty now. It is a redeeming characteristic of Death that while it extinguishes every blemish, it brings out the traits of goodness in the most striking relief. To loving survivors there are no latent virtues in the dead.

He was so kind, so patient, so uncaring of resentment. Although his lot was hard in the extreme, he toiled from year to year uncomplainingly, content in the privilege of striving for those he loved. He lived the philosopher more than the teachers ever do. He was the child of nature, and clung to his mother. Simplicity was a marked feature in his disposition. Suspicion never darkened his mind. Being honest himself, he never suspected dishonesty in others.

The future did not disturb him. Theology was not in his line of thought. He believed in friends and love and home, and that was enough. So when the end came he needed no spiritual adviser. Priestly presence upon an occasion so sacred would only have been wanton officiousness. Superstitious mummeries should not disturb the peaceful conscience. "Kiss me," he said to his family in a moment of returning consciousness, and with the touch of weeping affection upon his brow he died.

In the Lone Star state the stars look down upon his grave. While here he made those around him happy. If, as love bereaved is wont to hope, his mind is immortal, that mind, no matter where it is, will make heaven. Gentle, noble brother, a last farewell.

Neodesha, Kan., Feb. 25, 1890.

VIRGINIA E. VANCE.

LOUISE MICHEL, the advocate of Anarchy and communistic ideas, has indulged in many vagaries, but her latest escapade is more extraordinary than any previous one. She has written a comic opera, and the plot turns on the sudden appearance in the moon, which has known no women, of several giddy damsels from Paris. There is opportunity in this theme for clever burlesque, but it is doubtful whether this disappointed agitator has the mental lightness to deal with such a subject. No doubt the Paris authorities would rejoice could Louise herself be transferred to the scene of her opera. She is a constant source of anxiety to them, as they never know when she may uncover a volcano in Paris.—Chronicle.

TRAVELING ALONE

A WOMAN'S JOURNEY

AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Price, by mail, 30 cents.
Address The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

PRINTING!

Having procured one of the best Presses manufactured and a large assortment of display type, and employing competent workmen, the Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

Letter-heads,

Bill-heads,

Programmes,

Envelopes,

Business Cards,

Postal Cards,

Tickets,

Placards,

Receipts,

Posters,

Dodgers,

Circulars,

Etc. etc.

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

A Midnight Tragedy.

I.

Two lovers lean on a garden gate—
The hour is late.

II.

At a chamber window her father stands,
And rubs his hands.

III.

For a while he watches them unawares,
Then goes downstairs.

IV.

He loosens the dog from his iron chain—
The rest is plain.

V.

The moonlight silvers the garden gate—
The hour is late.

Inoperative Fire-Escapes.

Most all the skippers on the big ocean craft are wags, and Commodore William McMicken of the Umbria, who is now ill in Liverpool, is not an exception to the rule. On his last voyage to New York, among the passengers were three New England clergymen. On the first Sunday out, Captain McMicken, with the most pious thoughts intent, sought to arrange for religious services, and asked the divines to decide among themselves which one would preach. One excused himself on the ground that he had been traveling abroad for his health. The second said the third was the oldest, and that he should speak. The third answered that everyone on board wanted to hear his deferential friend speak. And so with disclaimers and compliments the matter was discussed until it ended in there being no service whatever.

"I did what I could," sighed the old commander to a sympathetic cabin passenger. "But isn't it rather singular," he added confidentially, "three fire escapes on board and no one saved from the burning?"

Adding Sacrilege to Assault.

"I want to report a case of sacrilege," he said, as he stood at the desk in the Central Police Station, and held a faded handkerchief to his red and swollen eye.

"Very well," answered the sergeant.

"Over here on Gratiot I met a man. He owes me $122. I dunned him. He called me a liar."

"I am no fighter. Never licked a man in my life. I turned and walked up the steps of the church to get rid of him, but he followed me and punched me in the eye."

"You must get a warrant for assault."

"But isn't it sacrilege?"

"I don't think so."

"But I do. It's sacrilege on top of assault and battery, and if he doesn't get five years for it I'm no good. Of course it's a sacrilege. Wasn't I on the church steps? Didn't he haul off and biff me in the eye? If you don't already know you'd better learn that there's a heap of difference between whaling thunder out of a man on the steps of a church or licking him in a beer garden."

Not Collectively in Error.

Minister (from pulpit)—Will the choir please oblige the congregation by making less noise?

First Chorister—Please, sir, the choir is not to blame; it's the second tenor's plaid pants.

The Truth Seeker Annual

AND

FREETHINKERS' ALMANAC.

1890—(E.M. 290).

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS: Calander for 1890. Freethought in the United States, 1889. Faded Flowers (poem) By J. E. Remsburg. The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue, by T. B. Wakeman.

Mostly Fools W. Stewart Ross (Saladin)
Record of the Spanish Inquisition.
Dates of the Fabrication of some Roman Catholic Dogmas.

The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a moral. Helen H. Gardener.
The Middle Ages, Illustrated.—The Priest, the Supernatural World, the Reformation, Future Terrors.

The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated.
Freethought Journals in the United States.

In Search of a Spirit, E. M. Macdonald.
Why I Left the Church, Hugh O. Pentecost

115 pages, price 25 cents.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year. The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND.

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and 26.

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1463 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.

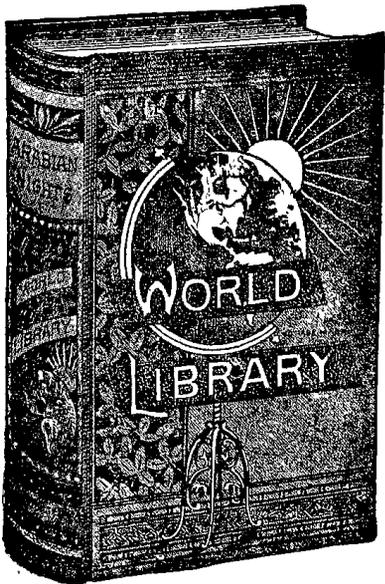

Rapp & Deberry, U. S. Beer Boltling Establishment, cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.

Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CR AIG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY.—A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be Obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESS.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal, English settlements, war and rapine, and at last a heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories: The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavilion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the Invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir. Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder-worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portrayal of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. PRESCOTT.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll,) with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated late scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POE'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made.—working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 109 Main St., Richmond, Va.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

The Preacher's Advantage.

The doctor ever strives
To save the people's lives,
The preacher works their deathless souls to save;
The doctors often fail,
But the preachers none assail,
Their failures all are hidden to the grave.

It was a dainty Boston maid
Who stood and looked at Towser.
She gazed awhile and then she said:
"How that poor dog does trouser!"

At the dinner of the New England society there were a number of brilliant speeches, but none more eloquent, patriotic, or humorous than the one made by Mr. Grady, of the Atlanta Constitution. In the course of his remarks he related this story:—There was an old preacher once, who told some boys of the Bible lesson he was to read in the morning. The boys, finding the place, glued together the connecting pages. The next morning he read on the bottom of one page: "When Noah was 120 years old he took unto himself a wife, who was"—then turning the page—"140 cubits long, 40 cubits wide, built of gopher wood, and covered with pitch inside and out." He was naturally puzzled at this. He read it again, verified it, and then said: "My friends, this is the first time I ever met this in the Bible, but I accept it as evidence of the assertion that we are fearfully and wonderfully made."

P. T. BARNUM, the showman, told the children of Rev. Dr. Collyer's New York church, the following the other evening: "I remember an old darkey preacher who had a good deal of scripture in him, but was always misapplying the quotation. He told his congregation one day that at a very great gathering in a church, once, a woman fell out of the gallery. 'She broke into five thousand pieces,' he said, and then, drawing on his scripture supply, added, 'and of the fragments of her they gathered up twelve baskets, and inquired, 'Whose wife shall she be at the resurrection?'"

A YOUNG man, recently married, suggested to his wife that they should argue some question frankly and fully every morning, in order to learn more of each other. The first question happened to be: "Whether a woman could dress on seventy-five dollars a year?" and he took the affirmative; and when last seen, he had climbed into a hay-loft and was pulling a ladder after him.

THE Rev. Heber Newton appears to be in much the same mental state Douglass Jerrold was once. A lady undertook to explain to him the beauties of the five points of Calvinism. Jerrold listened patiently until the doctrine of election had been elucidated, when he exclaimed: "Well, if I had known that I was born to be damned, I'll be damned if I would have been born."

THE Popular Science Monthly for March is just received. As always, it contains the best reading matter to be found in any of the periodicals.

"Bible Contradictions," 15 cents.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20; $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc, worth $35. for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do., $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
" " Forks	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" " Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded.

Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.
ALL FOR $1.20.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mill.
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,
536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San Francisco.

Wm. W. NOBLE,
Merchant Tailor,
1222 STOCKTON ST.

Bet. Pacific and Broadway.

DRESS SUITS A SPECIALTY

Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass by.

PUTNAM'S WORKS.

The New God. 10c. The New God was made by an artist hand, guided by a poet soul. It is as perfect as sculpture. The creator makes his "god" in his own image, and breathes into his nostrils the breath of his own life.—L. K. Washburn.

Golden Throne. A romance. Price, $1 00. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words, the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Walls and Wanderings. A new American story. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1 00. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—John Swinton's Paper.

Prometheus: A Poem. Price, $1. "It is crammed with life, thought and profound emotion, poured forth, it seems to me, with extraordinary richness and beauty."—Dr. Henry W. Bellows.

Gottlieb: His Life; or, Love Triumphant. A Romance of Earth, Heaven and Hell. Price, 25 cents. "To describe all the beauties of this simple, yet touchingly told little tale, would be a work of which I confess myself utterly incapable. To realize what it is, you must read the book itself. I have never read anything so exquisitely beautiful and good in all my life before."—Elmina Drake Slenker.

A REGULAR EDUCATED AND LEGALLY QUALIFIED PHYSICIAN, and the most successful (in his specialty) as his practice will surely prove. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men such as seminal weakness, impotency, &c., resulting from indiscretion and ignorance of youth. Those who are ailing should send ten (10) cents for his book, "Private Counsellor," setting forth an external Application—

A POSITIVE CURE

The book is worth many times its cost, and should be read by the young for instruction and the afflicted for relief.

All Communications Strictly Confidential.

Plain Envelopes used. The book spoken of sent sealed. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, NEW JERSEY Say where you saw this Advertisement.

[From the Washington National View.]

Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, New Jersey offers his valuable services to all those in need of a kind, sympathetic and skillful physician. Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been assailed and exposed by the press, but, Dr. Fellows, a specialist, in his line, stands foremost in his profession, and the encomiums showered upon him publicly as well as in private, are flattering evidences of the high appreciation and confidence his long and conscientious devotion to his specialties in his profession have so justly merited for him, and it is safe to trust him.

A Testimonial.

WEST LIBERTY, O., Aug. 12, 1888.
DR. R. P. FELLOWS—Dear Sir: The remedy you sent is working like a charm. I am completely surprised the way it acts upon the organs. Have only been using it one week, and that weakness, (seminal weakness) is coming out all right.
Yours respectfully,
J. R.

REMARKS—The above is a fair sample of the hundreds of testimonials received from all parts of the United States, from young, middle-aged and elderly men, suffering from various kinds of sexual complaints, but who are now cured by my External Application, the greatest of all known remedies for this class of diseases. As I am an out and out Liberal I trust the Freethinkers of the Land will give me their patronage, and not waste their time and money on Christian doctor.
DR. FELLOWS.

FREETHOUGHT,

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Samuel P. Putnam, Lecturer and Editorial Correspondent. | Geo. E. Macdonald, Editor and Business Manager.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

Freethought Publishing Co

This journal is devoted, religiously, to the eradication of all forms of superstition, Christian or otherwise; and politically, to the advocacy of those principles inculcated by the

Nine Demands of Secularism.

FREETHOUGHT is not committed to any of the current methods of social reform, but its columns are open to the discussion of all of them. It welcomes agitation and discussion of all subjects, religious, political, ethical, and social.

Its Correspondents are all who have anything valuable to say on the above questions; who know how to express their thoughts in readable English, and who desire for an audience several thousand of the most intelligent people of the country.

FREETHOUGHT has no set list of contributors of articles written to order. It aims to give the news of the Liberal movement everywhere. It believes that the seeds of Freethought have been planted, and that the great work now before us is to cultivate their growth.

The paper circulates from Florida to Alaska, and from this coast to Maine.

ADVERTISERS

who wish to reach large numbers in all parts of the Pacific Slope will find space in its columns a remunerative investment.

EVERY LIBERAL THINKER should read FREETHOUGHT. They will find it lively and at the same time in dead earnest; plain and direct, without being offensive.

Subscriptions—One year, $2; Six months $1. Four new subscriptions in one remittance, $5.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

Insulted.

"Are you your brother's keeper?" asked a clerical-looking man of an Irish citizen. "Faix, an' Oi consider that a very impertinent question, sir. Oi'm in charge av the chimpanzee at the parruk."

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR..... $25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.
TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.
OLIVER HINCKLEY SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.
N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

P. A. CLARK. CHAS. W. CLARK

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS,
NURSERYMEN.

Catalpas for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines.
Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice.
Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address
CLARK BROS.,
P. O. Box C, San Jacinto, Cal.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma st., cor. 5th, S. F.

14 karat Gold Small Pin..... $ 4 0
10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 0
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond" 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,
PUTNAM & MACDONALD,
04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year..... $1.50
Six Months..... .75
Three Months..... .50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

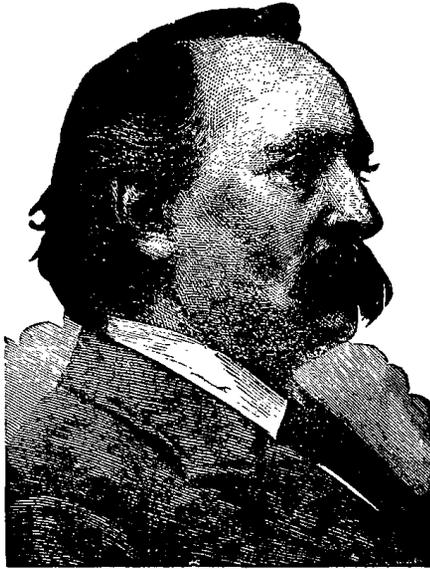

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Company.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
 FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
 338 Howard st., San Francisco.

Nice Mathematics.

“And now, children,” remarked Professor Hailes in one of the public schools the other day, “if a family consisting of father and mother and seven children should have a pie for dinner, how much would each receive?”

“Why,” remarked the bright boy, “each would get an eighth.”

“But there are nine persons, you must remember.”

“Oh! I know that; but the mother wouldn't get any. There wouldn't be enough to go around.”

All for Love.

Marie—I am willing to marry you, Charles, even if you are poor, but do you think you can take care of me, anyway?

Charles—Oh, darling, by this strong right arm raised to heaven, I swear that I will support you always, even if I have to take in washing for you to do.

And they were married.

During Service.

Johnny—Wouldn't that fat lady in front make a fine haystack, mamma?

Mamma—Sh-h, my dear, why do you say that?

Johnny—Didn't the minister just say that all flesh was grass?

Standard Scientific Works

Works by Alexander Bain.

English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science..... 1.75

Works by Charles Darwin.

Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization..... 2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols..... 4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species..... 2.00

Works by J. W. Draper.

History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75

Works by Ernst Haeckel.

The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00

Works by Huxley.

Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science..... .25
 American Addresses..... 1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin..... .50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals..... 2.00

Works by John Stewart Mill.

Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty..... 1.25

Works by Richard A. Proctor.

Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities..... 1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours..... 1.75
 The Moon..... 2.00

Works by Herbert Spencer.

Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 Man versus the State..... .30
 First Principles..... 2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols..... 4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols..... 4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols..... 4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc..... 2.00
 Universal Progress..... 2.00
 Essay, Moral, Political and Esthetic..... 2.00
 Education..... 1.25
 Organic Evolution..... .75

Works by Andrew D. White.

Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science..... 1.00

Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.

Body and Mind.....$1.50
 Responsibility in Mental Disease..... 1.50

Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.

Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life..... 1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

By Carl Marx.

Capital.....$3.00

By Asa Gray.

Darwiniana.....$2.00

By L. L. McLaughlin.

Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50

By John B. Henck.

Field-Book for Railroad Engineers.....$2.50

By C. Marcel.

Study of Languages.....$1.25

By Lester F. Ward.

Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00

By Frederick Overman.

A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00

B. F. G. Fairfield.

Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25

By W. B. Carpenter.

Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25

By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.

Evolution.....$1.50

By Sir John Lubbock.

Origin of Civilization.....$5.00

By Charles A. Abbott.

A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50

By Garrett P. Serviss.

Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50

By Nathan Sheppard.

Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50

English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote..... .30
 Thos. Carlyle—His Life, Books, Theories..... .30
 Comedies for Amateur Acting..... .30
 The Distracted Young Preacher..... .25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

—BY—

W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form, a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

I HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE

Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.

13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order.

The Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is entirely damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thief-resisting. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that, ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only.

Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future

Republic of North America

BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters

impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 12.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, MARCH 22, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - MARCH 22, 1890.

It is reported that Senator Plumb will make an effort to replace the Blair Educational bill with a Land Grant Forfeiture bill. What the provisions of the latter are we are not informed.

A CRAZY evangelist, named J. R. Rice and called "the boy preacher," is working out a ten-dollar fine for obstructing the streets of Oakland. He did not have the money to pay his fine, and so was very appropriately set at work with hoe and broom cleaning the streets where he had formerly harangued.

SAN FRANCISCO now has two Nationalist Clubs, the second one being presided over by Mr. C. F. Burgman. Mr. Burgman's society, we understand, does not favor political action, while Mr. Haskell's society intends to carry San Francisco in next fall's election. There will be a state convention of Nationalists in this city on April 5.

THE board of directors of the Louisiana Lottery Company offered the governor of the state $100,000 for the relief of the Mississippi valley flood sufferers, and the governor declined to accept the gift, giving as a reason that he did not wish to place the people of the state under obligation to the company. It was a virtuous act, but it won't buy bread.

THE keepers of Missouri's state prison at Jefferson City should read Colonel Ingersoll's address on "Crimes Against Criminals." Stories of brutalities equal to those of Siberia come from this prison. The convicts are flogged until they faint. Evidently the chaplain business in prisons is a failure, and it is time that common humanity was introduced and taught to wardens as well as their unfortunate charges.

A PROTESTANT law in Wisconsin, called the Bennett law, which makes attendance at state schools compulsory, is being strongly fought by the Catholics, the bishop of Milwaukee having issued a manifesto against it. The Catholics hold that compulsory state education is unconstitutional, but at the same time demand a division of state funds for the support of their parochial schools. They appear to regard everything as illegal which helps to maintain public educational institutions, while considering state maintenance of parochial schools perfectly legitimate. They think it quite proper to bulldoze children into studying the catechism under penalty of everlasting punishment; but when the state prescribes temporary punishment for neglect of educational facilities, they denounce the act as an injustice. Perhaps the method of the state is questionable, but that of the church is altogether beneath contempt.

THE New York Central Labor Union takes a mean way of fighting banker Eugene Kelly. Because Kelly employs non-union men on the new building he is erecting, the Labor Union appealed to the courts to arrest the laborers who worked last Sunday. If trades unions are unprincipled enough to employ such methods, they will lose the support of those whose sympathies would be with them in a fair fight.

THE Rev. Dr. Sample addressed the Presbyterian Ministerial Union at its last meeting on the negro problem at the South. He said the negroes were being educated faster than they were being Christianized. He thought ignorance to be "better than un-sanctified learning," and said "an intellectual devil is one a hundred-fold." That is to say, the ignorant Rev. John Jasper, of the sun-do-move notoriety, is a better citizen, according to Dr. Sample, than the enlightened Frederick Douglas. The idea is absurd. Those acquainted with the negro question generally testify that the black man has never had education enough to hurt him nor religion enough to do him any good.

THE SAN FRANCISCO FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The meeting of the San Francisco Freethought Society Sunday evening, March 23, at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, will be addressed by Mr. Geo. Cummings on "The Rights of Man."

WHAT THE PRESBYTERIANS DESIRE TO REVISE.

In all the discussions over the revision of the Presbyterian creed we have never seen included the particular articles of faith at which the movement to revise is aimed. It is a matter of general notoriety that something is under discussion, but how many know just exactly what it is? For the benefit of our readers, and also for the enlightenment of Presbyterians to whom these presents may come, we shall quote a few extracts from the authorized Confession of Faith. It is doubtful if they will sound any more familiar to those who believe without reading than to those who do not.

Here are the passages relating to the question of foreordination, to-wit:

"God from all eternity did by the most wise and holy counsel of his own will, freely and unchangeably ordain whatsoever comes to pass; yet so as thereby neither is God the author of sin; nor is violence offered to the will of the creatures, nor is the liberty or contingency of second causes taken away, but rather established.

"By the decree of God, for the manifestation of his glory, some men and angels are predestinated unto everlasting life, and others fore-ordained to everlasting death. These angels and men, thus predestinated and fore-ordained, are particularly and unchangeably designed; and their number is so certain and definite that it cannot be either increased or diminished. Those of mankind that are predestinated unto life, God, before the foundation of the world was laid, according to his eternal and immutable purpose, and the secret counsel and good pleasure of his will, hath chosen in Christ, unto everlasting glory, out of his mere free-grace and love, without any foresight of faith or good works, or perseverance in either of them, or any other cause in the creature, as conditions or causes moving him thereto; and all to the praise of his glorious grace.

"The rest of mankind God was pleased, according to the unsearchable counsel of his own will, whereby he extendeth or withholdeth mercy as he pleaseth, for the glory of his sovereign power over his creatures, to pass by, and to ordain them to dishonor and wrath for their sin, to the praise of his glorious justice."

To these statements the writers of the creed add that "the doctrine of this high mystery of predestination is to be handled with special prudence and care;" all, we presume, to the praise of its glorious incomprehensibility.

So much for foreordination. The reader is of course not expected to ask how the writers of this creed happened to be so far admitted to the "unsearchable counsel of His will" as to be able to tell what that will is. Neither is the reader to inquire why, if God foresaw everything before the foundation of the world was laid, he permitted evil to come into existence. These are "high mysteries" which are also, we presume, to be handled "with special prudence and care."

The other question is as to "infant damnation," popularly so-called. Here is the creed as it now stands:

"Elect infants, dying in infancy, are regenerated and saved by Christ through the Spirit, who worketh when, and where, and how he pleaseth. . . . Others, not elected, although they may be called by the ministry of the word, and may have some common operations of the Spirit, yet they never truly come to Christ, and therefore cannot be saved."

Here again it is useless to inquire how the creed-writers discovered the remarkable facts which they have set forth, though none can help sympathizing with the infant who is represented as asking:

"If so soon I must be done for,
What on earth was I begun for?"

Such are the absurd propositions now under discussion by the Presbyterians. What they do with their intelligence while soberly claiming that their Confession of Faith is worthy of attention except as a curiosity, is more than a Freethinker is able to divine.

MRS. R. H. SCHWARTZ.

In the death of Mrs. R. H. Schwartz, who died suddenly at San Jose last Sunday evening, Liberalism suffers a great loss. She has been a good and faithful ally to the cause, for many years. She has always been ready to aid, and has been generous and uncompromising in her devotion to principle. She has been an able and eloquent advocate upon the platform of Liberal progress. All will mourn her loss—the loss of an earnest worker, of a true friend, of a devoted wife, of a loving mother. To her family is extended the sympathy of thousands of Liberals throughout the country. She has died in the midst of a bright and useful career, but the work that she has done will pass into noble remembrance. Our friend will not be forgotten. The flowers of memory shall bloom fresh upon her grave, and her eloquent teachings will still help on to the victory of truth. Death shall consecrate her life to finer influence, to more enduring power.

S. P. PUTNAM.

PROFESSOR LE CONTE ON IMMORTALITY.

On Friday evening, March 7, I listened to a lecture by Prof. Joseph Le Conte upon "The Natural Grounds for a Belief in Immortality." Professor Le Conte is clearly not an orthodox Christian, and emphasized strongly the statement that he would dwell only on the evidence of nature, "the natural grounds." His demonstration was somewhat as follows: He declared himself a believer in the law of evolution, saying that in fact that law was a necessity; it was the only rational explanation of the methods of the universe. There was a time when, because of the intense heat, there was no chemic action or interaction between molecules. Long ages passed and suddenly the law of molecular interaction began to be. Again long ages, and life suddenly appeared. Again long ages, and suddenly immortality was bestowed on man, or rather appeared in him as a result of the working of the life-forces, "an individuation" of a universal divine power. The elements of consciousness, will, intelligence, emotion, he granted, belong to animals as well as men, but animals have no philosophy, science, art, or religion, and therefore no immortality. As is the difference between the embryo and the new-born creature, so great is the difference between the unimmortal animal and immortal man.

Such is, I believe, a fair, though very brief, summary of his argument. He dwelt at much length upon the analogy between birth and immortality, but, as is clearly seen, his case was very far from proven. Indeed I could not see that he had advanced it one step.

Immortality is such an enormous change of condition, of which we know absolutely nothing, that to affirm it chiefly upon the basis of an analogy is utterly unsatisfactory. Nothing was said of the fact that there is absolutely no trustworthy evidence of there being any such state as that of immortality; nothing of the tremendous physical difficulties that surround it. We know human life only as existing with a body. To assert it as existing without the body, which we know perishes, is to meet unanswered difficulties at every step. Where is it? How is it supported? How protected? Life apart from the body has been called spirit or soul, but that such an entity exists is as yet entirely unproved, and from the standpoint of our present knowledge exceedingly improbable.

Men have often believed that which they wished, and on the ground of his desire Professor Le Conte has erected a structure which science will not sustain. To assume the existence of a form of being, immortality, of which there is no evidence, is utterly unscientific. To declare that immortality became a law in man when the brute passed into the human is assertion unsupported by proof.

Professor Le Conte in his own field is of high scientific attainment, but in the unknown field of immortality, imagination and not science supports his arguments.

H. M.

AS TO MAGDALENE.

FREETHOUGHT is in receipt of the following communication from the author of "Researches in Oriental History:"

To the Editors of Freethought:

I think you greatly err in your reply to your Boulder Creek correspondent. You say, "On the sea of Galilee there was a town called Magdala."

There was no town or city on the sea of Galilee by the name of Magdala. The term Magdala is Greek, and signifies a tower or castle. It probably was applied to some mountain peak overlooking the sea. Smith's Bible Dictionary says: "The chief MSS. and versions exhibit the name as Magadan." The Bible Dictionary further says: "By the Jews the word megaddela is used to denote a person who platted or twisted hair, a practice then much in use among women of loose character."

Luke vii, 37-47, clearly relates to this Mary Magdalene, where she is designated, quoting from the revised version: "A woman which was in the city, a sinner."

Both Webster and the Imperial Dictionary define Magdalen as "a reformed prostitute," but I find no authority in the Greek for using the qualifying adjective, "reformed."

I discussed this subject on page 250 of my "Researches in Oriental History," and judge the attention of your correspondent was directed to it by the reading of my remarks at that point.

Very truly and fraternally, G. W. BROWN, M.D.

Rockford, Ill.

We are not quite ready to admit that we have erred in replying to our correspondent who first raised the question as to the meaning of the word Magdalene. Encyclopedists agree that there was a town on the sea of Galilee called Magdala, and we see no good reason for doubting the statement. It may be admitted that "Magdala signifies a tower or castle," but there are towns in the United States called Tower and Castle, and we are not warranted in denying their existence because their names signify something else. Yerba Buena means "a good herb;" it also was formerly the name applied to the peninsula of San Francisco and to the tract of land now called Goat Island.

Magdalen at present means a "reformed prostitute," and there is as good authority for the adjective as there is for the noun.

In default of the connecting circumstances we are still unprepared to concede that the Mary of John xii, 3, was the sinner of Luke vii, 37. What reason is there for saying that she was a Magdalene? Perchance she was the other Mary of Matthew xxvii. She seems to have been a woman of Bethany, while it was in the city of Nain that the alleged "sinner," who is not called Mary at all, anointed the feet of Christ.

The gospels, as is well known, are irreconcilably at variance on nearly every point they touch, but Dr. Brown nor anyone else that we have read has shown that Mary Magdalene's reputation was not good. As stated by a writer in Chambers's Encyclopedia, "there is no hint whatever in the narratives of the evangelists that she had ever been a woman of profligate character." It was through the error of some one who identified her with the sinner previously spoken of, that she has been represented by artists and writers according to this prevalent opinion.

There are facts and arguments enough against the New Testament and the religion founded upon it to forever place them outside the limits of credibility; but an argument founded upon a fallacy, even though directed against some other fallacy, does more harm than good.

AFTER reading this paragraph, hunt up the wrapper of FREETHOUGHT and see how your subscription stands. If you are in arrears, renew at your earliest convenience.

"THE Young Men's Christian Association has entered suit to restrain Tax Collector O'Brien from enforcing against their property the delinquent assessment to pay the Dupont-street widening bond. The association says its property does not produce sufficient income to pay the taxes, and that if collection is pushed it will be a practical confiscation of the property. A temporary injunction has been granted." So report the morning papers, and it is the old, old story of exemption of ecclesiastical property. Why should not the Young Men's Christian Association walk up to the desk in the new city hall and pay its taxes as, for instance, the Freethought Publishing Company is forced to do?

"AT the Second Annual Convention of the California State Liberal Union, Mr. S. P. Putnam was re-elected president. He is supported by an executive council of ten, and no less than ninety vice-presidents. There must be a large number of Freethinkers of importance in the state, or is it that in American organizations vice-presidents are as plentiful as colonels?"—London Freethinker.

Yes, there are a great many Freethinkers of importance in California. In fact, every Freethinker is of importance. Colonels are frequently met with here, but we have fewer native lords, barts, and hon. gents. to the square acre than Great Britain and her colonies.

THE discussion on the scientific basis of Spiritualism, between S. P. Putnam and Professor Seymour, is not yet ended. If both are in the city next month, it may come up again before the Freethought Society. Meanwhile it should be understood that the personal relations between Materialists and Spiritualists are in no wise strained. Liberals are learning that all cannot think alike, and that difference of opinion on questions of minor importance does not prevent them from working harmoniously together for reform.

BENNETT, the Oakland bicycle prophet, has sold his two-wheeled machine and gone out of the doom-sealing business. In the bill of sale for the bicycle Bennett introduced the following clause: "Sold with the understanding that the seller believes both the wheel and the purchaser will sink in the earthquake and be swallowed up in the flood if in Oakland on April 14, 1890." Thus another mischievous humbug relapses into temporary reticacy.

AT the last meeting of the Freethought Society it was resolved to request members who joined the society a year ago to renew their membership by the payment of $1 in order to provide a fund for larger work. The resolution is not to be understood as an assessment, but as a suggestion for voluntary action. The society has nearly one hundred members.

IT is hoped that Dr. Westbrook's report of the "Gage Gathering" does the subject nothing less than justice. We have noticed that the man or woman who gets up a convention usually has to face the contingency of controlling it himself and having things as he wants them, or letting somebody else control it and having things as he don't want them.

W. F. JAMIESON, who is lecturing in Iowa, has just closed a course of six lectures in Carroll. His address is Des Moines, Ia., where calls for lectures may be directed.

IF Christianity keeps on at the present rate in producing lunatics, the religious problem must soon pass out of the field of metaphysics and theology, and into the domain of the alienist.

Bound volumes of FREETHOUGHT, 1889, $3.

OBSERVATIONS.

At eight o'clock last Sunday evening the Freethought Society's hall contained as many visitors as it could accommodate, and proceedings opened punctually at the appointed time. President Putnam occupied the chair and Secretary Lemme was in his place at the desk. Miss Evangeline Ballou, who has been engaged as a permanent attraction, sang melodiously in the alcove, like a bird in a bay window, and all was sweetness and light.

Mr. W. S. Bell, being the speaker of the evening, read an address on "Christian Crusades." He applied this descriptive phrase to the God-in-the-Constitution and Sunday-law movement inaugurated by the National Reform party, and championed by the Sabbath Association and the Prohibitionists. Mr. Bell's address is in manuscript and will soon appear in the columns of FREETHOUGHT. It is one of the best things that have ever fallen from the fertile pen of Mr. Bell, and the speaker received an amount of applause sufficient to more than pay the expenses of his journey from Oakland.

Miss Lillie Arper gave a patriotic poem having the American flag for its theme. Miss Arper lent to the rhyme of the poet the beauty of her voice, the combination producing the best results.

Mr. Curtis spoke in response to popular demand. He said it was gratifying to remember that Christian crusades generally ended in failure. Centuries ago the Christian world inaugurated a crusade to rescue the holy sepulchre from the Infidel Saracens, and though they fought and prayed and left their bones all the way from Italy to Jerusalem, the holy sepulchre still remains in the possession of Mohammedans.

Mr. Healy took the stand, as he remarked, to humbly confess his belief in God, with whom "a day was as a thousand years." This quotation Mr. Healy followed with the statement that the Catholic church, to which he belonged, had not indorsed the Sabbath crusade; that a Catholic discovered America; that Ireland was Ireland when England was a pup, or words to that effect; that Irishmen made voyages of discovery to America a thousand years ago; that Patrick Maguire was the first man to set foot on American soil in 1492; that Catholicism was destined to rule this country inside of fifty years, and that Irishmen during that time would be the dominant race. Mr. Bell, the speaker said, had ridiculed the idea of a majority of the Presbyterian church settling the question of infant damnation, but Mr. Bell should remember that majority rule was the law of the land. Mr. Healy then sat down.

Mr. Palanca recited a portion of the hymn "Jesus Paid It All," and afterwards gave another version of it in his own inimitable style. Mr. Palanca's daughter followed with a recitation of a more serious character.

Mr. Bell warned Mr. Healy that the present audience was not assembled to hear religious confessions, but to weigh evidence. It would therefore be more in order for Mr. Healy to present evidence of a God, instead of merely confessing his belief in such an institution as the deity.

Mr. Putnam made some remarks calculated to destroy confidence in Mr. Healy. The gentleman had stated that the Catholic church did not indorse the Sunday-law movement, but it was on record that Cardinal Gibbons, the representative of American Catholics, had signed the petition asking for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill, and the lay convention at Baltimore passed resolutions announcing their readiness to join the evangelical churches in their effort to secure Sunday observance. Mr. Putnam would admit that Ireland was a great country centuries ago, but it owed its downfall to the church whose pope, by an edict, placed it under the heel of the despots who have since ruled the Emerald Isle. Mr. Healy here arose to "deny that fact." Then Putnam drew him into a trap by inquiring if he understood that Mr. Healy denied the fact. Mr. Healy fell in promptly and said he did, when the speaker sprung the trap by declaring that if the gentleman denied facts there was no use in arguing with him. The audience grasped the situation and pranced with delight, while Mr. Healy, seeming to have a dim consciousness that something had fallen upon him, gave up the struggle and was heard no more.

Mr. Arper spoke briefly to inquire if Mr. Healy believed that even the wisest men could by a majority vote decide what was the will of God and what was not. Mr. Healy failed to respond, though Mr. Arper paused for a reply.

The meeting soon adjourned.

I am sorry to have given Mr. E. H. Heywood so much trouble by the remark that his paper, the Word, is unnecessarily offensive. He uses up two columns of space and fifty amper-sands in his endeavor to convince the subscriber that the use of vulgar language on all occasions is not only the inalienable right but the duty of every American citizen. I can't see it. All the senses are susceptible of being offended. There are things that are ugly to look at; things that are rough to the touch; bitter to the taste; revolting to the nostrils; offensive to the ear. Does Mr. Heywood imagine that forever harassing the senses with the unpleasant will materially promote human happiness? His attempt to commit Stephen Pearl Andrews to the use of vulgarism; is unfair to the deceased Pantarch. Mr. Andrews defended the freedom of the press, but he never abused it. He had a sufficient command of language to express his thoughts in elevated terms, and his words seldom gave offense, whatever his ideas may have done. The most expressive word I ever heard him use was fool; and I am reminded of it just now because he applied it to the author of an editorial article in the Word who persisted in parading what he called the night-side of human life in the light of day. He explained the use of the word "fool" to show that he used it advisedly; and, to illustrate, spoke of a person who was an idiot so far as audible music was concerned, since he could not differentiate one note from another. Others were color blind, and foolish to that extent. In the same way the writer under criticism was a fool in not being able to distinguish the appropriate from the inappropriate. If Mr. Heywood cannot see that the words he uses in his paper are out of place, he has a large vacancy in the locality where his sense of eternal fitness should reside.

I wonder how many marines there are who believe that old Gabriel, the Tulare Indian who died near Salinas last Sunday, was one hundred and fifty-one years of age. It is admitted that Gabriel did not know how old he was. The Indians keep no records. They tell of "big cold," "big water," or something of that kind in an indefinite way, but years are unknown to their calendar. Gabriel's age rests on the testimony of Catholic missionaries, and for proselyting purposes he was pointed to as an example of the wonderful effects of baptism by a Jesuit priest. For he was a good Catholic, and the fact that he was semi-idiotic and wholly barbarous did not make him any the less pious. He might have been past his prime in '49, and his age has been drawing compound interest ever since. Given an imbecile aborigine unable to speak any intelligible language, and a lot of miracle-mongering priests for witnesses regarding his age, and in an unsettled country it is as easy to make him one hundred and fifty years old as it was for the Bible worthies to approach ten centuries.

Evidences of immortality are crowding us for room in this office. Putnam visited Dr. Schlesinger, the medium, last week, and returned flourishing a communication from the spirit world, which read:

Heaven bless you, I pray. Your mother, Frances H. Potter.

The writing of the message was reversed as ordinary writing is seen to be when held before a mirror. The name should have been Porter, as Mr. Putnam wrote it in the doctor's presence, but the error may be pardoned in view of Dr. Schlesinger's accuracy on a former occasion when Mr. Putnam wrote by mistake "Frances E." and the message received was signed "Frances E." with marked fidelity to copy. Mr. Putnam holds, concerning this message, that in seeking to explain any phenomenon we are not to suppose a cause greater than is necessary to produce the effect.

I have myself had an experience which is explainable only upon the theory that I am a liar. Lying abed in a wakeful state the other morning, at that uncomfortable time when it is a little too early for a sane man to get up and too late to go to sleep again,

I concluded to compromise, and merely snoozed. And while thus occupied I thought I was sitting at the type-writer in the store behind the counter. I did not hear the door open, but a man with cheeks shaved, and chin whiskers through which the zephyrs sighed softly, stood before me. With a strange motion he drew two large pieces of white metal from his clothing and laying them upon the counter requested me to record his name as a subscriber to this paper. And I said: "Is this a dream? then waking would be pain. Oh, do not wake me; let me dream again." I then inquired his address, which he gave thus: "W. Shakpur, Hades." "What state?" I asked, and he answered, "Your Future." He then directed my attention to the type-writer and dictated these lines:

Kind friend, for Jesus' sake forbear
To loaf around here anywhere.
One day a caller tarried long—
He's singing now the Heavenly Song.
Another stepped inside this door—
Like the above, he's Gone Before.
A third one lingered till we tired—
This is the spot where he Expired.
Dear Stranger, do not perish thus,
Nor wait the hour when bores are fired,
But go; delays are dangerous.
Would you avoid a dismal fate,
Depart, get hence, absquatulate.

Then, observing that it had been a rule with him for many years to suit the action to the word, he directed me to post the foregoing lines in a conspicuous place inside my sanctum, and departed. Then I awoke. Upon reaching the office that morning and lifting the cover from the type-writer I found the inspired words as above given printed upon a sheet of paper between the rollers of the instrument. The two white pieces of metal lay upon the counter, but both paper and metal shortly disappeared under scrutiny, and I have seen nothing like them since.

As I dislike to vouch for phenomena for which I cannot give an adequate explanation, I will add a remark that is usually omitted from recitals of this kind; namely, that the only proof of its truth is the copy of the "poem" in my own handwriting pasted up inside my sanctum.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The aged Indian known in the region of Salinas as "Old Gabriel" died on the 19th. He is said to have been born somewhere about 1740, being in consequence 150 years old. Through popular subscriptions for the relief of the unemployed in this city, about a thousand men have been put at work improving Golden Gate Park. They get $1.50 a day each. Erickson, the Oakland doom-monger who prophesied the earthquake and deluge on April 14, has been placed in the lunatic asylum at Stockton. He is religiously insane. The Las Vegas, N. M., female seminary was destroyed by fire on the 16th. The loss is $12,000. The Rev. George M. Sanborn, of Eureka, has been cleared of charges of unchastity and untruthfulness by a council of clergymen, and restored to church-fellowship. The ironmolders' strike in this city is still on, and neither side shows any special sign of weakening. Eastern men are coming to take the strikers' places. Those interested in the matter of government loans to farmers at one or two per cent held a mass meeting in Metropolitan Temple Thursday night to endorse Senator Stanford's bill. George Francis Train has left Tacoma, Wash., on his trip around the world, which he promises to make in sixty days.

Mrs. Anastasia Parsells, of Bayonne, N. J., celebrated last Monday what she calls her 104th birthday. She relates that when a child she was kissed by George Washington. A Milwaukee priest recently performed a marriage ceremony between a boy of 15 and a girl one year older. The father of the lad is seeking to have the contract annulled. A French monk is suing a New York wine dealer who, he claims, is manufacturing liquor which he fraudulently labels "Chartreuse," in imitation of the famous cordial which the French monks alone know how to make. He asks for a restraining order and damages. Miss Mabel Jenness, the dress reformer, declares her intention of setting New York women a good example by riding in the park astride her horse. She will affect the accordion skirt, or rather two of them—one on each side of the horse. The streets of New Orleans have been flooded by the rise of the Mississippi, but at latest accounts the waters were subsiding. The boomers who rushed to the Cherokee strip in the Indian territory are now rushing out again, government troops having been ordered to eject them.

Bismarck has resigned his office of Chancellor. There is some disagreement between him and the German emperor, but its nature has not transpired. Edwin Arnold, author of the "Light of Asia," has settled at Tokio, in Japan, and it is said he contemplates making that city his permanent residence. Catholic authorities deny that Pope Leo is nearing his end, or that he has nominated his successor. One hundred thousand men are on strike in London.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

In this city, March 10, Henry K. Ames, a native of Cambridge, Mass., for many years a resident of San Francisco, died at the age of 54 years. The memorial services were held at his home, 136 Twenty-sixth street, on Wednesday morning. A large number were present. He leaves a wife and ten children.

The following address was made by Samuel P. Putnam:

The husband, the father, the friend, the citizen, the man, hath passed away. The heart has ceased to beat, the eye to glow, the hand to move, the voice to speak. The eternal silence, the eternal rest, is here—the goal of all human life. Memory takes the place of hope. We think of what has been, not of what will be. The toil is over, but that toil has left its fruit. It is not the mournfulness of despair that touches us. The past becomes illuminated by death's mystic shadow. Love becomes more dear than ever, virtue sweeter, devotion nobler.

We cannot look beyond death. The stars may shine there in limitless glory, but we cannot behold them. It is on this side of death that we find hope and consolation, in our living humanity. Death cannot destroy that. It cannot destroy our affections, our sympathy, our helpfulness. It cannot make us less brave or less strong. The radiant bond of friendship still glows, and on the graves of the beloved the flowers are made to bloom. We cannot make death less awful, but we can make life more beautiful. The brain can think, the heart can feel, the hand create the golden harvest. Loyalty, truth, honor, justice, these are ours, and death can take nothing of their glory away.

We come not to the grave with savage fear. We do not stoop to the ground like slaves. Beyond the dark boundary we see not the fires of cruel vengeance. No hell is there, save what man makes himself; no heaven is there, save what is the bloom and blossom of the excellence of to-day. Death may be a sleep, but no horrors haunt its mystic realms. It may be a life beyond, but a life the same as this, where deeds, not creeds, confer the eternal crown.

Thus with lofty spirit we meet this common sorrow. We stand where all the millions of the earth must stand—by the side of the beloved dead. There is no escape. No king or priest is mighty enough to stay this universal stroke. Nothing can sustain, save our own courageous spirit, our own undaunted mind.

Our friend has gone away, a true friend, a generous friend, an honorable neighbor, a worker in the fields of time, faithful to himself, an honest thinker who dared to search for the truth and speak the truth as he understood it, who trusted to reason, who believed in humanity, who recognized and fulfilled the duties of home, of society, of country and the world; a man without hypocrisy, staunch in friendship, who never gave his hand except his heart went with it. We gaze with sorrow upon his silent body; we look with pride, with joy upon his record as a comrade, a husband, a father, a soldier of truth, of nature, of humanity.

Farewell, farewell comrade, brother, your sufferings are over. Disease has won the victory. The pale signet of death is on thy brow. Thou art clothed in its majestic shroud. The wonder, the mystery, is thine of the unfathomable world beyond. Take thy rest in the bosom of the mother of us all, without fear and without pain.

Wife, children, friends, give the last tribute to our honored dead; but from the dead, with peace and hope, turn to the living. With tenderer care for one another, with deeper links of fellowship and love, take the burden and the joy of life—its work, its duty.

The blue sky bends over our dead, but not in their depths is there the flash of angel wing. The divinity is not above. It is within and around. In ourselves must we find the star of hope, the blessing, and the consolation. We must help one another. Was there ever a diviner gospel than that? What is better than human love, human sympathy? What is nobler than a mother's affection, more tender than the radiance of the sky? What is sweeter than the son's, the daughter's devotion, to whom sacrifice is joy? The radiant home circle—brother and sister, do we not find here the "fair humanities" that make life worth living? Though death has broken the circle, still the golden links are glistening. Still there is labor, consecration to make beautiful the path of all.

Death emphasizes our humanity. It makes us cling closer to each other, and struggle more for each others' welfare. It develops the grandeur of our common being. It leads up to sublime and splendid virtues. Call it not the king of terrors. Call it the fountain of sweet memory. Call it the mystic teacher of love; call it the nurse of heroism. In its darkness let us set the glory of sympathy and affection, and turn from the flower-crowned dead to the living, who toil and suffer.

To the dead we give our tears; to the living we give our hands and heart, our hope. We know not life, we know not death; but the secret and the wonder of both are what each can do for the happiness of all. We are bound together, the least with the greatest, and the greatest with the least. We do not live for ourselves alone. We cannot. Bound with the race, with it we rise or fall. The race has toiled for us through many centuries. We should toil for the race, and thus we become immortal on the stream of time. Our individual life flows into the united life of all.

Our brother is thus immortal. In the sincerity, truthfulness, integrity of his life he has become a part of the undying world, which uncounted human hearts and hopes and toils have made. With what a solemn glory over life—

Death draws its mystic and unfathomed grace.
We know not, nor ever hath the veil
From its unsounded deep been put aside;
No music from its endless ocean drops
In harsh or mellow accents on our way.
But 'gainst that awful silence life bursts bright
And wonderful, and seems more excellent.
More fruitful, for the dark unknown wherein
Its wealth appears to perish, but transformed
Becomes a grander lustre, purer stream.

Mrs. Josephine R. Wilson closed the service with a short address. She said:

The life principle of the world is love, wisdom, and truth. In these we have our being. The body decays, but the mind endures. The divine is not far off, but ever present, in our daily duties, in our affections for each other. The consolation of death is in the work that we must do. That which is of real value cannot perish. The flesh is but the veil of the spirit. It decays, but the spirit shines on forever.

Weep not, for beauty and virtue are immortal. Love is at the heart of nature, and will never cease to be. It is in star and flower, in day and night. It is in humanity. It is by our love that we conquer death. Love pervades all and is in all, a principle, not a person. It is a feeling that in human hearts and human deeds finds its lofty expression. Let us recognize love by doing that duty which lies before us, and thus in the soul of nature will be found that sublime joy which crowns death with immortality.

The body was taken to the Masonic cemetery. The grave was covered with flowers woven into beautiful wreaths. The words "Father" and "At Rest" were wrought amid the profusion of colors. The sympathy of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances is extended to the wife and children.

DELICATE CALCULATIONS.

Professor J. T. Richardson of the Lick Observatory, in speaking of the nicety required in astronomical observations, says:

"Few persons are aware of the nicety required in astronomical observations. The rod used in measuring a base line is commonly about ten feet long, and the astronomer may be said to apply the very rod to mete the distance of the stars. An error in placing a fine dot which fixes the length of the rod, amounting to one-thousandth of an inch—the thickness of a single silken fiber—will amount to an error of seventy-five feet in the earth's diameter, of 316 miles in the sun's distance, and to more than sixty-five millions of miles in that of the nearest fixed star. As the astronomer in his observations has nothing further to do with ascertaining lengths or distances except by calculation, his whole skill and artifice are consequently exhausted in the measurement of angles, it being by these alone that spaces inaccessible can be compared.

"Happily a ray of light is straight; were it not so in celestial spaces, at least, there would be an end of astronomy. Now, an angle of a second—3600 to a degree—is a subtle thing. It has an apparent breadth utterly invisible to the unassisted eye, unless accompanied with so intense a splendor—as in the case of a fixed star—as actually to raise by its effect on the nerve of sight a spurious image having a sensible breadth. A silkworm fiber, such as has been mentioned, subtends an angle of a second at three and a half feet distance; a cricket ball two and a half inches in diameter must be removed in order to subtend a second to 43,000 feet or about eight miles, when it would be utterly invisible to the naked sight, even were it aided by a telescope of the same power. Yet it is on the measure of one single second that the ascertainment of a sensible parallax in any fixed star depends; and an error of one-thousandth of that amount—a quantity still unmeasurable by the most perfect of instruments—would place the star too far or too near by 200,000,000 miles, a space which light requires 118 days to travel."

CHRONICLES OF SIMON CHRISTIANUS.

CHAPTER IV.

THE APPARITION OF THE CANDLES.

Quagmire of Bewilderment.—Mist of Contradiction.—Fanatic and his Cudgel.—The Lake of Unbelief.—Dame Credulity.

1. And Simon journeyed towards the valley of Repentance, and the thunders and the lightnings ceased.

2. And Simon began to loiter; and presently, seeing one of the great stones called Argument in his way, he had a mind to move it aside, and going about to lift it, he found it greatly beyond his strength, and it fell upon him and bruised him exceedingly sore, and he stumbled therewith and rolled violently into a certain quagmire.

3. And the name of the quagmire was Bewilderment.

4. And he wallowed about a great while in the quagmire, and began to be greatly troubled, and could not by any means help himself out; and while he was debating with himself what he should do, he bethought himself of his guide-book, and he began to read.

5. But, lo! as he read, there rose a great and heavy mist from the book, so that Simon could by no means see his way, and the more he read, the thicker grew the mist.

6. And the name of that mist was Contradiction.

7. And Simon began to be mightily afraid, for he had been told that when a man saw this mist he was in danger to perish, and was likely never to gain the bridge over the river Oblivion, but to be received into the caldron of fire prepared for the enemies of the king Jah.

8. And he began to weep and to wail, and pitifully bemoan himself, and to rush about in hopes to escape from the quagmire and the mist.

9. And he shut fast his eyes, lest he should see the mist, and put on his eye-glasses, but they had received great hurt by the stone, and availed him but little.

10. And as Simon bemoaned himself, he heard a voice calling to him, and, opening his eyes, he perceived at his right hand dry ground and firm, and upon it stood a man of noble and unveiled countenance, and of goodly presence, and courageous mien; and the name of the man was Truthseeker.

11. And Truthseeker said, Wherefore bemoanest thou thyself?

12. And Simon answered and said, Because I have fallen into the mire, and can find no way out.

13. And Truthseeker had a certain strong rope in his hand, called Rational Conversation, and he threw it towards Simon, and bid him take hold of it.

14. But Simon, seeing that the man was on the side of the quagmire leading away from the gutter which led to the city he was in search of, was afraid to take hold.

15. But the rope had magic in it, and it began to approach Simon, and little by little, to encircle him, and wind itself about him, so that at last he was bound therewith; and Truthseeker well nigh drew him out on to the dry ground, and began to persuade him to take a voyage down a certain river near at hand.

16. And the name of the river was Enquiry; and it led away from the roadway.

17. And as Simon and Truthseeker talked together, there came up a man called Fanatic, and he had on a great green cloak, and his face was of a gloomy and austere aspect, and his eyes, by continually looking upwards, had become about the length of a cubit asunder from his chin.

18. And Fanatic said unto Simon, Why talkest thou with this emissary of the evil one? Fly from him, or thou art undone; from his lips floweth poison, and from his tongue proceedeth the stings of everlasting death.

19. Then began Simon to tremble, and said unto Fanatic, How shall I go, seeing I am fast in this quagmire, and a great mist riseth from my guide-book.

20. Then said Fanatic, O fool that thou art, there is no mist, and the quagmire is but a device of our enemy.

21. But of a verity, said Simon, I saw somewhat of a mist, and it was a thick and a dark.

22. Then said Fanatic angrily, I tell thee, wretched man, there is no mist; and immediately he drew a great cudgel from his cloak called Damnation, and began to belabor Simon therewith, and laid on great and heavy blows, and beat him out of the quagmire, and laid the cudgel upon him without mercy; and Simon cried out a main and besought Fanatic to forbear.

23. Then Fanatic, taking Simon by the nose, led him to the gutter and put him therein, and having repaired his eye-glasses and dipped them in the mud and slime of the gutter, he made him put them on, and immediately Simon perceived that there was neither mist nor quagmire, and rejoiced accordingly.

24. And when he saw that the quagmire and the mist were delusions of the adversary, he took courage and went on his way.

25. And when he had traveled a little way, he saw another great stone, and the gutter made a bend to avoid it, and when he saw it he derided it, for by reason of his glasses it appeared small and of no account, and he said, I will not move out of my way for it, for it is despicable.

26. So Simon approached the stone, and the stone being so much greater and higher than his glasses showed it, he ran violently against it with his head, and immediately there appeared to him more than nine hundred and fourscore and seventeen waxen candles, besides two little ones which are not counted; and he fell down in a swoon.

27. Now the river Enquiry ran close by where Simon fell, and on the banks of the river grew certain sweet and wholesome fruits called Knowledge.

28. And when Simon came out of the swoon, he heard the sound of the waters, and became thirsty and crept towards the river and drank a little, and when he had drunk, the waters caused him to be an hungered, so he partook a little of the fruit and was refreshed.

29. And, having lost his glasses, he perceived that the stone against which he had stumbled was exceeding large; and the more he looked upon it the larger it grew.

30. And while he lingered, and wondered, and looked about him, he perceived at a distance a certain smooth and glassy lake, into which the river called Enquiry fell.

31. And the name of it was the Lake of Unbelief.

32. And Simon perceived that the stone blocked up the way, so that he could not return to the gutter except by removing the stone, or else by climbing over it.

33. Then did Simon endeavor to clamber over the stone, but when he had clambered to the top his foot slipped, and he fell down headlong into another great quagmire which was near.

34. And this quagmire was greater than the other; and Simon could not perceive the other side of it, but after wallowing about a great while, he at last perceived that as he went towards the river, the quagmire became shallower; and going that way he perceived dry land, and a certain sluice leading out of the quagmire.

35. And the name of this sluice was Common Sense, and into it the mire of quagmire entered not, but only water.

36. And Simon went into the sluice, and followed it a little way; but when he perceived that it led to the river, and only to the river, he began to fear.

37. And while he debated with himself, he heard a great clamor behind him, and presently there came up Dame Credulity, and with her the beast's concubine, Fearohell.

38. And Credulity cried out, saying, This way, my son, or thou art utterly undone. Turn away thine eyes from that enchanted river, and come out of that accursed sluice, or the cal-dron of fire will indeed be thy portion.

39. So Credulity put forth her hand, and plucked Simon out of the sluice, and immediately she began to dry off the water of the sluice from him, and for that end she did use a certain towel called Cant.

40. And Credulity said unto Simon, Verily, my son, thou hast but narrowly escaped, for that accursed sluice has led multitudes to destruction, and the unquenchable fire; and few there be, who, having entered therein, have returned to our holy pathway.

41. And Credulity fell to again with her towel, and zealously wiped him therewith, lest there should be any of the water of the sluice left upon him.

42. And when she had done wiping, she gave him back his glasses, which he had lost, and bid him haste with all speed for the valley, for that Ahrimanes was in pursuit of him.

43. And Fearohell drew her scourge and laid on him.

44. And Simon fled to the valley, and Fearohell pursued, scourging. And Simon, looking through his glass, was filled with terror, perceiving that Ahrimanes was near at hand.

45. And Simon saw Ahrimanes, and he was like unto a great winged alligator, with eyes like unto blazing furnaces, and from his mouth issued as it were a raging tempest of flame, and from his nostrils descended as it were two noble rivers of liquid brimstone, the which falling into the raging tempests of flame which issued from his mouth, were set on fire, and gave forth unspeakable stench, and an all-aborrent stink; and in his mouth, that great and hideous cavern, appeared great and all-devouring teeth, as it were a mighty forest of birchen trees with their branches lopped short.

46. And Simon's eyes well-nigh came out, his hair was lift up, and his teeth chattered together, and his knees shook, and his heart battered at his ribs, like unto a battering ram, and there was muttering in his bowels, and the sweat poured forth like springs of water, and he fled with the speed of a wild ass; and Fearohell scourged him, and Ahrimanes pursued him.

47. And Simon came to the valley of Repentance, and fell down therein; yea, he fell down headlong, even into the mire and the mud, by reason of his fear and haste he fell down.

To be Continued.

A COMING MAN IN ENGLAND.

