In conclusion, I offer one suggestion. I started from nirvana, and the best I can do is to regain nirvana. Why I went to all this trouble, labor, and pain, of teething, etc., thousands of times to reach the state I started from, I do not know. May be when I regain nirvana I will be wiser and better than when I started; if so, I started from below, and am ascending, which is in direct contradiction to Theo-sophism. Thus my contact with matter is essential to my evolution and salvation. The basic idea of Theo-sophism is, therefore, a crude and ill-digested Materialism. Whatever state I attain here is reached by and through matter. If, on the other hand, the nirvana I reach is not superior to the one I left, I have taken an absurd amount of trouble for no purpose.

W. G. SWAN.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

Dr. McGlynn has finished his successful course of lectures in San Francisco.—The California State Republican convention is in session at Sacramento.—A section of a big tree intended for the World's Fair at Chicago has reached this city from Tulare county. It is twenty feet in diameter. Larger sections would have been chosen if there had been any way to transport them. The exhibit occupies the whole of three flat cars.—There is no change in the aspect of the ironmolders' strike in San Francisco, and no new acts of violence are reported. The expense of the strike, borne by the molders' union, is about $1600 per week, as there are 160 strikers who get $10 each every Saturday night.—There were 136 deaths in San Francisco last week, 42 more than occurred during the corresponding week of 1889.—The total personal property assessment of this city this year is $66,442,838, which is $1,322,945 less than last year. The real estate assessment is $234,672,468.—Walter Rideout, the non-union molder who was attacked by Striker Siebert and shot his assailant dead, was discharged from custody after the preliminary examination. This decision of the court was expected.—Frederika Peters, of 346 Fourth street, San Francisco, went to the insane asylum at Agnews last week, crazed by religion.

There was a general strike of trainmen on the New York Central railroad last week which threatened to produce a complete tie-up. The strike was ordered by the Knights of Labor, but the Brotherhood of Engineers refused to join it. On Sunday the locomotive firemen went out. Passenger trains are now running, though much freight is stalled. California fruit-dealers fear that the strike will seriously interfere with the delivery of fresh fruits, which are now much in demand in New York city.

—The electrical method of taking life as practiced upon Kemmler is not a pronounced success. The victim lived nearly five minutes, and it took repeated applications of the current to effect his demise.—Utah's population is 223,589, an increase of 80,226 in the past ten years.—John Boyle O'Reilly, the poet, author, and editor, died at Boston on Sunday last, from an overdose of chloral taken for insomnia. He was 46 years of age.—The people at Oklahoma, in the Indian Territory, are suffering from destitution, and will appeal to Congress and the whole country generally for relief.—The friends of Henry George are said to be working for his renomination for mayor of New York.—The Rev. Peter Saponari, a New York priest, was lately buncoed out of $3000.—A dispatch from McCook, Neb., dated Aug. 6, says: "The Rev. Joel S. Kelsey, pastor of the Congregational church here, crossed the Kansas line suddenly at an early hour this morning. For some time he has been carrying on an amour with a prominent young lady here, but the couple succeeded in concealing their sin until they were finally trapped under circumstances which left no doubt of their criminal relations. To-day the girl broke down and confessed, and the preacher made good his escape. He leaves a wife and family and has been pastor of the church here for the past four years. Public excitement is very great and there is little doubt that he would have suffered bodily harm had he remained."

There was a great demonstration in Brussels last Sunday in favor of universal suffrage. Forty thousand people joined in a procession.—A monument has been raised at Munich to Stenographer Gabelsberger.—Cardinal Newman, a light of the Catholic church, died at Birmingham, England, Aug. 11.—Twenty-eight Catholic churches in Rome have been closed by the Italian government, and some of them are used as theatres and beer halls.

THE STORY OF THE DELUGE.

PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, IN THE "NINETEENTH CENTURY."

There are three ways of regarding any account of past occurrences, whether delivered to us orally or recorded in writing. The narrative may be exactly true, that is to say, the words taken in their natural sense and interpreted according to the rules of grammar may convey to the mind of the hearer or of the reader an idea precisely correspondent with one which would have remained in the mind of a witness. Or the narrative may be partly true and partly false. In the third class the fictitious element predominates. Here there are all imaginable gradations. At present, however, I am not concerned to dwell upon the importance of fictitious literature and the immensity of the work it has effected in the education of the human race. I propose to deal with the much more limited inquiry: Are there two other classes of consecutive narratives (as distinct from statements of individual facts), or only one? Is there any known historical work which is throughout exactly true, or is there not? In the case of the great majority of histories the answer is not doubtful; they are only partially true.

I am fairly at a loss to comprehend how any one, for a moment, can doubt that Christian theology must stand or fall with the historical trustworthiness of the Jewish scriptures. The very conception of the messiah, or Christ, is inextricably interwoven with Jewish history. The identification of Jesus of Nazareth with that messiah rests upon the interpretation of passages of the Hebrew scriptures which have no evidential value unless they possess the historical character assigned to them. If the covenant with Abraham was not made, if circumcision and sacrifices were not ordained by Jehovah, if the "ten words" were not written by God's hand on the stone tables, if Abraham is more or less a mythical hero, such as Thesus, the story of the deluge a fiction, that of the fall a legend; that of the creation the dream of a seer; if all these definite and detailed narratives of apparently real events have no more value as history than have the stories of the regal period of Rome—what is to be said of the messianic doctrine, which is so much less clearly enunciated? And what about the authority of the writers of the books of the New Testament, who, on this theory, have not merely accepted flimsy fictions for solid truths, but have built the very foundations of Christian dogma upon legendary quicksands?

The antagonism between natural knowledge and the pentateuch would be as great if the speculations of our time had never been heard of. It arises out of contradiction upon matters of fact. The books of ecclesiastical authority declare that certain events happened in a certain fashion; the books of scientific authority say they did not. As it seems that this unquestionable truth has not yet penetrated among many of those who speak and write on these subjects, it may be useful to give a full illustration of it. And for that purpose I propose to deal with the narrative of the Noachian deluge given in Genesis.

Notwithstanding diligent search I have been unable to discover that the universality of the deluge has any defender left, at least among those who have so far mastered the rudiments of natural knowledge as to be able to appreciate the weight of evidence against it.

Let us, provisionally, accept the theory of a partial deluge, and try to form a clear mental picture of the occurrence. Let us suppose that, for forty days and forty nights, such a vast quantity of water was poured upon the ground that the whole surface of Mesopotamia was covered by water to a depth certainly greater, probably much greater, than fifteen cubits, or twenty feet. The inundation prevails upon the earth for 150 days, and then the flood gradually decreases until, on the seventeenth day of the seventh month, the ark, which had previously floated on its surface, grounds upon the "mountains of Ararat." Then, as Dicstol has acutely pointed out, we are to imagine the further subsidence of the flood to take place so gradually that it was not until nearly two months and a half after this time (that is to say, on the first day of the tenth month) that the "tops of the mountains" became visible. Hence it follows that if the ark drew even as much as twenty feet of water the level of the inundation fell very slowly, at a rate of only a few inches a day, until the top of the mountain on which it rested became visible. This is an amount of movement which, if it took place in the sea, would be overlooked by ordinary people on the shore. But the Mesopotamian plain slopes gently from an elevation of 500 or 600 feet at its northern end to the sea at its southern end with hardly so much as a notable ridge to break its uniform flatness for 300 to 400 miles. These being the conditions of the case, the following inquiry naturally presents itself; not, be it observed, as a recondite problem, generated by modern speculation, but as a plain suggestion flowing out of that very ordinary and archaic piece of knowledge that water cannot be piled up in a heap like sand or that it seeks the lowest level. When after 150 days, "the fountains also of the deep and the windows of heaven were stopped, and the rain from heaven was restrained," what prevented the mass of water, several, possibly very many fathoms deep, which covered, say, the present site of Bagdad, from sweeping seaward in a furious torrent and in a very few hours leaving not only the "tops of the mountains," but the whole plain, save any minor depressions, bare? How could its subsidence by any possibility be an affair of weeks and months? And if this difficulty is not enough let us try to imagine how a mass of water several, perhaps very many, fathoms deep could be accumulated on a flat surface of land rising well above the sea and separated from it by no sort of barrier.

Water cannot really be got to stand at, say, 4,000 feet above the sea level, over Palestine without covering the rest of the globe to the same height. Even if in the course of Noah's six hundredth year some prodigious convulsion had sunk the whole region inclosed within "the horizon of the geographical knowledge" of the Israelites by that much, and another had pushed it up again, just in time to catch the ark upon "the mountains of Ararat," matters are not much mended. I am afraid to think of what would have become of a vessel so little seaworthy as the ark and of its very numerous passengers, under the peculiar obstacles to quiet flotation which such rapid movements of depression and upheaval would have generated.

That is, in my judgment, the necessary result of the application of criticism, based upon assured physical knowledge, to the story of the deluge. And it is satisfactory that the criticism which is based not upon literary and historical speculations, but on well-ascertained facts in the departments of history and literature, tends to exactly the same conclusion.

But the voice of archæological and historical criticism still has to be heard, and it gives forth no uncertain sound. The marvelous recovery of the records of an antiquity far superior to any that can be ascribed to the Pentateuch, which has been effected by the decipherers of cuneiform characters, has put us in possession of a series, once more, not of speculations, but of facts, which have a most remarkable bearing upon the question of the trustworthiness of the narrative of the flood. It is established that for centuries before the asserted migration of Terah from Ur of the Chaldees (which, according to the orthodox interpreters of the Pentateuch, took place after the year 2000 B. C.) Lower Mesopotamia was the seat of a civilization in which art and science and literature had attained a development formerly unsuspected, or, if there were faint reports of it, treated as fabulous. And it is also no matter of speculation, but a fact, that the libraries of these people contain versions of a long epic poem, one of the twelve books of which tells a story of a deluge which, in a number of its leading features, corresponds with the story attributed to Beresius, no less than with the story given in Genesis, with curious exactness.

Looking at the convergence of all these lines of evidence leads to the one conclusion that the story of the flood in Genesis is merely a Bowdlerized version of one of the oldest pieces of purely fictitious literature extant; that whether this is or is not its origin, the events asserted in it to have taken place assuredly never did take place; further, that, in point of fact, the story in the plain and logically necessary sense of its words, has long since been given up by orthodox and conservative commentators of the established church.

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION.

CONTRIBUTIONS DURING JULY, 1890.

John Turner, Philadelphia.....	$5 00
H. S. Borrette, Punta Gorda, Cal., (by Freethought Pub. Co.)...	1 00
W. S. Rolin, Manchester, Va.....	5 00
G. F. A. de Lespinasse, M. D., Orange City, Iowa.....	2 00
O. T. Davies, Brighton, Cal., (by R. Butterfield, Sacramento)..	5 00
John Engstrom, Aspen, Col.....	5 00
Andrew Willard, Beaver Dam, Wis.....	5 00
G. E. Swan, M. D., " " ".....	5 00
Buner Thorpe, " " ".....	5 00
John Petty, Santa Monica, Cal., (new member).....	1 00
A friend, Philadelphia.....	10 00
Thomas Monaghan, New York City.....	50 00
C. A. Lindsay, Butte, Montana.....	2 00
E. Livezey, Baltimore, Md.....	5 00
J. Wardwell, Emmett, Idaho.....	25 00
J. J. McCabe, Albany, New York.....	5 00
Pamphlets.....	3 84

Total.....$139 84
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, per I. C. C.

DONATIONS.

The directors of the Freethought Publishing Company gratefully acknowledge the receipt of the following voluntary contributions from stockholders and friends:

J D Kaufmann	$ 80	Mrs. Almira Sweek	80
B F Linn	3 20	W R Macdonald	80
Jas Greenhill	4 00	Dr. Daywalt	80
J T Oldham	80	Mrs. T S Olds	1 00
Elva Davidson	1 00	J B Jarrell	1 60
T Cameron	1 60	S Jarrell	1 60
A G Smith	1 60	W Anderson	1 60
Mrs. S B Miller	2 00	B B Rockwood	3 75
L R Titus	80	Coke Ewing	1 60
John Kruse	80	Helen M Snyder	1 60

THOMAS PAINE.

BY WILLIAM HENRY BURR.

v.

THE AUTHORSHIP OF THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

Another remarkable passage that was eliminated from the Declaration was as follows: *

At this very time, too, they are permitting their chief magistrate to send over not only soldiers of our common blood, but Scotch and foreign mercenaries, to invade and destroy us. These facts have given the last stab to agonizing affection, and manly spirit bids us renounce forever these unfeeling brethren. We must endeavor to forget our former love for them and hold them as we hold the rest of mankind, enemies in war, in peace friends. We might have been a free and a great people together, but a communication of grandeur and of freedom, it seems, is below their dignity. Be it so, since they will have it. The road to happiness and to glory is open to us too. We will tread it apart from them.

Aside from the eloquence and pathos of this passage, altogether beyond the capacity of Jefferson's pen, there is other evidence to prove that he did not compose it. In referring to it, he said:

When the Declaration of Independence was under the consideration of Congress, there were two or three unlucky expressions in it which gave offense to some members. The words "Scotch and other foreign auxiliaries" excited the ire of a gentleman or two of that country.

Now Jefferson never had any antipathy to the Scotch, but Paine had, and it was so irrepressible that when Grant Thorburn introduced him to a lady from Scotland, he impolitely said, "Scotland! a country of bigots and fanatics!"

But this is not all; Jefferson, as might be expected, in undertaking to quote Paine's draft of the Declaration, mistakes "auxiliaries" for "mercenaries" and interpolates the word "other." "Auxiliaries" is a word that Jefferson might have used, but it is not found in the Declaration. "Mercenaries" is a word that Paine would be quite likely to write, and it occurs twice in the instrument.

Furthermore, is not the argument of Mr. Denslow in "Modern Thinkers" irresistible, to wit:

Paine, as an Englishman, would look upon the Scotch mercenaries as not foreign, and therefore omitted the word "other." To Jefferson, as an American, auxiliaries coming from Scotland would be foreign, as well as those coming from Germany, or, indeed, England itself. Therefore he inserts the word "other."

And here by the way I find that the word "other" was actually interlined in the draft of the Declaration by Jefferson himself—not, however, in the clause that was stricken out, but in a prior one, where the words "foreign mercenaries" first occur. I quote the whole clause as adopted, with an amendment in brackets, but without the interpolated words "Scotch and other," which appear without erasure in Jefferson's draft:

He is at this time transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to complete the works of death, destruction, and tyranny already begun with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy [scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages and totally] unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

When the subsequent passage containing the offensive words, "Scotch and foreign mercenaries" were stricken out by Congress, the interpolated words "Scotch and other" in this clause should have been erased. And in the engrossed copy they were omitted, but in Jefferson's draft they still remain, thus:

Scotch and other armies of foreign mercenaries

Jefferson, as I have remarked, made no claim to the authorship of the Declaration until he was eighty years of age. If Paine drew it, and not only wished to be unknown but was willing to let another have the credit of the performance, Jefferson was nevertheless placed in an embarrassing position. How could he dare, even in notes written on the spot, much less in any public communication, while Paine was living, avow himself the author? Hence in his notes, written on the spot, he says:

A committee was appointed to prepare a Declaration of Independence. The committee were John Adams, Dr. Franklin, Roger Sherman, Robert R. Livingston, and myself. This was reported to the House on Friday, the twenty-eighth of June, when it was read and ordered to lie on the table.

Eleven years later, in 1787, he writes to the Journal de Paris, a history of the events, which concludes as follows:

On the twenty-eighth of June the Declaration of Independence was reported to the House and was laid on the table.

In 1809, in answer to a proposal to publish his writings, after mentioning many of them, he says:

I say nothing of numerous drafts of reports, resolutions, declarations, etc., drawn as a member of Congress, or of the legislature of Virginia, such as the Declaration of Independence, report of the money mint of the United States, the act of religious freedom, etc. These having become the acts of public bodies, there can be no personal claim to them.

This was nearly three months after the death of Paine, and yet Jefferson makes no personal claim.

Ten years later he repeats his first account of the transactions, but makes no acknowledgment of authorship.

Two years later, in 1821, he again repeats the history as before, but interpolates a clause as follows:

The committee for drawing the Declaration of Independence desired me to do it. It was accordingly done, and being approved by them, I reported it to the House on Friday, the twenty-eighth of June.

Here is an indirect acknowledgment. Two years later, in August, 1823, at the age of eighty, he writes: "I consented—I drew it."

Again, in 1825, he says once that he wrote it and once that he drafted it. Paine had been dead sixteen years, and in the next year Jefferson died.

DR. JEROME ANDERSON'S LECTURE.

I wish to make some observations on Dr. Anderson's long and labored disquisition in FREETHOUGHT to prove the existence of a soul and a designer in nature. I have never read anything in the spiritual realm but what is dry, mystic, and incomprehensible.

The Theosophists and Spiritualists seem to use a dictionary peculiar to themselves, and their language is sometimes beautiful and their words many, but they do not make their ideas clear to the perception of the common gentile. I have never been able to make any sense out of such words as spirit, soul, ghosts, God, etc., and when I try to get at it the definition drifts round in a circle, ending about where it commenced, so that the definition of the word "nothing" would apply equally well to the whole of them.

Dr. Anderson discards science and sticks pretty closely to such a text, but it is rather inconsistent to try to prove the existence of soul by scientific evidence. There would be just as much reason for taking issue with truth as to take issue with science, for science is based on truth and nothing else. I know of nothing that science refuses to investigate, but it accepts nothing on mere hearsay evidence. The advantage of science is the explanation of those phenomena that sometimes fill the minds of the ignorant with alarm. If science cannot explain it, what will?

The spirit agency in things heretofore unaccounted for is now explained by science according to natural laws. The doctor does not confound soul with mind, as some do, but seems to agree with the Mormon idea in explaining the use of polygamy. They say (the Mormons) there are disembodied spirits or souls in the air awaiting a habitation, and they want to give as many accommodation as they can.

When a baby is born one of these souls takes possession of it. It would be supposed that when a soul had shaken off such a clog and fetter as the body it would be more free without such incumbrance, and would rather study to avoid getting into any more bodies. The way the soul is connected with the body he does not venture to explain. If it cannot now be explained how the birds fly it will be explained by natural laws if explained at all, and not by spirits. The explanation of the review of all the past life in a few moments when drowning, and the dreaming in a moment of time what would take hours to relate afterwards, is all given in the explanation of dreams based on the principle that the brain is the organ of the mind, and the mind divided into different faculties, there being a suspension of some of the faculties, whilst others are in a state of partial wakefulness. Of course, impressions are to be stereotyped on the brain before there can be any dreaming, and then like the page of print or picture before you, you take it all in at a glance. A person never dreams about anything except something that had before in some way occupied his thoughts.

In the case of the poet's muse you will find that like the concentration of the rays of light by means of the lens, all the faculties of the mind are concentrated on poetry; and as the spaces outlying the focus of light are dark, so the rest of the poet's faculties are dull; the same in respect to great musicians, etc. A great poet once said he wrote poetry because he could not help it. It was natural for him to write poetry. As to the suppression of pain during the burning of martyrs, that statement will have to be taken with some grains of salt, but we are told by some naturalists that such animals as are slain and eaten by the carnivorous feel but little pain. They explain that by a merciful provision of nature, when the victims are suddenly pounced upon by the most ferocious brutes, they receive a shock that paralyzes them and makes them oblivious to pain; but one would hardly suppose that an allied soul or higher "ego" had anything to do in matter.

When we come to the second part of the doctor's lecture, we find it is the old design argument clothed in a little different dress. He takes for example the notochord, which is still found existing in the little lanceolet animal, and says here is a prophecy of a future developed vertebral column with its cranial enlargement, etc.; "yet science would have us believe that this wonderful result is due alone to the blind groping of natural forces under the impelling influence of unintelligible law." Science would have you believe nothing of the kind. You have taken the wrong measuring stick. Men have to plan everything they construct beforehand, but nature plans nothing. Now let me say right here, that when Abraham Lincoln ran for Congress on the Whig ticket against Peter Cartright on the Democratic ticket, the Democrats charged Lincoln with being an Infidel. Lincoln replied to it by a letter in a Springfield, Ill., paper at that time, and said that he was a "Necessitarian." I lived in the district at the time and read Lincoln's letter, but was too young to understand just what he meant then, but it is all plain to me now, and it is the conclusion to which most people would come were they to give the subject sufficient untrammelled thought and investigation. "Intelligence" is a useful term in its proper place, but it has no significance when applied to nature or God. Nature does nothing by intelligence, but all its works are done by necessity. There is no wisdom in nature's works, because she makes no failures. The doctor thinks that thought must in some way precede the thing accomplished. Somebody must know what is going to be done before it is done. This thinking is his own and not nature's. Because he thinks he supposes nature or something back of nature must think also. We make use of the words "designing," "planning," etc., correctly in our own affairs; so we have to use such terms to convey our ideas about the works of nature, for we have not in our limited language any other words to express ourselves. For example, I have heard people contend that animals had no mind, and shortly they would say "that animal thinks this" and "he thinks" that. The dictionary of nature wants revising. A few words want to be added and many want to be dropped out, such as measurement, size, magnitude, intelligence, unintelligent, time, good, evil, god, ghosts, etc.

Nature has to do with eternity and not time; with her a million years is as one day, and one day as a million years. With nature a thousand miles is no more than one mile. We have the idea of a big stone or big planet; with nature nothing is great or small. All these ideas are only comparative and relative with us. With nature nothing is good or bad, right nor wrong. Why undertake to explain why evil exists when there is no evil? All the evil there is we make ourselves, and the good too. If one man takes the life of another one it is not right, but when one dies a natural death it is neither right nor wrong. We must not measure nature's ways by man's ways. When you come to think of it correctly, you can explain no natural things by degrees of comparison. All of this design argument is a continual comparison between God and man, the very plan that is taken to confuse the mind by never getting to the truth. To say an "all-wise God" is a solecism unless there are more gods than one and some less wise than the others. If there be a God of nature and you compare him or her, as it may be, and you find he is incapable of making any failure, it is impossible for him to be wise or ignorant. There can be no intelligence going before the notochord in its development towards a backbone and brain matter, unless there is a chance for the arrest of such development, wherein it might fail in its accomplishment and make an imperfect vertebra, or something unlike one. There is no thought or design in the case; the notochord will turn out a perfect vertebra with its brain because it is governed from the start by the laws of necessity, something more certain than blind design or thought. This is what Lincoln meant in that letter. In this way we have an explanation of the heretofore meaningless term instinct. Instinct is the connecting link between intelligence and necessity: it partakes of the nature of both. The birds build their varied kinds of nests, the best adapted to their condition by the laws of necessity. They do no planning, hence they are all perfect in their kind; and they can no more make a failure that a grain of corn put into the ground would fail to produce a stalk and its blades. But they are directed by intelligence in collecting the material and the place of building the nests.

By the laws of necessity the man who pitches himself out of a fourth story window would come in contact with the pavement below, but if his descent were arrested and he stopped midway in the air suspended by nothing it would be an example of an interference with necessity and a proper subject for explanation.

But, according to the doctor's ideas, the man's falling to the ground is subject to and dependent on the will of God, as in the case of the notochord or any other natural growth of anything. Science says the man would fall to the ground in spite of the will of all the gods in the universe or anywhere else. The doctor's explanation of the man's suspension in mid-air would be God's withdrawing his influence, and the case would be a natural result and not a case of any wonderment. On the other hand, science would say there was wonderment enough about it to amount to a miracle, a suspension of the laws of nature. Design can be by man only, and it is nothing more than the imitation of the laws of nature. Well, what business have I to say so much about the laws of nature? As well talk about the laws of Congress and say there was no Congress. I answer, the laws of nature are the regulation of force, and force and matter are coeval. Matter cannot exist independent of force. Force or motion is subject to the unerring and eternal law of necessity. Congress cannot antedate eternity. The laws of Congress, like the men that make them, are finite and perishable; not so the laws of nature. The principles or laws that regulate the six mechanical powers are eternal, never having been created, nor can they ever be revoked. So no creator is necessary to create something already existing.

"Matter is crystallized spirit," says the doctor. Why not say "spirit is crystallized matter." Were I, in order not to appear dull, to say that I understood all the Theosophists say, I would make myself as culpable as the Irishman was who was sent out to grease the wagon. He said he understood the instructions given him, when a short time after he told his employer that he had "greased every part of the wagon except them spindles that that the whales turned round, and that he couldn't get at them."

O.

TAX ON AIR.

To the Editors of Freethought:

It is difficult to know whether the communication signed "De Lespinasse," and entitled "Single Tax," in your issue of July 19, is to be taken seriously or not. But since there are some indications that the writer thought he was writing a serious article, let us treat it as such, although such statements as "Henry George, in his single-tax scheme, tries to get rid of all inequality by taxing nothing but land" renders such treatment very difficult, since Henry George proposes nothing of the kind. Mr. De L. says further that "it has been shown over and over and over again that the single tax would never equalize the burden, because it would not do away with speculation." Will the gentleman state when, where, and by whom this has been shown, or, what will do as well, will he show it himself?

Mr. De L. thinks that the air would be a good object on which to levy taxation, for the reason that everybody has to use it. Is land not quite as necessary as air? How much longer could one exist without the one than without the other element? And since our friend is in favor of the single tax on air, will he give some arrangement by which the air could be equitably taxed, and tell how that method is superior to the proposed single tax on land values (not on land, as the gentleman erroneously supposes)? Also, while he is about it, let him give his idea of the way by which such a tax would stop speculation, since he thinks that speculation must be stopped or the "burden can never be equalized."

Our friend says that he "has been much interested in the various discussions on taxation," which subject he believes "underlies the whole reform movement." If such is the case, let him add something valuable to the discussion of this weighty problem, or else send his communications to some of the alleged comic papers, by which procedure we shall be given the means of knowing that they are intended to increase the mirth, and not the knowledge, of those who are laboring to establish the best system of taxation, to the end that the constitutional declaration as to all being born with the same equal right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, may become something better than a sham and a delusion.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

E. O. ROSCOE.

POLICY OF ACTION ABOUT FREE PRESS AND MAILS.

At this critical epoch of systematic encroachment upon civic rights by a conspiracy between priests and judges, to which the bad taste and judgment of two victim editors affords a happy opportunity, it is regrettable that the partisans of liberty should fail to insist on the principle at stake in this judicial violation of constitutional law. For those attentive to the events of the past few years, no doubt can exist as to the deliberate malignity of persons high in office toward liberal ideas, whether classed as Infidel or Anarchist, which are equally represented by the victim editors. If it is morally certain that Wanamaker and his tools have been acting in concert with President Harrison, is it feasible to appeal to him against them, and in behalf of men who will make no concession of silence about what they justly regard as their personal rights and legally under control only of their subscribers?

They refuse "pardon" on the condition of renouncing their constitutional rights of press and speech. The practical question, then, for others who have need of the same freedom for wiser uses, and still more obnoxious to despotism than is what it calls obscene, is whether there is or not a reasonable hope of justice from the United States Supreme Court, in defense of the general principle under which the acts of Harman and Heywood are but particular cases.

What they have printed is irrelevant so long as it is not accused of being a special instigation to crime. Who are legally the critics of their sheets? Their subscribers—or an outsider, their enemy and the tool of other enemies, a postmaster, a magistrate, or what-not of arbitrary imposition? Can democrats sit passive before such autocratic usurpation?

Then the next thing after suppressing "Infidelity and Anarchism" will be the exclusive control of the polls by republican appointees. Some democratic leading men are lawyers, G. C.,* for instance. And Judge Tuley? How well it would become such men to plead before the Supreme Court against encroachment of their political enemies on civic rights! To petition for pardon is to acknowledge a fault, i. e., a fault committed against some law, and is therefore to ignore the encroachment by judges or courts of legal and constitutional civic rights. To petition for pardon is to narrow down the question to the fate of a person, while letting the principle slide. And to whom must the petition be addressed? To those very persons in power who have either instigated the prosecution or deliberately consented to it, and who are known as champions of despotism, clerical and secular. Under these circumstances, and with victims ambitious of the honors of martyrdom, who will make no concessions; a petition, to succeed, would need signatures so numerous as to be a tidal wave of public opinion breaking at the polls. Now the great mass of the people of the United States, even if made acquainted with the facts, would probably side against the victim editors. They would think jail was the best place for Infidels, and Anarchists infidel to majority rule. Should appeal to the Supreme Court fail, the effort will be useful at least in the propagation of Liberal ideas and may dissipate certain illusions that enslave.

EDGEWORTH.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF MORALISTS.

REPORT FOR JULY.

During the month forty-five membership certificates were issued, making the total membership eleven hundred and nine, (1,109). The new members are from Miss., Oregon, Kan., Texas, Col., Minn., Iowa, Neb., Mass., and Canada.

The generosity of Brother Franklin A. Day, of Constance, Iowa, deserves special mention. The propaganda work is one in which every member of the order should be interested, yet many of them have never contributed a cent to it.

F. H. RAU, Sec.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Balance from last month.....	$ 9 80
Wm. Cughan, N. Y.....	50
Thos. Dugan, N. Y.....	1 00
Joseph Hidham, Tex.....	25
E. los Santos, Trinidad, W. Ind.....	1 00
A. B. Klise, Oregon.....	50
J. H. and F. L. Handy, Mass.....	5 00
Wm. C. Jacobs, S. Dakota.....	1 00
Franklin A. Day, Iowa.....	100 00
Sale of constitutions.....	20

$119 25.

Mailing constitutions, etc.....	$3 75
Printing 1000 membership certificate blanks.....	2 00
	$5 75

Balance.....	$113 50
Hannibal, Mo.....	A. R. AVRES, Treas.

"A MOST INTERESTING PAMPHLET."

In this pamphlet (My Religious Experience, by Samuel P. Putnam) Mr. Putnam gives us a detailed account of the very varied and typical experiences through which he has passed in his very diversified life. We say typical, for, as he relates them, they appear to us as the common experiences of well-defined classes of people, and it is fortunate that in this case they are related by a careful and intelligent writer. Mr. Putnam was the son of a clergyman, but the practical Atheism of his early life is only a reflection of the "religion" of large masses of nominally orthodox people. Even at Dartmouth College (founded as a theological school) "the legend was that the smartest of the graduates became lawyers, the next smartest doctors, and those who had the least ability became clergymen." This corresponds with the old English saying that a youth not clever enough for any other vocation must be provided for in the church. Young Putnam's college life, however, was brought to an abrupt close by the breaking out of the civil war, and this led to his "conversion," which forms the most striking incident in the work. He enlisted, and, he says, "I passed from dreams to realities. War seemed to me a glorious affair. . . . To be a soldier, to fight for liberty, to be in the tumult of some grand battle—this was the desire that drowned everything else." The dull routine of camp life followed, and he found it a dreary monotony. "War was seen to be only a barbaric affair, that never did and never could settle the great questions of human destiny." His "conversion" he relates thus: "I was in the valley of the Shenandoah. We had been marching and countermarching for days and weeks. . . . The rain fell in torrents. The roads were almost impassable. Gun and haversack weighed heavily. The days were toilsome, with nothing buthardtack and coffee at the end. At night we slept on the wet ground or stood guard. . . . It was continual depression, a tired body, and an almost inactive mind. The camp fever seems to be a combination of all the 'ills that flesh is heir to.' . . . This was the kind of fever to which I was becoming a victim. . . . Then came word that Stonewall Jackson was on our track. A forced march toward Washington was necessary. The hospitals were broken up; everything was in confusion, and I was obliged to tramp along with the rest, although unfit to do so. It was a weary journey, and never was I so absolutely miserable as on that day. To travel twelve or fourteen hours on a stretch, with gun and knapsack, fever burning in the veins, tortured with thirst, feet sore, and eyes almost blinded with pain, is an experience as melancholy as one can imagine. In drowning, all the past scenes of one's life rise before the mind's eye, a vast and strange procession; so in that unutterable agony and despair my whole life's history was placed before me with astonishing distinctness, . . . mingled with the pictures the teachings I had received from father and mother; the milder aspects of religion; not the wrath of God or the fires of hell, but the love of Jesus. Vividly appeared the cross and the illustrious sufferer upon it. With overwhelming power sounded the appeal I had so often heard: 'Surrender to Jesus.' . . . Suddenly out of my weakness, my suffering, the pain, the weariness, and the despair, my heart cried out, 'I surrender!' There was no reserve. It was like taking the hand of a friend and going with him, not because I feared him, but because I loved him. An indescribable sweetness and delight at once took possession of my being. I was in a new world." Mr. Putnam's narrative will, we have no doubt, help many "converts" to understand themselves a little better than they have hitherto done. The rest of his experiences, down to his final conversion by Colonel Ingersoll, form a most interesting pamphlet.—Secular Thought.

*Grover Cleveland?—ED.

G. A. P.—A Bad Gap in the Association of Progress Scheme.

To the Editors of Freethought:

In FREETHOUGHT of July 12, I called attention to the Los Angeles Assembly of Progress circulars. I wrote, "I have long been intensely anxious that the Liberals should have a mutual aid society for both sexes, that would make sure provision for dependent loved ones; in which no prayers or mummeries, religious or otherwise, would be allowed; founded and conducted on strictly business principles; affording insurance at actual cost; and paying fair salaries for needed work done, but no sinecures, fat jobs, or division of spoils among managers." I concluded with the declaration: "I do not doubt the good intent of the Los Angeles Assembly of Progress, but their scheme is not practical or reliable. I do hope, however, that it will result in great good by arousing attention, discussion, and intelligent action on the subject, that will eventually give us a safe, reliable, practical, Liberal mutual aid society."