Mr. Bradlaugh is, to all appearances, a coming man. Mr. Bradlaugh has carefully cultivated the House of Commons. He came in with the reputation of being, among other things, a great platform orator—a very Boanerges of the East-End meeting and the provincial meeting. He has a powerful form and a most tremendous voice. When, after a long struggle, he was at last allowed to take his seat in peace, the House assumed that it was in for frequent and ponderous rhetorical exertions. Mr. Bradlaugh gave the House nothing of the kind. He never, so far as I know, made a long speech. He always goes straight to the point, and when he has said what he wants to say he always sits down. He is really a very eloquent and powerful speaker, with a remarkably impressive voice, and it must be a temptation to such a man to let himself fully out now and then. But Mr. Bradlaugh is always concise, and the House now knows perfectly well that he, at least, will never bore his audience. Then he has devoted himself very closely to what we call the "business of the House"—to committees, and private bills, and all that sort of work which your popular orator generally disdains with a lofty disdain—and the House likes a man who looks after its work. Moreover, he is a man of the most winning courtesy of manner. He has disarmed the dislike of all his former political and religious opponents—and he had a good many of them—by his anxiety to oblige, by his willingness to make graceful concessions, by his genial toleration of difference of opinion. He is, I should think, destined before long to be a member of a Liberal administration, and even of a Liberal cabinet.—North American Review.

■ FREETHOUGHT Tracts: "Brains, Science, and Civilization," by the Hon. A. Schell, 5 cents; "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," by W. S. Bell, two for 5 cents; "God and Religion," by G. W. Thurston, 10 cents per dozen. Order of the Freethought Publishing Company.

An article by Professor Huxley, entitled "On the Natural Inequality of Men," will be printed in "The Popular Science Monthly" for April. It deals with Rousseau's idea of the equality of men in the state of nature; with applications to the recent controversy on the land question.

WHY AM I AN AGNOSTIC ?

The Christian religion rests on miracles. There are no miracles in the realm of science. The real philosopher does not seek to excite wonder, but to make that plain which was wonderful. He does not endeavor to astonish, but to enlighten. He is perfectly confident that there are no miracles in nature. He knows that the mathematical expression of the same relations, contents, areas, numbers, and proportions must forever remain the same. He knows that there are no miracles in chemistry; that the attractions and repulsions, the loves and hatreds, of atoms are constant. Under like conditions, he is certain that like will always happen; that the product ever has been and forever will be the same; that the atoms or particles unite in definite, unvarying proportions—so many of one kind mix, mingle, and harmonize with just so many of another, and the surplus will be forever cast out. There are no exceptions. Substances are always true to their natures. They have no caprices, no prejudices, that can vary or control their action. They are "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever."

In this fixedness, this constancy, this eternal integrity, the intelligent man has absolute confidence. It is useless to tell him that there was a time when fire would not consume the combustible, when water would not flow in obedience to the attraction of gravitation, or that there ever was a fragment of a moment during which substance had no weight.

Credulity should be the servant of intelligence. The ignorant have not credulity enough to believe the actual, because the actual appears to be contrary to the evidence of their senses. To them it is plain that the sun rises and sets, and they have not credulity enough to believe in the rotary motion of the earth—that is to say, they have not intelligence enough to comprehend the absurdities involved in their belief, and the perfect harmony between the rotation of the earth and all known facts. They trust their eyes, not their reason. Ignorance has always been and always will be at the mercy of appearance. Credulity, as a rule, believes everything except the truth. The semi-civilized believe in astrology, but who could convince them of the vastness of astronomical spaces, the speed of light, or the magnitude and number of suns and constellations? If Hermann and Humboldt could have appeared before savages, which would have been regarded as a god?

When men knew nothing of mechanics, nothing of the correlation of force, and of its indestructibility, they were believers in perpetual motion. So when chemistry was a kind of sleight-of-hand, or necromancy, something accomplished by the aid of the supernatural, people talked about the transmutation of metals, the universal solvent, and the philosopher's stone. Perpetual motion would be a mechanical miracle; and the transmutation of metals would be a miracle in chemistry; and if we could make the result of multiplying two by two five, that would be a miracle in mathematics. No one expects to find a circle the diameter of which is just one-fourth of the circumference. If one could find such a circle, then there would be a miracle in geometry.

In other words, there are no miracles in any science. The moment we understand a question or subject, the miraculous necessarily disappears. If anything actually happens in the chemical world, it will, under like conditions, happen again. No one need take an account of this result from the mouths of others; all can try the experiment for themselves. There is no caprice, and no accident.

It is admitted, at least by the Protestant world, that the age of miracles has passed away, and, consequently, miracles cannot at present be established by miracles; they must be substantiated by the testimony of witnesses who are said by certain writers—or, rather, by uncertain writers—to have lived several centuries ago; and this testimony is given to us, not by the witnesses themselves, not by persons who say that they talked with those witnesses, but by unknown persons who did not give the sources of their information.

The question is: Can miracles be established except by miracles? We know that the writers may have been mistaken. It is possible that they may have manufactured these accounts themselves. The witnesses may have told what they knew to be untrue, or they may have been honestly deceived, or the stories may have been true as at first told. Imagination may have added greatly to them, so that after several centuries of accretion a very simple truth was changed to a miracle.

We must admit that all probabilities must be against miracles, for the reason that that which is probable cannot by any possibility be a miracle. Neither the probable nor the possible, so far as man is concerned, can be miraculous. The probability, therefore, says that the writers and witnesses were either mistaken or dishonest.

We must admit that we have never seen a miracle ourselves, and we must admit that, according to our experience, there are no miracles. If we have mingled with the world, we are compelled to say that we have known a vast number of persons—including ourselves—to be mistaken, and many others who have failed to tell the exact truth. The probabilities are on the side of our experience, and, consequently, against the miraculous; and it is a necessity that the free mind moves along the path of least resistance.

The effect of testimony depends on the intelligence and honesty of the witness and the intelligence of him who weighs. A man living in a community where the supernatural is expected, where the miraculous is supposed to be of almost daily occurrence, will, as a rule, believe that all wonderful things are the result of supernatural agencies. He will expect providential interference, and, as a consequence, his mind will pursue the path of least resistance, and will account for all phenomena by what to him is the easiest method. Such people, with the best intentions, honestly bear false witness. They have been imposed upon by appearances, and are victims of delusion and illusion.

In an age when reading and writing were substantially unknown, and when history itself was but the vaguest hearsay handed down from dotage to infancy, nothing was rescued from oblivion except the wonderful, the miraculous. The more marvellous the story, the greater the interest excited. Narrators and hearers were alike ignorant and alike honest. At that time nothing was known, nothing suspected, of the orderly course of nature—of the unbroken and unbreakable chain of causes and effects. The world was governed by caprice. Everything was at the mercy of a being, or beings, who were themselves controlled by the same passions that dominated man. Fragments of facts were taken for the whole, and the deductions drawn were honest and monstrous.

It is probably certain that all of the religions of the world have been believed, and that all the miracles have found credence in countless brains; otherwise they could not have been perpetuated. They were not all born of cunning. Those who told were as honest as those who heard. This being so, nothing has been too absurd for human credence.

All religions, so far as I know, claim to have been miraculously founded, miraculously preserved, and miraculously propagated. The priests of all claimed to have messages from God, and claimed to have a certain authority, and the miraculous has always been appealed to for the purpose of substantiating the message and the authority.

If men believe in the supernatural, they will account for all phenomena by an appeal to supernatural means or power. We know that formerly everything was accounted for in this way except some few simple things with which man thought he was perfectly acquainted. After a time men found that under like conditions like would happen, and as to those things the supposition of supernatural interference was abandoned; but that interference was still active as to all the unknown world. In other words, as the circle of man's knowledge grew, supernatural interference withdrew and was active only just beyond the horizon of the known.

Now, there are some believers in universal special providence—that is, men who believe in perpetual interference by a supernatural power, this interference being for the purpose of punishing or rewarding, of destroying or preserving, individuals and nations.

Others have abandoned the idea of providence in ordinary matters, but still believe that God interferes on great occasions and at critical moments, especially in the affairs of nations, and that his presence is manifest in great disasters. This is the compromise position. These people believe that an infinite being made the universe and impressed upon it what they are pleased to call "laws," and then left it to run in accordance with those laws and forces; that as a rule it works well, and that the divine maker interferes only in case of accident, or at moments when the machine fails to accomplish the original design.

There are others who take the ground that all is natural; that there never has been, never will be, never can be any interference from without, for the reason that nature embraces all, and that there can be no without or beyond.

The first class are Theists pure and simple; the second are Theists as to the unknown, Naturalists as to the known; and the third are Naturalists without a touch or taint of superstition.

What can the evidence of the first class be worth? This question is answered by reading the history of those nations that believed thoroughly and implicitly in the supernatural. There is no conceivable absurdity that was not established by their testimony. Every law or every fact in nature was violated. Children were born without parents; men lived for thousands of years; others subsisted without food, without sleep; thousands and thousands were possessed with evil spirits, controlled by ghosts and ghouls; thousands confessed themselves guilty of impossible offenses, and in courts, with the most solemn forms, impossibilities were substantiated by the oaths, affirmations, and confessions of men, women, and children.

These delusions were not confined to ascetics and peasants, but they took possession of nobles and kings; of people who were at that time called intelligent; of the then educated. No one denied these wonders, for the reason that denial was a crime punishable generally with death. Societies, nations, became insane—victims of ignorance, of dreams, and above all, of fears. Under these conditions, human testimony is not and cannot be of the slightest value. We now know that nearly all of the history of the world is false, and we know this because we have arrived at that phase or point of intellectual development where and when we know that effects must have causes, that everything is naturally produced, and that, consequently, no nation could ever have been great, powerful, and rich, unless it had the soil, the people, the intelligence, and the commerce. Weighed in these scales, nearly all histories are found to be fictions.

The same is true of religions. Every intelligent American is satisfied that the religions of India, of Egypt, of Greece and Rome, of the Aztecs, were and are false, and that all the miracles on which they rest are mistakes. Our religion alone is excepted. Every intelligent Hindoo discards all religions and all miracles except his own. The question is: When will people see the defects in their own theology as clearly as they perceive the same defects in every other.

All the so-called false religions were substantiated by miracles, by signs and wonders, by prophets and martyrs, precisely as our own. Our witnesses are no better than theirs, and our success is no greater. If their miracles were false, ours cannot be true. Nature was the same in India and in Palestine.—R. G. INGERSOLL, in the North American Review.

PIONEERS.

O to die advancing on!
Are there some of us to droop and die? has the hour come?
Then upon the march we fittest die, soon and sure the gap is filled,
Pioneers! O pioneers. —Whitman.

O yes, the pioneer must work on even though seeming defeat be before him. To fail is not always to lose. Progress is not always straight forward. We often have to go back and take a new start. We gain by every experience and in the long run nothing is lost.

Mark the battle for woman suffrage. Take Massachusetts as a sample. She is the "hub" of the universe, and so becomes a beacon-light for the masses.

"In the early history of Massachusetts when the new colony was governed by laws set down in the province charter (1691, third year of William and Mary) women were not excluded from voting.

"In the original constitution (1780) women were excluded from voting except for certain state officers."

In the constitutional convention of 1820 the word "male" was first put into the constitution of the state in an amendment to define the qualifications of voters. Thus the cause seemed to retrograde for a time, but continual agitation of it by wronged and oppressed woman kept up a real go-ahead sentiment that pushed on in advance of the unjust laws; thus preparing a way for future legislative progression.

All intelligent communities are far in advance of the laws of such communities. The wise minority seldom construct or put in operation the laws that govern the people as a whole.

The pioneers and progressists are like the brightest pupils in our common schools, who have to be ranked in classes far below them in attainments, simply because there is no proper place for them where they can receive their just dues, aids, and helps. The teacher has no time to devote specially to those advanced ones. They must be classed, and consequently classed with inferiors and held back.

Just so with our laws. They make no provision for pioneers who outgrow them and the need of them; and consequently they are classed with the masses, where they have no chance, or small chance at best, of going ahead, save as they blaze a way despite of thorns, briars, brakes, and class-legislation suitable only for their inferiors.

Yet shall the pioneer shrink and falter? Nay; we must only work the harder to bring up the masses higher and still higher. The great majority stand to-day where the pioneers stood only a few centuries ago. A few hundred years hence the masses will stand where the pioneers of to-day now stand. So with hope ahead we can work on sure that the reward will come, though we shall not live to see it. The path is thorny, but it has its roses and perfumes despite the thorns. All is not martyrdom, but the star of hope and success shines ever in the forefront of the struggle.

"Never on custom's oiled grooves
The world to a higher level moves,
But it grates and grinds with friction hard
O'er granite boulder and flinty shard.
The heart must bleed before it feels,
The pool be troubled before it heals."

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

THE GAGE GATHERING.

I choose words for a head-line which express just what I mean. Mrs. Matilda Joslyn Gage has practically gathered herself together and held a meeting at Washington, February 24-25, under the guise of a "convention." The convention was a conspicuous failure, but Mrs. Gage was an illustrious success. She had placarded Willard's Hotel with the announcement that the "Woman's National Liberal Union" would hold a convention. Who authorized this name I do not know, as the question of a name did not come before the convention at all. Reference was made to an Executive Board; but who appointed such board I do not know. It is certain that the convention did not appoint it, as the subject was never mentioned there. The programme for the morning of the second day announced "Discussion of Resolutions," but there was no discussion. They were merely read. The "Adoption of Resolutions" was on the printed programme of the afternoon, but they were not even mentioned. The "Announcement of Permanent Officers" by the chair was made according to the programme, but the convention was not asked to approve them.

When Mrs. Gage was asked privately why these matters were not brought before the convention, she curtly answered: "It was not thought best." What I want to say is, that the convention had no voice in anything. I attended every session, and speak from personal knowledge, when I say that but two votes were taken. One was on expressing a preference as to the place of the next meeting; the other was a vote of thanks to the press. There was a preconcerted arrangement that the convention should have no voice; and everything was cut and dried and executed by Mrs. Gage.

One member of her so-called "committee" told me that, although she had attended every meeting, she did not know what was done, as there were matters decided that had never been before them.

When Mrs. Gage assumed the chair at the opening of the so-called "convention," she simply said: "By virtue of the fact that I have been the oldest worker in this cause, and this meeting is, to some extent, the result of my own efforts, I shall assume to act as temporary president this morning. Mr. William F. Aldrich will also act as temporary secretary." The bad grammar of this announcement might be excused, if these persons had not continued to act as president and secretary to the last, without a vote of the convention. They were not approved, either as temporary or permanent officers. This notable woman suffragist did not allow the women of the convention to vote; and there were many "curses not loud but deep" among those present.

The course of Mrs. Gage can be accounted for only in one way. She had been repressed and suppressed by Susan B. Anthony and her compeers so often through a large number of years, that she was determined to have everything her own way for once.

Her very bad grammar, her monotonous voice, her egotism and lack of manners could all have been excused, had she not been guilty of such insufferable self-assertion.

Mr. Wm. F. Aldrich is said to have paid the expenses of the "Gage Gathering." In the Liberal Thinker, edited by Mrs. Gage and paid for by the Aldriches, Mrs. Aldrich is said to have been known throughout the United States for years as Miss Josephine Cables, who edited The Occult World, published at Rochester, New York, and who is "a woman of wonderful spiritual insight, occult powers, and humanitarian principles."

Now for the officers—not approved by the convention: President, Matilda Joslyn Gage, New York; vice-president, Josephine Cables Aldrich, Alabama; secretary, Mary E. Coues, Washington; treasurer, Wm. F. Aldrich, Alabama.

These are all avowed Theosophists—except Mrs. Gage, who is said to have a way of proving that woman is the holy ghost of the orthodox trinity.

The following persons were added (not by the convention) to the officers, forming the executive council: Susan H. Wixon, Eliza A. Conner, Micca Hoffman, Marietta M. Bones, Clara S. Foltz.

This council is hereafter to fill all vacancies and to elect all officers, without any reference to the convention—a self-constituted and self-perpetuating close corporation which will not allow any interference.

We now come to the resolutions. Professor Elliot Coues was chairman of this committee, but could only have been a figure-head, as Mrs. Gage told me that she wrote nearly all of the resolutions before she left home, and another person told me that she furnished two—which were revised by Mrs. Gage. Instead of taking up space by details, I would simply say that there are twelve resolutions. Ten of these might have been passed by any congress of the American Secular Union (excepting the platitudes). They relate mainly to the work of state secularization, and the separation of church and state, in which our organization is so successfully engaged. The other two are not true. It is not a fact that "every church, of whatever name, is based on the theory that woman was created secondary and inferior to man, and that she brought sin into the world, and necessitated the sacrifice of a savior." The Universalists, the Unitarians, the Friends (Hicksites), and several other churches as heartily oppose this view as does Mrs. Gage. Nor is it true that "every church is the enemy of liberty and progress."

One word more. Mrs. Gage was terribly afraid that there was a plot to capture her convention (?) by the American Secular Union. Ida C. Craddock, our secretary, had said something about auxiliaries in a letter published in our Liberal papers, and Mrs. Westbrook had written to Mrs. Gage, suggesting that possibly we might work together, etc.; and Mrs. Gage was very apprehensive on this subject. When Mrs. Westbrook and myself entered a preliminary meeting, on the express invitation of Susan H. Wixon, and with the express consent of Mr. Aldrich (in whose room the meeting was held), Mrs. Gage sprang to her feet, and seizing us both by the arms, exclaimed, "You must go out. You are the president of another society, and I don't mean to be the bob to the tail of anybody's kite." We were led out into the hall, and were thus unceremoniously dismissed.

This is the probable reason why nothing was permitted to come before the convention for approval or dissent.

Permit me to say that this was an unnecessary fright on the part of Mrs. Gage. I had never thought of capturing the convention. I had no desire to interfere in any way. I am an advocate of woman's enfranchisement, and have been for thirty years, and am heartily in favor of a woman suffrage society to resist the encroachments of the orthodox church; and I am an enemy to all forms of ecclesiasticism and sacerdotalism. We have missed a grand opportunity to form such a society. Let every person treat "Mrs. Gage's Gathering" as a nullity. Let us put a woman suffrage plank in with our "Nine Demands" of Secularism—and then we shall not need any other "gathering."

How true it is that, when the slave becomes the master, she is the most tyrannical of drivers. Mrs. Gage was to show Miss Anthony how to run a convention, and she has foolishly run hers into the ground. R. B. WESTBROOK, Pres. Am. Secular Union.

Philadelphia, March 1, 1890.

EARLY LIFE OF GEORGE ELIOT.

Many inaccurate statements having been made with regard to George Eliot's parentage and early life, says the London Secular Review, the Pall Mall Gazette presents the following authentic account:

Mary Ann Evans was born at Griff, near Nuneaton, on the 22d of November, 1820. Her father, Robert Evans, was land agent and surveyor to five estates in Warwickshire—those of Lord Aylesford, Lord Lifford, Mr. C. N. Newdegate, Mr. Bromley-Davenport, and Mrs. Gregory. In this capacity he was highly respected, and his reputation for trustworthiness may be said to have been proverbial. Mary Ann was the youngest of three children by a second marriage, Mr. Evans having also a son and daughter by his first wife. She was a remarkable child in many ways, thoughtful and earnest, and at the age of twelve might have been seen teaching in the Sunday-school in a little cottage near her father's house.

She received her first education at Miss Franklin's school in Coventry, and retained through life an affectionate remembrance of these teachers of her childhood, often speaking of her obligation to Miss Rebecca Franklin for much careful training. Her family resided at Griff until her twentieth year, her mother having died when she was fifteen. It cannot be doubted—there is every evidence of the fact—that her girlish experiences in that prosaic country district were so many treasures in her retentive memory, which, by means of marvelous wit and insight into character, served to enrich her first three novels and her "Scenes of Clerical Life." Her letters of those days show a penetration, wit, and philosophical observation belonging rather to mature life, and they show also that her mind was deeply imbued with evangelical sentiments. Her sisters and brothers having married, she lived alone with her father, who, in 1841, removed from Griff to Foleshill, near Coventry.

In this somewhat more populous neighborhood she soon became known as a person of more than common interest, and, moreover, as a most devoted daughter and the excellent manager of her father's household. There was perhaps little at first sight which betokened genius in that quiet, gentle mannered girl, with pale, grave face, naturally pensive in expression; and ordinary acquaintances regarded her chiefly for the kindness and sympathy that were never wanting to any. But to those with whom, by one unspoken affinity, her soul could expand, her expressive gray eyes would light up with intense meaning and humor, and the low, sweet voice, with its peculiar mannerism of speaking—which, by the way, wore off in after years—could give utterance to thoughts so rich and singular that converse with Miss Evans, even in those days, made speech with other people seem flat and common.

Miss Evans was an exemplification of the fact that a great genius is not an exceptional, capricious product of nature, but a thing of slow, laborious growth, the fruit of industry and the general culture of the faculties. At Foleshill, with ample means and leisure, her real education began. She took lessons in Greek and Latin from the Rev. T. Sheepshanks, then headmaster of the Coventry Grammar School, and she acquired French, German, and Italian from Signor Grezzi. An acquaintance with Hebrew was the result of her own unaided efforts. From Mr. Simms, the veteran organist of St. Michael's, Coventry, she received lessons in music, although her own fine musical sense made her in after years an admirable pianoforte player. Nothing once learned escaped her marvelous memory; and her keen sympathy with all human feelings, in which lay the secret of her power of discriminating character, caused a constant fund of knowledge to flow into her treasure house from the social world about her.

Among the intimate friends whom she made at Coventry were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bray, both well known in literary circles. In Mr. Bray's family she found sympathy with her ardent love of knowledge and with the more enlightened views that had begun to supplant those under which (as she described it) her spirit had been grievously burdened.

Emerson, Froude, George Combe, Robert Mackay, and other men of mark, were at various times guests at Mr. Bray's house at Rosehill while Miss Evans was there either as an inmate or occasional visitor; and many a time might have been seen pacing up and down the lawn, or grouped under an old acacia, men of thought and research, discussing all things in heaven and earth, and listening with marked attention when one gentle woman's voice was heard to utter what they were quite sure had been well matured before the lips opened.

Few, if any, could feel themselves her superior in general intelligence, and it was amusing one day to see the amazement of a certain doctor, who, venturing on a quotation from Epictetus to an unassuming young lady, was, with modest politeness, corrected in his Greek by his feminine auditor. One rare characteristic belonged to her which gave a peculiar charm to her conversation. She had no petty egotism, no spirit of contradiction; she never talked for effect. A happy thought well expressed filled her with delight; in a moment she would seize the point and improve upon it—so that common people began to feel themselves wise in her presence, and perhaps years after she would remind them, to their pride and surprise, of the good things they had said.

Miss Evans's father died in 1849, and in the summer of that year she accompanied her friends, the Brays, on a Continental tour, and by her own choice was left behind at Geneva, where she stayed till the following spring. On her return to England she made her home with the same family until 1851, when she was persuaded by Dr. Chapman to take up her residence in the Strand and assist him in the conduct of the Westminster Review. Thus ended her connection with her native country, to which, however, she afterwards paid many visits.

Spiritualism Still Alive.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Seeing your synopsis of my esteemed opponent's argument against the facts of Spiritualism, as I was in too ill health to be present and participate in said discussion, expecting it would be put off until I could do so, I am much disappointed to have had my friend Mr. Putnam carry on the debate all alone, and thus perhaps win an easy victory. But from your report in last week's FREETHOUGHT I feel Spiritualism is not yet decapitated. The three propositions of my worthy opponent, while well stated, are too abstruse for the common understanding, and really amount to but little when brought side by side with the well-attested facts of the intelligence manifesting that has never been accounted for truly, except upon the spiritual theory.

I would ask if our friend imagines that the limits of his ignorance is the bound of all knowledge, so far as Spiritualism is concerned. I am willing to admit in everything else he is wiser than myself, as he is an ex-reverend, but judge by his argument that he is a novice in investigating our phenomena.

He says science does not admit the facts to be facts. No, neither does it pretend to say by what means they occur, or explain how or by what modus operandi they are performed. Science has tried for over forty years to account for the phenomena, but has signally failed. Some of the most able and scientific men of this country and Europe have given years of careful scientific study to this question, and most of them became in the end Spiritualists. Professor Hare, Judge Edmonds, Governor Tallmadge, Professor Denton, Robert Dale Owen, Professors Crookes and Wallace of England, Zoellner of Germany, and hosts of other eminent and learned men have labored patiently to account for these phenomena, and became satisfied that they were what they claimed to be.

Now, my friend will not surely undertake to say that because the scientific world has not admitted Spiritualism to be a science or a demonstrated fact it is not one. He knows too well that the facts discovered by Copernicus, Galileo, Bruno, Newton, Harvey, Jenner, Franklin, Morse, Stephenson, Fulton, Gall, Spurzheim, and many others of our great minds were received with ridicule and opprobrium, censure and hate, and these men imprisoned, burned, scorned, hissed, banished, socially ostracized by the other scientists and conservatives who would not accept the demonstrated facts until years afterwards. Science is ever conservative; but truth goes on all the same, and nature will as heretofore continue to astound these wise heads by the phenomena which her energy is ever unfolding. Forty millions of the best hearts and biggest brains of the civilization that belts the world will arise and testify to the demonstrated facts that they have seen and heard. These millions of believers would be received as worthy witnesses before any court and jury upon other subjects where they had given proper investigations. The ten millions of Spiritualists in the United States are such from the evidence they have received from the demonstrated facts they are knowing to. It is not a matter of faith, nor of superstition, but from evidence that appeals to their senses and reason.

My Materialistic opponent says we are not justified in attributing natural phenomena to supernatural causes. In this again his poverty of knowledge of the phenomena. No Spiritualist ever claimed for a moment that these things occur through supernatural means. We do not believe for a moment in the supernatural, but know that every phenomenon is the result of nature's method of procedure called law. We believe that Spiritualism came as a fact to man, proving immortality as soon as he was advanced enough to comprehend it, just as all other facts have dawned upon his intellect when expanded so he could perceive it. The fact is, the Materialist and Agnostic—although often our very best thinkers on other questions—are not capable of perceiving the spiritual facts so often presented. They are spiritually blind, just as some men are color blind, caused by a deficiency of the organ of color; while others have no ear for music—organ of time very deficient; some, no mechanical ability, because constructiveness is small; others, no financial powers, because no acquisitiveness. A person with small or very small organ of spirituality could not accept the facts of Spiritualism, because they would be outside of his capabilities. To him the evidences of immortality would be "too good to be true." Ingersoll, with all the rest, hopes that death may be "an open door" that leads to a life of grander possibilities; yet he is so organized—spirituality weak—that he says he does not know, but hope gives to the bereft loving heart that in every sound is "the rustle of an angel's wing."

If time and space and your patience would permit of it, I could bring an array of facts that would fill your columns for the next five years, fully attested by men and women of reason and conscience, but I will let these few thoughts suffice, only saying that we have been accumulating these facts for almost half a century; we are willing to rest our case, and now call on our friend and brother, Samuel P. Putnam, and all of his conservative Agnostic friends to rise and explain. We have given them nearly half a century to tell us how these things are done. We pass our hat once more, and ask them for their discovery of the cause. Alas! the hat comes back empty. They are silent, and silence gives consent. The Materialistic world is powerless to answer, while the demonstrated facts are covering the world with their immensity.

I have not written this with any idea of it being more than a few thoughts on this greatest of all questions, the immortality of man. The short space of the column or two allotted me precludes the idea of attempting to make any regular or connected argument in reply to my astute and gentlemanly opponent.

D. C. SEYMOUR.

READ on page 189 the list of premiums offered for new subscribers to FREETHOUGHT.

TRAVELING ALONE

A WOMAN'S JOURNEY

AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.Price, by mail, - - - 30 cents.
Address The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.PRINTING!

Having procured one of the best Presses manufactured and a large assortment of display type, and employing competent workmen, the Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

Letter-heads,

Bill-heads,

Programmes,

Envelopes,

Business Cards,

Postal Cards,

Tickets,

Placards,

Receipts,

Posters,

Dodgers,

Circulars,

Etc. etc.

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.Startling the Preacher.

Senator Turpie of Indiana is somewhat absent-minded, and it is said that in 1874-75, when he was speaker of the lower branch of the Indiana legislature, he would do some queer things. Whenever a roll-call was ordered he would pound on his desk until everything was perfectly quiet. Then, in a rather moderate tone of voice, he would say:

"The roll will be called. Those voting in the affirmative will, when their names are called, say 'aye,' those in the negative, 'no.'

Then, quick as a flash, he would turn to the reading-clerk, and, in a loud, shrill voice, would say:

"Call!"

The first time he did this the reading clerk came near jumping out of his skin.

The various preachers in Indianapolis were from time to time asked to offer prayer in the House, and sometimes ministers from other parts of the state, who happened to be in town, were invited to invoke the divine blessing upon the Hoosier lawmakers. One morning Speaker Turpie rapped on the desk and said:

"The House will be in order. Prayer will be offered up by Rev. Mr. Smith of Vincennes."

Then, just as the reverend gentleman bowed his head to begin prayer, he was startled by hearing the speaker command him in a loud voice:

"Pray!"

THE production of Ernest Reyer's new opera, "Salammbô," at Brussels, is the most important musical event that has thus far happened this year in Europe. A comprehensive account of this remarkable work, together with the estimates placed upon it by the best European critics, a bright personal sketch of the composer, an admirable portrait of him, and a reproduction of the music of one of the gems of the score constitute the leading attraction of The Transatlantic of March 15. Almost equally remarkable is a review in the same issue of the Socialist party in Germany, which the recent elections in that country brought forward so prominently. The conclusion of Guy de Maupassant's "Vagrant Life," the continuation of the serial, "On the Mountain," a new criticism of Zola by the great Russian reviewer, Michailovsky, and an account of the discovery of a new Rembrandt in France, complete an attractive table of contents. (328 Washington street, Boston. $2.00 a year.)

APPARENTLY in all seriousness the New York Sun observes: "It is a remarkable phenomenon that this age of skepticism is also an age of faith like that of the first days of Christianity." What is far less remarkable, though more real, is that the skepticism penetrates all thinking and reading portions of society, while the faith is daily becoming more and more confined to the illiterate and hopelessly superstitious.—Liberty.

"Bible Contradictions," 15 cents.

The Truth Seeker Annual

AND

FREETHINKERS' ALMANAC.

1890—(E.M. 290).

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS: Calendar for 1890.
Freethought in the United States, 1889.
Faded Flowers (poem) By J. E. Remsburg
The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue, by T. B. Wakeman.
Mostly Fools W. Stewart Ross (Saladin)
Record of the Spanish Inquisition.
Dates of the Fabrication of some Roman Catholic Dogmas.
The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a moral. Helen H. Gardener.
The Middle Ages, Illustrated.—The Priest, the Supernatural World, the Reformation, Future Terrors.
The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated.
Freethought Journals in the United States.
In Search of a Spirit, E. M. Macdonald.
Why I Left the Church, Hugh O. Pentecost
115 pages, price 25 cents.
Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year. The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and 26

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1463 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

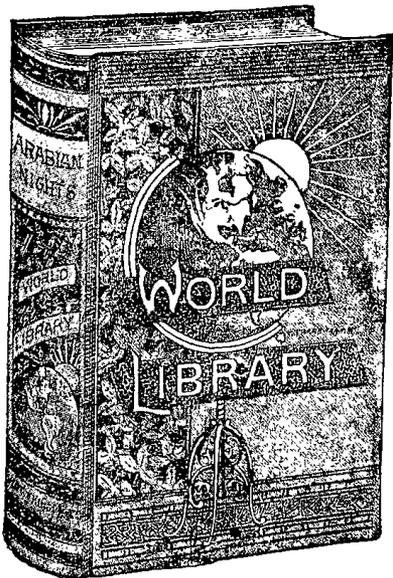

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.
Rapp & DeBarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.
J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.Watchmakers and Jewelers.Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.
Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRAIG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY. A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEBE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be Obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESS.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last an heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavillion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the Invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portraiture of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. PRESCOTT.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CITIZENS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll) with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated the scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALLOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POE'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,
Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

TEACHER (to dull boy of the class)—
"Which New England state has two capitals?" "New Hampshire." "Indeed! Name them." "Capital N and capital H."

"THE new Persian Minister to London is named Agha Mehammed Ali Khan Ala-issultan. He is pronounced a success." "I suppose that is the easiest way to pronounce him."

The Falling of Thrones.

Above the din of commerce, above the clamor and rattle
O' Labor disputing with Riches, of Anarchists' threats and groans,
Above the hurry and bustle and moan of that bloodless battle,
Where men are fighting for dollars, I hear the falling of Thrones.

I see no savage host, I hear no martial drumming,
But down in the dust at our feet lie the useless crowns of Kings;
And the mighty spirit of Progress is steadily coming, coming;
And the flag of our Republic abroad to the world he flings.

The Universal Republic where worth and birth are royal,
Where the lowliest born may climb on a self-made ladder to fame;
Where the highest and proudest born, if he be not true and loyal,
Shall find no masking title to cover or gild his shame.

Not with the bellow of guns, and not with sabres' whetting,
But with growing minds of men is waged this swordless fray,
While over the dim horizon the sun of royalty setting
Lights with a dying splendor the humblest toiler's way.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Taking His Own Medicine.

Governor Beaver is known by every Pittsburg boy in the National Guard to be a strict disciplinarian in military etiquette and drill. Austin Curtin of the governor's native town told this war reminiscence last night to some of the delegates at the G. A. R. encampment: While Lieutenant-Colonel of the Forty-fifth Regiment Beaver was one day sitting in front of his tent, when a slouchy-looking soldier, with ill-fitting costume, came along, stopped, and inquired: "Vere ish der doctor?"

"Is that the way to address your superior officer, sir?" roared Colonel Beaver. The German stared at his superior officer in blank amazement, but never said a word.

"Here, sir; take this chair. You be the colonel, and I will teach you how to address an officer."

"Vas me der boss of der regiment?" "Yes; take this chair, and I will show you how to act."

The soldier sat down in front of the tent. Colonel Beaver walked off a few paces, turned about, returned to a position in front of the officer pro tempore, squared himself around, made a military salute and inquired:

"Colonel, can you inform me where I can find the surgeon of the regiment?"

The soldier arose, and looking seriously and straight at Beaver, replied: "D—d if I know where he is!"

It was a wide awake Buffalo boy who on being reproved by his mother for discussing a wrestling match on Sunday with his brother, meekly replied: "All right, mamma. Will you read us a Bible story?" "With pleasure, dear. What shall it be?" "All about how Jacob wrestled with the angel."

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc, worth $35. for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do., $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
" " Forks	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" " Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded. Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS. ALL FOR $1.20.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in PAPERS!
Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.
Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.
PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,
536 CLAY STREET,
Below Montgomery. San Francisco.

Wm. W. NOBLE,
Merchant Tailor
1222 STOCKTON ST.
Bet. Pacific and Broadway.

DRESS SUITS A SPECIALTY
Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass by.

OUR NEW 1890 FLOWER SEED OFFER.

A Magnificent Collection of FLOWER SEEDS
200 Varieties, FREE!

An Unparalleled Offer by an Old-Established and Reliable Publishing House! The Ladies' World is a mammoth 16-page, 64-column illustrated paper for ladies and the family circle. It is devoted to stories, poems, ladies' fancy work, artistic needlework, home decoration, housekeeping, fashions, hygiene, juvenile reading, etiquette, etc. To introduce this charming ladies' paper into 100,000 homes where it is not already taken, we now make the following colossal offer: Upon receipt of only 12 Cents in silver or stamps, we will send The Ladies' World for Three Months, and to each subscriber we will also send Free and postpaid, a large and magnificent Collection of Choice Flower Seeds, two hundred varieties, including Pansies, Verbenas, Chrysanthemums, Asters, Phlox Drummondii, Balsam, Cypress Vine, Digitalis, Double Zinnia, Pinka, etc., etc. Remember, twelve cents pays for the paper three months and this entire magnificent collection of Choice Flower Seeds, put up by a first-class Seed House and warranted fresh and reliable. No lady can afford to miss this wonderful opportunity. We guarantee every subscriber many times the value of money sent, and will refund your money and make you a present of both seeds and paper if you are not entirely satisfied. Ours is an old-established and reliable publishing house, endorsed by all leading newspapers. Do not confound this offer with the catchpenny schemes of unscrupulous persons. Write to-day—don't put it off! Six subscriptions and six Seed Collections sent for 60 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER! To any lady answering this advertisement and making remittance and having the paper in which she saw it, we will send free, in addition to all the above, one package of the celebrated Ornamental Chilian Foliage Beet Seeds, one of the most beautiful foliage plants known, the leaves sometimes growing 3 feet long by 1 foot wide, in variegated colors. It is perfectly hardy, continuing an object of beauty long after Celosia and Canna have succumbed to frost. Address: S. H. MOORE & CO., 27 Park Place, New York.

$75.00 to $250.00 can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. E. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

A REGULAR EDUCATED AND LEGALLY QUALIFIED PHYSICIAN, and the most successful (in his specialty) as his practice will surely prove. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men such as seminal weakness, impotency, &c., resulting from indiscretion and ignorance of youth. Those who are ailing should send ten (10) cents for his book, "Private Counsellor," setting forth an external Application—

A POSITIVE CURE

The book is worth many times its cost, and should be read by the young for instruction and the afflicted for relief.

All Communications Strictly Confidential.

Plain Envelope used. The book spoken of sent sealed. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, NEW JERSEY Say where you saw this Advertisement.

[From the Washington National View.]

Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, New Jersey offers his valuable services to all those in need of a kind, sympathetic and skillful physician. Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been assailed and exposed by the press, but, Dr. Fellows, a specialist, in his line, stands foremost in his profession, and the encomiums showered upon him publicly as well as in private, are flattering evidences of the high appreciation and confidence his long and conscientious devotion to his specialties in his profession have so justly merited for him, and it is safe to trust him.

A Testimonial.

WEST LIBERTY, O., Aug. 12, 1888.
DR. R. P. FELLOWS—Dear Sir: The remedy you sent is working like a charm. I am completely surprised the way it acts upon the organs. Have only been using it one week, and that weakness, (seminal weakness) is coming out all right.
Yours respectfully,
J. R.

REMARKS—The above is a fair sample of the hundreds of testimonials received from all parts of the United States, from young, middle-aged and elderly men, suffering from various kinds of sexual complaints, but who are now cured by my External Application, the greatest of all known remedies for this class of diseases. As I am an out-and-out Liberal I trust the Freethinkers of the Land will give me their patronage, and not waste their time and money on Christian doctors.

DR. FELLOWS.

FREETHOUGHT,

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Samuel P. Putnam, Lecturer and Editorial Correspondent. | Geo. E. Macdonald, Editor and Business Manager.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

Freethought Publishing Co

This journal is devoted, religiously, to the eradication of all forms of superstition, Christian or otherwise; and politically, to the advocacy of those principles inculcated by the

Nine Demands of Secularism.

FREETHOUGHT is not committed to any of the current methods of social reform, but its columns are open to the discussion of all of them. It welcomes agitation and discussion of all subjects, religious, political, ethical, and social.

Its Correspondents are all who have anything valuable to say on the above questions; who know how to express their thoughts in readable English, and who desire for an audience several thousand of the most intelligent people of the country.

FREETHOUGHT has no set list of contributors of articles written to order. It aims to give the news of the Liberal movement everywhere. It believes that the seeds of Freethought have been planted, and that the great work now before us is to cultivate their growth.

The paper circulates from Florida to Alaska, and from this coast to Maine.

ADVERTISERS

who wish to reach large numbers in all parts of the Pacific Slope will find space in its columns a remunerative investment.

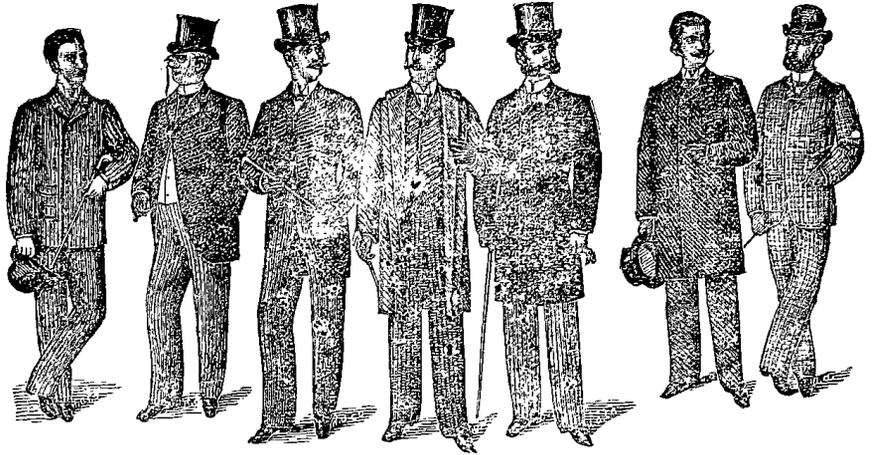

EVERY LIBERAL THINKER should read FREETHOUGHT. They will find it lively and at the same time in dead earnest; plain and direct, without being offensive.

Subscriptions—One year, $2; Six months $1. Four new subscriptions in one remittance, $5.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Company.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR..... $25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,
CHAS F. BURGMAN.
TAILOR,
—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.
OLIVER HINCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.
N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

P. A. CLARK. CHAS. W. CLARK
DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS,
NURSERYMEN

Catalogs for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines.
Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice.
Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address
CLARK BROS.,
P. O. Box C, San Jacinto, Cal.

J A. REED.
FIRST-CLASS
BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma: , cor. 5th, S. F.

- 14 karat Gold Sea-f Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5..... 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond"..... 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,
PUTNAM & MACDONALD,
04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!
Per Year.....$1.50
Six Months......75
Three Months......50

EDITED BY
F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.
OFFICE:
429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.
A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth, obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.
12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
 FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
 338 Howard st., San Francisco.

What Dreams May Come.

Often, says Texas Siftings, the mind of man passes, with the bodily quietude of sleep, into a new world, and, if he has partaken liberally of mince pie, he passes into a weird and wondrous world, peopled with strange people, doing the most unaccountable things in the strangest manner.

If the dreamer has, in addition to the mince pie, generously furnished his digestive parlors with a copious supply of lobster salad, he may approach awful catastrophes that are never reached, or be forever seeking joys that fade and vanish ere they are overtaken. He is also liable to snore.

A sound sleeper, by which term we do not refer to one who snores, rarely dreams at all; but those whose sleep is superficial experience accidental coincidences with the passing events of waking life that create in their minds the delusion that dreams have asionally passing events do seem to cast their shadows before. A Texas man dreamed of falling into a well, and two weeks later he was married.

Baseball has been played,
 So the statement is made,
 Since the time when the flood shut the land from the sky.
 For while in the ark,
 So the scriptures remark,
 The dove was by Noah "put out on a fly."

Standard Scientific Works

Works by Alexander Bain.

English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75

Works by Charles Darwin.

Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00

Works by J. W. Draper.

History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75

Works by Ernst Haeckel.

The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00

Works by Huxley.

Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00

Works by John Stewart Mill.

Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25

Works by Richard A. Proctor.

Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
 The Moon.....2.00

Works by Herbert Spencer.

Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 Man versus the State......30
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75

Works by Andrew D. White.

Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00

Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.

Body and Mind.....$1.50
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50

Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.

Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

By Carl Marx.

Capital.....$3.00

By Asa Gray.

Darwiniana.....$2.00

By L. L. McLaughlin.

Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50

By John B. Henck.

Field-Book for Railroad Engineers.....$2.50

By C. Marcel.

Study of Languages.....$1.25

By Lester F. Ward.

Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00

By Frederick Overman.

A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00

B. F. G. Fairfield.

Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25

By W. B. Carpenter.

Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25

By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.

Evolution.....$1.50

By Sir John Lubbock.

Origin of Civilization.....$5.00

By Charles A. Abbott.

A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50

By Garrett P. Serviss.

Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50

By Nathan Sheppard.

Darwinism Stated by Darwin Himself.....$1.50

English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 Thos. Carlyle—His Life, Books, Theories......30
 Comedies for Amateur Acting......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

—BY—

W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form, a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE

Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.

13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order.

The Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is entirely damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thief-resisting. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that, ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only.

Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future

Republic of North America

BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1. Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters

impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 13.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, MARCH 29, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan., 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - MARCH 29, 1890.

BLAIR'S Educational bill was defeated in the Senate last week, and two days later he introduced another. His persistence will bring Senator Blair notoriety if not success.

THAT was a model address which Judge Maguire gave last week at the grave of Miss Kate Kennedy in Oakland. It was eloquent, appropriate, and devoid of superstition.

THE Catholics of Manitoba have a grievance. The Manitoba legislature has passed the Schools act abolishing the right of Catholics to have separate schools and obliging all classes of the community to patronize the national secular schools.

PROPHET ERICKSON'S commitment to the asylum has had the effect of sending some of Oakland's religious fanatics out of town. They fear the same fate, and seem to forget that if their prophecy comes true, their imprisonment would be brief and their vindication triumphant.

It is claimed that several of Brigham Young's descendants have become Catholics, and the cottage which he occupied at Salt Lake City in his pioneer days is now part of the property of the Sisters of the Holy Cross. Whether the last state of these people is worse than the first is an open question. The Mormon hierarchy and the Catholic hierarchy are as much alike as two bad eggs.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, the Irish poet and patriot, was advertised to lecture in this city March 21. He drew about a dozen people to hear him, and the event was accorded eleven lines next morning in a daily paper which devoted nearly four columns to a prize-fight between Messrs. Carroll and McAuliffe. As both of these are countrymen of Mr. O'Reilly he cannot feel that his race is slighted by the press of San Francisco, even though he failed to get a corporal's guard.

FLACK, New York's ex-sheriff, who has just been convicted of conspiracy, traces his downfall to the conversion of his second wife, whom he took unto himself without the formality of a divorce from the first, or a marriage ceremony. After living with Flack for many years and bearing him a son who is now of age, this woman joined the Episcopal church, without, however, altering her relationship with Flack, and insisted on a marriage, as she desired her son educated for the ministry. To accommodate her, Flack got a fraudulent divorce from his wife; hence his conviction.

A PREACHER named Pratt is endeavoring to turn the Infidels of Grant county, Or., from the error of their ways with the statement that "Tom Paine told his daughter on his dying bed to follow the religion of her mother." A few years ago a religious gentleman put in print the charge that Colonel Ingersoll's son, having been raised in the atmosphere of Infidelity, had become insane and died in an asylum. The two stories are equally false, Paine never had a daughter, and Ingersoll never had a son.

A NEW YORK World Washington correspondent states that Senator Blair's wife told a friend a few days ago that she dared not think of the effect upon Senator Blair if his Education bill was defeated. His whole mind has been centered on it, so that fears have been expressed that it might give way. Senator Blair's eccentricities have been increasing of late years and he has become a monomaniac upon his bill. He is convinced that there is conspiracy against him, a conspiracy among his brother Senators and a conspiracy of the press.

THE SAN FRANCISCO FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The meeting of the San Francisco Freethought Society, Sunday evening, March 30, at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, will be addressed by Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel on the subject, "Natural Morality Superior to Theological Restraint."

A SECULAR VICTORY.

A quarrel between the Protestants and Catholics at Edgerton, Wis., over the use of the Bible in the public schools has resulted in a victory for Secularism. The supreme court of the state decides that any reading of the Bible necessarily involves the reading of sectarian doctrine, and is therefore unconstitutional. The judges held that in considering the question whether such reading of the Bible in the public schools is sectarian instruction, prohibited in public schools by the Constitution, the books must be regarded as a whole because the whole Bible without exception has been designated as a text-book for use in the Edgerton schools, and the claim of the school board is that the whole contents thereof may lawfully be so read.

This being so, it is quite immaterial if the portions thus set out in the return as the only portions thus far read are not sectarian. Yet it should be observed that some of the portions so read seem to inculcate doctrines which are not accepted by some religious sects. The court refuses to affirm or deny that the Catholic church opposes the common schools. The court further says that reading from the Bible in the schools, although without comment on the part of the teacher, is instruction, and holds that the Bible contains many doctrinal passages, and that the general reading of it is sectarian instruction.

It also holds that such text books as are founded on the fundamental teachings of the Bible, or which may contain extracts therefrom, may not be used in the schools. The court says: "Any pupil of ordinary intelligence who listens to the reading of doctrinal portions of the Bible will be more or less instructed thereby in the doctrines of the divinity of Jesus Christ, the eternal punishment of the wicked, the authority of the priesthood, the binding force of the efficacy of the sacrament, and in many other conflicting sectarian doctrines."

The court further says that the place where the Bible should be read is a place of worship, and that as the taxpayers are compelled to erect and to support school-houses, and children are, under the late law, compelled to attend public or private schools, the constitutional clauses forbid the use of school-houses as places of worship. The decision of the court was unanimous.

Thus the falling out of sectarian rogues gives Edgerton a system of education unmixed with religious teaching.

BRAZIL'S CALENDAR.

The statement is made that the new republic of Brazil has, by governmental decree, officially adopted the Positivist calendar, the days and months being named according to the scheme of Auguste Comte. The only change is that of Sunday, which is re-christened Humanidi, or the Day of Humanity.

The Positivist calendar has thirteen months of twenty-eight days each, the months being called after some character representing an era of human history. The first month is Moses (the initial theocracy); the second, Homer (ancient poesy); the third, Aristotle (ancient philosophy); the fourth, Archimedes (ancient science); the fifth, Cæsar (military civilization); the sixth, St. Paul (Catholicism); the seventh, Charlemagne (feudal civilization); the eighth, Dante (the modern epic); the ninth, Guttenberg (modern industry); the tenth, Shakspeare (the modern drama); the eleventh, Descartes (modern philosophy); the twelfth, Frederick (modern polity); the thirteenth, Bichat (modern science).

This Positivist year begins and ends with the Christian year, and its months are divided into four weeks of seven days each. The arrangement leaves a complementary or intercalary day at the end of each year, called the Day of the Dead, corresponding somewhat to our national Memorial Day, May 30. On leap years there is a second holiday dedicated to women. These two days are not counted in the calendar, the day following the latter being the first of the new year. Every year and every month begins with Monday, while the Sundays fall on the 7th, 14th, 21st, and 28th days of all the months alike. The calendar therefore becomes perpetual.

Besides naming the thirteen divisions of the year as above, M. Comte assigns each day to some distinguished contemporary of the character standing at the head of the month. Thus the first day of the month of Moses is Prometheus, the second Hercules, the third Orpheus, and so on, while Numa, Buddha, Confucius, and Mahomet are assigned to the Sundays.

It will be interesting to note what progress Brazil makes in introducing this calendar. The prevailing religion of the country at present is Roman Catholicism, and its adherents may fall in with the new order as readily as the pagans of the fourth century adopted the Sunday of Constantine, which was so much like their own holy day that they were unable to distinguish any difference between the two.

INSTRUCTIVE FIGURES.

The Municipal Reports of San Francisco for the fiscal year 1888-9 give a tabulated statement showing the religion or creed professed by prisoners committed to the House of Correction between June 30, 1888, and June 30, 1889. It is as follows:

Creed.	Males.	Females.	Total.
Roman Catholic.....	531	16	697
Protestant.....	230	37	267
Hebrew.....	9	..	9
Freethinker.....	1	..	1
Unbeliever.....	67	28	95
Pagan.....	76	..	76
Total.....	914	231	1,145

From this table these approximate percentages are deduced: Roman Catholic, .60; Protestant, .23; Hebrew, .007; Freethinker, .0008; Unbeliever, .08; Pagan, .06. The population of San Francisco is some 350,000, of whom about one-third are Roman Catholics, and this one-third furnishes 250 more criminals for the House of Correction than the other two-thirds, or nearly three to one. If we say the Catholics in the city number 115,000, and furnish almost 700 criminals, then about one Catholic in 164 is a lawbreaker.

It is not known how many avowed Freethinkers San Francisco contains, but to place them at 1000 would be a ridiculously low estimate, and even then the proportion of Catholic criminals to Freethinking criminals would be as 6 to 1.

The pagans make a much better showing than the Catholic citizens, and when it is remembered that they stand much greater chances of conviction before our Catholic courts, with Catholic witnesses against them, there is a still larger percentage in their favor as compared with the pope's minions.

These figures do not surprise us. Their ratio is about the same as in other localities. But the single, solitary Freethinker in the list ought to be ashamed of himself for bringing odium on the cause. We earnestly exhort him to go and sin no more.

THAT was a grand ending to the life of the young millionaire, Colonel Donahue, who gave the most of his vast wealth to charitable purposes. Although born and educated a Roman Catholic, he gave the munificent sum of $5000 to each of several Protestant charitable institutions, which shows that he was no bigot in his religious belief. Where is the Protestant Christian who, dying, would leave money to Catholic institutions? There may be such, but we never heard of one.—Golden Gate.

It is difficult to see much to admire in Colonel Donahue's disposition of his wealth. He left but a pittance, comparatively, to his family, and gave hundreds of thousands to the teachers of superstition. Perhaps his wealth was a damage to him, since it gave him means to shorten his life by constant dissipation, and he did not wish to inflict the same curse upon his offspring. Only on this theory can he be excused for handing over a quarter of a million dollars to the church and cutting off his two-year-old son with five thousand. And even so, with the example of James Lick before him, he could have made a much better disposition of his property than placing it under the control of Archbishop Riordan, the Catholic prelate.

LAST week FREETHOUGHT stated that there were two Nationalist clubs in San Francisco. Further research reveals that there are five, namely, the San Francisco Central Club, the Second Nationalist Club, the New California Nationalist Club, the German Branch of the Central Club, and the Ocean View Nationalist Club. If none has got away, this is the complete list.

THE president of the Oregon Secular Union has acted wisely in transmitting for publication the correspondence which appears on another page. Trouble of this kind is always regrettable, but since it exists the Liberals of the Northwest should know the facts so that those having relations with the person causing it may know what to expect.

WE have received a copy of the "Dawn" organ of the Christian Socialists. Its motto is "He works for God who works for man," and it is conducted with pious and uninteresting ability.

At the burial of Frank O. Johnson in Aspen, Col., last month, J. J. Callahan delivered a eulogy, which was published "by request" in the local paper. It was a worthy and appropriate tribute paid to one staunch Freethinker by another.

J. D. SHAW has purchased a corner lot in Waco, Texas, and proposes to establish a Liberal Hall and Independent Pulpit Publishing House. We wish him good luck.

OBSERVATIONS.

Mr. George Cummings, who lectured before the San Francisco Freethought Society last Sunday evening, gave his hearers something to think about. Mr. Cummings was the speaker of the evening, but before his remarks were begun Captain Evangeline Ballou of Precinct 3, District 37, S. F. N. C. (meaning San Francisco Nationalist Club) sang a praiseworthy song, which left the audience in a receptive state of mind.

Mr. Cummings spoke upon the "Rights of Man." He first accounted for the presence of the priesthood in this world by saying that in early times men bartered with each other, and one exchanged commodities which he produced for those which he did not. The production of these commodities, they found, involved labor, and finally some shrewd persons who were born tired conceived the idea that it would be easier to pay in promises than in goods. This method, however, soon destroyed their credit, and then the happy thought struck them to defer the fulfillment of their obligations to the next world. The producers accepted the security, and the shrewd persons called priests have ever since been able to barter corner-lots in the New Jerusalem for the best things of earth. The same individuals, needing the co-operation of temporal powers, selected other shrewd persons, whom they called kings, and, anointing them with ointment and bestowing upon them blessings, crowns, and sceptres, took them into partnership; and these two kinds of frauds still govern the people.

Mr. Cummings denied the right of the majority to govern the minority. Everybody would admit that one man alone upon a certain island would be monarch. Two men would be equal; and the speaker held that when a third one arrived his right would be equal to that of the two others. There could be justice only where there was equality. Thus justice could not exist between God, if there were one, and man, since they would occupy the position of master and slave. Religious people seem to recognize this, as their prayers usually close with "thy will (not justice) be done," and the best commendation they expect is the assurance, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." The speaker drew attention to the fact that social science was far in the rear of physical sciences and was a neglected branch of study. He believed, however, that natural laws ruled in this domain as in others, and that a conformity to such law, as discovered and promulgated by Proudhon, would adjust human affairs in harmony with right and justice.

Dr. O'Brock, hard of hearing, dim of sight, inarticulate of speech, and chaotic as to thought, was the first discussor, and got along as well as could be expected considering these drawbacks.

Thomas Curtis followed. Mr. Curtis traces the warped condition of society to the false education which children acquire from religious parents and Sunday-schools.

Patrick Healy, Roman Catholic, was the ensuing speaker. Concerning his discomfiture at the previous meeting Mr. Healy explained that he did not intend to deny facts, but truth. Mr. Healy had a new word, "postulate," which he used frequently with great confidence; he also tried to work in "anthropomorphic," but made a failure of it. He held that if there could be no justice between God and man, neither could it exist between parents and children on account of their relative positions, nor between husband and wife owing to marked physical divergence.

Mr. Gliester pleaded for non-aggression and the abolition of physical slavery.

An unidentified gentleman testified that he was knowing to a case wherein a priest forced a poor woman to send her children to the parochial school and to pay $2 per month for that privilege. Owing to this tax the mother was unable to provide the children with shoes, so they went barefooted, and yet learned nothing but the catechism.

Mr. H. L. Knight also offered some remarks, and Mr. Cummings closed the debate.

Next Sunday night Mrs. Krekel speaks on "Natural Morality Superior to Theological Restraint."