In FREETHOUGHT of July 26, Mr. Cuttlefish Severance (has a kind of gland called the ink-bag, situated near the liver, from which, when pursued, it throws out a brownish-black liquor that darkens the water, enabling it to escape observation. See Webster's Dictionary: art. Cuttlefish.) the Grand Guide of the G. A. P., for some time past afflicted with cacoethes scribendi, empties the ink-bag of his disordered liver and by mud-slinging endeavors to obscure the issue.

Mr. J. M. Voss, the Grand Prefect, is evidently sincere and honest, but in his letter in FREETHOUGHT of August 2, fails to prove that the scheme of the G. A. P. is grandly perfect.

By long and careful study and consultations with the best actuaries of the United States, I find actual cost of $2,000 insurance on lives selected with ordinary care and precaution, between the ages of 12 and 35 is $11 per year; from 35 to 45, $17; from 45 to 60, $30.

Each policy is issued for $2,222, and the $222, at death of member, paid into the reserve fund of the society, and the $2,000 to heirs of the deceased. The death average would be ten to every thousand members each year. Every death secures $222 to reserve fund, thus accumulating a fund proportionate with increase of membership that affords security, and guarantees permanence of the society.

Let us compare actual cost of insurance for $2,000 with the safety and combined advantages of the old line, and the co-operative, with the cost—with no security—of the G. A. P.:

Age 35, actual cost per year	$11;	Cost by G. A. P.,	$28
" 45, " " " "	17;	" " " "	36
" 60, " " " "	30;	" " " "	48

This is on the basis of 2,000 members. See page 17 of Constitution of G. A. P.

Charters $100 each (page 7). Articles furnished for the $100 (see page 24) any stationer could furnish for $20 and make more than ordinary profit.

SICK BENEFITS.—Five dollars a week sick benefit to all members, rich or poor, is a delusion and an incentive to fraud, and is utterly impractical in a society with isolated members in every part of the civilized world (page 23).

The only safe and really helpful sick benefit would be the necessary amount to secure needed attendance and comforts for the sick one, and provision for the sick member's dependent loved ones during member's sickness and inability to attend to work or business. This can be secured by loan from Society's reserve fund, repayment secured by pledge of sick member's and two other member's policies.

The time has come when a mutual aid society of Liberals is possible; it has long been greatly needed. In a spirit of earnest desire to promote the greatest good to our cause, let the subject, not persons, be fully discussed, and a plan devised or selected that will commend itself to all Liberals, affording maximum of security at minimum of cost.

And the widow and the orphan, in their bereavement and dependence, and the Liberal when misfortune, reverses, or business failure leave the $2,000 thus secured the one only provision for loved ones, will bless all who aid in the grand and noble work of organizing the Freethinkers' mutual aid society.

C. B. REYNOLDS.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, of the Secular Union, delivered a very interesting and instructive lecture in this city last Monday night. Being a superb orator, he held the attention of his listeners during the entire evening. His address was noted for the fairness of his argument and the lack of abuse of the opposite party. Mr. Putnam added many to his already large list of friends in this city, who will welcome him whenever he may return. He left for Eagle valley, where he will remain three days, from which place he will go to Summerville. An intellectual treat is in store for the people of those localities, and it will pay all lovers of liberty, justice, and equal rights to go many miles to hear the convincing logic and matchless eloquence of this champion of all that is noble and pure and true.—The Scout, Union, Or.

THE masses of our countrymen are brave, and therefore generous; they are strong, and therefore confident; and they are honest, and therefore unsuspecting. Our peril lies in the ease with which they may be deluded and cajoled by those who would traffic with their interests. No occasion is more opportune than the celebration of the one hundred and fourteenth anniversary of American independence to warn the American people of the present necessity on their part of a vigilant watchfulness of their rights, and a jealous exaction of honest and unselfish performance of public duty.—Grover Cleveland.

W. F. JAMIESON, after nearly one year's lecturing in Iowa, almost continuously, took steamer at McGregor and went up the glorious Mississippi into Minnesota. His first lecturing point is Princeton. Negotiations are also going on for a debate between him and Elder L. T. Nichols, at Kassoon, Minnesota. His address until further notice, will be Princeton, Minnesota.

THE Freethought Publishing Company has in press a second edition of Putnam's "Religious Experience," the first having been exhausted. The new edition will be larger and finer than the first, and will be ready for mailing at once.

"FAIR PLAY," of which E. C. Walker and Lillian Harman are the publishers, is to remove from Valley Falls, Kansas, to Sioux City, Iowa. The change is made on account of Mr. Walker's health, which is impaired by malaria.

FREETHOUGHT has received fifty cents from Camp L. Genius for the San Francisco Freethought Society, and one dollar from T. L. Grigsby.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS.

Davenport	Aug. 17, 18, 19	Buckley	Aug. 29
Colville	Aug. 22, 23, 24	Puyallup	Sept. 5, 6, 7

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoemaker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater.
C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 545 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.

Rapp & Debarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.

Otto Siuz, 320 Kearny st.

THE "COSMIAN HYMN BOOK."

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

(WORDS AND MUSIC)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies,
For Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price, $1.50. Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS, 15 cents.

The Pious Parson at Santa Cruz.

I'm a very pious parson
And I just came down from Carson
To rusticate a bit and get the news,
At Pacific Grove I tented
On a piece of ground I rented,
And somehow drifted round to Santa Cruz.

Oh, te-he, but it was funny,
How I squandered godly money
On lemonade and other kindred booze;
And got a little smitten
With a dainty little kitten
Who was bathing in the surf at Santa Cruz.

We men of God are rushy
In heart and kind of gushy,
But of course that isn't strange and startling
news,
And every time she'd pass me
She'd have to stop and gas me
In her polka-dotted suit at Santa Cruz.

When I said the grace at table
I was seldom ever able To tell the difference 'twixt the roast and stews;
For my heart would keep a flipping
For a maiden who was dipping
Like a mermaid in the surf at Santa Cruz.

With the polka-dotted jacket
I had many a jolly racket—
Of her speckled hose I had some lovely views;
And memory fondly reaches
For the polka-dotted breeches
That glimmered in the surf at Santa Cruz.

Of course it's quite a pity
For my wife in Carson City,
That I her tender love should thus abuse.
And the same she'd stoutly buck on
If she knew that I was stuck on
The polka-dotted suit at Santa Cruz.

Interesting Facts.

There are about 1,500,000,000 inhabitants on the globe, says the St. Louis Republic. Of these 33,033,033 die every year. There are 3064 languages, and over 1000 religions professed by the people. The number of males and females is about equal, and their average life is about 33 years; one-fourth of the inhabitants die before they reach their fifteenth year. To 1000 persons only one reaches the age of 100 years; to every 100 only six reach the age of 65, and not more than one in 500 lives to see the eightieth year; 33,033,033 dying every year makes a grand total of 91,824 per day, 3730 per hour, sixty a minute, or one every time the clock ticks. Married persons live longer than single ones, and the tall have a better chance for long life than those of short stature.

Women have more chances of life in their favor previous to 50 years of age than men have, but fewer afterward. The number of marriages is in proportion of 75 to every 1000 individuals born; the time when the greatest number of marriages take place is in June and December—about the time of the summer and winter solstices. Dark-haired persons have a better chance in the great struggle for existence than those of the opposite complexion, except in contagious diseases, where blondes are comparatively exempt. A person born in hot weather stands the heat a great deal better than one born in the cold months of winter. Of course the rule works vice versa. Those born in the spring are usually of more robust constitution than if born at any other time of the year. Births are more frequent by night than by day, also deaths.

TRAVELING ALONE

A WOMAN'S JOURNEY

AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

(Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Price, by mail, 30 cents.
Address The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

J. A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Francisco.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

Price, 50 c. Address Freethough
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parson, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

He Found the Schoolmaster.

We were sitting on the veranda of a hotel at Niagara Falls, when I noticed a man on my right looking sharply at the man on my left, and presently he got up in an excited way and walked about. After a bit he halted before the other man and said:

"Isn't your name Graham?"
 "Yes, sir," was the prompt reply.
 "Didn't you use to teach school at Elmira?"
 "Yes, sir."
 "In 1863?"
 "Yes, sir."
 "Do you remember a boy named Godkin?"
 "Very distinctly, sir."

"Do you remember that he put a package of fire-crackers under his desk and touched them off?"

"As if it happened only yesterday."
 "And you basted him for it?"

"I did. I licked him until he could hardly stand, and I've always been glad of it."

"You have, eh?" said the other, breathing fast and hard. "Do you know that that boy swore a terrible oath?"

"I presume he did, as he was a thorough young villain."

"He swore an oath that he would grow up and hunt for you and pound you within an inch of your life."

"But I haven't heard from him yet."

"You hear from him now! He stands before you! I am that boy!"

"Well?"

"Prepare to be licked! My time has come at last."

He made a dive for the old pedagogue, but the latter evaded him, made a half-turn and hit him on the jaw, and Godkin went over a chair in a heap. Then the whilom schoolmaster piled on to him and licked him until he cried, "Enough," and it didn't take him over three minutes to do it. Then he retired to get on an o'er collar and replace some buttons, and I helped Godkin up and observed:

"You didn't wait long enough, I guess."

"Say! That's where I made a miscue!" he replied. "I see now that I ought to have held off until he got to be 150 years old. The old devil is all of 70 now, but he licked me right off the reel, and I'll never have the sand to stand up to him again. Here is thirty years of waiting for vengeance knocked into a cocked hat in five minutes."

ST. PETER—"Any credentials?" Newly arrived soul (confidentially)—"I spent my life getting up stories about Atheists struck dumb, profane men struck by lightning, etc., to be telegraphed by the press associations. Highly moral work, sir." St. Peter [confidentially]—"Come in, then. The place across the way claims a larger population than we have, and I can make you useful in the census department."

"I LIKE that girl's disposition," said Scadley as a maiden passed down to the beach in particularly abbreviated bathing robes.

"Know her?" asked Ratbone.

"No, but I can see she's disposed so far as can to give everybody a show."

The Humboldt Library

—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
7. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
8. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
12. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
13. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion.
14. Longevity. Prolonging life. John Gardner, M.D.
15. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
16. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
17. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
18. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
19. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kalley Miller.
20. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
21. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
22. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
23. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
24. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
25. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
26. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
27. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
28. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
29. The Study of Words.
30. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R. A. Proctor.
31. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
32. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
33. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
34. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
35. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
36. (Geological Sketches.
37. Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
38. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
39. Current Discussions in Science. W. M. Williams.
40. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
41. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
42. The Dawn of History.
43. C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
44. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
45. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
46. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
47. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
48. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange.
49. Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
50. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
51. Animal Automatism, Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
52. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
53. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
54. Illusions.
55. James Sully.
56. The Origin of Species. Two Double Numbers.
57. Charles Darwin. 30 cents each.
58. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
59. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
60. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
61. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, I.L.D.
62. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
63. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
64. Technical Education, Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
65. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
66. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
67. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
68. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herb. Spencer.
69. Archaeology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
70. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
71. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
72. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
73. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
74. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
75. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
76. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
77. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
78. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
79. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
80. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
81. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
82. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
83. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson.
84. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
85. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
86. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S. S. Laurie.
87. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T. H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haeckel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen.
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present, Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life, Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Laing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whympfer, Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No. 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Kitchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

RUINS OF EMPIRES

—BY—

VOLNEY.

NEW EDITION. | JUST PUBLISHED.

To which is added Volney's Answer to Dr. Priestly, a Biographical notice by Count Varri, and the Zodiacal Signs and Constellations by the Editor. With Portrait, and Map of Astrological Heaven of the Ancients. Post 8vo, 248 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, 75c.

Printed from entirely new plates, in large, clear type, on heavy, laid paper.

Address The Freethought Pub. Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BRAIN AND THE BIBLE.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

BY EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

We can recommend this as one of the most valuable works in the list of Freethought publications. Printed in large type on fine paper and elegantly bound. Price 51c. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

PRINTING!

The Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

- Letter-heads,
- Bill-heads,
- Programmes,
- Envelopes,
- Business Cards,
- Postal Cards,
- Tickets,
- Placards,
- Receipts,
- Posters,
- Dodgers,
- Circulars,
- Etc. etc

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

COUNTRY ORDERS SOLICITED.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco

Wm. W. NOBLE,
Merchant Tailor,
1222 STOCKTON ST.

Bet. Pacific and Broadway.

DRESSSUITS A SPECIALTY
Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass by.

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS AND TRACTS.

- God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.
- Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.
- Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.
- God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.
- Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.
- Nameless. By Voltairine de Clefrey. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.
- Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.
- The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.
- Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.
- The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Company.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled Dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.

PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50 fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2.50 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Hardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botches, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness and excesses. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

he press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address, Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N. J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

PORTRAITS

[Enlarged and Finished in Pastel and Crayon.]
First-class work at reasonable prices. Orders and Correspondence solicited. Satisfaction guaranteed.
F. C. Baxter & Co., 432 Sutter st., San Francisco.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. d.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,
Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

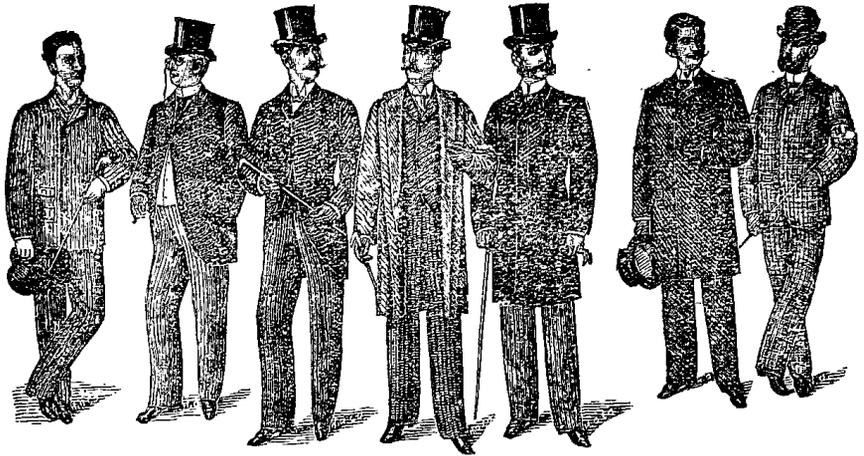

Standard Scientific Works

- Works by Alexander Bain.
 English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75
- Works by Charles Darwin.
 Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00
- Works by J. W. Draper.
 History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75
- Works by Ernst Haeckel.
 The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00
- Works by Huxley.
 Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00
- Works by John Stewart Mill.
 Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25
- Works by Richard A. Proctor.
 Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
- Works by Herbert Spencer.
 Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 Man versus the State......30
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75
- Works by Andrew D. White.
 Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00
- Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
 Body and Mind.....$1.5
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50
- Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
 Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75
- MISCELLANEOUS.
- By Asa Gray.
 Darwiniana.....$2.00
- By L. L. McLaughlin.
 Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50
- By C. Marcel.
 Study of Languages.....$1.25
- By Lester F. Ward.
 Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00
- By Frederick Overman.
 A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00
- B. F. G. Fairfield.
 Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25
- By W. B. Carpenter.
 Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25
- By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
 Evolution.....$1.50
- By Sir John Lubbock.
 Origin of Civilization.....$5.00
- By Charles A. Abbott.
 A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50
- By Garrett P. Serviss.
 Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50
- By Nathan Sheppard.
 Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50
- English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25
- Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

NATHANIEL VAUGHN
 A Splendid Radical Novel.
 BY FREDERIKA MACDONALD.
 404 pages. Price reduced to $1. The Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

101 FIFTH STREET 101

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, 10 Cents.
 Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

A HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.
 The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo. 399pp., $1.50.
Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Prof. W. S. Bell's Lectures in Oregon.

Mitchell	Aug. 20,	21
Prineville and vicinity	" 23,	28
Monument	" "	30
Hamilton	" "	31
Fox	Sept. 1,	2
John Day	" "	4
Prairie City	" "	5
Baker City	" 6,	7
Union	" "	8
New Bridge	" 10,	11
Summerville	" 12,	13
Heppner	" 15,	16
Dayton	" 20,	21
Rosalia	" "	23
Plaza	" "	24
Oakdale	" "	26
Spokane	" "	27
Davenport	" 28,	29

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm.....Diamond* 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy.
 Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,
PUTNAM & MACDONALD,
 04 Kearny Street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
 Six Months......75
 Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.
 12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth $1.50.

NOW READY

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against LIBERTY,

By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

PLAIN HOME TALK

By EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard St., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,

Hygienic Physician.

Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,

Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.

HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m.

25tf

Health AND Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M. D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M. D. $1.

Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy. $1.

Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.50.

Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook. $1.

Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer. $1

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.

Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina. Ills. 50.

Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook. $1.

Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F. K. C. S. 30 cents

I HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE

Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.

13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order.

The Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is entirely damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thief resisting. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only.

Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

LIFE RENEWER

NONE GENUINE WITHOUT THIS SIGNATURE.

Dr. Pierce's Galvanic Chain Belt is guaranteed to be the latest improved perfect Body-Battery. The electricity from this celebrated instrument will cure, with out medicine; Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Diseases of the Liver or Kidneys, Lame Back, Female Weakness, General Debility, Spinal Disease, Sexual Weakness, Impotency, Etc. Suspensory for men free with every Belt. N. B. The Electricity goes directly to all Weak Parts and restores them to Health and Vigorous Strength. For particulars call or send 4 cts. in stamps for sealed Pamphlet No. 2. Address MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COM'Y, 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal. If troubled with Hemorrhoids or Piles, send stamp for Pamphlet No. 3.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 11 POWELL STREET.

OLIVER HUNCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands. 200 and 207 Sutter St

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

THE MONARCH.

TRADE MARK.

None Genuine Without this Trade Mark on Every Bottle.

PURELY VEGETABLE. AN INFALLIBLE CURE

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, GOUT, Lumbago, Asthma, Constipation, Sciatica, Dropsy, Malaria, Indigestion, and all Kidney, Liver, and Stomach Troubles.

$1 PER BOTTLE, SIX FOR $5.

C. H. WEBB, Sole Proprietor and Manufacturer, No. 40 O'Farrel Street, San Francisco.

For sale by all druggists. Send for Circulars.

NEVER FAILS. CAUTION—Beware of imitations. Note my trade mark closely

$25.00 REWARD $25.00

For any of the above diseases that C. H. WEBB'S HÆMONY will not cure.

References from People Who Have Used C. H. Webb's Hæmony.

Hon. A. Van R. Paterson, Judge Supreme Court, S. F.
Henry L. Dodge, Esq., Pres. Sather Banking Co. S. F.
Captain Ferris, Steamer Apache, San Francisco.

S. M. West, Esq., 1209 Bush street, San Francisco.

Robert Smith, contractor, 1810 Larkiu street, S. F.

John Birmingham, Police Officer, 340 18th street, S. F.

James T. Bonefield, Member of Lincoln Post, No. 1. Residence, 8 Harriet street, San Francisco.

Mrs. W. Gerdes, widow of Ex-Chief Gerdes, San Jose Fire dept. Residence, Haywards st. Los Angeles.

And I can also refer you to hundreds of others who Have Been Cured by my great remedy HÆMONY.

C. H. Webb's Hæmony. Carefully packed and shipped by Express to all parts of the world. Send money by P. O. Order or through Wells, Fargo & Co.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 34.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, AUGUST 23, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - AUGUST 23, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Arid lands stretch from Baker City on to Eagle Valley. Only a few houses are to be seen. At Keating, the first stopping-place, there is only one house, barn, and post-office. From this we rise fifteen hundred feet to Sparta, a somewhat dilapidated mining village, where I am hungry enough to eat almost any kind of a dinner. From these lofty ways there are magnificent prospects. Mountains are seen in every direction. Especially the Granite hills tower in multitudinous grandeur. They seem to fill the whole horizon at times with their massive brilliance.

It is a beautiful picture when from the far over-hanging bluff the green and fruitful valley appears. It seems away down hundreds of feet, and it is by a kind of winding staircase that we descend from the glaring upper regions of desert to the lower regions of verdant splendor. It is like coming into paradise. It is a surprise indeed suddenly from dusty travel, with nothing but brown and gray on every side rolling into tumultuous heights, to look upon this glittering vale, that it seems you might almost jump across, lying like a gem in the vast expanse, holding already in its bosom a population of four hundred, and capable of several times that number in its future growth. The sun was becoming golden as we reached the crest of the mighty hill and began to sweep downward in huge circles, almost like a bird in its flight. We crossed the sparkling Eagle creek, and a little way over came to the ranch and store of James F. Cleaver, and here was the home-like welcome of "Auld Lang Syne" and Liberal comradeship. Our friends, the Cleavers, wherever they go, lift the flag and it floats in the sunshine and the storm, and now for the first time it was waving over Eagle valley, where as yet not a church had reared its idle walls, although the land is flowing with milk and honey. The Cleavers were at Cracker Creek last year where I lectured, and now by the death of Mr. Holcomb, Mrs. Cleaver's father, they are removed to New Bridge. Mr. Holcomb was a Liberal and always maintained his principles and was on the roll of Freethought, and his memory is still for progress and for freedom. It did not take long to be rested after my long forty-mile ride, and when the moon began to shed its lustre I was on my way to the school-house, where the first Freethought lecture in the valley was to be delivered. The campaign opened with all the promise that one could desire. The house was crowded. Some of those present were Christians, and the younger ones of this sect seemed to think that the meeting was for their own special benefit, and they kept up a kind of confab on the back seats, as if no others had any rights that they were bound to respect. But only half a dozen thus disturbed the meeting, and to the majority Freethought was evidently acceptable, and I could not ask for more generous listeners. On the following night the attendance was equally appreciative, and there was no opposition in the back seats. I guess by this time that civilization had exerted its benign influence. It was more through ignorance than ill-will that the disturbances occurred. I don't think it will happen again. The march of improvement is in the valley.

A much larger number would have been out the second evening if it had not been for the busy preparations for the harvest festival to be held on the first day of August. The women were cooking all day long, and were not in a mood to attend an extra service. The men generally were pretty busy gathering in the crops, and in view of so much going on, the number at the lecture was quite encouraging. About every seat was occupied.

They have inaugurated a good custom in this valley, of holding a harvest festival to which all the neighboring communities are invited, and there is a good time for everybody, old and young. This valley can indeed be proud of its productions. It beats any part of the state for hay and grain. All kinds of vegetables can be raised. The sweet-corn and potatoes are as luscious as one can desire. The peaches are delicious, and the blackberries make the heart glad, and the apples are red and sweet. There is honey also, and the bees fly over the alfalfa with rejoicing hum. A lovely Arcadian land is this, secluded in the wild and rugged scenes, and fortunate are they who have dropped upon its fertile and delightful breast. Toil here is pleasure, for it meets with ample reward. Here no earthquake rolls, nor cyclones ever sweep. The value of what the valley produced last year averages $59 per acre, and I doubt if any other place can show a better record. No wonder, then, that the people come together for a glorious harvest festival with music and dance and streaming pennon where the waters flash in silvery bubbles and the arches of the grove make a beautiful roof, with soft sunshine falling upon the green earth. There are a thousand there now, men, women, and children. Mr. Crawford, of Union, opens the exercises of the day with an eloquent speech. The Eagle Valley band discourses sweet and inspiring music. Denham Wright, of Big Spring, and myself also join our voices in the celebration of labor's toil and triumph. Then the little children, in fours and twos, add to the beauty and melody of the occasion. Then comes the big dinner, and the valley pours forth its riches for the benefit of the many guests

There is enough and to spare. After dinner the sports are in order, the races—the fat man's race, won by Dr. Fuller; the little boy's race, the sack race, the wheelbarrow race, the egg race, etc. Then flashes the beautiful equestrianism of the fair ladies, gliding gracefully along the forest, bewitching the world, for the golden prize. Then follows the grand tournament. Six knights enter the list, and a gallant set of men they are, with flying colors. It was noble horsemanship indeed, and it made the blood thrill to see the knights dash along and with steady eye gather the red ring upon the spear. Not always, however, did fortune prevail, and the red ring fluttered away upon the dust. When the grand prize was won, the queen was crowned and the maids of honor joined the splendid circle, and the martial strains softened to melodious marches, and the gay festivities of the night outlasted the moon and greeted the morning sun. But I could not remain through all these joyous hours of night, for I must be up and away with the morning sun. This harvest festival will never be forgotten, nor the good friends I have met in this round of pleasure mingling with work.

I am sorry that our friend, Miss Etta Cleaver, whose joyous enthusiasm of youth sparkles with Freethought, is on a bed of sickness. She has not been well since last September and bears her sufferings bravely. She was able to go to the festival, by having a bed made in the hack, for she can sit up only for a few moments at a time. However, she has splendid courage, and I hope again to see her as healthy and as bright as a year ago. Prayers cannot do this, but the good genius of undaunted will is the angel that clears the way.

I was glad to meet with Henry Foster, of Pine valley, which is another fertile space, somewhat larger than Eagle valley, ten miles further on. Mr. Foster wanted that I should extend my pilgrimage to his home, but time did not permit. I was assured that there are many Freethinkers in Pine valley, and next year when I make my annual round I shall take delight in climbing the "golden stair" to this remote paradise, for these valleys are at an elevation of about three thousand feet. They are so snugly packed in the mountains that the storms which pile the snow-drifts three hundred feet high on the neighboring heights only give their gentlest gales, and the climate is superb.

Dr. H. J. Fuller and family, of Baker City, are to make Eagle valley their home. The doctor has bought a ranch and will mingle rural pleasures with professional cares.

J. W. Bennehoff, a sterling Freethinker of many years' standing, took me to his home on Thursday evening. He came here about twelve years ago and conquered the sage-brush, and now his broad acres greet the harvest sun with gold.

A. Swisher, is one of the old settlers, came here in 1868, and is on the roll of Freethought. It was in his grove by the limpid Eagle creek that the festival was held.

Captain Craig is one of the giant pioneers of this land and stands to the front always.

W. W. Kirby, Tom Connell, W. H. Tobin, Ben Longley, Geo. A. Clunie, C. H. Carnaham, Routledge, with many others, make the frontier line of Freethought, and now that the banner is up it will always greet the hills with advancing lustre. T. J. Landers came all the way from Bridgeport, a distance of about eighty miles, to attend the lecture and festival, and takes FREETHOUGHT into the bargain.

Saturday morning I climb the gray rampart to the outer world, and when a thousand feet above bid farewell to the entrancing picture and turn to the wide extending desert, with a stretch of forty miles to Baker City. At five o'clock the long, thin column of smoke from Baisely's mine greets the eye against the dark-brown magnificence of Baker Mountains. At six o'clock we enter the city, now on its boom and destined to be quite a mining metropolis. A rich mineral as well as timbered country is about it. P. A. Conde, our Liberal friend, has been elected sheriff the last year, and J. L. Baisely is chief deputy sheriff. I did not lecture at Baker City, for luck was against me, but it will not always be so.

I get up at one o'clock Sunday morning to catch the train, but it is several hours late, and I don't get to La Grande until after seven o'clock. I meet J. W. Norval and N. C. McLeod of the good old Scotch Presbyterian clan, and am driven over to Summerville in time for a lecture Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. The splendor of Grand Round valley on that bright Sunday morning was something delightful to look upon. It is about thirty miles long and sixteen miles wide, and Union, La Grande, Elgin, Island City, and Summerville are gems upon its ample bosom. About it sweep the lovely Blue mountains. The harvest glory was radiant in every direction as we sped along.

There was a fine audience in the morning at Rhinehart's Hall. Among them was a preacher, Elder Jones, of Elgin. He was on the warpath. I gave my lecture on the "Demands of Liberalism." He said he would not make an issue on them, but he would stand by the grand old Bible. I offered him half the time of the evening. He said he could not be present, but flung down the gauntlet for a six-nights debate on some future occasion. I accepted the challenge, and preliminaries were entered into, but we came near making a stoppage of proceedings on the statement of the question. With clerical astuteness he wanted the question put as follows: "Resolved, That the Bible contains a divine revelation." I of course refused to debate so vague, indefinite, and absurd a proposition as that, for there would be no possible chance to pin him down. His "divine revelation" would dodge from every text that I might take. Like the Irishman's flea, the moment you put your finger on it it isn't there. The orthodox position affirms that the Bible is, not that it contains, a divine revelation; but my reverend friend wouldn't take that position. I offered to debate the question, "Is there a God?" or that "Christ and the Bible teach the best morality." He wouldn't debate these propositions. Finally, by means of a committee, the following was hit upon to our mutual satisfaction, and the articles of agreement were then and there signed: That there should be a debate of six nights, the first week in October, Elder Jones to open with a forty-minute speech, to be followed by alternate half-hour speeches by the disputants until the closing night, when the half-hour speeches will be ended by a résumé of argument by Elder Jones, to be confined to half an hour. The question is, "Resolved, That the Bible is of divine origin." The debate will be held at Summerville, and it is expected that the biggest crowd of the season will be in attendance. I think that Elder Jones is a man of considerable courage. He is evidently in earnest and believes that he will win the case. His friends affirm that he is well informed and capable, and a gentleman. There is prospect, therefore, of a pretty lively time, and Summerville will be a splendid place for the combat.

The hall was crowded at the evening lecture, and I can but congratulate our friends at this point upon the success of their efforts.

Senator J. W. Norval does not shrink from being an open

Liberal, and I guess it never cost him a vote, for he has the confidence of his party and high official position. He would not accept an office, however, if he had to give up one iota of his principles.

A. Meacham, an attorney, is willing to be counted. He believes in law that is justice. He is a genial companion, and Justus Wade and G. I. Wade are like "old Ben Wade," of Ohio—they have an opinion of their own, and say it.

I guess it won't do any hurt to say that Postmaster C. D. McDowell is one of the fairest and squarest Liberals on the coast, and the mail service doesn't suffer at his hands. It goes just as well six week days as on Sundays, and vice versa.

A. J. Patten, B. H. Hubers, John Kirchhoffer, S. L. McKenzie, N. C. McLoed, G. Waelthy, E. B. Morselock, Charles Holsgarth, George Ott, A. Holsgarth, Jap Bonnett—these all make a pretty good record for Freethought, and Summerville is about as Liberal and prosperous a place as my Secular pilgrimage has struck. It looks ahead. Hunt's railroad is coming here, and that means wealth and growth.

Devine, editor and proprietor of the Annotator, is an all-round Liberal and gives everybody a chance. He thinks a clergyman can behave just as well as anybody if he only has a fair opportunity.

Mrs. N. S. Waelthy contributed a beautiful bouquet for the occasion, while the Summerville Silver Cornet band furnished music, for which our thanks are due. It will thus be seen that the opening campaign was really a brilliant affair. In the "gorgeous and jeweled October," when the Grand Round tournament is on the boards, the story of Summerville will be repeated in a new and larger edition. Let the clans of Freethought gather.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

AN ESTIMATE OF THE CHURCH.

Count Tolstoi is perhaps a fanatic on the sexual question, but he appears to have sized up the church with remarkable acuteness. Thomas Stevens, the famous foreign correspondent of the New York "World," gives an account of an interview with the eccentric nobleman, in which is recorded Tolstoi's opinion that priests, ministers, and churches are to be held in no sort of esteem. The priests, he says, are a part and parcel of the governmental machinery for grinding the faces of the poor and living without work. To swing a censer and chant senseless masses is, in his opinion, stage acting; and the time wasted on this buffoonery, if devoted to planting and digging potatoes, would suffice to earn their bread, and then there would be no need of preying on the ignorant and superstitious.

Tolstoi goes a little too far when he says that a minister of the gospel who accepts a salary and lives off it is a robber. Impositor is a better word. The only difference between the minister and the footpad, says our author, is that whereas the latter knocks you down and rifles your pockets, the minister gets at the pockets of honest people by a more ingenious if less violent process. Furthermore, he goes on, both minister and footpad eat food they have never earned, and which, consequently, cannot possibly be theirs by right.

These views are as radical as any put forth by Infidels, but Tolstoi, we believe, professes to be a Christian, and, like the majority of religionists, his views are emotional rather than reasoned. He should have the charity to admit that if a clergyman honestly believes himself called to preach the gospel, and if a number of persons voluntarily agree to pay his salary, he is not necessarily a robber when he accepts money for his services. He deceives himself and his people, but the deception is involuntary. The robbers, in a strictly legal sense, are the state-paid hypocrites whose salaries are drawn from the people by compulsory taxation, which is the kind of clergy that infest Russia and to whom Tolstoi doubtless had reference.

Taking Tolstoi's estimate of the church and clergy as a whole, it is a fairly accurate one. The church is a machine, an organization formed to give a physical body to the superstitions of mankind. Gladstone has said that the church furnishes the wings whereby the soul of man ascends to heaven, but his characterization is figurative and unreal. As a matter of fact it furnishes ignorance, bigotry, and fanaticism with the means to effectually oppose enlightenment, liberty, and progress.

EXPLODING MYTHS.

By order of the government of Switzerland, the story of William Tell shooting an apple from the head of his son is to be excluded hereafter from all school histories published by authority; "and it is officially proclaimed," says a dispatch from Geneva, "that the Tell stories are neither more nor less than fanciful legends of German origin."

Nearly everybody is acquainted with this particular myth, as it has been preserved in song and story, and versions of it are not confined to Switzerland, but appear in text-books used in America. Twenty-five years ago the present writer was required to read a poem from his Reader beginning thus:

"Come list to me, and you shall hear
A tale of what befell
A famous man of Switzerland:
His name was William Tell."

According to the legend, it was in the year 1307 (or, as some authorities have it, 1296) that Gessler, a minion of the emperor Albert of Hapsburg, set a cap on a pole as a symbol of the imperial power, and ordered everybody to bow to it. Tell refused to salute the cap, and as a punishment was required to shoot the apple from his boy's head, as aforesaid.

It was nearly two hundred years later before any copy of the story appears in the annals of Switzerland. Two hundred and ninety years after the alleged occurrence, or in 1598, a writer on Swiss antiquities called it a fable, but subscribed to the current belief in it because the tale was popular. About the year 1750 a bolder skeptic said that the story was of Danish origin, and was condemned by the authorities to be burnt alive. Happily the offender was absent when the sentence was passed, but his book fell into the hands of the common hangman and suffered public cremation.

The evidences in favor of the legend may be enumerated. There is, says Edwin Clodd, the fountain on the supposed site of the tree in the market-place at Altdorf by which young Tell stood, or to which he was bound, as well as a colossal plaster statue of the hero himself in the same village. Furthermore, the veritable cross-bow itself is preserved in the arsenal at Zurich. There is also a "Tell chapel" restored and opened no later than June, 1882.

Nevertheless, the evidence that the story is a fable seems to be conclusive. A Danish writer of the twelfth century tells a similar narrative dated about 950. Norse legends have two or three different versions of it; it occurs in English story books; Persian lore of the twelfth century contains it; the Aryans were familiar with it; so were the Turks and the Mongolians; and a legend of "the Samoyedes," who never heard of Tell or saw a book in their lives, relates it, chapter and verse, of one of their marksmen. The story was evidently fastened upon Tell as a proof of his skill with the crossbow, as the hatchet story is attached to Washington to attest his inability to lie. But the whole matter is dissolved by the solar mythologists, who "see in Tell the sun or cloud deity; in his bow the storm-cloud or the iris; and in his arrows the sun-rays or lightning darts."

The myth of Tell and his adventures is interesting, and important at present, because it is a type of more generally accepted myths that still receive the indorsement of many more powerful governments than that of Switzerland. We refer to the god myth and the messianic myth. Anyone who will take the trouble to read the work called the Old Testament will find there recounted the marvelous exploits of a character called Jehovah, whose performances are located farther back in antiquity and are therefore more remarkable, and also on a larger scale than those of Tell. They are likewise correspondingly unreasonable. In the New Testament a new hero called Christ, son of the foregoing, is introduced, of whom rather less startling adventures are recorded, but who is evidently of a similar mythological character. References to these two personages still occur in the textbooks used in our public schools; and not only that, but pupils are required to perform certain incantations called prayers, and to chant certain prophecies called hymns, wherein the names of these fabulous characters are frequently mentioned. Much abler and more exhaustive research than that employed in the Tell myth has been used to test the truthfulness of the accounts relating to these two legendary personages; the result being that the intelligence of the age rejects them as totally imaginary. No traces of their actual existence is to be discovered after the most patient and careful investigation. It is high time, therefore, that all governments maintaining a public school system should take a lesson from Switzerland, and exclude from all school-books published by authority the fanciful legends drawn from the biblical narratives of oriental origin.

AS TO SPIRITUALISM.

A great many of the subscribers to FREETHOUGHT, we learn, are Spiritualists, which is not surprising, as Spiritualists are intelligent people and know a good paper when they see it; but it speaks well for the liberality of our Spiritualistic friends that they are willing to patronize papers that do not advocate, and that even antagonize, what to them has almost the sacredness of a religious belief. We have to admit, however, that some Spiritualists take FREETHOUGHT under a sort of protest. They say, truthfully, that they are Freethinkers but not Materialists, and that Materialists are as much under obligation to respect their opinions as Spiritualists are to respect the opinions of their brother Liberals; and they are on the alert to detect and reprove whatever they may regard as a reflection upon the soundness of the spiritual philosophy. It is not a week since a good Spiritualist of this city called at the office to have his paper discontinued on account of its opposition to views which he holds. Yet we could not ascertain that anything more offensive to Spiritualism than the Theosophical lecture of Dr. Jerome Anderson had appeared in these columns; and though that lecture is as much opposed to Materialism as to the doctrines of Spiritualism, we have as yet to hear a complaint from any Materialist that his cherished belief has been treated with disrespect. Possibly some of our Spiritualist friends have still to learn how liberal Liberals can be, and that there really exists in the world that virtue which Colonel Ingersoll describes as intellectual hospitality.

The attitude of FREETHOUGHT toward Spiritualism is one of suspended judgment. It neither affirms nor denies a future life, though it declines to accept as sufficient the arguments and facts adduced as evidence of such a state. The golden rule of Descartes is a good one—give unqualified assent to no propositions but those the truth of which is so clear and distinct that they cannot be doubted. Taking this rule as a guide, doubting nothing for the mere sake of doubting, remaining open to conviction and hospitable toward everything that bears the semblance of truth—this seems to us the wiser course. Mr. George Chainey once remarked to the editors of this paper that FREETHOUGHT was out of the swim—that if it desired success and popularity it must become an exponent of Spiritualism or Theosophy, which in his mind appeared to be identical. To which it was only necessary to reply that if FREETHOUGHT were in quest of popularity it would change its name, though it would not in that case adopt Spiritualism, since there were other more popular and prosperous beliefs that it could as consistently advocate. Mr. Chainey is an exemplar of his own doctrine, while FREETHOUGHT endeavors to stick to the text of Descartes. Mr. Chainey has crossed and recrossed from one debatable land to another, and might now be back within the fold of the church if he had not burnt the bridge behind him.

Scores of differing beliefs regarding the ultimate destiny of man present themselves to every intelligent person for his acceptance. Among these modern Spiritualism appears the most reasonable, not to say the most scientific. It brings an array of facts, to reject which is to impugn the veracity or to impeach the intelligence of thousands of veracious and intelligent people. The only question to be settled is the question recently debated by Moses Hull and S. P. Putnam—"Do the phenomena of Spiritualism demonstrate a future life?" Honestly and candidly, we do not know what those phenomena demonstrate, further than that they prove the constantly receding character of the unexplained; that is, that in this direction, as in every other, each mystery removed only discovers fresh mysteries beyond. Those who overpass phenomena and affirm what lies behind them doubtless feel justified in doing so, but it is a step which others, for good reasons, are disinclined to take. The difference, however, on that point is not sufficient grounds for a quarrel among people who agree on nearly everything else.

PROHIBITED BOOKS.

"Kreutzer Sonata." 25 cents.

"Thou Shalt Not." 50 cents.

"Speaking of Ellen." 50 cents.

"In Stella's Shadow." 50 cents.

These books are all for sale in San Francisco. Why does not Bennett, the San Francisco agent of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, see to it that they are suppressed? Let him try the experiment and see what our courts will do.

WANAMAKER has accused ex-Postoffice Inspector William T. Henderson of being an agent of the Louisiana Lottery Company. Mr. Henderson, in reply, declares that Wanamaker has slandered him and that he knows enough about the postmaster-general to drive him out of the president's cabinet. If Mr. Henderson is in possession of such facts, nothing should prevent him from disclosing them.

ANTHONY COMSTOCK's old lieutenant and chief "fugleman," as D. M. Bennett used to call him, one Joseph Britton, has distinguished himself by arresting Patrick Farrelly, manager of the American News Company, and two of his clerks, for circulating obscene literature. The matter complained of consists of five books, entitled "Thou Shalt Not," "Speaking of Ellen," "In Stella's Shadow," "An Actor's Wife," and "The Devil's Daughter." One thousand two hundred and forty-four of these books were seized. Mr. Farrelly is reported to have been astonished to learn that the works were objectionable, but he offered no resistance. He was dumb, like a sheep before its shearers, and when examined declared upon oath that he didn't know the things were loaded. In fact, he played the coward all the way through, and instead of defending his rights like a respectable citizen, submitted without protest. We have never had any particular regard for Mr. Farrelly. He is a bigoted Roman Catholic and has instituted a boycott against anti-Catholic literature; but his right to handle the inhibited books is as clear as the sun in the sky, and his arrest is an outrage just as much as though he had the courage to say so.

IN 1887 a convict in San Quentin made a deathbed confession that testimony which he had given in a murder case and upon which two men were imprisoned for life, was perjured, and that so far as he knew the men were innocent. The man who heard the confession is the Rev. W. H. Hill, then chaplain of the prison and now a resident of Berkeley. When interviewed by a reporter the other day the Rev. Mr. Hill admitted that he had heard the confession, but in reply to the question, "What did you do about it?" said: "Do! Why, I didn't do anything. I couldn't be supposed to interest myself in the affairs of all the prisoners in San Quentin." When asked if he did not even inform the governor about it he said he did not because he was not on good terms with Governor Waterman! Steps are now being taken to investigate the case of the two men convicted by the dead convict's testimony, and if it turns out that they are innocent the Rev. Mr. Hill may get what comfort he can out of the reflection that by needlessly prolonging their imprisonment he is particeps criminis with the perjurer.

"TO-DAY four thousand five hundred saloons are in our city, while the Directory shows but one hundred and seventeen churches, representing twenty-thousand Christians. Where are the remainder of the three hundred thousand inhabitants?" The foregoing statement and inquiry were made by the Rev. J. Q. A. Henry last Sunday in the course of an argument in favor of a Sunday law. His notion that is that by closing the saloons on Sunday the churches may be filled, but it is proper to inform him that in cities where the experiment has been tried no such result has followed. There is no sense in charging or insinuating that because a person is not at church he must of necessity be hanging about a liquor store. The majority of citizens frequent neither.

ONCE more the news comes that "the pope will soon issue a manifesto to Roman Catholics throughout the world, giving his intention of leaving Rome, together with his court and all his adherents." The reason given is that it is impossible for any earnest Christian, even now, to live in Rome, which is fast becoming the headquarters of Atheism and Freethought. But the pope's threat to leave the city, provided he has made such a threat, can be construed as nothing more than a bluff. He has too many interests there to voluntarily abandon them. Anywhere but in Rome the pope would be like a clown outside a circus.

THE editor of the "Agitator," a Young Men's Christian Association paper published at Augusta, Me., sent the Freethought Publishing Company an invitation to forward books for review. We sent a copy of Putnam's "Religious Experience," but the editor declines to notice it, although he professes a desire to enable his readers to know "what is being written" and to "form their own opinions as to whether the book is likely to meet their particular wants." We are inclined to think that "My Religious Experience" would meet the "particular wants" of a good many members of the Young Men's Christian Association.

SENATOR BLAIR has passed from the advocacy of a national Sunday law to the advocacy of a national prohibition enactment. The other day he introduced a resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution to forever prohibit in the United States the manufacture, importation, exportation, transportation, and sale of all alcoholic liquors used as beverages. The Committee on Labor and Education has reported favorably upon the resolution, but as this committee seems to be formed mainly of Senator Blair, the report has little significance. The country has grown weary of Blair.

THE San Francisco High License Association issue in pamphlet form an "Appeal for a High License Ordinance," backing up their arguments with figures showing the extent of the liquor evil in San Francisco. The disinterestedness of the members of this association is shown by the fact that one of its executive committeemen is a real estate agent, many of whose stores where liquor is now sold would be emptied of their tenants by a high license ordinance.

THE members of the Sabbath Union now holding their convention in San Francisco announce that California is to be the battlefield of the next fight for Sunday laws. California now has the proud pre-eminence of being the only state in the Union with a free Sunday, but the bigots seem determined that the distinction shall not be maintained. It is pleasing to note that the Sabbath Union of this city does not appear to be a very powerful body.

THE regents of the State University propose to remove the remains of James Lick from their present resting-place beneath the foundation of the great Lick telescope on Mt. Hamilton, and place them in a suitable mausoleum to be erected to receive them. The necessity for this step seems hardly apparent. The observatory is James Lick's most appropriate monument, and his remains could not have a fitter resting-place than beneath its towers.

IT is a stirring letter that Miss Ida C. Craddock gives the readers of FREETHOUGHT this week. Miss Craddock shows, what all reformers should realize, that the separation of church and state lies at the foundation of every liberty.

ANOTHER plea, this time voiced by Michael Davitt, comes from Ireland asking relief from poverty and destitution. Meanwhile the collection of Peter's pence from the Irish people goes merrily on.

WE must again remind subscribers in arrears that it is necessary for them to renew. It is positively impossible for us to send them FREETHOUGHT unless they pay their subscriptions.

THE Annual Convention of Canadian Secularists and Freethinkers will be held in Toronto on Saturday and Sunday, September 13 and 14.

A SEANCE.

A business errand took me to the office of the "Carrier Dove" last week, and Dr. Louis Schlesinger, the business manager and medium, took me into his parlor and gave me a sitting. The doctor's first act was to apologetically remove a cigar from my person, and to put it away in a safe place, not necessarily for future reference, but for my own good. He then seated me at a small table and gave me a strip of pink paper which he had marked off with eight lead-pencil lines. I was instructed to write thereon the names of several persons, living and dead. Dr. Schlesinger left the room while I did the writing, though that was unnecessary, as in cutting the strip of paper into ballots upon his return, he had ample opportunity to read the names, and I presume he does not deny that he saw them all. Sitting opposite to me at the little table he cut the strip up into ballots with his pocketknife, folded and tossed them to me, and I dropped them into a hat held between my knees. At his request I gave the ballots a good shaking up in the hat, and then passed them to him one at a time under the table. The doctor meanwhile held conversation with his spirit guide. As I passed him a ballot he inquired, "Is this spirit present?" and occasionally a sort of ticking noise under the table was accepted as an affirmative reply. In such cases the ballot was opened and read. If the person named was deceased, the spirit alleged to be present was accepted as that person; if living, then the spirit was explained to be one desirous of communicating with the said person.

Among the names was that of my mother, which Dr. Schlesinger detected and identified correctly without, apparently, reading it. He likewise discovered the name of a deceased person written on a ballot; also the place of the person's death and the name of the disease he had died of, all of which were written on the papers. His method was to take up the ballots, unopened, one after another until he came to the right one, which would be announced by the ticking noise under the table.

But some curious mistakes occurred. In writing the name of a deceased acquaintance, with the place of his death opposite, I inadvertently wrote "New York" instead of "Brooklyn." Yet the doctor's guide did not correct the error, but gave the location as New York.

In another instance I wrote the name of Charles L. Brown as a sort of test to see whether the doctor's information come from the spirits or from the ballots. The medium found Brown's ballot without difficulty and without reading it; recognized it as the name of a man, and informed me that the spirit of Brown was present with a message. Dr. Schlesinger delivered Brown's message orally, something to this effect: "George, my dear friend, God bless you! I am rejoiced to meet you here to-day and to give you this assurance that the dead still live and can do return to loved ones on earth."

I felt like telling Mr. Brown that he had the advantage of me, as, to the best of my recollection, I never knew a Charles L. Brown in my life, and had nobody in mind when I wrote the name.

The sitting appears to demonstrate (1) That Dr. Schlesinger can read a ballot without seeing, at the time, the side on which the name is written; (2) That he can in some cases tell whether the person bearing the name on the ballot is living or dead; (3) That he can guess with startling accuracy the relationship of the person to the sitter. I bear in mind, however, that he requested me to write my mother's maiden name in full, which I did, giving the middle name, "Chase," and that I wrote the middle name of no other person in the list of eight. I would not insinuate that this gave the medium anything in the nature of a clue, but in the absence of a spirit guide it might perhaps be utilized as a hint.

As a conclusion to the seance, Dr. Schlesinger passed into the trance state, being taken possession of by his guide, who, through the medium, shook my hand and greeted me with a cordial "How do you do, sir?" He then delivered an impressive address, saying that the question, "If a man die, shall he live again?" must be answered in the affirmative. This was followed by a poem, which I listened to attentively enough to remark that the guide was a poor versifier, and then the doctor came out of the trance, and inquired if I was convinced. I did not feel free to announce my complete conversion, and when he asked me to explain what I had seen I was unprepared to do so. I could only ward him off with the suggestion that I was not responsible for what had occurred, and that the explanation would be more reliable if it came from him. Thereupon, on the honor of a gentleman and a man old enough to be my father, Dr. Schlesinger assured me that everything I had received came from the angel world. As he could have no object in misleading me in so unimportant a particular I am ready to admit that he told me what he thought was the truth, though I am still without evidence. The interest that angel Charles L. Brown takes in me is deeply appreciated. The office of Dr. Schlesinger is at 23 Stockton street, San Francisco. M.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

California fruit is supplying the deficiency in the Eastern crop. It is believed that the East must also depend largely upon this state for its grapes the coming fall.—George Hyde, a pioneer of 1846, died at his residence on Geary street Aug. 16. Mr. Hyde was appointed alcalde by General Kearny in 1847.—There is a small strike among the coopers of San Francisco, the employees of R. Armstrong on Main street having walked out. The question of wages is not involved, but the union men object to common laborers doing their work.—The new cruiser, San Francisco, built at the Union Iron Works, is proving a remarkable swift craft, having exceeded the speed of 19 knots per hour.—A sail-boat was turned bottom upward by a squall on upper Crystal Springs lake, near San Mateo, last Sunday, and the four occupants were drowned. The lake is one of the principal tributaries to the Spring Valley Company's system which supplies San Francisco with water.—The Democratic State Convention is in session in San Jose this week.—The old steamer, Mary Garratt, was partially burned at the Stockton wharf on Sunday. Her owners estimate the damage at $20,000.—Dr. Samuel Merritt, one of the wealthiest men in Oakland, died Aug. 17. He was 78 years of age, and a native of Maine. He came to the coast in 1849.—There were 131 deaths in San Francisco last week, 40 more than during the same period in 1889.—Census returns give California a population of about 1,200,000.—The Rev. J. P. Newman, General Grant's parson, was in San Francisco last week on his way home from Japan. He will go up the coast to Tacoma, Whatcom, and other places.—The Republicans of California will vote for Col. H. H. Markham for governor next fall. The Democrats and Prohibitionists will vote for somebody else. Colonel Markham is a native of New York state; he is 50 years old, served three years in the war, and one term in Congress.

The railroad strike in New York caused bloodshed last Sunday, when, in a row between the mob and the guards, fifteen Pinkerton men and five outsiders were wounded. It seems that the mob threw stones at the guards, who returned the fire with revolvers. The strike is still unsettled.—The Pacific Express Company lost $90,000 by a train robbery on the Missouri Pacific Railroad on the morning of Aug. 17. A gang of highwaymen stopped the train and forced the express messenger to open the safe.—Henry George will reach New York the first of September, and on the second of the month the Single Tax organizations of the country will hold a national convention in Cooper Union. San Francisco will be represented by Judge J. G. Maguire.—Some sort of an anti-lottery bill has passed the national House of Representatives.—Completed census returns will probably show that the United States has a population of 64,000,000.—Same old story: "Baltimore, August 15.—Information has been received of the disgrace in India of a young Methodist missionary who was well known here. The missionary is the Rev. J. H. Shively, who graduated at Dickinson College. After his admission as a minister in the Maryland Conference at Emory Grove Camp, about two years ago, and his marriage to a young lady of Denton, in Caroline county, he went to India as a missionary. Bishop James Hoburn astounded the friends of Mr. Shively about a week ago by announcing that Mr. Shively was no longer connected with the South Indian Conference. It seems that the missionary fell in love with an Indian maiden and their conduct became so objectionable that it aroused the ire of the natives, who threatened personal harm to the missionary. Shively disappeared after resigning his mission."—The Rev. Andrew Colville, of New York, attempted suicide last week by shooting himself in the mouth. The shot did not kill him, and Mr. Colville thereupon repented and went to the hospital for treatment. The surgeons think he will not die.

The English Parliament adjourned last Monday.—Belgian workmen threaten to inaugurate a general strike Sept. 1, unless universal suffrage is accorded them by the government. The situation is regarded with some serious apprehension of bloodshed.—Superstitious Catholics of all nationalities are flocking to the shrine at Knock, Ireland, where the Virgin Mary is said to have appeared in proper person a few years ago. As many as 600,000 are said to have visited the place in one day. The Virgin is not exhibiting herself this season.—The distinguished author and critic, John Ruskin, is rapidly sinking. He is almost continuously delirious, and during these irresponsible moments has attempted suicide with a razor. The strictest watch is kept over him, despite which he has twice made this effort upon his life.

THE MERITS OF POLYTHEISM.

BY DR. G. A. DANZIGER.

I.

If I were asked whether I believe in one God my answer would neither be a strictly positive one nor a positively negative one. I would answer in about the following manner:

As a member of society, that is, of that society which morally drags me to church or to a picnic, to a social, to a party, or to any other stimulating exercise, to prolong pleasures and to shorten life—in the face of that society I should answer that I believe in one God. In the face of the commercial world my answer would take another phraseology. I should then say that we are too busy nowadays to ask for more than one God, since that one even is often greatly neglected, if not forgotten, and the idea of the one being kept alive only by proxy. But if the question should arise, whether it is more correct to believe in one or in more Gods, as far as our sympathies are concerned, I should say that Polytheism is better than Monotheism. An unbiased investigation and a true reasoning, taking human nature and its weakness into proper consideration, will show the merit of the former and the demerit of the latter, for the individual as well as for the masses. It would be folly to say that the heathen who worships many idols is equal or higher than the clergyman who officiates in a church in modern civilization. He is not meant by that at all, but I claim that the Greeks had a much finer conception of the qualities and the true consistency belonging to a supreme being, than the Christians of Mediæval ages or the Monotheistic philosopher of to-day. The Greeks did not worship idols. Their doctrine in theology was simply a plurality of gods. Homer knew Zeus and Apollo—and these are not idols. But we have to place them side by side and we have to compare the ideas of Deity of the ancient Greeks with those of modern times in order to find out whether they were humane believers in a supreme being, and whether they had any intelligence in their belief. We have also to let human nature speak, to find out and deduce a true theory for our argument.

It is an indisputable fact that we are the creators of God's virtues. Since no man has seen God and tested his virtues, all knowledge of these virtues are a priori, created, shaped, and formed by man. The greatness of God's virtues—his kindness or his cruelty, his justice or his injustice, his good-will or his ill-will—depends upon the frame of mind the "average" man is in, because to the average man there exists a God only to give him life and health, house and home, wife and children, wealth and influential greatness. As long as he has all that, he thinks God kind; but if he has never had it, or had and lost it, he experiences a reversal of those feelings and thinks God unjust, even cruel. Nine out of ten men may not express it just in those words, but it is nevertheless a fact that we think so—for such is human nature. We are grateful while we receive kindness, but we are woeful and despondent or in ill-humor when we receive none. This is a truth that stands good for human nature in all ages and in all climes. If this is true for the man living in the age of steam and electricity, it is doubly true of those that lived three thousand years ago. The only difference between the ancient and modern man is, while the former had the courage to call everything by its right name, the latter is, in his expressions, more or less a hypocrite. He is a pagan while professing to believe in one God. At other times he hates God, the perpetrator of his misfortunes, while kneeling and praying to him in the church. This is human nature for Monotheism! The Greeks had a God of joy and happiness, and one of sorrow and misery. They had a God of war and peace, a God of victory and of defeat, and many others besides. And what of that? Does this tend to prove that their belief in a supreme existence was less humane, less logical, or less consistent, or does it show that there was more inconsistency in the actions of their Gods than in the actions of the one God?

Those men may be called inhuman and most cruel who demanded Iphegenia's death to appease the gods—the father may be called weak to do nothing for his daughter who pleaded: "Look on me! Give me one parting look, one kiss, that when I die I may remember thee," or of her heart-rending supplication:

"Have pity on me, father! Spare my life!
'Tis sweet to gaze upon the blessed light;
The grave is naught! The fool resigns his breath:
The sorriest life is better than the noblest death!"

But this does not reflect upon the system of the religion or upon the consistency of the gods. Some may remark here that it is a ridiculous idea to think, while one god is endeavoring to make one rich, one is eager to give joy and the other to burden with sorrow. Is that a consistency in a well-regulated system? Suppose there should be such a fight between the gods, would that confuse the mind of the individual? Will the individual hate the god of joy because the god of sorrow is against him? But if you find this inconsistency in one God, how then? If I have to praise and to condemn or to love and to hate, to pray and to curse one God—will that make one more humane and more intelligent? Is it logical to think and to believe that the one-God, who is omniscient, should not know that burglars carry off my silver in the dead of the night, that he should favor the wicked thief who is stealing my purse while I am going to church, in preference to me, his devoted believer?

"THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT."—Last Sunday evening Mr. Putnam delivered a lecture at the court-house on the above subject. The principal feature of the lecture was devoted to an argument in favor of taxing church property. Mr. Putnam held that exempting church property from taxation was an injustice, as it withdrew from taxation a large amount of wealth and forced non-believers to aid in maintaining church organizations inasmuch as it made their taxes greater. He also held that exempting church property from taxation was a step toward uniting church and state, a most dangerous thing in any form of government. Mr. Putnam handled his subject well, and produced much good argument in support of his theory. This is a question which is now agitating the minds of many people throughout the nation, and the justice of making church property subject to taxation is conceded by many of the able divines of the country.—Ochoco, Or., Review, July 19.

THE world has been civilized in spite of, not by, Christianity. The pews have always demanded a more civilized religion before the pulpit—ever reluctantly—supplied it. Professor Swing, the prosecuted, has ever preached to an overflowing house, while Professor Patten, his prosecutor, has talked to empty benches. Thus have the pews ever civilized religion, but religion never the pews. The people flocking to the most liberal speaker, our preachers themselves—for dollars and cents—have become more liberal.—OTTO WETTSTEIN.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS.

Davenport.....Aug. 17, 18, 19 Buckley Aug. 29 30, 31
Colville Aug. 22, 23, 24 Puyallup..... Sept. 5, 6, 7

THOMAS PAINE.

BY WILLIAM HENRY BURR.

V.

THE AUTHORSHIP OF THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

The Declaration of Independence is an epitome of Paine's "Common Sense," which Jefferson certainly did not consult at the time the draft was prepared, for he says:

Whether I had gathered my ideas from reading, I do not know. I know only that I turned to neither book nor pamphlet while writing it.

Of course not, if he had before him a complete draft prepared by Thomas Paine; all he had to do was to copy it in his own hand.

Furthermore, it is a question whether Jefferson had even read "Common Sense," for in speaking of Paine, he said:

His "Common Sense" was for a while believed to have been written by Dr. Franklin and published under the borrowed name of Paine, who had come over with him from England.

It is true that the authorship of "Common Sense" was attributed for a time, not only to Dr. Franklin, but to John Adams and others. But Jefferson ought to have known that it was published anonymously. Nor did Paine come over with Franklin; he preceded him six months.

Three years after the first publication of "Common Sense," Paine acknowledged himself before Congress as the writer of several letters published in the newspapers under the title of "Common Sense to the Public on Mr. Deane's Affairs." Paine was then secretary to the committee on foreign affairs, and on motion of a member of Congress was cited to appear and answer whether the articles were written by him. He replied that they were. A motion was then made to expel him from the office of secretary. It was lost. Paine then asked to be heard in his own defense. This was refused, whereupon, rather than remain under censure unheard, he resigned his office. This was in January, 1779; so that from this time he must have been publicly known as the writer "Common Sense," though it does not appear that he made any other public acknowledgment until 1791.

In the conclusion of Paine's "Common Sense," he says:

Should a manifesto be published and dispatched to foreign courts, setting forth the miseries we have endured, and the peaceful methods which we have ineffectually used for redress, declaring at the same time that not being able any longer to live happily or safely under the cruel disposition of the British Court, we had been driven to the necessity of breaking off all connection with her, and at the same time assuring all such courts of our peaceable disposition toward them, and of our desire of entering into trade with them, such a memorial, etc.

Now the Declaration of Independence answers completely to such a manifesto. Passing over the first two paragraphs, introductory to the bill of rights, we have a detailed statement of "the miseries we have endured;" then of "the peaceful methods we have ineffectually used for redress;" then of the reasons for "the necessity of breaking off all connection" with Great Britain. And lastly, in the formal Declaration of Independence is asserted the "full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, and establish commerce" with other nations.

In spite of the mutilation which the Declaration of Independence underwent in Congress it stands forth as a masterpiece of rhetoric beyond the ability of Jefferson to produce. Hence, the most eloquent orator of our time is constrained to say:

Certain it is that Jefferson could not have written anything so manly, so striking, so comprehensive, so clear, so convincing, and so faultless in rhetoric and rhythm.

And Mr. Denslow, after an elaborate argument on the question of the authorship of the instrument, says:

Enough! The Declaration of Independence must hereafter be construed as a fabric whose warp and woof were Thomas Paine's.

Jefferson's "Summary View," written in August, 1774, is the best specimen of his composition either before or after 1776; and there are a few passages in it that may be called eloquent. But in that as in the rest of his writings, he frequently violates the rules of rhetoric. The fact is, he was not a rhetorician, and flights of eloquence in his compositions are as rare as billows on a mill-pond. The eloquent and impressive passages of the Declaration are unmistakably in the style of Paine. William Cobbett, who died in 1835, became such an ardent admirer of Paine that in 1819 he dug up his bones and transported them to England, with the avowed intention of having a funeral there worthy of the remains to be reinterred. And this is what he said in his paper, Cobbett's Register, about the authorship of the Declaration:

Jefferson and some others have had the credit of being the authors of the Declaration of Independence of America. Either of them for aught I know, may have written it; but Paine was its author.

There is also evidence that the author of the Declaration wrote the "Letters of Junius." In the third paragraph of the first of those letters, is this sentence:

Let us enter into it with candor and decency. Respect is due to the station of ministers, etc.

In the first paragraph of the Declaration is this:

A decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes, etc.

"Decency" and "respect" were favorite words of both Junius and Paine. "The cause of America," said Paine, "made me an author." In the very first letter that can be attributed to the pen of Junius, dated April 28, 1767, and signed "Poplicola," the writer deplors the disposition to "foment discord between the mother country and her colonies." Indeed the cause of America is a frequent theme of Junius. In his famous letter to the king, December 19, 1769, is this passage:

Looking forward to independence, they might possibly receive you for their king; but if you ever retire to America, be assured they will give you such a covenant to digest as the presbytery of Scotland would have been ashamed to offer to Charles the Second. They left their native land in search of freedom, and found a desert. Divided as they are into a thousand forms of policy and religion, there is one point on which they all agree: they equally detest the pageantry of a king and the hypocrisy of a bishop.

ARMY OF THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION.

By permission of the writer, we print the following from a member:

ORANGE CITY, IOWA, June 8, 1890.

MISS IDA C. CRADDOCK, Sec. A. S. U.—Dear Madam: I read your last communication in FREETHOUGHT and your appeal for organization in it. You will never succeed in making an army of the different Liberals, for the simple reason that there is not a single one who has not his own views, and has but precious little consideration for anybody else's.

I would like to see how you could form an army out of Anarchists, Secularists, Terrorists, Socialists, Nationalists, Theists, Atheists, Agnostics, Materialists, Spiritualists, etc., every mother soul of whom considers his own ism as the particular point at issue, and make them toe a line and work in unison.

I myself hold Anarchistic views, and the effect of it is that even the idea of an army, its regiments and companies, is repulsive to me, which makes me a bad soldier for a commander, whose tactics rest on a wrong basis, according to my view, although my confidence in voluntary co-operation makes me put my shoulder to the wheel; and so it is with most every Liberal.

If you could draw up something like a creed, which every Liberal could indorse, your idea might succeed, but such is manifestly impossible. And even if you achieved the impossible, every single one of your soldiers would insist that his or her idea would pre-eminently be the only way to proceed to execution, and criticise and cavil at every order issued by headquarters.

Guerrilla warfare seems the best adapted to Liberal tactics, and if on some rare occasions Liberals seem to combine in offering a solid front towards the enemy, they always do so in order to shut the stable after the horse has broken loose, as in the late Harman case, and at the same time keep up a continual quarrel with each other on minor points.

Without a common basis on which all agree, there can be no permanent organization.

Inclosed find a couple more dollars to help the guerrilla along, and believe me

Yours very respectfully,

(Signed) G. A. F. LESPINASSE, M. D.

The above hits the nail on the head. It explains, in a nutshell, just what the difficulty is in the way of the success of Free-thought. Liberals fail to unite in fighting the common enemy, not because they can't, but because they won't.

And yet we have a common creed. One and all, we resent ecclesiastical tyranny; one and all, we recognize the fact that freedom to promulgate our own special "ism" can never be perfectly secure, as long as any religious power can get its grip upon the throat of the state. And this common creed is nothing more nor less than what the American Secular Union is contending for. Why should not the various classes to whom Dr. Lespinasse refers join us in this fight?

Spiritualists! Are you not, even now, planning a political move to avenge the unfairness with which Medium Reid has been treated by a United States court of justice? Were church and state wholly separate, think you that such an act of injustice would have been possible?

Materialists! You claim, and very properly, that if you see reason to deny utterly the existence of a God and of a future life, you shall have the right to proclaim your belief openly. And you, Agnostics, you also claim the right to at least question their existence, without fear of legal ostracism. But in my own state of Pennsylvania, any of you might, by implication of the Constitution, be disqualified to hold any office or place of trust or profit under the commonwealth. Not until the affairs of the state are administered on a purely secular basis, will such disabilities be removed in Pennsylvania and elsewhere.