The more discussions I hear on sociological questions, the deeper becomes the impression upon my mind that the man has not yet been born who can see through the problem of arranging human affairs in short order so they will work harmoniously. I do not believe that the author of any plan for the readjusting of society can tell within a row of apple-trees how the plan will work. One trouble is that there is no apparent law governing the actions of men and women that can be depended upon to move them every time in the desired direction. We know that water will run down hill, and that the planets will be moved by attraction in inverse ratio to the square of their distances, or in some other ascertainable way; but who can point out the one and only motive which governs the human race, and figure therefrom where everybody can be found at a given time? The law that controls the rest of the universe seems to have lost its grip on men. Scarcely two are governed by the same motive. If every man's head were exactly round, like a billiard ball, we could tell what he would do under given circumstances; but it isn't. It is covered with protuberances indicating the predominance or sub-dominance of certain faculties or inclinations at variance with one another, so that even its own possessor cannot prophesy with accuracy his own course of action twenty-four hours ahead. The world may be a stage, and all of us actors, but our parts are not written, and if they were, not one in a dozen could be relied upon to follow his lines. The social reformer sets out with the notion that the face of the earth should be marked like a checker-board, and a man placed on each square. Then he studies his moves and announces that he can beat the game; and perhaps he could if his men would stand still until he was ready to move them. It is plain, however, that they will not do this. They are on legs, and wander about, and some get off the board, altogether. They decline to move with any sort of regularity. They get mixed, or perhaps go over to the enemy, and make a botch of the whole arrangement.

I am often asked why this paper and my trenchant pen are not devoted to the reconstruction of society, and my only answer is that I don't know enough to reconstruct society. I would as soon think of taking a half dozen babies apart and trying to put them together again in the shape of a man. Of course I would have sufficient material, and all the potencies at hand. So we have all the material for a fully developed state of society; and as there is nothing in a man that is not in a baby, so there will be nothing in a perfect society that does not exist now; but society is in its infancy. It enjoys the fairy stories told by priests. Its members amuse themselves with tin soldiers on wheels called armies; they have toy ships called cruisers and ironclads with guns that make a loud report. The animal nature is still in them; they enjoy brutal sports like prize-fights and national wars. They still profess obedience to some sort of a father who has authority over them, and not having earthly rulers, they elect them. They believe inspooks and good and evil spirits, and all sorts of supernatural beings.

What can be done with this sort of human material—childish, ignorant, undeveloped, superstitious? Clearly the philosopher can only observe it, experiment upon it, study its phases, lead it, persuade it, educate it, and hasten its growth by all judicious means. Having done this, he must wait patiently till we all attain the stature, mental and physical, of men and women fit to be called grown up.

For saying all of which I ask the reader to kindly forgive me.

A few days ago Mr. G. F. Perkins, publisher of the Pacific Investigator, dropped in to talk about his paper. He said it was a journal devoted to Spiritualism, Nationalism, and Americanism. "You have got to have some kind of an ism," he remarked, "or down you go, and the more isms the better. Now," he went on, "you FREETHOUGHT fellows haven't an ism to your name. You are just like the Catholic church: you don't advocate Spiritualism, Nationalism, or Americanism, and you won't last."

While pondering over Mr. Perkins's ominous words, I received the appended card:

The Pacific Investigator is forced to suspend operations for a time. Cause: Partner wanted to rule or ruin—must have God, Christ, and the atonement all in. Result: Bust for a time. G. F. PERKINS.

It strikes me that if a multiplicity of isms are conducive to the longevity of a paper, Mr. Perkins has erred in excluding Godism, Christism, and the atonementism. The result, which he so laconically states, certainly shows that in some way he has erred effectually.

Nothing in the examples of modern rhetoric equals the figure of speech employed by the Rev. James Stacy, D.D., of Georgia, at the late Sunday-law convention in Washington City. Mr. Stacy was arguing for a Sunday law, and in an impassioned period emitted this remark:

The Infidel cry, "Down with the Sabbath," like the bounding kangaroo springing from his lair, has fastened itself upon an unsuspecting people, and with unyielding pertinacity and without any evidence of satiety continues to draw its life blood.

Whereas, the kangaroo is an herbivorous animal, subsisting upon a vegetable diet; and whereas, it never alights upon anything containing more blood than a beet; therefore, resolved, that the above figure of speech is a bounding willapuss-wallapuss springing from its liar.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

A bill has passed the Senate to appropriate $450,000 for a public building in Los Angeles. It is expected that the bill will be strenuously opposed in the House.—The bodies of three persons have been found in the ashes of last week's fire in Seattle.—The baseball season opened in San Francisco and Sacramento last Sunday. The games at both places were witnessed by the largest crowds ever seen at the ball grounds.—The Lick telescope will in a few weeks be supplemented by a remarkable piece of mechanism. This is an eye-piece which has just been completed at Rochester, N. Y. No other eye-piece of anything like equal dimensions has ever been made. The largest now in use is not over two inches in diameter, while the new piece measures over three inches. The eye-piece is constructed on a perfect theory. There are two lenses, six inches apart. The larger one is called the field lens, and is six and one-half inches in diameter. The other lens is the eye-glass proper. It is composed of three lenses, a double concave, double convex, and meniscus, cemented together. The field glass is of brown glass. The meniscus or correcting lens is of flint glass. The light from the heavenly bodies seen through the Lick telescope and this new eye-piece will be 2000 times as bright as that seen with the naked eye.—The ironmolders' strike develops few new features. The eastern men who arrived last week are either scared or bought off, though a few are at work. The bosses and the strikers all express confidence.—Josephine Wohlfrom, an Oakland domestic, took a lamp at midnight last Saturday and started for church. She was taken into custody, being religiously insane.—Seattle sent $5000 for the relief of San Francisco's unemployed, but Mayor Pond took upon himself the responsibility of returning it.

The past week has witnessed the burial of two noted military men—General Crook, the Indian fighter, and General Schenck, one of Grant's favorite soldiers.—The leading gambling-house at Cambridge, Mass., is kept by a man who, not many years ago, was one of the leading preachers in the city.—The committee of ministers investigating Bishop J. J. Esher, at Reading, found him guilty of all the charges of falsehood, slander, and reviving old difficulties for the purpose of creating dissensions in the church.—Schweinfurth, the alleged Christ, preached to his convention at Rockford, Ill., last week. He repeated his claims to messiahship.—An anti-Chinese war has been begun in New York. The Master Laundrymen's Association of New York and New Jersey, which is composed of all the white laundries doing business in both states, and is determined to drive the Chinese out of business, has a fund of $500,000 in cash and an equal amount subscribed to be used to force Chinese laundries out of existence.

Advices from St. Petersburg, Russia, state that the student's agitation has extended to the universities of Moscow, Kieff, and Charkoff. Altogether 700 students have been arrested. It is probable that St. Petersburg University will be closed.—Labouchere, Bradlaugh's colleague, last week introduced a motion to abolish hereditary representation in the British Parliament. The motion was lost by a vote of 201 to 139.—Madam Pommery, of champagne fame, died at Rheims, March 21, worth $4,000,000.—Gen. Von Caprivi is Germany's new chancellor, vice Bismarck resigned.

BOOK NOTICES.

SILVER COINAGE. Speech by Senator John H. Mitchell, of Oregon.

Senator Mitchell is one of the hardest workers in Congress. He believes in the great West and its prosperity. He wants silver dollars, and why not? He presents an eloquent argument.

THE INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE OF TRUTH. Edited by A. A. Chevillier, No. 13 West Forty-second st., New York. Published monthly. A spiritual organ to proclaim primitive Christianity.

The object of this magazine is to teach that true religion and science are identical, that health and brotherly love are the same; also to help mold the social order. The present system must be changed to fit the law of love. The magazine is devoted to Christian Socialism, and is an exponent of Theosophy. It contains interesting matter for those who can spend the time to study the occult.

SANITARY ENTOMBMENT. By Rev. Charles R. Treat.

The churchyard is one of man's most deadly foes, says the author of this pamphlet. The remedy, however, is not cremation but entombment. The bodies should be embalmed and laid away in vast mausoleums prepared for that purpose. This, better than cremation, meets the demand of most reverent and tender sentiment. It meets the medico-legal demand that the evidence of crime shall not be destroyed, and costs less in view of its manifold advantages. These positions are maintained by the author with learning and ability.

WILL SHAKESPEARE, TOM PAINE, BOB INGERSOLL, AND CHARLIE BRADLAUGH.

This is a humorous and learned attempt to show that nicknames are quite popular in literature and are instances of loving compliment. Shakespeare delighted in the name Will, and punned upon it without mercy. Jonson was Ben Jonson, and there are "Toms" and "Bobs" without number. Better these sportive appellations than the long-drawn Puritanic names, such as Assurance, Tribulation, Maher-shalal-hash-baz, Bind-their-kings-in-chains, Hew-Agag-in-pieces-before-the-Lord, If-Christ-had-not-died-for-you-you-would-have-been-damned, etc., as related by Macaulay. As a treatise on names, their origin, etc., this is a lively brochure.

REMARKS UPON EXTINCT MAMMALS OF THE UNITED STATES. By Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, Smithsonian Institute, Washington, D. C.

A valuable book. It gives an account of the fossils of our country, among them the ancestry of the horse, which was originally no bigger than a fox. This animal had three perfectly developed toes upon each hindfoot, while each forefoot had four, with a rudimentary fifth one. This wonderful little Eohippus was discovered in the lowest strata of the basin of Green river. It looks as if America was the originator of the horse, but it was a long way back. From the size of a fox the horse gets to the size of a sheep, then to the size of a jackass, the toes disappearing and the hoof forming.

Not only has the horse originated in this country, but the camel also. Tigers ranged all over both North and South America. Man, says the author, has been in existence on the earth for at least 100,000 years. These are a few of the facts presented in this interesting pamphlet.

THE GLEANER. Vol. I, No. 1, 841 Market street, San Francisco. Edited by Julia Schlesinger.

The purpose of this new candidate for favor is to present methods whereby woman may be able to attain financial independence, to solve the problem, "What can a woman do?"

The opening number gives quite a varied picture of what woman is doing to-day all over the world in the way of making a living. The article by Mrs. L. Addie Ballou, "The Status of Women in the Antipodes," is an excellent contribution. The Gleaner has evidently entered upon a good work and a needed work. The editorial "Greeting" and "Notes" evince that an earnest and cultivated woman will glean from the fields of time a noble record of her sex.

ALL ABOUT DEVILS. By Moses Hull.

Mr. Hull's book is an endeavor to show that Spiritualism is not of the devil. Even if it were, however, it wouldn't be a bad thing, for the devil is a reformer. The devil, Galileo, and science were on one side. God, the Bible, and the church were on the other. The printing-press was the work of the devil. Thomas Jenner was denounced as having formed a partnership with the devil. Geology was of the devil. The devil was in Abolitionism, etc.

The Bible devil was an honorable fellow. He imparts wisdom. He helps man. He defeats God.

Moses speaks a good word for the devil if there is one, but finally decides that there is nothing of the sort. Spiritualism has taken the devil away. The author writes in his usual vigorous manner.

NATURAL RIGHTS, NATURAL LIBERTY, AND NATURAL LAW. By Frank Q. Stuart.

This treatise represents the philosophy of individualism, as given by Herbert Spencer, expressed in the following rule:

Every man has the right to do whatsoever he wills, provided that in the doing thereof he infringes not the equal right of any other man.

According to this, says the author, all real rights are natural rights, all liberty is natural liberty, and all just law is natural law. According to this the object of government is to protect the individual members of society in the enjoyment of their natural rights in so far as the development of human reason and ingenuity will permit. Government therefore should take no cognizance of duties. It should deal alone with rights.

These propositions are discussed with unusual ability, and the essay is one of the most suggestive of the times.

HEAVY GUNS AND LIGHT—A History of the 4th N. Y. Heavy Artillery. By Hyland C. Kirk, author of "The Possibility of not Dying," and other books.

This book of the wars is written by a comrade of the senior editor of FREETHOUGHT, who was corporal in the regiment whose history is thus recorded, and to whom it brings back many reminiscences of camp and field, and the faces of fellow soldiers living and dead. But the book has more than a personal value. It contains accounts of some of the great actions of the time. The author has a racy style and knows how to tell a story. The regiment entered the Wilderness campaign eighteen hundred strong, and came out with scarcely six hundred left. The pen pictures of these terrific struggles mingled with humors of camp, comic adventures, etc., make a tale of universal interest.

"The Possibility of Not Dying," by the same author, is a curious book. It endeavors to show that scientifically man can live forever, that if he cannot attain spiritual immortality he can attain an earthly immortality. That is the kind of immortality one would desire above all others. To keep this burning heart and brain amidst these green fields and beneath these blue skies throughout eternity is a "consummation devoutly to be wished." This infinitely surpasses anything ever promised by the phenomena of Spiritualism. This is something worth having. Our author endeavors to show from a purely materialistic basis how we can keep on the track of life indefinitely.

THE EVOLUTION OF A LIFE. By the Rev. Henry Truro Bray, M.A., LL.D., author of "God and Man."

The publication of "God and Man" forced its author from the orthodox pulpit. In "The Evolution of a Life" the history of this change of base is given. It is autobiographical, and contains many interesting passages. The writer still believes in God as the father and savior of all, but in such a manner that he is excluded from the Christian ranks. He occupies about the position of "Robert Elsmere." He has suffered for his sincere declaration of belief, and is compelled to throw in his fortune with the Infidels of the world. An order for this book will greatly aid one who is determined to fight out the battle at any cost, rather than be a hypocrite. In the mind of the author we see a picture of our own struggling and tumultuous age. The book is for sale at FREETHOUGHT office. Price $2.

FACING THE SPHINX. By Marie L. Farrington. Sold at the office of FREETHOUGHT. Cloth, price $1.25.

This is an earnest and scholarly dealing with mystical things. It is written in the theosophical spirit, and endeavors to elucidate the meanings of antique symbols. To those interested in such matters it is an interesting and learned book. It is a revival of the ancient mode of thought found partly in the Bible, and also in the literature of Egypt, India, Persia, Chaldea, Central America, China, Greece, Rome, etc. It is anti-orthodox, and seeks entirely to overthrow the miraculous and special element in the Christian religion. It shows that its forms and ceremonies and doctrines are derived from older religions—that Egypt, and not Palestine, is the mother of the Christian faith. The author has evidently devoted a great deal of time to the study of these matters, has read widely and carefully, and given a useful summary of the symbology of the ancient world.

SOUND-ENGLISH—A Language for the World. By Augustin Knoflach.

This book endeavors to show that English will be the language of the future, that what is wanted is a phonetic alphabet, that time and money are wasted with the present system, and great difficulties encountered by foreigners in learning the language. It gives the principles of Sound-English. Of all living languages the English is best suited for a universal language. It is already spoken by over one hundred millions of the most civilized people on earth. Its wonderful simplicity is scarcely recognized by those who use it. It is capable of expressing the most subtle thought. It is the language of progress and freedom all over the world. It is the most practical language. Clear, concise, with words arranged in the most natural order, it is the language of business.

The book is a meritorious one, and its presentation of what improvements can be made in English language is instructive.

THE AUSTRALIAN BALLOT SYSTEM.

To the Editors of Freethought:

The objection made by Catholic priests and others to the Australian ballot, that it would disfranchise illiterates, is too thin. There is ample provision to enable anyone who cannot mark his ballot himself to have it marked for him as he chooses; he can bring in a written or printed list of candidates, for this purpose, in his pocket; and, in one state at least, it would be only necessary for him to say that he wants to vote the straight ticket of his party. At all events, the marking can be done for him by an official sworn to secrecy. The chief peculiarity about the Australian ballot is that any man can use it, without any other man finding it out how he votes. This naturally makes the system highly objectionable to Catholic priests and other enemies of liberty. If anyone wishes to get rid of bribery and intimidation, here is an opportunity.

F. M. HOLLAND.

THE CLERGY OF SAN FRANCISCO.

The clergy of San Francisco are great cowards, or mere incompetents, morally, intellectually, and religiously. Their religion is assailed, denied, questioned, put in issue every day in this city by men who are educated, respectable, and in every way desirable as converts, and yet no effort is made to meet them, refute their statements and defend the faith. The clergy will not take the field. They are content to take their salaries, sneak into a corner, and let these boasters keep the field, with banners displayed, and on every banner a defiance of the Christian religion.

The Freethought Society and weekly journal declare on all occasions: That the God of the Bible and the church is only a malignant demon, born of priestcraft, to frighten fools.

That the Bible is a mere compilation of rubbish, indecent, contradictory, cruel, immoral, and contemptible.

That the so-called truths of the Christian religion are all baseless fables of the barbarous past, and utterly unreliable.

That there is no proof that God ever revealed a syllable to man; that a miracle ever took place; that a prophecy ever was made; that Christ was born, as stated, or crucified as stated, or the son of God, or anything but a mere human being; that all these things are mere inventions of priests to make a living for them, at the expense of ignorant believers.

The clergy of this city, from those of Rome to all the rest, are invited and challenged, daily, to meet these denials with some proof; and they decline the encounter. Why is this? "They know they have no proof to offer," says the Freethinker. "Oh, they are powerless against those doubters," says the devout believer. "It would be useless. Our clergy are not skilled debaters! They would only make religion look weak and indefensible."

But what does the preacher say himself? Nothing! He avoids the subject. He feels that he is behind the age, not equal to these Freethought men in facts, in logic, and debating power. He simply keeps out of the way.

Then what do the people do? They glide away from a faith that is no longer defensible, from preachers who are moral cowards. They go over to the brave and the free, and take the pleasant paths of Freethought.

All our people are doing so. It is said of Daniel Webster that on one occasion he declared: "My religion is very brief. My catechism is very short. It includes a wise and beneficent God, a future for the soul, and a reward for well-doing here, and there I stop, and see my way no further."

The fathers of our republic were of the same mould, so they had no king, no church, no creed, no pastors, and no masters. They were Freethought, and said, "All men are free and equal, and shall think as they please." In these words they shut out the pope, cardinal, bishop, and pastor. They made the American sovereign, not a sheep, but a lion, who accepts no falsehood, no dictation, nothing unproved.

And all our people are drifting into the same channel. The religion of the fathers, of Webster, holds its ground. The religion of the churches is fading away.

The vengeful God, the foolish, indecent Bible; the hell for unfortunates; the Son of God, a man; miracles, prophecies, forgiveness for prayers of priests—all these are dying out. Good sense rejects them. Human kindness shudders at them. Good men are better than any such God.

But the clergy cling to them and will not let them go. Even here in San Francisco they met to consider the catechism which sends children to hell before they know their mothers; and they said: "We cannot recommend a change. We cannot reform God. We cannot dethrone the vengeful God or put a good God in his place." Why? "Because our occupation would be gone. A good God would treat all his children alike and show no favor to priest or king. Men would approach him as children do their mothers, and want no mediator. A good God, such as Webster speaks of, would need no clergy to plead for sinners; he would hear only the sinners themselves, and they would trust him as a living father. There would be no need of priests."

So the clergy said: "We cannot amend. It is our interest and our will, and could we vote away at once the vengeful God, the fierce hell-fire, the damnation of infants, and the eternal torment, we would not do it. It would ruin us. Let them stand that we may live." But dare you defend such dogma? "Perhaps not. At least we don't care to try. If any are so enlightened as not to believe such things let them alone. And let us go into the wilderness among savages and Hottentots and such as they. It is better to be honored priests in Dahomey than utterly defeated, exposed, and beaten debaters with the Freethought people of San Francisco."

And so our clergy hide away from controversy. They accept the inevitable. They will take up collections to make a new field for themselves in Timbuctoo, and send missionaries; but they cannot, will not, dare not meet the advocates of science and Freethought. It is not possible, and no men know it better than the clergy.

H. L. KNIGHT.

DEFEAT OF THE BLAIR BILL.

In the Senate at Washington, March 20, at 1 o'clock, the Blair Educational bill was called up as unfinished business, and Bate took the floor in opposition to it.

After the debate the Senate proceeded to vote on the bill and amendments. The first vote was on the three amendments offered by Moody of South Dakota, that illiterates among Indians shall be included in the calculations.

Hawley, opposing the bill, read the table of appropriations to be made for the next fiscal year with the following recapitulations: Probable appropriations, $455,600,000; proposed appropriations, $58,242,000; total, $523,842,000; estimated revenue, $450,400,000; excess of appropriations over revenue, $73,442,000. Moody's amendment was agreed to.

The Senate proceeded to vote on the third reading and the engrossment of the bill. When the vote was concluded and it was known that it resulted against the bill, Blair changed his vote from aye to no so as to make a motion to reconsider. The result as announced was: Ayes 31, noes 37. The following pairs were announced: Butler, Vance, Paddock, Casey, Gibson, Brown, and Call, who were for the bill, with Quay, McPherson, Eustis, Ransom, Washburn, Beck, and Cameron, who were against it.

Blair made a motion to reconsider. The vote with the motion was entered, and after an executive session the Senate adjourned.

MR. REYNOLDS'S QUEER TACTICS.

To the Editors of Freethought:

While I was using every effort in my power to secure a treasurer for the Oregon State Secular Union I received an abusive, insolent, and brutal letter from C. B. Reynolds concerning the contributions from Washington. I determined not to answer him, although I have received two more letters from him since. Twice through FREETHOUGHT I have given notice that L. Ames, Esq., of Silverton, was appointed treasurer. The last time, I published this resolution which was passed at our convention:

Resolved by this convention, That the treasurer of this organization be authorized to refund all money received from Washington Liberals who so desire, and that the secretary be instructed to notify them of this resolution.

This gives me no authority or jurisdiction in the matter. I cannot draw a warrant or order for the same, and if I should ask the treasurer for any of this money he should refuse to let me have it. He should treat me as one who was trying to meddle with the funds which the Union was holding in trust for certain defined purposes.

But no one knows the letter and spirit of this resolution better than Reynolds. He and the delegation from Walla Walla drew $25 from the treasury, as they had an absolute right to do, without any order from me or without consulting me, so far as I now remember, thus establishing a precedent showing how the contributors from Washington could procure their money back. If I was "personally responsible for the return of this money," why did the Union take possession and provide for its return without anything to be done on my part? When funds were received from Washington, Idaho, and Oregon I was simply an agent or conduit to convey the money to the treasurer; and in doing so I invariably received for it in FREETHOUGHT.

Reynolds says he worked hard for the convention. He did so, and for it he had my profound gratitude. But he fails to say that he wrote me a letter saying that I was making up a "big mob" to meet in Portland; he fails to tell that by the next mail he apologized for his insolence. He calls my attention to the fact that he came to my rescue when speakers were needed. He did. But I was never nearer my "wits' end" than when we got the "funeral oration," which was a disgrace to the cause of secularism.

When Mr. Ames received his commission he came to see me and I requested him to examine all letters on file to the treasurer and to promptly remit to those persons in Washington who asked for a return of their money, and I called his attention to Mr. Martin's claim.

Now, FREETHOUGHT, I ask you to publish the Reynolds letter which I have this day received immediately following this communication.

I also request you to examine the files a few weeks before and after our convention and send a copy of this number to all the contributors from Washington, and send your bill to me and I will pay it.

C. BEAL.

Portland, Or., March 17, 1890.

MR. REYNOLDS'S LETTER.

WASHINGTON SECULAR UNION, 1526, Sixth street, }
SEATTLE, WASH., March 14, 1890. }

C. BEAL, ESQ., President Oregon Secular Union, My Dear Sir:
I am in receipt of letter from good friend J. S. Martin, of Snohomish, Wash.:

"I received a letter from Mr. Beal stating that he had got a treasurer. And a few days later I received a card from the treasurer stating that if I answered the card he would send me the money. I did so, but have not received the money yet."

When working for the Portland convention I took pains to write in your praise, and asked each prominent Liberal to send you words of cheer and encouragement.

At the convention, from first to last, when you were driven to your wits' end at disappointment of speakers, and at every other trouble, I came to your rescue. You then expressed appreciation and gratitude for my services.

Despite the unfair treatment at your convention, I knew the Liberals of Oregon are good and true friends, and blame them not for being under the glamour of misrepresentation made by bad advisors and a self-imposed dictator. I gladly award you credit for doing all you could in your announcement from the rostrum to correct misrepresentations. Some were at least self-assertive, and their sense of justice prompted them to—of their own volition—tender the repayment of funds contributed by Washington Liberals under mistake.

Now, for months Mr. J. S. Martin, of Snohomish, Wash., has been trying to recover the amount he sent you, only to be met with trifling excuses and pretexts for delay. Looks like trying to tire him out so he will forego his claim.

I have written you twice—no reply. I last wrote you—under cover to friend Wm. Haight, of East Portland, one of your esteemed members—inclosing order for $5 from Mr. Wilson, of Davenport, Wash., to pay to the W. S. U. the money sent to you, acknowledged by you.

Common courtesy would have prompted an immediate reply; common honesty, immediate payment.

I have waited till forbearance ceases to be a virtue.

If the order inclosed to you from the Davenport friends is not at once paid, and if Mr. Martin, of Snohomish, does not receive back the money he sent you, you leave me no alternative but to verify facts in regard to every unreturned contribution, and since you will not answer me by private letter, leave you to do so through the Liberal papers and the Oregonian of your own city. I deplore being compelled to take such a course, but you leave me no alternative.

Permit me to kindly suggest, if you or others have some personal spite or dislike to me—and it is natural for some to hate those they have injured and treated with ingratitude—but that does not excuse the non-payment of money due to others—it is no excuse for retaining their funds, obtained under misrepresentation.

The money was paid to you—you are in honor personally responsible for its return.

Come, friend Beal, do as you would be done by. Let us have speedy settlement and end this matter, so that peace and good will may prevail.

C. B. REYNOLDS,

Sec. W. S. U., and Pres. Walla Walla Liberal Club.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. R. H. Schwartz, the subject of this sketch, is deserving of more than a passing notice. She was a remarkable woman, possessing a versatile talent rarely equaled. Her great-heartedness took in the race in its sympathies. Ready to every good word and work, she spent her years in seeking to uplift humanity. Her musical talents, her voice, and her pen were at the service of all, especially the poor and the needy. She was an active worker in the broad field of Freethought. An intelligent, conscientious and devoted Spiritualist, she lived according to the ethics of its sublime philosophy. Mrs. Schwartz was not narrow, bigoted, or dogmatic in her views, but broad, sympathetic, and charitable. She was a liberal Liberalist, an untrammelled Freethinker, a spiritual Spiritualist, and a champion of the rights of all. She was an active member of the Church of Humanity, of Phil Sheridan Relief Corps, of the First Spiritual Society, and of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Untiring in zeal, and unceasing in labors, she worked beyond her strength, and no doubt hastened the end of her earthly pilgrimage. Her funeral was attended from the family residence, corner of Sixth and St. James streets, at 10:30 o'clock, March 18, 1890. The eulogy was delivered by N. F. Ravlin, and was an eloquent tribute to her memory. The esteem in which she was held in San Jose, was evidenced by the immense concourse of people that assembled on the occasion of her funeral, and by the mammoth procession that followed her remains to the cemetery, headed by "Schubert's Band," being a volunteered, touching tribute of respect to her memory. The floral offerings were profuse, many fine and beautiful designs being among them. Her summons was sudden, but she fell with her armor on, in active service to the day of her death.

MOURNED AND HONORED BY ALL.

The following brief account of the funeral of Mrs. R. H. Schwartz is from the San Jose Mercury of March 19:

The funeral of Mrs. R. H. Schwartz took place from the family residence, at the corner of Sixth and St. James streets, yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock. There was a very large attendance of the friends of the deceased, not one-tenth that desired to do so being able to find standing room in the house. The religious exercises were opened with a solemn chant, "Dream On, My Soul," by Professor Rainey, after which Mr. Ravlin delivered a brief address in which a merited tribute was paid to the character of the deceased. "Some Sweet Day" was then sung by Professor and Mrs. Rainey and Mrs. M. A. Boulware, after which the mournful march to the city of the dead was taken up, the procession being led by a band composed of members of the Fifth Regiment and Schubert's. The pall-bearers were B. F. McLellan, Mr. Lewis, L. A. Talcott, Arthur Rice, W. D. J. Hambley, and Wm. Vinter. The Phil Sheridan Relief Corps, of which Mrs. Schwartz was an active member, attended in body, and there were also large delegations from John A. Dix Relief Corps and from both the Nationalist Clubs. The floral offerings were numerous and many of them very elaborate.

Mrs. MATTIE P. KREKEL has the following lecture appointments in California:

Boulder Creek, March 25, 26, 27; Santa Cruz, March 28; San Jose, March 30 (Sunday afternoon, 2 o'clock, Turn Verein Hall); Sunday evening, San Francisco, 421 Post street; Hanford, April 3, 4; Lemoore, April 5, 6; Norwalk, April 9, 10; Anaheim, April 12, 13; Orange, April 15, 16, 17; Santa Ana, April 19, 20; National City, April 23, 24, 25; San Diego, April 27.

Bound volumes of FREETHOUGHT, 1889, $3.

CHRONICLES OF SIMON CHRISTIANUS.

CHAPTER V.

THE VALLEY.

The Ghouls and Dragons.—The Ball of Fire.

1. And Simon fell down headlong into the valley.
2. And the whole valley was full of gloom, and horror, and pitchy darkness, and the air thereof was stagnant, and fetid, and unwholesome.
3. And the valley was full of huge, and unsightly, and shapeless trees, called Doctrines; and the trees were covered with the loathsome slime called Graceogod, and their branches grew down towards the ground, and filled the whole valley, so that the pilgrims could scarce pass through it.
4. And the ground was thickly covered with mud and filthy mire, such as prevailed in the gutter by which Simon had traveled.
5. And upon the mud and the mire was there everywhere strewed the brains of such as had passed, for all that came that way, by reason of their fear and haste, and the darkness of the valley, did assuredly brain themselves against the trees and their branches.
6. And on each side of the valley rose up great and mighty precipices, which did overhang and threaten to fall down continually, and their name was Condemnation.
7. And the valley was inhabited by all fierce and horrible creatures.
8. There did the hobgoblins gibber, and the ogres hold high revel;
9. There did the ghouls have ghastly sport, and restless fiends make hideous feastings;
10. There did many demoniac beasts wander, and the dragons prow about.
11. And the griffin, whose stature was more than forty and three ells, dwelt here, and a huge snake, whose length was a furlong and furlongs and half a furlong.*
12. And the hobgoblins were called Delusion, and the ogres Destruction.
13. And the ghouls were called Hallucination, and the restless fiends Frenzy.
14. And the demoniac beasts were called Idiocy, and the dragons Imbecility.
15. And the griffin was called Despair, and the snake Insanity.
16. And Simon fell headlong into the mud and mire of the valley, and when he came to know of it, he bellowed forth lustily, and gathered himself up, and would have run more quickly, but that he was compelled to go slower by reason of the mud and the darkness.
17. And as he hasted forward, he presently brained himself against one of the trees.
18. And his hurts, by running against the trees, were exceedingly grievous, and his brains issued forth; and immediately he was surrounded by the hobgoblins and the ogres, and they tormented him very grievously, and trampled him down in the mire, and stamped upon him, and bedeviled him till he was ready to give up the ghost, had there been any to receive it.
19. And while they were busy with him, there came up two legions of the ghouls, and after them half a legion more, and they began to bite and to kick, and to leap upon him, and to batter him against the trees, and to trip him up as he ran.
20. And presently there came up also a troop of the dragons, and more than six of the demoniac beasts, and the dragons tormented him with their sharp claws, and the demoniac beasts did battle for him, tugging this way and that, till he well nigh went both ways together.
21. And Simon was in very great straits, and his eye-glass, by reason of his many tumbings into the mud and mire, had become exceedingly clear.
22. And suddenly he saw in the air above him, as it were, a great ball of fire, and the dimensions thereof were very great, and the fire very fierce and hot, and the hissing thereof was like unto the hissing of eleven thousand snakes.

*From this passage it will be at once seen, whence Daniel's "time, times, and a half" was derived.—TRANSLATORS.

23. And on the ball of fire were written, as in letters of blood, these words, The wrath to come.

24. And Simon beheld, and would have trembled but that he trembled already more than he was able.

25. And the ball of fire drew near apace, and though it was hot it gave out no light, but rather made the darkness more dark.

26. And Simon fled and got not away; for the demoniac beasts, and the ghouls, and the dragons, and the ogres, and the hobgoblins continually tripped him up, and trampled him in the mire, and bit and gnawed at him, and dragged him hither and thither and tossed him about, and all the while the great ball of fire drew near; and Ahrimanes pursued, and the hag Fearohell, laid on her scourge.

27. And presently there came up the griffin called Despair, and seized Simon in his hideous jaws, and shot him into the air amongst the branches of a certain tree, the name of which was Predestination; and when Simon fell down again he fell into the jaws of the vast serpent called Insanity.

28. And the serpent shot him forth again through the branches of the tree, and he fell into the jaws of the griffin, and immediately the griffin shot him back, and he fell again into the jaws of the serpent.

29. And after this manner did the griffin and the serpent torment him for the space of nine full days and the third part of an hour.

30. And all the while was he cast from either to the other, through the branches of that tree, and was followed by the great and terrible ball of fire; which did continually threaten to burst upon him.

31. And after this fashion was Simon tormented, night and day was he tormented, and against the tree and the branches thereof was he continually cast, and was battered and bruised, so that what remained of his brains issued out, and he was destitute.

32. And when he was destitute his tormentors ceased to torment him.

To be Continued.

PRACTICAL WORK.

W. J. Dutton, of Kilmer, Ohio, writes as follows:

"Your encouraging letter of the 13th was duly received. . . . I never fail to 'bear testimony' to the truth of my belief on all proper occasions, especially when there is a chance of aiding the cause by it.

"This is a rural district, with no town of any size near here. Farmers, as a rule, are very conservative; and while the more intelligent portion of them are not believers in orthodoxy, yet they do not interest themselves in radical thought, and do not see the importance of resisting the encroachments of the church. Unfortunately, it is a fact that farmers' wives and daughters are superstitious—much more so than the farmers.

"While his family is engaged in revival services John will laugh at the ridiculous proceedings; but he never attempts to persuade nor offer objections, and usually contributes his mite when the hat is passed around. When a person openly opposes the popular faith the female portion of the community regard him as a contemptible specimen of humanity, and John says nothing about it. I do not know whether our community is a representative one or not; but I am inclined to think it is, to some extent at least. However, this was our condition two years ago, and is now, except that John sometimes ventures to mention his disapproval, and that the ladies are not so enthusiastic in their work. This change has been made by hard work by a few Liberals. We have had six Freethought lectures in the community within the last two years, and have succeeded in getting six or eight subscribers for Liberal papers. You see we are making some progress; but I do not believe we can get the requisite number to identify themselves with the movement to make it practicable for us to organize as an auxiliary to the American Secular Union.

"We young people of Elba. . . . have succeeded in keeping up a social organization which damages the church very much in that locality; and this is the best we hope to do at present."

This letter is not only interesting, but instructive, as showing the three chief methods of educating people up to the necessity of resisting the encroachments of the church, viz.: Freethought lectures, Freethought literature, and social organization of "the young people." The last of these three methods—social organization—cannot be dwelt on too persistently by those of us who have the aims and principles of the American Secular Union at heart. If state secularization is ever to wage a really successful battle against the encroachments of the church, its forces must be trained, not alone in intellectual, but also in emotional warfare. The dictum of Lord Chesterfield has always been, and probably always will be true—that men are swayed, not by their reason, but by their impulses. And, however much we Secularists may pride ourselves on the logic of our position, the fact remains that when we win converts we do so because we instinctively appeal to an emotion which is so universal in the human heart as to rank among the great passions—the desire to grow toward our intellectual and spiritual ideals, unchecked by human dictatorship. The protest against those religious bigots who would deprive us of our right to this unhampered growth toward the light is a noble protest, and should, if rightly presented, have the sympathy of all young people whose hearts are aflame with the longing to act some worthy part in the battles of life. It is natural and beautiful in the young to crave a chance for heroic action. And their enthusiasm is one of the great moving forces of the world.

American Secular Unionists, what are you doing, practically, to recruit your army from these coming heroes and heroines?

IDA C. CRADDOCK,

Cor. Sec. American Secular Union.

Office of the American Secular Union, 930 N. Seventeenth street, Philadelphia, March 7, 1890.

WHY I AM AN AGNOSTIC.

One of the corner-stones of Christianity is the miracle of inspiration, and this same miracle lies at the foundation of all religions. How can the fact of inspiration be established. How could even the inspired man know that he was inspired? If he was influenced to write, and did write, and did express thoughts and facts that to him were absolutely new, on subjects about which he had previously known nothing; how could he know that he had been influenced by an infinite being? And if he could know, how could he convince others?

What is meant by inspiration? Did the one inspired set down only the thoughts of a supernatural being? Was he simply an instrument, or did his personality color the message received and given? Did he mix his ignorance with the divine information, his prejudices and hatreds with the love and justice of the deity? If God told him not to eat the flesh of any beast that dieth of itself, did the same infinite being also tell him to sell this meat to the stranger within his gates?

A man says that he is inspired—that God appeared to him in a dream, and told him certain things. Now, the things said to have been communicated may have been good and wise, but will the fact that the communication is good or wise establish the inspiration? If, on the other hand, the communication is absurd or wicked, will that conclusively show that the man was not inspired? Must we judge from the communication? In other words, is our reason to be the final standard?

How could the inspired man know that the communication was received from God? If God in reality should appear to a human being, how could this human being know who had appeared. By what standard would he judge? Upon this question man has no experience; he is not familiar enough with the supernatural to know gods even if they exist. Although thousands have pretended to receive messages, there has been no message in which there was or is anything above the invention of man. There are just as wonderful things in the uninspired as in the inspired books, and the prophecies of the heathen have been fulfilled equally with those of the Judean prophets. If, then, even the inspired man cannot certainly know that he is inspired, how is it possible for him to demonstrate his inspiration to others? The last solution of this question is that inspiration is a miracle about which only the inspired can have the least knowledge, or the least evidence, and this knowledge and this evidence not of a character to absolutely convince even the inspired.

There is certainly nothing in the Old or the New Testament that could not have been written by uninspired human beings. To me there is nothing of any particular value in the Pentateuch. I do not know of a solitary scientific truth contained in the five books commonly attributed to Moses. There is not, as far as I know, a line in the book of Genesis calculated to make a human being better. The laws contained in Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy are for the most part puerile and cruel. Surely there is nothing in any of these books that could not have been produced by uninspired men. Certainly there is nothing calculated to excite intellectual admiration in the book of Judges or in the wars of Joshua; and the same may be said of Samuel, Chronicles, and Kings. The history is extremely childish, full of repetitions of useless details, without the slightest philosophy, without a generalization born of a wide survey. Nothing is known of other nations; nothing imparted of the slightest value; nothing about education, discovery, or invention. And these idle and stupid annals are interspersed with myth and miracle, with flattery for kings who supported priests, and with curses and denunciations for those who would not hearken to the voice of the prophets. If all the historic books of the Bible were blotted from the memory of mankind, nothing of value would be lost.

Is it possible that the writer or writers of First and Second Kings were inspired, and that Gibbon wrote "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" without supernatural assistance? Is it possible that the author of Judges was simply the instrument of an infinite God, while John W. Draper wrote "The Intellectual Development of Europe" without one ray of light from the other world? Can we believe that the author of Genesis had to be inspired, while Darwin experimented, ascertained, and reached conclusions for himself?

Ought not the work of a God to be vastly superior to that of a man? And if the writers of the Bible were in reality inspired, ought not that book to be the greatest of books? For instance, if it were contended that certain statues had been chiselled by inspired men, such statues should be superior to any that uninspired man has made. As long as it is admitted that the Venus de Milo is the work of man, no one will believe in inspired sculptors—at least until a superior statue has been found. So in the world of painting. We admit that Corot was uninspired. Nobody claims that Angelo had supernatural assistance. Now, if some one should claim that a certain painter was simply the instrumentality of God, certainly the pictures produced by that painter should be superior to all others.

I do not see how it is possible for an intelligent human being to conclude that the Song of Solomon is the work of God, and that the tragedy of "Lear" was the work of an uninspired man. We are all liable to be mistaken, but the Iliad seems to me a greater work than the Book of Esther, and I prefer it to the writings of Haggai and Hosea. Æschylus is superior to Jeremiah, and Shakespeare rises immeasurably above all the sacred books of the world.

It does not seem possible that any human being ever tried to establish a truth—anything that really happened—by what is called a miracle. It is easy to understand how that which was common became wonderful by accretion—by things added, and by things forgotten—and it is easy to conceive how that which was wonderful became by accretion what was called supernatural. But it does not seem possible that any intelligent, honest man ever endeavored to prove anything by a miracle.

As a matter of fact, miracles could only satisfy people who demanded no evidence; else how could they have believed the miracle? It also appears to be certain that, even if miracles had been performed, it would be impossible to establish that fact by human testimony. In other words, miracles can only be established by miracles, and in no event could miracles be evidence except to those who were actually present; and in order for miracles to be of any value, they would have to be perpetual. It must also be remembered that a miracle actually performed could by no possibility shed any light on any moral truth, or add to any human obligation.

If any man has ever been inspired, this is a secret miracle, known to no person, and suspected only by the man claiming to be inspired. It would not be in the power of the inspired to give satisfactory evidence of that fact to anybody else.

The testimony of man is insufficient to establish the supernatural. Neither the evidence of one man nor of twelve can stand when contradicted by the experience of the intelligent world. If a book sought to be proved by miracles is true, then it makes no difference whether it was inspired or not; and if it is not true, inspiration cannot add to its value.

The truth is that the church has always—unconsciously, perhaps—offered rewards for falsehood. It was founded upon the supernatural, the miraculous, and it welcomed all statements calculated to support the foundation. It rewarded the traveler who found evidences of the miraculous, who had seen the pillar of salt into which the wife of Lot had been changed, and the tracks of Pharaoh's chariots on the sands of the Red sea. It heaped honors on the historian who filled his pages with the absurd and impossible. It had geologists and astronomers of its own who constructed the earth and the constellations in accordance with the Bible. With sword and flame it destroyed the brave and thoughtful men who told the truth. It was the enemy of investigation and of reason. Faith and fiction were in partnership.

To-day the intelligence of the world denies the miraculous. Ignorance is the soil of the supernatural. The foundation of Christianity has crumbled, has disappeared, and the entire fabric must fall. The natural is true. The miraculous is false—R. G. INGERSOLL, in the North American Review.

THE OREGON WINTER.

To the Editors of Freethought:

This is the worst winter on record. Our little valley (Coquille) has sustained considerable loss by the flood. Acres of our cleared bottom lands are covered with driftwood, and the fences are gone. The incessant cold rain and snow will take off a great portion of the stock on the ranges, and even the farmers are now losing heavily, not being prepared for so rigorous a winter.

On account of high water and bad weather, our Paine celebration was a failure. Mrs. Waisbrooker, however, delivered the oration to a small audience, which I understand was pronounced good. She subsequently talked on the labor question at Arago and Myrtle Point, and also at some of the towns on Coos bay. She handles the labor question in good shape, making some telling points in her argument. She was here during the flood, and therefore I regret to say she did not receive the encouragement she deserved.

Our roads are demoralized. Until last week we received no outside mail for over five weeks. We now get our letter mail. We have had no FREETHOUGHT since the first issue of January. The weather clerk is no doubt taking his summer vacation this winter. He is probably east of the Rockies. I feel confident he does not know what is going on out here. Were I confident that Blair's Sunday-rest bill would compel such weather to rest even only on Sunday, I would give it my support irrespective of other consequences. I have just written our senators and representative on the Blair Rest and Educational bills and the Breckinridge bill, to prevent anyone from being compelled to work on Sunday in the District of Columbia, calling their attention to the danger of establishing a precedent for such legislation, and asking their careful and serious consideration of these measures before they give them support. What are the Liberals doing in this matter? We must work or these bills will become laws. Let every Liberal write as I have done and get other signatures to his letter. Let us flood the chambers of congress with protests against such pernicious, inconsistent, and useless legislation.

Arago, Or.

J. HENRY SCHROEDER.

A WELL-TIMED CONVENTION.

The annual convention of the National Reform Association, says an exchange, is to meet in Lincoln Music Hall, Washington City, April 1, and continue three days. Rev. Jonathan Edwards is announced as one of the speakers, and he is to speak on the same subject that he did in the convention of 1873. Hon. W. C. P. Breckinridge, who framed the Sunday bill for the District of Columbia, is to preside at one of the sessions and make a speech.

Of all days in the year, the first day of April is the only one on which that Association can with perfect consistency meet.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editors of Freethought:

I wish you success and rejoice in the hope that you will succeed. I have confidence in California for Freethought works. Fifteen years ago I traveled all through that state and sowed the Truth Seeker as I went along from Reno to San Bernardino and carried some copies of it as far as Prescott, Arizona, and found that it took well all over, though I was shy of the Spaniards. I trusted to their ignorance of the English language. Had they known the nature of the numerous papers I received and distributed, they would very likely have filled me up with lead, for which I did not care, as I was already sufficiently supplied with cold Materialism.

I sojourned in San Francisco three months and found both Christian bigots and liberal Freethinkers. I formed a very good opinion of Mr. Woodward, the proprietor of the great garden and of the What Cheer House. He was a Freethinker and a good man. One day I was sent from an intelligence office to a big old man in a bank for employment, but I had poor success with him. I answered all his questions satisfactorily but the last one. He asked me what was my religion, and as I did not know his, I could not answer satisfactorily. He then informed me that he had no use for me. I replied that he was no more fit to be my master than I was to be his servant, and left him there with his select religion. There was a little place called Social Hall where I used to go every Sunday. There I heard the first woman lecturer, and a good one she was. Another great Sunday entertainment was the contest between Dr. Cox and Dr. Hopkins, who would fight all day Sunday on the streets. Dr. Cox, with a choir of sacred singers, would commence his course of open-air meetings bright and early in front of the What Cheer House. The singers drew a crowd, when the doctor would elevate himself on an empty merchandise box, Bible in hand, and preach until the roughs would hoot him away, when he would remove to the corner of Montgomery street, and Dr. Hopkins would occupy the stand until it was time to follow Cox to the next. Dr. Hopkins's text was invariably taken from the heading of a paper which he published himself and of which he carried a bunch under his arm, "No God, No Devil, No Heaven, and No Hell." Dr. Hopkins was not an accomplished speaker, and his paper did not show him much more successful as a writer, but yet he succeeded pretty well in destroying Dr. Cox's religious yarns. This was during the great panic in the winter of 1875-'76, when the number of good, honest, and able men out of employment in San Francisco was estimated at 15,000; consequently there were many smart, intelligent men so disguised in rags and neglected beards that they looked like professional paupers. The What Cheer House was always full of them, and a religious crank came there every day with a big Bible under his arm to harass the poor starving men instead of giving them food. He was always trying to start a controversy, and if any one contradicted him he got vexed and abused the other. One day after challenging every one to discuss with him he shouted, "What is faith? Who can describe faith?" A voice from a rough-looking individual answered, "Faith is the absence of knowledge." The rough-looking one proved to be a well-posted man and a good speaker whom the crank soon discovered himself no match for, and soon left.

Pardon my long letter and accept my best wishes for FREETHOUGHT and the Publishing Company, not omitting the young man with the badge pin.

CHAS. LAPERCHE.

Alexandria Station, Ont.

READ on page 205 the list of premiums offered for new subscribers to FREETHOUGHT.

From Portland.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Upon her return from Washington en route to California Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel delivered one of her eloquent lectures in this city. Those who have heard Mrs. Krekel need not be told that she held the close attention of her large and intelligent audience. The Secularists of Portland feel proud of such a champion of their cause, and hope that enough encouragement will be given to such speakers as Mrs. Krekel to retain them upon the platform. Our cause needs them, and it would be an irreparable loss to lose them through lack of interest and support. In Portland, Mrs. Krekel will always have a representative audience.

MATTIE BLAISDELL, Sec. of Secular Association.

Portland, Or., March 13, 1890.

"Brains, Science, and Civilization."

To the Editors of Freethought:

The lecture in your paper on "Brains, Science, and Civilization," by the Hon. A. Schell, is so grand and capable of doing so much good that it ought to be put in print and distributed among the people. I would ask you, if you will, to print it in pamphlet form and send me a dozen or two for distribution. I hope you can do it. Fraternally yours,

MCMINNVILLE, OR., March 10, 1890.

M. J. OLDS.

Mr. Schell's address has already been issued in pamphlet form. It deserves all the commendation bestowed upon it by our correspondent. The Freethought Publishing Company sells the pamphlet at 5 cents per copy, or fifty cents per dozen.

Shall the Irish Inherit the Earth?

To the Editors of Freethought:

The assertion made by Mr. Healy the other Sunday evening at the Freethought meeting you may think too absurd to take notice of. Addressing the audience Mr. Healy said: "When you and your descendants are dead and gone, Irishmen and their descendants will rule this country." He gave no explanation. I wonder if Healy is a real live prophet. Perhaps he has information that God will adopt them as his chosen people, and all who have no Irish blood in their veins are to be slaughtered; or perhaps the Lord will cause great floods and earthquakes and none will be saved but Irish. Mr. Healy believes in a God—the God of the Bible. Every Freethinker at that meeting could tell him as much about that God as he knows himself.

WM. W. NOBLE.

San Francisco, March 20.

Mrs. Schwartz.

To the Editors of Freethought:

There is not a friend of Freethought, nor one individual within the whole realm of her acquaintances, who will not be pained to learn of the death of this most estimable woman, Mrs. R. H. Schwartz. An affectionate wife, a loving mother, a kind and philanthropic neighbor, all must agree that we have lost a friend. Scarcely has there been since her residence in this city a charitable or humane work with which her name is not pleasantly associated. The world appeared to be her country, to do good her religion. She fearlessly and faithfully did that which she conceived to be her duty towards all living creatures, and tenderly cherished the memory of dear ones gone before. Who in the small army of Liberals in this city can fill the place made vacant by her death? I fear there is not one. We extend to the heart-stricken husband and only child our deepest sympathy.

L. R. TITUS.

San Jose, Cal.

Notes from Oregon.

To the Editors of Freethought:

We have a little case here of orthodox financiering worthy of mention. An old farmer of about seventy-five years, the possessor of five or six hundred acres of good land, and farm stock in abundance, became, a few years ago, captivated with the "Church of Holiness," and went daft on "African missions." He has just now sold the larger portion of his land and turned over $3,400 of the proceeds to "The Transit and Building Fund Society of Bishop Wm. Taylor, Self-supporting Missions, a corporation duly organized under the laws of the state of New York, at the city of New York, in such state."

Whether such "society" is a reality or only a myth, I am not informed; neither is it any of my business that an old dotard leaves the children, begotten of his loins, out in the cold, and gives their birthright to a swindling "bishop" and his pals; but if an Infidel had done so, and given his property to a Secular cause, what a howl of righteous wrath would have gone up around here! The natural heirs would have been importuned to demand a guardianship of the old man, and holy indignation would have been hurled at the wicked signets who had taken advantage of an old man in his dotage. It depends altogether on whose ox is gored.

We have a new political party now being organized in this state. It is called the "Union party," and is gotten up by the old "prohi" leaders. It advocates free trade, anti-monopoly, the "interests of the working classes," etc., but makes prohibition an essential issue of course. It seeks alliance with the Grangers, Knights of Labor, United Workmen, Free Trade Democrats, and anything else it can capture. The method of operating is the old prohi method—sending an agent to speak, and organize clubs in every precinct wherever he can. The "organizing officer" is an eastern importation, one Rork (or Rork), a preacher, but of what denomination I am not informed.

What the object is I am unable to divine, as they can scarcely hope to elect anything, and men don't usually put up money to pay a speaker for visiting every precinct in the state of Oregon just for the fun of it. Is it a "God-in-the-Constitution" dodge—I dunno? Can you inform us who is the representative of that party in Oregon? Does his name sound like a relapsed prohi when he leans up against a fence to repeat, "R-o-r-k, r-o-r-k?"

F. S. MATTESON.

Aumsville, Or.

The Scoffer in Rhyme.

To the Editors of Freethought:

In your issue of the 8th inst. a correspondent talks knowingly about "finger marks" in creation, etc., but says nothing about bad judgment and worse management. With due respect for the opinions of others, I can hardly help thinking that this correspondent is mistaken in his belief that "the great mass of the scientists of to-day are profound believers in God, and see his finger in ten thousand works," etc. "God's wonderful plan" is known only by inspiration. Truth seeks vindication but needs no inspiration. Therefore the following plain doggerel is not inspired:

What Science proves is all we know,
Yet vain, deluded man,
In every form of weal or woe,
Beholds a "wondrous plan."
We see the stars in the vaulted sky,
And their beauty nightly scan,
And these we say, but know not why,
Are part of the "wondrous plan."
The orbs that fill the unbounded all,
Have rolled since time began;
And he who "marks the sparrow's fall"
Still guides the "wondrous plan."
There's joyous life in the festive flea,
And hate in the heart of man;
How do we fail in these to see
The glimpse of a "wondrous plan?"
There's want and woe in every place
Beneath the azure span;
The sadness seen in many a face
Reveals a "wondrous plan."
On crimson field and battle plain
Where blood in torrents ran,
Unnumbered millions have been slain—
The work of this "wondrous plan."
While myriads sleep beneath the waves,
Still sorrow, pale and wan,
Is seen to weep o'er countless graves,
All made by this "wondrous plan."
There's many a tyrant, many a slave,
And many a pirate clan;
There's many a rogue and pious knave,
All parts of this "wondrous plan."
There's many a lordly millionaire,
There's many a gay galan
And toiling millions, born to share
The fate of this "wondrous plan."
The driveling priest, for paltry hire,
Presumes a God to scan,
And through the world, with threat'nings dire,
Proclaims a "wondrous plan."
But Science yet has found no sign
(Nor human vision can)
Of thought, or shadow of design
In all this "wondrous plan."

Turlock, March 13, 1890.

J. C. P.

TRAVELING ALONE

A WOMAN'S JOURNEY

AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

(Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Price, by mail, 30 cents.

Address The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

PRINTING!

Having procured one of the best Presses manufactured and a large assortment of display type, and employing competent workmen, the Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

Letter-heads,

Bill-heads,

Programmes,

Envelopes,

Business Cards,

Postal Cards,

Tickets,

Placards,

Receipts,

Posters,

Dodgers,

Circulars,

Etc. etc.

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Everlasting Blair.

Men were buried and babes were born,
Ships sailed around Good Hope and the Horn,
Youths turned into oldsters gray,
But Big Bore Blair still talked away.

Day after day a steady rain
Of dullness from a cloudy brain;
Day after day a fog most thick
With words confused and lunatic.

The weary galleries slept and snored,
Ingalls looked acid, bilious, bored;
And visitors, with bated breath,
Asked, "Will Blair talk himself to death?"

Alas, there is no hope he will!
Others, but not himself, he'll kill.
All Christendom's junk shops he'll fill
With speeches on his blasted bill.

His Fun Was Spoiled.

Minister (to small boy whom he had met in the street)—Is your father coming to church this morning, Henry?

Henry—I guess so. Somebody stole his fishing tackle last night, and I heard him tell ma at the breakfast table this morning that his fun for to-day was spoiled, and he s'posed he might as well go to church.

A NEW weekly periodical, entitled "Five Stories a Week," is to appear in Boston immediately. Each number will consist entirely of five novelettes chosen from the works of the best short-story writers of all countries, care being taken to present the greatest possible variety of motive and style. The periodical will have 16 pages, and will sell for five cents. It is to be published by Benj. R. Tucker.

LITTLE Edith—"Mamma, did you say that we should all know each other in heaven?" Mamma—"Yes, my child." Little Edith—"You can play that you're out, though, can't you, mamma, when people call that you don't want to see?"

AN old negro who had business in a lawyer's office was asked if he could sign his name. "How is dat, sah?" "I ask, the lawyer answered, "if you can write your name?" "Well, no, sah. I neber writes my name. I jes dictates it, sah."

MRS. ANGELICA—"Won't it be just too lovely for anything to have wings and harps forever!" Mr. Angelica (a dyspeptic)—"I don't want any of it in mine. We wouldn't be there a week before you'd want my wings to put on your hat."

GALLIGAN—DOCTOR, haven't you been attending old man Gilfullaw? Doctor—Yes. "How is he to-day?" "He is beyond the reach of medical assistance, I fear." "What, is he dying?" "Oh, no. He's broke."

FIRST MAINE MAN—Going out West, are you, Budger? What state—Dakota? Second MAINE MAN—Not much! No more prohibition states for me. I mean to turn over a new leaf and be a sober man if I can.

THE tramp handed him a slate on which was written: "I am deaf and dumb, and I am hungry." And he handed it back, indorsed thus: "Say nothing and saw wood."

The Truth Seeker Annual

AND

FREETHINKERS' ALMANAC.

1890—(E.M. 290).

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS: Calander for 1890.
Freethought in the United States, 1889.
Faded Flowers (poem) By J. E. Rensburg
The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue, by T. B. Wakeman.
Mostly Fools W. Stewart Ross (Sa'adin)
Record of the Spanish Inquisition.
Dates of the Fabrication of some Roman Catholic Dogmas.
The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a moral. Helen H. Gardener.
The Middle Ages, Illustrated.—The Priest, the Supernatural World, the Reformation, Future Terrors.
The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated.
Freethought Journals in the United States.
In Search of a Spirit, E. M. Macdonald.
Why I Left the Church, Hugh O. Pentecost

115 pages, price 25 cents.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoe maker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piau and Zither, 1463 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywall, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.

Rapp & Deberry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment

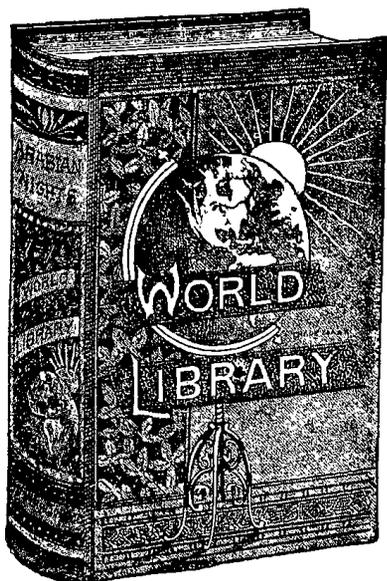

cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.

Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CR AIG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY Y. A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESS.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last an heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavillion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder-worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portraiture of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. PRESCOTT.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll), with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—(By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated the scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POE'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO. 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

DOCTOR—"I regret to say, madam, that you are afflicted with a severe case of rheumatism." Woman (weeping)—"I knowed it, doctor, I knowed it. I could feel it in my bones."

Immortal.

He walked the world with bended head; "There is no thing," he moaning said, "That must not some day join the dead."

He sat where rolled a river deep; A woman sat her down to weep; A child lay in her lap asleep.

The waters touched the mother's hand. His heart was touched. He passed from land. But left it laughing in the sand.

That one kind word, that one good deed, Was as if you should plant a seed In sands along death's sable brede.

And, looking from the farther shore, He saw, where he had sat before, A light that grew, grew more and more.

He saw a growing, glowing throng Of happy people, white and strong With faith, and jubilant with song.

It grew and grew, this little seed Of good sown in that day of need, Until it touched the stars indeed!

And then the old man smiling said, With youthful heart and lifted head, "No good deed ever joins the dead."

—JOAQUIN MILLER.

Ode to Night.

The evening, for her bath of dew, Is partially undressed, The sun behind a bob-tailed flush Is setting in the west; The planets light the heavens with The flash of their cigars. The sky has put his night-shirt on And buttoned it with stars.

A Lady's Toast to the Men.

At a literary meeting recently, Mrs. Dunaway toasted the men as follows: "God bless 'em. We halve their joys, double their sorrows, treble their expenses, quadruple their cares, excite their affections, control their property, and out-man-euver them in everything. In fact, I may say, without a prospect of successful contradiction, without 'em it wouldn't be much of a world anyhow. We love 'em, and the dear beings can't help it; we control 'em, and the precious fellows don't know it. As husbands they are always convenient, though not always on hand; as beaux they are by no means matchless. They are the most agreeable visitors; they are handy at state fairs, and indispensable at ice-cream saloons. They are splendid as escorts for some other fellow's wife or sister, and as friends they are better than women. As our fathers they are inexpressibly grand. A man may be a failure in business, a wreck in constitution, not enough to boast of as a beauty, nothing to boast of as a legislator of woman's rights, and not even very brilliant as a member of the press; but if he is our father we overlook his shortcomings, and cover his peccadillos with the divine mantle of charity. Then as our husbands, how we love to parade them as paragons! In the sublime words of the inspired poet:

"We'll lie for them, We'll cry for them, And if we could we'd fly for them, We'll do any thing but die for them."

MRS. BILKINS—In what part of the church is the nave? Bilkins—The knave is generally to be found in the pulpit.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc, worth $35, for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do., $5 and		Silver Thimbles	.30
(Send line of finest type you can read		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		4 Best Violin Strings	.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	6 Guitar Strings	.70
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" Forks	1.75	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00
" Teaspoons	1.70

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded.

Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

- Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
- Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
- Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
- Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
- Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
- Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
- The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
- Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. D.
- Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
- Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
- Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
- Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
- Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
- The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
- The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS. ALL FOR $1.20.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid. The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills 414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San Francisco.

Wm. W. NOBLE,

Merchant Tailor,

1222 STOCKTON ST.

Bet. Pacific and Broadway.

DRESS SUITS A SPECIALTY

Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass by.

PUTNAM'S WORKS.

The New God. 10c. The New God was made by an artist hand, guided by a poet soul. It is as perfect as sculpture. The creator makes his "god" in his own image, and breathes into his nostrils the breath of his own life.—L. K. Washburn.

Golden Throne. A romance. Price, $1 00. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words, the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Walls and Wanderings. A new American story. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1 00. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—John Swinton's Paper.

Prometheus: A Poem. Price, $1. "It is crammed with life, thought and profound emotion, poured forth, it seems to me, with extraordinary richness and beauty."—Dr. Henry W. Bellows.

Gottlieb: His Life; or, Love Triumphant. A Romance of Earth, Heaven and Hell. Price, 25 cents. "To describe all the beauties of this simple, yet touchingly told little tale, would be a work of which I confess myself utterly incapable. To realize what it is, you must read the book itself. I have never read anything so exquisitely beautiful and good in all my life before."—Elmina Drake Slenker.

A REGULAR EDUCATED AND LEGALLY QUALIFIED PHYSICIAN, and the most successful (in his specialty) as his practice will surely prove. The Doctor treats all those peculiar diseases of young and middle-aged men such as seminal weakness, impotency, &c., resulting from indiscretion and ignorance of youth. Those who are ailing should send ten (10) cents for his book, "Private Counsellor," setting forth an external Application—

A POSITIVE CURE

The book is worth many times its cost, and should be read by the young for instruction and the afflicted for relief.

All Communications Strictly Confidential.

Plain Envelopes used. The book spoken of sent sealed. Address, DR. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, NEW JERSEY Say where you saw this Advertisement.

[From the Washington National View.]

Dr. Fellows, of Vineland, New Jersey offers his valuable services to all those in need of a kind, sympathetic and skillful physician. Singular advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been assailed and exposed by the press, but, Dr. Fellows, a specialist, in his line, stands foremost in his profession, and the encomiums showered upon him publicly as well as in private, are flattering evidences of the high appreciation and confidence his long and conscientious devotion to his specialties in his profession have so justly merited for him, and it is safe to trust him.

A Testimonial.

WEST LIBERTY, O., Aug. 12, 1888. DR. R. P. FELLOWS—Dear Sir: The remedy you sent is working like a charm. I am completely surprised the way it acts upon the organs. Have only been using it one week, and that weakness, (seminal weakness) is coming out all right. Yours respectfully, J. R.

REMARKS—The above is a fair sample of the hundreds of testimonials received from all parts of the United States, from young, middle-aged and elderly men, suffering from various kinds of sexual complaints, but who are now cured by my External Application, the greatest of all known remedies for this class of diseases. As I am an out and-out Liberal I trust the Freethinkers of the Land will give me their patronage, and not waste their time and money on Christian doctors DR. FELLOWS.

FREETHOUGHT,

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Samuel P. Putnam, Lecturer and Editorial Correspondent. | Geo. E. Macdonald, Editor and Business Manager.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

Freethought Publishing Co

This journal is devoted, religiously, to the eradication of all forms of superstition, Christian or otherwise; and politically, to the advocacy of those principles inculcated by the

Nine Demands of Secularism.

FREETHOUGHT is not committed to any of the current methods of social reform, but its columns are open to the discussion of all of them. It welcomes agitation and discussion of all subjects, religious, political, ethical, and social.

Its Correspondents are all who have anything valuable to say on the above questions; who know how to express their thoughts in readable English, and who desire for an audience several thousand of the most intelligent people of the country.

FREETHOUGHT has no set list of contributors of articles written to order. It aims to give the news of the Liberal movement everywhere. It believes that the seeds of Freethought have been planted, and that the great work now before us is to cultivate their growth.

The paper circulates from Florida to Alaska, and from this coast to Maine.

ADVERTISERS

who wish to reach large numbers in all parts of the Pacific Slope will find space in its columns a remunerative investment.

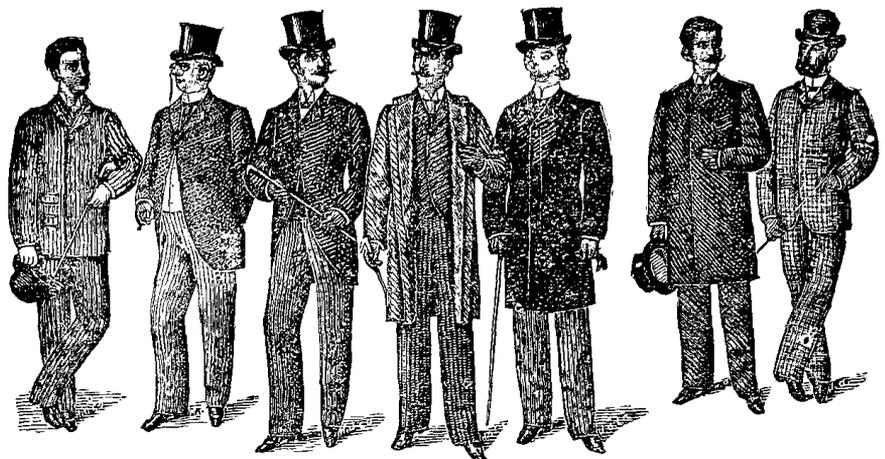

EVERY LIBERAL THINKER should read FREETHOUGHT. They will find it lively and at the same time in dead earnest; plain and direct, without being offensive.

Subscriptions—One year, $2; Six months $1. Four new subscriptions in one remittance, $5.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

W. S. BELL's "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Company.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR..... $25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.
TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.
OLIVER HINCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS,
NURSERYMEN.

Catalpas for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines.
Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice.
Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address
CLARK BROS.,
P. O. Box C, San Jacinto, Cal.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma; , cor. 5th, S. F.

14 karat Gold Scarf Pin..... $ 4 0
10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 0
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5..... 6 00
10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm " " " Diamond* 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,
PUTNAM & MACDONALD,
04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year..... $1.50
Six Months..... .75
Three Months..... .50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

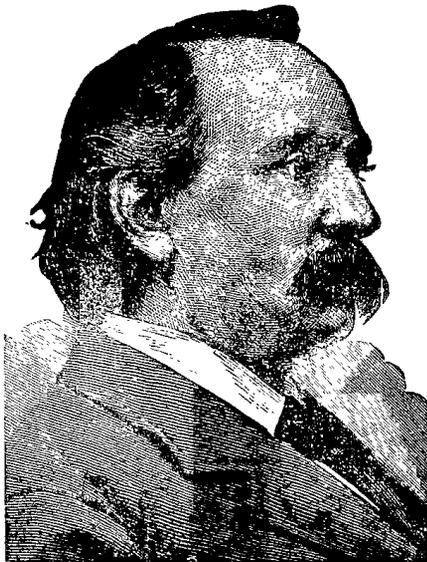

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
 FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
 338 Howard st., San Francisco.

Lent in Ancient Times.

When all the rest of the world shall have forgotten the Carnival, the Parisian blanchisseuse will still remind us, by the publicity of her apparent joy on Mardi Gras, that in ancient days washing, like meat, was discontinued in Lent, and the washerwoman had forty days of vacation.

"I HAVE only one last request to make," said the dying man, as he painfully raised his head from the pillow and surveyed the weeping group around his bedside. "What is it, my good friend?" asked the clergyman. "Anything you ask will be done." "Then see that the newspapers don't refer to me as 'another old landmark gone.'"

"WHAT are they waiting for?" says one prosaic old fellow to another, as they stand before the two figures with bowed heads in the great painting of the "Angelus." "Waiting for the six o'clock whistle, so's they can quit work," says the other.

MOTHER—You won't go to heaven if you're such a naughty boy, Willie. Willie—Oh, well, one can't expect to go everywhere. I went to the circus yesterday and to the theater the day before.

BOBBY—"How is it you don't get kept in any more?" Johnnie—"I gave more than any othel fellow in the class to buy a present for teacher."

Standard Scientific Works

Works by Alexander Bain.

English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75

Works by Charles Darwin.

Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00

Works by J. W. Draper.

History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75

Works by Ernst Haeckel.

The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00

Works by Huxley.

Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00

Works by John Stewart Mill.

Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25

Works by Richard A. Proctor.

Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
 The Moon.....2.00

Works by Herbert Spencer.

Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 Man versus the State......30
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75

Works by Andrew D. White.

Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00

Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.

Body and Mind.....$1.50
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50

Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.

Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

By Carl Marx.

Capital.....$3.00

By Asa Gray.

Darwiniana.....$2.00

By L. L. McLaughlin.

Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50

By John B. Henck.

Field-Book for Railroad Engineers.....$2.50

By C. Marcel.

Study of Languages.....$1.25

By Lester F. Ward.

Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00

By Frederick Overman.

A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00

By B. F. G. Fairfield.

Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25

By W. B. Carpenter.

Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25

By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.

Evolution.....$1.50

By Sir John Lubbock.

Origin of Civilization.....$5.00

By Charles A. Abbott.

A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50

By Garrett P. Serviss.

Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50

By Nathan Sheppard.

Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50

English as She is Spoke.....$.30

English as She is Wrote......30

Thos. Carlyle—His Life, Books, Theories......30

Comedies for Amateur Acting......30

The Distracted Young Preacher......25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

—BY—

W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form, a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

I HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE

Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.

13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order.

The Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is entirely damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thief-resisting. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that, ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only.

Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future

Republic of North America

BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters

impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 14.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, APRIL 5, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal. as Second-class Mail Matter Jan., 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - - APRIL 5, 1890.

It is fourteen years since the death of James Lick, and not half his charitable bequests have been carried out. Meanwhile the trustees draw a salary of $1000 each per year and the secretary gets $300 a month. Somebody should smuggle a bent pin into the comfortable chair these somnolent functionaries are occupying at the expense of the Lick estate. It might wake them up.

ONE of New York's leading clergymen, the Rev. Dr. Joseph Rylance, who a short time ago recovered in suit by default ten thousand dollars for slander from his vestryman, is again charged with misconduct. It is the old story of ministerial relations with a woman not his wife. It is a characteristic of pious people that they love to stir up matters of this kind and to prove one another immoral. And it usually happens that the scandal-monger is just as bad as the one he slanders.

SAYS the Chronicle: "There are seven orthodox Congregational churches in San Francisco, with an aggregate membership of 2196. Their benevolent contributions for the last year amounted to $8905, and the amount raised for parish expenses was $45,825. There are eleven Sunday schools, with an aggregate attendance of 2114. All these churches have houses of worship, the total valuation of which is $238,000. All the churches have pastors, whose salaries aggregate $16,300, the average being $2334. The gain in churches during the last decade has been two; in members 837." At this rate how long will it take the Congregationalists to save the world.?

In connection with the death of Mother Superior Mary Joseph O'Leary at Baltimore, comes the story that Cardinal Gibbons has been seeing visions. During his address at the funeral he related this singularly able yarn: He said he was sitting in his room the other night and fell asleep. He dreamed that both the late Bishop Thomas Foley of Chicago and Bishop John S. Foley of Detroit appeared before him. The cardinal greeted them and asked how Mother Mary Joseph was. Both bishops replied: "She has passed away." Cardinal Gibbons thought no more of his dream until next morning, when he received a message saying that the mother superioress had died the night before. The suspicion is that Mr. Gibbons is trying to boom himself as a medium, and if the plan succeeds the residents of Baltimore may shortly see on the walls of the episcopal residence a shingle bearing the legend, "James Cardinal Gibbons, clairvoyant. Deceased bishops interviewed at $4 per seance; saints, $1 extra."

SCHWEINFURTH, the messiah, and his followers have been holding a ten-days' convention at the establishment called "Heaven" in Rockford, Ill. About one hundred people were reported to be in attendance, and all slept under the same roof. Inasmuch as there are sleeping accommodations for only about thirty, the "Angels" were rather crowded, but Schweinfurth said that all were pure-minded and free from any worldly passion, and they could therefore all be accommodated very well. It is sufficient for the present to merely inquire, "What Shall the Harvest Be?" and await developments. At last accounts there had been a violent row in these angelic quarters on account of a woman named Rogers who declares she is Eve reincarnated, and therefore the mother of the whole human race. All of which comes properly labeled "Christianity."

THE SAN FRANCISCO FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The meeting of the San Francisco Freethought Society, Sunday evening, April 6, at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, will be addressed by Mrs. Addie L. Ballou on the subject, "Is Man Immortal?"

THE SCHOOL QUESTION.

They have in Wisconsin a school law, called the Bennett law, which makes attendance at schools where rudimentary English instruction is given twelve weeks in the year compulsory upon all children between the ages of seven and fourteen years. The law has no reference to parochial or private schools, and does not attempt in any way to interfere with them; it merely directs that three months' instruction shall be in English.

A fight against this law is being made by the Roman Catholics and German Lutherans, who claim that it is aimed at parochial and other religious schools, as possibly it may be, since in some of those schools the instruction is in German instead of English. The bishops take the anarchistic ground that the state has no right whatever to make education in any language compulsory, and the war is waxing hot. The question has entered politics, the Republicans espousing the Bennett law, while the Democrats have secured the alliance of both Lutherans and Catholics by opposing it, and the fight will be an important factor in both municipal and state elections.

Concerning the policy of the state in enforcing attendance at public or private schools there will always be great difference of opinion, but if the state has the right to thus compel attendance, its right to prescribe the form of education would seem to follow as a natural consequence. But there is strong argument against the state having this right. The opponents of state education argue that the decision must hinge on the question whether children belong to the state or to the parents. If to the state, then the state is bound to support them, and parents are under no obligation in the matter whatsoever. If, on the other hand, children belong to the parents, and parents may be compelled to support them when able to do so, then the state has no right to interfere with the children's education, the right to control going with the obligation to support. The state is represented by public officers, and these public officers are alleged to be servants of the people. Such being the fact, shall parents turn their children over to their servants to be educated otherwise than as those parents desire? It would beyond doubt be infinitely better for the pupil if every child of Catholic parents could be educated in correct history, in science, and in the rights of citizenship by a well-ordered public school system. So it was infinitely better for the African to be brought to America and civilized than left in his native savage state. Nevertheless our right to bring him here forcibly is denied, and the act punished as a species of piracy. How much difference is there between the two cases? If we violate the rights of parents, even to benefit their children, how far are we from practicing the Jesuitical precept which allows evil to be done that good may come? Thus might argue the individualist, the philosophical anarchist, and even the disciples of the eminent Mr. Herbert Spencer.

In taking, practically, this same ground the Catholic bishops of Milwaukee present a change of front. The Catholic plea has heretofore been for a division of school moneys. Now the right of the state to tax the citizen for the support of schools is wholly denied. In this the Catholics may be as viciously right as in other matters they are viciously wrong, but with no public schools, and with the present prolific increase of Catholic children, we should soon see an increase of illiteracy more than equalling inversely the advance of education in the past. With the public school out of the field as a competitor, the establishment of parochial schools would languish. The church would educate only those designed for the priesthood, and ignorance among Catholics would be as near universal as the ecclesiastical powers could make it. For they do not establish parochial schools for the purpose of education, but to draw pupils from the public schools, where what they learn is calculated to make them anything but dupes of the superstition-mongers. The policy of the church is to create an ignorant many to be led by the learned and crafty few. If she cared for education in a general sense, she would be glad to have her own schools supplemented by the public schools.

The religious war in Wisconsin will not, probably, be confined to that state. The issue will be carried into other states, and all the intelligence and the best statesmanship of the country will be needed to meet and settle it in accordance with the principles of right and religious liberty.

A CHEEKY PROPOSITION.

The Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, secretary of the Sabbath Association, has forwarded to this office a copy of his "Reform Syniccate's Quarterly Special," being a lot of articles written by such lights of literature as Mr. Crafts himself, Anthony Comstock, the Rev. Joseph Cook, and other representatives of compulsory religion. Mr. Crafts offers to forward this "Special" fortnightly at the rate of eight dollars per annum, giving us the privilege of publishing the articles as original contributions to FREETHOUGHT; or "they may be adopted as editorials, omitting signatures if desired." This is about as impudent a proposition as we have ever been unfortunate enough to run across; but we accept it on one condition, namely, that the Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts shall print in his "Special" a fortnightly article, such as we will furnish him, on the subjects discussed by his contributors. If he agrees to this proposal any article he may select shall be published in FREETHOUGHT, and he shall have his money in advance.

By the way, why does John Wanamaker allow Mr. Crafts to send his advertising circular through the mails without postage stamps?

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS.

Raymond, April 16; Grub Gulch, April 17, 18, and 19; Fresno Flats, April 20, 21, 22, 23 and 24.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF, AND IT DOESN'T.

In March, 1827, there were 1927 laborers in the city of Edinburgh, Scotland, who reported themselves out of work to an Executive Committee chosen to investigate the wants of the unemployed. Following is the official report of the committee:

"State of the Unemployed Operatives resident in Edinburgh, who are supplied with work by a Committee constituted for that purpose, according to a list made up on Wednesday, the 14th of March, 1827.

"The number of unemployed operatives who have been remitted by the Committee for work, up to the 14th of March, are	1481
"And the number of cases they have rejected, after having been particularly investigated, for being bad characters, giving in false statements, or being only a short time out of work, etc., etc., are	446
Making together,	1927

"Besides these, several hundreds have been rejected by the Committee, as, from the applicants' own statements, they were not considered as cases entitled to receive relief, and were not, therefore remitted for investigation.

"The wages allowed is 5s. per week, with a peck of meal to those who have families. Some youths are only allowed 3s. of wages.

"The particular occupations of those sent to work are as follows:— 242 masons, 643 labourers, 66 joiners, 19 plasterers, 76 sawyers, 19 slaters, 45 smiths, 40 painters, 36 tailors, 55 shoemakers, 20 gardeners, 229 various trades. Total 1481."

The above account is found in an old book entitled "The Constitution of Man Considered in Relation to External Objects," written by George Combe about the year 1835. It is of considerable interest just now when the unemployed-labor problem is again to the front, and it is instructive as showing the extent to which wages have increased in the past sixty years. It seems that in 1827 laborers were glad to get work at five shillings, or about $1.25, per week, which is exactly the price per day that San Francisco's unemployed have so recently refused to accept. Edinburgh at that time had 112,000 population and was a city five hundred years old. San Francisco, at one-fifteenth the age of Edinburgh, has achieved three times the population the latter city then had, and about the same condition industrially. But it appears that the authorities of the Scottish capital thought the day of idleness among the poor was a good time to return to them some of the taxes they had previously paid to the municipality. The authorities of our favored city, however, think otherwise. Not only does San Francisco declare itself unable to give work to the unemployed, but, through the mayor, it takes occasion to return to the donors funds contributed for that purpose from other sources.

Thus, as stated in the heading of this article, history repeats itself, and it doesn't.

ILL luck seems to have followed the Owen family. Several years ago Robert Dale Owen, well known for his writings on political economy and social science, became absorbed in the study of Spiritualism. He believed that he saw the spirit of a beloved girl appear nightly, and when it was proved that this spirit was only a very material damsel who lent herself to the fraud for hire he sickened and died. Now his brother, Professor Richard Owen, perishes miserably by drinking embalming-fluid in mistake for mineral water.—Chronicle.

This is indeed a remarkable discovery, since by it we are instructed that to mistake a living person for a dead one is as fatal as to mistake embalming-fluid for mineral water, and that both errors come under the general head of "ill luck." Still, since Robert Dale Owen died a natural death, while Richard was accidentally poisoned, it is difficult to trace any marked fatality in the family, except that both of the Owen brothers have the ill-luck to be dead. But that is a misfortune which no family can hope to escape, not even that of the editor of the Chronicle.

PROFESSOR HUXLEY has recently written an article for the Nineteenth Century, republished in the Popular Science Monthly for April, in which he endeavors to demonstrate the natural inequality of men. He quotes the Declaration of Independence as affirming that "all men are born free and equal," and proceeds to demolish that statement, his misquotation furnishing the larger amount of the material for criticism. As a matter of fact, the Declaration says nothing about how men are born, and does not declare that they are free at birth. The affirmation is that they are "created equal," which was doubtless intended as a denial of the notion that men should always remain either rulers or slaves because of slave or royal ancestors. Human equality is not an accomplished fact in any sense, but because it is not is no reason why it should not be sometime. The theory is at least a good one to work upon.

MRS. ADDIE L. BALLOU, president of the Nationalist Club, has certainly made a good point against the city authorities. In a recent editorial on methods of relief for the unemployed, the Daily Report said:

"The city is powerless to do anything. No matter how dire the distress might be, the city would be unable to take any steps toward relieving it."

Whereupon Mrs. Ballou answers with the query:

"If the city has no authority to act legitimately for its unemployed wards, what is its authority for refusing the proffered aid of $3000 from the bounty of a sister city that could and did make ours the bestowal from a general fund?"

We leave the editor of the Daily Report and Mayor Pond in the hole where Mrs. Ballou has put them. There seems to be no way for them to get out.

THE deceased Rudolph Meyer, renegade Jew, ravisher, Roman Catholic, and finally a suicide, wrote a letter to the public just previous to his death in which he attacked a prominent citizen of San Jose because the latter reads FREETHOUGHT and does not believe in God. And yet Meyer, not reading FREETHOUGHT, and believing in God, was everything that people call contemptible, while the man he denounced is respected by all whose good opinion is worth having.

Mr. JOHN E. REMSBURG proposes to come to California soon, and would be glad to hear from Liberals desiring his services as a lecturer. His address is Oak Mills, Kansas.

LEWIS OLSON, of Deep River, Wash., will please accept the thanks of the Freethought Publishing Company for stock transferred back to the company as a gift.

THE Investigator says that there is $30,000,000 worth of un-taxed church property in Boston.

OBSERVATIONS.

Many persons who attended the meeting of the Freethought Society last Sunday evening declared that Mrs. Krekel's address was the most eloquent they had ever heard, and no doubt they were right. I expect there is not in the ranks of Freethought, or in the ranks of anything else, another woman who so combines the reasoning faculty with good judgment as to what ought to be said, and the power to express it in language that so carries an idea into the head that a legible impression is made on the mind. Her thoughts are mainly original, and she presents her subjects in fresh attire. Yet she makes things so plain that the hearer wonders why he had not thought of that before.

The address was preceded by a song by Miss Evangeline Ballou. President Putnam introduced the speaker with appropriate remarks, and the audience, which filled the hall more than full, listened with pleased attention for an hour and a quarter while Mrs. Krekel argued out the points involved under the general head of "Natural Morality Superior to Theological Restraint." The applause was almost continuous. I make no attempt to epitomize the address, because those who heard it would pronounce the attempt a failure, and those destined to hear it will enjoy it all the more from not knowing what to expect.

After another song, and remarks by the chairman, but twenty minutes were left for discussion. Mr. Thomas Curtis offered some reflections on the Louisville disaster of the past week, and then a stranger amused the audience at his own expense until time was called.

The card for April is out. On the 6th Mrs. Addie Ballou's subject will be "Is Man Immortal?" April 13, S. P. Putnam speaks on "Spiritualism Not Science;" April 20th "Christianity" will be talked about by Mrs. A. Lindal, and on the 27th Messrs. H. L. Knight and P. Healy are announced to debate about "The Good and Evil of the Roman Catholic Church."

A cordial invitation is extended to all.

I desire space in these columns to correct the misapprehension that Lilian Leland is identical with Mrs. M. The facts are quite otherwise. Some time ago she consented to be a sister to me, and another member of the family concurring, the relationship was entered into by the usual process. It is not a failure.

The Bancroft Company have just issued a new poem from their press. It is entitled "Mankind," and Mr. H. Tintrop wrote it. Here is the opening stanza:

Ha, mighty Lord! who am I?
What plan hast Thou Supreme with me?
What's the reason I am here
Among tigers and monkeys?
And why am I created?

I know Mr. Tintrop to be the original possessor of this poem, because he submitted it to me in manuscript for an estimate of the cost of printing it, and to show me its quality he read the lines I have reproduced above. He is a German, and this is the way the poem sounded:

Ach, mighty Lort! Oo vas I?
Vot blan ast dow subreme mit me?
Vot's der h'reason I was here
Mong deigers and mongies?
Unt vy vas I created?

Then, as a rhetorical flourish, he added, "Alretty," though that is not in the poem.

Mr. Tintrop's elocution struck me so forcibly that in studying his poem I cannot separate the printed from the spoken words, and his accent runs through the work as I read it. Here are four other lines. As written they read:

Quickly down
The angel rushed on cherub wings,
And provided first
Some other things.

Totally unmusical and uninteresting in arbitrary English, how these words gather attractiveness from the author's voice:

Kervickly down
Dot anchel h'rushed on cheerup wings,
Unt browided feerst
Some oder dings.

These samples show how the thing is done. Here are more examples for practice. Reflecting upon the disadvantages under which man is produced, our poet says:

Only born jumps so happy
Every lamb around its mother;
Only born finds alone every chick
Its bit of fodder.
Only now the human child —
This fork beast,
And perhaps
The Creator's
Most finished piece of work—
Cannot move one step ahead,
Nor talk;
Must first learn how to eat
And how to walk.

Again:

Science's heroes and bigot impostors
Lived savage-like—
Bloodthirsty and always in dispute—
And Old Age's prophecy
Did cry
Rooster-like,
In the early morning sky.

Any one can see how much better these extracts would take with a crowd if the author read them than they would if rendered by an ordinary elocutionist. The poet reveals his misanthropy in the words:

Canst thou lie and steal,
And betray thy friendly host.
Thou are'st here a welcome guest,
Deceive, swear false, and flatter;
Put oil on fires instead of water;
Plunge daggers in the backbone of mankind.

Perhaps the best place to stop is right here, where we have before us the spectacle of mankind with a dagger in its backbone marching down the aisles of time. Mr. Tintrop's poem, as a roaring absurdity, is worth fifteen cents, but considered in any other light it is not worth anything.

The Nationalist movement here looks as large from a distance as when closely viewed. The Boston magazine, the "Nationalist," says: "Immense meetings are held in San Francisco in the Metropolitan Temple, and flowers and flags are displayed in abundance. Rev. Samuel Freuder has taken up the Nationalist cause to that extent that he has given up his synagogue and is devoting himself to preaching to both Jew and gentile the gospel of Nationalism." I surmise that Rabbi Freuder is the "Nationalist's" San Francisco correspondent.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The post-office clerks of San Francisco have adopted resolutions asking for an eight-hour day and a two-weeks vacation annually.—The religious-crank nuisance in Oakland is being abated. Prophet Erickson's imprisonment in the asylum did the business.—Rudolph Mayer, the San Pablo suicide, against whom action for criminal assault was recently begun in San Jose was a Jew converted to Catholicism.—The Prohibitionists of Alameda county held a convention in Oakland last Saturday. They passed a mixed set of resolutions condemning high license, trusts, and monopolies, and indorsing ballot reform, restriction of immigration, and the Women's Christian Temperance Union.—The late Miss Kate Kennedy left $10,000 in trust to Judge Maguire to be devoted to the propagation of the Single Tax idea.—A Nationalist club has been organized in Petaluma.—The Nationalists met on the evening of March 27 to elect delegates to the state convention to be held April 7 and 8. Following are the persons chosen: Albert Currlin, Thomas V. Cator, Mrs. Addie L. Ballou, J. L. Carter, E. D. Wheeler, J. L. Hunsaker, F. D. Jackson, Dr. H. C. French, James F. Cheeswright, Dr. Carl Walliser, W. T. Forsman, Benjie B. Haskell, Evangeline Ballou, Otto Blankart, Dr. I. W. Moliere, R. I. Wilmot, Burnette G. Haskell, Mrs. H. R. Houghton, Col. T. G. Ashton, P. R. Martin, J. C. Gore, B. W. Batchelor, Harry Hambly, Dr. W. Botsford, Julia Schlesinger, Miss Mate Hildebrande, Dr. N. Russel, Mrs. S. J. Howard. There were 85 delegates nominated, and the process of electing the above 28 occupied the attention of the meeting from 8 o'clock in the evening until daylight the next morning. The discussion is said to have been animated.—There were 600 deaths in San Francisco during the month of March—129 more than in March of last year.

The damage done by last week's tornado in the East is almost beyond computation. The storm extended from Dakota to Texas, and from Nebraska to Ohio, Kentucky being the greatest sufferer. In Louisville the devastation was appalling, millions of dollars' worth of property being destroyed and a hundred lives lost. It was the most destructive storm known to the century.—The state treasurer of Maryland, named Archer, is a defaulter in the sum of $500,000.—At his second trial in Raleigh, N.C., the Rev. Father Boyle was acquitted of the charge of criminally assaulting his domestic.—The Rev. Alexander Smith was in court at Trenton, N. J., March 29 for stealing a pocketbook.—Richard McNichols, sexton of a Catholic church in Baltimore, Md., shot his priest, the Rev. Lenneghan, at a funeral the other day. The cause of the shooting is concealed.—A Catholic convent at Milwaukee, Wis., was burnt last Monday. Several of the inmates sustained fatal injuries.—Ex-Sheriff Flack of New York has been sentenced to two months in the county jail and fined $500 for seeking a fraudulent divorce.

A rumor is current that Queen Victoria will abdicate the British throne in favor of the prince of Wales.—The Liverpool dock strike, involving thousands of men, has been settled by the intercession of Michael Davitt.—Trieste, in Austria, is the latest locality offered to the pope as a place of residence.

THE WOMAN'S NATIONAL LIBERAL UNION.

ORGANIZED AT WASHINGTON, D. C., FEB. 27, 1890.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Inclosed please find the organization of the new Liberal Society, its objects, resolutions, etc. I hope you will give them publicity in your paper. I think you will find the resolutions of a very radical nature, and the objects stated even more radical than those of any other society yet formulated. I find Mrs. Krekel in unison with the W. N. L. U., and I hope to see your paper with notice of the convention. I expect to issue a pamphlet report, but am hindered by not getting the material from the stenographer. Very truly yours,
MATILDA JOSLYN GAGE.

Fayetteville, N. Y., March 25, 1890.

THE CONVENTION—WHY IT WAS HELD.

For several reasons the woman suffrage reform advances slowly. Men trained from infancy by the church to a belief in woman's inferiority are loth to concede her capable of self-government. Four new states have recently been admitted to the Union, neither one possessing a republican form of government as required by the federal constitution; neither one recognizing the right of self-government as inhering in its women citizens. Of Wyoming, now seeking statehood, with a constitution providing for woman suffrage, the press declares that an applicant for admission, coming with this condition, may not find the entrance into statehood thereby facilitated, but because of it "may be discovered by wary congressmen to have insufficient population." Such lessons as these should not be lost upon woman.

Existing woman-suffrage societies have ceased to be progressive. The new-comers, and many of the old ones, fear to take an advance step, and from motives of business and social policy cater to their worst enemy, the church. We therefore deem a broader platform necessary in order to reach the many-sided thought of the country; to more clearly show the cause of delay in the recognition of woman's demands; and to promote fearlessness in denunciation of that cause.

Again: A crisis in the nation's life is at hand. The encroachments of "The Christian Party in Politics," composed of both Catholics and Protestants—its aim a union of church and state—were never as great as at the present time. The decrees of the Plenary council, held in Baltimore, 1884, the speeches and resolutions of the recent Catholic congress in the same city, the effort towards parochial schools, etc., show the drift of Catholic thought in this direction; but to no greater extent than is the like purpose of Protestant effort made known by the work of the National Reform Association, the American Sabbath Union, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the discussions, canons, and resolutions of state and national ministerial bodies, together with the various bills before Congress for religious education in schools, Sunday Rest, etc.

Therefore, not alone to aid her own enfranchisement—valueless without religious liberty—but in order to help preserve the very life of the republic, it is imperative that women should unite upon a platform of opposition to the teaching and aim of that ever most unscrupulous enemy of freedom—the church.

OBJECTS.

First. To assert woman's natural rights to self-government, to show cause of delay in the recognition of her demands, and to promote fearlessness in the denunciation of such cause.

Second. To preserve the secular nature of our government and the principles of civil and religious liberty now incorporated in the federal constitution, and to arouse public thought to the imminent danger of a union of church and state through a proposed amendment to the constitution the object of which is to recognize the Christian religion as the foundation of our government and the true basis of our laws.

Third. To show that the real foundation of the church is the doctrine of woman's inferiority by reason of her original sin—a doctrine which we denounce as false in science and its foundation a theological myth.

RESOLUTIONS.

1. That it is essential to the life of the republic that the purely civil character of the government be maintained and that church and state be forever kept separate; that the legal foundation of our government is not any creed of Christendom, nor any authority of the church, nor a divine revelation, but it is simply the consent of the governed; that the state has not grown out of the church, but should outgrow the need of any church and be henceforth and forever independent of the church.

2. That the efforts now made by the Christian party to bring religion into politics in order to place a religious amendment in the constitution of the United States must be resisted, because the success of such efforts would make the church the arbiter of the legislative functions of the government and place dangerous irresponsible power in the hands of the priesthood.

3. That according to the principles of the government of the United States of America, the church and state are and must be forever kept separate. The state should govern its civil affairs, give its protection to every form of religious belief, and secure freedom from molestation to every sect in the exercise of its religious sentiments, and therefore any amendment to the constitution proposed by the so-called Christian party in politics is destructive of existing civil liberty and should be energetically opposed.

4. That the real endeavor of the Christian party in politics is to establish a papacy in place of the present secular form of government of the United States; that a papacy does not alone mean a pope's one-man power in the church, nor a claim of infallibility, nor an immoral pretense of power to bind or loose sin, nor the celebration of mass, nor use of holy water, nor the making of marriage a sacrament, nor the doctrine of extreme unction, nor consecrated ground for burial, nor the claim of any number of sacraments, nor the establishment of parochial schools to teach children what they cannot understand, nor a celibate priesthood, nor any form of theological doctrine regarding heaven, hell, or purgatory; but that a papacy is any church asserting divine authority for its teachings and therefore claiming the right to exercise civil power—whether that church call itself Roman, Greek, Anglican, or Protestant.

5. That the centralization of power, whether in the church or in the state, is dangerous to civil liberty and to individual rights, and therefore all attempts toward such centralization, either in church or state, must be constantly and firmly opposed.

6. That as our nation is composed of people holding various and conflicting religious views, Roman Catholics disagreeing with Protestant forms, both disagreeing with Jewish rites, and the Agnostic holding to no defined system, therefore it is wrong and unjust to impose religious instruction of any kind upon the pupils of our common schools, and in simple justice to all people we denounce and oppose every kind of religious instruction in our public schools.

7. That the great principle of the Protestant Reformation, namely, the right of individual conscience and judgment heretofore claimed and exercised by man alone, should also be claimed and exercised by woman, who in her interpretation of the scriptures should be guided by her own reason and not by the authority of any church or creed.

8. That as the first duty of every individual is self-development, the lessons of self-sacrifice and obedience taught woman by the Christian church have been fatal not only to her own vital interests but through her to the vital interests of the race.

9. That every church is the enemy of liberty and progress and the chief means of enslaving woman's conscience and reason, and therefore as the first and most necessary step towards her emancipation we should free her from the bondage of the church.

10. That the Christian church, of whatever name, is based on the theory that woman was created secondary and inferior to man and brought sin into the world, thus necessitating the sacrifice of a savior. That Christianity is false and its foundation a myth which every discovery in science shows to be as baseless as its former belief that the earth was flat.

11. That morality is not theology, but has a basis independent of "thou shalt" and "thou shalt not," that right is right and wrong is wrong, not because any being in the universe so declares, but in the nature of things, the origin of right being in truth and not in authority.

12. That we seek the truth, come whence it may and lead where it will; with the Greek Plato we deem nothing so beautiful as truth; with Hindu Mahajah we believe no religion can excel the truth; and with the American Lucretia Mott we accept "truth for authority and not authority for truth."

Officers: Matilda Joslyn Gage, president, Fayetteville, N. Y.; Josephine Cables Aldrich, vice-president, Aldrich, Ala.; Mary Emily Bates Coues, Cor. Sec., 1726 N street, Washington, D. C.; W. F. Aldrich, treasurer, Aldrich, Ala.; Mrs. Mecca Hoffman, Enterpriser, Kan.; Susan H. Wixon, Fall River, Mass.; Marietta M. Bones, Webster, South Dakota; Eliza Archard Connor, 34 Vesey street, New York; Clara S. Foltz, San Diego, Cal.

PAPAL LOGIC.

There must be something wrong with the pope's head, if he is the author of a statement now hanging on to his name. But there you are, you never know when it is the pope who speaks and when it is another man. However that may be for the present, the pope is said to be pleased with the prosperity of his church in free countries, and to be displeased with its condition in Italy, where, so it is said, he thinks he ought to have temporal control; not for its own sake but for the sake of the church, that its condition may be as good in Italy as in free countries like America and England. Now this, when you look at it, is seen to be a good deal mixed. If the church is prosperous in America and England and in all other free countries, then plainly temporal power in the hands of the church is not necessary to her prosperity. But the world has been told over and over again with anathemas that it is. Popes who were infallible have said so; and yet it turns out not to be so. Take the other side. The church in Italy does not prosper as she does elsewhere. What is the reason? We must find it out, before we attempt a remedy, or we may apply the wrong remedy. The proposal of the pope is that temporal power should be given to him. But how do we know that that would be a remedy, since elsewhere, as in America and in England, to wit, without temporal power in the hands of the church she prospers so greatly? Perhaps in Italy the remedy would be not in a change of the center of temporal power, but in a better aspect of the present secular government of Italy towards the church. Perhaps the church's state there is due to the fact that a change of soil is needed. Italy has been so long cropped with the papal church that the soil no longer answers to the call made upon it. Do not blame the government; do not change the seat of power. Whatever you do, do not run against the rash conclusion that because the church does very well in free countries therefore all that she wants for her prosperity in Italy is for her to be armed with temporal power. This vessel does not hold water.—Brisbane Week.

FACTS ABOUT THE CONVEXITY OF THE EARTH'S SURFACE.

[One Professor Speer has recently lectured in Hillsboro, Or., on what he calls "Koreshan astronomy." His theory is that the earth is a hollow globe, and that we are living inside of it. This doctrine is not new to us. The Rev. Cyrus R. Teed, of the famous "Bennett-Teed Discussion," preached it, and gave plausible reasons for the faith that was in him. Professor Speer is doubtless one of his converts. The following article by a subscriber of FREETHOUGHT subjects the theory to the test of science. The article contains also much that is instructive and valuable to know.—ED. FREETHOUGHT.]

PROFESSOR SPEER ANALYZED.

MR. M. R. CHENEY, Dear Sir: Your kind favor in loaning me the pamphlet of R. O. Speer, called "Koreshan Astronomy," is duly appreciated, but I hardly think one is repaid for the time spent in its perusal. His indiscriminate attack upon the Copernican system of astronomy is of such baseless character that it will elicit no attention or reply from one of the astronomers of any standing, for this reason: Many of the theories put forth by them, which he makes such a great show in attacking, are only put forth as the most reasonable conclusion that they can draw from the facts observed; and that they are patient, even laborious, collectors of facts, only a perusal of some of their works will convince any unprejudiced reader. As to the distances given to the sun, planets, etc., we must remember that the observers are working under great disadvantages, but constant improvements are being made in their instruments and methods, and better results are now obtained than ever before. We have good reason to believe that the results now obtained in measuring the solar distance is very nearly correct, and that the methods are correct is capable of mathematical demonstration, but whatever inaccuracies exist are known to no one better than the observers themselves, and they are striving to overcome them.

But this pamphlet puts forth a new system, if it can be called a system, which he claims is the correct one, but a careful analysis of it discloses the fact that he depends upon reflection of light and optical illusion for an explanation of the many facts which can be arrayed against his system (so-called).

His whole system is based upon the theory that the earth is a hollow globe and that we are on the inside, or concave surface, instead of the convex surface, and this theory he proves by one experiment or observation, and to this experiment I shall devote my attention. We find this experiment on page 51, and I quote: "Take a boat; go out on a lake or the ocean far enough, so the field of vision will be clear. Then adjust a post with a spirit level to an absolute perpendicular. On this perpendicular post, fasten a smooth board ten or twenty feet long, and use a spirit level to make the board perfectly horizontal and at right angles to the post. Now you have a perpendicular and a horizontal, and the board is at right angles with the post. It is all nonsense to say that this is not a sure test. Every person must admit that you can place the board at right angles with the perpendicular post by the use of either two spirit levels or a square. When the board is properly adjusted, step to one end of the board and bring the eye on a level with the board. In the distance the water or land comes upon a level with the eye.....step to the other end of the board and bring your eye on a level with it, and the water in the distance will come up and meet the eye. Now you have looked over ten or twenty feet of a straight line both ways. The result is the line.....is a straight line and not a broken one. If you will turn your board to every point of the compass and look both ways over it, you will have a circular horizon of which you are the center. If you are twenty feet from the water, the basin is twenty feet deep. A straight edge at any height, if made horizontal to the plane of the water on which its base rests, will cut the water in both directions if continued each way; this proves concavity instead of convexity or a plane surface. All measuring instruments demonstrate that the vortex or horizon is on a level with the eye in every direction of the compass; hence we cannot be on a convex surface. The highest anyone has ever been is 25,000 feet, and the distance to the rim of the basin is one hundred and ninety-eight miles from the point of vision, and the basin is 25,000 feet deep." Yet he admits that one looking at a ship coming in sees first the top of the mast, then more of the mast, and finally the hull. But he must account for this some way, so he assumes that a line of refraction starts from the point where the eye meets the surface, and beyond that the objects appear lower than their true position, and objects on the earth's surface beyond this line disappear. This is the most vague, incomprehensible, and inconsistent theory that I have ever had the misfortune to encounter, and can only become necessary when one is hard pressed to account for something that absolutely demolishes his so-called facts. His colossal assumption is brought out plainly by the above quotation and I unhesitatingly assert that the so-called test is no test at all. As my avocation requires a thorough practical knowledge of measuring instruments I think I may be qualified to speak as to their testimony.

I repudiate his experiment utterly, and give my reasons for so doing. First, the ordinary carpenter's spirit level is not infallible on account of its two imperfections, that is, the want of sensitiveness in the bubble, and the imperfect means of prolonging the level line when determined. I have tried a foundation laid and leveled by a mason's or carpenter's spirit level, and found that one-eighth to five-sixteenths of an inch error can easily be made in the length of 50 feet, even under careful management; and after careful examination of the levels used by ordinary builders, I am prepared to say that the most sensitive one I ever saw will not detect an error of less than one foot in two thousand, and so will be utterly worthless in trying to find a curvature that amounts to but two inches in half a mile or six feet in three miles.

Again, if the level was an accurate one the board must be straight, and until the professor has tried it he cannot realize the difficulty there is in getting one that is even approximately straight. He may take a dozen boards to an expert joiner and have him to make "straight edges" of them, and then compare them together, and he will find that they will not go together easily, and in short, any one of them will prove all the rest to be crooked, only to a small extent, it may be, but, nevertheless, so inaccurate as to be utterly worthless in making any scientific observation. It was not ten years ago that the workmen in one of our factories announced that they had at last succeeded in making a straight edge, 10 feet long, in which there was no probable error greater than one twelve-thousandth of an inch. This may surprise our learned professor, but the scientists have long known and are sparing no pains to eliminate these mechanical imperfections, and any work treating upon astronomy that gives any treatise upon the instruments used in the observatories goes to great length to bring out these mechanical defects and to instruct the student as to the best means to guard against the errors caused by them, and there is far more time spent by the manufacturers of these instruments in making devices to aid the observer to detect these fundamental errors in instruments than in the making of the telescope itself.

But after the board is leveled perfectly and proved to be a straight edge—and this is really the simplest operation involved—I still repudiate the observation, for the reason that a board is about the poorest thing that could be thought of with which to prolong a level line, after it is determined, for the reason that the eye can not take into view all at once three objects situated as in the observation given. To do this the eye must be focused so as to take into perfect view an object 1 or 2 feet distant, another 21 or 22 feet distant, and another 3 or 4 miles distant—something that a very simple test will prove to be impossible. If in this observation you look at the end of the board nearest you the farther end and the horizon will be blurred and indistinct; if at the farther end of the board the nearest end and the horizon will be blurred; if you look at the horizon the board will be blurred. I am not theorizing on this, for I know what I am talking about, and any one can test it for himself. I have good eyes and have trained them to this very work of prolonging lines, and I know that I cannot prolong a straight line without the use of a telescope; and furthermore I have found no one else that can. I have tried this in city surveying by sighting along the side of a building and locating a flagrod some three or four hundred feet away, and I find that the telescope will always reveal an error (sometimes more and sometimes less); and furthermore my right eye and my left eye do not agree, so that very little reliance can be placed on such tests.

But there is a way by which this can be tested, and I have been brought face to face with this very problem and can say without hesitation that the surface of the earth is convex, and every practical civil engineer will bear me out in saying it. The solar compass itself will prove the convexity of the earth's surface to any man of common sense. But there is still another instrument that is a better witness, and that is the engineer's level. This is the most indisputably accurate of the portable instruments in use, and is capable of almost faultless work. There are certain means by which we can run a level line, no matter whether the curvature is the one way or the other, and the instrument is fitted for its work, so that no one will question its correctness; and it furnishes also the means of testing this curvature question. Any civil engineer who has ever tried it knows that if he runs a level line a mile in a straight line and then turns back on his starting-point his reading will not agree with its calculated height. His level will invariably strike too high, or in other words the object he sights at will be below its calculated height. Yet he has run the mile by equal fore and back sights, thus balancing all errors of distance (or curvature) and refraction. He may continue his forward movements and run a circle of fifty miles and close on his bench mark with an error of less than one-tenth of a foot, yet he cannot eradicate this disagreement and is forced to admit that if observation is worth anything at all he has run a line on the convex surface of a sphere. I have sighted both ways across the Columbia river where it is over a mile wide and my work would not close by more than 1.5 feet, and the deviation was downward. Thus suppose I have a bench mark on the west side of the river. My level being set up on the west side, I sight to the leveling-rod held up on the bench mark; it reads 6.4 feet. I then direct the level to the bench mark on the east side of the river, and the reading is 5.9 feet; therefore (taking no account of the curvature) we would say at a glance that the bench mark on the east side is .5 foot higher than the one on the west side. I then cross over, set up near and sight at the rod held on the bench mark on the east side and find that my level reads 4.2 feet; then I sight across again to the rod on the bench mark on the west side and find that my reading is 6.3 feet, which would indicate that the east bench mark is 2.1 feet higher than the one on the west bank. Here there is a disagreement of 1.6 feet, and proves that the curvature is convex and our learned Koreshan astronomer is undeniably mistaken.

But he goes further and says that "all measuring instruments demonstrate that the vortex or horizon is on a level with the eye." Now he is either ignorant of the facts or is dishonest. But he may ask, "If your engineer's level shows a falling away from instead of approaching to a straight line of the earth's surface, why will not the board test show it?" Simply because the curvature is so slight that you cannot detect it by such a crude observation; and I will turn his own book against him. On page 27 he says that "it is a fact, yes, a law, that opaque bodies by perspective come to a point in just 3000 times their diameter." So if the board is six feet above the surface of the water, then an object at the horizon three miles off, if 5.28 feet in diameter, would appear as a point. Place another object of the same size above this and you simply superimpose one point upon another and it still would be a point, and this can be repeated indefinitely and still you would have a point and nothing more, for a point is position merely, without length, breadth, or thickness, so that you cannot add to the diameter of a point by placing beside it another point which has no diameter. Thus you could not make anything out of spheres of that size, at that distance, except a point. I do not say this is correct, but it is "Koreshan philosophy" logically carried out. But this I do say, that in sighting over this board he could not determine the true level line within ten feet in that distance. In other words, he could not determine at that distance whether an object sighted at is ten feet above, or below, or directly on the level line.

He says also that no one has been higher than 25,000 feet, and that the rim of the basin on a level with the eye was 198 miles distant. By whose authority, pray? Not the men who have made the ascent, for I have yet to find out any modern explorer who has seen such startling evidence of this concavity. While I have not ascended to such a height, yet I have been up on some pretty good hills and had some curiosity to test this convex theory, and my observation is exactly opposite to what he says. Thus at the snow line on Mt. Adams in Washington the level line from that point strikes about half way up on the snow on Mt. Hood, while the summit of Mt. Jefferson is clear below it. Yet Mt. Jefferson is a snow peak farther south than either Hood or Adams, and the snow line is higher the farther south you go. So that phase of the subject is against the "Koreshan astronomer."

I have already taken up more time than the subject deserves, as this pamphlet is a mere bundle of absurdities not worth a second thought. But I have no doubt the professor finds many to convince and more to confuse and dumfounded by his peculiar ideas. He boasts of his conquests over graduates of Yale and other colleges, but I can inform him that if he will try one well-informed civil engineer he'll find that he will get more hard facts and absolute proof of the Copernican theory than he can get from the whole graduating class of any college in America.

I was away when the professor visited our town, but if he ever comes back I hope to be around, and shall at least ask him a few questions; and I am ready at any time to give him some more of my objections to his theory.

THOS. S. WILKES.

Hillsboro, Or., March 10, 1890.

SENATOR BLAIR DUMFOUNDED.

A delegation of women, says a correspondent of the Truth Seeker, went to the national capitol, February 27th, to interview members of Congress with a view of having two females appointed, as well as two male delegates, to represent industrial and educational interests at the World's Fair, in 1892. Senator Blair, being a woman's rights man, received the delegation with suavity, and began to talk about his educational bill. "I hope," said he, "that you are in sympathy with this measure?"

As no other woman seemed ready to answer the question, Miss Susan H. Wixon, after a pause, responded:

"Well, I do not appreciate the religious part of it."

Senator Blair then said:

"Think of the thousands and thousands of children in this country growing up without knowing whether there is a God or a devil!"

Another pause ensued, when Susan replied:

"Who does know, Senator? Do you?"

Here again was a pause. Such a question had probably never before been put to him by a woman, and perhaps not by a man. What could he say? He appeared to be dumfounded. But fortunately for him at this moment a messenger entered announcing that Vice-President Morton was ready to receive the delegation.

At the Women's Liberal convention, in Washington, Miss Wixon twice read an original poem, each stanza of which ended with "When womanhood awakes." It is to be hoped that Senator Blair will soon realize the fact that there are many women besides Susan H. Wixon who are already awake out of the sleep of superstition.

CHRONICLES OF SIMON CHRISTIANUS.

CHAPTER VI.

GAMMO.*

An Encounter with an Angel.

1. And I looked, and behold there came up out of the sea a very great beast, such an one as was never seen at any time, neither past, present, nor to come. And I looked, and lo, the beast had ten feet that were situate behind, and three that were situate before; even thirteen feet; and it was a very great beast,

2. Yea, a very great beast.

3. And as I looked and wondered, I heard a voice crying to me, saying, Son of man, turn hither thine eyes.

4. And I said, Nay, my lord, how can I turn mine eyes to thee, seeing I cannot see where thou art.

5. And immediately there was a great noise, and I saw an innumerable company of trumpeters with their trumpets; and they cried through their trumpets as with one voice, saying, Go look!

6. So I went and looked, and behold an angel was sitting in one of the ears of the great beast; and I fell down and worshiped.

7. And the angel said unto me, Son of man, understandest thou what thou seest? And I answered and said, No, my lord.

8. Then took he me by the hair of mine head and drew me to him into the beast's ear; and the pain was very great. And I was angered, yea, I was exceeding wroth that he should take me, who was a prophet, by the hair of mine head, and I kicked; yea, I kicked mightily, and fought bitterly with the angel.

9. And the very great beast put up one of its feet to its ear, even the ear in which I fought with the angel, as it were to scratch itself therewith, and I fell out; and, being exceedingly wroth, I gathered up stones, and stoned the beast, and the angel also.

10. And the beast bent down its head, and out of its nostrils issued a very great and fierce snort, and I fled with the swiftness of a wild hart; but the beast overtook me, and the angel took me again by the hair of mine head, and lifted me into one of the beast's ears, even that one on the southern side, but not into that in which he was seated.

11. And when the angel left hold of me I fell down through the beast's ear into a great and spacious chamber beneath, and was filled with astonishment.

12. And I heard the angel speaking unto me, but could not distinguish what he said; and the angel grew angry that I answered him not, and stretched over to see why I answered not.

13. And when he found me not, he stretched himself over and put his head into the chamber into which I had fallen.

14. And I, being still angry, sought about, and finding a spade and a rope, I took the rope and made a loop therewith, and cast it about his neck, and strangled him.

15. And he began to pull back his head vehemently, but I, digging my feet into a great heap of wax, held on valiantly.

16. And in his struggles his feet slipped through the other ear-hole into the chamber; and I ran and quickly bound the other end of the rope about them, so that by this means he could not get into the chamber, or yet get his head or his feet out.

17. And the angel's body was laid across the great beast's head, and his feet were down the one ear-hole and his head down the other, and his head was made fast to his feet by the rope; and when I saw he was secure, I took the spade and began to dig and delve my way out of the beast.

18. And when I began to dig, then did the great beast begin to roar and bellow mightily, and to run about hither and thither, and to kick and to plunge.

19. But I dug away manfully, and after a time I saw daylight; and then I lay down, and put out mine head, and looked about.

20. And lo, the great beast was running about with incredible swiftness and bellowing mightily, and rushing this way and that, like one distraught. And I lay still and took comfort, and folded my arms till he should grow weary.

21. And I took note and found that the beast had seven horns and fifty-two tails; and the horns ploughed up the earth as he ran, and the tails were all erect.*

22. And the angel began to roar and rave violently, and to curse, and to swear, and to shed bitter tears.

23. And I stretched myself out comfortably, and began to sing.

24. And when the beast grew weary and lay down, I crept out, and went my way home and washed myself.—To be Continued.

HOW THE SINGLE TAX WOULD WORK.

We have received questions from two correspondents relative to the working of the Single Tax, which we will answer to the best of our light on the subject, and we will be glad to answer any other questions on the subject which may be offered.

A correspondent in Calaveras county writes that many make a similar inquiry to this:

"When a man has taken up land under the present laws, the new law [Single Tax] comes in force, his land is improved; all the land around him is not; a stranger comes along, and says that land is of such a value—something three times as much as the land around. Must the man that made it of that extra value, pay the extra [?] in order to retain it?"

No; the purpose of the Single Tax is directly the opposite; it is to encourage improvement and discourage speculation.