Atheists! Of how much worth is your testimony accounted in most of our courts of justice to-day? No matter how upright your lives, your avowed disbelief in God too frequently ranks you along with idiots and felons, and below women, in the eyes of the law. Have you no interest in securing a total separation of the state from church interference?

Theists! When the National Reformers shall have had their way, how long can you go on preaching up a deity who is the exponent of your own highest self? Do you not understand that they intend that every knee shall bend before their holy trinity, and before no other god? Do you not understand that such intention, supported by law, means persecution of you and your fellows? How mistaken, then, is your action in refusing to join the army of the American Secular Union, which is waging the only organized warfare against these would-be uniters of church and state!

Secularists! You whose philosophy teaches you to seek the best things, physically, mentally, and morally, of this world only, without concerning yourselves about the hereafter! How long, think you, will you escape the persecution of the other-world bigots, when the law backs them up in their demand that you shall lay up treasure for heaven only? The American Secular Union is your graft upon the old Liberal League; but how many of you are to-day loyally tending and watering the new growth, so that it may bring forth fruit for the healing for the nations?

Terrorists! You, who would carry out your schemes by means of physical force and dynamite! Who are the two enemies that you are fighting? Priestcraft and statecraft, are they not? And yet you turn your backs on the American Secular Unionists, who are doing all they can to weaken the alliance between these two!

Socialists and Nationalists! You who believe in co-operation and in a government most truly of the people, by the people and for the people! Do you think that ecclesiastics will ever step down and out from their exclusive leadership of the people, until the church is put on exactly the same level as are other private clubs? When God gets into the Constitution of the United States, and Christ is made king, and Wilbur F. Crafts succeeds in making it a penal offence to do an honest day's work on Sunday, will not your regime be rather a curse than a blessing to mankind? Will it not open the way to a tyranny worse even than the present dreadful one of competition in the business world? Shall we not then become a nation of religious hypocrites, our promotion depending upon the favor of the only rulers not dethronable by vote—the ecclesiastics? Believe me, the one peril to Socialism and Nationalism lies in the failure to separate church and state, at once and forever.

Anarchists! You who preach the gospel of individualism, and who believe in co-operation only when it is voluntary! Do you not see that every refusal of yours to help your fellows in separating church and state results only in tightening the cord around your own necks? Are you not to-day, because of the exemption of church property from taxation, supporting churches by compulsion? You are continually declaiming against having to pay taxes against your will. Help us to do away with the exemption of church property, and you at once lighten the burden of your own taxation. Moreover, you must remember that the individualism which is your goal is not possible while the false standard of churchly authority is set up for the community to conform to. Ecclesiasticism in the state is your most deadly enemy—you know it well; and only when church and state shall be forever separated, will you, or any of us, be quite free to work out an individual development without persecution.

Dear friends, why should we not all unite? Surely, this is a creed upon which we can agree—the total separation of church and state!

There is, of course, a reason for the present lack of union among Freethinkers. It is due to the fact that the habit of free and independent thought on religious matters is one that is but slowly acquired, and only amid persecutions, or at least nagging and discouragements from our nearest and dearest. Our early years of Freethought are apt to be one continual fight with our neighbors for just a bit of room to breathe in peace. Nobody helps us; it is a struggle to the death. We are shot at on all occasions, from behind fences of pietism, rocks of prejudice, barriers of conventional propriety. Some day (if we don't perish in the fight) we reach our vantage-ground; and, from that lofty plateau of Freethought, we can now hurl down missiles on our attackers.

Yonder on this same plateau stands another struggling Freethinker. He, too, is defending himself against bigots. And, as we look about us, we see that every jutting crag is occupied by a fellow-being who, like ourselves, has fought his way single-handed to this high plateau of Freethought. But, dear me, why should we give aid to other Freethinkers? Each of us, you know, has all he can do to take care of his own little crag. What! relinquish that cherished stronghold, in order to protect anybody else's crag! Perish the thought!

Yonder, in the center of the plateau, rises a wide, very wide and lofty hill whose outlook commands all these jutting crags. Upon this elevation are gathered a little band of soldiers, known as American Secular Unionists. See! They are beckoning to you and to me to come up and join them. "We can overlook every crag," they shout. "We are strongly entrenched up here. If you will all join us, we can command every approach to the plateau of Freethought."

But most of us scorn this invitation. "I am protecting my own little crag of an ism," we one and all reply. And, by and by, when our own attackers, tired out, disappear for a moment, we point triumphantly to our free crag, and sing a pæan to the merits of guerrilla warfare.

Hark! what is that? The enemy's shouts in the rear! Up, up our foes come along the old road about which we had quite forgotten—it has been unused for so long—the road whose sign-board reads: "God in the state." Oh, what shall we do? What shall we do? Do you see, through the mist, how many are pressing up the narrow defile? The National Reform people are there, and the Sunday Rest people, and the entire force of Roman Catholicism, with its music and waving banners; and here and there are sharpshooters who take fancy shots, as they go, at such trivial things as the Bland Dollar and Thanksgiving proclamations and the Sunday disembarking of immigrants upon our shores, and who rarely miss their mark; and behind these come an endless army of the people who carry a banner inscribed with the motto: "No morality possible in our schools without the Bible." These last will some day be our friends; but not now, not now! For this one battle, at least, they are our bitter enemies; we realize that all too well, as they press forward with vindictive shouts along that old road of "God in the state."

Whizz! There goes a bullet straight into the ranks of the church exemptionists yonder! And now a second! It is those American Secular Unionists from whom we have held aloof all along who are firing. See! There is commotion in the ranks of our enemies; some one is hit. Good! Give it to them hard, Secularists! You have the post of vantage; you can sweep the defile with your guns, and can hold our enemies at bay, while I run away to my individual crag, and knock down that solitary bigot who had just shown his head. There, sir! Down you shall go, head over heels; and for fear you get up again, I will empty all my ammunition into you. Well, I've done my share in the fight, haven't I?

Why on earth are not those American Secular Unionists firing off their guns? What? "Run short of ammunition," eh? Dear me, they might have some of mine, if—if—if I hadn't wasted it all on that bigot down there. Well, now for a run to the last hope—the platform of the American Secular Union!

Why, what a splendid outlook you American Secular Union people have up here, to be sure! Oh, fool, fool that I was, not to have come up when you asked me! I could have protected my own crag and two or three others, had I been up here at the first. My intentions were excellent, I assure you. But it is now too late—too late—for the enemy are swarming all over the plateau, and the isolated defenders of the crags are being mowed down one after the other.

Liberals! The above is not a mere fancy; it is a true forecast of what will come to pass, if you persist in your present dislike of co-operation. You can be very certain of at least one thing; organization is the watchword of the day in all departments of business; and Liberalism will have to adapt itself to this new order of things, or else go to the wall. IDA C. CRADDOCK,
Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 11. Cor. Sec'y A. S. U.

THAT PRIZE MANUAL.

In answer to many inquiries concerning this book I am happy to report progress. The MSS. did not all come in as soon as desired, and some very important ones are delayed even yet. We want and intend to have the best we can get, and the delay of a few weeks is nothing, compared with the importance of the subject.

There was much delay in getting a committee. Our well-known Liberals all declined, for want of time, etc. Prof. Felix Adler, of the Ethical Culture Society, accepted from a profound sense of duty, and is now in the Adirondacks, loaded down with our MSS. He is a very busy, overworked gentleman. Prof. Daniel G. Brinton, of the University of Pennsylvania, has done nobly, and is very discriminating in his judgment. He has written more books than some of us have ever read. In undertaking to examine our MSS. he has greatly taxed his time and strength. Prof. Frances Emily White, of the Woman's Medical College, Philadelphia, a lady of great ability and learning, had unexpectedly to go to Europe to attend the great Medical convention in Berlin, but will return September 1, and will review what the other members of the committee have done; while Miss Craddock and myself have done a vast amount of "weeding"—she between the brick walls of notoriously hot Philadelphia, without a day's vacation, and I in my "cottage by the sea," where I came to work, not to rest.

We are doing the best we can and all we can, and must ask our friends to be patient and give us time to do our work well. We hope, but do not promise, to make the award at our congress, the latter part of October. R. B. WESTBROOK,
August 10, 1890. President American Secular Union.

On the Trail.

To the Editors of Freethought:

My next place for lectures was Marshfield, where I gave four lectures in Santa-cken's Hall to good audiences. Marshfield is the largest town in Coos county, and is improving fast, with its prospect of being the seaport end of a railroad from over the mountains. Three new towns or cities have been laid out and cleared of the timber, all within sight of Marshfield, and lots are selling rapidly. It looks now as if a continuous city will surround Coos Bay. If all the towns grow they will eventually become one. Much property is changing hands both in town and country. Many strangers are coming in, and this whole coast is evidently about to boom, boom, boom.

I like the country much, but it is very rough and yet in its primeval state. Small steamers are continually coming and going on the beautiful bay, and the five big mills send out an immense amount of lumber, by their ships, to your city, while two or three large steamers a week carry thousands of tons of coal to California and bring back freight and provisions for the folks to live on. Fruit grows here to perfection, also vegetables, hay, etc., but fishing, lumbering, and coal mostly occupy the people, so they import very largely the very commodities that might be raised here, and will be in the near future. The land is mostly owned by rich corporations which bought it up years ago for its coal and lumber, consequently it is very thinly settled. I found that my old, staunch, Liberal friend, J. D. Garfield, had sold out his hardware store, and many of our old-time Liberal friends have gone—some have died, others have grown cold in the cause—but there are enough left to keep the colors flying. Antoine Worth, the "berry man" from over the bay, is still full of Liberal fire, and has raised money for two lectures, by Mattie P. Krekel and J. E. Remsburg, yet to be given this summer. My old friends, the Hillburns, have sold out but are still here; A. Cathcart has moved to Marshfield. He is a host for the cause. Mr. Hare is a new comer here, and a live radical too. I had the new Presbyterian sky-pilot, the Rev. Mr. Rideout, to hear me nearly every evening, but no collision occurred between us. From Marshfield I went to Newport, a coal mining town near by, where I gave four lectures, in the school house, to large audiences, especially the last night, when the large house was filled to repletion. I met here Wm. Campbell and David Campbell, who, with their wives, are true blue Freethinkers and ready for the belief of "one world at a time;" Mr. S. W. Jorgensen, the merchant, is also a Liberal; and many whose names I do not now remember. These people are splendid folks and our speakers should not pass Newport by, as heretofore, but make it a point to spread the gospel of Universal Mental Liberty.

From Newport to Empire City was a pleasant ride on the "Comet" as she cut the rippling waters of the shining bay. Here, at Empire, near the entrance from the sea into Coos bay, is the future "queen city" of the coast. A more lovely place to dwell, it would be hard to find; close to the sounding breakers, yet built by the placid waters of the Coos; hemmed in by the evergreen shores of an Oregon forest; never too warm, and never too cold.

I gave five lectures at Empire, in the court house, to good and attentive audiences. The folks here are Liberal in thought and liberal with their pocket-book, and bid the wandering itinerant a hearty welcome to their pleasant and cheery homes. S. Hazard and wife, H. Ploger, Mr. Stauff and family, Mrs. Camel and son and daughter, Mr. Briggs, and Mrs. Moore and family of bright, modest, winsome daughters, and many others that I have not time to mention, made my stay pleasant and homelike by their kindly good will, and presence at the meetings. There is no church here now; no priest to raise an alarm or to scare little children with pictures of old cloven-foot, or by singing "That awful judgment day," when the grave shall give up its dead, etc. A more quiet, pretty place I have seldom seen, although there is one of the largest mills in the state here, with nearly one hundred men to run it. With loggers, and fishermen, and sailors all around, for there are, nearly always, several vessels, steamers, etc., either loading or unloading at the wharves, rough and lusty men far from society's polishing influences, without god or devil, priest or church, there is no vice or crime to speak of. All seem happy and prosperous, and live for the good time now. I met here my true radical friend, Professor Dalrymple, who is teaching the "young idea how to shoot," and is one of the most successful teachers in the county, and yet the orthodox element is trying to put him out, crucify him, as of old, but he has a host of friends and keeps the flag above the cross. His voice is ever for Universal Mental Liberty. I feel that he will win the fight though the war may be long and fierce. Professor Brinegar, Stanley, Geering, Bouge, and several others of the county teachers, are for Freethought, and thus the leaven is working. Our free school system, if the church can only be made to keep its "holy hands" off, will develop a nation of free thinkers which will eventually break every bond that ignorance and the superstition that accompanies it may weave; will yet take off from the Christian joss-houses their tall steeples and make of them fuel to cook the food of the penniless and warm their cheerless homes; mould the big and useless bells into cannon whose sullen mouths shall yet speak death to priests, popes, kings, and monopolies that have terrorized ignorant humanity all too long, and turn the useless churches into co-operative homes and work-shops for the half starved toiling millions who have dug the coals for the usurpers of throne and pulpit, palace and wealth, to warm by while they themselves in rags and in cheerless hovels and garrets have shivered their poor lives away. Education will teach the weavers who throw the shuttle in the loom, how they themselves may wear the delicate fabrics they weave; the delver in the earth that the golden nuggets and diamonds rare are for those who find them; the cunning artisan that the splendid palace he rears is for his wife and children and not for some lazy drone who neither toils nor spins; that the best this earth contains is for those who, with brave heart and honest soul and muscles of steel, produce the necessities and luxuries of life; that when the bell sheep—the autocrats and bosses—fall out among themselves and precipitate a war they may fight it out to their heart's content, but that the "common people" will arbitrate their difficulties and live in peace. This once attained, then farewell to church and state, to pomp and princes, crown and cross, gods and devils, heaven and hell, bibles and priests, doctors and drugs, millionaires and monopolies, paupers and thrones. These false conditions will have passed away forever, and will only be known by reading the history of all the past—the age of man's ignorance. Education alone can make us free, and when Freethought prevails the golden era of man's humanity to man will be ushered in.

D. C. SEYMOUR.

Heywood's Case and Conviction.

To the Editors of Freethought:

The conviction of E. H. Heywood, of Princeton, Mass., on the charge and indictment of mailing obscene matter, has been consummated; and once more he finds himself in the clutches of the law. Mr. Heywood is a man of marked ability and most unflinching courage, but possessed of mighty poor judgment. He seems determined to violate civil laws regardless of results, in an effort to maintain a natural right and sustain a principle; and in so doing he has been adversely criticised by men and women just as radical as himself, but all to no purpose. He has gone on defying civil laws and the general public sentiment, until he finds himself just where such a course was sure to land him. It is now a good time to pause and inquire what has been attained by his unpopular methods of reforming and educating the world. Has he accomplished anything notable or beneficial to mankind or society? Has the effort to introduce "plain words" attracted or repelled desired readers of his paper? I hold that his methods in this respect have been both useless and injurious, for such ways of presenting reform ideas as he has adopted, do not take with the public at large; and he repels those he tries to reach before he fairly gets a hearing. People have a natural delicacy about sex topics which will never be so thoroughly extirpated that "plain words" will find general use and acceptance.

Mr. Heywood's work of educating people out of dense ignorance on sexual matters is very commendable, for the world is filled with woes resulting from such ignorance; but the English language is extensive enough to convey any idea his mind may evolve for the good of humanity without resorting to words which the law prohibits the use of. I am not now dealing with the good or bad character of such a law, but simply recognize the truth that such a law is a fact and a reality on our statute books. What then? Why simply this: if the law is violated, conviction and imprisonment are among the probabilities, just the same as the law of theft, rape, or murder had been violated, the difference existing only in the degree of punishment which the state or nation imposes for violation.

Knowing this additional fact, I affirm that a man has mighty poor judgment who will violate a law and endanger his liberty, when, as before stated, the English language has words enough to convey in clear and concise manner all ideas the mind can evolve, without infringing the aforesaid law.

For years I have been an admirer of Heywood, because my admiration always goes out to a man of brains and mental ability, but his attempt to introduce words that invariably shock and repel common decency I never regarded with approval; and consider it a most lamentable mistake. In saying this I do not indorse the excessive sentence which has been imposed upon him, or look with favor on a law that crushes an honest and earnest reformer; but I do consider him both rash and foolish. If he or any person wants to use "plain words" and has a hobby in that respect, let them first work to get the law repealed which now exists, and then they can ventilate with safety and until the hobby has lost its charm. There is no use in trying to force a thing onto the public which the public don't want, and which the law forbids; and let us here consider the fact that Mr. Heywood has never presented an idea for public consideration in plain words, that was new, or before unknown. He had said the same things before and been understood in language objectionable to the law; so what has been gained by losing liberty for a foolish and needless purpose? I can't see that anything has or will be.

Now, let us look for a moment at the character of his paper called the "Word." It is a paper that has barely lived ever since its inception, and has never become "popular," as that word is used, because it is interesting only to people who think, and thinkers are noted for their paucity the world over. Again, all thinkers don't delight in meditating on his thoughts and theories, and here we see another cause for unpopularity in the paper. Once more, his readers are few, "because the world don't want to be reformed," as an aged and observing man recently remarked to me; and papers which amuse, entertain, and run to news, wit, sentiment, and society affairs, will always have the preference among the masses.

Heywood's "Cupid Yokes," which sent him to jail for two years the other time, is such a dry dissertation on the relation of the sexes that an edition of five hundred copies would never have been sold had not the impression gone forth from his conviction that it contained something of a salacious character. When we consider these facts, and note that the general public is profoundly indifferent to the efforts of an earnest reformer or the fate of a foolish one, it must be conceded that the inducement to destroy one's self to benefit (?) the world is not extremely great. My sympathies are with both Heywood and Harman, for I think the imprisonment of each is an unjust and outrageous affair, for foolishness is not a crime to deserve such punishment; but both men can thank themselves and no one else for the loss of their liberty.

Los Angeles, Cal.

C. SEVERANCE.

"Natural Morality."

This little book places every man, woman, and child under debt of gratitude to its author, Mrs. Mary A. White, of San Diego, Cal. It is a precious boon to all intelligent parents and guardians, and cannot fail to become the accepted text book in every local Liberal society.

It contains within its fifty-seven handsomely printed pages, more profitable instruction, founded on self-evident truth, than I have ever found in twice the same number of pages of any other book I have ever read. To fail to obtain a copy and read and re-read until its facts are committed to memory, is to fail of duty to the cause of Liberalism. It will prove an invaluable aid in controversy with Christian sophists. The book is an armament of condensed dynamite. It explodes the fanatic idea that all morality is founded on Christianity, and answers Christian sneers with keen, incisive truth.

Every child able to read should possess a copy. It needs but a glance at any one of its pages to arouse the interest of the intelligent Liberal.

Send for a copy and judge how far this eulogy falls below the book's deserving. Sample copy, paper, 25 cents. In cloth, by mail to any address 50 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

C. B. REYNOLDS.

I heartily indorse the high opinion of my husband, as to the great merit of the able little work, "Natural Morality," by Mrs. Mary A. White, of San Diego, Cal. It is truly a priceless gem, and I am proud that it is a woman's work.

F. C. REYNOLDS.

OREGON SECULAR UNION CONGRESS.

By virtue of the authority vested in us as directors of the Oregon State Secular Union, we hereby call the Second Annual Congress of said union to meet in Portland, Oregon, at New Arien Hall, corner of Second and Oak streets, on Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, the 11th, 12th, and 13th days of October, 1890.

Persons from all parts of the world who are willing to guarantee civil and religious liberty to the people, secure the taxation of church property, favor the total separation of church and state, and oppose ecclesiastical legislation, are invited to attend and join the union, there being no fees or dues required of the members.

The members of the union will take notice that a motion will be made to change and amend article twelfth of the constitution so that it will be made to read as follows: "Amendments to this Constitution may be made at any annual congress of the union by a two-thirds vote of the qualified members present."

C. BEAL,

LEE LAUGHLIN,

J. K. SEARS.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoemaker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater.
C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.

Rapp & DeBarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment

cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.

Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

THE "COSMIAN HYMN BOOK."

A COLLECTION OF

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED HYMNS

(WORDS AND MUSIC)

For Liberal and Ethical Societies,

For Schools and the Home.

COMPILED BY L. K. WASHBURN.

Price, $1.50. Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS, 15 cents.

The Sermon!

"Good Robin," said the mother, "wilt go to church to-day?"

"Ay," promptly answered Robin, "I will not tell thee nay."

"Dost love to hear the preacher when he speaketh words of grace?"

"Ay," promptly answered Robin, "and to see his daughter's face."

Sure churches are the fairer to young men now-a-days,

That bonny maids are often there to join the songs of praise.

And many a mother owneth, with half-regretful sighs,

That her son goes to worship some lovely maiden's eyes.

Gay Christianity.

Still great strides toward a gayer Christianity have been made within my recollection, and most noticeable of all its signs has been the decay of that rigid Sabbatarianism which did its best to blot the sunshine out of every recurring seventh day. Only a few Sundays ago a minister in the land of the Covenanters was bold enough to advocate the playing of football on Sunday. The Saturday afternoon game, it seemed, left its devotees no energy for church-going next morning, and so the reverend gentleman proposed the transferring of the romps to the Sabbath afternoon, that they might not form an impediment to righteousness in the morning.

There have always been Protestants more Protestant than Luther, and Christians more Christian than Christ. Luther taught that the Sabbath was to be kept, not because Moses commanded it, but because nature teaches us the necessity of the seventh day's rest. He says: "If anywhere the day is made holy for the mere day's sake, then I demand you to work on it, ride on it, dance on it, do anything that will reprove this encroachment on Christian spirit and liberty."

Puritan lack of charity and dread of cheerfulness often leads Anglo-Saxon visitors in France to misjudge the French mode of spending Sunday.—Max O'Rell.

A Practical Discussion on Hell.

On Walnut street, near Twentieth, in Philadelphia, live a young married couple who have two children—a boy and girl, aged respectively five and seven. The young mother has ideas of her own about raising children in the way they should go and does her best to inculcate right principles in them. The other day, hearing a noise in the kitchen, she went to the back stairs and listened. Imagine her horror at hearing her son using decidedly bad language to the cook. She said nothing, but waited until the young hopeful came up, when she asked:

"Where were you, my son?"

"Down in the kitchen talking to cook," was the ready reply.

"What were you talking about?" said the mother.

"Hell!" was the astounding answer.

"And what did you tell her about it?"

Looking up cheerily in his mother's face, the boy said promptly:

"Told her to go there."

TRAVELING ALONE

A WOMAN'S JOURNEY

AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

(Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Price, by mail, 30 cents.
Address The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

Dr. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

W. M. HINTON & CO. PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS, 536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Francisco.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

Price, 50 c.

Address Freethought
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

S. J. HAMMOND, WATCHES

WATCHMAKER, $1 AND JEWELER.

CLEANED.

1061 Market st., Opp. Junction of Jones and McAllister sts., San Francisco. 5134

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St. San Francisco. Watches Cleaned & Warranted, $1

Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 5134

So Naughty.

The "Kreutzer Sonata," they say, is quite bad, Though plain 'tis to see that the book is the "sad,"

And they who can't get it are awfully mad— Whether humble their station or haughty. Yes, thousands are reading the novel to day, Neglecting alike their work and their play, But as yet there is no one to openly say What it is that makes "Kreutzer Sonata."

I made bold to ask of a dominie gray, Who swung in a hammock just over the way— And was reading (the "Kreutzer," I'll venture to say),

Of the contents I asked him what thought he; He blushed a bright crimson which softened to pink, And bent down his head as tho' trying to think, Then, said, as he gave me a real, knowing wink: "I don't think the 'Kreutzer Sonata.'"

Thus, you see, that although I'd write a critique Concerning the volume of which I here speak, Yet no one will give me the knowledge I seek— Though I candidly think they ought to. But as matters now stand I am free to confess That of Count Leo's story I couldn't know less, And so I must leave you, dear reader, to guess What is it that makes "Kreutzer Sonata."

This Gentleman Farmer.

Old Colonel Maynadier, of Anne Arundel county, Md., was a large slave owner. The colonel spent a good deal of his time away from home. One time upon his return he took a drive over his property, and on his way met a small colored boy.

"Whom do you belong to, boy?" the colonel asked.

"Why, sah, I—I—longs t—to Colonel Maynadier, sah."

"Who's he?" inquired the colonel to see what the chap would say.

"H—h—e's a farmer, sah."

"What sort of a farmer?"

"Ge-gentleman farmer, sah."

"Gentleman farmer!" repeated the colonel.

"What kind of farmer's a gentleman farmer?"

"W—well, sah," spoke up the colored boy,

"h—he's a farmer dat don't raise no 'bacco, sah, a—and has to buy his co'n sah!"

The colonel enjoyed the joke, it is said, and afterward told it upon himself with much amusement.

Seasoned to Taste.

Briggs—What has Robinson got on that pepper and salt suit for?

Griggs—I understand that he is going to be a missionary.

Prof. W. S. Bell's Lectures in Oregon.

Prineville and vicinity	"	23, 28
Monument	"	30
Hamilton	"	31
Fox	Sept. 1, 2
John Day	"	4
Prairie City	"	5
Baker City	"	6, 7
Union	"	8
New Bridge	"	10, 11
Summerville	"	12, 13
Heppner	"	15, 16
Dayton	"	20, 21
Rosalia	"	23
Plaza	"	24
Oakdale	"	26
Spokane	"	27
Davenport	"	28, 29

The Humboldt Library

—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
8. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
7. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. The Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
12. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
13. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion.
15. Longevity. Prolonging Life. John Gardner, M.D.
16. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
18. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
20. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kalley Miller.
21. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
22. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
23. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
24. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
25. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
26. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
27. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
28. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
30. The Study of Words. Richard Chenevix Trench.
31. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R.A. Proctor.
32. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
33. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
34. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
35. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
36. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
37. Geological Sketches. Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
38. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
39. Current Discussions in Science. W.M. Williams.
40. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
41. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
42. The Dawn of History. C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
43. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
44. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
45. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
46. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
47. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange. Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
48. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
49. Animal Automatism. Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
50. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
51. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
52. Illusions. James Sully.
53. The Origin of Species. Two Double Numbers. Charles Darwin. 30 cents each.
54. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
55. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
56. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
57. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, LL.D.
58. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
59. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
60. Technical Education, Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
61. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
62. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
63. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
64. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencer.
65. Archaeology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
66. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
67. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
68. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
69. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
70. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
71. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
72. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
73. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
74. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
75. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
76. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
77. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
78. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
79. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson.
80. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
81. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
82. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S.S. Laurie.
83. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T.H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haeckel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen.
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present. Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life, Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wacc, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Jaing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ransey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whymper, Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No. 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffie.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Kitchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

RUINS OF EMPIRES

VOLNEY.
NEW EDITION. | JUST PUBLISHED.

To which is added Volney's Answer to Dr. Priestly, a Biographical notice by Count Baru, and the Zodiacal Signs and Constellations by the Editor. With Portrait, and Map of Astrological Heaven of the Ancients. Post 8vo, 248 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, 75c.

Printed from entirely new plates, in large, clear type, on heavy, laid paper.

Address The Freethought Pub. Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK
In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parson, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents.

Address Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

PRINTING!

The Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

Letter-heads,

Bill-heads,

Programmes,

Envelopes,

Business Cards,

Postal Cards,

Tickets,

Placards,

Receipts,

Posters,

Dodgers,

Circulars,

Etc. etc

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

COUNTRY ORDERS SOLICITED.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
833 Howard st., San Francisco

Wm. W. NOBLE,
Merchant Tailor.
1222 STOCKTON ST.

Bet. Pacific and Broadway.

DRESSSUITS A SPECIALTY

Kearny and Montgomery St. Cars pass by.

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS & TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.

Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.

God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.

Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.

Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.

Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.

The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.

Two Creeds.—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.

The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Company.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled Dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.

PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; 7 ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50 fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botchers, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

DR. FELLOWS

he press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N. J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

PORTRAITS

[Enlarged and Finished in Pastel and Crayon.]

First-class work at reasonable prices. Orders and Correspondence solicited. Satisfaction guaranteed. F. C. Baxter & Co., 432 Sutter st., San Francisco.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. d.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,
Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

Standard Scientific Works

- Works by Alexander Bain.
 English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75
- Works by Charles Darwin.
 Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00
- Works by J. W. Draper.
 History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75
- Works by Ernst Haeckel.
 The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00
- Works by Huxley.
 Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00
- Works by John Stewart Mill.
 Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25
- Works by Richard A. Proctor.
 Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
- Works by Herbert Spencer.
 Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 Man versus the State......30
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75
- Works by Andrew D. White.
 Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00
- Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
 Body and Mind.....$1.50
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50
- Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
 Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

- By Asa Gray.
 Darwiniana.....$2.00
- By L. L. McLaughlin.
 Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50
- By C. Marcel.
 Study of Languages.....$1.25
- By Lester F. Ward.
 Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00
- By Frederick Overman.
 A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00
- B. F. G. Fairfield.
 Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25
- By W. B. Carpenter.
 Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25
- By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
 Evolution.....$1.50
- By Sir John Lubbock.
 Origin of Civilization.....$5.00
- By Charles A. Abbott.
 A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50
- By Garrett P. Serviss.
 Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50
- By Nathan Sheppard.
 Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50
- English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

NATHANIEL VAUGHN

A Splendid Radical Novel.
 BY FREDERIKA MACDONALD.
 404 pages. Price reduced to $1. The Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities.
B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, 10 Cents.
 Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

A HAND-BOOK OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.
 The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.
Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BRAIN AND THE BIBLE.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

We can recommend this as one of the most valuable works in the list of Freethought publications. Printed in large type on fine paper and elegantly bound. Price $1. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO. 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED, 375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond" 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy.
 Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,
Freethought Pub. Co.,
 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
 Six Months......75
 Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.
 12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth $1.50.

NOW READY

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against LIBERTY,

By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
338 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,

Hygienic Physician.

Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,

Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.

HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m. 25tf

Health AND Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M.L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy. $1.

Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.50.

Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook. $1.

Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer $1

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.

Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina. Ills. 50.

Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook. $1.

Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F.R.C.S. 30 cents

I HAVE THE LARGEST FACTORY ON THE PACIFIC COAST and the most reliable work in the market, and it will be to your interest before buying to write for descriptive circular and prices and reference sheet from the best and leading merchants of San Francisco and other places, who have discarded cheap, unreliable Eastern work and adopted mine.

CHAS. WALTZ

INVENTOR AND MANUFACTURER OF

THE WALTZ SAFE

Fire and Burglar proof Safes, Time Locks, Bank and Vault Work.

13 & 15 Drum St., San Francisco.

Expert work done in Opening and Repairing Safes and Locks. Special Styles of Safes, Boxes, etc., built to order.

The Waltz Safe is absolutely fire-proof. The Waltz Safe is entirely damp-proof. It is fire, fall, and thief resisting. It is the only safe worth refilling after a fire. It is not the cheapest safe in the market, when compared by size only—it is the cheapest safe when all of its merits are considered. Bear in mind that ordinarily, the purchase of a safe is for a life-time, therefore seek the best and avoid one that is offered on its merit of cheapness only.

Second hand safes always in stock which have been taken in exchange on new for sale Cheap.

RUPTURE

In advertising Dr. PIERCE'S Patent MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS, the assurance is given that we are offering the Best Truss in the World. This Celebrated Appliance has been extensively sold for many years and has

Radically Cured thousands of cases of Rupture! This is an Electric Truss (the only successful one ever invented); has no Iron Hoops or Steel Springs about it, and being elastic, can be worn with ease and comfort Night and Day. It's a perfect retainer! For further particulars of Truss, send 4c. in stamps for Pamphlet No. 1 and that Dr. Pierce's Genuine Electric Trusses contain our Private Signature exactly like that shown at top of this advertisement. Beware of inferior imitations! Address:

MAGNETIC FLASTIC TRUSS COMPANY,
704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET,
OLIVER HINCKLEY SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.
N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

THE MONARCH.

TRADE MARK.

None Genuine Without this Trade Mark on Every Bottle.

PURELY VEGETABLE.
AN INFALLIBLE CURE

FOR—
RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, GOUT,
Lumbago, Asthma, Constipation, Sciatica,
Dropsy, Malaria, Indigestion, and all
Kidney, Liver, and Stomach
Troubles.

$1 PER BOTTLE, SIX FOR $5.
C.H.WEBB, Sole Proprietor and
O'Farrel Street, San Francisco, Manufacturer, No. 40

For sale by all druggists. Send for Circulars.
NEVER FAILS CAUTION—Beware of imitations. Note my trade mark closely

$25.00 REWARD $25.00

For any of the above diseases that C. H. WEBB'S HÆMONY will not cure.

References from People Who Have Used C. H. Webb's Hæmony.

Hon. A. Van R. Paterson, Judge Supreme Court, S. F.
Henry L. Dodge, Esq., Pres Sather Banking Co S F.
Captain Ferris, Steamer Apache, San Francisco.
S. M. West, Esq., 1209 Bush street, San Francisco.
Robert Smith, contractor, 1810 Larkin street, S. F.
John Birmingham, Police Officer, 340 18th street, S. F.
James T. Bonfield, Member of Lincoln Post, No. 1.
Residence, 8 Harriet street, San Francisco.
Mrs. W. Gerdes, widow of Ex-Chief Gerdes, San Jose
Fire dept. Residence, Haywards st. Los Angeles.

And I can also refer you to hundreds of others who Have Been Cured by my great remedy HÆMONY.

C. H. Webb's Hæmony. Carefully packed and shipped by Express to all parts of the world. Send money by P. O. Order or through Wells, Fargo & Co.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 35.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, AUGUST 30, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, [EDITORS.] SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - - AUGUST 30, 1890

RUSSIA: AN ODE.

[Written after reading the account of "Russian Prisons," in the Fortnightly Review for July, 1890.]

LONDON, Aug. 6.—O'Brien asked in the House of Commons last evening whether the government would prosecute the poet Swinburne for the poem in the Fortnightly Review, which he said was grossly calculated to incite the murder of the czar. O'Brien was proceeding to read the poem when the speaker called him to order, saying that Parliament could not control the poems of Swinburne.

I.

Out of hell a word comes hissing, dark as doom,
Fierce as fire, and foul as plague-polluted gloom;
Out of hell wherein the sinless damned endure
More than ever sin conceived of pains impure;
More than ever ground men's living souls to dust;
Worse than madness ever dreamed of murderous lust.
Since the world's wail first went up from lands and seas
Ears have heard not, tongues have told not things like these.
Dante, led by love's and hate's accordant spell
Down the deepest and the loathliest ways of hell,
Where beyond the brook of blood the rain was fire,
Where the scalps were masked with dung more deep than mire,
Saw not, where filth was foulest, and the night
Darkest, depths whose fiends could match the Muscovite.
Set beside this truth, his deadliest vision seems
Pale and pure and painless as a virgin's dreams.
Maidens dead beneath the claspings lash, and wives
Rent with deadlier pangs than death—for shame survives,
Naked, mad, starved, scourged, spurned, frozen, fallen, deflowered,
Souls and bodies as by fangs of beasts devoured,
Sounds that hell would hear not, sights no thoughts could shape,
Limbs that fed as flame the ravenous grasp of rape,
Filth of raging crime and shame that crime enjoys,
Age made one with youth in torture, girls with boys,
These, and worse, if aught be worse, than these things are,
Prove thee regent, Russia—praise thy mercy, Czar.

II.

Sons of man men born of women, may we dare

Say they sin who dare be slain and dare not spare?
They who take their lives in hand and smile on death,
Holding life as less than sleep's most fitful breath,
So their life perchance or death may serve and speed
Faith and hope, that die if dream become not deed?
Nought is death and nought is life and nought is fate
Save for souls that love has clothed with fire of hate.
These behold them, weigh them, prove them, find them nought,
Save by light of hope and fire of burning thought.
What though sun be less than storm where these aspire,
Dawn than lightning, song than thunder, light than fire?
Help is none in heaven: hope sees no gentier star.
Earth is hell, and hell bows down before the Czar.
All its monstrous, murderous, lecherous births acclaim
Him whose empire lives to match its fiery fame.
Nay, perchance at sight or sense of deeds here done,
Here where men may lift up eyes to greet the sun,
Hell recoils heart-stricken: horror worse than hell
Darkens earth and sickens heaven; life knows the spell,
Shudders, quails, and sinks—or, filled with fierier breath,
Rises red in arms devised of darkling death.
Pity mad with passion, anguish mad with shame,
Call aloud on justice by her darker name;
Love grows hate for love's sake; life takes death for guide.
Night hath none but one red star—Tyrannicide.

III.

'God or man, be swift; hope sickens with delay:
Smite and send him howling down his father's way!
Fall, O fire of heaven, and smite as fire from hell,
Halls wherein men's torturers, crowned and cowering, dwell!
These that crouch and shrink and shudder, girt with power—
These that reign, and dare not trust one trembling hour—
These omnipotent, whom terror curbs and drives—
These whose life reflects in fear their victims' lives—
These whose breath sheds poison worse than plague's thick breath—

These whose reign is ruin, these whose word is death,
These whose will turns heaven to hell, and day to night,
These, if God's hand smite not, how shall man's not smite?
So from hearts by horror withered as by fire
Surge the strains of unappeasable desire;
Sounds that bid the darkness lighten, lit for death;
Bid the lips whose breath was doom yield up their breath;
Down the way of Czars, awhile in vain deferred,
Bid the Second Alexander light the Third.
How for shame shall men rebuke them? how may we Blame, whose fathers died, and slew, to leave us free?
We, though all the world cry out upon them, know,
Were our strife as theirs, we could not strike but so:
Could not cower, and could not kiss the hands that smite;
Could not meet them armed in sunlit battle's light.

The Days are plentiful in Freethought. There is also W. W. Day at Dayton, whose son is the Dr. Day, of Union, Or. So long as these Days are with us "the darkness disappears."

A. Roth has just returned from the Orient, and during his trip the golden wedding bells have rung. May good fortune follow all the rest of the way.

Our kindly and philosophic friend O. T. Clark hails the Secular Pilgrim with the blessing of both worlds at a time. If there are "spirits" in the air he thinks they are for time and not eternity, and they must "rustle" wings and all for humanity.

W. E. Cahill and A. P. Cahill always make it pleasant and lively, and my visit to the country with them, was one of the happiest events along the road. The next time I expect to go a-fishing, if the Chronicle is not again "under fire."

Geo. Orchard, Geo. Pangess, Alex. Duffy, T. W. Guernsey, L. F. Janes, Louis Young, H. P. L. Young, A. Havan, L. Wolfe, M. Hexter, Geo. B. Baker, J. A. Kellogg, W. H. Burrows, A. T. Pentler, O. B. Davis, F. M. Banes, I. C. Lewis, C. M. Grupe, W. H. Grupe, M. Lehzycki, Mr. South, and others are the generous friends at this point, and it is not to be wondered at that Dayton is among those places where we feel that the tide is with us and not against us, where orthodoxy must struggle to keep its own. The churches are somewhat numerous, but not the congregations. The usual "revival" goes on, but, as the Methodist minister puts it, "Why don't the business men attend divine service?" They don't, and in this is an indication of the way of the world. This is a magnificent country to visit at the present time. The harvests are immense, and Washington will be the banner state, I guess, for grain this year. Millions of dollars will pour into her prosperous bosom. To stand upon the swelling heights about Dayton and view the teeming hills and vales, gorgeous with color, mountains crowned to the very top with lustrous grain, gives an impression of wealth and glory unsurpassed. It is good to live and labor in a land like this. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

THE RELIGIOUS BOYCOTT.

The difficulty of putting a Liberal paper upon the market in fair competition with other papers has recently been illustrated by the efforts we have made to have FREETHOUGHT kept on sale at the newsstands in San Francisco. The experiment has shown that about two-thirds of the dealers are afraid of it. They offer the excuse, which is a good one, that their religious customers are likely to boycott a dealer who displays a Freethought paper in his window or keeps it in sight upon the counter. We had noticed that many of the San Francisco journals kept posters on the bulletin boards of newsstands, and about a month ago we adopted, or attempted to adopt, the same method. But it has not proved a decided success. The posters mysteriously disappear, and we have every reason to believe that the dealers themselves, in some cases, remove them as soon as the canvasser is out of sight. In other cases they are pulled down by passers-by. Our own bulletin board has not escaped, though fastened by an iron clamp to an iron rail, but has been torn from its fastenings and thrown into the street. It has served as a target for tobacco juice and worse. We credit the hoodlum with these offenses against the bulletin board, but there is no doubt that, being a Catholic, the hoodlum is inspired to the act by something more than mere natural cussedness. If he were a Freethinker, he certainly would not care about tearing down a Freethought sign-board.

Besides the timid newsdealer there is also the bigoted one who would not handle an "Infidel" paper on any terms. It is noticed, though, that this class do not feel any compunctions about hanging their windows full of the crime-fostering, pink pictorial sheets, like the "Police Gazette" and its imitators, to be stared at by boys and girls, who thus get their first knowledge of crime and corruption. This polluted spawn of the printing-press seems to find a ready sale in San Francisco, and possibly if FREETHOUGHT were a totally villainous sheet, without a particle of decency, it could stand an equal chance to gain the favor of the Catholic populace, though it would lose all its present supporters.

For the class of newsdealers who think that to keep FREETHOUGHT on their counters would drive customers away we have not a word of reproach. Business is business, and we would ask no one to jeopardize his means of livelihood. But those too bigoted to sell it are just the ones who need it most. They ought not only to sell the paper but to read it and absorb its doctrines, and learn that there is such a thing as fair play.

However, if the newsdealers do not want to handle FREETHOUGHT, there is one way by which friends can obtain it. They can send their subscriptions direct to the office and receive the paper by mail. A year's subscription is $2; six months, $1; three months, 50 cents.

NEW EDITION.

The first edition of Putnam's "Religious Experience" ran out just about the time the papers were beginning to notice it, and we have issued a second larger and finer edition. The price remains 25 cents.

MR. CHARLES BRADLAUGH and Mr. H. M. Hyndman have recently held a one-night debate on the eight-hour question. Mr. Hyndman, who is a radical Socialist, while Mr. Bradlaugh is not, offered the following proposition:

"That the enactment by law of eight hours a day, or forty-eight hours a week, as the maximum amount of work for adults in all factories, mines, workshops, and businesses conducted for profit will prove a valuable palliative of our present industrial anarchy."

Mr. Bradlaugh supported this proposition:

"That it is desirable that all wage-earners should work the smallest number of hours per day consistent with the profitable conduct of the industries in which they are respectively engaged; that the limitation of eight hours a day as the period during which an industrial establishment may be carried on may be fatal to many large industries in this country; that the hours of labor in each industry should be severally settled by conciliatory conference between the employed and employers or their representatives."

In the debate Mr. Hyndman worked chiefly upon the sentiments of the audience, drawing strong and undoubtedly accurate pictures of the suffering that results to men, women, and children from excessive hours of labor. He evidently had a majority of his hearers with him. Mr. Bradlaugh expressed himself as strongly favoring shorter days provided the laborer could thereby sustain life, but he argued that if one chose to work more than eight hours in order by extra exertion to get something ahead, he should not be prohibited by law from doing so. The speaker was constantly interrupted, so that he was obliged to remind his opponents that he had worked for some of them more than eight hours per day, and that the burden of an attempt at decency should be upon them in his presence, even if they could not indulge in it in his absence. Mr. Hyndman seems to have had the argument and Mr. Bradlaugh the facts, but the disagreement of the debaters did not rise so much from a difference about the object in view as about the way to attain it. It is evident that Mr. Bradlaugh believes himself to have sustained his position, since he reported the debate in full in the "National Reformer," and has printed it in pamphlet form: while Mr. Hyndman, who is connected with a paper called "Justice," publishes none of it.

IF Mr. Putnam is not more than pleased with the following notice of "My Religious Experience," by L. K. Washburn in the "Investigator," he will never be by any other. Mr. Washburn says: "Few persons have passed through so varied an experience of religion as has Mr. Putnam, and we venture to say that no one who has had an equal experience possesses the genius to make the perusal of it so entrancing as our gifted lecturer of California. To read this book is to live for six or seven hours in a world of rare thought, feeling, and sensibility. Mr. Putnam could not be uninteresting were he to try. He cannot be tame or prosy, dull or commonplace. If he touches language it glows from his touch. He can change the dictionary to a novel in a shorter time than any man living. Think of Putnam's 'Religious Experience!' And yet, after you have read this pulsing sketch of his life, you will understand better than you ever did before the nature of all religion; and you will do so because you have been made to realize an honest man's feelings when he had religion. But the closing part of the book is the grandest. His mind enthroned on the heights of human freedom, he looks back upon the religious road he has come, not with regret, not with sighs for what is past, but with joy for what he is, and for what he feels and sees from his higher position. His religious experience beside his Freethought experience pales and dims like a kerosene light beside the sun. There are many bright, brilliant sayings in this little paper volume, and, best of all, there is the heart of one of Liberalism's most earnest, most generous, most gifted of men."

WE have carefully read the platforms lately adopted by the political conventions of this state, neither of which contains any of the Nine Demands of Liberalism, nor touches with emphasis any of the questions of vital importance to Freethinkers. Religious exercises in public schools are not condemned, appropriations for religious institutions go unrebuked. There is not a word about the practical exemption of church buildings from taxation. A free Sunday is not indorsed, and neither party seems to have heard of the movement inaugurated at Washington by Wanamaker to restrict the freedom of the United States mails. One of the platforms recommends the Australian voting system, which is a good thing as voting systems go, and the eight-hour day for government employees; but as a general thing these declarations of principles concern themselves with laudation of one party and one party's measures and the condemnation of the other party and its measures. The pot calls the kettle black, and the kettle returns the compliment. There is one thing to be remembered, however, about political platforms which makes them scarcely worthy of criticism. They are never thought of after election.

WHENEVER the Prohibitionists meet to hold a convention they always adopt a platform of considerable length, and that platform invariably contains a Sunday-law and a woman-suffrage plank, the one to catch the religious vote and the other to get the support of progressive people. They ought to know that such a scheme will not work. A great many Freethinkers are woman suffragists, and some of them are Prohibitionists, but they are not going to stand on a platform containing a Sunday-law plank.

The Prohibitionists make a fatal mistake in burdening their cause with the Sabbatarian demands—and perhaps it is just as well that they do.

A LONDON paper says that Martha Nixis, a servant girl of Berlin, rendered insane by attending the meetings of the Salvation Army, became so thoroughly taken up with the story of Moses in the bulrushes that she wandered to the river and placed on the bank a child three months old that had been left in her care. She was arrested and placed in an asylum. Miss Nixis's case is not so unfortunate as that of some girl members of the Salvation Army, who, evidently thoroughly taken up with the story of the Virgin Mary, have left children at the doors of foundling asylums.

SIGNS and wonders are the order of the day. Last week a well-authenticated ghost story appeared in the "Chronicle," relating how a prominent citizen appeared to his friend three hours after his (the citizen's) death; and the "Examiner," not to be outdone, brings forward an equally well authenticated account of a dead child restored to life by its mother's prayers. Meanwhile the "silent majority" continues to increase its lead, and the dead who are buried are not visible to the general public. However, a bit of the supernatural is always relished in uneventful times.

MOSES HARMAN's paper, "Lucifer," appears but once in two weeks. Mr. Schwartz, the present editor, states that "circumstances—mostly financial"—will not permit its weekly publication; but he consoles himself with the thought that "the hearts, if not the purses" of many friends are with him. The substitution of sympathy for financial support has been the means of crippling many a promising enterprise. We speak from experience which we are at present acquiring.

READ the article on another page, entitled "An Alarming Situation," and witness how the Catholic church is digging into the public treasury. Last year, for the Indian branch of its schools alone, that church got $356,967 of American money; and in four years it has grabbed nearly one million and a quarter! The little thievings of petty office-holders, about which so much noise is made, would not pay the interest on the Catholic steal.

WE have tried the experiment of sending out many sample copies of FREETHOUGHT and offering the paper two months for 20 cents. Quite a gratifying number have accepted the offer and subscribed for that length of time. If any subscriber of FREETHOUGHT would like to have the paper sent to acquaintances or possible subscribers at the above rate we shall take pleasure in filling orders. Two months to new subscribers for 20 cents.

IF what the Catholic "Monitor" says is true—and the fact that the "Monitor" says it is no indication either way—the distribution of Bibles among the Chinese is not productive of the results looked for by the Bible society. "The truth is," says the "Monitor," "that the Chinese take all the Bibles they can get, then quietly cut off the covers, and use the leaves for padding the soles of Chinese shoes, and for other more ignoble purposes."

THE ten women who applied at the county clerk's office in Oakland to be registered as voters deserve as much praise for their pluck as though they had succeeded in getting their names on the books. Of course they were rejected, and it is said that when they departed some of them were in tears. It is thus that men clothed in a little brief authority cut such fantastic tricks before high heaven as make the angels weep.

ON August 3d, 1546, says the "National Reformer," Etienne Dolet, printer and bookseller, was burned for heresy, at Paris. To-day his honored statue, unveiled May 20, 1890, marks the spot where his martyrdom was suffered.

"And so the world goes round and round
And the genial seasons run,
And ever the right comes uppermost
And ever is justice done."

It is surprising to learn from a correspondent of the "Weekly Star," a Single Tax paper, that in Portland, Or., the "Single Tax men are absorbed in boom and land." The old abolitionists did not neglect their cause through absorption in negro speculation. The more consistent among them, we understand, sold their slaves before they began the agitation.

MR. ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE'S poem on Russia is not written in a measure to catch the popular ear, but his sentiment that the death of the tyrant is Russia's one star of hope will strike a responsive chord in the popular heart. Czar Alexander is the best living likeness of the orthodox deity.

"IN Darkest America!" is the way the English papers head an article on the imprisonment of Harman and Heywood. The hit is palpable, and all the more so because the forefathers of the imprisoned men left England in order to establish liberty on American soil.

UNTIL copies can be obtained under some new arrangement we shall be unable to supply further orders for Lilian Leland's "Around the World."

THE Truth Seeker Company announces that "The Free-thinkers' Pictorial Text-Book" is now ready for delivery. We shall have it, of course, and fill orders at $2 each.

THE advertising of Tolstoi's "Kreutzer Sonata" by the post-master-general has made a two-bit book worth half a dollar.

OBSERVATIONS.

I registered at the City Hall the other day as a voter in the city and county of San Francisco, though what in the name of common sense I want to vote for is more than I know. City and state affairs are going along as well as ever, to all appearances; every vacant stool in all our public buildings seems to have an intelligent Milesian to hold it down and draw his salary; the present officials come around to collect some sort of a tax or license as often as I have money enough to pay it, and I see no reason to expect that a new set of stool-occupiers and tax and license gatherers would do any better. There is a youth at the city hall who will take two dollars from me if I should ever desire to get married again or to keep a dog, which I don't. Either of a hundred other clerks will take a tithe of my possessions once a year if I continue to stay in this office. Others will gather from me an annual poll tax of two dollars and allow me to live. Others will see to it that I pay them a license for handling merchandise, and still others will reach out their hands occasionally for the cigar license. Why not let these present incumbents stay there until they either die or get enough and retire? Better, saith the bard, to bear the ills we have than fly to others that we know not of.

I have often wondered what would happen if the president of the United States should seclude himself somewhere and be heard of no more forever and his office remain vacant: if our national and state legislatures should adjourn sine die; if our customs officials, our internal revenue gatherers, our supreme and superior court judges should go away and become gentleman farmers; if our statute books should perish in the flames of our statehouses and city halls; if our chaplains should all go to Africa as missionaries to the heathen; if, in fact, the greater part of our governmental machinery should become rusty and refuse to move, and election day should never come around—I have often wondered whether the people would miss anything except the expense. What would happen if every voter stayed away from the polls for ten years? Let him that is without sense among us cast the first vote.

As might have been expected in the ordinary course of events, a child has been born to one of the unwedded angels in the Rev. Mr. Schweinfurth's Heaven at Rockford, Ill. But Mr. Schweinfurth is not disturbed. He bows to the will of heaven, and attributes the paternity of the youngster to the same Holy Ghost who might have figured as a co-respondent in the case of Joseph vs. Mary if it had been brought to the notice of one of our police courts. With the skepticism peculiar to this age, and from which even Christians are not free, the editor of a San Francisco religious paper scouts the divine-parentage hypothesis as absurd, and denounces Messiah Schweinfurth as an unholy impostor. Now it is on record that the Holy Ghost became a happy parent eighteen hundred and ninety years ago, and he is just as likely to have repeated the exploit now in Illinois as to have performed it then in Galilee, but the present offspring being a girl gives room for suspicion. To set all doubts at rest hereafter the Rev. Messiah Schweinfurth should follow the example of the early fathers—Origen, for instance—and permit himself to be rendered innocuous for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it. (Matt. xix, 12.)

It appears from reports in the daily papers that the young people who go to the First Congregational church in Oakland to pray stay to flirt; and so confirmed has the habit become that a special policeman is detailed to keep the young and respectable hoodlums of both sexes in order. The girls, the policeman says, are the worst. Not only do they whisper and pass billets to the young men, but they likewise chew gum during divine service. My sympathies are wholly with the quieter class of people disturbed by these proceedings. Nothing is more annoying to a church attendant than to be kept awake.

If we find upon investigation that the most enlightened persons neither attend church nor political conventions; that the tendency of civilization is toward indifference or disgust with both religion and politics; that the men best fitted for teachers are not in the pulpits, and that the ablest political economists are not office-holders; and if on the contrary we find the church and state supported by the most unenlightened and unprincipled classes; the most enthusiasm among the most abandoned; the pulpits filled by men who are fit for nothing else, and public offices crowded with the dishonest, the fanatical, and the incompetent—what conclusions are to be logically drawn from these facts? I draw nothing except attention to things as they are in our centers of population.

I have been paying some attention to the doctrines of the newer lights of political and social economy, and these are the lessons I learn:

The shortest way to settle the Woman Suffrage question is to let the women vote. Mischief may follow; but mischief follows from marriage sometimes, and we do not therefore argue that only men should marry.

The shortest way to settle the liquor question is to remove license and tax from the traffic. This would make liquor so cheap that drinkers could get all they want for little expense and would have something left for other purposes.

The shortest way to settle the marriage question is to abolish legal ties. Then if people unhappily mated continued to live together in misery they would do so upon their own responsibility and would have no one to blame but themselves.

The shortest way to settle the religious question is to withdraw legal privileges from the churches. Tax these as other property is taxed, protect their meetings only as other meetings are protected, pay no state money to religious institutions.

The shortest way to abolish land monopoly is to give monopolists no title whereby they can hold in possession more land than they use.

The shortest way to settle the financial question is to make coinage and currency free, so that every man may coin his own metal and issue his own paper money, and put his credit in competition with the credit of others.

The shortest way to settle all other questions is by the same simple methods, the only objection to which is that their adoption is a long way off.

The editor of a San Francisco monthly paper of great typographical beauty, called "Egoism," has many original thoughts. The doctrine of Egoism is what has been more or less known heretofore as "enlightened self-interest." I quote one of its editorial paragraphs. Be it understood that the editor of "Egoism" repudiates as a superstition the idea of sentimental love between the sexes. He says:

If you don't "fall" in love with anybody but yourself, and love wisely enough to do it well, you have the advantage of the situation; for the object of your affection will never die or forsake you while you live, and when you die you will not miss it.

There is one other consideration which the editor has neglected to call attention to, namely, that the person who falls in love with himself or herself, as a general rule, is not troubled with rivals.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

ANXIOUS INQUIRER.—No; the editor of FREETHOUGHT does not hold himself responsible for the opinions expressed by contributors. Furthermore, contributors are not legally responsible for what the editor says.

POET.—I have stopped writing in verse long enough to think. The subject of my thought is the remark of a writer whose poetry I declined with thanks. He says that he is not a damned idiot, although he does not, like myself, control the columns of a paper in which his doggerel can be printed.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The reports of crops from Oregon and California are cheering.—Fresno's population is 10,890.—The Adventist church of San Jose is divided into factions on account of personal quarrels between the leaders, who call each other liars, blackmailers, and confidence men.—The molders' strike is still on in San Francisco. The employers refuse to meet the strikers for purposes of arbitration.—Hon. Frank Page, who represented the Second District of California in Congress for ten years, died in this city Aug. 23. He was the first Californian representative to move for the restriction of Chinese immigration.—The other day Probate Judge W. R. Dunbar, of Golden Dale, Wash., assaulted and knocked down with a cane the Rev. C. F. Goode, pastor of the Christian church. Goode had been writing letters, which were published in a local paper, criticising Dunbar's judicial acts.—The Democratic convention at Jan Jose last week resulted in the nomination of E. B. Pond, San Francisco's present mayor, for governor of the state.—The Ranier mill, a sash and door plant near Seattle, was burnt last Sunday. The mill was the largest in the state of Washington, and valued at $440,000.

The Rev. Dr. Burtzell, the late pastor of the church of the Epiphany, who was removed from his charge on account of his expressed sympathy with the excommunicated priest Dr. McGlynn, has been temporarily suspended from the exercise of his functions as a Roman Catholic priest in the diocese of New York. The decision of the Propaganda in his case was in effect that the doctor should be removed from his pastorate of the church of the Epiphany and make an apology or retraction for his action to the archbishop. He was allowed a certain time in which to do this, with the warning that if he failed to give evidence of his penitence within the allotted time sentence of temporary suspension should be passed. That time has passed and the doctor is still silent.—A Volapuk convention, attended by about forty persons, was held in Boston last week in the Young Men's Christian Association Hall.—The strike on Eastern railroads remains unsettled. The Council of Railway Employees at Terre Haute declined to make the strike general.—The Mormons are invading Mexico and considerable colonies are being formed in the state of Chihuahua. The emigration is chiefly from New Mexico and Arizona.—The thirty-ninth annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science began Aug. 20 in the House of Representatives at Indianapolis, Ind. Over 200 members of the association were present.

There is a potato famine in Ireland, caused by rotting of the crop; and the eating of diseased potatoes has started the "famine fever" among the poor.—A "crisis" is reported at Hawaii, there being a revolt against King Kalakaua's administration, and a sentiment among educated natives in favor of a republic.—Prime Minister Crispi of Italy is displeased at the report of the U. S. consul at Palermo, who advises Americans to keep away from Sicily because of the danger from brigands to which tourists are exposed. Crispi claims that the Palermo consul has exaggerated the case.—The war in Central America has been ended by a treaty of peace between Guatemala and San Salvador.—A Japanese paper has been suspended and its two editors sentenced to four years' imprisonment for "menacing the peace of the country."—It is reported that Sir Edwin Arnold, author of the "Light of Asia," is infatuated with Japanese women, and is likely to marry one.—According to the recent census of Switzerland the republic contains 1,700,000 Protestants, 1,200,000 Catholics, 8300 Jews, and 10,700 adherents of no religion.

WORKING FOR THE PORTLAND CONVENTION.

Liberals of Oregon:

By the time this appeal is read you will probably receive a copy of our constitution and petition for the taxation of church property. If you do not, send to me for some and circulate them. Inform me who does the good work and I will report it in FREETHOUGHT. When done, send them all to me for final use.

Tell all you meet that the Second Annual Congress of the Oregon State Secular Union meets in Portland, at New Arien Hall, on Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, the 11th, 12th, and 13th days of October next; that eminent speakers will be present from all parts of the world; that on Monday evening there will be a grand ball, and that all this comes in the middle of the great Exposition, when they can have reduced fare.

Also please write me if you will take cards of invitation and distribute them at the county and state fairs. We have the best hall north of San Francisco, and seven professors are tuning their harps for the happy occasion. Let us strike hands once more in Portland.
C. BEAL, Pres. O. S. S. Union.

Immortality, though hell be a fiction, implies possible eternal pain, wretchedness, horror. A compulsory immortality—a sentence to live not for a thousand or a few million years, not at our option, not only while such existence may be one of happiness, but for centillions of ages; eternally! though such existence might become monotonous, burdensome, painful, even one of horror and madness—would be indeed a "hell!" Think of such a fate even in "heaven." When it would come to the worst the blessed boon of death would be denied you; you might want to die, yearn to die, but the terrible fate to live, live, live forever, to never die, would stare you in the face! Could Calvin's literal hell be worse?—Wettstein.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS.

Davenport.....	Aug. 17, 18, 19	Puyallup.....	Sept. 5, 6, 7
Colville.....	Aug. 22, 23, 24	Snohomish.....	Sept. 9, 10, 11
Buckley.....	Aug. 29 30, 31	Port Angeles.....	Sept. 13, 14, 15

THOMAS PAINE.

BY WILLIAM HENRY BURR.

VI.

THE AUTHORSHIP OF THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

So in the draft of the Declaration, we have the following passage, of which only the first thirteen words were allowed to remain:

We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here; . . . that these were effected at the expense of our own blood and treasure unassisted by the wealth or strength of Great Britain; that in constituting indeed our several forms of government, we had adopted one common king, thereby laying a foundation for perpetual league and amity with them; but that submission to their parliament was no part of our Constitution, nor ever in idea, if history may be credited.

The cause of America was the principal theme of "Casca," who was Thomas Paine. In his first letter, dated April 15, 1775, "Casca" says:

Have the Americans ever yet been (though if men they shortly will be) in arms? Have they yet had a prospect of any other terms than such as would make them slaves? . . . They are not destitute of arms already, and they will be supplied with more in spite of our vigilant fleet.

Four days after the date of this letter, or rather of The Crisis containing it, the massacre at Lexington occurred; and I infer that at that time he was either on the ocean, returning to England to procure arms, salt petre and other munitions of war, or had actually arrived in London.

In "Casca's" letter of May 6, 1775, he says, addressing Dr. Johnson:

I once more call America a nation, and a great nation. Too far distant from the mother country to receive from her either immediate or timely assistance on any sudden foreign attack, she must in such a case find succor within herself or perish.

In Paine's "Common Sense," we find the same sentiment elaborated; and in "Casca's" next paragraph the words "common sense" occur, as if foreshadowing his work in America.

If unwarrantable oppression may be resisted upon revolution principles, the tie between England and America is actually dissolved, our protection is withdrawn, our tyrannic sword unsheathed, and common sense proclaims aloud that obedience in America is no more.

"Casca," being in England at this time, had not yet heard of the battle of Lexington, and Paine in his "Common Sense" says:

No man was a warmer wisher for a reconciliation than myself, before the fatal 19th of April, 1775.

But the subsequent letters of "Casca" all breathe the spirit of American independence. And I maintain that "Casca" was Junius come again pursuant to the promise made in his "Dedication," to wit: "The remedy will soon be in your power. If Junius lives you shall often be reminded of it." Some of the letters of "Casca," like some of Junius, were not signed, and among these I identify a letter "To the King," June 3, 1775. This was after the news of the massacre at Lexington had reached England, and the letter overflows with the characteristic rage of Junius. I quote the first paragraph:

Sir: Like that fell monster and infernal tyrant, Charles the First, you are determined to deluge the land with innocent blood. Fired with rage at the more than savage barbarity of your mercenary troops, your cursed instruments of slaughter in America, I can no longer keep within the bounds of decency. The breast of every true Englishman must be filled with indignation, and that respect which is due to a king will be lost in a noble zeal for the preservation of our country and fellow subjects.

Here the words "decency" and "respect," which in the first letter of Junius and in the Declaration of Independence are conjoined, are used in near succession. Here also is the expression "mercenary troops," by whom are meant Scotchmen, as appears from "Casca's" previous letter of April 15, where he says:

We shall find it, to our cost, in vain to send English soldiers (none but Scotch will do the business) against English breasts. . . . An English army will not, and a navy cannot destroy the liberties of America.

And in "Casca's Epistle to Lord Mansfield," May 13, 1775, are these lines:

Your clime you change, your sentiments retain;
In Scotchmen treason is an innate stain.

And again:

When harmless lives were lost and Rome was burn'd
Nero, in form, his grateful thanks returned,

Happy to have a cool, obedient Scot
Perform his bloody orders to a jot.

John Wesley's "Calm Address to our American Colonies" was sharply reviewed by "Casca" in several letters, the last of which is dated March 30, 1776. From this I quote the following:

Where is the man of reason and education (except the servile Wesley), who will expose himself to universal derision and contempt by denying this eternal truth: that governments are instituted not for the sake of the governors, but of the governed? Yet, Mr. Wesley in his "Calm Address" [p. 10.] is not ashamed to assert the contrary. He has the ignorance and impudence to tell us that our all—our lives, our liberties, and our property—are, without our consent, at the absolute disposal of king and Parliament. Neither Mansfield nor Johnson ever ventured so far.

In the second paragraph of the Declaration is repeated that "eternal truth" (called "sacred and undeniable" in the original draft), that "governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

Much more evidence can be adduced to prove that Paine was the author of the Declaration of Independence, but is not this enough?

Did Jefferson, therefore, tell a lie after reaching the age of four-score, when he said, "I consented—I drew it?" Yes, but it was perhaps the whitest lie a statesman ever told. Paine had been dead fourteen years and everybody believed at last that Jefferson drew it. Nor would it have been wise or politic for him to disclose the real author at any time, especially after the publication of Paine's "Age of Reason." But knowing that Paine never wanted to claim the authorship, Jefferson could see no harm in avowing what everybody believed to be his own composition.

With the death of Paine was fulfilled the promise of Junius, who said: "I am the sole depository of my own secret, and it shall perish with me." But the secret of the Declaration of Independence could have died only with Jefferson, who survived Paine seventeen years. Could the "Sage of Monticello" have foreseen that critical science would at last reveal the real author, surely he would never have said, "I drew it."

AN ALARMING SITUATION.

In the Senate of the United States, July 24, there was the most important debate that has been conducted in Congress, not only during this particular Congress, but for years. And yet we fear that very few people in the United States will know of it or will see in it particular import. The debate arose on the Indian Appropriation bill, which had passed the House, and was now to be considered in the Senate, and the particular point in debate was the consideration of the two following items. We quote from the record:

THE PRESIDING OFFICER.—The reading of the bill will proceed.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations, was, on page 60, to strike out the clause from line 19 to line 21, inclusive, as follows:

For support and education of sixty Indian pupils at St Joseph's Normal School at Rensselaer, Indiana, $8,330.

MR. DAWES.—I ask unanimous consent that that amendment and the next one may be considered together, for the same reasons.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER.—The next amendment will be stated.

The next amendment was to strike out the clause from line 25, on page 60, to line 2, on page 61, inclusive, as follows:

For the education and support of one hundred Indian children at the Holy Family Indian School, at Blackfeet Agency, Montana, $12,500.