The present constitution and laws of the state require land and improvements to be separately assessed, and require unimproved land to be valued, as to the land, the same as adjacent land of equal natural capacity. The Single Tax would continue this latter requirement, but abolish all taxes on improvements. The man in question would be called on to pay a tax on what his land would be worth, were it totally unimproved; and the owners of adjacent lands would have to pay the same tax if the lands were of equal value, without reference to improvements. It would pay the owner of the improved land to pay the tax, but it might not pay the others to do so on land which was yielding them no income; if it did not, they would have to improve, sell, or abandon their land, so as to give place to persons who would not only improve said land, but also benefit the pioneer in improvements by enabling him to have neighbors, better schools, and other advantages of social intercourse.

Another correspondent incloses an extract from a communication in the Jackson, Amador county, Dispatch, in which objection is made to the Single Tax, because one man with a seven-story building on his lot would be only taxed the same as a neighbor with a one-story cottage on the adjoining lot, so that while the rich man could readily pay the tax, the poor man could not, and would have to abandon his home. The answer is, that the tax would not be too high for any one to pay who uses the land, either as a residence in towns and cities, or as a cultivator in the country, but it would be high enough to render speculative holdings of land unprofitable. Furthermore, it would gradually lessen the disparity in means and incomes, which render it possible for one man to own a seven-story building with a million of dollars, while his neighbor must necessarily be content with a small cottage. But as things now are, the man who put up a million-dollar building benefits the community in some degree, while if he puts his million of dollars into holding land for speculation (as Stanford, Crocker, and others have into 5,800 acres of land just outside the city), he would be an unmitigated curse. The Single Tax movement is to compel these malefactors (in a general not personal sense) to become benefactors in a degree, while leaving the way open for reforms in other directions that would prevent persons from acquiring more wealth than they could earn by their own labor, skill and legitimate enterprise.

The correspondent of the Dispatch also claims that it is im-

* It is abundantly evident that this very curious chapter has an astronomical reference. The thirteen feet represent the months in a year, the seven horns the days in the week, and the fifty-two tails the weeks in the year.—TRANSLATORS.

* Dedicated to St. Crispin. Our reason for dedicating this singular and eminently mysterious, and therefore prophetic chapter to St. Crispin is as follows: Not being able to decipher the meaning of the title, Gammo, with which the chapter is headed, we showed it to a reverend gentleman who, with appalling irreverence, suggested the addition of another letter, to wit, N. And the summary vengeance inflicted by the saint in question upon the irreverent brute, induced us to dedicate the chapter to him.—TRANSLATORS.

possible to value lands without also valuing the improvements, because "it is the improvements that establish the value of lands." He evidently confounds the improved values of land conferred by the growth of population, on which the Single Tax would be levied, with the value of improvements made by the owner of the land individually, or by voluntary co-operation with his neighbors. That it is not "all bosh to talk of their ever being taxed irrespective of improvements," is disproved by the fact that the laws of the state now provide for such separate valuation, and, so far as we know, the law is carried out, as it has been for many years.

As to taxation of farmers, Mr. Shearman has proved conclusively, by comparing assessed values in several counties in Ohio, classifying rural counties in one batch, and counties containing populous cities in another, that the withdrawal of the taxes on personal property, and their exclusive levy on land values would reduce the taxation of farmers and increase that of city owners of real estate—that is, supposing that the amount of tax to be raised would be the same in each case. We believe that a similar comparison in this state would establish the same conclusion.—Weekly Star.

When Womanhood Awakes.

(Read at the Convention of the Woman's National Liberal Union, in Washington, D. C., February 24, 1890.)

No more shall Error 'round her play
In fitful moods and clouds of gray;
Or cruel fancies crush her down
Where demons wait and furies frown,
When Womanhood awakes.

No more shall bigot turn and rave,
A ranting yet a cringing slave,
At Truth who, in her garments white,
Stands facing ever to the right,
When Womanhood awakes.

No more shall sisters turn aside,
With haughty tread and sullen pride,
From those who walk in clearer light,
Whose keener vision sees the right,
When Womanhood awakes.

No more in abject fear she'll cower,
Before a mitred tyrant power;
Nor grope in darkness, pain, and shame—
A hopeless wretch without a name,
When Womanhood awakes.

No more she'll idly dream away
Life's splendid hours in trifling play,
Nor think the whole of life to be
To lose her own identity,
When Womanhood awakes.

No more the story will be told
By writers young and writers old,
That man but toils till set of sun,
While woman's work is never done,
When Womanhood awakes.

The chains that bind her foot and hand—
That hold her close in every land—
Will drop and crumble in the dust,
By force of their own ancient rust,
When Womanhood awakes.

Her eyes are closed in slumber now,
The poppy-wreath is on her brow;
But soon her night shall change to day
And 'mid the tombs no more she'll stray,
When Womanhood awakes.

In horror will she view the past,
That, vise-like, held her hard and fast.
The coming time her mind shall dower
With vigorous strength and helpful power,
When Womanhood awakes.

The future day shall see her then
Clothed rightly as a citizen,
And she'll behold with judgment clear
The sovereign rights that wait her here,
When Womanhood awakes.

And man shall stand on grander height;
Shall see the truth in larger light;
Shall rise from grovelling in the dust,
To realms where dwell the true and just,
When Womanhood awakes.

And all these things shall surely be,
When Justice reigns from sea to sea;
Fair Freedom then, in fullest measure,
Shall give to each her equal treasure,
When Womanhood awakes.

How gloomy all the Past will seem!
A misty way—a dreadful dream!—
With Superstition's slimy trail
O'er mossy bank and flowery dale,
When Womanhood awakes.

O rosy dawn in eastern skies!
Thy morning light the world supplies!
Joy-bells shall ring from shore to shore;
Anthems shall swell forevermore,
When Womanhood awakes.

—Susan H. Wixon.

THE CASE OF HARMAN.

To the Editors of Freethought:

I am so much pleased with your remarks on C. Severance's letter and Moses Harman's work I must write and tell you what I think, to-wit: It is well to give due credit to those who go to the front and engage the enemy, well to acknowledge how much we are indebted to such, but it is not often done. Yes, such men draw the fire of the enemy to themselves, and while doing so it is hardly generous for those from whom the fire is thus drawn to stab them in the back. I have not read the letter from Dr. O'Neill, so am not prepared to speak of that particular letter, but have good reason for saying he is not a "fictitious character," but a genuine student of sexology; and I have also good reason to believe that not only one but scores and hundreds of letters could be published fully as bad as that of Dr. O'Neill possibly can be, were all physicians to speak out and tell what they know to be true.

Ye gods! what a state of things; "and in the name of sense and sanity," is it worse in the public print than in the private fact? Permit me to ask Mr. Severance how putrid sores can be healed if not probed to the bottom?

But enough of this, and we will now turn to a more pleasant subject. Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel spoke at Masonic Hall, Portland, on the evening of March 9, and to say that we were pleased does not express it. Her logical reasoning, coupled with her dignified bearing of gentle and refined womanhood, cannot fail to make a good and lasting impression wherever she goes. I wish we had scores like her. Her method is educational, not antagonistic. Instead of forever barking at the Bible, she gives people something to think about. And I heartily agree with R. B. Westbrook, who said that we should have a suffrage plank in our Nine Demands of Secularism. Yours for truth and humanity,
CARRIE E. HAIGHT.

East Portland, Or., March 17.

WHY THERE ARE FEW GREAT PREACHERS.

Men of intellect and education, who are capable of enthusiasm and ardor in the service of mankind, are deterred from seeking to do that service through the Christian ministry. They cannot honorably accept its doctrinal requirements and will not submit to its mental restrictions. Hence they are excluded from a calling in which they are fitted to accomplish great good for the human race. The young generation, absorbing as it grows to maturity the knowledge and thought of the living time, the results of investigation and criticism that filter from the studies of scholars through the printing-press, the public library, and the reading-room, and permeates the subtle medium of communication in which all society moves and lives, is repelled from religious association by dogmas which its common sense will not accept. The prediction in Victor Hugo's tale of the time of Louis XI., that the printing-press would kill the church, was true of the ecclesiastical fabric of that time, which is already a curious fossil. Whether it is true of the universal Christian church depends upon whether the vitality of that body is in the integuments of creed and doctrine that have been wrapped about it, or in the enduring necessities of the human soul.—A. K. FISKE, in Forum.

Bound volumes of FREETHOUGHT, 1889, $3.

ROMAN CATHOLIC SENTIMENTS.

The pest of all others most to be avoided in a state, is unbridled liberty of opinion. (Pope Pius IX.)

Let the public school system go where it came from—the devil. (Freeman's Journal.)

Our church is God's church and not accountable either to state or country. (Pope Pius IX.)

The power of the church is superior to the power of the state. (Pope Gregory VII.)

The Roman Catholic is to wield his vote for the purpose of securing Catholic ascendancy in this country. (Father Hecker.)

For every musket given to the state armory let three be purchased forthwith. (Irish Journal.)

The pope by divine right hath power over the whole world, both in ecclesiastical and civil affairs. (Bellarmine)

The public school has produced nothing but a godless generation of thieves and blackguards. (Father Schauer.)

It is necessary to salvation to believe that every human being is subject to the pontiff of Rome. (Pope Leo X)

Religious liberty is merely endured until the opposite can be carried into effect without peril to the Catholic church. (Bishop O'Connor.)

All who maintain that liberty of the press and all advocates of the liberty of speech are to be anathemized. The liberty of the press is the liberty of perdition. (Encyclical letter of Pope Pius IX.)

I would as soon administer the sacraments to a dog as to Catholics who send their children to the public schools. (Father Walker.)

The Catholic religion, with all its votes, ought to be exclusively dominant in such sort that every other worship shall be banished and interdicted. (Pope Pius IX.)

The Roman Catholic citizen of the United States owes no allegiance to any principle of the government which is condemned by the church or pope. (Tablet.)

Undoubtedly it is the intention of the pope to possess this country. In this inention he is aided by the Jesuits, and all the Catholic prelates and priests. (Brownson's Quarterly Review.)

While the state has rights, she has them only in virtue, and by permission of the supreme authority, and that authority can only be expressed through the Roman church. (Catholic World.)

Nationalities must be subordinate to religion, and we must learn that we are Catholics first and citizens next. (Bishop Gilmore's Lenten Letter.)

The pope and the priest ought to have dominion over temporal affairs. The Roman church has a right to exercise its authority without any limit being set to it by the civil power. (Encyclical letter of Pius IX.)

If the pope should curse the government of the United States, every consistent orthodox Roman Catholic would thereby be absolved from his oath of allegiance to the government. (St. Thomas, vol. IV, pp. 91-94, etc.)

The Catholic church numbers one-third the American population; and if its membership shall increase for the next thirty years, as it has the past thirty years, in 1900 Rome will take this country and keep it. (Father Hecker.)

You should do all in your power to carry out the intentions of his holiness, the pope. Where you have the electoral franchise, give your votes to none but those who assist you in so holy a struggle. (Daniel O'Connell)

I acknowledge no civil power. I am the subject of no prince, and I claim more than this; I claim to be the supreme judge and director of the consciences of men; I am the sole, last, and supreme judge of what is right and wrong. (Cardinal Manning.)

I do give my allegiance, political, as well as religious, to the bishop of Rome. Heretics, schismatics, and rebels to our lord, the pope, or his successors, I will to my utmost oppose and persecute. (Part of the creed to which every cardinal, bishop, and priest swears unalterable fidelity before he is ordained to his place.)

The government of United States ought not to stand and it will not stand. But it will be destroyed by subversion and not by conquest. The plan is this: To send over the surplus population of Europe. They will go over with foreign views and feelings, and will form a heterogeneous mass, and in course of time will be prepared to rise up and subvert the government. (Duke of Richmond.)

If the pope should declare war against the government of the United States, all true Roman Catholics would be compelled to take the side of the pope against the government. (Golden Manual.)

USELESS COURT FORMS

The other day in the courtroom of one of the Eastern states a witness refused to go through the court ceremony of kissing the Bible. The reason given for the refusal was that the volume was greasy and grimy from the contact of other witnesses through its years of use. The judge excused the witness from this idle form.

It would seem as though the time had about arrived for the removal of all such useless ceremonies from the procedure of our American courts. They have outlived all their original purposes and add not a whit to the dignity of the courts or to the likelihood that truth will be uttered within them. The statutes prescribe fully what shall be the penalties of perjury and it requires neither the witnesses' kiss of the book nor the clerk's mumbling of an oath to give them efficacy. A witness nowadays who comes into a court of justice with a premeditated lie upon his lips will utter it though he sat on a stack of Bibles and uttered a chapter of oaths. Let the law therefore rid itself of these idle ceremonies and base its claim to truth from the mouths of witnesses upon the honesty of men and the common sense mandates and penalties of the statutes.—San Jose Mercury.

THE WILY MUSEUM MAN.

The American Sentinel says: The attempt to shut all places on Sunday except those which are run in the interests of religion and the church has led an enterprising proprietor in Boston to label his dime museum on Sunday as follows:

Scientific church. Grand concert and lecture on old maids and prize-fighters. Collection, 10 cents.

The genuine churches ought to be ashamed of such company as that. It may be replied that they are ashamed of it. Hardly; if they were ashamed of such company they would be ashamed to create it, as they do by the laws which they demand shall be enacted and enforced. So long as they are not ashamed to create such company, it cannot be said that they are ashamed of it after they have created it.

EVERY war terminates with an addition of taxes, and consequently with an addition of revenue; and in any event of war, in the manner they are now commenced and concluded, the power and interest of governments are increased. War, therefore, from its productiveness, as it easily furnishes the pretense of necessity for taxes and appointments to places and offices, becomes the principal part of the system of old governments; and to establish any mode to abolish war, however advantageous it might be to nations, would be to take from such government the most lucrative of its branches. The frivolous matters upon which war is made show the disposition and avidity of governments to uphold the system of war, and betray the motives upon which they act.—Thomas Paine.

RELIGION does not play a very important part in the courts of New York nowadays. A juror in the Flack conspiracy case, on his examination, was asked:

"Have you any religion?"

"No, sir. We live to-day and die to-morrow."

"Then you have no fear of the future?"

"Not at all."

He was sent to the box as a juror.

A few years ago the man would have been discharged from the jury panel as incompetent to serve.—Truth Seeker.

READ on page 221 the list of premiums offered for new subscribers to FREETHOUGHT.

The Brotherhood of Moralists.

To the Editors of Freethought:

A Brotherhood of Moralists has been organized here with the following officers: Superintendent, O. W. Draper; secretary, F. V. Draper; treasurer, D. M. Smith. Directors, F. V. Draper, F. Johnson, and D. E. Brown.

Meetings will be held at Liberal Hall every Sunday at 2:30. There is a good reading-room in connection. F. V. DRAPER, Sec'y.

Prairie City, Ia.

Freethought Lecture at Stockton.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Mrs. Kregel, as announced, lectured here on Sunday evening, March 23, to a good audience, notwithstanding there was a mechanical spiritual show at the theatre. These physical spiritual exhibitions are always well patronized here, and are invariably pronounced failures by the general public. Still they are numerous attended, indicating that people like to be humbugged or grasped at a straw.

Mrs. Kregel fulfilled the most sanguine expectations of her hearers in every respect. Her stay was short, which permitted but little fellowship. Stockton, Cal. W. F. FREEMAN.

Lilian's Book.

Follow Infidels, Heretics, and Unbelievers:

I have just completed a mental trip around the world with Lilian Leland, and the journey was highly enjoyed and very satisfactory. Her descriptive powers are most excellent, and the natural, common-sense manner in which she deals with places and people is an agreeable feature of the book. There is not a word of cant or affectation from beginning to end; and being a keen observer, endowed with rare intuition and reasoning faculties of a high order, she has produced an instructive, interesting, and fascinating work; a book which no one will care to lay aside after leaving New York on the Santa Rosa until they have circled the globe. This was an unusual trip by an unusual woman, and she has demonstrated the fact that the woman who respects herself and carries a proper amount of reserve can travel the world over without insult or imposition. Courage, tenacity, and powers of endurance are qualities strongly manifested in her nature, and the book is permeated with a spirit of felicity and cheerfulness from first to last. The fresh and spontaneous wit which bubbles and sparkles from day to day as she journeys on, regardless of mal de mer, "genial bores," and poor grub, diverted my mind from the serious side of life and the fact that potatoes are three cents a pound, and any one living in kind of a hark-from-the-tomb condition will be benefited by coming in rapport, as it were, with this cheerful traveler.

I will remark that all your readers should take this mental trip around the world and get the benefit found therein.

Hoping you will all survive the 14th of April without "fleeing to the mountains," I am
Yours truly,
C. SEVERANCE.
Los Angeles.

DEAR GEORGE: I have been riveted with intense interest to "A Woman's Journey Around the World Alone." Have not read another book through for months, nor remained alone in my room to read a single night. But the more I read of this the more I was fascinated and determined to go it to a finish. They talk of realism in art, but this is realism in writing—naive but graphic, piquant and penetrating—an "altogether lovely" specimen of American womanly independence, combined with wit and literary skill.

Yesterday I was asked (as a special favor) if I would remain by the bedside of a sick lady, as the family were compelled to be out for a couple of hours. I was reading this book, and suggested that I might read to her. The lady's sister thanked me, but thought she was too weak and low to allow that, etc. After they had all safely departed I hinted to the invalid the sort of book I was interested in, and selfishly hoped she would permit me to continue. The permission was granted, and I read the story of travel aloud, asking occasionally if it distressed or wearied her. She always replied: "Oh! do go on; it is perfectly delightful." I am satisfied it did her more good than all the medicine she had taken for weeks. She promises to devour the rest of the book herself at the earliest opportunity.

How proud T. C. Leland would be if he could be a partaker in the triumph which this work will doubtless achieve for his wonderfully gifted daughter! Though I am sorry she has put me out of conceit with the glorious "climb it" of California. E. A. STEVENS.

An Explanation.

To the Editors of Freethought:

In your March 29 number there is an attempt to have a little sport at the expense of myself and my little Investigator because of the remarks made in your office relative to "isms," and suspension of the paper soon afterwards. I have no objection to the laugh that may go around at my expense; better laugh than curse or growl with envy any time. But your comments make me say that FREETHOUGHT would go down because it had no ism, which was not the idea given out by any means. What we said was to the effect that the time had not yet arrived when the people could be led to do away with isms, and that as all reforms had for their purpose to do good, it followed that we must use all the possible ways and means to bring about this result. Freethought by recognizing no ism or catering to the conditions of mind which the masses are in at present, did not build up but rather tore down. Further than that, Freethought was a decided lonesome ship to sail in, as it had no particular harbor in view or object but to attack every other ship which floats on the same sea. No reference was made to the paper going down whatever. The Pacific Investigator had no money to buy off the mule. Simply that and nothing more. G. F. PERKINS.

San Francisco, April 1, 1890.

Judge Quint.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Judge Leander Quint, who died last week, was one of the chance acquaintances I made through having a little business at the old city hall a few months ago. He lived on Mason street near its junction with Washington, and I was accustomed to see him often in that locality. On the morning of his decease, which was Friday, at seven o'clock I passed his house, and saw him sitting on the low bank wall beside the path leading to the street. He did not look up and I did not disturb him. I went by and left him seated there leaning upon his cane, white, and motionless, and—dead.

Like a weary traveler needing rest,
On that wayside stone he had sought repose
For his failing limbs, but he never guessed
That his journey would finish before he rose.

He had seen the arrows of coming day
Pierce through the fog as his eye grew dim,
And one bore death, and it came that way,
And dawn to others was night to him.

So he rested, and entered the sleep of death,
On that wayside stone in the little lane,
And his sleep was akin to the sleep of breath,
Save those who take it wake not to pain. M.

A STYLISH young woman had been sworn and had partially given in her testimony before Judge Arnold at Philadelphia, one day last week, when one of the jurors objected on the ground that she had not kissed the Bible. After a breezy discussion between counsel Judge Arnold cut the matter short by ordering the witness to be sworn by the uplifted hand. "I am not surprised," said the judge, "that this witness did not kiss the book. I would not do it either—a dirty book like that. This custom is a relic of idolatry and the sooner it is abolished the better it will be. I don't think this witness objected to kissing the book because she intended to lie, but because it is a dirty book. I respect her regard for her person and her health."

At the Lyceum sociable on Saturday evening, March 29, F. K. Blue and Gertrude F. Michener were the recipients of congratulations from a large number of friends, and good wishes were given them with the rhythm of the music and dance. They were married Mar. 25, 1890. It is hoped they will have all the happiness that Cupid can give to venturesome mortals. Mr. Blue is a well-known radical reformer, and his wife is in sympathy with his advanced ideas. In such golden bonds Freethought rejoices.

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS AND TRACTS.

- God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.
- Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.
- Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.
- God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.
- Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.
- Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.
- Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.
- The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.
- Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.
- The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoemaker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1463 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.

Rapp & Debarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.

Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

Borrowing Scripturally.

From him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away.—Matt. v., 42.

"Good morning, Jane; I have come to borrow your best suit, your hat, dress, cloak, gloves, and shoes. We are just of a size, and they will fit me to perfection. I want to go to church to-morrow and hear the new preacher."

"But, Anna, I want to go also, and what should I wear if you borrow my suit?"

"Oh! I have nothing to do with that. You are a Christian and believe in the doctrine of Christ, so I thought you would be glad to lend regardless of your own needs."

"So I would, but I've no other suit that I could wear to church. Then just think! Suppose half a dozen others would come and ask to borrow clothes? I would be left with none at all. Must I then wrap up in a blanket or go to bed to keep warm, or buy more or borrow in turn?"

"Yes, I have considered all that; and some one might want your house a few years, and all your money and other possessions. What would you do then?"

"Really, Anna, I never thought of all this before. I must consult our preacher. You always do carry things so to extremes that I get puzzled and bewildered. How came you to think of this wholesale borrowing?"

"Well, I had $50 that I was saving to go and visit my mother with next month, and yesterday John Jones came to borrow $30. He knew I had the money and should not want it for two weeks, and he promised to bring it back in ten days."

"I would not have let him have it," said Jane; "you know he will never pay back what he borrows."

"Yes; but the Bible don't say you must lend expecting it back, but rather lend where you do not hope for the return."

"Yes, I know—but—but—well, I don't know how to interpret that part of the scriptures, so I must wait for further light. But did you lend Jones the money?"

"No; I told him I could not risk disappointing my friends and myself as regarded the promised visit, and that no matter how good his will was, something might delay returning the money, and I did not like to risk lending. He quoted the text on borrowing, but I said I did not believe in taking no thought for the morrow, but must prepare for the future as best I could. And as soon as he left I ran over here to test the text on a good Christian like yourself and see how you would take it."

"Well, Anna, suppose we search for the evident meaning of the text and not take it just as it reads. Suppose we understand it to mean that we shall lend where it will not seriously incommode us and will be a help to others."

"Yes, that is what I believe in doing. Drop all the holiness out of the Bible and treat its sayings just as you do those of other books. Modify its texts by common sense. That is just the point I wanted to make by coming here as I did this morning."

"I don't know how it is, Anna, but you always get the better of me in arguments on theology."

"This is because I use reason and you fly to authority—but I must hurry back home, and I hope you will not think hard of me for my impromptu practical lesson. Truth is what we all want, and every new truth does good, even if it be unpalatable at first."

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

TRAVELING ALONE

A WOMAN'S JOURNEY

AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

(Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Price, by mail, - - - 30 cents.

Address The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

THE "COSMIAN HYMN BOOK."

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

(WORDS AND MUSIC)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies,
For Schools and the Home.

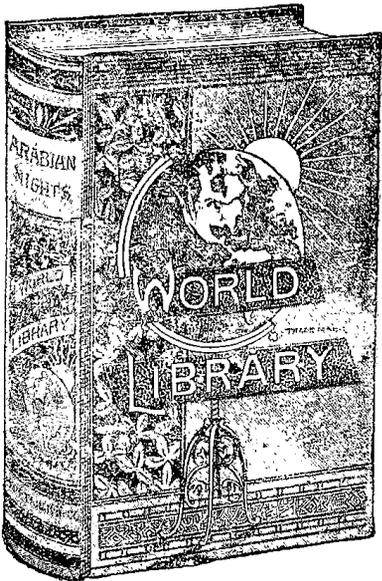

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price, $1.50. Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

W. S. BELL's "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Company.

HEARER (to clergyman)—"If your text had the small-pox you would not have caught it, because you did not go near enough to it."

"Spring, gentle spring," the blue bird sang,
With welcome laden breath,
"Behold the buds and violets"—
And then it froze to death.

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRAIG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY. A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESU.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last an heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavillion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the Invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

WAVERLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder-worker?

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portraiture of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. PRESCOTT.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the richest charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll), with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNN; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated the scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POE'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, 10 Cents.

Address, The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

One Deed of Good.

If I might do one deed of good,
One little deed before I die,
Or think one noble thought, that should
Hereafter not forgotten lie,
I would not murmur though I must
Be lost in death's unnumbered dust.

The filmy wing that wafts the seed
Upon the careless wind to earth
Of its short life has only need
To find the germ fit place for birth;
For one swift moment of delight
It whirls, then withers out of sight.

Why She Works.

When the pretty country schoolma'm isn't trying
To guide her little flock on wisdom's way
She is very likely to be occupying
Herself in manufacture of crochet,
Or tatting, or embroidery, or sewing,
Or some other useful, ornamental thing,
For 'tis rumored 'round the district that she's going
To be married in the early days of spring

Fooled the Parson.

Rev. Mr. Tullis, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Princeton, N. J., was the victim of a practical joke the other day, which caused much indignation among his congregation.

George Haines and Budd Narcross, of Vincentown, played the prank on the parson. Narcross attired himself in some of his mother's clothes and accompanied Haines to Mr. Tullis's residence.

The minister was asked to marry the couple, which he proceeded to do and wound up the ceremony by kissing the supposed bride. Then he made out the marriage certificate and sent the couple away with his blessing.

The Maiden and Her Gum.

"George, darling," she murmured, as they strolled in the garden, "let us stop at that rustic seat yonder for a moment."

"Certainly, pet," answered the young man. "That is the place where I proposed to you last night. Do you want to stop for the fond recollections that cling about the spot?"

"No, not exactly. You see I knew that it was coming last night, and that you would want to kiss me, so I took my gum out of my mouth and stuck it on the bench. If it is there yet I want to get it. That is all, George, dear."

What the Teacher Said.

Bobby—Mamma, will you give me five cents if I am good all day?

Mother—But don't you think it would be nicer to be good on your own account?

Bobby—I guess not, because the teacher said it was better to be good for even a little than to be good for nothing.

Progressive Religion.

"And how did you like the services at our church last evening?"

"There! So it was a religious service? I couldn't have told whether it was a religious service or a grand opera. I'm awfully near-sighted, you know."

"Bible Contradictions," 15 cents.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc, worth $35, for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do., $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
" Forks	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded. Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS. ALL FOR $1.20.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH. One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid. The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,
Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!
anila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.
Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mill.
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.
PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,
536 CLAY STREET,
Below Montgomery. San Francisco.

Wm. W. NOBLE,
Merchant Tailor.
1222 STOCKTON ST.
Bet. Pacific and Broadway.
DRESS SUITS A SPECIALTY
Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass by.

OUR NEW 1890 FLOWER SEED OFFER.
A Magnificent Collection of FLOWER SEEDS
200 Varieties, FREE!

An Unparalleled Offer by an Old-Established and Reliable Publishing House! The Ladies' World is a mammoth 16-page, 64-column illustrated paper for ladies and the family circle. It is devoted to stories, poems, ladies' fancy work, artistic needlework, home decoration, housekeeping, fashions, hygiene, juvenile readings, enigmas, etc. To introduce this charming ladies' paper into 100,000 homes where it is not already taken, we now make the following colossal offer: Upon receipt of only 12 Cents in silver or stamps, we will send The Ladies' World for Three Months, and to each subscriber we will also send free and post-paid, a large and magnificent Collection of Choice Flower Seeds, two hundred varieties, including Pansies, Verbenas, Chrysanthemums, Asters, Phlox Drummondii, Balsam, Cypress Vine, Digitalis, Double Zinnia, Pinka, etc., etc. Remember, twelve cents pays for the paper three months and this entire magnificent collection of Choice Flower Seeds, put up by a first-class Seed House and warranted fresh and reliable. No lady can afford to miss this wonderful opportunity. We guarantee every subscriber many times the value of money sent, and will refund your money and make you a present of both seeds and paper if you are not entirely satisfied. Ours is an old-established and reliable publishing house, endorsed by all leading newspapers. Do not confound this offer with the catalogue schemes of unscrupulous persons. Write to-day—don't put it off! Six subscriptions and six Seed Collections sent for 60 cents. SPECIAL OFFER! To any lady answering this advertisement and naming the paper in which she saw it, we will send free, in addition to all the above, one package of the celebrated Ornamental Chilian Foliage Beet Seeds, one of the most beautiful foliage plants known, the leaves sometimes growing 3 feet long by 1 foot wide, in variegated colors. It is perfectly hardy, continuing an object of beauty long after Coleus and Canna have succumbed to frost. Address: B. H. MOORE & CO., 27 Park Place, New York.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare time may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle-aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address, Dr. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, N. J.
And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

WASHBURN'S WORKS.

- The False Teachings of the Christian Church. Price, 10 cents.
- Sunday and the Sabbath. Price, 10 cents.
- The Foolishness of Prayer. Price, 10 cents.
- The Catholic Church and the Public Schools. Price, 5 cents.
- "BRAINS, Science, and Civilization, by A. Schell. A 16 page pamphlet, price, 5c.

PRINTING!

Having procured one of the best Presses manufactured and a large assortment of display type, and employing competent workmen, the Free-thought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

Letter-heads,

Bill-heads,

Programmes,

Envelopes,

Business Cards,

Postal Cards,

Tickets,

Placards,

Receipts,

Posters,

Dodgers,

Circulars,

Etc. etc.

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

REMSBURG'S WORKS.

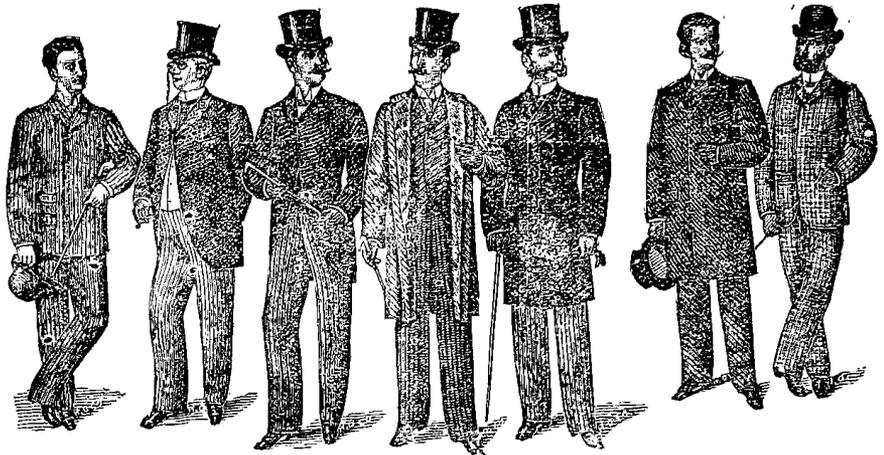

False Claims. Price 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Anti-slavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic.

Fathers of the Republic Paine, Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. Price 15 cents.

Bible Mora's. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman. Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.

OLIVER HINCKLEY SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

P. A. CLARK.

CHAS. W. CLARK

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERIES.

CLARK BROS., PROPRIETORS,

NURSERYMEN.

Catalogs for Timber Culture a Specialty.

Have at Their Nurseries all Kinds of Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Vines.

Orders Filled and Delivered on Short Notice.

Special Attention Given to Planting and Caring of Orchards and Vineyards.

Address

CLARK BROS.,

P. O. Box C,

San Jacinto, Cal.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED, 375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....	$ 4 0
10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....	2 0
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....	2 75
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5.....	6 00
10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....	3 00
14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....	4 00
10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....	3 00
14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....	4 50
10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....	5 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....	6 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond".....	14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or non-refunded, address,

P. U. T. N. A. M. & M. A. C. D. O. N. A. L. D.,
04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
Six Months......75
Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
 FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

The Truth Seeker Annual

AND

FREETHINKERS' ALMANAC.

1890—(E.M. 290).

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS: Calauer for 1890.
 Freethought in the United States, 1889.
 Faded Flowers (poem) By J. E. Kemsburg
 The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue, by T. B. Wakeman.
 Mostly Fools W. Stewart Ross (Saladin)
 Record of the Spanish Inquisition.
 Dates of the Fabrication of some Roman Catholic Dogmas.
 The Boiler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a moral. Helen H. Gardner.
 The Middle Ages, Illustrated.—The Priest, the Supernatural World, the Reformation, Future Terrors.
 The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated.
 Freethought Journals in the United States.
 In Search of a Spirit, E. M. Macdonald
 Why I Left the Church, Hugh O. Pentecost

115 pages, price 25 cents.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

The Place He Preferred.

Preacher (who had been telling the Sunday-school class about the future abode of the just and the unjust)—And now, my children, where do you want to go?"

Small boy (on the front bench)—Want to go home!

Standard Scientific Works

Works by Alexander Bain.

English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75

Works by Charles Darwin.

Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00

Works by J. W. Draper.

History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75

Works by Ernst Haeckel.

The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00

Works by Huxley.

Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00

Works by John Stewart Mill.

Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25

Works by Richard A. Proctor.

Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
 The Moon.....2.00

Works by Herbert Spencer.

Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 Man versus the State......30
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75

Works by Andrew D. White.

Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00

Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.

Body and Mind.....$1.50
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50

Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.

Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

By Carl Marx.

Capital.....$3.00

By Asa Gray.

Darwiniana.....$2.00

By L. L. McLaughlin.

Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50

By John B. Henck.

Field-Book for Railroad Engineers.....$2.50

By C. Marcel.

Study of Languages.....$1.25

By Lester F. Ward.

Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00

By Frederick Overman.

A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00

By B. F. G. Fairfield.

Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25

By W. B. Carpenter.

Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25

By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.

Evolution.....$1.50

By Sir John Lubbock.

Origin of Civilization.....$5.00

By Charles A. Abbott.

A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50

By Garrett P. Serviss.

Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50

By Nathan Sheppard.

Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50

English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 Thos. Carlyle—His Life, Books, Theories......30
 Comedies for Amateur Acting......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

—BY—

W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form, a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

I HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE

Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.

13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order.

The Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is entirely damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thief-resisting. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that, ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only.

Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future

Republic of North America

BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters

impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Vol. III—No. 15.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, APRIL 12, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - APRIL 12, 1890.

THE followers of the bicycle prophet, who believe that April 14 will see Oakland and San Francisco shattered by an earthquake and overwhelmed by a tidal wave, petitioned Governor Waterman to appoint a season of fasting and prayer with the hope of averting the dread calamity. The governor declines the request. He will wait until next fall and then proclaim a day of Thanksgiving, the last Thursday in November, which, of course, is different.

THE Rev. Dr. Harcourt, pastor of the Howard-street Methodist church, has got himself into bad odor with the trades unions by patronizing the printing firm of Jacob Bacon & Co., who run what is called a "rat" office. Bacon, the head of the firm, is a pious old hypocrite with a bad record, who uses the Young Men's Christian Association as an employment bureau to recruit the ranks of his underpaid employees. It is to be regretted that Dr. Harcourt patronized the firm, as his book "The Great [Roman Catholic] Conspiracy against America's Public Schools," is a good one and deserves a wide circulation.

In the course of an article on "Flaws in Ingersollism" in the April North American Review, the Rev. Lyman Abbott expresses surprise that the "inspiring story" of Abraham should have no attraction for Colonel Ingersoll. Abraham, it will be remembered, was commanded by the Lord to kill his son, and appears to have been willing if not anxious to obey the command. A similarly "inspiring story" now comes from Faulkton, South Dakota, to the effect that E. Eckhart, while suffering from theological dementia, stabbed his two young sons with a bread knife and cut his wife's throat. Eckhart claims that the Lord told him to commit the murder. Since this incident involves the killing of three persons instead of one, Dr. Abbott should find it three times as inspiring as the story of Abraham.

THE Methodist Episcopal Conference at New York repudiates the recent decision of the supreme court that Bible reading in schools is unconstitutional. These Methodists hold that to exclude the Bible is "unamerican and pagan and a menace to the perpetuity of our institutions." They further declare that it is the duty of every Christian citizen "to deny that the Bible is sectarian and to claim for it a place wherever the state attempts to educate youth for the duties of citizenship." It is strange that these zealots cannot understand that in foisting the Bible upon the public schools they are compelling those who reject the Bible to pay for having it taught to their children. But perhaps they believe in robbing Thomas to pay Peter. If so, their actions are quite consistent with their belief.

P. T. BARNUM is a famous humbug, but occasionally he offers the public something that is genuine. Of such a nature are his recent remarks concerning a minister who had denounced the imported ballet girls that take part in the great showman's circus. Mr. Barnum said: "I want in a friendly way to preserve in amber the name of Rev. George L. Thompson. He spoke from his pulpit disparagingly of five hundred ballet dancers (so-called) that I brought from Europe. I don't know one of the ladies personally, never spoke to one of them, but I do know that every one of them has a brother, father, husband, or other near relative traveling with her; that the contracts which they have signed call for their instant dismissal if they commit any impropriety or act unbecoming a lady, and it is believed that these girls are as respectable and moral as the same number of ladies in any church in our land. This sensational preacher never saw them except while, unbeknown to him, they were in his church and writhing under his unjust and unchristian denunciations. As a friend I advise him to discontinue his circus pranks in the pulpit, of which a dime museum manager would feel ashamed."

THE SAN FRANCISCO FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The meeting of the San Francisco Freethought Society, Sunday evening, April 13, at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, will be addressed by Samuel P. Putnam on the subject, "Spiritualism Not Science."

ABOUT FREE MONEY.

Mr. Hugh O. Pentecost's treatise on finance to be found in another column is very interesting reading. It is always gratifying to see a man at least attempt to justify the doctrine which he preaches. Such attempt is a sign that he has confidence in the correctness of his views. There are two classes of questions which no effort is ever made to answer by sensible people, and these are (1) questions that are unanswerable, and (2) questions that are unworthy of notice. Fair-minded people always acknowledge the force of the former kind, and ignore the latter, while theologians ignore the unanswerable, and rend the atmosphere with replies to the inconsequent. Our queries put to Mr. Pentecost were not so put because we especially object to his ideas on finance, but because further elaboration of them seemed desirable.

Mr. Pentecost objects to government monopoly of the right to make money. His notion is, presumably, that every man may have his money printed as he does his business card, and exchange it for whatever he desires with whomsoever may have sufficient confidence in him to accept it for equal value of something else. But it is proper to call Mr. Pentecost's attention to the fact that money is essentially different from shoes or bread. These latter articles are good or bad according to the material and workmanship entering into their composition or construction, while money is not, unless it be insisted that only metal is a proper medium of exchange. The purchaser of a pair of shoes cares nothing for the stamp on the shoes, so long as the material and workmanship are good, while the seller cares nothing for those qualities in the money he gets for the shoes, if only the stamp is genuine. The buyer requires no collateral security, but the seller does. Between money and shoes there is all the difference that exists between a prophecy and its fulfillment, between faith and knowledge, between shadow and substance.

If we define money as a medium of exchange it would indeed be an inexcusable superstition to entertain the idea that "the issue of money is purely a function of the government," because a great deal of the exchange of values in this country is effected by means of paper in the form of drafts and checks with which the government has nothing to do except to protect them from forgery, which protection inspires the holder with a certain feeling of security and infringes the right of nobody but forgers. The practicability of free coinage of metal and unrestricted issuance of paper obligations can be demonstrated only by experiment, but the plan looks a trifle loose and shaky.

In the face of facts Mr. Pentecost is rash when he asserts that authoritative government is a myth. Unfortunately such a government exists. It imprisoned D. M. Bennett, it hanged the Anarchists at Chicago, it is trying Moses Harman at Valley Falls, it is enforcing Sunday laws in every state but California, it is protecting the monopoly of vacant land, it is extorting money from all citizens except wealthy ones by a system of compulsory taxation. It is, in fact, doing a thousand things to prove its existence. "Uncle Sam" is as mythological as the unicorn, but the government never lets us forget that it has a being and a local habitation. That the powers that be are ordained of God, is false; that the majority are infallible, is a fiction; that two have more rights than one is a pestilential error; but that a compact or arrangement, voluntary or compulsory, between the people does exist and is called government is a thing that cannot be denied except in a metaphysical way. The fact that politicians represent, and in reality are, the government does not affect the question at all. The priests rule over our minds in the name of a myth called God, and the politicians rule us physically in the name of a myth called "Uncle Sam," or the "will of the people," but the name of their rule is government and we cannot escape it. We speak of the "will of the people" as a myth because the majority of the people have no will of their own, and under the direction of the politicians outvote the intelligent minority. Some of the politicians are bad men, but the most of them are doubtless good men gone wrong.

FREETHOUGHT agrees with the Twentieth Century to the extent of urging that there is altogether too strong a tendency among the people to apotheosize government, state, and nation; to exalt the honor of office-holding; to cringe to authority, to fawn upon the successful though rascally politician, and to forget that service and not patronage should be expected of public employees. To this degree more or less Freethinkers may be superstitious; but it cannot be called a superstition to hold that some sort of arrangement should be entered into for providing a common medium of exchange and for guaranteeing its stability. This is a question of expediency, and not of faith founded on belief without evidence or reason.

HON. JOHN A. COLLINS.

The Hon. John A. Collins, of this city, died on the morning of April 3. He was president of the Society of Progressive Spiritualists and was a most earnest worker for human progress.

He was born in October, 1810, in the state of Vermont, being left in infancy an orphan. He depended on his own resources. At the age of twelve he began his apprenticeship as a printer and was associated with Horace Greeley. They became warm and intimate friends. He entered Andover Theological Seminary to prepare for the ministry. While pursuing his studies here his attention was called to Spiritualism, which was then attracting some attention. He investigated the subject and became a believer and advocate of modern Spiritualism.

Before finishing his course at Andover he was called away to engage in the anti-slavery movement. He was a born reformer and during his whole life has been a prominent worker in temperance, anti-slavery, woman-suffrage, Spiritualistic, and industrial co-operative reforms. A Quaker poet wrote of him in his early years:

John Collins, I wonder
If thou wouldst knock under
If Satan himself should appear.
I question his bluster
Thy temper could fluster,
Or cause thee to feel any fear,
John Collins,
Or cause thee to feel any fear.

His mission to England was very successful in giving information and raising funds for the anti-slavery movement. He took an active part in the famous anti-corn law agitation.

When the Fourier co-operative movement was made prominent by the efforts of Albert Brisbane Mr. Collins organized the "Skaneateles Community" in the state of New York.

He arrived in California early in June, 1849, and became one of the pioneer merchants of San Francisco. His attention was attracted to the rich quartz veins of Grass Valley, where he built and successfully operated the second quartz mill erected in California.

In 1851 he became a candidate for the state senate from Nevada county. He was defeated by a small majority on account of his anti-slavery record.

In 1860 he removed to Virginia City, Nevada. He organized the public schools of Storey county, of which he was chosen superintendent. He opposed the use of the rod in schools.

Mr. Collins was elected a member of the two constitutional conventions held in Nevada in November, 1864. He took a leading and active part.

In 1865 he returned to San Francisco and engaged in the practice of law, and the promotion of various social reforms. He believed in a system of harmonious fraternal co-operation in all branches of business, aided by the national government. This he regarded as the most important of all the reforms in which he was engaged.

In later years Mr. Collins practiced law as a profession, one of his latest acts in that capacity being the incorporation of the Freethought Publishing Company. He gave his services without charge, declaring that none of the incorporators could feel a greater interest in the enterprise than himself.

Judge Collins has left the record of a noble and self-sacrificing life. He was a Freethinker in the best sense of the term, broad and genial in his views. He was thoroughly sympathetic with all advance movements. A friend, a philosopher, has passed away. Upon his grave we place the wreath of honored remembrance.

SPEAK YOUR THOUGHT.

Whoever hesitates to utter that which he thinks the highest truth, lest it should be too much in advance of the time, may reassure himself by looking at his acts from an impersonal point of view. Let him duly recognize the fact that opinion is the agency through which character adapts external arrangements to itself—that his opinion rightly forms a part of this agency—is a unit of force, constituting, with other such units, the general power which works out social changes; and he will perceive that he may properly give utterance to his innermost conviction: leaving it to produce what effect it may. He must remember that, while he is a descendant of the past, he is a parent of the future; and that his thoughts are as children born to him, which he may not carelessly let die. He, like every other man, may properly consider himself as one of the myriad agencies through whom works the unknown cause; and when the unknown cause produces in him a certain belief, he is thereby authorized to profess and act out that belief. For, to render in their highest sense the words of the poet:

. Nature is made better by no mean,
But Nature makes that mean; over that art
Which you say adds to Nature, is an art
That Nature makes.

Not as adventitious, therefore, will the wise man regard the faith that is in him. The highest truth he sees he will fearlessly utter; knowing that, let what may come of it, he is thus playing his right part in the world—knowing that if he can effect the change he aims at—well; if not—well also, though not so well.—HERBERT SPENCER.

GIVE US LIGHT.

In last week's FREETHOUGHT is an article copied from the Weekly Star in which occurs the following statement:

A correspondent incloses an extract from a communication in the Jackson, Amador county, Dispatch, in which objection is made to the single tax, because one man with a seven-story building on his lot would be only taxed the same as a neighbor with a one-story cottage on the adjoining lot, so that while the rich man could readily pay the tax, the poor man could not, and would have to abandon his home. The answer is, that the tax would not be too high for any one to pay who uses the land, either as a residence in towns and cities, or as a cultivator in the country, but it would be high enough to render speculative holdings of land unprofitable.

Let us see if that is so. We have for a starting-point a lot with a one-story cottage on it. Let us call the cottage worth $2000 and the lot $3000, only the latter sum being taxed, say at the rate of 2 per cent—amounting to $60 per annum. Adjoining this lot is another lot worth $3000, on which is a seven-story building. We will offset the first story of this building with the one story of the cottage, and there are six stories left for renting at $25 per month each, or $150 per month all together, or $1800 per year. This $1800 will pay the taxes on thirty other lots, and if the proprietor of the seven-story building owns that number of lots he will thus be enabled to hold them for a raise. The exemption of improvements, then, gives increased means for investment in land; because, if the seven-story house were taxed for its value, say $20,000, at the same rate as the lot, the owner would have $400 less wherewith to pay taxes on the lots held for speculative purposes, and must relinquish six or seven of them.

If there is any mistake in this argument, the single-tax advocates can have no difficulty in pointing it out.

FREETHOUGHT is "catching it" from various directions, for failing to attempt any defense of Moses Harman in publishing the O'Neill letter which caused his arrest. We would like to have it understood that so far as the writer of this is concerned he considers the persecution of Mr. Harman totally unjustifiable. If Harman did not know better than to print O'Neill's letter he has not reached years of discretion. He is irresponsible, and there is no hope that discipline or experience will teach him anything. E. H. Heywood is another of the intractable species, and his "Word," with its list of cracked contributors having their brains and controlling organs located at the lower end of the backbone, makes an indecent exposure every time it appears. Still, people who are morally robust have less to fear from these men than from brutes like Anthony Comstock who would apply to ethics the discipline of the policeman's club.

THE Sonoma county delegation came into the convention of Prohibitionists here last Wednesday with the proposition to eliminate the Sunday law plank from the platform of the party. That is good. Now let them expunge the prohibition law plank, and resolve that temperance is a moral, not a political force; that men and women cannot and should not be kept sober by law; and that the temperate citizen, being free to get drunk, yet practicing sobriety, is a nobler specimen of manhood than the teetotaler who is abstinent simply for the reason that he cannot get anything to drink.

WE hear of a western clergyman who announced that he would deliver a sermon on "Looking Backward," and when all the Nationalists in the neighborhood had assembled he gave a discourse about Lot's wife. It was a mean sell, but it teaches a lesson nevertheless. The people who a few centuries from now look back to the time when men believe in the myths and fables of Christianity will have as much pity for their deluded and credulous predecessors as the dwellers in a paradise like Bellamy's would have for those who suffer under our present industrial abuses.

ALWAYS against the interests of the working people, the clergy of Chicago have resolved in favor of closing the World's Fair on Sunday. This matter should be settled at once, and no city that will not promise to keep the fair open seven days in the week should be allowed to control it. People who are obliged to work six days should be given Sunday to spend as they choose, and to close the exhibition is practically to shut them out.

KEMMLER, the wife murderer, now under sentence of death in the Auburn, N. Y., penitentiary, has experienced a change of heart. Like Saul of Tarsus, he has seen a vision, the appearance being nothing less than Jesus Christ, who, so Kemmler claims, appears to him in his cell and assures him of sympathy and salvation. Thus the brutal murderer's calling and election are assured. The fate of the woman he killed is uncertain.

SUBSCRIBERS TO FREETHOUGHT are invited to examine the date on the wrapper of their paper, and act accordingly. It is unpleasant to be continually sending out notices; we prefer to practice the golden and silver rule and to dun others only as we would ourselves be dunned.

THE Carrier Dove, our Spiritual contemporary, has concluded to be a monthly magazine instead of a weekly paper, and comes out again with its familiar host of wingless angels on the front page. The said angels still preserve an appearance of good health.

FROM a copy of the "Texas Cartoon" just received it is learned that Northern Texas is suffering from an attack of the Rev. Sam Jones. His arrival is announced in this manner; "The circus has opened in Ft. Worth with Sam Jones as ring-master."

OBSERVATIONS.

If the Rev. Dr. Harcourt, who dropped in at 838 Howard street the first part of the week to converse about his new book, had not told me his name, I should not have ventured to guess that he was a Methodist clergyman, and my acquaintance with the cloth for many years has made me a fair guesser on ministerial goods. His cravat was orthodox, his spectacles were gold-rimmed, and his legs had the right crook for a man with an intellectual brain; but his conversation made me nervous, there being a lady present. He condemned the priests in eloquent and highly adorned language, denounced theology as the great enslaver of the human race, spoke of Bible idolatry and ecclesiasticism with the utmost contempt, and lauded Voltaire as the loftiest mind produced by France. Whenever a touch of profanity seemed necessary to perfect rhetorical effect, Dr. Harcourt gave it with that easy grace which comes only from long practice. By a clergyman or the unwordly Methodist, I suppose such phrases as "The devil of it is," "go to h—," "damnation," "damnable," and so forth, are regarded as conducive to clearness, but, as I remarked, they made me nervous, because I did not know when something worse would follow. He remained only about five minutes, but during that time the air was more livid with profanity than I had seen it before since Putnam tipped over his last ink-bottle. I would not intimate that Mr. Harcourt was intentionally irreverent. His language was that of pulpitical license. The fact that it sounded weird to me shows how far I have drifted from the Sunday-school religion of my childhood.

The editor of the Golden Gate knows enough about the unsolvable mystery of death to assure his readers that the Hon. John A. Collins has "passed to a higher life." Yet Judge Collins lived on this earth a purely unselfish and wholly unspotted life. He had courage and energy in his youth, and wisdom and tolerance in his old age. Always he had charity. Everything he did was for the good of this world, and he did all that circumstances gave him opportunity to achieve. Is there a higher life than this, and if so will the editor of the Golden Gate tell us in what it consists?

Mrs. Addie L. Ballou lectured before the Freethought Society last Sunday evening to a full hall, and essayed, by citing visions, appearances, and premonitions, to answer in the affirmative the question, "Is man immortal?" The audience listened attentively, even patiently, to the discourse, which would have found more receptive ground among a body of Spiritualists. Nevertheless the lady is of such pleasing address, has so musical a voice, and such an eloquent tongue, that the absence of argument or demonstration may well be overlooked. Her fundamental postulate was that man is a triune being, having a body, soul, and spirit. The body is the outward or visible man; the soul the invisible duplicate of the body, and the spirit the germ of life. The body, as I understood the proposition, is not immortal except to the extent that matter cannot be destroyed; the soul gives form to the body, and endures as the form of a house endures after the house is burnt up; while the spirit exists forever, if not longer. I am a poor hand to report lectures of this kind, as I lack spiritual insight. FREETHOUGHT needs a religious editor.

The address was preceded and followed by singing by Miss Evangeline Ballou.

President Putnam pronounced the matter of the lecture the best that could be presented on the subject, though it did not convince him. Mr. Thomas Curtis argued that Mrs. Ballou's hypothesis would prove the immortality of a mule. Mr. George Cummings expressed himself as a doubter of immortality. Mr. P. Healy supported the spiritual theory and thought it desirable that he should live forever. Professor Seymour took the same stand. Meanwhile I was not present. I had gone home. A consideration of these other-world questions always invests me with an irresistible inclination to sleep. The same feeling overtakes me as I write. Gentle reader, are you awake?

I doubt if there has been any great change in the mental condition of Governor Goodell of New Hampshire, though a late report states that he has become incapacitated for the duties of his office. Besides being what is termed a prohibition fanatic, Governor Goodell is a religious bigot. He lives on a farm in Antrim, Hillsborough county, away off from the civilizing influences of the intellectual world, and his inane piety turns his household into a perpetual prayer-meeting. FREETHOUGHT formerly went to a cousin of mine who lives in the governor's family, but it was imperiling the souls of the whole community, and notice was given to discontinue. I judged then that Governor Goodell's brain was not robust, and am not now surprised that somebody else has discovered it to be suffering from the softening process. A man who cannot tolerate a Freethought paper in his house is not broad-minded enough to preside over anything but an experience meeting.

Last week I made some quotations from a "poem" printed by the Bancroft Company and bearing the name of H. Tintrop as author. I then knew that Mr. Tintrop was not a poet, but I did not know that he was a fraud. It now transpires that the poem is not original with the alleged writer, Tintrop, and the title is not "Mankind," but "Despair," or Verzweiflung, under which name it was written in the German language by Kotzebue. Moreover, the translation is wretched—"Ein sehr miserable Uebersetzung," as a German-speaking reader has remarked.

Careful reading discloses some original ideas concealed beneath the rags and tatters of raveled English wherein the Teutonic and too fresh translator has arrayed this philosophical poem, but they are not Tintrop's. He has merely stolen a great picture and daubed it with foreign substances.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

Some of the religious fanatics of Oakland are actually leaving town to escape the disaster prophesied for this week.—The force of destitute laborers given employment in the Park is being rapidly reduced, as the fund for paying them is nearly exhausted and contributions have practically ceased to come in. Some of the men are finding work elsewhere, but many are still idle.—The resignation of Leland Stanford as president of the Southern Pacific Company, and the election of Collis P. Huntington to fill the vacancy, is reported.—Eastern workmen are rapidly filling the places of the striking ironmolders in this city. The strikers appear to have plenty of funds to back them. The foundries are running, and so far as they are concerned the strike is practically over.—The Morrow Chinese Enumeration bill is being vigorously opposed in Congress by the missionary societies all over the East. It is claimed that Chinese restriction will interfere with missionary work among the Celestials.—The Pioneers and Native Sons intend to have a grand celebration, beginning Sept. 9, of California's fortieth anniversary as a state.—The statue of Marshall, the discoverer of gold in California, will be unveiled at Coloma, El Dorado county, about the last of this month. The monument has cost $5000, will be forty-one feet high, consisting of a bronze statue of Mr. Marshall eleven feet high surmounting a granite base thirty feet high, and will be placed in the lot in which the discoverer of gold is buried.

A committee of the Baptist church at Charlottetown, Prince Edward's Island, find their pastor, the Rev. Edward Whitman, guilty of immoral association with divers young women, misappropriation of church funds, and untruthfulness.—One thousand journeyman plumbers and 5000 carpenters are on strike in Chicago.—Prof. Joseph Leidy, of the University of Pennsylvania, testifies that Keeley, the motor man, has discovered a new force distinct from magnetism or electricity whereby weights are raised and lowered by the sounding of musical notes. Professor Leidy thinks it possible that a mill may be run by connecting it with a piano.—Representatives Herbert of Alabama, Hemphill of South Carolina, Turner of Georgia, Stewart of Texas, Wilson of West Virginia, and ex-Representative Barksdale of Mississippi, Senators Vance of North Carolina, Pasco of Florida, Vest of Missouri, and W. M. Fishback of Arkansas, Ira P. Jones of Tennessee, S. S. Long of West Virginia, and B. J. Sage of Louisiana have collectively written, and will soon publish, a book entitled "Why the Solid South? or, Reconstruction and its Results."—Many Mormons from Utah are expected to join the Mormon colony this spring at Lee's Creek in the Northwest territory, Canada.—Horace Greeley's old homestead at Chappaqua, N.Y., was destroyed by fire last week. The house was built by Mr. Greeley in 1851.—The women temperance crusaders are conducting a reign of terror in and around Farmington, Mo. Licensed saloon men do not dare to open their places of business for fear of being mobbed.—The son of the late Richard A. Proctor is insane. He lives at St. Joseph, Mo.—The Rev. Dr. Thomas McMasters, of Glen's Falls, N. Y., was the other evening observed to be decorated with a halo which, according to his daughter's testimony, "illuminated the room and transfigured his countenance." Immediately after this phenomenon had appeared, the reverend gentleman was stricken with paralysis. A reputable physician who was told of the occurrence says that the supposed halo is easily explained by the presence of phosphorus in the old man's hair. A promising miracle is thus spoiled by inexorable science.