MR. DAWES.—Mr. President, the committee recommend the striking out of those two appropriations, and I desire as briefly as possible, to state the reasons which have actuated the committee in this recommendation. They both stand on the same ground, if one should be stricken out both should, and if either remains both should remain.

These are schools under the management of the Catholics. There are new appropriations by the government for the maintenance of two new Catholic schools, and the one between them, the St. Boniface's Industrial School, is also one of the same kind. That the committee did not strike out, for the special reasons which I will state in a moment.

What influenced the committee to strike out these schools was simply this consideration: They desired not to go any further than the present condition of affairs in appropriating the government's money for the maintenance of schools of particular religious denominations. The present and existing state of things in that particular, if these schools are not added, will be precisely what it was last year.

Thus it seems that the government of the United States has already been appropriating public money for the support of schools of religious denominations, and that this question would not have been raised, had not the Catholics made a request for support of these additional schools of their own. The way the matter has stood, up to the present time, not including the appropriations contemplated in this bill, is thus set forth by Senator Dawes, the chairman of the committee.

The appropriations in this regard have run from the year 1886 as follows: For Catholic schools in 1886, $118,343, as against $109,916 for all others; in 1887, $194,635 as against $168,579 for all others; in 1888, $221,169 for Catholic schools, and $155,095 for all others; in 1889, $347,672 for Catholic schools, as against $183,000 for all others; in 1889-90, as I have said, $356,967 for Catholic schools, as against, for all other denominations and all other schools, $204,993.

That is the condition of things which the present administration found when it entered upon office. Hundreds of thousands of dollars given outright to religious denominations for the purpose of teaching their denominational views, virtually a union of church and state! The present administration desired to put a stop to this, keeping the church and the state separate, and letting the churches support their own schools, and teach their own doctrines, at their own expense, but says Mr. Dawes:

The present management was in favor of divorcing the government absolutely from them all, but it found it impossible to do that.

And has it come to this, that, through the Indian department, the different religious denominations of the country have already got such a hold upon the United States government that they cannot be shaken off? Is it possible that already there is such a union between the state and these churches, that it is impossible to divorce the government from them? That this is so, is proven not only by the statement of Mr. Dawes, but by the result of this discussion in the Senate. Although the effort was to strike out two items of appropriation to Roman Catholic schools, the result was that not only was neither of these stricken out, but both with two more were adopted. Strong opposition to the measure was made by Senator Reagan, of Texas, and Senator George, of Mississippi; but their noble effort availed nothing. The tide was too strong; the political power of the churches, and especially of the Catholic church, is too great.

The history of the thing is worth relating. It began in 1885, the first year of President Cleveland's administration, when the commissioner of Indian affairs made this statement:

The government should be liberal in making contracts with religious denominations to teach Indian children in schools established by those denominations. It should throw open the door and say to all denominations, "There should be no monopoly in good works. Enter all of you, and do whatever your hands find of good work to do, and in your efforts the government will give you encouragement out of its liberal purse." In other words, the government without partiality, should encourage all the churches to work in this broad field of philanthropic endeavor.

And according to the list given by Mr. Dawes, the first appropriation of public money that was given for this purpose was $118,343 to Roman Catholics, with $109,916 for all other denominations put together, and that it steadily increased until, by the appropriation for the fiscal year of 1889-90, the Roman Catholics were given $356,967; and $204,993 to all other denominations. That is, within four years the Roman Catholic church received $1,238,786, while all the other denominations together received $761,583. In other words, within four years the Roman Catholics were enabled to increase their appropriations $238,424 above the amount with which they began, while all other denominations were enabled to increase theirs but $95,087.

Is it difficult for any reader to see a direct connection between these facts and figures, and the frequent visits of Cardinal Gibbons to the White House during the presidential administration from March 4, 1885, to March 4, 1889? There is no room for reasonable doubt that the suggestion in the report of the commissioner of Indian affairs for 1885 was secured by the Roman Catholic church. This probability is made stronger by the fact that in the year 1885, the very year when this thing began, there was established in the city of Washington, a Catholic Bureau of Missions, of which Mr. Dawes says:

They have been on the ground here for the last five years, pushing Catholic schools upon the government as earnestly as was in their power, and largely to that influence is attributed this great increase, which has come to be three-fifths of all the appropriations. They are active still.

No man can fail to see the direct connection, we repeat, between these facts and the above figures. It is true that because of their being accessories of the fact, and upon the principle that "the partaker is as bad as the thief," the Episcopalians, Methodists, and Presbyterians are inexcusably guilty of participating in this iniquity. But, from the facts, it seems certain that the scheme was originally a Roman Catholic one.

The Catholic Bureau of Missions applied to the present administration for aid in establishing three new schools. There were also applications on the part of the Episcopalians, the Presbyterians, and the Methodists; but all such applications were refused. With the refusal the Protestant denominations contented themselves; but the Catholic Bureau, says Senator Dawes, "having failed to get a contract for these three schools from the government in addition, and aggravating the inequality that had already aroused public sentiment, they went to the House of Representatives, without any estimate or recommendation from the department, and obtained the insertion into the bill of these three schools."

When the bill reached the Senate, an amendment was there added to it voting an appropriation to get another school, making four in all that the Catholics had secured. As soon as the other denominations heard of this, they hurried up to Congress with a protest against the proposed appropriation: but there was no suggestion of any protest from them against having the appropriation of former years continued both to the Catholics and to themselves. It seems, therefore, that the protest came only because the Catholics had succeeded in obtaining additional money, when they themselves could secure nothing additional. Their protest, therefore, simply amounts to nothing. It has no force, whatever; and their protest never will have any force as long as they continue to receive money from the government in support of their own church schools. Let these protesting denominations absolutely refuse to take any more money from the government; let them return to the government the money which they have already, and unconstitutionally, taken, and then let them protest against the appropriation to Roman Catholic schools. This will give some force to their protest. This, however, is hardly to be expected; because, having been sharers with the Roman Catholics in the iniquity of the thing these five years, and now raising a protest only because the Catholics get more than they can get, it is so far contrary to the nature of church encroachments on governmental power, as to be beyond all expectation that these denominations could by any possible means, be led to take such a proper and honest course.

The condition of things exposed in this debate on the appropriation bill, is one of the most startling revelations that has ever been made on the subject of the union of church and state in this government. The fact that there is already formed such an alliance between the national government and the church power that it is considered impossible to break it, ought so to arouse every man who loves religion or the government that the supposed impossibility of breaking the alliance shall be annihilated, and the whole question be put upon its genuine constitutional basis, and the government have nothing at all to do with religion in the teaching of it, or in any other way.—American Sentinel.

PUTNAM'S "EXPERIENCE."

[The following notice of Putnam's "Religious Experience" is from the "Freethinkers' Magazine," and contains some "experience" not previously told.]

The author of this little book is pretty well known in this country as an eloquent and forcible Freethought lecturer, a writer of unquestioned ability, both of prose and poetry, and one of the editors of that popular Freethought journal of San Francisco, FREETHOUGHT. Mr. Putnam, we learn from this "Experience," started in life as a good, pious, Sunday-school boy, grew up and became an orthodox minister, then evolved into Unitarianism, preached in that broad and liberal denomination for a few years; but, after hearing Colonel Ingersoll lecture a few times, became a convert to Ingersoll's "Infidel" views and stepped out onto the broad platform of Freethought. After leaving the church, for a few years, he found the Infidel Jordan a hard road to travel. We well remember giving him his first invitation to attend a Free-thought gathering. It was an invitation to the Congress of the National Liberal League held at Cincinnati, Ohio, in the fall, we think, of 1877. Mr. Putnam replied that he would be there if he could raise money to pay the expenses. He came, and reported that he worked his way on a freight train. From the Congress most of the leading Liberals who were there went direct to the Chautauqua Freethinkers' Convention, including Colonel Ingersoll and his admirable wife. Mr. Putnam was left behind on account of want of money to pay railroad fare. That was the not very encouraging beginning of his career as an apostle of Freethought.

The best quality that Mr. Putnam possesses is his pleasant and sociable disposition. He is one of the most companionable of men and makes himself agreeable to everyone he meets. He is now doing a grand, good work on the Pacific coast, as editor and lecturer. His editorial letters from the lecture field that appear every week in FREETHOUGHT read more like romance than cold facts. Those in the last numbers of that paper have been intensely interesting. To read of his long rides on horseback, over mountains and through dense forests, often getting lost and having to retrace his steps; his looking for some lonely cottage, and putting up in one sometimes, and sleeping in the best bed in the house when the occupants are all from home, as he actually did in one place—all this reads like fiction and reminds us of the early labors of the itinerant Methodist preachers on the frontier in the early days of our country.

Mr. Putnam has ability, earnestness, and perseverance, and if he will in the future continue to honestly and conscientiously devote himself to the cause of Humanity, as he now seems to be doing, his name will go down to posterity as one of the ablest and best friends of Freethought of the last quarter of the nineteenth century. This "Religious Experience" of his is a very thrilling, interesting, and suggestive narrative, one that should be read by every Freethinker in America.

THE MERITS OF POLYTHEISM.

BY DR. G. A. DANZIGER.

II.

Is it intelligent to believe that God helps the brutal murderer and forsakes his pious victim? Think of the God who is only too often judge, executioner, and criminal at the same time! Ridiculous! Is it consistent to believe God to be a merciful father giving his blessings to many, and still to know that millions of the innocent children starve and perish in despair? Is it consistent with a humane God to be most gracious only to be then so much more cruel? Think of the one-God giving one a beautiful wife, a lovely child, a sweet home, an earthly paradise, a perfect happiness, and think of the gratitude we owe that one-God for giving us all this—and think for a moment of that God getting a fancy to let one's wife to pine away in the bloom of youth and beauty; one's darling boy to die in the cradle; one's home made desolate, paradise lost, happiness gone—think of it!—for religion tells us that one-God did it all. Think of it, and tell me what will be the feelings we shall entertain for that God. Will it be a grateful smile, a contented glance, a devotional prayer? Or will it be a frown, a sigh, a tear, a look of despair, or a curse! And who could and would blame us when in the extreme agony of our soul we should curse the willful creator and destroyer of our happiness? Oh, one may say that what he gave he also can take away at his own pleasure—then God is a creature of his own whims? What a blow to the sublimity of God's perfection!

Most people who are made wretched curse God, but such influence has religious training and habit, upon our expressions, even, that those people substitute another term for a curse. They say: "Surely there is no justice, there can be no God, if such a thing can happen to me," etc.

But this is not all. I will show you the real inconsistency of Monotheism, i. e., the idea of one God, or the demerit of such an idea for the individual by a more striking example. There is war between two Christian nations. It is not supposed that one of the two is utterly wicked. Both pray and worship in their temples and churches to the one God. Both ask in earnest prayer for victory and the enemy's defeat. They fight. Thousands of women become widows and children orphans. The battle is ended, and the victory is won. The conqueror thanks God for his help—and what, pray, does the conquered? The present emperor of Germany said to Napoleon III, in 1871: "God was merciful; he gave the victory to our arms," and Berlin and Germany shouted with joy. How do you think Empress Eugenie felt when the crown was torn from her head and her husband made prisoner? Now the one God, who was merciful to the Germans, was indeed monstrously cruel to the Frenchmen.

The loving wife tenderly embraces the victorious husband, the blushing bride greets her lover, friends shout with joy—why? Because God has spared the lives of those loved ones. What do you think does the widow with a child upon her bosom, and a broken heart in her breast? What does Juliet do when Romeo is torn from her side, from her heart, forever? What does an intelligent, energetic little boy think when he is told that God took away his father and left his mother to despair? The same God, who was gracious to the one and is praised and thanked, was at the same time most cruel to the other and is cursed and abhorred. Think of the inconsistency in the one God, as human nature takes it.

The Polytheistic idea has, therefore, an advantage over the Monotheistic idea. While the latter is not only inconsistent but even ridiculous, the former is consistent and simple. The Greeks gave each god a certain field, so to say, and when they thanked God they could do so without feeling secret regret. They loved the god of joy, and feared the god of sorrow; they worshipped the god of good, and hated the god of evil.

They had no Inquisition, no stake to roast people for the sake of Christ, and as for intelligence—well, which idea do you think is more ridiculous—to call the beautiful Apollo semi-god, or to call the meek Jew of Nazareth the son of God?

What we have of beauty, of philosophy, of logic—nay, of a pure conception of the sublime—is all taken from those Polytheists, the ancient Greeks, and they have even enriched us with an appreciation of the consistency and goodness of Polytheisms. I therefore maintain that Polytheism is not only superior, but more practical, and conducive to far greater bliss to the individual as well as for the masses, since it leaves the mind at ease, making man less revengeful and despondent. If it be true that history repeats itself, then the advent of an appreciation of Polytheism would redeem the world.

PAINE STILL SPEAKING.

To the Editors of Freethought:

I have to-day been on Mt. Pleasant Park camping-grounds and have listened to—what! I hear you say, even before I have uttered the name; but I shall give it, for I believe the claim to be true, and I almost think you would believe it too, could you have been there and have listened with me.

The subject of the lecture was: "The Future of our Republic," by Thomas Paine through his medium, Mrs. Amelia Colby Luther; and one thing is certain—if Thomas Paine when in the earth life possessed such personal power, such magnetic control over those with whom he came in contact, I do not wonder he made his mark upon the world when backed by such a reasoning brain as he possessed. His utterances while here were never more fearless or more to the point. I have listened to able and powerful speakers, but I never listened to anything that began to be equal to Thomas Paine through his chosen medium.

The lecture was a repetition in part of what was given a week ago, and was repeated at the request of people outside the camp. The audience was a very large one, and could you have heard the portrayal of the church of Rome and its purposes, not forgetting the Protestants: could you have heard the assertion that the president should demand that the pope of Rome should rescind his encyclical letter to the Catholics in this country under penalty that they should all be disfranchised if he did not, that is, be disfranchised or refuse allegiance to the pope; and still further, that the parochial schools should be abolished or all who sent their children to said schools should be disfranchised and the children thus educated should not be allowed to become citizens—could you have heard all this, together with the fearless and determined manner in which the words were uttered, you would at least say that Thomas Paine's opposition to church tyranny was well duplicated.

"The pope of Rome, one hand in the national and in all the state treasuries in the country, and seeking to plant the Vatican upon the ruin of our republic, and yet we are so blind that a large proportion of the teachers in our public schools are Catholics." And the Protestants were not forgotten, as is shown by the mothers being congratulated that their husbands had placed a man in the presidential chair who believed in the damnation of their babies if non-elect.

But I did not sit down, or rather, get up out of my bed, for I could not sleep, simply for the purpose of portraying that which cannot be portrayed, as all who listened will testify;—no, I had another object in view, to wit, to notice my friend, Mary A. White's, little book on "Natural Morality." It is full and running over with just such thought as will help to make our children so intelligent as to render them impervious to all church dogmas.

I have tried to select extracts, but it is so full of instructive ideas that are so closely allied, that I do not know what to select unless I select the whole; so I want to say to your readers: Send for it and scatter it by the dozens. I presume you have it on sale: if not I know you can get it. LOIS WAISBROOKER.

Clinton, Iowa.

THE COMMONWEALTH PARTY.

On Thursday, August 7, says J. W. Sullivan in the Twentieth Century, room 24, Cooper Union, witnessed the formation of a new political party, among those present being Nationalists, Socialists, Christian Socialists, Knights of Labor, delegates in the Central Labor Union, and members of the old United States Labor party. Thaddeus B. Wakeman presided. The name taken was "the Commonwealth party." The platform adopted advocates the abolition of corporate monopolies and government control of monopolies in transportation and municipal works, etc. The land plank is as follows: "We demand, in furtherance of the same purpose, the abolition of the land monopolist, land grabber, land speculator, and vacant land holder; that the lands of the country be declared to be the common property of the whole people, to be held and used, whether for dwelling or cultivation, as may be for the benefit of all; that private holding or speculating in unused lands should be made impossible by law, and that such land should be open to occupation or cultivation by those who will make them useful; that the extent of the ownership of lands or of any property should be limited by law so that the vast landed estates and vast wealth of any kind in private control should cease to be a danger to the republic and the people." In other demands the platform was made wide enough to contemplate a union of the wealth producers, aggrieved in their almost every social relation with the wealth holding non-producers.

ANOTHER PROPHET.

Hardly had my hair laid down from the standing position it assumed from reading Professor Buchanan's prediction, when it rose again from the effects of another prophecy. It is now settled beyond a doubt that we are doomed; for the Bible sustains the last prophet of death and destruction, and his revealments come, as it were, direct from God himself. Confronted with this startling fact, it occurs to me that the time has arrived when sinners should pause to meditate on the responsibilities to God and make some preparations for the salvation of their souls, which will soon be without a material body. The prophet to whom allusion is made is Col. Blanton Duncan, whose name is a familiar one among ex-congressmen. He declares with confidence backed by scriptural authority that the end of the age is near at hand; that the present decade will witness the foretold great calamities which will go on to about 1906; and the final greatest destruction, or general round-up of terrestrial affairs, will occur six and one-half years later on, with a complete termination in the fall of 1913 and the spring of 1914. He further asserts, declares, and proclaims that his knowledge of coming events is based on the signs and warnings as stated by Daniel, the ancient salamander, and as revealed in Revelations at the close of the sixteenth chapter, which declares that "every island fled away, and the mountains were not found," while hailstones weighing fifty-six pounds, Mr. Duncan says, will come down in profusion. Think of it! fifty-six-pound hailstones to fall upon mortal man with the velocity of a cannon-ball! Is there anything that could knock him out in one round any quicker, except it be one of Reynolds's combination Latin words found in the back part of the spelling-book? Well may we tremble at the fate which awaits us, for those who dodge the hailstones will be swallowed up by the earthquake, and not a living being will remain on the face of the earth. Here we are left without a ray of hope, which is worse than Professor Buchanan has done; but if we find Christ and lose our reason before the destruction occurs, it will be well with our souls. Meanwhile, as we calmly wait for the inevitable, let us unite in singing:

"And it was the loving father
Who his creatures thus did doom—
Doomed the innocent and guilty
To the silence of the tomb.
Thus he satisfied his vengeance—
Now and ever he's the same;
Round the throne the angels shouted,
'Hallelujah, praise his name.'"

Los Angeles, Cal.

C. SEVERANCE.

MISS CRADDOCK'S ADMIRABLE PLEA.

We read and re-read Miss Craddock's admirable plea for organization and co-operation among the various "isms" of free and independent thought. We recognize the truth of the various positions we severally occupy, the necessity of closer co-operation, and of the final statement that "Liberalism will have to adapt itself to this new order of things, or else go to the wall." Her picture is a military one. But we do not understand just how civilians are to adopt and execute her plans without a semi-military organization that is readily convertible into one of war or peace. And do the leaders of this desirable move intend to fight their battles on the old plane of selfish competition, or will they take some middle ground upon which the nation's workers may concentrate?

If the fight is to be purely intellectual, the masses cannot go far beyond a medium height. If it will require physical force to teach a healthy respect for right, we cannot remove too far from our base of supplies. If it is to be a political tumble, a counting of noses only, we must win the populace.

A convention composed of one or more representatives of the various isms to draft simple, and only necessary, rules to which all will give unreserved allegiance might be a good move, unless the organization of the American Secular Union is deemed sufficient for all purposes, in which case allegiance to the principles therein formulated should be declared by the various branches of Freethinkers and the co-operative work begun.

Where is that broad and lofty hill on the elevated plateau of Freethought, and how can we reach that vantage ground? I realize that there are many of us unable to move alone, as we will have to pass through the enemy's camp to get there. There are many, very many, among the enemy who would be our friends if they knew just what we could do and how it would benefit all concerned. If we ask the people to help correct the present industrial and social evils only to enter another competitive, selfish scramble for the cream of life, we shall ask in vain. The people must have good assurance that their efforts will promote their own welfare and happiness at the same time it does that of others.

Sanel, Cal.

J. C. WEYBRIGHT.

WHY mourn his loss at death? Let us mourn ours—the loss of a dear one, a friend, a good citizen. That which was his before he was born is his, now and forever—eterna! peace.—W.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoe maker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater. C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuennemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1406 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st. Rapp & Debarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.

Otto Siuz, 320 Kearny st.

A HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors. The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 835 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made from this work. Persons preferred who can furnish a large and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. New vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

The Woes of an Editor.

Editor Kellogg, of the Big Bend Empire, is in hiding at present, says the Coulee City News, and his foreman is trying to fix matters up so he can come home again without the fear of being pulverized. In writing up a visit to a lady's house he described her elegant selection of house plants. He wrote in this way: "Mrs. B. has the prettiest plants in town." In making up the form the letter "l" dropped out of the word plants, and the mistake was not discovered until the paper was run off. The whole town was in an uproar, and when the offensive word was pointed out to her husband he armed himself with a horsewhip and revolver and went to the printing-office with blood in his eye. The editor saw him coming and jumped out of the window and started for the canyon on a run that would have shamed a scalded dog. Editors have their troubles the same as other people.

A Disobedient Patient.

Irate patron—You advertise to cure consumption, don't you?

Doctor Quack—Yes, sir. I never fail when my instructions are followed.

Irate patron—My son took your medicine for a year, and died an hour after the last dose.

Doctor Quack—My instructions were not followed. I told him to take it two years.

SOME ministers say

In a mild, begging way

They've no use for notes when they speak,

But don't you forget

There was never one yet

Who didn't want bank notes each week.

MINNIE—What are the people of your church going to do with that $425 they made from the grab bag?

Mamie—We are thinking of using it to break up the sale of Louisiana lottery tickets here.

Preparing for the Future.

Mamma—My dear, what are you doing?

Little Daughter—Making a penwiper for my little sister.

Mamma—But you haven't any little sister.

Little Daughter—No, not yet, but Sally Stuckup has just got one, and I know we always get everything the Stuckups do.

Undying Love.

Mr. Billion—You shall never marry my daughter.

Impassioned suitor—Your threats do not frighten me. I'll marry her or die! When I once love, sir, no power on earth can—

Mr. Billion—Oh, I'm not proposing to use force. How much cash will it take to buy you off?

Impassioned suitor—Um—er—how much'll you give?

"GIVE me a dollar's worth of stamps, please," said a lady to the clerk at the postoffice. "What denomination, madam?" "Presbyterian, I suppose. That's what Mr. Wanamaker is, I believe."

PROFESSION OF FAITH

OF A SAVOYARD VICAR.

—BY—

J. J. ROUSSEAU.

The above volume includes "A Search for Truth," by Ralph Iron (Olive Schreiner).

Cloth, 50 cents. Paper, 25 cents.

Address The Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTIANITY * * *

—AND—

* * * AGNOSTICISM.

A CONTROVERSY

Consisting of papers by

Prof. Thomas Huxley, Rev. Henry Wace,

The Bishop of Peterborough

W. H. Mallock, Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

Price, 30 cents.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO. 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS.

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Francisco.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

Price, 50 c.

Address Freethought

838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

S. J. HAMMOND,

WATCHES

WATCHMAKER, $1 AND JEWELER.

CLEANED.

1061 Market st., Opp. Junction of Jones and McAllister sts., San Francisco. 5134

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St

San Francisco.

Watches Cleaned & Warranted, $1

Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 5134

The Modest Home.

Young Lochinvar came from the West,
By affection deeply incited,
To claim the maid most modest,
To whom his truth was plighted.

"O Mary, mine! My matchless maid!
You know I love you madly,
And I have built a home," he said,
Which needs your presence sadly.

"'Tis but a very modest nest.
The rooms are two in number:
One room to cook in, one for rest—
All built of undressed lumber."

"Why, John!" cried she, her burning face
She hid upon his breast;
"How can one build a modest place
With lumber all undressed?"

No Field for Enterprise.

The publisher of a weekly paper showed the following letter to a Dunsmuir News reporter:

DEAR SIR: Your letter asking me act as your agent and subscription solicitor has arrived. I thank you for the confidence you place in me when you say that you trust in me to do a big business in getting subscriptions, including the 12x28 copy of "The Angelus" as a premium to every subscriber. From a perusal of your sample copy I consider your paper to be a dicknailer of the first water; but owing to the fact that the crops were a failure last year, and the blizzard in January wiped out the cattle, and that the population in this place is only two families and a water tank, and one of the families is away at the hot springs, and the other one, which was only Jed Roach himself, is dead since December, and as, dear sir, I am going East because I have no society except freight trains and telegraph messages that do not stop as they pass by, I do not think it would pay me to make much of a boom for your paper even if you increased the commission and threw in a three-bladed pocket knife.

You asked me to hand your letter to some other person in my town, provided I cannot work for you myself. I have no one to hand it to, but I will nail it on the water tank when I leave.

Superstition in all Ages.

—BY—

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."

339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1
Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

The Humboldt Library

—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
7. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
8. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry
12. } Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
13. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
14. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion
15. Longevity. Prolonging life. John Gardner, M.D.
16. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
18. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
20. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kalley Miller.
21. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
22. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
23. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
24. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
25. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
26. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
27. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
28. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
29. Facts and Pictious of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
30. } The Study of Words.
31. } Richard Chenevix Trench.
32. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R.A. Proctor.
33. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
34. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
35. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
36. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
37. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
38. } Geological Sketches.
39. } Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
40. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
41. Current Discussions in Science. W.M. Williams.
42. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
43. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
44. } The Dawn of History.
45. } C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
46. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
47. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
48. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
49. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
50. } Money and the Mechanism of Exchange.
51. } Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
52. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
53. Animal Automatism. Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
54. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
55. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
56. } Illusions.
57. } James Sully.
58. } The Origin of Species. } Two Double Numbers.
59. } Charles Darwin. } 30 cents each.
60. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
61. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
62. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
63. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, LL.D.
64. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
65. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
66. Technical Education, Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
67. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
68. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
69. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
70. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencer.
71. Archaeology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
72. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
73. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
74. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation
75. } to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The
76. } first three are single numbers, the last a double
77. } number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
78. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
79. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
80. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
81. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
82. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
83. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
84. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
85. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
86. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
87. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
88. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson
89. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
90. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
91. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S.S. Laurie.
92. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T. H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Etymology. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haekel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present. Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life. Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Taung. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought. Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whymper Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No.) 10c.
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Kitchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.,

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against

LIBERTY,

By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.

Address The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Company.

PRINTING!

The Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

- Letter-heads,
- Bill-heads,
- Programmes,
- Envelopes,
- Business Cards,
- Postal Cards,
- Tickets,
- Placards,
- Receipts,
- Posters,
- Dodgers,
- Circulars,
- Etc. etc

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

COUNTRY ORDERS SOLICITED.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

Freethought Publishing Co.,

838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

FRETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS AND TRACTS.

- God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.
- Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.
- Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.
- God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.
- Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.
- Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleypre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.
- Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.
- The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.
- Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.
- The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.
OLIVER HUNCKLEY - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St
N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.
PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD and ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50 fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botchers, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT.

"Similar advertisements from unrelievable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N. J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

PORTRAITS

[Enlarged and Finished in Pastel and Crayon.]
First-class work at reasonable prices. Orders and Correspondence solicited. Satisfaction guaranteed.
F. C. Baxter & Co., 432 Sutter st., San Francisco.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.
Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

Standard Scientific Works

- Works by Alexander Bain.
 English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75
- Works by Charles Darwin.
 Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00
- Works by J. W. Draper.
 History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75
- Works by Ernst Haeckel.
 The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00
- Works by Huxley.
 Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00
- Works by John Stewart Mill.
 Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25
- Works by Richard A. Proctor.
 Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
- Works by Herbert Spencer.
 Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75
- Works by Andrew D. White.
 Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00
- Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
 Body and Mind.....$1.5
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50
- Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
 Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

- By Asa Gray.
 Darwiniana.....$2.00
- By L. L. McLaughlin.
 Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50
- By C. Marcel.
 Study of Languages.....$1.25
- By Lester F. Ward.
 Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00
- By Frederick Overman.
 A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00
- B. F. G. Fairfield.
 Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25
- By W. B. Carpenter.
 Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25
- By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
 Evolution.....$1.50
- By Sir John Lubbock.
 Origin of Civilization.....$5.00
- By Charles A. Abbott.
 A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50
- By Garrett P. Serviss.
 Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50
- By Nathan Sheppard.
 Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50
- English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

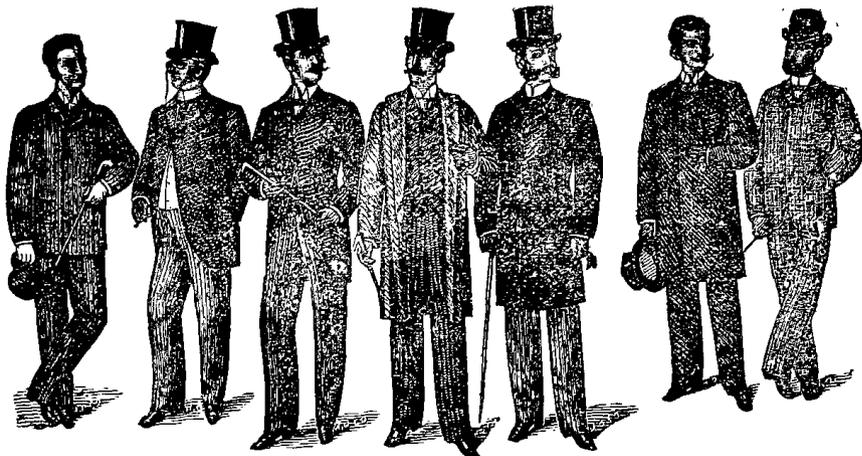

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED, 375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
 DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
 PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Counsel and Client.

It is told that the Scotch advocate, Henry Erskine, defending a lady named Tickell, commenced by saying: "Tickell, my client, my lord"—"Tickle her yourself, Harry," interrupted the judge, "you are as able to do it as I am." A ludicrous illustration of the proneness often shown by counsel to thus identify themselves with their clients has just been contributed in the course of hearing a breach of promise case at the Liverpool Assizes. The plaintiff, described as "an attractive-looking widow of about thirty-five," brought an action against a local licensed victualler named William Henry Vevers, to recover damages, and was awarded £80. The plaintiff was represented by Mr. Segar, who observed, in the course of his opening statement, "Our case is that for a considerable time, since the end of 1885, the defendant has been courting us." This extraordinary attribution of affection to the defendant elicited from Mr. Justice Wills the query, "Are you and the solicitor, then, coming into the courtship?" After this illustration of counsel's identification with client, there is no longer occasion to doubt the veracity of the anecdote about the conscientious barrister appealing to the judge on behalf of a woman just found guilty of murder, in the startling words, "My lord, we are on the point of becoming a mother."—Irish Law Times.

Our Noble Planet.

Albert Hart's home, says the Omaha World-Herald, is down in Clinton county, Missouri. Shortly after midnight last night he wandered into the Central Police Station, and to the Captain in charge told the tale of how he rode and rode through more towns than he had ever heard of and finally reached Omaha.

"I tell you," he said, "if the world's as big the other way as she is the way I come, she's a whopper."

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Chain (for watch chain).....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Chain (for watch chain).....4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond".....14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

- Per Year.....$1.50
- Six Months......75
- Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 vignettes. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth $1 50.

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

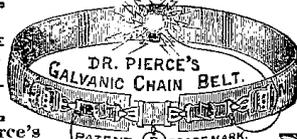

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 HOWARD ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK
In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parson, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 828 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

LIFE RENEWER

Wm. S. & Co. Proprietors

NONE GENUINE WITHOUT THIS SIGNATURE.

DR. PIERCE'S GALVANIC CHAIN BELT. PATENT TRADE MARK.

Dr. Pierce's Galvanic Chain Belt is ELECTRIC and only perfect Body-Battery now in use. The electricity from it can be instantly felt by the wearer. This celebrated instrument will cure, with out medicine; Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Diseases of the Liver or Kidneys, Lame Back, Female Weakness, General Debility, Spinal Disease, Sexual Weakness, Impotency, Etc. Suspensory for men free with every Belt. N.B. The Electricity goes directly to all Weak Parts and restores them to Health and Vigorous Strength. For particulars call or send 4 cts. in stamps for sealed Pamphlet No. 2. Address MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS CO. Y. 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal. PILES. If troubled with Hemorrhoids or Piles, send stamp for Pamphlet No. 3.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,
Hygienic Physician.
Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,
Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.
HOURS. 10 to 12 a.m. 25tf

Health and Hygienic Works.

- Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
- How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.
- Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. F. B. Duffy. $1.
- Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.50.
- Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook. $1.
- Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer. $1
- Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.
- Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina. Ills. 50
- Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook. $1.
- Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F.R.C.S. 30 cents

A Long Way From His Destination.

Some time ago a Pittsburg detachment of the Salvation Army wandered down into Manchester, Alleghany, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. In front of the Hope fire-engine house they began a campaign of prayer and racket. They intended to convert the whole neighborhood. They reckoned the firemen among their worst foes. They feared the constant intimacy of the firemen with conflagrations had made them less fearful of the fires beyond than they otherwise would have been.

After a season of prayer and war dances the leader approached one of the firemen, saying: "Brother, come with us, we are on the road to heaven."

"How long have you been on the way?" stolidly inquired the fireman.

"Two years," replied the missionary.

"And you've only gotten as far as Pittsburg?"

"Yes."

"Well, then, I guess I'll take the shorter route," said the fireman, as he took a chew of tobacco and wandered back to the house.

Prof. W. S. Bell's Lectures in Oregon.

Hamilton	Aug.	31
Fox	Sept.	1, 2
John Day	"	4
Prairie City	"	5
Baker City	"	6, 7
Union	"	8
New Bridge	"	10, 11
Summerville	"	12, 13
Heppner	"	15, 16
Dayton	"	20, 21
Rosalia	"	23
Plaza	"	24
Oakdale	"	26
Spokane	"	27
Davenport	"	28, 29

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.
Price, 10 Cents.
Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS, 15 cents.

THE MONARCH.

TRADE MARK.

None Genuine Without this Trade Mark on Every Bottle.

PURELY VEGETABLE.
AN INFALLIBLE CURE

FOR—
RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, GOUT,
Lumbago, Asthma, Constipation, Sciatica, Dropsy, Malaria, Indigestion, and all Kidney, Liver, and Stomach Troubles.

$1 PER BOTTLE, SIX FOR $5.
C. H. WEBB, Sole Proprietor and Manufacturer, No. 40 O'Farrel Street, San Francisco.

For sale by all druggists. Send for Circulars.
NEVER FAILS. CAUTION—Beware of imitations. Note my trade mark closely

$25.00 REWARD $25.00

For any of the above diseases that C. H. WEBB'S HÆMONY will not cure.

References from People Who Have Used C. H. Webb's Hæmony.

- Hon. A. Van R. Paterson, Judge Supreme Court, S.F.
- Henry L. Dodge, Esq., Pres. Sather Banking Co S.F.
- Captain Ferris, Steamer Apache, San Francisco.
- S. M. West, Esq., 1209 Bush street, San Francisco.
- Robert Smith, contractor, 1810 Larkin street, S. F.
- John Birmingham, Police Officer, 340 18th street, S.F.
- James T. Bonefield, Member of Lincoln Post, No. 1. Residence, 8 Harriet street, San Francisco.
- Mrs. W. Gerdes, widow of Ex-Chief Gerdes, San Jose Fire dept. Residence, Haywards st. Los Angeles.

And I can also refer you to hundreds of others who Have Been Cured by my great remedy HÆMONY.

C. H. Webb's Hæmony. Carefully packed and shipped by Express to all parts of the world. Send money by P. O. Order or through Wells, Fargo & Co.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 36.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - SEPTEMBER 6, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Rosalia and Oakesdale are shining in the midst of splendid harvest-fields; they are actually in the "lap of luxury." Nature has been prodigal; she has done her best, and the glittering treasures delight the eye. Forty bushels, and fifty bushels, and sixty bushels, and in one field sixty-six bushels to the acre are the average.

Rosalia is a pretty place of three hundred inhabitants, and is growing too. It is located in Pine Creek Valley, thirty-five miles south of Spokane Falls. It is on the Spokane & Palouse Railroad, which was built about three years ago. It is surrounded by one of the most fertile farming countries. Last year three hundred and eighty-five thousand bushels of wheat were shipped from this point, and it is expected that six hundred thousand bushels will be shipped this year, to say nothing of oats, barley, and potatoes, which are raised in large quantities. Yet five-eighths of the land tributary to Rosalia has never felt the touch of the plow. Apples, pears, prunes, and cherries grow here luxuriantly. So for the farmer, the business man, and the rustler generally Rosalia is about as good a place as he can strike. It is to be remarked that the word "rustler" takes the place on this coast of the word "hustler" down East. Why the initial letter has been changed is unknown. It might, perhaps, be the influence of climate. For instance, down East they say, "He is a daisy;" in this country they remark, "He is a bird"—the two phrases meaning the same thing, and giving the same description of character.

When I landed at Rosalia, Peter Proff was ready to receive me, and I found myself in good hands. His farm adjoins the town. He came from the fatherland—the banks of the Rhine, where the Romish church is all powerful. But in the free air of the West, in Wisconsin, Oregon, and Washington, the shadow of superstition has departed. All his family—wife and children, boys and girls—accept the bright inheritance of liberty. I found his home amid the green trees, and the brilliant harvest fields a delightful place of sojourn, with the books and papers and music, and the agreeable talk and companionship. Proff is a noble worker for Freethought.

Wm. Fisk was present. He is on hand every time. He is a "whole team" for the cause, for he has the enthusiasm of humanity.

J. L. Terry introduced me at the lectures. He believes in reform of all kinds and in good democratic fashion.

Sam Avery knows a good thing when he sees it, and is on the roll of Freethought. Also Robert Ehrich, D. B. Baldwin, G. W. Dorsey, C. D. Lack, and Mark Merritt join the company. A. Dorsey was absent, and I had not the pleasure of seeing him, but he is not idle. He landed six miles from Rosalia with $17 in cash, a cart and two yokes of oxen, and a large family, twelve years ago. To-day he has 1200 acres of land, 200 head of stock, and is independent. That's the way they do things in this country.

I. E. Nessly, of "Rosalia Rustler," is a "rustler" indeed, and makes a lively paper for a lively town, and keeps things on the move. He has just got out a little pamphlet on Rosalia and the great Palouse county which is quite valuable.

Rosalia is on the advance, and I hope to meet its Liberals again.

Rev. Sherrod, U. P. minister, gave me a very cordial shake of the hand, said he was glad to hear that I was in favor of the good things that the church was doing, and that his church was about to build a parsonage, which was a "good thing," and he hoped I would subscribe liberally. I answered that I wanted to build a few more Freethought colleges before I built a parsonage; that I was not overweighted with money for general distribution, but that undoubtedly if I had remained in the Christian ministry, I should have been able to give him a liberal donation. He sadly replied that from his point of view there wasn't much chance of making money in the orthodox pulpit. He seemed to have an idea that the Liberal lecturers of the country were getting rich, and could afford to divide up with the churches. I hope he will have the parsonage, but if he depends on the Christians, I am afraid he won't get farther than the cellar.

On to Oakesdale, where our good patriarch, Thomas Secrest, holds the flag. He struck this country when scarcely a house was to be seen, and now his broad acres are beheld in every direction, and Oakesdale is a flourishing point. It has almost doubled in population the last year. The Union Pacific and the Northern Pacific cross here, and this gives it the advantage of competition. There is a rich country about, and it is expected that a million bushels of wheat will be shipped here this fall, besides other grains. Oakesdale has several churches and up to now has been quite an orthodox community, and revivals have been on the blaze almost all the time, and the ministers have had a picnic. But it is being discovered that these members of the "third sex" are not altogether heavenly in their aspirations, and they have disappeared. It is about time for reason to rule, and the first Freethought lectures given here were well attended. The audiences increased, and a large Liberal element undoubtedly exists. The shadows of orthodoxy will have to take their flight. With good crops and general prosperity, there will be no room for the "devil" and the "anxious seat." People will be too happy and contented to waste any time upon the New Jerusalem. I think hereafter that Oakesdale will be one of the most favorable places for Liberal advancement. There are some splendid leaders here who understand the situation, and are equipped for the issue. Thomas Secrest has for years maintained the principles of Freethought, and he sees that the day is coming. He has a large family—ten children—and all have had freedom of choice and have not any of them joined the ranks of orthodoxy. I enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Secrest, and I found a cordial home where there was no monotony of thought, but the bright atmosphere of good will and intellectual attainment.

I suppose right here in Oakesdale can be found the origin of the glorious Bill of Rights now in the Constitution of Washington.

A year or two ago was started the discussion as to the right to hold religious exercises of any kind in the public schools—such as prayers and Bible reading. The Christians maintained their right to hold these exercises wherever they had the power, and that there was nothing in the Constitution or general law to prevent; and so the Liberals were apparently helpless, having no tribunal of judgment, and the will of the majority was to be enacted without constitutional safeguards. George Comegys was elected to the constitutional convention as the representative of Liberalism to see that the Constitution should be the palladium of liberty. The Bill of Rights was largely the result of his courageous labors, and a great advance has thus been made for constitutional freedom. The Bill of Rights has excluded chaplains from the legislature, the Bible and religious exercises from the schools, and, without any special enactment of the legislature, it seems to make imperative the taxation of church property. The fight begun at Oakesdale was carried on at Olympia and has resulted in a brilliant triumph. Comegys, of Oakesdale, has plenty of backbone, "clear grit," and logic besides, has grasped the situation and given to state secularization an immense advantage.

In the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McCune, I found the earnest spirit of Freethought, and friends who do everything they can to make the path of the pioneer a pleasant one.

Dr. M. C. Baker introduced me at the lectures, a staunch Free-thinker who believes in common sense both for the "ills of the flesh" and theological unhealthfulness.

M. M. Walsh is a royal worker and leaves nothing undone for the success of the cause. It is a pleasure to greet such a warm-hearted comrade.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Weaver I met years ago at Auburn, Ind., where Watts and I opened the campaign with three ministers in the front seat. It was a good time, I remember. Mrs. Weaver is the daughter of Thos. Secrest. The bright little children are for Freethought every time.

Dr. Mosier, Wm. Howard, G. N. Clark, Henry Warren, John Schleinlein, and Frank and R. L. Schleinlein, Geo. McWilliams, John Doneen, etc., are among the friends I met here who stand in the line. G. W. Swift is on the list of Freethought from Pe-koia, Wash.

I leave Oakesdale with bright anticipations of the future. Its school-house shines lofty above all the churches, and I guess it will ever do so. While the school-house is ahead Freethought is triumphant.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

WANAMAKERISM IN PHILADELPHIA.

A dispatch to the San Francisco "Examiner" from Philadelphia states that a half dozen street fakirs, who had been induced to accept several copies of Tolstoi's "Kreutzer Sonata" as a possibly profitable commodity, found themselves in the dock at the City Hall August 30. They were charged with selling obscene literature on the street. There was a hearing of the case before Magistrate Smith. Counsel for the prisoners asked the police superintendent to point out some passages in the book which he considered improper. The witness picked up a copy of the book and turned to that part which denounced marriage as being un-Christian and unchaste. He read the passage slowly, and when he concluded it he said he considered it unfit for circulation. He then read other passages. Counsel asked if he had read Fielding, Pope, and Shakespeare. He replied that he had, and counsel inquired if he had not found more improper utterances in these works. The superintendent was not sure that he had. "Or in the Bible?" persisted the counsel. The superintendent became indignant, and hotly replied, "I will not answer that question."

The counsel asked for the discharge of the prisoners, holding that the book was not immoral. "What!" exclaimed the magistrate; "do you mean to say that the passages just read are not immoral?" "A perverted mind might so construe them," was the quiet rejoinder.

The court appeared confused, but held the prisoners in $500 bail each, with the remark that every person caught selling the book on the street would be arrested.

The matter has therefore got into the police courts, and any politician with a pull strong enough to land him on the bench has it in his power to suppress the sale of any book he has not the brains to understand.

PLAIN WORDS TO OUR READERS.

We earnestly request subscribers to FREETHOUGHT to examine the date on the wrappers of their paper, and, if they find themselves in arrears, to renew at once. It is impossible for any paper to exist unless those who subscribe for it pay their subscriptions. A Liberal paper, more than any other, needs the active support of those who are interested in Liberal work. If they are so indifferent to the advocacy of their views that they will not spend a dollar on them, the publishing of Liberal papers might as well be suspended. There is not one of these papers in the country that is on a sound financial basis, or that would continue for a month for the money to be made from its publication. Liberal lecturers are not half supported. The foremost Free-thinker in America, an unsurpassed orator, has to depend upon his law practice for a livelihood. This is not because the editors of Liberal papers are not able men. Compare the editorials in the "Truth Seeker," the "Investigator," or the "Twentieth Century" with the editorials to be found in popular newspapers. They are superior not only in candor and truthfulness, but in ability and literary finish; and the same is true to a greater or less extent of all the Liberal journals. The Liberal lecturers, too, are able men compared with the orators who achieve success in other fields. The question which confronts us is whether there is a sufficient number of Free-thinkers in America to support a distinctively Liberal press. Judging from the experiments so far made, there would seem to be but one answer to the question, and that a negative one. It is not the subscriptions, but the open-handed generosity of a few that has thus far kept FREETHOUGHT in existence, and the same is true of other papers of its class. But generosity cannot always be depended upon. Generous men die and leave their means to conservative relatives whose first act is to order the paper discontinued. Or circumstances change so that giving is no longer possible.

What is needed is that every man who desires to see FREETHOUGHT continued should not only determine to pay his own subscription promptly, but to introduce the paper everywhere possible, and to set apart a certain sum, large or small according to his means, to be devoted monthly or yearly to the expenses of the work. To hope that a Liberal paper will become popular in the face of religious bigotry is a foolish waste of the pleasures of anticipation. The great unthinking mass are absorbed either in superstition, in brutal "sports," or in the chase for the almighty dollar, and FREETHOUGHT cannot appeal to them without abandoning the purpose for which it was established. The capitalist or monopolist does not want FREETHOUGHT, for it will educate the workingman and make him discontented with his inferior advantages. The politician does not want it, for it will teach the voter that nothing good can be expected from current political methods. The priests and ministers certainly do not want it, for it exposes them as impostors. These are the influential classes, and from them we can expect only opposition of the strongest kind. There are, however, a great many men and women in the community who are not priests nor politicians, nor the dupes of either, and to them FREETHOUGHT looks for its support. The problem is, are they numerous enough, devoted enough, to justify our confidence, or are they not?

But sufficient has been said. Our readers understand the situation. Hundreds of them know that at present they are doing absolutely nothing to encourage Freethought; they do not even pay for the paper which they take from the office. If they feel at ease about the matter, they are right, since their own consciences must approve their course. Nevertheless, it is not calculated to insure them, or anyone else, the continued weekly receipt of this paper.

AN INFORMAL BUT IMPORTANT MEETING.

An informal meeting of the Directors of the Freethought Publishing Company was held at the office, 838 Howard street, Monday evening, September 1, there being present W. H. Eastman, F. L. Browne, Emil S. Lemme, and Geo. E. Macdonald. The meeting was called by the last named (Macdonald), who wished to propose his resignation as editor of the paper and secretary of the company. His reasons for this step were as follows: 1. His salary was some three months behind, he was in debt for living expenses, and it was necessary that by seeking other employment he should be able to earn his livelihood. 2. The paper depended mainly upon its subscription list for support, its character being such that few advertisements could be obtained; yet about one-half its subscribers were in arrears, several hundred dollar's worth of stock subscribed for was as yet unpaid; and it was evident to Mr. Macdonald that the stockholders were dissatisfied with his management and the subscribers with his editorial work. 3. He believed that some person who combined greater literary ability with a superior business capacity should be appointed in his place in order that it might not be said that the Liberals of this coast had not sufficient devotion to their cause to support their only paper. He reported that if the subscribers to stock would pay up, those in arrears liquidate their indebtedness, and delinquents renew, the company could not only pay expenses but have a handsome balance left for larger work. He was in hopes that under other editorial and business direction this result might be reached. He would not press his resignation until provision could be made for filling the place which he had so incompetently occupied.

Mr. W. H. Eastman objected that the editorial work had been done as well as anybody could do it, and was generally above criticism, and that the place could not be filled by another; also that the business management was satisfactory. Such difficulties as Mr. Macdonald had met were incident to all reform work. Messrs. Lemme and Browne concurred, adding that in their opinion the editor and manager was overworked. The meeting was unanimous in thinking that upon the state of the case being laid before the readers of FREETHOUGHT those in arrears would at once renew, and affairs assume the brighter aspect which the dawn produces just after the darkest hour is past. Entertaining for the moment the hope thus inspired, Mr. Macdonald decided to withhold his resignation for a few weeks, and await the action of stockholders and subscribers.

The sums due to the company, if paid, would place business in a prosperous condition; and since its debtors are Liberals who profess an interest in its maintenance, nothing more than this announcement should be necessary.

THE "Monitor," a Roman Catholic paper published in San Francisco, says:

"A correspondent sends us a clipping from a notoriously anti-Catholic paper published in this city, in which it is stated that the Catholic church receives seventy per cent of all the funds appropriated for Indian schools. This may or may not be true, but the Catholic church does not claim one cent more than its agreement with the government calls for."

The "Monitor" has the figures before it and can cipher out its own percentages. The amount given by the government to the religious schools for Indians last year was $561,960—a pretty sizeable steal—of which the Catholics got $356,957, or between 60 and 70 per cent of the whole. The "Monitor" says "the Catholic church does not claim one cent more than its agreement calls for." Presumably the editor is not well enough acquainted with Catholic affairs to know that within the past few weeks the Catholics have applied to Congress for $8,330 more than their agreement calls for, and that at last accounts they were likely to get it. But they have no right to a dollar, and the million and a quarter they now get from the public treasury is secured by the same methods used in pushing other corrupt jobs through congress.

A MARRIAGE ceremony such as only Spiritualists witness was performed in this city by Mrs. J. J. Whitney, the medium, on August 26, when Mr. Percy St. Clair Seymour, son of Prof. D. C. Seymour, and Miss Nina Adele Wilson, were made husband and wife. Through the clairvoyant sight of Mrs. Whitney the guests, who numbered twenty-five, were apprised that the spirits of the bride's father and brother and the grandmother of the groom assisted, the father helping to give away the bride, while the brother placed wreaths upon the heads of the happy pair. Percy, a likely lad of twenty-one and nearly as altitudinous as his father, is a model of young manhood, while the bride is a tall and graceful beauty of nineteen. We congratulate all concerned, including the invisibles, who must have enjoyed everything but the supper, at which, we are informed, no spirits partook, the bride's health being drank in lemonade.

THE Truth Seeker Company's "Pictorial Text-Book" comes pretty near being the greatest thing of the age. It contains about two hundred full-page pictures and the same number of pages of reading matter, making nearly four hundred pages in all, on paper of the size of FREETHOUGHT. The picture of Watson Heston as a frontispiece does questionable justice to the handsome Missourian, but is fine looking, nevertheless. What adds doubly to the value of the illustrations is the text appearing opposite each and giving the picture fresh significance. The editor has drawn on something like two hundred authorities to justify the artist, and in so doing brings together a formidable collection of sentiment against the Christian church and its claim to being a divine and beneficent institution. The price of the book is two dollars, and it is worth five.

WE do not desire to fill orders for the "Kreutzer Sonata." The superior brute strength of the government is admitted without a contest. The appliances for destroying the freedom of the mails and the freedom of trade that are used in the East exist in San Francisco. There is a "Vice" Society here as vicious as that of Anthony Comstock, and its agent is doubtless just aching for something to suppress. Some of our courts, also, might like to make a virtuous record by following the example of Magistrate Smith of Philadelphia. The book is not one that will do much good, and the right to circulate it is not as valuable as the right to keep out of jail.

CHAPLAIN HILL, of San Quentin prison, knew several years ago that a man named Gibson, under life sentence for murder, was innocent of the crime; and when the Rev. Mr. Hill was asked why he did not divulge the facts, he replied that he was not on good terms with the governor, and did not want to communicate with him. Now correspondence which has passed between Hill and the governor's secretary shows that this excuse was untrue. The Rev. Mr. Hill has got himself before the public in a bad light.

THE doctors at St. Louis want Mrs. Wood worth locked up for carrying on a sensational revival. But why suppress her and allow a hundred thousand other preachers to be at large? Her doctrine is identical with theirs, the only difference being that she preaches it with greater power. It is not the woman but the superstition that needs attention.

CHARLES BRADLAUGH's picture of "Politics in Great Britain" in this issue of FREETHOUGHT can be relied upon as accurate. There is no doubt, however, that some other writer would give Mr. Bradlaugh a much more conspicuous place in British politics than he has thought proper to accord himself.

W. S. BELL writes us that he has just concluded a course of six lectures at Prineville, Oregon. A Secular Union was organized, with the following named gentlemen as officers: Knox Huston, president; A. C. Palmer, secretary; C. Rogers, treasurer.

JOHN E. REMSBURG, the Freethought lecturer and writer, will shortly be in San Francisco. He will speak in this city if arrangements can be made. Will those interested please communicate with the FREETHOUGHT office and say what they are willing to do toward making such arrangements?

ELDER L. T. NICHOLS and W. F. Jamieson are to have a debate of eight nights in Kasson, Minn., commencing Sept. 25, where Mr. Jamieson may be addressed until Oct. 1.

DR. I. D. DRIVER, of Oregon fame, is lecturing in San Francisco on "Infidelity." What he does not know about his subject would make a library.

THE "Truth Seeker" of August 23 contains a three-column editorial review of "Putnam's Religious Experience."

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

San Francisco is gay with flags in honor of Labor and Admission days. Seven thousand laborers were in line in the parade on Monday. Admission day occurs on the 9th, but its celebration extends over several days.—San Francisco had two men for breakfast last Friday morning, one of whom, a saloon keeper named Chenoweth, shot the other, a wholesale liquor dealer named Carroll, and then killed himself. Carroll was a popular and respected citizen who had befriended Chenoweth for years.—A society has been formed in San Francisco to perpetuate and disseminate Hebrew literature, and to encourage the study of Jewish history.—The Rev. George M. Sanborn, who eloped from Eureka, Cal., with the wife of T. J. Ricks, is negotiating for a pulpit in Massachusetts. Ricks traced the couple to Cleveland, O., but upon his arrival there Sanborn and the woman went further East.—The cruiser Charleston has been ordered to Honolulu for some purpose not divulged by the Navy department. The report of an uprising against the king of the islands is now declared unfounded.—The new warship San Francisco, built by the Union Iron Works of this city, has proved herself, upon trial, to be the fastest of her class, making nearly twenty knots per hour.—Hundreds of Chinamen working in the vineyards of Fresno county struck last week for a raise of wages from $1.50 to $1.75 a day. The Chinaman board themselves. Their places are being filled by white men who get $1.25 to $1.50 a day and board, but do a third more work than the coolies.—In lieu of a new postoffice building in San Francisco the present ruin will be restored, sometime, at a cost of $15,000.

Statistics show that about twenty-five farms in each county of Kansas are under mortgage.—Orators of the Workingmen's Tariff Reform League were pelted with decayed fruit by their audiences on the east side of New York last Saturday evening.—Mortality is on the increase in Minneapolis, Minn., where the death rate is now nearly equal to that of San Francisco.—Dr. McGlynn spoke in New York at the Anti-Poverty Society's picnic last week in Jones's Wood. Judge Maguire, of San Francisco, was with him. The doctor referred with gratitude to his kind reception in California.—Oliver Wendell Holmes, the poet and writer, celebrated his eighty-first birthday Aug. 29.

Stanley, the explorer, is rusticated in a secluded Swiss village. His health is poor.—The pope of Rome has just expended $60,000 fixing up a place of residence, but finding it unhealthy will spend $100,000 on another.—The emperor of Germany is accredited with remarkable courage because he remained on the deck of his yacht during a storm. The men who sailed the vessel at the time are not given any distinction, though it is to be presumed that their danger was at least equal to that of the emperor.—There is talk that Bismarck may assume the position of adviser to the kaiser.—A congress of Catholics has just been held in Berlin. The congress demands the re-establishment in Germany of all Catholic orders, including the Jesuits, and the restoration of the pope's temporal power, and also government aid for Catholic missions in German Africa.—

There is famine and starvation in Ireland, which, according to Michael Davitt, threatens to be worse. The contribution box is being passed in America.—The gas department of the Birmingham corporation has under consideration the "penny in the slot" scheme for the supply of gas in small tenements. The consumer simply drops a penny into the machine and gets twenty-five feet of gas. This is about half the cost of gas in San Francisco.

LITERATURE.

People interested in the temperance question, as nearly everybody is, should send a postage stamp to F. B. Perkins, 429 Montgomery street, and get a pamphlet on the subject.

"What Would Follow on the Effacement of Christianity?" is told by George Jacob Holyoake in a ten-cent pamphlet just issued in handsome form by H. L. Green, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. Mary A. White's catechism on "Natural Morality," which has been so highly spoken of by all who have read it, including Colonel Ingersoll, is for sale at this office. Price, 25 cents.

The "Freethinkers' Magazine" for September is a good number. The frontispiece consists of a fine portrait of George Jacob Holyoake. Among the contents are "Coincidence," by Rev. J. C. F. Grumbine; "The sorrows of God," by George Jacob Holyoake; "Reminiscences," by Lucy N. Colman; a poem by Nellie Booth-Simmons; "The Orthodox Hell," by the editor, and other interesting matter. For sale at this office. Price 20 cents.

That controversy which occurred a while ago between the Rev. Dr. Henry Wace and Prof. T. H. Huxley, on the subject of "Agnosticism and Christianity," in which some of the Bible miracles are discussed, appears, as our readers will observe, among the numbers of the Humboldt Library. It is a book of 162 pages, and costs but 30 cents. Send to this office for it. (Postage stamps are always received as cash.)

The author of "How to Make Marriage a Success" has left copies of his book on sale at this office. He holds that a knowledge of the physiology of marriage is a prerequisite to happiness, and he therefore supplies the information which many lack. The work has not as yet achieved a prominence worthy the attention of Wanamaker, and until it does we will mail it for 80 cents, to any address. It is an octavo book in handsome cloth binding.

Dr. Andrew D. White takes up "The Fall of Man" in the next of his Warfare of Science papers, in the September Popular Science Monthly. The belief that man was a perfect being when he first appeared upon the earth, and that there were no sorrow, toil, nor death in the world till brought in by his misconduct, is found in both classical and Hebrew mythology. Dr. White shows how scientific evidence has gradually rolled up till its weight forces the irresistible conclusion that man has had no fall from a high estate, but that from low beginnings in the distant past he has been continuously rising. This is one of the strongest papers in the series.

The ancients, from Cleanthes up, believed that they could recognize dispositions from the looks. Lavater, who was a physician, a naturalist, and, above all, an enthusiast, first gave something of a rational form to physiognomy. Now Senator Paolo Mantegazza, the distinguished Italian scientist and philosopher, comes forward with a work entitled "Physiognomy and Expression," in which he proposes "to restore to anthropology and to psychology that which belongs to it by right, and to make known the positive documents which he possesses to-day on the human countenance and on expression." The treatise forms two double numbers of the Humboldt Library of Science, price 30 cents each.

We have received from the author a book entitled "Aryan Sun-Myths the Origin of Religions," by Sarah E. Titcomb, with an Introduction by Charles Morris. It is a work of 200 pages, and never, it seems to us, could more of research have entered into the composition of a book of the size. As the title indicates, the author's aim is to show that all the forms, ceremonies, rites, and emblems of the Christian as well as other religions had their origin in archaic myths. Mrs. Titcomb has consulted more than one hundred standard authorities on the subject, all of whom support the view which she takes, and which is now generally accepted as the true one. The price of the book is $1.25, and it may be ordered through this office.

Two books just received from John W. Lovell & Co., New York, are evidently Theosophical. One is the "Pathway of the Spirit," by J. H. Dewey, M. D., and is professedly Christian Theosophy. Dr. Dewey says that he has been "caught up in the spirit to behold with open prophetic vision the ultimate certainty of an emancipated and perfected humanity on earth, and to see that its immediate realization is a divine possibility and provision." Theosophical literature comes high, and this work, though not a large one, costs $2.—The second work, entitled "One Life: One Law," is by a woman, Mrs. Myron Reed, who finds all necessary truth in the Bible. The ideas of evolution, for instance, she says were first started by John the Baptist when he said "God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham." But Mrs. Reed is altogether too unsophisticated. John had no reference to rocks, but to something else. The book is of value to mystics only and will probably cost them a dollar and fifty cents.

ELMINA'S VINDICATION.

I did not see Mr. Barrett's letter in FREETHOUGHT until last evening, and hence my delay in noticing it. He says Elmina is not popular in his locality. Neither was Jesus Christ popular in many localities: nor are ten thousand other Liberals and reformers popular in all localities.

But does he not speak extravagantly when he says her articles are a "damage to any paper that accepts" them? Is it not supposable that editors know their own business? If they believed an article would be a positive lasting injury to their paper would they print it? What seems an injury to-day may be a mine of gold to-morrow.

I've only one request to make of Mr. Barrett. Will he please quote one line from any printed article or private letter of mine that proves me to be of "easy principles"—that is, which tends to make men or women unkind or immoral? Few writings have had more editorial puffs and special words of commendation than have those of Elmina. Without real literary merit or striking originality, yet they are kindly, charitable, and uplifting, and their morality unquestionable.

For a time, it is true, I preached contraceptics as the least of two evils, unwelcome parentage or a slight risk to health by thwarting Nature. But when further study convinced me that it would be a license to the lust of unthinking, ignorant, or brutal husbands, I ceased to advocate it, teaching abstinence alone as the true road to a higher and better life.

Once convinced that we are in error we should never hesitate to own up and do better.

So if Barrett will point out an error in my life or writings I'll gladly try to reform it.

Meanwhile, as to the accusation of "easy principles," I send one out of five hundred or more testimonials received during the hounding of the Comstock crew because of the best work I ever tried to do for purity, progress, and reform.

OFFICE OF JUDGE OF U. S. SUPREME COURT, WESTERN }
DIST. OF VA. HARRISBURG, VA., JAN. 2, 1889. }

MRS. ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER, Madam—I have just received your letter asking me to send you a few lines "that I believe in your purity and honesty of purpose." I know nothing [more] of your character for purity and honesty than was developed on your trial had before me some months ago at Abingdon, Va. Your neighbors from Snowville, Va., where you live, comprising many of the best people in the community, bore willing and ready testimony to your good character for purity, honesty, and chastity. No woman could have established a better character for these virtues than you did on that trial.

Respectfully,
JOHN PAUL, U. S. Dist. Judge.

E. M. SLENKER.

HAS God a brain? Then how can he be infinite? If he has no brain, how can he be God.—Wettstein.

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION.

R. B. WESTBROOK, PRESIDENT.

F. C. MENDE, TREASURER. IDA C. CRADDOCK, COR. SEC'Y.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. Westbrook 1707 Oxford st., Philadelphia.
E. B. Foote, Jr. 120 Lexington ave., New York.
T. B. Wakeman 93 Nassau st., New York.
J. E. Remsburg Oak Mills, Kansas.
Juliet H. Severance Milwaukee, Wisconsin.
F. C. Mende 1814 Green st., Philadelphia.
Ida C. Craddock, S. E. corner of Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL CONGRESS.

The Fourteenth Annual Congress of the American Secular Union has been appointed by the board of directors to meet at Portsmouth, Ohio, on Friday evening, October 31, 1890, and to continue its sessions on the Saturday and Sunday following.

The meetings will be held in the Grand Opera House, corner of Sixth and Court streets, and the orchestra of the establishment has been engaged for the occasion. Due notice will be given of the proposed reduction in railroad, steamboat, and hotel fares.

Portsmouth is situated on the Ohio river, one hundred miles east of Cincinnati and one hundred miles south of Columbus, and has extensive and convenient railway connections with the whole country. It is a port of foreign entry, and is distinguished for its numerous and magnificent manufactories. It has a population exceeding fifteen thousand (15,000), has twenty churches, the Ohio Military Academy, and a splendid system of graded schools. The Ohio Valley Fair is held there annually; and several English and German papers, daily and weekly, are published in the city.

The members and friends of the American Secular Union are sure of a hearty welcome, not only from our enterprising local auxiliary, but also from the citizens at large.

The object of the American Secular Union, as is well known, is to secure the total separation of church and state in fact and in form, to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood be established, protected, and perpetuated. While we unite on what is commonly known as the Nine Demands of Secularism, we propose to emphasize the following at the coming Congress:

1. The equitable taxation of church property in common with other property.
2. The total discontinuance of religious instruction and worship in the public schools, and especially the reading of any Bible.
3. The repeal and prevention of all laws enforcing the observance of Sunday as a religious institution, rather than an economic one, justified by physiological and secular reasons.
4. The cessation of all appropriations of the public funds for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character.

The American Secular Union is strictly unsectarian and non-partisan in both religion and politics, but will use any and all honorable means to secure its objects as above stated. It is not either publicly or privately committed to the advancement of any system of religious belief or disbelief, but heartily welcomes all persons, of whatever faith, to its membership, on the basis of "no union of church and state." The word "secular" is here used in the broadest sense, as applied to the state, and not to any system of religion or philosophy.

To discuss these questions in an orderly and friendly manner, and to devise ways and means to promote these objects, let us come together at this Congress, as Freethinkers, Spiritualists, Unitarians, Universalists, Free Religionists, Quakers, Progressive Jews, and Liberal Christians, and, laying aside our peculiar views on religious questions, unite as American citizens on the one broad platform of no union of church and state, and the complete administration of our secular government on purely secular principles.

The National Reform Association, having for its object the establishment of Christianity as the religion of the state by constitutional enactment; the American Sabbath Union, working for the enforcement, by legislation, of the Jewish and Puritanic

Sabbath on our free citizens; the Women's Christian Temperance Union, indorsing the platforms and policy of both these organizations; the churches, both Catholic and Protestant, insisting through their ecclesiastical bodies upon the complete exemption of church property from just taxation, as well as the appropriation of public money for religious schools and other sectarian institutions; all these, and many other, which might be mentioned, are imperilling our constitutional liberties. Every true Liberal and patriot, whether man or woman, should feel called upon to aid in organizing an effective opposition to these nefarious schemes.

Due notice will be given of the selection of eminent speakers from all parts of the United States and Canada, and a free platform will be given to all persons who may have a word to say for pure state secularization. All, without exception, are welcome to this Congress in the wide-a-wake little city in the valley of the beautiful Ohio.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.