A sensation has come up in London in the form of a church scandal which implicates the Rev. Dr. White, who for thirty years has been chaplain of the Chapel Royal at Savoy and of the House of Commons. Dr. White has been accused by Eliza Hildon, a laundress, with immorality. The woman gives the fullest details and evidence.—There has been an appeal made by the high church and the Catholic priests to their respective congregations to boycott Mme. Bernhardt while in London, as a punishment for what they call her blasphemy in reading the part of the Virgin Mary.—Turkish troops have pillaged the churches and insulted Christians in the province of Candia, in Crete. At the request of the foreign consuls the governor has ordered an inquiry into the outrages.

THE NATIONALISTS.

The sixteenth public reception of the San Francisco Nationalist Club at Metropolitan Temple was one of the most brilliant and successful of the series. It was opened with an organ solo by Prof. Richard J. Wilmot, followed by a recitation by Mrs. Jennie Reed, and a piano solo by Mate Hildebrande.

Miss Anna T. Smith, of San Diego, delegate to the convention, made a short address. She referred to the strong hold of the principles of Nationalism upon the people throughout the state. The first club in Southern California was organized at Los Angeles May last, and to-day there are thirty-five clubs in that part of the state. The people not only of America but of other nations were awaking to the importance of the issue.

Mr. Walter Leman, of old-time fame upon the coast, gave a wise and witty recitation on "The Glorious Fourth," which was received with such enthusiastic approval that he was recalled, and gave "Bingen on the Rhine."

Mrs. Addie L. Ballou, president of the club, made the address of the evening. The speaker said: "This is woman's hour. Even as a child I was interested in politics. I always believed that woman's time would come some day with a political party. Now the time has arrived for justice and equity for men and women alike. This is the people's hour. Woman has a voice and a work in Nationalism. But then we must watch as well as work in this great movement. We are growing almost too fast for our own good. Men may enter into our movement in behalf of the old political parties. There is much for women to do in politics, and first of all we must make poverty impossible. Women are unemployed and suffering simply because they can't vote."

"Help One Another," a National hymn, music by Professor Wilmot, was then sung by Miss Evangeline Ballou, organ accompaniment by Professor Wilmot, the audience joining in the chorus. It was beautifully rendered, and the voices of the vast audience mingled with the grand notes of the organ. The singer was recalled with long-continued applause, and the last two verses were repeated.

The following are the words of the song:

"Help one another," the snowflakes said, as they cuddled down in their fleecy bed;

"One of us here would not be felt, one of us here would quickly melt; But I'll help you and you help me, and then what a big white drift we'll see!"

"Help one another," the maple spray said to its fellow leaves one day; "The sun would wither me here alone, long enough ere the day is gone;"

"But I'll help you and you help me, and then what a splendid shade there'll be!"

"Help one another," the dewdrop cried, seeing another drop close to its side;

"This warm south breeze would dry me away, and I should be gone ere noon to-day;"

"But I'll help you and you help me, and we'll make a brook and run to the sea!"

"Help one another," a grain of sand said to another grain just at hand; "The wind may carry me over the sea, and then, O what will become of me?"

"But come, my brother, give me your hand; we'll build a mountain, and there we'll stand."

"The Brickyard Drama," presented by Frank D. and Master Jackson, was one of the hits of the evening, and was worthy of the ovation it received.

The zither solo by Miss Julia Valentine was excellent and the encore was well deserved.

The meeting was closed with a few remarks by Mr. Owen, of Los Angeles, urging harmonious action at the convention.

The California Nationalists met in first annual convention at Metropolitan Hall at ten o'clock a.m., Tuesday, April 8. Ninety-five delegates were present.

The hall was prettily decorated for the occasion. Wreaths of flowers were tastily arranged about the stage. Over the organ was suspended the motto "Harmony the Watchword."

Mrs. Addie L. Ballou called the convention to order. She said:

"I hope, in the outset of our first convention, the delegates of the respective clubs will give their attention strictly to the principles calling us together, and I hope that harmony will prevail. We recognized in the outset of this movement that it was a movement for equity and justice, and if we cannot do better than some of the conventions that have preceded us, we shall certainly make a sad and sorry record. We must recognize equity and justice now, as the representatives of the people. If any one has come here with anything uppermost in his mind except our principles let it die in his mind. We are here for principle, not politics, and I hope if any one has come here with a slate, he will break it at once. This is the people's movement."

J. B. McCormack, H. B. Wiseman, and T. B. Wiltshire were elected temporary secretaries, and the list of delegates was made out, after which the convention adjourned until 2 p.m.

At the afternoon session W. C. Owen, of Los Angeles, was elected president of the convention, Mrs. Addie L. Ballou, J. W. Hines, and Laura de Force Gordon vice-presidents, and I. McCormick, H. B. Wiseman, and T. B. Wiltshire secretaries.

Addresses were made by Mrs. Gordon, Judge Wheeler, and others

The following committees were appointed:

Committee on State Organization—Mrs. Anna F. Smith, B. G.

Haskell, T. V. Cator, of San Francisco; Eugene Hough, of Oakland, and H. G. Wilshire, of Fullerton.

Committee on Order of Business—J. F. Redstone, Dr. Moliere, of San Francisco; Mrs. Laura de Force Gordon, of Lodi, C. E. Daily, of Los Angeles, and George Thistleton, of Ocean View.

Committee on Resolutions—Albert Currin, Peter R. Martin, Mrs. Addie L. Ballou, of San Francisco; J. H. Hines, of San Jose, and E. C. Schnabel, of Los Angeles.

LIVELY TIMES IN SAN DIEGO.

Mrs. Mary A. White, corresponding secretary of the First Nationalist Club of San Diego, writes as follows:

To the Editors of Freethought:

Things are getting lively down here, Mr. Editor. The seeds of truth sown by the Secular pilgrim and others are coming up and growing rapidly under the weekly irrigation of Dr. York's lectures. His first address—before the Nationalist Club to a full house—succeeded in packing Lafayette Hall to its utmost limits on the following Sunday evening. We then procured the Louis opera house for the next Sunday. This, too, was crammed to its utmost seating capacity, and the end is not yet. The doctor has agreed to deliver five more lectures in a regular series. The first, on "Natural Evolution," already given, met with such enthusiastic response that we are wishing for a larger opera house to accommodate the audience.

The opposing forces are waking up to the danger, and this occasions the liveliness. Beautiful women, fearing that their God will get hurt in the contest, declare that they will not go themselves nor let their husbands and lovers listen to such blasphemy. Shylocks, who live by grinding the faces of the poor, openly avow that the churches must be sustained, not for their religious truth, but their political influence; hence they are arrayed against the power of Dr. York's persuasive eloquence. The daily papers in the city, which are owned by the Shylocks and afraid of church influence, keep ominously silent. But for the daily San Diegan and the weekly Clipper the people would never know, except through advertisements, that a great wave of Freethought was sweeping over the town and people were beginning to think who never thought for themselves before. The mightiness of the press, viz., the dailies, is falling into "innocuous desuetude" except to sustain kingcraft and priestcraft.

A Catholic lady, with the courage of her convictions and the ignorance of her class, attacked Dr. York in a public office, telling him that she was praying that God would smite him down as he did Paul of old. As the doctor remains unsmitten we naturally infer that God is treating her prayers as he did those of the millions of pious souls who prayed for the success of the Southern Confederacy, and also for the life of President Garfield. It is not to be expected that this pious sister will learn a lesson from God's failure to comply with her righteous and reasonable request. It is the best thing that God could do under the circumstances; and if he were as shrewd as this female member of his flock he would have thought of it himself.

We hope to be able to build up a good Liberal Society in San Diego. Mattie P. Krekel is coming here; so is the champion, John E. Remsburg. Let them come. We need them all to break up the dense fog left here by the old mission fathers and held by the smoke of Presbyterianism.

THE FINANCE OF ANARCHY.

FREETHOUGHT says:

Mr. Pentecost, of the Twentieth Century, says that an Anarchist is "one who believes that money should be issued by anybody who can get his money accepted." Of course, but what would those do for a circulating medium who could not get their money accepted? Don't the Anarchists believe in a co-operative currency, and if so, in what respect would it differ from that now in circulation?

Those who could not get their money accepted would have to use the money that other persons would manufacture, taking it for something of their own making that they can get accepted; just as those who cannot make good shoes get good shoes by giving something that they can make well for them.

Anarchists believe in a co-operative currency. The money now in circulation is, in itself, unobjectionable. It is the monopoly of the right to manufacture money and issue it that is objectionable. No one, two, or more persons should have a monopoly of the right to make anything that we need, and we certainly need money. If we think of money just as we think of bread or clothing—a thing that everybody needs—it should be easy to understand that anybody should be allowed to make it. Good money will be used and poor money will be rejected, just as good bread will be used and poor bread will be rejected. We decide what kind of bread we want, and we could just as easily decide what kind of money we want. If the government assumed the monopoly of bread making and allowed a few persons to share the monopoly, prohibiting bread making by others, everybody would understand that a wrong was being done. The idea that the issue of money is peculiarly a function of government—something that could not be as well done by private undertaking—is a pure superstition; just as much a superstition as that priests have power to forgive sins. If the editor of FREETHOUGHT is influenced in his thinking by this superstition he should free himself from the erroneous belief as he has from erroneous religious belief.

The priest asserts that a person called God exists; that God has a power peculiar to himself to forgive sins; that God has conferred that power upon him. This is a baseless lie, whether the priest knows it or not. The editor of FREETHOUGHT knows that the person called God is a myth; that he exists only in imagination; and that, therefore, what the priest says is not true. The politician asserts that there is an authoritative thing called government; that this authoritative thing called government has a power peculiar to itself to issue money; that government has conferred that power upon him. This is a baseless lie, whether the politician knows it or not. The authoritative thing called government is a myth; it exists only in imagination; and therefore, what the politician and his master, the national bank man, say is not true.

Where is God? Nobody knows. He is an idea. The editor of FREETHOUGHT understands this. Where is the government? Nobody knows. It is an idea, also. The priests claim that God authorizes them to issue indulgences. The editor of FREETHOUGHT knows this is a lie. The politicians and bankers claim that government authorizes them to issue money. This, too, is a lie. There is no such person as God; but the priests know that they would have no power without the God idea behind them. There is no such thing as the government; but the politicians know they would have no power without the government idea behind them.

Regarding money, the simple truth is this: a number of thieves get together and assume the monopoly of its manufacture. Interest is the result of monopoly; and by interest laborers are robbed and the owners of money are enriched. As long as these cunning thieves can make laborers believe that there really is such an authoritative thing as the government behind them the laborers will call the thieves statesmen, they will call devotion to a myth patriotism, they will reverence the thieves, and will call unsuperstitious persons traitors and stone them because they puncture the myth-bladder.

One of the strangest and saddest things in life to me is to see men free from religious superstitions, but held, as by a vise, in the grip of political superstitions. And of the two the political superstitions have a stronger hold upon the human mind. The God delusion is weak and growing weaker. The government delusion is strong, if not growing stronger. Many persons have learned to do without God who think society could not exist without a board of aldermen. Many persons have broken from the chain gang of the priests, but they gladly obey when the politicians crack the whip over them. Many persons understand the fallacy of monarchical Roman Catholicism and republican Protestantism. They understand that the ideas upon which all churches are founded are erroneous. Many of these same persons know that there is no such thing as the divine right of kings; but when the politicians tell them that the will of a majority of the men over twenty-one years of age must be obeyed by everybody, they go down on their faces in the dust like the fetich worshippers they really are. They have escaped from the monarchical superstition, but they are held by the republican superstition. There are superstitious Roman Catholics, superstitious Presbyterians, superstitious Methodists, and superstitious Free-thinkers. And when a Freethinker is superstitious he is, in that respect, exactly like any other superstitious person—it is very difficult to convince him that his superstition is a superstition. These remarks are not meant to apply to the editor of FREETHOUGHT unless he is a believer in the government myth, in the sacred right of a few men to arbitrarily govern all the other men, women, and children, in which case they do apply to him whether I wish them to or not.

HUGH O. PENTECOST (Twentieth Century).

THE PROFOUND PHILOSOPHY OF MR. P. CARUS.

An attempt is made by Mr. P. Carus, in a recent number of the organ of Mr. Hegeler's peculiar kind of "Monism," to show that Materialism is philosophically, as well as morally, a very absurd system of thought. "Matter," he says, "is an abstract. Abstraction is a mental process." This is as clear as mud. There are, he says, two properties not included in the term matter, "viz., (1) motion and (2) form." Mirabile dictu! A jack-rabbit moves; a marble is round. To use adjectives instead of verbs, we say a moving jack-rabbit, a round marble. Then to express the moving of all objects we say motion; to express the shape of all objects we say form. The motion of a thing, the roundness, squareness, or other form of a thing, is a condition, a quality of material substances. Motion and form do not exist per se; these words designate the condition or quality of actual objects. This all intelligent Materialists and Spiritualists alike understand; but Mr. P. Carus is in the a b c of philosophy and does not understand it; so he talks of matter, and "besides matter," of something more than matter—"motion and form." This is philosophical twaddle.

He says that the mistake of Materialism is that it "identifies matter with reality," and in the same sentence he declares that "every reality is material." Then he says: "Spiritualists, in a certain sense, ought to be called Materialists, for they have one error in common with Materialists. They cannot see that the formal and the relational are non-material realities." He had just said that "every reality is material."

I will give two sentences from this writer which, without any comment, will indicate to every thinker how far he is qualified to set himself up as a critic of any school of thought: "Certainly Materialism went too far when it tried to explain everything from matter, when it identified itself with reality. Yet it stands on solid ground when it maintains that every reality is matter." "Spiritualists, in a certain sense, ought to be called Materialists, for they have one error in common with Materialists. They cannot see that the formal and the relational are non-material realities."

Enough. No Monism of this sort for me! The Monism of Spencer, the Monism of Haeckel, is consistent, but the Monism of the sort quoted is a spurious article. AGNOSTIC.

INGERSOLL'S LATEST.

At the anniversary of the Lotus Club in New York, the following remarks were made by Col. R. G. Ingersoll:

Sometimes I think, and especially when I am at a meeting where they have what they call reminiscences, that a world with death in it is a mistake. What would you think of a man who built a railroad knowing that every passenger was to be killed—knowing that there was no escape? What would you think of the cheerfulness of the passengers if every one knew that at some station, the name of which had not been called out, there was a hearse waiting for him; backed up there, horses fighting flies, driver whistling, waiting for you? Is it not wonderful that the passengers on that train really enjoy themselves? Is it not magnificent that every one of these under perpetual sentence of death after all can dimple their cheeks with laughter; that we, every one doomed to become dust, can yet meet around this table as full of joy as spring is full of life, as full of hope as the heavens are full of stars? I tell you we have got a good deal of pluck.

And yet, after all, what would this world be without death? It may be from the fact that we are all victims, from the fact that we are all bound by common fate: it may be that friendship and love are born of this fact, but whatever the fact is, I am perfectly satisfied that the highest possible philosophy is to enjoy to-day, not regretting yesterday, nor fearing to-morrow. So let us suck this orange of life dry, so that when death does come, we can politely say to him: "You are welcome to the peelings. What little there was we have enjoyed."

But there is one splendid thing about the play called life. Suppose that when you die that is the end. The last thing you know you are alive, and the last thing that will happen to you is the curtain, not falling, but the curtain rising on another thought, so that as far as your consciousness is concerned you will and must live forever. No man can remember when he commenced, and no man can remember when he ends. As far as we are concerned we live both eternities, the one past and the one to come, and it is delightful to me to feel satisfied, and to feel in my own heart, that I can never be certain that I have seen the faces I love for the last time.

When I am at such a gathering as this I almost wish I had had the making of the world. What a world I would have made! In that world unhappiness would have been the only sin; melancholy the only crime; joy the only virtue. And whether there is another world nobody knows. Nobody can affirm it; nobody can deny it. Nobody can collect tolls from me, claiming that he owns a turnpike, and nobody can certainly say that the crooked path that I follow, beside which many roses are grown, does not lead to that place. He doesn't know. But if there is such a place, I hope that all good fellows will be welcome.

BOOK NOTES.

An open letter to the Rev. Dr. R. F. Burns, of Halifax, N. S., under the title of "Theological Presumption," is Charles Watts's latest shot at the clergy. In pamphlet, 5 cents.

The "Abolitionist," Samuel Freuder, ex-rabbi, editor and proprietor, comes from 426 Oak street dressed in a suit of blue ink. It promises to issue every Saturday and to advocate Nationalism.

The Transatlantic of April 1 contains an article on M. Trivier, the "French Livingstone," in which the peaceful method employed by Trivier in his recent two years' journey across Africa is contrasted by the writer with the warlike and bloody methods of Baker, Emin Pasha, and Stanley. The magazine contains also many attractive features. Send 10 cents to 328 Washington street, Boston, Mass., and get a sample copy.

The Catholic church receives a fearful going-over in a new book by Dr. Richard Harcourt entitled "The Great Conspiracy." The work is made up of twelve discourses delivered in this city during the past autumn and winter, evidently printed as reported, since they retain the various parenthesized "applauses" and "sensations" which some authors deem it more appropriate to expunge. Every person in San Francisco ought to read this book. It will open their eyes to the great truth that in nearly all departments of the city government the will of the pope and not of the people is the controlling power.

The debate which Mr. Charles Watts, editor of the Toronto Secular Thought, recently held with the editor of the Halifax, Nova Scotia, Evening Mail, is now issued in a 50-page pamphlet, with prefatory letters by Geo. Jacob Holyoake and Col. R. G. Ingersoll, and an introduction by Helen H. Gardener. It is necessary to read only one-half of this debate to be convinced that in challenging his opponent to discussion the editor of the Mail overestimated his own ability. And it makes little difference which half is read. Mr. Watts is unanswerable, and the other editor's replies, which amount only to criticisms, simply corroborate the fact. On platform or on paper Mr. Watts is practically invulnerable. He is also an able dramatic elocutionist, his rendering of the "Maniac" being the most effective we have ever heard.

Bound volumes of FREETHOUGHT, 1889, $3.

CHRONICLES OF SIMON CHRISTIANUS.

CHAPTER VII.

THE CITY AND THE GATES.

The City and its Thousand and Seven Gates.—Guides with Mystic Bottles.—Simon and Hydrocephalus.—Simon's entrance into the City of Conversion.—Receives the Glass of Faith.

1. Now, the city of Conversion was a great city, and round about it was a wall built of huge and rough stones, and they were exceedingly soft, and had no strength in them; and the names of the stones were Fancies, except the bigger of them, which were called by the learned, Fictions; and the foundation of the whole city was of Sackcloth and Ashes.

2. And in the wall of the city were a thousand and seven gates, besides many that were built up, and some that were about to be opened.

3. And over every gate was written in letters of blood, these words, This is the way, and he that entereth by any other gate is a thief and a robber.

4. And by every gate was one of the guide-books open; and a guide stood by showing to the pilgrims that came that his gate and his only, was the one through which the book directed them to enter; and over every gate were many figures and strange devices.

5. But the devices were diverse from each other, and did not accord with one another.

6. Over one gate was the figure of a man crowned with three crowns, and he had a key in his hand, and the name of that gate was Katholikos.

7. And over another gate was the figure of a goose, and beneath it the man with the three crowns was kindling a fire; and the name of that gate was Bo.

8. And over another gate was the figure of a marten; and below that a temple, having at its western end a large tower, and upon the tower a crown; and the name of that gate was États.

9. And over another gate was the figure of a certain plant called kale, and a vine; and a temple with a tower, albeit there was no crown to the tower, but, instead thereof, a lamb. And the people of this gate boasted that such of the pilgrims that entered by their gate could not afterwards by any means get out of the roadway, for that they had hedged it in, and the name of that gate was Electio.

10. And over another gate was the figure of a lighted lantern and a fox; and the name of that gate was des-amis.

11. And over another gate was the figure of a man in a pool of water; and the name of that gate was Aquatilia.

12. And over another gate was the figure of a serpent giving suck to a young kid, and of a wolf sporting with a ram; and beneath was the figure of an old man, having wings upon his shoulders, and in his hand a reaping-hook; and the reaping-hook was well nigh worn away by much usage; and behind the old man with wings there was the figure of an angel, having no belly; and he held aloft, over the head of the old man having wings, a huge hollow cone, as if he would bring it down and smother him thereby; and the name of that gate was Millennium.*

13. But time would fail us to speak of all the gates, therefore these shall suffice.

* After much study, we have, we believe, discovered the import of these gates, and the figures belonging to them. They are symbolic (prophetically of course) of the various creeds of the present day. And the exactness of the metaphoric representations is marvelous in the extreme, and, in our estimation, puts the inspiration of the whole MSS. beyond dispute. The gate, verse 6, represents Catholicism; the three crowns and key are the well-known symbols of the pope. The gate, verse 7, is typical of Huss and his followers (the word Huss, in Bohemian, meaning goose); he was roasted by order of the pope, and therefore, roast goose is his appropriate symbol; and, as everybody knows, Bo is the proper thing to say to a goose. The gate, verse 8, is the Lutheran; the temple and crown, in juxtaposition representing the union of church and state. The gate, verse 9, is the Calvinistic; the temple and the lamb referring to their claim that Christ, and not the state, is head of the church. The gate, verse 10, is the Quaker's gate. Fox is the name of the founder of the sect, and a lighted lantern symbolic of the "inner light" they boast of. The gate, verse 11, evidently has reference to the Baptists. That of verse 12 to the "Adventists," believers in the immediate advent of the millennium, the "old man" is Time, who is about to have the extinguisher put upon him by the bellyless angel behind him.—TRs.

14. And by the gates were many of the guides standing, some with trumpets, some with horns, others with baskets of brimstone and fire, others with censers of smoke, others with nets full of very fine dust.

15. And when any of the pilgrims of the roadway came up, there immediately arose a hubbub, and a tumult, and shoutings, and revilings, and much heavenly howling.

16. For the guides belonging to the various gates loved each other mightily, and lent each other many charitable cuffs, and fought stoutly for the pilgrims, and condemned each other to the flames with abundant heartiness and indisputable equity.

17. But by the gate Des-amis was a man of sober and sedate aspect, looking neither this way, nor that, nor any way; and his hands were clasped together, and the thumb of his right hand revolved as it were in a circle, and the thumb of the left hand pursued it for ever and ever, yea, from everlasting to everlasting did it pursue. Selah.

18. And I, Philo Alet'heia, perceived that many of the men of the gates had on great and greasy cloaks, and under their cloaks had some of them certain bottles, and upon the bottles were exceedingly strange and marvelous devices engraven.

19. And the hieroglyphics upon the bottles were a hidden and ineffable mystery, the meaning whereof no man can tell. And the number of the mystic hieroglyphics were the sacred three.

20. And the first hieroglyphic was like unto a half-circle thickened and, as it were, bent upon itself at the lower end; and the second was a straight line erect; and the third was two straight lines erect, having another line proceeding from the top of the first straight line erect to the bottom of the second.

21. And within the vessels, whereon were the triune hieroglyphics, was a certain curious and potent liquid, the smell whereof was like unto the smell of juniper berries; and the liquid was called by some the water of life, by others the spirit, and by others the comforter; and they who drank plentifully thereof were filled with the spirit, whose surname is the Ghost, and spake with tongues of fire and prophesied.

22. Now when Simon came out of the valley, and saw the city and its gates, he was filled with astonishment; and perceiving the inscriptions that were written over the gates, that they were all written with letters of blood, and all of them alike saying, This is the way; and he that entereth by any other gate is a thief and a robber, he began to be confounded, and marveled with himself how they should all be the right way, when there could be but one right way.

23. And while he debated with himself, the guides about the gates perceived him, and beset him on all sides, each bidding him to come in by their gate, and moving him thereto with many hard threats and emollient promises.

24. And they took hold of him and dragged him this way and that, and the other also. And Simon was utterly confounded, and bestirred himself to go every way, and went none.

25. But presently there came up from the gate called Aquatilia a man of pallid aspect, whose name was Hydrocephalus,* and his voice was like unto the croaking of a multitude of frogs; and he approached Simon and said unto him,

26. Oh, son of my yearning bowels, rejoice that I have found thee; for, verily, if thou goest with me, thou art as a brand plucked from the fire. But, said Simon, What meaneth these other gates, and how should they also be the right way, and each of them the only one? Then answered Hydrocephalus, saying, Heed them not, my son, they are but snares to entrap the unwary; turn away thine eyes from beholding them, and come with us. Look, then, into thy guide-book, first putting on thy glass, and thou wilt know for a surety that ours is the right way.

27. So Simon looked where the guide bid him, and was satisfied, and would have gone with Hydrocephalus, had there not come up a guide from the gate called Electio, and the name of this guide was Cannotbedamned.

28. And Cannotbedamned had an open guide-book in his hand, and he howled furiously at Simon, saying, Read it, and thou wilt perceive that there is no way but ours.

29. And Cannotbedamned would have taken hold of Simon, but that he was filled with the spirit; yea, verily, he was loaded

* In the Greek tongue Hydrocephalus imports water on the brain, therewith, and, by reason of his burden, he staggered to and fro, and went hither and thither, and elsewhere, and all manner of ways; and his voice was thick, and his words came out of his mouth as it were in great bundles; and when he would have gone forward the spirit drew him violently back, and when he would have gone to the right the spirit sent him vehemently to the left.

30. And when Cannotbedamned perceived that the spirit would not let him approach Simon, he suddenly lay down on the ground, and began to speak in an unknown tongue, and his speech issued from his nostrils; and Simon opened his ears and his mouth and hearkened.

31. And Simon marveled and drew near to Cannotbedamned, and looked into his guide-book and perceived that the gate called Electio was indeed the right way, and would have gone in thereat, except that Hydrocephalus was dragging him to the other, even that called Aquatilia.

32. And when Cannotbedamned had made an end of his discourse in unknown tongues, he looked up and saw Simon about to enter the city by the gate Aquatilia, and immediately he leapt up and ran and caught Simon by one of his legs and pulled it within the gateway of the gate Electio, and Hydrocephalus laid hold of Simon's other leg and drew into the other gateway, for the two gateways were next to each other.

33. And there came up some with the nets of fine dust, and beat Simon with them on the face, so that his eyes were filled with the dust; and others came with baskets of brimstone and fire, and others with censers of smoke, and they all let go together, and Hydrocephalus and Cannotbedamned tugged away mightily.

34. And Simon remembered the smell of the fire and brimstone, and fearing that Ahrimanes was upon him, he struggled valiantly to get in, and the two guides pulled and the others laid on, and the stone which divided the gates being (as was said before) very soft, they at length pulled him quite through the stones, having one leg in each gateway.

35. And when Simon was got within the city, and had finished sneezing, the guides bid him weep for his sins. So Simon wept, and the tears burst forth as a great and mighty flood, and the bridge that spanned from the one nostril to the other was carried away by the force of the waters, and still he wept.

36. So he wept till the springs dried up and the waters abated.

37. And they repaired the bridge that was carried away by the floods, and Simon rested himself after his manifold labors.

38. And after some little while Hydrocephalus and Cannotbedamned took Simon by the nose and led him to a certain pool called Bapto.

39. And when Cannotbedamned came to the pool, the spirit again came upon him so that he staggered under his burden, and presently fell into the water.

40. But having, by the grace of the king Jah, been preordained to die in the air, he was not drowned, but was drawn out again.

41. And the spirit having departed from him, he laid hold of Simon, and Hydrocephalus laid hold of him also.

42. And Hydrocephalus addressed himself to the congregation,* saying, Men and brethren, listen to me, and open wide your ears that the words of knowledge may enter. Forasmuch as this sheep hath entered into the sheep-fold of our great king it is needful that he should be well-washed, and ye are gathered together to the sheep-washing, therefore it behoveth us to tell him what is necessary.

43. And Hydrocephalus addressed himself to Simon, saying, Hear, O my son, and give ear to thy shepherd; this day art thou become one of our flock; yea, thou art henceforth a young ram amongst the sheep of our great king. Therefore, see to it that thou obey the voice of thy shepherd; meddle not with the young ewes, and give up thy fleece when it is required of thee; what thy shepherds teach, that shalt thou steadfastly believe, and question not their sayings.

* This is a somewhat abrupt intimation of the presence of a congregation, no previous mention being made of one; but we can only translate the MS. as it really is, we have no idea of improving the language of inspiration.—Trs.

44. But I, Philo Aletheia, hereabouts fell asleep, not being any longer able to listen to the preacher, so that I heard not the remainder of his speech, though I doubt not that it was exceedingly pleasant, and caused the congregation to shed many winks, and mayhap tears also. However, I was awoke from my sleep by much bleating of the heavenly flock; and, looking up, I saw Simon gathering himself out of the pool, and Hydrocephalus helped him.

45. And the guides gave Simon another glass called Faith, and it was exceedingly like unto that called Imagination, nor could any man distinguish between them, except he was skilled in such matters; and he could use his glasses together, either before the other, and they fit into each other, and when he looked through them so great was their virtue that he could by them see many great and wondrous sights, though nothing was present.

46. And Simon was greatly delighted with his glass, and rejoiced exceedingly, and the guides with him.

To be Continued.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF MORALISTS.

Secretary Rau sends to FREETHOUGHT the appended items relating to the Brotherhood of Moralists, of Hannibal, Mo., for the month of March:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

During the month 54 membership certificates were issued, making the total number enrolled 947. The new members are from Oregon, 25; Texas, 1; New Mexico, 2; Iowa, 13; California, 1; Missouri, 1; Ohio, 1; Georgia, 1; Idaho, 6; Kansas, 1; Colorado, 2.

During the month two local Brotherhoods have been organized: one at Taney, Idaho, and one at Prairie City, Iowa. The secretary of the former is Thomas Weaver, and of the other F. V. Draper.

We are under obligations to brothers C. Close, of Grattan, Mich., F. M. Cone, Axtell, Kan., J. D. Shaw, Waco, Tex., Geo. E. Macdonald, San Francisco, H. L. Green, Buffalo, N. Y., for papers and magazines.
F. H. RAU, Secretary.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Balance from February.....	$3 30
Received from Samos Parsons, Cal.....	5 00
H. Foetish, N. M.....	2 00
L. A. Thornton, Ala.....	1 00
G. W. Tillotson, N.Y.....	75
Amasa Wood, Mass.....	30
R. M. Stender, Mo.....	40
S. Kitchens, Ga.....	15
J. W. Fitch, Mass., Charles Miller, M. Gordon, Charles Dal-
kenberg, S. D., J. W. Swansgood, Ind., each 50 cents...	2 50
Dr. Lottridge, Kan., and A. L. McFarlane, Idaho, each 25 cents.....	50
G. H. Eversole, F. Steiner, T. Weaver, Chas. Lambert, W.
G. Morgan, J. Newman, D. Cook, each 10 cents.....	70
	16 60
Expended in mailing constitutions, circulars, membership certificates, letters, etc.....	6 35
	Balance 10 25
	A. R. AYRES, Treasurer.

THE MYTH OF LOT'S WIFE.

The more recent history of the salt pillar, since Lynch, deserves mention. It appears that the travelers immediately after him found it shaped by the storms into a spire; that a year or two later it had utterly disappeared; and about the year 1870 Prof. Palmer, on visiting the place, found at some distance from the main salt bed, as he says, "a tall, isolated needle of salt or salt rock, which does really bear a curious resemblance to an Arab woman with a child on her shoulders."

Three years later, Smith's "Dictionary of the Bible" makes its concession to the old belief regarding Sodom and Gomorrah as slight as possible, and the myth of Lot's wife entirely disappears.

The theological effort to compromise with science now came in more strongly than ever. This effort had been made long before: as we have seen, it had begun to show itself decidedly as soon as the influence of the Baconian philosophy was felt. Clerc thought that the shock caused by the sight of fire from heaven killed Lot's wife instantly and made her body rigid as a statue. Eichhorn suggested that she fell into a stream of melted bitumen. Michaelis suggested that her relatives raised a monument of salt rock to her memory. Friedrichs suggested that she fell into the sea, and that the salt stiffened around her clothing, thus making a statue of her. Some claimed that a shower of sulphur came down upon her, and that the word which has been translated "salt" could possibly be translated "sulphur." Others hinted that the salt by its antiseptic qualities preserved her body as a mummy. De Saulcy, as we have seen, thought that a piece of salt rock fell upon her; and very recently Principal Dawson ventures the explanation that a flood of salt mud coming from a volcano incrustated her.

But theologians themselves were the first to show the inadequacy of these explanations. The more rationalistic pointed out the fact that they were contrary to the sacred text; Von Bohlen, an eminent professor at Königsberg, in his sturdy German honesty, declared that the salt pillar gave rise to the story, and compared the pillar of salt causing this transformation legend to the rock in Greek mythology which gave rise to the transformation legend of Niobe.

On the other hand, the more severely orthodox protested against such attempts to explain away the clear statements of Holy Writ. Dom Calmet, while presenting many of these explanations made as early as his time, gives us to understand that nearly all theologians adhered to the idea that Lot's wife was instantly and really changed into salt; and in our own time, as we shall presently see, have come some very vigorous protests.

Similar attempts were made to explain the other ancient legends regarding the Dead sea. One of the most recent of these is that the cities of the plain, having been built with blocks of bituminous rock, were set on fire by lightning, a contemporary earthquake helping on the work. Still another is that accumulations of petroleum and inflammable gas escaped through a fissure, took fire, and so produced the catastrophe.

Against this sort of rationalism perhaps the most vigorous of recent protests appeared in 1876, in an edition of Monseigneur Mislin's work on "The Holy Places." In order to give weight to the book, he spread his qualities at great length on the title-page. Among other things, he was prelate of the papal household, apostolic prothonotary, a doctor of theology and of philosophy, and his work is prefaced by letters from Pope Pius IX. and sundry high ecclesiastics—and from Alexandre Dumas. His hatred of Protestant missionaries, in the East, is phenomenal; he calls them "bagmen," ascribing all mischief and infamy to them; and his hatred is only exceeded by his credulity. He cites all the arguments in favor of the salt statue at Usdum as the identical one into which Lot's wife was changed, adds some of his own, and presents her as "a type of doubt and heresy." With the proverbial facility of theologians in translating any word of a dead language into anything that suits their purpose, he says that the word in the nineteenth chapter of Genesis, which is translated "statue, or 'pillar,'" may be translated "eternal monument;" he is especially severe on poor Monsieur De Salcy for thinking that Lot's wife was killed by the falling of a piece of salt rock, and actually boasts that it was he who caused De Saulcy, a member of the French Inquisition, to suppress the obnoxious passage in a later edition.

Nor did such rationalizing efforts fare much better among Protestant theologians. In his excellent work on "The Land of Israel," Canon Tristram makes an energetic protest against scientific explanations of biblical statements.

Between 1870 and 1880 came two killing blows at the older theories, and they were dealt by two American scholars of the highest character. First of these may be mentioned Dr. Philip Schaff, a professor in the Presbyterian Theological Seminary at New York, who published his travels in 1877. In a high degree he united the scientific with the religious spirit, but the trait which made him especially fit for dealing with this subject was his straightforward German honesty. He tells the simple truth regarding the pillar of salt, so far as its physical origin and characteristics are concerned, and leaves his reader to draw the natural inference as to its relation to the myth. With the fate of Dr. Robertson Smith in Scotland, and Dr. Woodrow in South Carolina before him—both recently driven from their professorships for truth-telling—Dr. Schaff deserves honor for telling as much as he dares.

Similar in effect, and even more bold in statement, were the "Travels" of the Rev. Henry Osborne, published in 1878. In a truly scientific spirit, he calls attention to the similarity between the Dead sea, with the river Jordan, to sundry other lake and river systems; he points out the endless variations between writers describing the salt formations at Usdum; accounts rationally for these variations, and quotes from Dr. Anderson's report, saying, "From the soluble nature of the salt and the crumbling looseness of the marl, it might be well imagined that, while some of these needles are in process of formation, others are being washed away."

Thus came out, little by little, the truth regarding the Dead sea myths, and especially the salt pillar at Usdum; but the final truth remained to be told, and now one of the purest men and truest divines, of this century, told it. Arthur Stanley, dean of Westminster, visiting the country and thoroughly exploring it, allowed that the physical features of the Dead sea and its shores suggested the myths and legends, and he sums up the whole as follows: "A great mass of legends and exaggerations, partly the cause and partly the result of the old belief that the cities were buried under the Dead sea, has been gradually removed in recent years."

So, too, about the same time, Dr. Conrad Furrer, pastor of the great church of St. Peter at Zurich, gave to the world a book of travels, reverent and thoughtful, and, in this, honestly acknowledged that the needles of salt at the southern end of the Dead sea "in primitive times gave rise to the tradition that Lot's wife was transformed into a statue of salt." Thus was the mythical character of this story at last openly confessed by leading churchmen on both continents.

Plain statements like these, from such sources, left the high theological position more difficult than ever, and now a new compromise was attempted. As the Siberian mother tried to save her best-beloved child from the pursuing wolves by throwing over to them her less favored children, so an effort was now made in a leading commentary to save the legends of the valley of Siddim and the miraculous destruction of the cities by throwing overboard the legend of Lot's wife.

But even this utterly failed, for there soon followed the worst blows of all. First, from Van de Velde, who made his journey in 1851 and 1852. He is a most devout man, but he confesses that the volcanic action at the Dead sea must have been far earlier than the catastrophe mentioned in our sacred books, and that "the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah had nothing to do with this." A few years later a very eminent dignitary of the English church, Canon Tristram, doctor of divinity and fellow of the Royal Society, who had explored the Holy Land thoroughly; after some generalities about miracles, gave up the whole attempt to make science agree with the myths, and used these words: "It has been frequently assumed that the district of Usdum and its sister cities was the result of some tremendous geological catastrophe. . . . Now, careful examination by competent geologists, such as Monsieur Lartet and others, has shown that the whole district has assumed its present shape slowly and gradually through a succession of ages, and that its peculiar phenomena are similar to those of other lakes." So sank from view the whole mass of Dead sea myths and legends, and science gained a victory both for geology and comparative mythology.

An amusing result has followed this development of opinion. As we have already seen, traveler after traveler, Catholic and Protestant, now visits the Dead sea, and hardly one of them follows the New Testament injunction to "remember Lot's wife." Nearly every one of them seems to think it best to forget her. Of the great mass of pious legends they are shy enough, but that of Lot's wife, as a rule, they seem never to have heard of, and, if they do allude to it, they simply cover the whole subject with a haze of conventionality and sacred rhetoric.

Naturally, under this state of things, there has followed the usual attempt to throw off from Christendom the responsibility of the old belief, and in 1887 came a curious effort of this sort. In that year appeared the Rev. Dr. Cunningham Geikie's valuable work on "The Holy Land and the Bible." In it he makes the following statement as to the salt formation at Usdum: "Here and there, hardened portions of salt, withstanding the water, while all around them melts and wears off, rise up isolated pillars, one of which bears among the Arabs the name of Lot's wife."

In the light of the previous history, there is something at once pathetic and comical in this attempt to throw the myth upon the shoulders of the poor Arabs. The myth was not originated by Mohammedans; it appears, as we have seen, first among the Jews, and, I need hardly remind the reader, comes out in the Book of Wisdom, and in Josephus, and has been steadily maintained by fathers, martyrs, and doctors of the church, by at least one pope, and by innumerable bishops, priests, monks, commentators, and travellers, Catholic and Protestant, ever since. In thus throwing the responsibility of the myth upon the Arabs, Dr. Geikie appears to show both the "perfidious genius" of his countrymen and their incapacity to recognize a joke.—DR. ANDREW D. WHITE, in the Popular Science Monthly.

KISSING THE BOOK.

"Straws show which way the wind blows;" and the latest straw which indicates the ever-freshening wind of state secularization is a decision of Judge Arnold, of Philadelphia, on March 26, that, in giving testimony in court, it is unnecessary to kiss the book.

The case in question was brought by the pupils of one Professor Stone, the owner and manager of some "Artistic Ladies' Tailoring and Dressmaking Parlors," on a charge of conspiracy and false pretense. One of the witnesses for the defense, a Miss Marian Taylor, had partially given in her testimony, when a juror objected, because she had not kissed the Bible. Thereupon a breezy discussion sprang up between the lawyers, which was cut short by Judge Arnold's ordering the witness to be sworn by the uplifted hand. He added:

I am not surprised that this witness did not kiss the book. I would not do it either—a dirty book like that. This custom is a relic of idolatry, and the sooner it is abolished the better it will be. I don't think this witness objected to kissing the book because she intended to lie, but because it is a dirty book. I respect her regard for her person and her health.

The italics are our own, as we wished to emphasize that portion of the judge's speech which is especially startling to this conservative city of ours. When our court judges protest against kissing the book, not only on hygienic grounds, but because it "is a relic of idolatry," and when they clinch their protest by the assertion that they themselves "would not do it either," the days of the judicial oath are numbered. The daily papers, indeed, already acknowledge that Judge Arnold's decision "may work a complete revolution in the courts in that particular." And the Press has deemed the occurrence of sufficient importance to be made the subject of editorial comment—being careful, however, to change the words of the judge, "a relic of idolatry," into "a relic of barbarism." This change has doubtless been made to spare the feelings of its orthodox patrons, who may be sensitive over the slight upon their Bible fetish; and for this little concession to prejudice, I suppose, we can hardly blame any newspaper. It further adds editorially:

The Bible in use is generally a very dirty one, and the practice of having every witness, high and low, clean and dirty, healthy and sick, press his or her lips to it in taking the oath, is a disgusting survival from an age of superstition, which is extremely offensive to a nice taste, and favorable to the spread of disease.

After the trial, Judge Arnold was interviewed, and asked "what he meant." He replied:

I mean that it was established by the church, to show the humiliation of the people before the first judges, who were clerics. It has been abolished in England; judicial declarations subject to penalties being substituted.

I mean that it is a relic of a superstitious age and superstitious people, under the subjection of priestcraft. It is a relic of that age in which trial by fire took the place of trial by jury; when a man's guilt or innocence depended on his physical capacity to resist pain and torture. But its worst feature is the dirt and disease which is imparted to the book by the constant handling it receives from dirty witnesses; and I not only would not kiss such a book myself, but I have respect for those who have enough respect for themselves to refuse to do so.

It is like the custom of kissing brass toes of graven images; some worshippers kiss the toe until it is worn smooth; while others only stoop down and pretend to kiss it. They are just as devout as those who touch the toe with their lips, but they have too much regard for their health to touch their lips to the spot where thousands of others have been.

I think swearing on the Bible should be abolished. I think a witness can take just as good an oath with the uplifted hand as on the Bible.

But it is not likely that the ripples of excitement created will be confined to the abuse into the midst of which this decision dropped so unexpectedly. As is usual in such cases, the effects will eventually spread far beyond the present area. If kissing the Bible is acknowledged by such high authority to be "a relic of idolatry which ought to be abolished," people will soon be asking why that other relic of idolatry, the uplifted hand and the oath, should not also be done away with. "It is only the first step which costs." And they will then come to see the advisability of bringing about what the American Secular Union demands in this respect, viz.: The substitution of a solemn affirmation, under the pains and penalties of perjury, in the courts, and in all other departments of the government, in place of the common forms of a judicial oath.

IDA C. CRADDOCK, Corr. Sec'y Am. Secular Union.

Perhaps So.

To the Editors of Freethought:

The city of Magdala is wholly in your eye, and in the eyes of modern Christians. It has been changed from the east side of the lake to the west side to accommodate Christian writers. The town had no existence until a hundred years after Christ.

G. W. BROWN, M.D.

Rockford, Ill.

Around the World.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Please send me a copy of Miss Lilian Leland's journey "Around the World." I was a subscriber to "Man" as long as it was published and edited by her father. I never met him, yet for some reason I always loved and admired him. For this reason and on account of her handsome face I am anxious to read her book. Your paper, like whisky and fiddles, improves with age. I met Mr. Putnam when he was here some years ago, and suppose he remembers me. He was at my house and talked for some time about his work in the Liberal field. I was very much surprised at his enthusiasm in the cause, but I see from his letters it has not abated any. He has done as much to make Liberalism popular and respectable as anyone in the United States—Colonel Ingersoll excepted.

Louisville, Ky.

Truly,

WILLIAM T. CARTER.

Mrs. Krekel at Boulder Creek.

To the Editors of Freethought:

We have had a rare treat in the way of a course of lectures by Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel. To say that our expectations were more than realized hardly does justice to the gifted lady. She argues from the constructive standpoint of Liberalism in preference to the destructive, and is evidently a believer in the evolution of religion. For these reasons she is eminently and particularly fitted to do pioneer work. She does not repel by ridicule, burlesque, and sarcasm, people of refined sensibilities who are just outgrowing the mental shackles of the unhappy past, but by invincible logic she appeals to their heads and also to all that is highest and best in their hearts. The beautiful ethics she advocates are not only ennobling, but also eminently human and natural, and cannot fail to attract wherever she may give them from the rostrum. She has done much good here for our cause by removing prejudice and inculcating new ideas. We have all learned something. Wherever pioneer work is particularly needed, this lady should be heard. Hoping she may receive many calls before she leaves the Golden state, and the good work thus be given a lasting impetus, I remain

Yours very sincerely, W. S. RODGERS.

Boulder Creek, Cal.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS.

Raymond, April 16; Grub Gulch, April 17, 18, and 19; Fresno Flats, April 20, 21, 22, 23 and 24.

READ our premium list on page 237.

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS & TRACTS.

- God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.
- Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.
- Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.
- God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.
- Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.
- Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.
- Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.
- The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel F. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.
- Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.
- The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoe maker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 22r Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1463 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lulge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st. Rapp & Debarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st. Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

Two Pious Souls With a Single Thought.

A young man who travels for a New York Bible concern was at the Boody House yesterday, and along in the afternoon, following the prompting or rather the wooings of the spirit, started back to the bar for a drink. He had just reached the door when he was startled by an apparition in the somber-clothed person of his employer, who had stopped over a day on a flying trip to Chicago, where Bible houses find a large and attractive field.

Seeing the employer, the young man unconcernedly walked on into the washroom, and began to lave his hands. The employer carelessly sauntered down the long corridor, round through the billiard hall, and just as he entered the bar again encountered his traveling employee, who, bowing politely, walked on into the billiard hall and became absorbed in watching a game of billiards. But he kept an eye on his employer, and when he disappeared returned to the bar after the coveted drink.

Again he ran into the old man and proceeded on into the washroom, where he again bathed his hands. The employer then took a turn watching the spinning ivory globes. Anon the young man made another effort. The employer was again encountered. Then they changed places once more, the young man watching the billiards and the old man washing his hands.

The drummer then conceived and executed a coup d'état, or something of that sort. He called for his coat at the coat-room and told the old man as they again passed in the bar that he guessed he'd go out and call on a minister whom he was working up into a Bible-buying mood.

Then he walked around, came through the billiard hall, and once more went into the bar.

"Well," he said, smiling pleasantly, as he encountered his employer again, "forgot to wash my hands." Then he stole into the washroom, peered around the corner of the wall until he saw the old man disappear, then he hastened back to the bar. The same inspiration had fired the old man, and they collided once more. Then they had to wash again.

By this time their hands were white and soft and their fingers beginning to shrivel up like a Canton-avenue washerwoman. Both were growing desperate, and the old man said in a careless, off-hand manner:

"Oh, by the way, Phillip, do you ever drink a glass of beer?"

Phillip said; "Well, once in a great while."

Then a great feeling of relief filled them. Distrust was metamorphosed into perfect trust and sweet confidence, and the dark despair of the hope that was dying in each longing breast suddenly brightened into the glad, joyous, sparkling sunshine of expectations all fulfilled and hopes fully realized.—Ex.

"BRAINS, Science, and Civilization," by A. Schell. A 16 page pamphlet, price, 5c.

TRAVELING ALONE

A WOMAN'S JOURNEY

AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

(Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Price, by mail, - - - 30 cents.

Address The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BRAIN AND THE BIBLE.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology. BY EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

We can recommend this as one of the most valuable works in the list of Freethought publications. Printed in large type on fine paper and elegantly bound. Price $1. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO. 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against LIBERTY,

By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

NATHANIEL VAUGHN

A Splendid Radical Novel.

BY FREDERIKA MACDONALD.

404 pages. Price reduced to $1. The Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parson, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

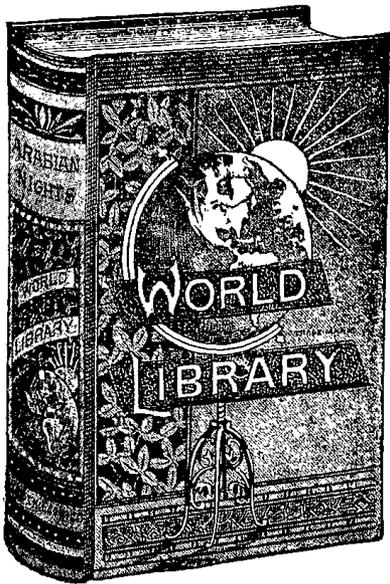

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure. BY W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo. 399pp., $1.50.

Freethought Publishing Co.,

838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRIGG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY.—A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESS.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last an heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendu, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavillion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir. Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder-worker?

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the Invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

WAVERLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portraiture of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. PRESCOTT.

B'NJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll,) with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; OR THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated the scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POE'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, 10 Cents.

Address, The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

Appropriately So-Called.

They begin the classes in some of the public schools nowadays in the rudiments of civil government at a very early age. And it seems that the young people get, on the whole, a pretty correct idea of the way we are governed. A teacher, who, by the way, is rather fond of English things, was orally instructing a class the other day in the foundations of political science. She gave her young pupils a very interesting lecture about the British system of government. And then she asked the boy at the head of the class:

"And now, Johnnie, what are the men called who govern or rule over us in this country?"

"Kings," said Johnnie, promptly.

"O., no. Tell me, the next one, by whom are we governed?"

"Queens!"

"No! Next boy."

"Jacks!" said the next boy.

And he was not promoted to the head of the class.

A MINISTER in Oregon kissed his cook and his congregation asked him to leave the church. The minister was not wise. He should have kissed the ladies of his congregation, instead of the cook, and his salary would undoubtedly have been raised.

Fogg—I went to hear Gusherleigh preach last Sunday; Brown—Why I thought you hated to hear him. Fogg—So I do, but it was his farewell sermon. I went out of pure gratitude.

"Oh, would I were a bird!" she sang. And the young man leaned his head wearily upon his hand and murmured—"Would you were, and the window open."

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm (large profits, quick sales). SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 542 Broadway, N. Y.

WEBSTER'S
HANDY DICTIONARY

OF THE
ENGLISH LANGUAGE

GIVING

The Spelling, Pronunciation, and meaning of the words, Useful Tables, the Metric System, etc., and many engravings from the latest edition

of

The large Dictionary of
NOAH WEBSTER, LL.D.

Price, by mail, 30 cents. Address THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

J. A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

WATCHFUL WATCH-BUYERS WILL WANT

WETTSTEIN'S

WELL GOING, WARRANTED WATCHES AND WATCH WORK.

Unequaled in quality and price. All carefully examined before shipment and accompanied by written guarantee. Order of WETTSTEIN, who has been established in the same town 31 years; who is an expert in his line, and who is not afraid to speak his honest thought.

LATEST IMPROVED AMERICAN STEM-WINDERS.—Three-ounce Silverine case, 7 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9.50; 15 jewels, $12.50; do., adjusted, $16.50. In 3-ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $15.50, and $19.50. In 4-ounce case, $1 extra, and in 4-oz., dust-proof case, $2 extra. In best open-face, dust-proof filled Gold case, 7 jewels, $16; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $20.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, inside glass cap, $2 extra; do., gold cap, $4 extra; extra fine engraved, $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, Gold cap, 7 jewels, $23; 11 jewels, $24.50; 15 jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special artistic engraved Louis XIV. cases, $3 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen in the best stores. All filled cases guaranteed 20 years. Beware of others!

THE CELEBRATED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH.—The best in the world for the money; all modern improvements; a perfect watch. In Silverine case, $19.50; in 3-ounce coin Silver case, $22.50; 4-ounce, $23.50; 5-ounce, $25; 6-ounce, $27 (no better sold for $40 elsewhere). In open-face, dust-proof case, filled Gold, $27; do., hinged, glass inside cap, $29; do., gold cap, $31; do., hunting, $33; do., Louis XIV. style, $35; in special artistic cases, $3 to $10 more; in 14-karat solid Gold cases, $50, $60 to $100.

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES.—All hunting, stem wind; best filled Gold cases, $18, $20, $26; 14-karat solid Gold, $28, $30, $36, $40, etc., to $150; latter special fine artistic embossed cases, set with Diamonds and other jewels.

DIAMONDS.—I am an expert in this line, and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market price. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35, for $25; do., worth $70, for $50; do., worth $100, for $75; do., worth $200, for $150; do., worth $500, for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

RINGS AND EMBLEMS.—A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of the latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill order at lower prices or send better goods.

SUNDRIES.

Best Spectacles or Eye-glasses	$1.00	6 Rogers Bros.' tr.-plated Table-spoons	$3.40
Gold do., $5 and	6.00	Solid coin Silver Spoons, marked, per oz	1.60
(Send line of finest type you can read		Silver Thimbles	.30
14 in. from eyes, and I can fit you.)		Elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, worth $6	4.50
Best Razor (a luxury) $2; a good one	1.00	4 Best Violin Strings	.50
6 Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives	1.75	6 Guitar Strings	.70
" Forks	1.75	Largest Albums, $1, $2, $3, $4 to	10.00
" Teaspoons	1.70	Opera and Field Glasses, $5 to	15.00

All goods guaranteed satisfactory, or money refunded.

Send me your watches for repairs. Best work. Cleaning, $1; springs, $1; and returned free; will go a thousand miles as safely as one.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

N. B. For prices of FREETHOUGHT BADGES see other column of this paper.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Jaues.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Jaues.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.
ALL FOR $1.20.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

ania, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San Francisco.

Wm. W. NOBLE,
Merchant Tailor.

1222 STOCKTON ST.

Bet. Pacific and Broadway.

DRESS SUITS A SPECIALTY

Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass by.

PUTNAM'S WORKS.

The New God. 10c. The New God was made by an artist hand, guided by a poet soul. It is as perfect as sculpture. The creator makes his "god" in his own image, and breathes into his nostrils the breath of his own life.—L. K. Washburn.

Golden Throne. A romance. Price, $1 00. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words, the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Walfs and Wanderings. A new American story. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1 00. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—John Swinton's Paper

Comethrus. A poem. Price, $1. "It is crammed with life, thought and profound emotion, poured forth, it seems to me, with extraordinary richness and beauty."—Dr. Henry W. Bellows.

ottlieb: His Life; or, Love Triumphant. A Romance of Earth, Heaven and Hell. Price, 25 cents. "To describe all the beauties of this simple, yet touchingly told little tale, would be a work of which I confess myself utterly incapable. To realize what it is, you must read the book itself. I have never read anything so exquisitely beautiful and good in all my life before."—Elmyn Drake Slenker.

WASHBURN'S WORKS.

The False Teachings of the Christian Church. Price, 10 cents.

Sunday and the Sabbath. Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. Price, 10 cents.

The Catholic Church and the Public Schools. Price, 5 cents.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

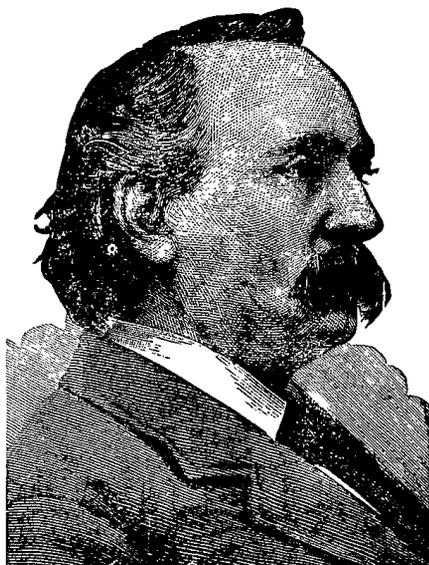

VINELAND, N. J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures. embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

The Truth Seeker Annual

AND

FREETHINKERS' ALMANAC.

1890—(E.M. 290).

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS: Calander for 1890.
Freethought in the United States. 1880.
Faded Flowers (poem) By J. E. Remsburg
The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue, by T. E. Wakeman.
Mostly Fools W. Stewart Ross (Saladin)
Record of the Spanish Inquisition.
Dates of the Fabrication of some Roman Catholic Dogmas.
The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a moral. Helen H. Gardener.
The Middle Ages, Illustrated.—The Priest, the Supernatural World, the Reformation, Future Terrors.
The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated.
Freethought Journals in the United States.
In Search of a Spirit, E. M. Macdonald
Why I Left the Church, Hugh O. Pentecost

115 pages, price 25 cents.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

W. S. BELL's "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Company.

"Bible Contradictions," 15 cents.

Standard Scientific Works

Works by Alexander Bain.

English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
Education as a Science.....1.75

Works by Charles Darwin.

Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00

Works by J. W. Draper.

History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75

Works by Ernst Haeckel.

The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00

Works by Huxley.

Lay Sermons.....$1.75
The Advance of Science......25
American Addresses.....1.25
More Criticisms on Darwin......50
The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00

Works by John Stewart Mill.

Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
On Liberty.....1.25

Works by Richard A. Proctor.

Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
The Moon.....2.00

Works by Herbert Spencer.

Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
Man versus the State......30
First Principles.....2.00
Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
Universal Progress.....2.00
Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
Education.....1.25
Organic Evolution......75

Works by Andrew D. White.

Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
The Warfare of Science.....1.00

Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.

Body and Mind.....$1.50
Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50

Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.

Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

By Carl Marx.

Capital.....$3.00

By Asa Gray.

Darwiniana.....$2.00

By L. L. McLaughlin.

Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50

By John B. Henck.

Field-Book for Railroad Engineers.....$2.50

By C. Marcel.

Study of Languages.....$1.25

By Lester F. Ward.

Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00

By Frederick Overman.

A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00

B. F. G. Fairfield.

Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25

By W. B. Carpenter.

Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25

By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.

Evolution.....$1.50

By Sir John Lubbock.

Origin of Civilization.....$5.00

By Charles A. Abbott.

A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50

By Garrett P. Serviss.

Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50

By Nathan Sheppard.

Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50

English as She is Spoke.....$.30
English as She is Wrote......30
Thos. Carlyle—His Life, Books, Theories......30
Comedies for Amateur Acting......30
The Distracted Young Preacher......25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

—BY—

W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form, a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

I HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE

Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.

13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order.

The Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is entirely damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thief-resisting. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that, ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only.

Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future

Republic of North America

BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1. Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

Dr. Wood's Rhubarb Bitters

impart a delicious flavor to all drinks, cure dyspepsia, promote digestion, and regulate the bowels. Ask your dealer for them. A. G. Wood, 323 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

PRINTING!

Having procured one of the best Presses manufactured and a large assortment of display type, and employing competent workmen, the Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

- Letter-heads,
- Bill-heads,
- Programmes,
- Envelopes,
- Business Cards,
- Postal Cards,
- Tickets,
- Placards,
- Receipts,
- Posters,
- Dodgers,
- Circulars,
- Etc. etc.

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

REMSBURG'S WORKS.

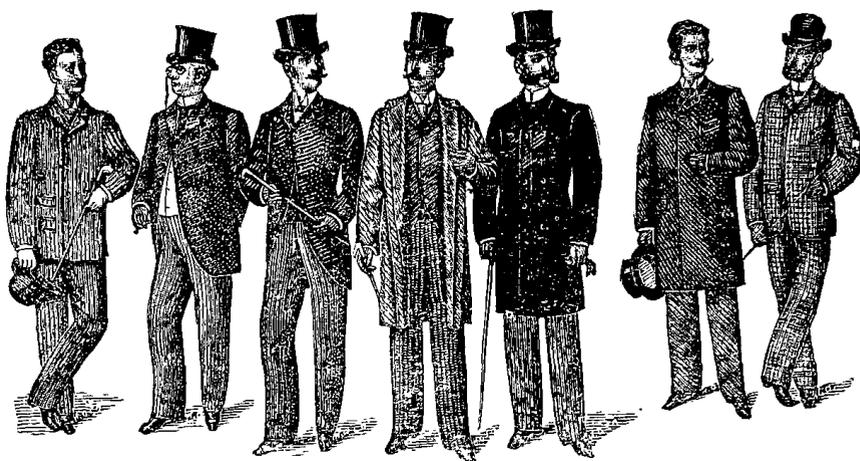

False claims. Price 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Anti-slavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic.

Fathers of the Republic Paine, Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. Price 15 cents.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception, Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR..... $25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.
TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.
OLIVER HINCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

THE "COSMIAN HYMN BOOK."

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

(WORDS AND MUSIC)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies,
For Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price, $1.50. Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Sacramental Syrup.

Mistakes will occur even in as sacred an observance as the Holy Sacrament. Of course the observance is only symbolical and hence it made no particular difference. The good people at the Methodist church, as is their custom at quarterly meetings, observed this scriptural injunction last Sunday, and the sinners in the back seats could not help but wonder what made the people look so wry-faced after leaving the communion altar. The joke was too good, however, and it leaked out the next day that a mistake had occurred and the communicants had partaken of the contents of the wrong bottle. It was perfectly harmless, however, as it was only horehound syrup and if it did not produce the desired effect, may have relieved somebody's cold. —Aitchison Co., Mo., Journal.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin..... $ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm " " "Diamond" 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, PUTNAM & MACDONALD, 04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

- Per Year..... $1.50
- Six Months..... .75
- Three Months..... .50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth, obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 16.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, APRIL 19, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - - APRIL 19, 1890.

SAN FRANCISCO has all sorts of religious curiosities. The latest addition to the collection is Archimandrite Innocent, a Russian prelate contributed by St. Petersburg. He will go into the Greek museum on Powell street.

THE Young Men's Christian Association has protested against paying its taxes, and the authorities have the protest under consideration. Meanwhile the Association has raised about $90,000 toward building another hall. The plea of poverty on the part of these religious deadheads is a great humbug.

THE believers in Erickson's prophecy that the cities of the bay should be destroyed last Monday had the good sense to hedge. They prayed that the disaster might be averted, and now claim that their prayers were answered. If the conditions of God's prophecy can be done away with in this manner, the almighty and his chosen might as well save their wind, and let things drift.

THE Eastern churches and missionary societies who favor Chinese emigration should turn their attention to San Francisco's Chinatown before expending any more effort in foreign countries. Of the twenty thousand or perhaps forty thousand Chinese in this city not one in one hundred is Christianized or civilized. They are all as oriental as when they landed. They live in filth and squalor, and their women are prostitutes. Why should the clergy desire more of them until these are converted to ways of decency and civilization?

PRIEST ROONEY told a large Catholic audience in St. Francis church last Sunday evening that the restoration of the temporal power of the pope was a necessity to the spiritual rule of the supreme pontiff. Said he: "The vicar of Jesus Christ should not be the subject or even the guest of any king or potentate. It is not compatible with the dignity of the church. He should be the head of a principality modest enough, may be, not to excite his human ambitions, but where he could discharge his sacred functions with the absolute liberty his great office demands. The church, the bishops, and 230,000,000 Catholics think that his spiritual independence requires that he should be the head of his own principality." This argument rests on the fundamental fallacy that the pope is the representative of Christ, than which there was never a greater error. He is merely a man raised to power by the delusions and superstitions of mankind. He is the chiefest among ten thousand impostors, and altogether detestable. He has the same right to temporal authority that any other citizen has, and no more.

A DEBATE.

On the evenings of Thursday and Friday, May 1 and 2, there will be a debate on Spiritualism at Metropolitan Temple, between MOSES HULL and SAMUEL P. PUTNAM. The question is: "Do the Phenomena of Spiritualism Demonstrate a Future Life?" Mr. Hull is one of the most skillful debaters on the platform, and he will take the affirmative of the above proposition, Mr. Putnam denying.

Tickets may be procured at the office of FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street; at the Carrier Dove office, 841 Market street; at the office of the Golden Gate, in the Flood Building; or at the Freethought and Spiritualistic meetings. Admission to the hall both evenings is fixed at 25 cents, or 15 cents each evening. It will be well for those desiring to attend to get their tickets in advance, as only a number sufficient to comfortably fill the hall are to be issued.

This debate should rally some splendid audiences, both of those who believe in Spiritualism and those who do not. Mr. Hull is confident that the former will be present in a body, and there should be enough of the skeptical in attendance to preserve the equilibrium.

PROPHECY GONE WRONG AS USUAL.

Prophet Erickson or some of his followers last week favored us with a printed warning headed "The Doom of the Cities. Woe, Woe, Woe!" giving the occupants of FREETHOUGHT office to understand that unless they took to the hills before Monday, the 14th inst., they would be swallowed up by an earthquake and drowned by a large tidal wave.

Mr. Erickson sets forth that he is a native of Norway; that on the 24th to 27th of January last he was "in the spirit," and that during this time the Lord showed him the destruction of San Francisco, Oakland, and Alameda, eighty days from date. It was to take four minutes to complete the devastation. We are assured by Mr. Erickson that those seeking refuge on the mountains will be provided with free passes to the East by the Lord, who will preserve the railways.

Other features of the prophecy are the destruction of Chicago and Milwaukee. Lake Michigan was to do the business for Chicago first, and then proceed to Milwaukee. The latter place would come up again, but Chicago should be heard of no more.

more or less interest in the Nationalist propaganda: First is the Weekly Star, which, though committed to the Single Tax as a means, looks to something like Nationalism as an end. Mr. F.

a resolution at the head of the editorial column declaring itself the official journal of the movement. It was naturally expected, considering the warmth of the discussion, that the Pacific Union would express more or less feeling, but it does not. On the contrary its remarks are mild; thus:

"The two sections of the movement are the same in principle, the same in object, differing only in method and in choice of leadership. That inaugurated by the seceders is in a position to command public respect, and we confidently look for its steady growth, and final recognition, not only as the true exponent of the principles of Nationalism, but as the legally constituted state organization."

In view of the animosities engendered by this convention, it is very gratifying to know that some old sores are in a fair way to be healed. For instance, the Weekly Star and the Pacific Union, formerly not friendly, now find themselves on the same side of a great question. Rabbi Freuder's strained relations with J. H. Redstone should be cemented hereafter by the kinship of a common cause. Even the dissolution of friendship heretofore existing between Burnette G. Haskell and Mr. C. F. Burgman seems likely to be forgotten. Mr. Haskell, we understand, consents that the dead past shall be its own undertaker.

FREETHOUGHT takes an interest in Nationalism because many of its readers are connected with the movement, and because it is an agitation for something better than old-line politics. With the recent split we have no concern except so far as it affects the progress of ideas. The seceders call themselves the conservative element, which is rather against them, as conservatism never does more than hold its own, and rarely that. Perhaps we have in this article given a view of the local field not to be found in any other paper.

TO OUR PATRONS.

As our readers know, we have just passed through one of the hardest winters ever known to this coast—five months of unprecedented dullness of trade. We hope that all this time the subscribers to FREETHOUGHT have borne in mind the effect that this stagnation must have had upon the business of FREETHOUGHT'S publishers. The first three months, as all publishers of papers know, are usually the best months in the year. In 1889, January, February, and March were better for FREETHOUGHT than any six other months. This year, however, owing to the causes mentioned, the case is exactly opposite, and there are a thousand dollars due on subscriptions that should have been paid the first of January. It is hoped that subscribers will not allow this state of affairs to continue. Those in arrears can ascertain the fact by consulting the date on the wrapper of their paper. Besides, we have sent them "reminders" by letter, and we look confidently to our friends to give the matter their immediate attention.

SPIRITUALISM NOT SCIENCE.

What is Spiritualism? It is a certain set of phenomena and an inference from these phenomena. The phenomena simply do not constitute Spiritualism. To admit the facts of Spiritualism is not to admit Spiritualism itself. Spiritualism is more than the facts, infinitely more. It is an opinion, a philosophy, a metaphysics founded upon these facts. A vast spiritual world far greater than the present visible world is inferred from the facts. Facts and inference, therefore, are what constitute Spiritualism. Let this be thoroughly understood. One says he sees a spirit. That affirmation includes two elements; it includes mental phenomena and a mental conclusion. There are certain modes of consciousness, and from these modes of consciousness it is inferred that a spirit is present. No one ever sees a spirit, that is impossible. Only material manifestations are seen, and from the manifestations it is reasoned that a spirit is at hand to produce them.

Understand, therefore, that Spiritualism as I define it includes two things, facts and inference. What I am dealing with are not the facts but the inference. I don't deny any facts but I do deny an inference. The whole question is right here, on the inference, not on the facts.

Immortality is not a fact of Spiritualism; it is simply an inference. An inference may be a truth, it may be knowledge, it may be science. An inference from facts may be as indisputable as the fact themselves. I don't deny the validity of an inference. But I want it distinctly understood that immortality is not to human experience a fact, but an inference of the reason confronting certain facts.

Spiritualism is, therefore, first of all, certain facts; secondly, an inference, or conclusion from those facts.

What is science?

Science is not simply a vast aggregation of facts, it is not simply knowledge; it is classified knowledge. It is knowledge arranged, correlated, put into a body of universally accepted truth. The fact that I slept last night is not a part of science. So with millions of facts of daily occurrence. They do not belong to science, but simply to experience. All experience is not science. Science is the choice result of experience, it is selected experience, it is the perfect fruit of knowledge.

Until Spiritualism is correlated with this knowledge, made harmonious with other accepted truths, it cannot be science. It may be knowledge to the individual, but it is not science to the race.

One man cannot make science, nor two men, nor a hundred men. It takes the experience and the faculties of the whole race to make science, and what the whole race cannot know will never become a part of the science of the race.

Science is pre-eminently and altogether common sense. It is founded on common sense and not on special senses. If there is a truth in this universe that can only be discovered by a special sense, then that truth will never be incorporated with the science of humanity. Science is thoroughly democratic, and it will admit no truth except what comes by the senses or faculties of every human being.

Our Spiritualist friends claim a higher sense than what is common sense, something special, not universal, a kind of aristocratic sense that only a superior few can enjoy. Grant this sense, it can never contribute one iota to the wealth of science. Science absolutely refuses anything that cannot be vouched for by our common humanity. One may say, "I have a sixth sense. I see things that others do not see." Science answers, "I do not deny that you see these things, but so long as you see them by a special faculty and not by a universal faculty, just so long they cannot be admitted into my domain." Until your sixth sense becomes the sense of the ordinary human being, that sense has no validity to the scientific world.

Suppose one or a few are clairvoyant and see things that the vast majority of others cannot see, not until this clairvoyant gift becomes the gift of all, can anything that it discovers be science. It must remain unclassified knowledge until clairvoyance becomes the natural faculty of the race.

It is said that some lack the sense of music or mathematics,

Is there therefore no music or mathematics? Understand the distinction, and see that the analogy is misleading.

In the case of music and mathematics, it is the lack which is special, and not the possessing. In the case of clairvoyance it is the possessing which is special and not the lacking.

Almost everybody has the sense of music or mathematics. Not to have the sense is abnormal. Practically the sense is universal. It is the exception not to be musical or mathematical.

The clairvoyant gift is just the other way. It is having the gift which is exceptional—not the lacking of it. If almost everybody was clairvoyant as almost everybody is musical or mathematical, then clairvoyance, like music and mathematics, might be a part of the science of humanity. But being exceptional and singular, to a most extraordinary degree, it may give knowledge to a few, but it cannot give science to the many. The road to science must be open to all the millions of the human race. If the ordinary common faculties of mankind cannot discover what Newton has reasoned out, then some of Newton's knowledge is unclassified, and therefore not science. But I claim that everything ever discovered by Newton, Kepler, Copernicus, Darwin, can be discovered by the ordinary faculties of every human being, if only these faculties be patiently used. The greatest lights of science in all their discoveries never used anything except common sense. Genius is patience, says Newton—it is not the possession of an extra faculty, but the extraordinary use of an ordinary faculty. There is not one of you but can know the truth of every scientific discovery by the use of those reasoning faculties which you possess in common with all. You need no new faculty. All you want to do is to think with what you have.

I insist, therefore, that every special faculty or gift—if there be such—is ruled out by science; and if Spiritualism depends on special faculties, then it cannot be science in so far as these special faculties are used, and not those faculties or senses which are common to the race.

Again, the opinions of scientific men are not science. The Spiritualist frequently quotes the opinions of scientific men, as if these opinions were a part of science. Darwin was a scientific investigator, but the opinions of Darwin are not science. They are merely opinions—not knowledge. The opinions of Professor Hare, of Wallace, of Crookes, are simply opinions and nothing more. No one man can make science. No body of men can make science. Science cannot be established by authority. It is established by the constantly free reason and experience of the whole race. It is the unification of the knowledge of mankind. It is not a set of opinions to which this or that man contributes. It is the expressed and combined knowledge of millions of intellects, attained through centuries of experience. The knowledge of a Darwin even cannot be incorporated into the world's science until it has been tested and demonstrated by others. Much less can any mere opinions held by a scientific man be made a part of science.

Again, the method and spirit of science demand the utmost alertness of intellect, the active mind and not the passive mind, the critical and not the recipient brain. The very method of Spiritualism is opposed to science. It calls for the passive mind. We must shut our eyes. If we are on the lookout the spirits will not come. They are afraid of daylight. They love mystery. The manifestations will not manifest unless we are ready to receive them like little children with faith. The man of science submits to conditions, of course. Nature moves by law, and law cannot be changed; but the mind itself is not to be passive. It must be in the keenest state of watchfulness. It must eliminate every possible chance of error. The very fact that Spiritualism insists upon a passive condition of acceptance instead of criticism prevents scientific results. The laws and conditions of physical nature must be adhered to. All experiments must be in accord with them; but if in order to experiment the condition of success is the passive mind, then, no matter what the result, it has no scientific validity, for the supreme condition of all scientific research is the active, the alert, brain.

What is the procedure of science? First, the discovery of facts. Secondly, the classification of the facts. Thirdly, the explanation of the facts, and fourthly, prediction founded upon the explanation—and no explanation is scientific until on the basis of it there is prediction—that is, given certain antecedents, certain consequences will appear, known beforehand to be inevitable consequences, if the explanation is correct.

FORTHCOMING.

While weather-bound this winter Mr. S. P. Putnam has written a book which he calls "MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE." It is now being put in type, and will make a thick pamphlet.

As Mr. Putnam has passed through many of the various phases of religious thought—such as the Atheism of youth, conversion to orthodoxy, reversion to Unitarianism, and thence to philosophical Materialism—his work covers quite a large field, and cannot fail to be of interest and value to all who indulge in the luxury of thinking for themselves. The publication of the work is undertaken with the hope that it will meet with a large sale. The price is 25 cents, and we shall be glad to take as many orders as we can get in advance.

THE SAN FRANCISCO FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The meeting of the San Francisco Freethought Society, Sunday evening, April 20, at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, will be addressed by Mrs. A. Lindal on the subject, "Follies of Christianity."

THE Chronicle wants a law passed immediately "making it an offense to predict such disasters as were promised" for last Monday. That would be a fine idea indeed. As if a legal enactment could stop the spread of a superstition whose chief tenets are advocated by eighty thousand paid and licensed preachers throughout the country, and in which nine-tenths of the people of the United States profess to believe! The remedy for delusion is not legislation but enlightenment, for the difference between the religious belief of Erickson and that of the ordinary Christian is not a difference in kind, but in degree. All religion is a delusion, and one believer is as guilty as another.

WHILE the trembling believers waited last Monday for the earthquake which was to destroy the city, there came over the wires from the observatory on Mount Hamilton these words: "No earthquake tremor, however slight, registered on the delicate seismometers of the Lick Observatory." It was like the voice of the Freethinker James Lick rebuking the cowardice of the Christian community.

TWENTY writers contribute to the Truth Seeker's Symposium on "Freethought—Is it Destructive or Constructive?" now issued in a twenty-five cent pamphlet, and there is substantial agreement among them that the question should be answered in the affirmative. As a reply to the current objection that Freethought is a mere negation, the work is without an equal.

AN address sent out to the Liberals of Washington gives the information that since the Secularists of that state organized their Union paid chaplains have been abolished in the state legislature. G. T. Thompson, of Walla Walla, in the Senate, and A. H. Eddy, of Snohomish, in the House of Representatives, were the champions of the secular measure.

WE shall be prepared in a few days to fill further orders for Lilian Leland's book, "A Woman's Journey Around the World Alone." The work is having a splendid sale, and the delay of the local agents in filling our orders leaves us temporarily short, but more are on the way from the printers.

THERE ought to be no misunderstanding between the Liberals of Washington and those of Oregon, and any man who tries to foment discord does not deserve the support of the Liberals of either state. A word in time often averts the necessity for extended remarks.

MR. G. G. BECK has located a place in Scott county, Kan., which he calls "Ingersoll Springs," and desires to found a settlement. Those interested should address Mr. Beck at Scott City, Kan., and get further information.

FRIENDS, are you doing anything to extend the circulation of FREETHOUGHT? If nothing more, send us names of known Liberals; we will forward them sample copies, and it will be their own fault if they do not subscribe.

MR. S. P. PUTNAM left San Francisco for Fresno county the first part of the week. He is on a lecturing tour and should not be under the suspicion of fleeing to the mountains for any other reason.

READ the list of books advertised in FREETHOUGHT. You are sure to see something that you want.

OBSERVATIONS.

The large audience that usually attends the meetings of the San Francisco Freethought Society repeated itself last Sunday evening. Miss Evangeline Ballou sang as sweetly as ever, and Vice-President Eastman took the chair to introduce Mr. Putnam as the speaker of the evening.

Mr. Putnam's discourse was on Spiritualism and science, the object being to show that immortality did not come within the scope of classified knowledge. The interested reader will find the opening argument in this issue of FREETHOUGHT under the head, "Spiritualism Not Science." The address occupied an hour, and none except those who were obliged to stand showed any signs of being tired.

After the applause which greeted the speaker as he laid down the last page of his manuscript, had subsided, Mr. Schou arose to offer a motion. He set forth briefly that whereas Mr. Putnam had been with the society all winter, and had worked and spoken for it without reward or hope for the same, and whereas his personal appearance, his always increasing eloquence, and his tendency to outgrow his clothes cast a reflected credit on the organization, and whereas he was about to leave for Fresno county, therefore it was in order to tender the departing pilgrim a vote of heartfelt thanks for his valued services.

Mr. Eastman put the motion and it was carried without opposition. Mr. Putnam responded by saying that although his presence in the city for the past few months had been due to the weather over which he had no control, and which had caused some profanity on his part, he was nevertheless thankful for such opportunities as he had enjoyed to be with the Freethought Society. He hoped the meetings would be continued throughout the year, and that a still larger hall would be inadequate to accommodate the audience.

The Chair followed in some able and complimentary remarks, extended to considerable length and delivered with great eloquence.

A discussion followed, participated in by Mrs. Lindal, Mr. P. Healy, George Cummings, Mr. Lund, and Thomas Curtis. The collection was ample.

Next Sunday Mrs. Lindal speaks upon "The Follies of the Christian Religion."

I wonder what it is back in the brain or elsewhere that preserves the memory of a face where you can refer to it, read its label, and recognize the original, years afterwards, when you run across it. This reflection was caused last Tuesday morning by Moses Hull opening the door of FREETHOUGHT office and walking into the range of my optics. I was writing. I looked up, recognized the visitor, and resumed my work, as I do when other visitors come in. As usual, I finished writing the sentence, and then asked myself, What is this man's name? Answer: Moses Hull. Question: Where did I see Moses Hull? Mind runs back, skips over the past few days, then jumps a year. Doesn't hit him. Jumps five years. No result. Jumps a dozen years, three thousand miles of continent, and lands in the Truth Seeker office at 141 Eighth street, New York. There he is. Then mind returns to San Francisco, and I realize that it is my duty to get up and shake hands. The journey has occupied about one second of time. Moses looked as natural as life, but hardly as large as he did when I was a slim and callow youth and knocked elbows with him at the printer's case. He also presents a clerical appearance.

Mr. Hull had not been in the office more than two minutes before he and Putnam locked horns on the spiritual question, and had me out looking for a hall where they could debate the subject before a jury of their peers and vicinage. Moses said he thought he could demonstrate that there was a future life, and Samuel said he guessed he couldn't. So they will have it out the first and second evenings of May. Mr. Hull is a snorter on debate, and Putnam—well, we are all familiar with him.

But I started out with a remark about the queer phenomenon of memory. I conclude it is nearly as absurd that a shadow falling upon the eye can be stowed away out of sight in the brain for a dozen years, and then brought out when the original appears, as that the phenomena called spiritual should occur.

Mr. C. Severance, of Los Angeles, proposes a test of spirit communication which I take delight in giving him. He writes:

MR. GEORGE MACDONALD, Dear Sir: Should you with contumacious pertinacity, peculiar to people born in New Hampshire, refuse to flee to the mountains before the 14th of April, I wish to make arrangements with your soul for a slate-writing "seaonce," to settle all doubt in regard to Job's conundrum. Don't disappoint me.

I will prove that I have passed to a higher life by a syllogism.

Thus:

Major Premise: God's promises are always fulfilled.

Minor Premise: God promised the destruction of San Francisco and all its inhabitants on April 14.

Therefore: San Francisco and all its inhabitants were destroyed on April 14.

If it is admitted that when an inhabitant is destroyed he is dead, I see no way to escape the conclusion that I have risen. Let Mr. Severance form himself into a circle, joining hands and singing the "Sweet By and By," and if I do not manifest, the fault will be with his positive state of mind.

MR. T. J. O'BRIEN, Collector of Taxes, Respected Sir: I learn from the daily papers of San Francisco that the Young Men's Christian Association have made what in politics is called a kick against punting the taxes assessed upon their building over near Dupont street, and that the courts have thrown a judicial lariat over your neck to restrain you from collecting the said taxes by the consuetudinary method of auctioning off the property. You are doubtless familiar with the italic sentiment, Fas est ab hoste doceri, which, as you know, signifies that we may often get a straight tip from the opposition party. So I have concluded to study financiering of the above Y. M. C. A.—to fall into the religious ranks and let them be my tutors, so to speak, since they have sounded a suggestive note. My point is this, that if the Young Men's Christian Association may be legally exempt from taxation, there is no good reason in equity why the concern which I am working for should not also be let out. I forward you a copy of the paper which we publish. You will see that it deals to some extent with religious subjects. Besides, we handle many religious books, and have some of the best commentaries on the Bible to be found anywhere in the country. I might cite Colonel Ingersoll on Moses and Mr. Remsburg on Bible Morals and Sabbath-Breaking as important works calculated to do great good in a community like San Francisco; and as the Christian people claim exemption on the ground that they are public benefactors, I am here to make the same plea. I hold that we benefit the public in a religious sense a great deal more than they do, and when it comes to genuine enlightenment the Y. M. C. A. are not in it. We hold meetings, too, every Sunday, and if you could be restrained from collecting the taxes on Union Square Hall we would not need to rustle for so large a collection. I would be glad to have you furnish me a transcript of the reasons set forth in the injunction why the Christian property should not be taxed, and I will see them and go them several better on all material points. Our tax is not large. It will be about $15 this year, but if you have ever published a paper you know that $15 does not come in every remittance, and we may have to rustle for it when the time comes to pay up.

I wish you would give this matter your serious attention. Understand that I do not ask for exemption agreeable to the statutes made and provided. I merely point to the Y. M. C. A. building near Dupont street and ask why, if that is exempted, I should be forced to go to the city hall and pay $15 for the privilege of filling orders for religious books.

At the New York Press Club's annual dinner awhile ago Colonel Ingersoll made an address in which he said:

And after all, gentlemen, I call upon you to witness that there is nothing so weak and helpless as the truth. She goes into the arena without shield or spear. A good healthy lie, clad in complete armor, with sword and shield, does the business.

Unfortunately, there is a great deal of accuracy in these words, and the fact that the members of the Press Club dissented from the statement showed the unpopularity of truth. If further proof were needed, look at the conventional lies of our civilization—the political lie and the religious lie. If every politician were honest and every minister truthful, how long would politics and preaching be a profitable business? It is falsehood that places one man in power above another, while truth leads to equality, and this state of affairs will last as long as people open their mouths to lies and shut their ears to truth.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The earthquake and tidal wave failed to keep their appointment on the 14th, the day being one of the serenest of the season.—The Russian church in San Francisco is now in the holy-week period. Russians still use the Julian calendar and are several days behind the rest of the world.—The colored people of this city have a new weekly paper called the Sentinel. R. C. O. Benjamin is editor.—The Nationalists celebrated their convention last week with a sociable and dance on Friday evening. The entertainment consisted of music, recitations, and athletic exercises, all of which were good.—There were 152 deaths in San Francisco last week against 87 for the corresponding week of 1889.—The Prohibitionist convention in San Francisco last week opened with something like a riot, but finally passed a Sunday resolution and nominated Gen. John Bidwell, of Chico, for governor.—The reverend president of Mills College, San Jose, is under a cloud, charged by a young woman with improper intimacy.—Alfred Symonds, president of the Petaluma Nationalist Club, has become insane. Deep contemplation of social problems is said to have unsettled his mind.—The United States Supreme Court at Washington has rendered a decision disposing of all proceedings against Neagle for the killing of Judge Terry.—The Rev. J. H. Weber, called the Tornado Revivalist, is running his lunatic mill at the First Methodist church of San Francisco.

Samuel J. Randall, ex-speaker of the House of Representatives, died at Washington last Sunday morning. He was 62 years of age.—The Sunday law was rigidly enforced in Denver last Sunday. The police arrested seventy violators of the law and they were imprisoned, bail being refused them.—The congregation of the First Methodist church at Lockport, N. Y., are starving out their pastor, the Rev. J. W. Sanborn. Last Sunday Dr. Sanborn announced from the pulpit that he had but six cents in his pocket and that his family was destitute. The congregation desire to be rid of Mr. Sanborn, and as the bishop does not remove him, the starving-out process is resorted to.—The Rev. M. Marshall, president of the Northwestern Baptist College, Winnebago City, Minn., has been obliged to resign. He is the father of a child whose mother is not his wife.

There was a great mass meeting of the unemployed in Rome last Sunday. It was closely guarded by the military; thus, it is alleged, preventing a riot. The agitation is said to be instigated by the opponents of the present government.

CHRONICLES OF SIMON CHRISTIANUS.

CHAPTER VIII.

BICKERINGS.—THE NARROW PATH.

Falls in with Papista.—Conversation with Papista.—Simon and Papista fight.

1. And Simon rejoiced exceedingly, and accounted himself one of the saints, and was elate and lifted up, and skipped about like the colt of an ass.

2. And he composed himself a song, and sang melodiously, yea, like a raven did he sing, and poured out his soul in praise like an owl; and this is his song:

3. Praise ye our king, ye coral rooks; sing joyful hymns, ye wanton brooks; take up the song, ye tuneful swine; for now a kingdom shall be mine.

4. Praise ye our king, ye trembling trees; ye rocks go down upon your knees; come bellow praises, all ye kine; for now a kingdom shall be mine.

5. Praise ye our king, ye verdant shrubs; and sing for joy, ye crawling grubs; prolong the hymn, each prickly vine; for now a kingdom shall be mine.

6. Praise ye our king, ye planets bright; and shout, thou moon when out at night; ye stars come sing as well as shine; for now a kingdom shall be mine.

7. And when Simon had made an end of singing, and the listening angels had gone back to their duties, and nature had somewhat composed herself, he began to look about him and to converse with the other pilgrims.

8. For there were many pilgrims come into the city about this time.

9. And Simon fell in with one whose name was Papista. And Simon fell out with him also, yea, verily, they fell upon each other; and this was the occasion:

10. On the first day of the week Papista said unto Simon, Come with me into our temple; so Simon, nothing loth, went with him.

11. And in the temple was a lamb enthroned, and the people worshiped the lamb, and besought it to be their guide and helper, and sang innumerable hosannas to it, and magnified it, and extolled it, and called it their god.

12. But presently they seized upon it, and tore it to pieces, and divided it up, and may I die in a ditch if they devoured it not!

13. As I live, and am a lover of truth, they tore their god to pieces, and chewed him, and drank his blood; and may I die in two ditches if they let so much as a morsel of him escape.

14. And Simon was amazed, and had need.

15. And it came to pass that as Simon departed from the city, Papista went along with him; and Simon said unto him, Art thou not my brother, and are we not each alike bound for the glorious city? Come then, and we will hold sweet converse together and beguile away the time in brotherly discourse.

16. And Papista answered and said, With all my heart, brother, so they kissed each other.

17. And they departed out of the city of Conversion on their way to the House of Relics. And the way they went by was a filthy gutter called the Narrowway.

18. And Simon and Papista kissed each other, and shook each other by the hand.

19. And Simon said unto Papista, Pray thee, brother, what meant ye, yesterday, in eating your god? Verily, brother, ye amazed me.

20. And Papista looked very hard at Simon, and said, What meanest thou, my brother, knowest thou not that if thou eatest not thy god thou hast no part in him?

21. And Simon answered and said, Nay, brother, I know not that, but pray thee tell me since thou hast eaten thy god, doth he remain god?

22. And Papista said, Verily, brother, I have eaten of the flesh, and drank of the blood of the lamb, and he liveth forever. Surely thou hast been but an ill listener to our holy guides.

23. And there was a deep voice as from one outside the gutter, and it said, Papista, thou art somewhat wolfish. And presently there came up the man whose name was Blunt. And the man, Blunt, looking towards Papista, said, Verily, friend, thou art well-equipped for thy journey, seeing thou hast got thy god in thy belly; but prithee tell me, since thou hast eaten him, wilt thou also digest him?

24. And Papista answered and said, Be thou Anathema Maranatha; thou art one of the scoffers, and I am forbid to have speech with thee.

25. And Simon said unto Papista, Verily, my heart misgiveth me; by what gate enteredst thou?

26. And Papista said, Of a surety I came in by the only true gate, by the gate called Katholikos, and besides that, there is no other.

27. And Simon started back and said, What, then art thou one of the children of the Crimson Harlot, drunken with the blood of the saints.

28. Harlot! cried the other; harlot, saidst thou? As my soul liveth, thou shalt not escape punishment for that! and he smote Simon, so that he fell down.

29. And the deep voice, even the voice of the man Blunt, cried, If a man smite thee on one cheek, turn to him the other also.

30. But Simon heard not the voice, but leaped up, and faced the other, even Papista, and glared at him, even as a tigress bereft of her whelps glareth.

31. And the deep voice cried, Freely ye have received; freely give.

32. And Simon hearkened unto the deep voice upon this occasion, and he fell upon Papista like a whirlwind, and they pounded each other zealously, and rolled over into the mire of the gutter, and there they wallowed, and belabored, and bethumped, and bethwacked, and bemired, and bedeviled each other, with immeasurable good will.

33. And the deep voice cried, saying, Behold how these men love each other.

34. And there was a noise of fierce contention and terrifying strife, and an inconceivable splashing; and the beasts of the fields fled away to the everlasting forests; and the trees were forsaken of their strength, and bent down to the ground moaning pitifully; and the grass withered away; and the rocks burrowed into the ground like moles; and the waters of the rivers ran up the hills, and took refuge on the mountain tops, and froze with horror; and the moon hid herself in the dark caverns of the earth; and the stars came down like hail; and the lamps of the sun went out; and the heavens shriveled up; and the earth vomited up all that she had ever swallowed; and nature had a fit; and the gutter got drunken with the blood of battling saints.

35. And Simon was not dead but buried; yea he was buried in the mud and slime of the gutter, very deep was he buried, even to the depth of a furlong; and he was in great straits,

36. For Papista had thrust him down into the mud, and trampled upon him, and leaped upon him, and battered him piteously.

37. And Papista went his way singing triumphantly.

38. And when, after much searching, Simon found himself, he moaned in bitterness of spirit, and began to grope his way out of the mud.

39. And after many days, and much toil, and hard labor, he emerged from the mud and the slime, and was plentifully bedaubed therewith. And when he saw not Papista, he began to glorify himself, and without doubt had great cause for it.

40. Saying, Ha, ha, he hath fled; he dared not stay. I would have torn him to pieces, and have scattered him to the winds of heaven.

41. And Simon was comforted and went on his way.

To be Continued.

LIGHT ON THE SINGLE TAX.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Will you allow me a word as to the justice and policy of taxing equally the respective owners of a one-story and a seven-story building occupying lots of equal value?

First, as to the more important question of justice. Land not being produced by men, and, like the air, being necessary to life, all men are equally entitled to its use. A tax upon its value is a charge upon its possessor for the common benefit. It is a practical method of enforcing this equal right to its use, which is necessary to enable all to enjoy equal rights to life and liberty.

On the other hand, a tax upon buildings or any other product of human exertion is unjust, because what a man produces he is entitled to the use of without charge. But for his labor it would have had no existence; therefore the community has no just claim upon it.

But, it may be said, present owners of buildings, etc., obtained them, not by their own labor, but by appropriating the results of other men's labor. Very true, but the remedy for that is to go to the root or source of the trouble; and the main root of the trouble is the power of owners of valuable lands to take the lion's share of the products of labor in the form of rent. The single tax would remove this power by taking the rental value of all land, or at least the larger share of it, for public use.

Taxing the buildings is no remedy, for the tax is paid in the end by the tenants, not by the landlord. The higher the tax the fewer buildings will be built. The fewer buildings there are built the more tenants must pay for their use, and the less employment there will be for builders. Four hundred dollars less tax on a building means $400 less for tenants to pay, not $400 more net income to the landlord and house owner. Instead of having $400 more to pay taxes on vacant lots with, he would only have the same amount, and the taxes on the vacant lots would be greatly increased, for besides the taxes now levied upon improvements and personal property, all federal taxation would fall upon land values also. And there would be no object in holding land for a rise, for the prospect of continual heavy taxation of such property—just as heavy upon idle land as upon land in use—would prevent the possibility of any considerable rise, or of any profit after paying the taxes. Instead of speculating in vacant lots, he would have to build more houses, or invest in some other legitimate and productive enterprise that would furnish employment to labor and tend to lessen, instead of increasing, the cost of living.

W. G. SELLERS.

S. P. Putnam's Lecture Appointments.

Fresno Flats, Sunday, April 20, 21, 22, 23, and 24; Porterville, April 27 and 28; San Francisco debate with Moses Hull, at Metropolitan Temple, May 1 and 2; Livermore, May 6 and 7; Ft. Bragg, May 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, and 15. Liberals of Ft. Bragg please take notice. No postponement of the dates now given.

"Papa, how old was Methuselah when he died?" "Nine hundred and sixty-nine years, Rollo." "And what was his business?" "Boy preacher."

CHRISTIAN CRUSADES.

I.

In the middle ages crusades were gotten up to rescue the holy sepulchre from the hands of the infidel Saracen. In our day crusades are set on foot to rescue the holy Sabbath and the Constitution of the United States from the hands of Infidels.

You are doubtless well aware of the fact that this is the object the National Reform Association, commonly called the God-in-the-Constitution party; the American Sabbath Union, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and the Prohibition party.

The avowed object of the National Reform Association is to so change the Constitution of the United States, "as to place all our Christian laws and institutions and usages on an undeniable legal basis in the fundamental law of the land."

The Sabbath Union and the National Women's Christian Temperance Union are circulating the following petition in all parts of the country.

To the House of Representatives of the United States [duplicate to the Senate]:

The undersigned organizations, and adult residents (21 years of age or more) of the United States, hereby petition your honorable body to pass a bill, forbidding, in the United States mail and military service, and in interstate commerce, and in the District of Columbia, and in the territories, all Sunday traffic and work, except works of religion and works of real necessity and mercy, and such private work by those who religiously and regularly observe another day of the week, by abstaining from labor and business, as will neither interfere with the general rest nor with public worship.

The object of all these organizations is to unite church and state. They want the power to establish a state religion, power to put down free speech, a free press, and a free Sunday. But if they want to unite church and state, why don't they say so? Look behind you. See the fifteen centuries of Christian history where church and state were one. You there behold the most damnable record in the history of man. And this is why the crusaders do not want to baptize their cause with such a name. For although it must be confessed that the people at large do not know any more than they ought to, yet it would be presuming entirely too much on their ignorance to paint on the reform banners the words, "Church and State." It would be interpreted by the people to symbolize death's head and cross-bones, and that they would have to furnish the heads and bones as they did in the mediæval crusades when the bones of millions of witless but honest souls covered the ground from Italy to Jerusalem. Let us see whether our modern crusaders mean to unite church and state.

In one of the official organs of the National Reform Association, the Christian Nation, of September 15, 1886, we find the following: "Neither does the National Reform propose to deprive any citizens, without forfeiture, of any just and inalienable right."

Dr. A. D. Mayo, at the Cincinnati National Reform Convention, in 1872, after declaring that the people of the United States would acknowledge God in the Constitution, said: "They will protect the rights of every citizen, and persecute no man for his religion until that religion leads him to disobey the law which expresses the will of the majority concerning the moral duty of the citizen."

All that this means is that "we will make laws governing religious belief and practice, and if you don't fall into line with our laws, off goes your head." At first these organizations made fair promises, but as they grow in strength they are less careful to hide their real designs. Let me quote a few illustrations of this fact:

Constitutional laws punish for false money, weights, and measures, and, of course, Congress establishes a standard for money, weights, and measures. So Congress must establish a standard of religion, etc.—DR. BLANCHARD, in Pittsburg National Reform Convention in 1874.

It is the duty of the state, as such, to enter into alliance with the church of Christ, and to profess, adhere to, defend, and maintain the true religion.—SECRETARY J. M. FOSTER, in Christian Statesman, 1884.

To be perfectly plain, I believe that the existence of a Christian constitution would disfranchise every logically consistent Infidel.—SECRETARY W. J. COLEMAN, in Christian Statesman, Nov. 1, 1883.

Of course a government organized on a basis embracing Christianity could not, with propriety, intrust those with office who are hostile to its characteristic faith. And none of this class have any right to claim that they should be legally eligible to office with those who are bona-fide citizens.—Christian Nation, September 15, 1886, National Reform Organ, New York city.

Secretary Foster, in speaking of the National Reformed state, says:

The expenses of the church in carrying on her aggressive work, it [the state] meets in whole or in part out of the public treasury.—Christian Statesman, March, 1884.

Lastly:

But shall we take—is it right to take—public money to teach principles, enforce laws, and introduce customs to which many members of the community are opposed? Most certainly. The gospel from its very nature is aggressive, contemplates the rectification of corrupt, disorderly, and degraded human nature, casts down every high thing that would exalt itself against the knowledge of God, and brings every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ.—WM. SOMERVILLE, in Christian Nation, July 7 and 14, 1886.

Once I thought that voting was altogether secular; now I perceive it to be an act of religion or irreligion, according to the purpose of him who casts the ballot. Once I thought politics secular, but now perceive that the new theocracy must enter at its portals, and Christ must dwell in government or not, according to our political decisions.—FRANCES E. WILLARD.

This is not merely the opinion of Frances E. Willard but it is the devout wish of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union; and if it does not mean the union of church and state, then I fail to see what it does mean.

If Congress does not find in our Constitution a basis for Sabbath legislation, then let us elect a Congress who will find such a basis.—HON. JOHN COLE, Tingley, Iowa.

The Hon. John Cole, of Tingley, Iowa, has no idea of right and wrong except that it lurks in a majority vote. But this is every robber's rule; i.e., submit, because I can and will make you submit.

Dr. Edwards, in a speech at the New York Reform Convention, says:

What are the rights of the Atheist? I would tolerate him as I would a poor lunatic, for in my view he is scarcely sound. So long as he does not rave, so long as he is not dangerous, I would tolerate him. I would tolerate him as I would a conspirator.

And later he exclaims, "Tolerate Atheism, sir? there is nothing out of hell that I would not tolerate as soon."

With such men as this all liberal-minded people are lumped together as "Atheists."

No one can read the passages just quoted, or any of the papers that advocate the so-called reform measures, and not perceive that these religious organizations are simply a crusade upon the liberties of the American people. If the Christians were persuaded that their religious rights were invaded, if the laws of the land were unfavorable to the free exercise of religious worship, in a word, if Christians had any grievance, or any cause of complaint, there might then be some excuse for some sort of reform measures. But as it is, the Christian has no cause of complaint. He has all his rights cheerfully accorded to him, and about the only thing he now seems capable of undertaking, is to deprive other people of their rights and liberties. These reformers aim directly at changing the Constitution of the United States, and such a change as they seek to make is nothing less than its destruction. In the insidious methods they use, in the denial of their intentions, in their equivocations we have Protestant Jesuitism. We need not look to them for an explanation of the situation.

The obvious fact is that the church cannot control public opinion, or personal conduct, or the public purse as it did in the centuries gone by. The Protestant church is more alarmed than the Roman Catholic church is. Protestantism is only half-hearted infidelity at best. It professes to court knowledge, to favor free schools, free conscience, a free press, and a free people, yet it feels bound to draw the line on this free business somewhere, but just where to locate this "somewhere" has always been and always will be the difficult problem of Protestantism. Science is a standing menace to Protestantism, and free public schools are sources of alarm to Catholics. The decay of religious belief is going on so rapidly that many Christians are greatly alarmed and think that something must be done. With them there is such a word as progress, but their minds and lives furnish no evidence of the fact. They never for a moment dream of the possibility of any improvement in their creed. And, in fact, changes in them do not take place until long after the creed has lost its life, and has been embalmed. In such instances where an old creed has been changed, has dropped a little more of its barbarism and superstition, see what fierce struggles and even bloody battles it had to encounter.

W. S. BELL.

PIOUS MISINFORMATION.

Up in Grant county, Oregon, a clergyman by the name of L. H. Powell offers a reply to the statement of Colonel Ingersoll, who, admitting the possibility of a life beyond the grave, adds: "If honesty goes without bread here, why not there?" The reverend gentleman says: "Nothing can be plainer. Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of heaven;" and also, "Man cannot live by bread alone." He also declares, "If a man plunges from his high estate into the sea of unbelief and degradation, it is no fault of God," etc.

To this Joseph Putnam, of Monument, responds as follows:

"Is a man responsible for his unbelief? If a man sits on a jury and hears evidence on both sides of a case, he comes to some conclusion in regard to it, and decides the case according to his belief. Suppose it should turn out that the man is mistaken, ought he to be punished when he gives his honest decision? I have 'plunged into the sea of unbelief' (head and ears) and cannot help it. It is impossible for me to believe that an omnipotent, all-wise, all-merciful being would create a world and cause billions of people to exist upon its surface, and then send ninety and nine out of every hundred of them to a place of torment to burn in an endless fire. I believe that a being possessed of as much wisdom as they claim he has could get his revenge in far less time."

In reply to Mr. Putnam a "converted skeptic" of Painsburg, California, by the name of J. M. Pratt enters the controversy, claiming that he is a Christian by an honest investigation of facts. Among his "facts" are the following:

"Have you investigated the lives of such noble men as George Washington, Garfield, Gladstone, Abraham Lincoln, and scores of others that space will not allow me to mention, that have gallantly scaled the ladder of fame, led by the Bible? If you have not, then you are not yet prepared to render an impartial verdict. It is an historical fact that Voltaire did repudiate his doctrine, and asked that his works and influence might be buried with him. It is also a fact that Tom Paine told his daughter on his dying bed to follow the religion of her mother, who was a lifelong Christian notwithstanding the persistent denials made by his admirers. It is also a fact, recorded in history, that the reign of terror in France was brought about by the abolishing of the Bible. And now in the face of all these facts, I answer, that man is responsible for his unbelief, for there is no such thing as an honest conviction without a consideration of the facts on both sides of the question involved, and in this day of light and knowledge there is no excuse for a man being ignorant of the facts in this case, except that he chooses to be so."

To these "facts" Joseph Putnam makes the following reply, which was refused admission in the local paper that published the foregoing:

"Mr. Pratt speaks about a juror being required to hear the evidence on both sides of a case, etc. That is just what made an Infidel of me. It was investigation. When a boy about sixteen years ago I read Rollin's 'History of the World.' I learned from it that the ancient people believed that the world was flat; that the blue sky we see overhead was a solid mass, resting upon the earth. They called this the firmament. They believed there was water above this firmament. There was a great difference of opinion in regard to astronomy, but none of them knew anything about it. I found in the Bible these words: 'God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament;' 'God raised the window of the firmament,' etc. It soon became clear to my mind that the author of Genesis was not inspired by the power that created this universe. I learned that the ancient people were of a bloodthirsty and warlike disposition. I could plainly see that the author of Genesis was of the same sort of disposition. The author of the old Bible has his God giving orders to his children to commit all sorts of crimes. 'Spare them not, but slay both man and woman, infant and suckling.' 'Slay utterly old and young, both maids and little children.' These are only samples of orders from the all-merciful God that we hear so much talk about.

"I have investigated the life of Abraham Lincoln enough to find out that he did not believe in the divine authenticity of the Bible. It is claimed that he once wrote a work against the Bible and that his friends burned it, knowing that it would interfere with him as a politician. Ingersoll says: 'Candidates are forced to pretend that they are Catholics with Protestant proclivities, or Christians with liberal tendencies, or temperance men who now and then take a glass of wine, or that although they are not members of any church, their wives are, and that they subscribe liberally to all.'

"I should like to learn more about this daughter of Thomas Paine, as I am a seeker after truth. Who was her mother that you speak of as a 'lifelong Christian?' You say that Paine told his daughter to follow the religion of her mother. If Thomas Paine had no daughter, then it would look as though some one had lied. Please tell us whether she was Paine's first or second wife's child, or both.

"Compare Thomas Paine with Constantine, whom the Christians style the good emperor, and under whose fostering care Christianity first came into power. 'He drowned his unoffending wife, Fausta, in a bath of boiling water; beheaded his son, Crispus, in the very year in which he presided in the Council of Nice; murdered the two husbands of his sisters, Constantia and Anastasia; murdered his own father-in-law, Maximian Hercules; murdered his own nephew, being his sister Constantia's son, a boy only twelve years old,' and a few others. (See Gibbon's History of Christianity.) If this is what the Christians call a good emperor, I would like to know what they would call a bad one.

"Christians frequently ask what we are going to give in the place of Christianity. We need nothing in the place of Christianity. There is no more necessity of putting something in the place of Christianity than there is in putting something in the place of witchcraft. If a physician is trying to cure a patient of a disease we do not ask him what he is going to give in the place of it. He needs nothing except good health; and that is all we need in place of Christianity."

THE DILEMMA OF REASONING THEISTS.

When the world thinks and the church reasons, theology must fall.

To me nothing has so much the appearance of a would-be over-smart boy as the Theist who reasons. He sees the absurdity of his great-grandmother's belief, repudiates myths and miracles, yet forthwith professes other notions equally or even more absurd. He complacently prides himself on having discarded the absurd doctrines of the six-day creation, the fall, a man-god, a devil, and hell, yet freely boasts of entertaining "rational" ideas of a God, religion, and immortality. As if all notions concerning a God, or all Gods, and all arguments in favor of immortality were not equally absurd and sadly inadequate to prove a miraculous "hereafter."

If a physical body is a necessity to the origin of man (and no spiritist has ever yet presumed to name a spirit not first born of woman) it must be a necessity to the continuation of man. If a physical organization is a necessity to produce, cause, or generate mind, then a physical organization is a necessity to the existence of any God. Then denying a physical or personal God is virtually denying any God, the entire God, the only possible, thinkable God. (Though even when thus conceived, being necessarily limited, the idea explodes when such a God is considered in relation to an infinite universe.)

The God idea in its original conception had no name. The idea was first, then the concept was called "God." Some one thought that a certain being endowed with personality, in the image of man, who could talk, walk, hear, see, reason, love, hate, etc., "in the beginning" created (from nothing) the heavens and the earth. They put this idea upon record and called this (imaginary) being "God." So, in spite of all cavil, argument, sophistry, and putting new wine into old bottles, as our so-called progressive Christians are doing, the name "God" means to-day precisely what it did eighteen hundred or six thousand years ago, or it means nothing; or something that is not God, but something different and which something must be called by a proper or different name more consistent with its real character.

I insist that any conception of a "first cause," the potency of nature behind all phenomena, the attributes and subtle forces of all matter causing life, etc., not invested with personality, cannot consistently and without confusion of ideas be named "God."

Now, the Christian theology, being founded solely upon the Bible, and upon nothing else, is precisely what the Bible says it is, or it is a fraud and a lie. And it means to-day what it meant eighteen hundred years ago, because it is precisely the same as it was then. Its authoritative character depends entirely upon its divine origin, but since that time not a word of divine inspiration has been given to the world, not a new truth revealed, nor a single communication "from on high" received by man. Therefore theology is positively unlike all else in nature; unlike the sciences, arts, races, and society, it is emphatically non-progressive, inert, chained to the traditions of the dark ages, committed to the many unscientific statements revealed on its pages; until, indeed, the heavens open again and a personal God in the sky again reveal himself to man, until then it is absolutely stationary, non-progressive, in eternal statu quo.

When, therefore, one of these inconsistent so-called progressive Theists now-a-days triumphantly concedes his unbelief in the original Bible God and kindred dogmas, and boastfully proclaims a belief in the something which he calls "God," but which something is entirely unlike God, I must laugh, indeed, at the audacity and the schoolboy logic which denies the "only true God" according to Moses, the prophets, and Luke, Peter, and John, and instead proclaims to the world a belief in a God according to Tom, Dick, Harry, and—himself! And the saying "man makes God in his own image" is again verified.

Supposing these wisacres had not had the doctrine of the Bible God instilled into their minds in childhood, or supposing the world had never possessed a Bible, what science or what authority would ever have placed upon an authentic basis the belief in any God? What do we know about a God anyhow? Are not all attempts to define such a being consistent with reason the most wretched failures?

Look at good brother Knight's recent attempts to make clear his notions concerning his God—an entirely new God, never heard of before, and for the originality of which I cheerfully give him credit: First, as usual, repudiating the "only true" Bible God in the form of man he proceeds, "This personality consists, not in a personal form [!], but in a consciousness of his own existence, and of all other things, a self-existent mind that knows all things, and does all that requires mind to do."

Profound indeed? So much so that I, brother Knight, or anyone else cannot understand it! But why our good brother should leave the church, repudiate a personal God, a harpoon-tailed devil, or anything else, for that matter, when he can believe such mystic and miraculous stuff as the above is beyond my comprehension.

His advanced or so-called rational notion of a God is simply more absurd than his great-grandmother's; more absurd because she accepted the ancient Bible God upon blind faith and authority, humbly and devout as becomes a consistent and obedient Christian; he repudiating authority and miracle, substituting human fallibility for "divine infallibility," and creating a new God a la Knight, equally if not more absurd than his grandmother's!

Think of a "personality consisting not in a personal form," and "in a consciousness of his own existence and all other things," and "does all that requires mind to do!" Here we have: First, a personality without personality—a miracle. Second, "His," implying masculine gender without personality! Second miracle! Third, something—not a personality—"continually conscious of 'his' own existence." Third miracle! Fourth, a consciousness (not emanating from a personality) which "knows all things and does all that requires mind to do." Fourth miracle! Because the latter implies that this mind can think about, do, or cause to be done by some mysterious mode of volition, everything in the universe now and in the future.

All of which is strictly unscientific, unreasonable (mind, like personality, implying limitation, bounds, concentration upon certain subjects, cannot be universal or infinite), and therefore unthinkable and infinitely more absurd than the belief which our friend boastfully proclaims to have discarded.

Denying a personal God or repudiating personality in the imaginary divine being as he does, there is absolutely not the slightest proof in nature, in logic, or reason which directly or indirectly sustains the reasonableness of the God idea. All is subtle (in the sense of delicate, fine, wonderful), senseless chemistry and potency, penetrating and filling with life and vitality every atom, and which in infinite differentiations and greater or less aggregation produces, of its own subtle attributes, every phenomenon of nature and life.

Where is this God brother Knight's belief has evolved into? Is "He" between the earth and the sun, in planetary space where vast orbs fly through their orbits at the rate of thousands of miles per minute? Can we posit consciousness there? Supposing from this earth, radiating into every point of space, ten millions of cannonballs were fired at once, each ball capable of sweeping on and on, forever increasing their relative distance, would either or all of these balls hit God or brother Knight's "consciousness?" Supposing our strongest telescopes were pointed to the sun, to Sirius or beyond, to the farthest star, would we then discover God? If not, where is brother Knight's God he still believes in? Where was his God when the late cyclone swept south from the far West and wiped Louisville in part from the face of the earth? "Knowing all," did "He" hasten to a place of safety, leaving the good people to their destruction?

But the origin of species, flora, and man (why not God also?) the brother thinks needs a God. But supposing God were real, why would he be exempt from the logical necessity existing for a God to create "Him" if such a necessity really exists for the lower order of beings? Here brother Knight sinks entirely to the level with the church, which has ever monopolized this long-exploded argument. Let him read Darwin and Haeckel, and they will tell him how the species originated without a God.

Rochelle, Ill., April 6, 1890.

OTTO WERTSTEIN.

THE NATIONALIST CONVENTION.

There was a lively time at the second day's convention of the California Nationalists. It was supposed the clouds had blown over, and that Bellamy's dream would be fulfilled and harmony prevail. If anything could soothe perturbed spirits and calm the storm, it was the singing of the Nationalist hymn, "We Here in Council Now Have Met," by Miss Evangeline Ballou, the audience joining in the chorus. The order of business reported by the committee was accepted. Then came the report of committee on organization.

Mr. Haskell stated that the report was the result of a series of mutual concessions. The report consisted of a series of resolutions condemning the methods of existing political parties by which all power is lodged in the hands of state and county committees, and it was declared that all powers must rest with the members themselves of the party, as organized in clubs. All original measures or propositions should be referred to the clubs by the Administrative Committee, which, it was recommended, should be composed of three delegates from each congressional district. The committee should only exercise the powers conferred on it by the clubs, and its members should be removable at all time by the vote of the clubs that elected them, the principles of the referendum, the initiative, and the imperative mandate being regarded as the basis of the organization. The report recommended that the powers conferred on the committee should be to further the organization of the state, to distribute tracts, and to organize a bureau of speakers. To meet expenses a per capita tax of 5 cents per month should be levied on each member of the party.

No special objection was made to the first part of the report.

Upon reading the question of the constitution of the Administrative Committee, Mr. T. V. Cator took the floor and moved an amendment to the effect that the convention elect one delegate at large who shall act as chairman of the committee, and that such shall be J. W. Hines, of San Jose. Mr. Hines, who is proprietor of the Pacific Union, published in San Francisco and San Jose, was specially recommended by Mr. Cator as removed from city influences, and as carrying weight with the farming element. The amendment came as a surprise to the majority of delegates, as Mr. Cator had been placed on the Committee of Organization, and no hint of any such proposition had been given. A long and most heated discussion ensued, taken part in by Messrs. Haskell, Burgman, Weissman, and many others. Upon the roll being finally called the amendment was declared lost by a vote of 56 to 54. During the roll call two votes were challenged, the chair declaring against both. In one case an appeal from his decision was taken, and the house sustained him; in the other case no appeal was called for. Upon the announcement of the loss of the amendment, Mr. Cator rose and called for those who had supported the amendment to follow him in leaving the hall for the Palace Hotel, there to form another convention, the ground of the withdrawal being that they had been illegally deprived of their votes. Some fifteen or twenty followed Mr. Cator out of the hall, amid a scene of great excitement. Resolutions inviting the seceding delegates to return and assist in completing the work of the convention were moved by Mrs. Laura de Force Gordon and carried unanimously, and the chairman of the convention, with Mr. H. G. Wilshire, of Fullerton, and Mr. Brown, of Fresno, were appointed a committee.

Mrs. Addie L. Ballou presided at the evening session, the chairman being absent on committee duty. Mr. E. C. Schnabel, on behalf of the Committee on Platform and Resolutions, presented its report, which read as follows:

We, the Nationalist party, of the state of California, in convention assembled, in order to establish equity and justice among mankind, without regard to race or sex, hereby declare our adherence to the Declaration of American Independence and re-affirm the declaration of principles as announced by the First Nationalist Club of Boston to wit: We condemn the prevailing competitive industrial system as being destructive of the best interests of the human race, and instead thereof recommend one of national co-operation, which shall be for collective instead of individual profit. In order to inaugurate this reform we advocate, first:

POLITICAL.—The adoption of the Australian ballot system, with the initiative (together with the legislative securities for the Imperative Mandate and Referendum) and the election of presidents and senators of the United States by direct vote of the people, the representation of all citizens on equal terms, and the abolition of all congressional district lines.

ECONOMICAL. First.—The national ownership and control of all means of transportation and communication. Second.—The issuing by the government a medium of exchange direct to the people, and ultimately a medium current between the government and the individual only. Third.—The establishment of postal savings banks and fourth;—Nationalization of land and all its resources.

We also advocate municipal ownership and control of the water, light, telephone, and street railway systems and all other municipal functions.

The following were elected an Administrative Committee: Second Congressional District, Mrs. Laura de Force Gordon; San Francisco District, Messrs. Wilmot, Harrington, and Mrs. Schlesinger; Third District, Messrs. Eugene Hough and E. Kelsey, of Oakland, and Mr. Page, of Alameda; Fifth District, Mrs. R. Walsh, of Ocean View; Sixth District, Mrs. Anna F. Smith, of Encinitas, Mr. H. G. Wilshire, of Fullerton, and E. C. Schnabel, of Los Angeles.

The following resolution was carried by acclamation: Resolved that the next state convention shall be held at Los Angeles and shall be called by the State Administrative Committee soon after the holding of the state conventions of the Republican and Democratic parties.

That Little Growl.

To the Editors of Freethought:

I see in your issue of March 29 that C. Beal, president of the Oregon State Secular Union, and C. B. Reynolds are having a little growl. I am really amused at Mr. Reynolds. It does seem that despite that colossal brain, his extensive experience, and natural aptitude, he still insists on getting the wrong pig by the ear. At the first meeting of the Oregon State Secular Union after its organization he presumed to assume that there was no organization, then that the convention as an organization should recognize the proceedings of an informal meeting as the proceedings of the Oregon State Secular Union, and found fault with the president for not deliberately and unceremoniously declaring the dissolution of the O. S. S. U. without the consent of the members of that body.

Mr. Reynolds did work for our convention, to get in, and to get all of the Washington Liberals, money and all, into the convention; he worked very hard, and we all like him and thank him for it, and we never would intimate for one moment that he ever dreamed of trying to hurt the society or Mr. Beal, but if he keeps right on putting it in the papers everybody will know it.

Mr. Reynolds is peculiar about some things, and in this coming-in affair especially. He was invited and urged to come in and be one of us. True, our house was not very large, just ordinary doors, large enough for a common-sized man, and plenty of room when once in; but no, sir; he insisted on tearing the shanty down, throwing it out at the window, and then coming in. Mr. Reynolds is not a very large man, still he invariably insists on plenty of moonshine—lots of room. I do not dislike him really, and in all kindness to him I want to say by way of settling the difficulty, that he is beginning at the wrong end and in the wrong way. The whole proceeding looks childish to me. Mr. Reynolds will have to excuse me for laughing at his efforts to get in and out of the O. S. S. U., for he reminds me of the peevish man's efforts to manipulate the affairs of his cow and calf, of whom it was said that he had to pull the darned thing's ears off to get it to the teat, and then to pull the fool thing's tail off to get it away.

It seems to me Mr. Reynolds is having a bad time with this calf, and owing to the way he is managing it, it will be a pretty tough-looking calf when he gets through with it.

Nonsense, Mr. Reynolds, there is no use of so much fuss about nothing. Apply to Mr. L. Ames for your money, and stop your crying. Get your money and run along about your work. You are doing good in the cause of Liberalism, and it is a shame to thus pretend to be trying to recover the money in question when it is plain that you feel ugly towards President Beal, and thus seek to abuse him. In this the "improved man," "the man who is afraid of no man, and of whom no man is afraid?"

I would be glad to think that all Liberals, and more especially the Liberal leaders of our time, are real magnanimous men—men who have learned that the man who commits an error is a "victim of conditions and circumstances."

D. R. SUTTON.

East Portland, Or.

Gratifying Progress.

To the Editors of Freethought:

According to promise I inclose remittance for FREETHOUGHT for the present year. It does me good to see the advancement Liberalism is making in the west, to see how many are becoming interested in the Nine Demands who a few years ago had scarcely an inkling of them. No wonder the Blairs are getting scared and doing their utmost to stay the tide that threatens their destruction. But as FREETHOUGHT truly says the numerical strength of our adversaries is not to be despised, and the lovers of liberty have no time for slumbering.

We note with pleasure R. J. Wilson's work in Seattle, Washington. He is a splendid gentleman.

Fraternally yours,

Neodesha, Kan.

VIRGINIA E. VANCE.

Mrs. Krekel's Lecture Appointments.

Santa Ana, Sunday, April 20; National City, April 23, 24, 25; San Diego, April 27; San Pasqual and Escondido, April 28, 29, 30, and May 1; Los Angeles, May 4; Livermore, May 6, 7; San Francisco and Oakland, May 11; Santa Cruz, May 13, 14, 15; San Jose, May 18; Lodi, May 20, 21; Stockton, May 25; Sacramento, June 1.

ALL subscribers of "Equity," published in Liberal, Mo., in 1886, who have changed their address since that time are requested to send their present address to Equity Publishing Company, P. O. Box 1678, San Francisco, and have the balance of their subscription filled with a new paper.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoe maker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater. C. H. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 503 Fourth street

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Portland, Oregon

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1463 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.

Rapp & Debarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.

Otto Siuz, 320 Kearny st.

WEBSTER'S

HANDY DICTIONARY

OF THE

ENGLISH LANGUAGE

GIVING

The Spelling, Pronunciation, and meaning of the words, Useful Tables, the Metric System, etc., and many engravings from the latest edition

of

The large Dictionary of

NOAH WEBSTER, LL.D.

Price, by mail, 30 cents. Address THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Henry George at the Antipodes.

A letter from Sydney, Australia, dated March 18 says: Henry George arrived here March 6th on the Mariposa. On landing he was enthusiastically received by a large gathering of friends and admirers. Many delegates from the Single-Tax League in New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia, Queensland, Tasmania, and New Zealand were present. Mr. George entered a four-horse drag, and amid the wildest enthusiasm was driven to the City Hall, where he was formally welcomed by the mayor and other public officials.

On the following night Mr. George was given a banquet by the Single Tax League, at which over two hundred persons were present. On rising to respond to the toast of the evening, he was greeted with the wildest applause. Saturday night Mr. George gave his first public lecture, before a packed audience, and received a regular ovation, the people standing on the seats and cheering again and again. He referred to the persistent growth, amid advancing civilization, of conditions that brutalize and degrade the masses and foster vice and crime. After showing conclusively that in all countries the advance of population is accompanied by an advance of want and suffering, Mr. George traced the cause to the monopolization by some of natural opportunities to labor and produce necessary to all, and pointed out that the only remedy was to tax away the advantages possessed by monopolists over others. This lecture produced a deep impression, and has been republished very widely by all the papers.

On Sunday night Mr. George delivered a sermon from the text "Thy kingdom come" to perhaps the largest congregation that had ever gathered in Sydney. The following evening he appeared before between six and seven thousand persons in the Exposition building. Since then he has addressed large crowds, not only in the city but in the up-country towns of Lithgow, Orange, Bathurst, Newcastle, and Maitland. He goes from here in a few days on a tour through Victoria to South Australia and Queensland, proceeding thence to Tasmania. The result of his visit to New South Wales will be undoubtedly to stimulate the single-tax idea greatly.

At present in this colony the struggle is between protection and free trade. New South Wales has always held fast to the idea that the greater the measure of freedom to exchange products and commodities with other countries the greater the national and individual well-being, while most of the other colonies adopted tariffs more or less protective. At the last election, however, the parties were almost evenly balanced here.

It may be said that over the whole of Australia a free-trade wave is rising, and, with the help of Mr. George's vigorous utterances and the ardent support of his many believers, it will probably be a wave before which custom-houses will go down altogether. In every part of the continent newspapers are now to be found, especially those devoted to agricultural interests, insisting that land values only should be resorted to for public revenue.

TRAVELING ALONE

A WOMAN'S JOURNEY

AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

(Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Price, by mail, - - - 30 cents.

Address The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BRAIN AND THE BIBLE.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology. BY EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

We can recommend this as one of the most valuable works in the list of Freethought publications. Printed in large type on fine paper and elegantly bound. Price $1. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO. 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against

LIBERTY,

By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

NATHANIEL VAUGHN

A Splendid Radical Novel.

BY FREDERIKA MACDONALD.

404 pages. Price reduced to $1. The Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parson, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Stenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm, large profits, quick sales, SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

PREMIUMS!

Given with "Freethought" for 1890.

$2 Worth of Books and Freethought One Year, for Two Dollars.

By special arrangement with the publishers, we are able to offer any TWO of the following DOLLAR BOOKS, sent postpaid, to each new yearly subscriber to "Freethought" for 1890.

The books are printed in large, clear type on good paper, illustrated, and handsomely bound. The subscription price of "FREETHOUGHT" is $2 per year.

CRAIG'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY.—A popular dictionary of the English language, with illustrations on every page. A very attractive volume.

HOYLE'S GAMES.—Now for many years the standard authority for cards and other games. Perfectly indispensable in its way.

ADAM BEDE.—These admirable pictures of society hold a rare and abiding place in English literature.

SHE.—A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural, full of the most thrilling incidents. The scene is laid in the dark continent, where our explorers discover a fierce but intelligent tribe ruled by a beautiful woman called "She who must be Obeyed."

KING SOLOMON'S MINES.—A story of wild adventure in the diamond fields of Africa. Holds the attention of the reader from beginning to end.

JESS.—Haggard. An intensely dramatic story of South Africa, mentioning the Zulu war, the uprising of the Boers in the Transvaal English settlements, war and rapine, and at last an heroic sacrifice of one sister for another.

WITCH'S HEAD.—Haggard. A novel of English life, combined with adventures in Zululand, written in the author's best vein; readable from cover to cover.

ALLAN QUATERMAIN.—Haggard. A story of marvelous adventures in the heart of Africa. Our heroes having heard of a white race of great beauty living in the unknown wilds of the center of this country, resolve to and finally succeed in discovering the country, Zu-Vendis, full of amazing wealth, and ruled by beautiful women.

TENNYSON.—A very pretty edition of the works of the greatest of living poets.

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.—Stevenson. Collection of short stories; The Suicide Club; The Rajah's Diamond; The Pavillion on the Links, &c. Stories now very much admired.

POE'S POEMS.—The flow of all Poe's verse is remarkable for ease and gracefulness, and have placed him in the front rank of the poets of the world.

LONGFELLOW'S POEMS.—The poetry of Mr. Longfellow is marked by a very vivid imagination, great susceptibility to the impressions of natural scenery, and a ready perception of the analogies between natural objects and the feelings of the human heart.

IVANHOE.—(By Sir Walter Scott.) At first Ivanhoe proved hard reading. But when at last the portal was passed, and entrance was had into the enchanted palace of delight, which the Wizard of the North has created by his Aladdin's lamp of midnight oil, who could resist the magic of the wonder-worker?

BRYANT'S POEMS.—His poetry overflows with natural religion—with what Wordsworth called the religion of the woods. This reverential awe of the Invisible pervades all his verses, and imparts to them a sweet solemnity which must affect all thinking hearts.

WHITTIER'S POEMS.—Whittier is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets. Few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

BARON MUNCHHAUSEN.—The original Munchhausen was a German officer in the Russian service, who served against the Turks. He told the most extravagant stories about the campaign till his fancy completely got the better of his memory, and he believed his own extravagant fictions. The wit and humor of these tales are simply delightful.

ARABIAN NIGHTS.—The oriental fairyland, over which Queen Shehrazad reigns, is now and always will remain a classic.

WAVERLY.—Scott is just one of the poets (we may call poets all the great creators in prose and verse) of whom one never wearies just as one can listen to Beethoven, or watch the sunrise or the sunset day by day with new delight.

ROB ROY.—(Scott.) Everybody's favorite. Scott speaks of Rob as "The Robin Hood of Scotland, the dread of the wealthy but the friend of the poor."

COOPER'S THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.—In his productions every American must take an honest pride; for surely no one has succeeded like Cooper in the portraiture of American character, or has given such glowing and eminently truthful pictures of American scenery.—W. H. FRESCOTT.

BENJ. FRANKLIN.—Never was the Arabian Nights read with greater zest than Franklin's Autobiography, and when I had finished it I began and read it all over again. It is this book that had the most influence upon my life.—J. L. GILDER.

ROBINSON CRUSOE.—How happy that this the most moral of romances is not only the most charming of books, but also the most instructive!—CHALMERS

ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND.—(By Lewis Carroll,) with 42 illustrations by Tenniel, 1 vol.

JANE EYRE.—An English classic. A masculine vigor and originality pervade the work. This individuality of character and description constitutes the attraction and the value of the novel. The scenes are drawn with piquancy and power.

EAST LYNNE; or THE EARL'S DAUGHTER.—Mrs. Wood's masterpiece, highly wrought, intensely interesting, a story of love, passion, and sacrifice, has been successfully dramatized.

TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.—By Jules Verne. Perfectly enchanting story, full of the most exciting incidents, relates travels partly under the water, and around the globe, etc. The writer's wonderful imagination has, in many instances, anticipated the scientific discoveries.

TOUR OF THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS.—Entertaining story of an English gentleman, who made a wager to make a trip around the world within eighty days. It is as exciting a story as ever was written, as our hero experienced hair-breadth escapes and had to overcome serious obstacles.

FIVE WEEKS IN A BALOON.—Of all writers for the young, Verne occupies the first rank. He is always interesting on account of his wonderful flights of imagination, which just touch the borderland of truth.

GULLIVER.—The most original and extraordinary of all Swift's productions. While courtiers and politicians recognized in the adventures of Gulliver many satirical allusions to the court and politics of England, the great mass of readers saw and felt only the wonder and fascination of the narrative.

ÆSOP.—Æsop, born in the sixth century before Christ, while traveling through Greece, recited his home truths. He did not write his fables, but they were easily remembered, became universally popular, and were passed on from mouth to mouth, and from generation to generation.

POE'S TALES.—Are admired very much for their ingenuity and powerful though morbid and gloomy painting.

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—By Oliver Goldsmith. One of the most delicious morsels of fictitious compositions on which the human mind was ever employed.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

EMERSON'S ESSAYS.—A handsome edition of the essays of our greatest philosopher and poet. Printed from large type on good paper.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM.—By George Canning Hill. A romantic life of one of the patriots of the Revolution, "Old Put," full of deeds of boldness and bravery.

Friends desiring to act as agents will have one of these books sent as a sample for canvassing purposes for forty cents.

Address FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, 10 Cents.
Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

Dr. J. L. YORK,
Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Hesper Land.

Land like a poem printed in gold,
Wrought in the loom of the Westerly sun,
A billow-born queen, her sway scarce begun;
Land of the later East, new and yet old,
Upbearing the olive and purpling vines;
Home of the mountain, whose hymning pines
Waft me the song of a harp from the sea,
Whispering the sweet-sung chorals a ar,
Tho' I bide 'neath the zone of the morning star,
Bringing a message to me, aye, to me.

Oh! for a home on that hope-lighted shore,
Whose new marriage ring of mountain and sea
Encircles a cottage for me, for me;
A cedar-log cabin, I ask no more,
Cradled with pyramids' mighty ranges,
Wave upon wave immensity changes.
Land where the earthquake out of her bed
Regave her isles gold, emerald, and blue;
New states her offspring riseth to view—
Sweet halo of motherhood over her head.

Fields borne on the breast of the foam and brine,
Nursed from the craterous fountains below,
Where vales of Hesperus blossom and blow,
Oh! when shall one of your gardens be mine?
Mine with its wealth of beautiful things—
Balsamic air and life-giving springs;
Mine with its white hand beckoning to me
And silv'ry song singing, "free, be free."
Land of the press, the plowshare, and pen,
Plant for humanity fruits that unfold,
And lend to my shuttle one thrum of your gold,
One note of your slogan, brave women and men.
Frenchtown, Neb. MARY BAIRD FINCH.

THE California Catholic says that New York is a Catholic town. No doubt of it, and San Quentin, Cal., is a Catholic penitentiary. Both facts prove that Catholicism is a power in the land.—Santa Ana Standard.

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS & TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.

Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.

God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.

Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.

Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.

Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.

The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.

Two Creeds.—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.

The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

Freethought Publishing Co.,

838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled Dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper. PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; 4 ounce, Best Dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50; fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2.50 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less.

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botches, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems
A speciality. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue, and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.50.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

envelopes, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

Wm. W. NOBLE, Merchant Tailor, 1222 STOCKTON ST.

Bet. Pacific and Broadway.

DRESS SUITS A SPECIALTY

Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass by.

W. M. HINTON & CO. PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS, 536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San Francisco.

PROF. JOHN FISKE will open the Popular Science Monthly for May with an account of the life of Edward L. Youmans, including the story of his association with Herbert Spencer. Professor Fiske was a warm friend of the late Professor Youmans, and describes his fruitful labors in popularizing science and the evolution philosophy in America with sympathetic appreciation. In the same magazine Herbert Spencer will publish the opening chapters of one of the uncompleted parts of his system of philosophy, dealing with morality. Three of these chapters treating respectively of "Animal Ethics," "Sub-human Justice," and "Human Justice," will be printed in the May Monthly under the general title "On Justice."

PUTNAM'S WORKS.

The New God. 10c. The New God was made by an artist hand, guided by a poet soul. It is as perfect as sculpture. The creator makes his "god" in his own image, and breathes into his nostrils the breath of his own life.—L. K. Washburn.

Golden Throne. A romance. Price, $1 00. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words, the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Walls and Wanderings. A new American story. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1 00. "A prose epic of the war; rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—John Swinton's Pader.

Prometheus: A Poem. Price, $1. "It is crammed with life, thought and profound emotion, poured forth, it seems to me, with extraordinary richness and beauty."—Dr. Henry W. Bellows.

Gottlieb: His Life; or, Love Triumphant. A Romance of Earth, Heaven and Hell. Price, 25 cents. "To describe all the beauties of this simple, yet touchingly told little tale, would be a work of which I confess myself utterly incapable. To realize what it is, you must read the book itself. I have never read anything so exquisitely beautiful and good in all my life before."—Elmina Drake Slenker.

WASHBURN'S WORKS.

The False Teachings of the Christian Church. Price, 10 cents.

Sunday and the Sabbath. Price, 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. Price, 10 cents.

The Catholic Church and the Public Schools Price, 5 cents.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequent, by assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

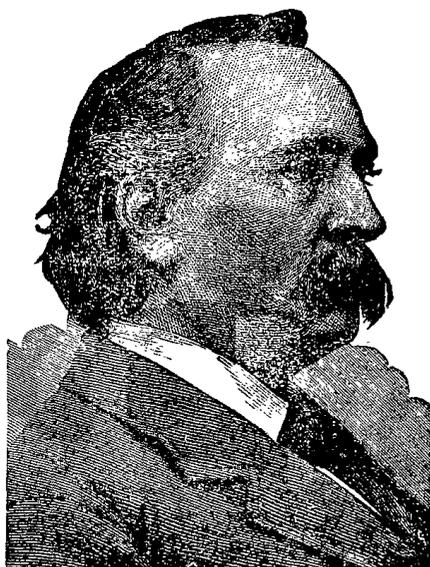

Address,
Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,
VINELAND N. J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
 FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

The Truth Seeker Annual

AND

FREETHINKERS' ALMANAC.

1890—(E.M. 290).

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

CONTENTS: Calander for 1890.
 Freethought in the United States, 1889.
 Faded Flowers (poem) By J. E. Rensburg
 The Inauguration of the Bruno Statue, by T. B. Wakeman.
 Mostly Fools W. Stewart Ross (Saladin)
 Record of the Spanish Inquisition.
 Dates of the Fabrication of some Roman Catholic Dogmas.
 The Boler House Mystery. Nearly a Tragedy, with a moral. Helen H. Gardener.
 The Middle Ages, Illustrated.—The Priest, the Supernatural World, the Reformation, Future Terrors.
 The Inventions of Science and the Inventions of Christianity. Illustrated.
 Freethought Journals in the United States.
 In Search of a Spirit, E. M. Macdonald
 Why I Left the Church, Hugh O. Pentecost
 115 pages, price 25 cents.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

W. S. BELL's "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Company.

"Bible Contradictions," 15 cents.

Standard Scientific Works

Works by Alexander Bain.

English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75

Works by Charles Darwin.

Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin, 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00

Works by J. W. Draper.

History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75

Works by Ernst Haeckel.

The History of Creation, 2 vols.....$5.00

Works by Huxley.

Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00

Works by John Stewart Mill.

Principles of Political Economy, 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25

Works by Richard A. Proctor.

Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
 The Moon.....2.00

Works by Herbert Spencer.

Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 Man versus the State......30
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology, 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology, 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology, 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75

Works by Andrew D. White.

Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00

Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.

Body and Mind.....$1.50
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50

Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.

Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

By Carl Marx.

Capital.....$3.00

By Asa Gray.

Darwiniana.....$2.00

By L. L. McLaughlin.

Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50

By John B. Henck.

Field-Book for Railroad Engineers.....$2.50

By C. Marcel.

Study of Languages.....$1.25

By Lester F. Ward.

Dynamic Sociology, 2 vols.....$5.00

By Frederick Overman.

A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00

B. F. G. Fairfield.

Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25

By W. B. Carpenter.

Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25

By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.

Evolution.....$1.50

By Sir John Lubbock.

Origin of Civilization.....$5.00

By Charles A. Abbott.

A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50

By Garrett P. Serviss.

Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50

By Nathan Sheppard.

Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50

English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 Thos. Carlyle—His Life, Books, Theories......30
 Comedies for Amateur Acting......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

THE ORDER OF CREATION,

A Discussion between Gladstone, Huxley, Muller, Linton de Ville on the Conflict between Genesis & Geology
 Price, 50 cents.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

—BY—

W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE

Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.

13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order.

The Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is entirely damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thief resisting. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only.

Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

RATIONAL COMMUNISM.

The Present and the Future

Republic of North America

BY A CAPITALIST.

A book advocating associate life as a remedy for poverty, vice, and crime. It deals with the present conditions of society in this country, pointing out their imperfections, and showing how it is almost impossible that the people should be other than poor and vicious under our present system. The remedy, the author thinks, is communal life, and he has drawn a vivid picture of the future Republic of North America, as it will be when society shall be organized on the principles of Rational Communism. The book is vigorously written. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
 838 Howard street, San Francisco.

A MAN who can kick a pulpit to pieces and bang the covers off the Bible is no longer considered a great preacher.

PRINTING!

Having procured one of the best Presses manufactured and a large assortment of display type, and employing competent workmen, the Free-thought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

Letter-heads,

Bill-heads,

Programmes,

Envelopes,

Business Cards,

Postal Cards,

Tickets,

Placards,

Receipts,

Posters,

Dodgers,

Circulars,

Etc. etc.

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

REMSBURG'S WORKS.

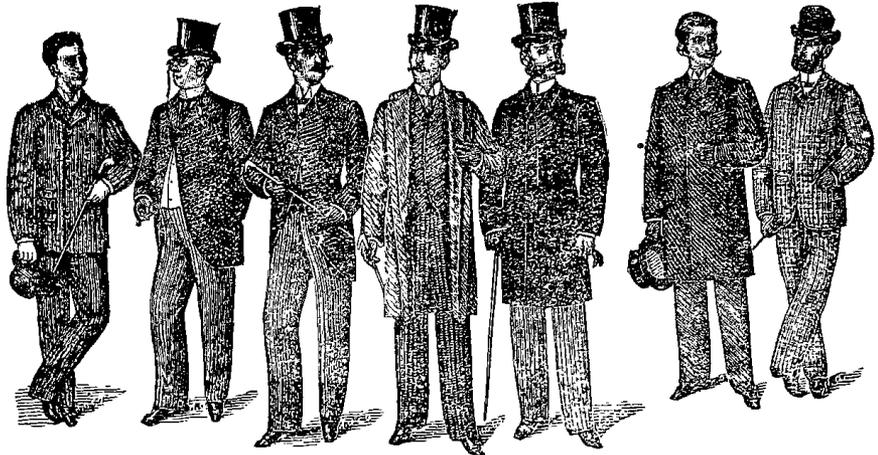

False Claims. Price 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Anti-slavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic.

Fathers of the Republic Paine, Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. Price 15 cents.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on larger quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. The question is discussed under the following heads: Origin of the Sabbath Idea; the Jewish Sabbath; the Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath; Examination of Sunday Arguments; Origin of Christian Sabbath; Testimony of the Christian Fathers; the Sabbath during the Middle Ages; the Puritan Sabbath; Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines; Abrogation of Sunday Laws. Price, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.
OLIVER HINCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

THE "COSMIAN HYMN BOOK."

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

(WORDS AND MUSIC)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies,
For Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price, $1.50. Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Bellamy Never Dreamed of It.

Human nature will have to be considerably improved in Los Angeles before Bellamy's dream will become an actuality there. An advertisement in the Tribune of that town calls upon "the person in whose hands it was last seen" to return a "design of a Nationalistic badge that was passed through the audience of National Club No. 1 on Sunday afternoon." No provision was made in "Looking Backward" for persons who would steal the badge of that political faith.—San Jose Mercury.—

"MA, the minister is coming," "What makes you think so? Did you see him?" "No; but I saw pa take the parrot and lock it up in the stable."

"BRAINS, Science, and Civilization," by A. Schell. A 16 page pamphlet, price, 5c.

14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 0
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm " " Diamond* 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,

PUTNAM & MACDONALD,
04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
Six Months......75
Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth, $1 50.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Vol. III—No. 17.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, APRIL 26, 1890.

PRICE, TEN CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - - APRIL 26, 1890.

CHANCELLOR GOSHEN of the English exchequer reports in his budget presented to the House of Commons that during the past year the gross revenue from alcoholic beverages was nearly $141,000,000. It is no wonder that there are poverty and destitution in England.

ST. IGNATIUS church, San Francisco, is to be furnished with decorations costing $30,000, and with stained glass windows costing as much more. Having $60,000 worth of gewgaws in the place where he mumbles his prayers should make the poverty-stricken Roman Catholic contented to work for nine dollars a week and to give half of that to his priest.

FIVE thousand Italian dupes made a pilgrimage to Rome last week and were addressed by the pope, whom they hailed with "Long live pope king." The dispatch describing the affair says that "the pope admitted to kiss his feet the principal personages of the pilgrimage." It is presumed the other members of the party had to content themselves with less exalted privileges.

WHEN Prince Albert Victor of Wales left Mandelay, in India, the rain came down in torrents. An Indian authority thus explains the matter: "It was cloudy above because the prince's glory outshone the sun, and of course the heavens wept at his departure." This is called oriental exaggeration. It might be appropriate to remark that our Bibles are a product of the East.

IT may be proper to remind the Nationalists that in working separately, holding rival meetings, and paying the rent of two halls when one would accommodate both the principal clubs, they are not following the system which they advocate. When Christians, professing to love their enemies, make war on those who have never injured them; and when Nationalists, working in the interests of co-operation, adopt the methods of competition, it looks as if there was a wide chasm between preaching and practice.

CALIFORNIA is not of much account in Congress except during election year. The state wants anti-Chinese legislation, but can't get it. The silver coinage business has gone wrong. Appropriations for public buildings hang fire. The tariff legislation is all in favor of some other locality, river and harbor money seldom comes this way, and our mail service is the worst in the country. If our representatives at Washington are shrewd they will formulate the necessities of the state in the shape of some demands, and spring them upon Congress early in the campaign of 1892. When the parties are looking for presidential suffrages they are complacent, and at such times the electoral vote of a state will purchase almost anything.

A DEBATE.

On the evenings of Thursday and Friday, May 1 and 2, there will be a debate on Spiritualism at Metropolitan Temple, between MOSES HULL and SAMUEL P. PUTNAM. The question is:

"Do the Phenomena of Spiritualism Demonstrate a Future Life?"

Mr. Hull is one of the most skillful debaters on the platform, and he will take the affirmative of the above proposition, Mr. Putnam denying.

Tickets may be procured at the office of FREETHOUGHT, 838 Howard street; at the Carrier Dove office, 841 Market street; at the office of the Golden Gate, in the Flood Building; or at the Freethought and Spiritualistic meetings. Admission to the hall both evenings is fixed at 25 cents, or 15 cents each evening. It will be well for those desiring to attend to get their tickets in advance, as only a number sufficient to comfortably fill the hall are to be issued.

This debate should rally some splendid audiences, both of those who believe in Spiritualism and those who do not. Mr. Hull is confident that the former will be present in a body, and there should be enough of the skeptical in attendance to preserve the equilibrium.

REPORTER AND POPE.

If we can believe the newspapers, which is by no means certain, a reporter of the New York Herald has lately interviewed his so-called holiness Pope Leo XIII. The subjects discussed between the reporter and the pope were religion and politics. Taken as a whole, the interview was an inane and wishy-washy affair. The pope first treated his visitor to several paragraphs of gush about the tenderness and love in which he held the American people, in return for which, he thought, he had "a claim upon Americans for their respect." He then puffed the press as a powerful engine for good, and invited it to co-operate with him in spreading the spirit of religion and morality. He was quite sure that the church was the only means through which peace could be inaugurated and maintained, and the quiet of nations restored. Socialism received a good deal of denunciation, his ing and picnic, not the least of which is the element of sociability thus supplied, without which we cannot expect to reach the indifferent masses.

A COLORADO physician who takes FREETHOUGHT recently loaned two copies to a brother physician residing in a neighboring town, with the request that he should read two marked articles, and return the papers. This is the reply he got:

"I received from you a few days ago two pamphlets with marked articles for my perusal. I have read the articles and pronounce them vile, malicious, and contemptible, and the pamphlets I consigned to the flames. Such trash is not meant for the thinking, intelligent man."

The two papers or "pamphlets," as the writer terms them, were the issues of FREETHOUGHT for March 29 and April 5. One of them contained extracts from high Catholic authorities concerning the attitude of the church toward secular government, and the other contained statistics concerning the religion of criminals. It is not at all strange that the Catholic physician wished to get the damning evidence out of sight. Our correspondent pertinently inquires: "If we get such treatment from the intelligent and cultured, our professed friends, what may we expect from a great, ignorant, unwashed, and brutal mob of open enemies? I answer: To be served ourselves as this man served the paper, or worse, just so soon as they dare or get the power." This answer is right. A man who will burn a paper simply for telling the truth has in him the spirit that would burn the author for the same offense.

THE Sacramento and San Jose presbyteries have voted against revision of the Confession. In the San Jose presbytery six ministers and six elders voted for revision; ten ministers and six elders against. The Sacramento presbytery subsequently expressed a desire for a change in one article so as to provide for the salvation of all infants dying in infancy and not "elect infants" only. The only question of importance in this connection is whether the vote of any number of presbyteries would make any difference with the facts of "election" and "predestination." If it would not, what is the use of voting on the subject? and if it would, why not vote everybody into heaven?

A PAPER called "Christian Science Thought," published at Kansas City, Mo., makes this statement:

"A friend has just told me of a very remarkable case that came under her notice yesterday. A lady let a heavy window fall on her hand and it cut two of her fingers clear off. She was treated by a Christian scientist and those fingers have grown on, nails and all perfect, and just as shapely as before."

So the age of miracles is not past; that is to say, there are still people mendacious enough to affirm the miraculous, and others credulous enough to believe them; and that is all that was ever necessary to any age of miracles.

THE Catholic newspapers are placing Lillian Leland's book on the index expurgatorius along with the writings of Mark Twain. Miss Leland, in describing the Vatican paintings at Rome, was candid enough to admit that the pictures were well executed, but that most of the subjects portrayed were in bad taste, the old saints and martyrs wearing, as a general thing, "an expression of sublime idiocy." The Washington Church News (Catholic) is especially worried about the effect of that kind of treatment of sacred subjects.

MOSES HULL's paper, "New Thought," once published at Des Moines and later at Chicago, will not appear again, but its place will be filled by another Spiritualistic journal, the "Better Way," to which the list and good-will have been transferred. Mr. Hull says that he was obliged to either continue or discontinue his paper, and of the two opportunities chose the most promising.

JAMES CULVERWELL, of Dentonia, Kan., has found a new name for a paper and has bestowed it upon his four-page sheet just started—the "Institutionist." As its title implies, the Institutionist will defend things as they are, which is a quite unnecessary task.

W. E. REID, the medium of Grand Rapids, Mich., has been convicted on a charge of using the mails for fraudulent purposes. He will appeal the case, but if the verdict is sustained it follows that all mediums who advertise will be liable to prosecution.

GOOD friend, if your subscription to FREETHOUGHT has expired, hasten to renew.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The trip of the new cruiser Charleston to test her armament and guns was successfully made. The experiments are reported to have been satisfactory.—The Army of the Republic is holding a grand encampment at San Jose, whose citizens have given the old soldiers a hearty reception.—The eight-hour movement is gaining strength in this city, many employers giving it their indorsement.—Defective brakes caused the derailing of the New Orleans express on the north slope of the Tehachapi mountains April 17; and although several passenger cars jumped the track and were overturned, nobody was seriously injured.—The Hon. Irving M. Scott, president of the Union Iron Works, spoke on the subject of trades unions before the Starr King Fraternity of Oakland April 18. He classed all trades unionists as socialistic in their views and quoted from papers that had been issued by Herr Most at various times, showing the anarchistic paragraphs. He then followed by making a somewhat famous quotation from "Truth," published by Haskell in San Francisco, saying that "the price of Truth is 5 cents per copy and that of dynamite 40 cents a pound" and advising all to become chemists and make dynamite to blow up capitalists. At a meeting of workingmen last Saturday evening in Metropolitan Temple Mr. Scott's remarks were denounced by the speakers.—Wm. Parker, a member of the Salvation Army, dropped dead while parading the streets in Chico one day last week. His death is supposed to have resulted from injuries received at the hands of a mob in Oakland a few weeks ago.—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union held a convention in San Francisco last week. The speeches were much more Christian than temperate.

Many spectators at a baptismal ceremony in Springfield, O., last Sunday were fatally injured by the falling of a bridge.—The action of the two rival conferences of the Evangelical Church in each appointing a pastor for every church in the state resulted in serious trouble at the Humboldt Park church in Chicago last Sunday. The Rev. Mr. Morloch was to preach his farewell sermon and his successor to be installed. Bishop Eschers's candidate, Rev. John Vittler, demanded recognition, and all the people rose from their seats and dragged him bodily from the church. After this the service proceeded.—The New York World editorially confesses that the interview recently printed with Grover Cleveland, in which he attacked Charles A. Dana, was a fake.—The Rev. John Wood is in jail at Olean, N. Y., for bigamy, having married two women. Mr. Wood is a Methodist exhorter.

The pope has at last recognized the republic of France and withdrawn his support from the royalists.—Bismarck declares that he is not yet out of politics, and it is said that he will be a candidate for the German Parliament.—The O'Shea divorce case, in which Charles Stewart Parnell figures as co-respondent, is not yet settled. Parnell desires a thorough investigation, but Mrs. O'Shea is anxious for a divorce on any terms, and may be an obstacle to the Irish leader in his attempt to vindicate himself.

QUERIES.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Please answer the following: 1. What is the address of the Freethought paper published in Sweden? 2. Can you give any information in regard to the Leland Stanford University? Do you know what opportunities will be offered, etc.? 3. What is the difference between Freethought and Secularism?

Marshfield, Or.

T. P. BRINEGAR.

1. Fritankaren, Stockholm, Kungsgaten 33.
2. We do not know that Mr. Stanford has divulged his intentions as to opportunities to be offered students. The university does not open until fall, and the president and faculty remain to be elected.
3. There are some who recognize a difference between Freethought and Secularism. Freethought has to do with mental freedom from creed and dogma. Secularism claims to be this and more, i. e., a system of ethics for the guidance of men in their relations with one another in this world. Its moral maxims are such as experience has tested and found to be for the best interests of the race.

THE FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The Freethought Society was addressed last Lord's day by Mrs. A. Lindal, of Norway, whose discourse to a large congregation comprised a series of historical statements about the Christian church. She pointed out how, with simple faith, the people of past ages had accepted Christianity because it was untrue, and believed in its miracles for the reason that they were impossible. She called attention to the persuasive arguments used to interest those who in those days rejected the religion of love, the said arguments being the thumbscrew, the rack, and the stake. These pieces of church bric-a-brac, the speaker reminded her hearers, were the only authentic relics of the time when Christianity was in the business of manufacturing the civilization which we now enjoy.

Mrs. Lindal spoke but twenty minutes.

Music and a collection were on the programme, but before they could be introduced Mr. P. Healy had the floor. Mr. Healy is a Catholic, also a Jesuit, and is skilled in that kind of oratory which, when presented before an intelligent audience, amounts to mere undulations of the atmosphere. His arguments are to logic what Chinese music is to the harmony produced by Miss Evangeline Ballou, who followed with a song.

Dr. O'Brock was the next speaker, what he had to say being in the nature of a reply to Mr. Healy.

Mr. George Cummings mentioned a fact in history to show that Christianity had not fostered civilization. The Mohammedan Moors, he said, had formerly occupied the Spanish peninsula, and among them science, learning, and the arts were patronized and flourished. The Christians came upon the scene, drove out the Moors, destroyed their institutions, and in the place of them established the Inquisition. In this manner had religion contributed to the welfare of mankind.

A gentleman named Watts pleaded for a more charitable view of the church. We should think of its hospitals as well as its dungeons and inquisitions. Those who could not sympathize with Christ when he said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart," could at least see beauty in the command to "love thy neighbor as thyself."

Mr. Ney averred that he had been in nearly every country of the world. In South America he found a priest to every ten inhabitants—the priest fat and dirty and lazy; the inhabitants poor, illiterate, and pious. In Russia, whose church differed from the Roman Catholic only in having a czar instead of a pope as its head, the people were degraded and superstitious, and men wore their shirt outside of their trousers like Chinamen. Wherever he had found the most Freethought, there he had found the people most advanced; wherever the most religion, the most power in the hands of the church, there the most illiteracy, degradation, and crime.

The discussion was continued between Mr. Healy and a lady in the audience who asked Mr. Healy to explain why the majority of criminals were Catholics. Mr. Healy replied that he would be glad to answer the question if he could. The lady went on to say that she attributed it to the dogma of forgiveness of sins and eleventh-hour repentance. Mr. Healy thought that the reason Freethinkers were not criminals was because they had a wholesome fear of the law. Their numbers, too, were so insignificant that they could not be expected to contribute as liberally to the penitentiary as their more numerous opponents.

A German young man intervened, and then Mrs. Lindal closed the discussion. In course of the reply to her critics she instanced the fact that the invention of printing came at a very opportune period when the church was distracted by internal dissensions, otherwise the art would have been repressed and extinguished.

A debate next Sunday evening between Mr. Healy and Mr. Knight is looked forward to with anticipations of great interest.

CHURCH TAXATION.

The promised pamphlet on "Church Taxation," issued by the American Secular Union, is now ready for distribution among our members. It is written by President Westbrook, and is a resume of just the facts that our people need to have at hand in their missionary work.

A moderate estimate, according to Dr. Westbrook's researches, places the value of the present untaxed church property in the United States at about fifteen hundred millions of dollars ($1,500,000,000). This sum at 2 per cent taxation would yield the state governments the sum of thirty millions of dollars ($30,000,000) annually. Church property, however, as has been more than once shown, is always estimated far below its real value. For instance, in New York, the church buildings of the Protestant Episcopal church alone, exclusive of its hospitals and other charitable institutions, are estimated at only thirteen million three hundred and nineteen thousand dollars ($13,319,000); "whereas it has recently been shown by Louis N. Megargee, a well-known journalist," says Dr. Westbrook, "that this does not cover the exempt property of Trinity church corporation alone."

The above, with other interesting statements, will be found in our pamphlet on "Church Taxation." Dr. Westbrook sums up his argument at the close, in the following points:

1. The exemption of churches from regular taxation is in violation of every principle of equality and justice, and is an evident disregard of the most obvious obligations of public morality.
2. The church does not render an equivalent for this exemption. Two-thirds of the people do not regularly attend any church; and they should not be taxed to pay for the other third. Moreover, those who attend the churches are, for the most part, of that educated and refined class who do not need any special moral restraint to secure the observance of the law.
3. It creates a prejudice against the church, and drives the masses into an attitude of antagonism, because of the huge injustice of the church's increasing their personal taxes and receiving favors to which it has not the shadow of a claim.
4. It detracts from the glory and independence of true religion to be a pauper and a leech upon the state; and all honorable persons should be ashamed to imply that the church needs this favor from the state, even if an incidental service be rendered.
5. The people are in duty bound to carefully consider whether any given appropriation of the public money is wisely made; but, as exemption from taxation is the same as appropriation, they have no opportunity to judge and act in this matter.
6. The taxation of church property would make very little difference to church-goers, as they are already mainly tax-payers, and what is saved to the church by exemption is added to the duplicate of personal taxation.
7. A system of mendicancy is encouraged by the exemption of convents and similar institutions, where the vow of poverty is taken, and convent expenses are paid by the proceeds of beggary.
8. The same reasons can be given for the exemption of many other kinds of property from taxation, that are given for the exemption of church property; and if these additional exemptions were allowed, the state would become bankrupt, and sequestration and revolution would be the result.
9. Why should the church assume the character of a beggar, asking remission of taxes, instead of paying its full share of the cost of protection and defense, and thus rendering unto Cæsar that which rightfully belongs to Cæsar?
10. We do not attack the rights of the church when we insist upon the just taxation of its property; but we champion the rights of the people, in claiming that all property, except that belonging to the state, shall be equally liable to taxation.

11. In new countries there may have been some excuse for encouraging the building of churches by exempting them from taxation; but this policy does not apply to our large towns and cities. The most valuable property on our principal streets is owned by the churches, Catholic and Protestant alike, which pay no taxes. This is manifest injustice, if not downright dishonesty.

12. The people are ready for the just policy of taxing church property in common with other property.

One very curious fact came to light during the compilation of this pamphlet: "In the census of 1880, no returns for churches, schools, cemeteries, and other similar institutions were made."

In 1850, 1860, and 1870, however, the figures seem to have been obtainable, as President Grant gives the amounts in his message to Congress in 1875. (For details, see the pamphlet.)

Why did the census of 1880 omit an estimate on the untaxed church property of the United States?

Why, indeed, but because there was somebody who was interested in suppressing the facts? That our latest and most thorough census should have left completely out of account the statistics of fifteen hundred millions of dollars' worth of property, is inexplicable upon any other hypothesis but this. Of course, the church is the party specially interested in maintaining the present unjust system of taxation, by which all citizens are obliged to help support places of worship, whether they attend them or not.

The census of 1890 is now being arranged for by the powers that be. Will the statistics of untaxed church property be omitted this time also? It is quite possible. Silently as well as openly the church is massing its forces for a great and final war of extermination against religious liberty and freedom of thought; and it would be a poor general indeed who sought to display his sources of strength before the day of battle, especially when he is the attacking party, and when he knows that the enemy, though unorganized, are far greater in numbers than his army.

American Secular Unionists, here is a matter in which you can do practical work for the cause of Freethought. Insist upon our census-takers being instructed to make returns on all untaxed church property. In your local papers, where you have influence, by personal appeal to your friends and neighbors, by the distribution of our pamphlet on "Church Taxation;" in short,

To all the people you can,
At all the times you can,
In all the places you can,
In all the ways you can, do your best to make apparent the facts and figures and the injustice of allowing churches to escape taxation.

Within a week or two from now, one of these pamphlets on "Church Taxation" will have been mailed free to every member of our society. We want you to read them over carefully, fortify yourselves with the facts and arguments contained therein, and pass the word along to others. These pamphlets are not sent you to be tucked away on your closet shelves, out of sight; they are weapons put into your hands to do battle with every day if possible; and they should lie on the table in your living-room and on your office desk. If one pamphlet be not sufficient to do your missionary work, so much the better. Send us ten cents for another copy, or sixty cents for a dozen, and so help to put money into the treasury, at the same time you supply yourselves with more ammunition. Our treasury is very low, and we are straining a point in sending out these pamphlets now to you, without waiting for the postage and printing money for which we appealed to you a week or two ago. But we realize how pressing is the need that more light should be turned upon this subject throughout the length and breadth of our land.

We have been obliged, through lack of money chiefly, to move more slowly than we at first planned to do. This pamphlet on "Church Taxation," as you will see, deals with the first of our Nine Demands; and we propose to take the others up, one by one, as money and opportunity offer. But, until the other eight pamphlets do appear, we trust that you will make good use of the weapon which we now have ready to put into your hands. Many and many a conservative church member will be found willing to agree with us on this subject of church taxation, and, if rightly approached, even to ally himself with us. Let us, one and all, work hard to swell our ranks, and press steadily forward all along the line to do battle in behalf of this, the first of our

Nine Demands—"the equitable taxation of church property in common with other property."

IDA C. CRADDOCK, Corr. Sec'y Amer. Secular Union.

THE NATIONALISTS.

The Central Nationalist Club held last Monday evening its first public reception since the late convention. The meeting took place in Metropolitan Temple, which was not more than half-filled. Still, as the hall is large, the audience was a good-sized one. Mrs. Addie L. Ballou presided. Mr. Wilshire, of Los Angeles, a scholarly man of prosperous aspect, was the principal speaker. Mr. Wilshire is not a born orator. He lacks imagination and sentiment. He talks along at moderate speed, never caring to use argument, never introducing any sort of propositions necessary to a conclusion; never rising to a climax. He stated facts, however, about trusts, monopolies, and great accumulations of wealth that were more convincing than any argument or rhetoric could possibly have been. He remarked, for instance, that if Mr. Spreckels, the sugar king, chose to withhold the supply of sugar from this coast he could do so, and our coffee would have to be drank without sweetening. If Rockefeller thought we had coal oil enough he could stop the supply. Jay Gould could at a word shut off our telegraphic communication with the East. Armour controlled the meat market and we were dependent upon him for beef. These tyrannies called monopolies also regulated the condition of the working man; they could give him employment or not as they chose. Thus we have in this republic a class of men more influential than the nobility of Europe, more potent even than any absolute despot. There are millionaires—men possessed of from twenty to one hundred millions—whose fortunes, so immense that they cannot be dissipated, are transmitted to their children, who are thus made a perpetual aristocracy. Of course Mr. Wilshire held that the only relief from this state of things was the nationalization of railroads, mines, and manufactures.

Mrs. Anna F. Smith was another speaker. She is a woman of remarkable force, and would make a powerful revivalist. Mr. Wilshire had given facts; Mrs. Smith expounded principles. The reason why there were Jay Goulds, she said, was because there were so many others who were selfish enough to want to be Jay Goulds also. On every side men were grabbing for the almighty dollar and climbing over one another to reach it. Unless there had been an awful error made, said Mrs. Smith, we are here for something better than this quarrel and struggle to get a corner on the bounties of nature. Nationalism did not propose to make saints out of sinners, but it did propose to bring about such conditions that it would be more profitable to be honest.

Mrs. Smith spoke of the California Nationalist, whose owner had endeavored to make a political organ of it, and failing in that object had left it to its fate. The paper would now be dependent upon the Nationalists for support and would be conducted by a co-operative stock company, with Mr. Owen as editor. Shares were for sale at five dollars each.

Professor Wilmot, the blind musician, was led forward and made a brief address. The exercises were varied by recitations and instrumental music, and made still more attractive by the singing of Miss Evangeline Ballou.

THE DANGERS OF HYPNOTISM.

At Nuremberg a case of some public interest was tried in the police court, says the London Lancet. A commercial traveler while in a restaurant told the waitress to look steadily at the white of his eye, and hypnotized her. On a second occasion he repeated the experiment; but this time the sleep was so profound that a medical man had to be called, who had the utmost difficulty in rousing the girl. The commercial traveler was accordingly summoned to appear before the magistrates, and the severe sentence of eight days' imprisonment was passed on him, which will probably be efficient in checking similar performances in that region. In France the practice of hypnotizing people for amusement seems to be very common, and unpleasant consequences are frequently reported. At a supper-party in Paris one of the company hypnotized a girl, and was unable to rouse her.

She was consequently taken to the house of a medical man, and after a time she recovered consciousness. The whole party were taken into custody by the police, and were not released until next day. Even when hypnotism has been practiced by competent medical men for remedial purposes, unpleasant accidents and ulterior consequences have again and again occurred; so much so that an order has been issued by the French government prohibiting surgeons in the army and navy from practicing it. It ought to be distinctly understood, both by the profession and the public, that hypnotism is not devoid of danger at the time, and not infrequently has permanently impaired the moral and emotional control of patients. A medical man is bound, before recommending hypnotism for a patient, to weigh the question as carefully as he would that of the advisability of administering an anæsthetic.—Science.

MISSIONARIES AT HONOLULU.

The term missionary, says a Hawaiian correspondent of the Examiner, will never convey the same meaning to me after this. The missionaries at the islands are a rich, powerful faction who are the aristocracy of the place. The natives are all supposed to be thoroughly Christianized by this time, and there are as many sects among this easy-going, pleasure-loving people as among the hardest headed theologians in the world. They are devout church-goers; but, alas, when there is any great calamity at hand they throw off their new religion as easily as they doff their hats and plunge into the idolatry of the past.

During the lava flow of four or five years ago the natives were beside themselves with fear and made all sorts of sacrifices and promises to the Goddess Pele, the spirit of the volcano, to propitiate her. But she was obdurate, and the cruel lava came slowly but relentlessly on, crushing the growing rice and making of the fertile fields a mass of gray stone and ashes.

The people were in despair. If the flow could not be stopped the beautiful town of Hilo would be wiped out as completely as were Pompeii and Herculaneum. There is an old tradition which says that the petitions of one of royal blood will sometimes soften the heart of the fire goddess when all else fails. The Princess Ruth accordingly went to Hilo and with great ceremonies made sacrifices to Pele. Into the molten, sluggish stream she threw burnt offerings of pigs, chickens, and bottles of gin.

The next day the flow had ceased to move.

There was great joy among the people, and although they outwardly returned to Christianity, who can doubt the effect of such a coincidence upon the credulous minds of a simple nation?

HANG THE CRIMINAL.

Nearly every month I notice some statement like the following, which I clip from to-day's Oregonian:

FAULKTON, S. D., April 6.—E. Eckhardt, while afflicted with religious mania, stabbed his two young sons with a bread knife and cut his wife's throat. All three are expected to die. Eckhardt is under arrest. He says the Lord prompted him to do the murder.

Now, if the Lord prompted him to do the murder, why not let the Lord know that he is wanted at the bar of reason and justice to account for this murder? Is it not high time that such infamy should be stopped?

What is the remedy? It is needless to say, Messrs. Editors, that you know how to prevent such infamous conduct on the part of Christians—and that is by destroying the "bloody superstition" known as Christianity. Thanks for your good work. Christianity is responsible for all such murders. It would be well for humanity if every priest and preacher were put into either the asylum or penitentiary. They deceive the people with their religious lies and rob them with impunity to build houses for the nonentity known as God.

Offer these impostors a million dollars to prove the existence of their God, and they cannot do it. They might point with exultation to the recent Kentucky cyclone or Mississippi flood as proof—that would be just like a priest or preacher. But I say hang such a God. They cannot scare any sensible or morally conscientious person into Deism by such horrors. *

It is just such things as these that convince sensible people of the non-existence of God, and prove to such that Atheism is the truth. This is a godless world, if I say it against all the priests and preachers, popes and czars that ever lived.

We must get rid of the "curse of religion"—the Bible, its priests and preachers. These apologists of even a "merciful God" are impostors. The facts are against them, and facts are what count. Were there an "infinite and just Ruler over all," there could be no evil in the world. Evil exists. Iniquity, crime, and cruelty are going on all the time—God is deaf, dumb, and blind. With all his reputed omnipotence he does nothing. Why is this? The Christian story is a lie. The Bible is false. There is no truth in religion, and such a doctrine, founded as it is, upon immorality and supernaturalism, must go down for the sake of humanity. It is time that such imposition were thrown aside and natural morality took its place. Not until then will there be justice for all.

Science is the only savior and it is useless to worship dead Gods. Every church is a lie, and instead of these hot-houses of superstition we need schools and colleges—education and not religion—reason and not superstition—truth instead of priestly dogmas and lies. Down with the pope, czar, and all tyranny.

Portland, Or.

CHAS. F. BLACKBURN.

PRESIDENT WESTBROOK of the American Secular Union has just published in pamphlet form "An Open Letter to Hon. Edward M. Paxson, Chief-Justice of Pennsylvania." The letter is called out by a late address by Chief-Justice Paxson before the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania, in which the statements were made that the law of Sinai was the "first of which we have any knowledge," and that Moses was the "greatest statesman and law-giver the world has ever produced." Mr. Westbrook has the advantage of wide biblical and historical knowledge, and he has left of these claims nothing substantial except the paper upon which they are printed. The pamphlet should sell for 10 cents, and is printed by J. B. Lippincott, Philadelphia.

THOSE who desire light on the subject of philosophical anarchy and what its advocates believe will find the matter ably discussed in Dyer D. Lum's "Economics of Anarchy. A Study of the Industrial Type," published by Geo. A. Schilling, 169 Washington street, Chicago, price 25 cents. Mr. Lum is a thorough student of the industrial problem, and has the ability to express himself clearly even if not the power to convince the reader that he is always right.

BRIGHT, vivacious, interesting, and instructing, FREETHOUGHT, San Francisco, Cal., is one of our most welcome exchanges. Every Freethinker, and others as well, will do wisely by sending $2 and receive its weekly visits for one year.—Plaindealer.

Mrs. Krekel's Lecture Appointments.

San Diego, April 27; San Pasqual and Escondido, April 28, 29, 30, and May 1; Los Angeles, May 4; Livermore, May 6, 7; San Francisco and Oakland, May 11; Santa Cruz, May 13, 14, 15; San Jose, May 18; Lodi, May 20, 21; Stockton, May 25; Sacramento, June 1.

S. P. Putnam's Lecture Appointments.

Porterville, April 27 and 28; San Francisco debate with Moses Hull, at Metropolitan Temple, May 1 and 2; Livermore, May 6 and 7; Ft. Bragg, May 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, and 15. Liberals of Ft. Bragg please take notice. No postponement of the dates now given.

A Disclaimer.

To the Editors of Freethought:

I see in your issue of March 29 a letter from C. B. Reynolds to C. Beal, president of the Oregon Secular Union, in which the name of W. E. Haight is mentioned. I wish it to be distinctly understood by your readers that neither my son nor myself had anything to do with collecting funds for our convention; neither do we wish to be identified with the effort to collect for the Washington friends what they contributed because the one through whose influence it was sent desired its return after failing to secure a position for himself.

East Portland, Or.

CARRIE E. HAIGHT.

CHRISTIAN CRUSADES.

II.

There have been instances when the rancor and savagery ran so high that members of the church councils have killed each other. See what a battle the Presbyterians have been having over Calvinism. A spicy item comes to us through the Cincinnati Commercial of Nov. 20, 1889. In referring to the vote of the Presbytery whether all infants dying in infancy are saved, the paper comments thus:

By a vote of twenty-two to eighteen, the Presbytery of Cincinnati concluded that "all infants dying in infancy are saved." Bless their dear little hearts, how they must rejoice at this declaration! But let them pause a moment and reflect upon the solemn fact that a change of only three votes would have damned them forever.

This sort of voting infants into the heavenly kingdom may do well enough for Cincinnati and that region of country, but it will not do for San Francisco. The Presbytery of San Francisco has not taken any stock in that method. It refuses to let up or make any concessions on this question. If infants don't know any more than to come into this world and to die in infancy and be damned, that is none of the Presbytery's business. Doubtless these Calvinists will cherish their mouldy creed and refuse to let the light of truth fall upon it. Let them do so; babies will be just as sweet as ever. We have no pity to waste on babies that are supposed to be lost, nor can we say that we have pity for the bigots who profess to believe in such doctrine as infant damnation. We feel an inexpressible scorn for him who can revel in the atmosphere of hatred and cruelty, and at the same time cant and snivel over "the precious love of our Lord and savior Jesus Christ."

Bishops, presbyteries, and popes may all prohibit a free discussion of the creeds, questions that have been settled by a majority vote, yet it invariably comes about that in the fullness of time some one breaks over the boundary lines and sets the world in commotion. It is the human yeast rising.

As soon as a man fancies himself commissioned by heaven to preach he becomes a dangerous element in society. If he is divinely called to preach and to teach, then you are also "divinely called" to listen, and if you hear not those whom God has sent, you shall certainly be damned. Still, this is not enough. God does not damn people in this world but only in the next. But God's people are not satisfied with God's way of postponing damnation to another world, and so they make an improvement on God's old-fashioned ways of doing things, and damn them here and now.