Philadelphia, Sept. 1, 1890. Attest: IDA C. CRADDOCK, Sec'y.

WORKING STILL FOR THE CONVENTION.

Liberals of Oregon:

Shall we have the largest Secular Convention ever held in the United States? If you will all come and bring your friends it will be so. I will do my part here.

Then see that it is published in the papers in your county. Write a communication to one or more papers about it: any paper which is taken in Oregon. Give it out and have it announced at picnics, socials, balls, prayer-meetings, and other public gatherings in your reach. Post hand-bills which I send you, and give out to best advantage all cards and notices which you receive. Watch your fairs and distribute cards to all persons there and post bills that all can see. Write to me for them if you will do so, and then write me what you did.

The eminent speakers who will be here justify us in doing this work thoroughly. Obtain all the names you can to our petition to the legislature for the taxation of church property. Get names for membership to the Union. Tell them there will be no fees or dues charged: and as you do this work invite them to the convention. Tell them that it comes in the middle of the great fair and they will get reduced rates. We will have the best hall and best music north of San Francisco, the best speakers in the United States, and if we do not have the greatest meeting of the kind ever held it will be because we fail to attend.

C. BEAL, Pres. O. S. S. Union.

BILL NYE REVIEWS A RELIGIOUS WORK.

There has been recently placed in my hands for review a rectangular, liver colored brochure, issued for the summer trade, which is a resume of the public services of the Younger brothers who, as it will be remembered, were engaged for some years in soliciting donations of funds and goods for the use of persons in need, and who reside, when at home, mostly in Clay and Jackson counties, Mo.

The book is handsomely gotten up, though sold at twenty-five cents per volume, and breathes a spirit of kindness and humanity which should teach us all a valuable lesson. I have read the entire book carefully because I did not desire to judge it unfairly. My attention was especially called to it because I had heard so much of the devout spirit manifested especially by Coleman Younger, both before and since his incarceration.

It is only fair that the world should know the truth about both the Youngers and the Jameses, and that while they were at times unconventional and almost rude they were really at heart refined and devout. Coleman Younger, or Cole, as he was called by his publishers, who of course naturally feel most intimate with him, having no doubt often exchanged ideas with him as to methods of working that would be profitable without involving too much risk or brain fag, was the son of Henry Washington Younger, a native of Kentucky, who afterwards moved to Jackson county, Mo. Mr. Younger, Sr., never did much, aside from becoming the father of the Younger brothers, that would serve to pass his name down in history. Having successfully done this he died suddenly by request of many citizens. The elder Younger, if such a term be proper, began to wield a lasting influence over his sons, however, before his death; for while Cole was at school he was quite rude, and sometimes fatally injured his playmates in thoughtless glee, and as a result of pure animal spirits which he carried almost constantly concealed about his person. As a result of this the teacher threatened to whip Coleman. The elder Younger then informed the little pallid tutor that if he did so he (the elder Younger) would whip the little pale teacher. Many boys with parents like that have grown up, gone into society and at last put on the beautiful tennis suits worn so extensively at Sing Sing. Later on, growing heated over a discussion with the teacher regarding the question whether "pollena" was or was not the correct orthography of the style of overskirt then being largely worn in Clay county, the Younger brothers inserted the tutor in the river, head first, through a hole in the ice, and left him there in a most compromising position.

The tutor was pulled out by spectators finally, and he said then to those about him that if the Younger boys didn't do "different" they would come to a bad end, possibly several of such.

Cole Younger has become such an earnest, consistent Christian since his incarceration in the penitentiary that his past ought not to be raked up here, except it be, perhaps, to show that he has had a great deal to overcome in trying to lead a Christian life in a penitentiary, where there are so many temptations to be frivolous and gay.

Some years ago there was a robbery on the Rock Island Road about fourteen miles east of Council Bluffs. Cole Younger and Jesse James planned to "throw" the east-bound train at this point. It was in the drowsy dawn of a beautiful summer Sabbath that these now kindly and gentle natures pried up the rails and let the flying engine plow into the cut and wreck the train. It was the sunrise of that Sabbath morning when poor Rafferty, the engineer, with ashy face and staring eyeballs turned toward the quiet sky, lay dead beneath his engine. He lies in an unknown grave to-day because he foolishly tried to reverse his engine and save his train; whereas if he had been engaged in wrecking it, people would have come for thousands of miles to see him and hear him tell how he found salvation and helped himself to it.

ON THE TRAIL.

To the Editors of Freethought:

As I was all ready to leave Empire after completing my course of lectures there, the remains of a Mr. Smith were brought in to be buried. He had died very suddenly of heart disease the day before while at work away from home. He dropped dead at his work. Mr. Smith was a very large man, weighing at one time 340 pounds, and about 320 when called by the grim sentinel that all must obey. There was no minister to be had, and I was called to the grave to officiate by saying something that would be a partial tribute to the departed husband and father. I merely called attention to the fact that it was only through death that life was possible; that we all had grown up from the ashes of the past, which were the remains of countless millions that had existed before us; that death was just as natural as birth and was no more to be mourned, except the sorrow of having our friends leave us. Death, viewed aright, was a blessing and a necessity. It freed us from the toil and struggle for an existence. It ended our toil, pain, hunger, and the suffering from dire disease. It released us from the toils of our enemies and all worry of life. It rent the veil that hangs over the mystic river and bade us view the glories of a supposed eternity. It either brought the sweet realization of the dreams of all the past, of a life of rest and harmony beyond the clouds, or ended in forgetfulness all the memories of mistakes and sorrows passed through in life's fitful fever. Death either ended all or transported us to higher and grander fields of thought and action, where the loves and affections would be renewed and enjoyed forever. Either way we view it, death was but a cog in the wheel of evolution, which, as it ran in its endless cycles, would carry us on to some other place in nature, where either consciously or unconsciously we would go on forever in "nature's wondrous plan." The grave should have no victory, death no sting, for it is only our mother's call to bid life and friends a sad farewell. If man is the fruit of the tree of life, then, like all other fruits, he has within him the seed or germ that can be transplanted to other climes, to grow and blossom perhaps in higher spheres. We can only say we do not know—death is either a solid wall that stops all conscious life, or it is an open door that lets the wandering, troubled child from darkness into everlasting light. We had met here beside this open grave to pay the last tribute the living ever owe the dead. We were here as friends to do what others must soon do for us. We must say the last farewell and lovingly lay him back in his mother's bosom, from whence he came. The lifelong companion and sorrowing wife and these children must now take the final look and whisper the saddest words in our language, "good-bye." Yet he will still live in our memories, will ever be near our hearts, and our streaming tears may be assuaged by the sweet thought that it is not all of life to live, nor all of death so die. It would be no more strange that we all may live again than that we live now, and that ray of hope must illumine every heart—that sometime we shall all meet again. And thus we laid the kind old man away.

The next morning I took the steamer Montesano up the bay to Sumner, about twenty miles, at the head of Kitchen slough and situated in a handsome little valley. It is the headquarters for three logging camps of the Southern Oregon Mill Company, located at Empire. I gave four lectures at Sumner to good audiences of loggers and rafters and their families, and had the pleasure of being the sole occupant of the Sumner Hotel. Thus was I for once a bloated aristocrat with a large hotel at my command. It was nicely furnished, but the owner had lately sold it and gone away, and thus it was standing idle. I soon got leave from the logging boss to put up there, as there was no other place to stay. I got my meals at a private house, but slept and "done business" in the deserted parlors of ye Hotel de Sumner. I doubt if many tramp lecturers ever chartered and occupied a whole caravansary before. I feel that I am "getting on in the world," that I may yet own a railroad or belong to a syndicate or own an oil well or an oyster ranch. Oh, there is nothing like being born great, unless it is having greatness thrust on you. I rode in a dory with seven others, while one man did the pulling, not only at the oars, but the little brown jug, twelve miles to Marshfield; then staged it and steamed it forty miles to Randolph. Here I have just finished a course of lectures at Tennyson's Hall, where Putnam, Reynolds, and Mrs. Kregel have filled these giant woods and echoing hills with their Freethought oratory in days that are gone. The hall was well filled for three nights.

They came in boats from up and down the river, from the mills, logging-camps, and ranches, and God blessed us all by giving us an outpouring of his "divine afflatus," whatever that may mean, and ye correspondent rejoiced much thereat. Randolph is handscmely situated under a high, densely-wooded bluff, beside the Coquille river, six miles above Bandon. It is a sheltered nook, only three miles from the sea, and contains a brewery, store, hotel, school-house, fine hall, and a few homes. Last winter a slide of part of the bluff or mountain came down, carrying millions of tons of rock, sand, gravel, and forest trees into the river and taking two houses and homes with it, or rather, crushing them like an egg-shell, burying in a living tomb an old man and his young daughter. The rest of the families got away alive. An "inscrutable providence" does some devilish things with his helpless children. I stopped at the Randolph House with Mr. Tennyson, who knows how to keep hotel, if he should never write rhymes like his namesake. It is a home-like place. All the people seem to be Liberals here, and I made friends with landlord, wife, and two handsome daughters; also the son-in-law and wife; Mr. Franklin, Mr. Walser, Mr. Sanders; also the gentlemanly clerk in the postoffice and family, and many others. I found Prof. J. J. Stanley, the teacher, at the desk here, who helped make the lectures a success and my stay very pleasant. He is a rising young man from Kansas, a true Freethinker and full of the impulse for universal mental liberty. Thus is my three-months' campaign in Coos county ended. I have spoken from four to six times every week and now bid me away to visit towns in the Puget sound country. D. C. SEYMOUR.

POLITICS IN GREAT BRITAIN.

BY CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

The old names Whig and Tory are still repeated in dictionaries, though it is hardly needful to point out that actual Whigs have to-day no existence, and the rare survivals of downright Toryism only serve to occasionally amuse. At the close of the seventeenth century, and in the first half of the eighteenth, Whigs and Tories were real enough. The Whig asserted, and in 1688 practiced the right of revolution. The Whig affirmed that the throne and crown were held in trust for the people, were in the free gift of the people, and that the people had the right to resume the sovereignty if dissatisfied with the sovereign. The Whig declared that Lords and Commons in convention together made a Parliament which might take away the sceptre from a reigning king, pass by his heir, and give the royal dignity to whom it would; and these declarations were made effective as against James II. and his son. The Tory asserted the divine right of kings, claimed that the kingdom, throne, crown, and sceptre passed by heirship, and that the people were, as to these things, voiceless, save to pledge their allegiance in turn to each heaven-sent monarch. The Tories stood by the Stuarts, kings by the grace of God, even though the law declared these Stuarts to be "pretenders." The Whigs upheld the house of Brunswick, a house made kingly by the "glorious revolution." The Tories hated and abused the non-English-speaking Guelphs. The Whigs expelled and proscribed the once-crowned Stuarts. After some seventy-five years the Tories came into power, and were well represented by Lord North, who declared that he had never voted for a popular measure. From 1760 until 1832 Toryism represented stubborn resistance to all measures which seemed likely to give political influence to the masses. During all this three-quarters of a century (except as to Ireland) the Whigs—though gradually ceasing to reaffirm the right of revolution—were mostly found on the side of liberty and progress. With the increase of manufacturing industry during the early part of the present century, a prosperous middle class had grown up, which in 1832 secured almost complete political recognition. A large mass of these, aided by reforming Whigs, made in the House of Commons a new party, which called itself "Liberal." The party of resistance preferred the word "Conservative" to the old name Tory. The preference was strengthened between 1860 and 1880 by the education of the party, consequent upon the compelled acceptance of Benjamin Disraeli as a leader. It has been further enforced by the knowledge that the borough franchise conceded by Mr. Disraeli in 1867 destroyed forever the remains of the pocket boroughs which had survived the auto da fe of 1832.

The great Corn Law struggle, powerfully conducted, as every one is well aware, by middle-class men, was preceded and accompanied by considerable agitation for political rights amongst the great mass of the people. Chartism frightened both Liberals and Conservatives; and yet the famous "six points of the charter" were so moderate that most of these points are to-day accepted by all Liberals, and indeed advocated by many Conservatives. In truth, a large part of the Chartist demands has been embodied in our statute book. The present popular Radical party is the outgrowth of the past forty years. Its success was assured by the Reform bill of 1867; it has had weapons placed in its hands by the Education act of 1870. With the multiplication of employments, a higher standard of comfort has been sought and, in many cases, attained by the working classes. Combinations of artisans being legalized, they have, whilst professing to abstain from party politics, gradually sought to utilize political power. The Liberal party in the House of Commons had, after the election of 1868, a few Radical members, of whom Mr. P. A. Taylor might have been taken as a fair and good type; but even in the Parliament of 1874, the advanced Radicals could have been counted on, the fingers. Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, who had been esteemed as a Radical in his municipal work, who had even been suspected of platonically favoring Republicanism, was, in the Parliament of 1880, regarded as a Radical leader, whose admission to the Cabinet was estimated as so much gained for the future of Radicalism. The 1874 Parliament had, however, given evidences of the birth of another party, neither Liberal, Conservative, nor Radical, i.e., the advanced Irish party. Daniel O'Connell's entry into the House of Commons had made possible the young Ireland party. The union of Tories and Liberals against Irish reform had made the men of 1848 rebels. Some hope had come to Ireland from Parliament in the disestablishment of the Irish church and the Land bill of 1871. The late Mr. Biggar, with a very few helpers in 1874, used the floor of Parliament as a battle ground, and some sixteen years ago a small Irish party gradually came to the front. Obstruction and publicity in London slowly superseded secret conspiracy in Ireland. In 1880, this party had grown, and had in Mr. Parnell a new parliamentary leader, and one whom the late Mr. W. E. Forster described in my hearing in the House of Commons, as "the uncrowned King of Ireland." The redistribution arrangements under the Reform bills of 1884-5 conceded to Ireland more representation, in proportion to population, than to any other part of the kingdom, and thus gave to this new Irish party 86 votes, that is, gave to it the power, in most Parliaments, of making or unmaking a ministry. Both great parties in 1885 bid for this Irish vote, and it looked for a little while as if the Conservatives had secured it. At the general election of 1885, all Irish influence was divided against the Liberal and Radical candidates. Fortunately for liberty, the Tories were willing to buy power with the vote, but were unwilling to pay Ireland the purchase-money of local government reform. Lord Carnarvon, who had been permitted to meet Mr. Parnell in secret talk, and Lord Randolph Churchill, who had gone further still, alike secretly and openly, were both thrown over by Lord Salisbury, true to the reputation of the oldest Cecil. Coercion, which had been almost continuously used through more than fourscore years, and which had almost always failed, was again threatened on the 26th of January, 1886: and on the following day Mr. Gladstone was called to office. He could not have evaded the Irish question, even if he had so desired. With a young man's courage and an old statesman's genius, he proposed to give to Irish disaffection the responsibility of self-government, wisely believing that remedy was better than penalty for the cure and prevention of discontent. This daring act of justice frightened many Liberals in the Commons, and angered the great peers who in the "other House" dreamed that they still were Whigs, with their aforetime family influence in national politics.

Thus a "Liberal Unionist party" led by Lord Hartington, heir to the influence if not to the traditions of the Cavendish family, sprang up in the Commons. To the surprise of many, a few who had been professed Radicals, who had declared for the unauthorized programme of 1885, and who were nearly all relatives of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, commenced to shout loudly that Mr. Gladstone was seeking to dismember the empire. The result, in the Parliament elected in the autumn of 1886, was the presence in the House of Commons of five parties—Conservatives, Liberal Unionists, Radical Unionists, Liberals, and Irish Nationalists. The first three parties declared themselves united on the platform of "doing no act, giving no vote, which might restore Mr. Gladstone to power." The Radical Unionism has since been very much dropped, and the Liberal division of the so-called Unionist party has swallowed in turn every principle which would have been embarrassing in a parliamentary division. The Liberal party is, however, not quite an individual unit. There is an unquiet Radical section which, except on Irish questions, is not always coincident with the official or front bench Liberal opposition. The leadership of this Radical contingent has been assumed by Mr. Labouchere, who openly declares it to be the duty of the Radical opposition to prevent, if possible, any Conservative legislation. Mr. Labouchere is nearly always supported by the Irish members, and often carries into the lobby with him the majority of those who sit above the gangway behind the front opposition bench. With considerable wealth, great journalistic influence, and a special talent for the utilization of diplomatic methods in parliamentary warfare, my colleague is a person to be reckoned with by all who wish to hold office when the election dice give the highest numbers to Mr. Gladstone. Included in the Radical party are the Labor members, of whom the senior, Mr. Thomas Burt, most deservedly stands first in the general esteem of the House. These Labor members are not quite so numerous as they were in the short parliament of 1885. One of their present number, Mr. Broadhurst, was for a brief space, in 1886, a member of Mr. Gladstone's government as under-secretary of state for the home department.

It is certain that a very wide measure of local self-government for Ireland must be soon enacted, either by the Conservatives or the Liberals. Present methods of government in Ireland are in many respects so intolerable, and in some phases are so contemptible, that I have a personal regret that a cultured gentleman like the chief secretary for Ireland, can descend so low as to defend such methods without sign of conscious degradation. But any large measure of local self-government for Ireland will entirely change the character of, even it does not break up, the present Irish parliamentary party. Its best men will be most needed in governing Ireland. The larger the measure of reform, the greater will be the burden to leading Irishmen of their new responsibilities. It is not quite possible to accurately measure the effect of these on the future of parties in the House of Commons. Its full consequence will hardly be realized in the next general election. It is, however, clear that once Irish local government is enacted and the Irish land problem solved, a wise leader will have to regard the Irish vote as an uncertain factor in English politics.

There is one other party I ought perhaps to name, though it is more myth than reality, viz., the Tory democratic party. As a parliamentary party it is certainly not a large one. In the parliament of 1880-5, for four years, it had at its strongest four members; one representing philosophy, another diplomacy, a third legal subtlety and prudence, and the fourth sheer audacity. The last went up rocket-like, and fizzed for a brief space very high in the political firmament. The other three gathered official manna in the wilderness, and have forgotten, or tried to forget, that Lord Randolph Churchill had ever been their leader. His lordship has, during the present parliament, been supposed to dream of a possibly "national" party to be formed by the union of himself, and his own little handful, with Mr. Joseph Chamberlain and the equally select number of personal friends who would follow the right honorable member for West Birmingham. The "national" party, with its proposed two commanders-in-chief, never had any rank or file. The leaders disagreed even before their forces were enlisted; and the national party is not. Lord Randolph Churchill hovers obliquely in the rear of the Treasury bench, hungry for a welcome back, which is slow to be spoken; whilst opposite, in a lower corner seat, the right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain lets "I would" wait upon "I dare not," though he is unwelcomed where he now sits.

In a general election, men count as well as principles, and amongst the men of the time, Mr. Gladstone stands conspicuously by himself. None other near him, although the veteran statesman counts now more than fourscore years. As he is without peer, so in front of him there is absolutely none. The one who, when he falls, is to lift the hammer of Thor and weld together the snapped links of the Liberal party, has yet to be found. The tendency is to erase old party lines, to smother old party cries, to mark new barriers, and to gild new blazons. Democracy against aristocracy; right against privilege; labor against inheritance; these are the arrayed forces on the political tilting-grounds of to-morrow.—National Reformer.

THE LIBERAL ASSOCIATION OF TEXAS.

Pursuant to a call previously made through the columns of the "Independent Pulpit," a meeting of Liberals was held in Waco, Texas, July 15 and 16, 1890, from the minutes of which we glean the following facts:

At 9 o'clock A.M. of the first day, J. D. Shaw, of Waco, called the delegates to order and stated the object of the meeting. T. V. Munson, of Denison, was then elected president, and J. L. Jackson, of Weatherford, secretary. An opportunity was next given for the delegates to hand in their names, and forty-seven were found to be present.

The question of organization being proposed, a general expression of opinion was called for, and quite a number responded in brief but interesting speeches, showing most conclusively that the prevailing sentiment was in favor of immediate organization, and a committee of seven was appointed to report on the subject at the next session.

At 4:30 P.M. fourteen new delegates handed in their names, and the committee appointed in the forenoon made a partial report, favoring organization, proposing a name, and submitting certain objects to be attained.

After considerable discussion, the report was adopted and the committee re-instructed to complete its work by including a full and complete plan of organization.

At 8:30 P.M. the question, "Is Morality Progressive?" was made the subject for general discussion, and a number of speeches were made, from which it became manifest that the ethical spirit was the prevailing one, and that the moral elevation of the people was the chief object in view.

At 9 o'clock A.M. of the second day twelve new delegates handed in their names, and the committee to which had been referred the plan of organization reported that, for want of time, it had not been able to perfect a full report, and requested that a general discussion of the subject be had by the meeting. The request was agreed to and the committee discharged.

After a full and free discussion, involving several proposed plans, the following was adopted by a unanimous vote:

Resolved, That we, Liberals of Texas, in convention assembled, do hereby organize ourselves into a society, to be known as the Liberal Association of Texas.

Resolved, That the objects of this association shall be as follows:

1. To encourage the study of man in all his relations.
2. To seek to realize the truth in life.
3. To aid in those movements that tend most to the improvement of the individual and of society, and to the utility and freedom of mankind.
4. To facilitate the association of those who have at heart and hold dear that absolute freedom of thought and expression which is the natural right of every rational being.

5. To inaugurate a system of positive, tolerant thought, ethical culture, and practical benevolence in which all liberal-minded people can unite and work in harmony for the moral elevation, intellectual improvement, social well-being, and consequent happiness of the human race.

Resolved, That we welcome into this association all persons who indorse these objects, regardless of their speculative opinions on religion, philosophy, or politics.

Resolved, That the officers of this association shall be a president, a secretary, and a treasurer, and these officers shall constitute an executive committee with full power to formulate methods to carry out the purposes for which we are organized.

Resolved, That the officers of this association hold their offices until their successors are chosen, which shall be at the regular annual meetings.

Resolved, That an annual fund, to defray the expenses of this organization, shall be raised by voluntary contributions, and that said fund shall be known as the Extension Fund, and it shall be expended by the executive committee in any manner they may deem proper.

After the adoption of these resolutions, which constitute the governing principles of the association, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: J. D. Shaw, of Waco, president; J. L. Jackson, of Weatherford, secretary; T. V. Munson, of Denison, treasurer.

The afternoon session was principally devoted to a discussion of plans and methods for strengthening the movement, morally, socially, and financially. The condition and prospects of the "Independent Pulpit" were inquired into, and the status of our publishing business being fully explained, the following motion was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the executive committee be authorized and instructed to devote the funds of the association, so far as available, to strengthening our base in Waco.

After the adoption of the above resolution, subscriptions to the Extension Fund were increased to $300.

The night session was devoted to speeches by several of the delegates, and there being no further business to transact, the association adjourned to such a time next year as may be designated by the executive committee.

Thus ended our first meeting, which was participated in by seventy-three delegates from twenty-nine different counties. The meeting was harmonious throughout, and every delegate seemed to be seriously impressed with the importance of the work in hand. It now remains for the Liberals to unite in pushing forward this humble beginning to a grand and glorious success.

Let everyone who can freely indorse the objects of the association become a member by sending his or her name, with that of your postoffice and county, to the secretary, J. L. Jackson, Weatherford, Texas; and while sending in your own name, ask your Liberal friends and acquaintances to do the same.—Independent pulpit.

THE "SCIENCE" OF IMMORTALITY.

BY H. WETTSTEIN.

I.

To the Editors of Freethought:

In passing to the "Scientific Argument" for the existence of the soul, Dr. Anderson, in his review of Du Prel's "Philosophy of the Mystic," considers soulism "as fairly within the territory of its greatest enemy." He deplores the reluctance of science in accepting new ideas, evidently forgetting that instead of the doctrine he champions being entitled to the distinction of modern origin it sprang from the brains of our "enlightened" anthropoid forefathers! And this primitive doctrine, with its congeneric adjunct Godism, he expects science to accept in this latter part of the nineteenth century, which, with all its boasted enlightenment, is an epoch that to future generations will be but the beginning of civilization, sending forth the first faint glimmering of the dawn dispelling the black midnight of man's mental darkness. The offspring of primeval man's first intellectual labor-pains the doctor asks science to accept! But although not aware of the enormity of his request, he must admit that his charge has received the fullest possible consideration. He must admit that, after they were "duly weighed and found wanting," the latter decision was not reached from any predilection to arrive at this result. He cannot deny that if any question be postulated—assuming that ideas begotten of savage brains can be dignified with that term—was ever fostered and "fathered" by science into a full-fledged belief, the doctrine whose final declension he now deplores, is the one. He must confess that with the present advancement of science, the "barbarism" of eternal life cannot longer be consistently sustained. Thousands of more reasonable postulates than this have been rejected, and if scientists now yield to the clamor of advanced thought in rejecting the palpable fallacy of immortality it is certainly not from over-inclination in that direction. Seeing therefore that the evidences against this pre-historically evolved doctrine are constantly accumulating, the doctor's reproaches against science for not coming to the rescue of this dying relic of barbaric ages appear decidedly unwarranted or uncalled for. He takes a too superficial view of the case, as will be seen from the following lamentation: "It is scientific authority which to-day looks on with solemn discontent as the birds float through the air in direct violation of the laws of physics, dynamics, and gravitation. For the same force applied in the same manner and attached to the same proportion of weight when put into a scientific machine, refuses to fly."

Was the doctor really sincere in charging scientists with "solemn discontent" at their inability to construct such a device? What a contracted view of nature, and what an exalted conception of the powers of man he must have. As though any unbiased scientist ever dreamt of arrogating to himself the creative potency of nature! Down upon such presumption and conceit! I say "unbiased," because certain theosophic "scientists" evidently fancy themselves almost on a par with nature in this respect. And the doctor talks as though an artificial device possessing the same proportionate weight and capacity of aerial propulsion as embodied in birds, had ever been constructed. Let him first show when and where a perfect imitation of a bird with all of nature's gifts for flying has been constructed by man before asserting that it would refuse to fly. Does he really fancy that there is a scientist of unwarped judgment and not blinded with vainglorious contemplation of man's "capacity for developing unlimited potentialities," who feels regret at his inability to rival nature in her works?

He continues: "And yet no field is so full of the existence and functioning of a divine soul as that found in the marvelous collection of facts and deductions of design and intelligence therefrom which is the result of scientific inquiry."

What is there marvelous in what it took inquisitive man thousands of years to gather and collate? True, we are now confronted with the fruition of these thousands of years of diligent labor and research, and to superficial minds this is evidence of the existence of a divine soul and of a superiority of intelligence, but which consists of nothing but a capacity to concentrate these gathered facts and arrange them in their proper sequence that correct deductions may be drawn therefrom. And from the capacity of properly weighing facts—nay, weighing them at all, no matter how fallacious the inferences—the immortality of this artificially developed mind-principle is deduced. Volumes have been written, and could be written anew, in refutation of this unwarranted assumption of a "divine soul," unless it be the source of soul which eternally functions in the capacity of the primitive judgment of atoms, recognized by ancient philosophers as their loves and hates, but in which simple capacity to discriminate between congenial and uncongenial particles; or, more correctly speaking, of harmonious and inharmonious modes of motion, lies embodied the potency to generate worlds, as well as the highest forms of life and intelligence. But scientists have failed to discover evidence of a "divine" soul either in man or in nature. As Hugh O. Pentecost, in his lecture, "Why I am not an Agnostic," felicitously expresses himself: "They sweep the skies with their telescopes and declare they find no God, or space for a heaven. They search the human frame with the scalpel and announce that they find no soul," i. e., substance from which "soul" could be evolved. But as by divine soul the doctor probably means a God of nature, or an intelligence governing nature, I ask: Do we not every day behold evidence of the absence of such governing power? Could the frightful calamities occur by which thousands of these "divinely guarded" beings have their lives crushed out of them by the evidently uncontrolled forces of nature, if there were a power to rule them? Would an omniscient designer devise delicate mechanisms, and, when perfected, ruthlessly destroy them, as human organisms are destroyed every day? Would people not regard such an "intelligence" either as a lunatic or as a crank, to express it mildly? Science can trace nature's handiwork in her undesigned formations, but no evidence whatever can she discern that they were deliberately planned.

And why, pray tell me, would an infinite planner keep himself hid like a guilty criminal? Not a shadow of reason can be given why he, or it, would remain concealed if he, or it, existed.

"Playing possum" with inquisitive man—what idiocy! And what idiots to consider a "divine" mind and overruling providence capable of such idiocy of not manifesting itself in times of greatest need.

While the doctor and "yours truly" both admit the existence of an infinite intelligence, our respective concepts of it differ in this respect, that while he invests it with personality and an intelligence superior to that of man, I regard it as of no higher order than the atomic judgment before alluded to, but which embodies the only true principle of immortality!

And from this truism the concept of man's immortality was intuitively evolved. Immortality is therefore a fact which materialists do not deny. That is, the true immortality. Ignorance, with intuition, has evolved a false one. Could anything different have been reasonably expected? Where was perfection ever attained with one bound? It would have been a miracle. So long as this planet will exist, so long will existing states and beliefs be improved upon.

Evolution should teach us a lesson of how to proceed in fathoming the mysteries of the universe. If we want to gain a comprehensive view of it we must descend to its source and gradually work our way up. This deistical dilly-dallying around the top accomplishes nothing. It is like an architect who commences, or would commence, his structure at the roof. If he ignores the foundations, little headway will he ever make. But this is the procedure of deists and soulists; they revel in the contemplation of their fancied superstructures, not caring whether they have any adequate foundations to rest upon. Instead of studying the fountain-head of their being, the source of their life and mind, i. e., the nature of atoms, they dazzle their gaze by constantly looking up into the sky for a creator, which renders them stock-blind when attempting to turn their gaze into the dark recesses of nature's laboratory.

But why worship a "divine mind" that could plan or foresee a Johnstown cataclysm, and exerted not its power to prevent it? A person guilty of such atrocity would have been torn limb from limb by the infuriated populace. Any being capable of warding off such calamities, and allowing them to proceed, is a monster, and reflecting minds have no use for them. Neither has the world at large.

Priests have, though—for their own aggrandizement. But my object is not to show that beings which can precipitate such dreadful calamities are monsters, but that they do not exist. Reason protests against the assumption.

Marengo, Ill., Aug. 18, 1890.

Indispensable.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Please accept $2; forward the indispensable FREETHOUGHT for another year, and oblige a son of Nature.

A. N. SIRES.

Great Falls, Montana.

On the Skyhomish.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Inclosed you will find $1, for which you will send me your paper for six months.

All is well away up here on the Skyhomish river. Our population is one hundred and fifty—three ministers, one hundred Freethinkers, twenty Free Methodists, five Baptists, twenty-two Siwash (Indians), and one Congregationalist; and the Congregationalist has captured the whole crew. Good luck to FREETHOUGHT.

DON W. EVANS.

Sultan City, Wash.

A Letter With a Motto.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Please find inclosed check for $5. Place $1.25 to the credit of Brother Bell when he comes around again (for his Handbook of Freethought sent me by him some time since). The balance place to my credit as a donation for FREETHOUGHT. I wish it was five hundred, or, better, thousand; but times are hard and so forth; all of which you are aware of without any information from me.

My motto: Away with law, politics, and gospel as preached, promulgated, polluted, and prostituted. Yours for Universal Mental Liberty,

San Pasqual, Cal.

B. B. ROCKWOOD.

A Real Life History.

To the Editors of Freethought:

I have just finished reading "My Religious Experience," and am certain that I have found a man; one possessed of keen, logical reasoning and analytical research. I believe it to be a rare sequence for one having such a fund of poetical emotion to free himself from the meshes of orthodox superstition. "My Religious Experience" is a book that you do not wish to put down till you see "how the story turns out," for it is really as entertaining and full of beautiful pathos as a romance. The passage wherein he details army life brings it home to many hearts. Read it and you will find the real life history of an honest man.

Clearwater, Neb.

MARY BAIRD FINCH.

Christian "Arguments" on Exhibition in San Jose.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Mr. F. C. Squire has on exhibition in this city some of the inventions of Christianity; such as the rack with which they pulled honest people to pieces; the guillotine, used for beheading people who were their superiors in all respects; the gibbet or iron basket, for hanging all those who did not agree with them; the pillory, the spiked roller, the wonderful St. Andrews cross—for which six thousand francs were paid by Professor Anson; the thumbscrews, the death wheel, and the stocks, together with many other curiosities; all of which should be seen by every lover of Christ in San Jose. An interesting lecture is given at short intervals, by Mrs. A. Squire, explaining everything on exhibition. Mr. Squire has pitched his tent on the corner of Market and San Fernando streets, opposite St. Joseph's church, and diagonally across Market street is a three-story brick building wherein reside the priests—how many I do not know, but the nest appears to be full—and no doubt the reverend gentlemen will appreciate Mr. Squire's efforts. When the pope of Rome hears of this infidel caper if he don't issue a bull, or a wild Mexican steer, why then I am mistaken, that is all.

L. R. TITUS,

San Jose, Cal.

Cheering.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Inclosed you will find $2.25—$2 to pay for my subscription to FREETHOUGHT, and 25 cents for a copy of "My Religious Experience."

On my return from Portland, Or., I found two or three numbers of FREETHOUGHT awaiting me, and nothing gave me more pleasure than reading its familiar pages. As long as I live, and if the paper lives, shall try and have $2 to spare each year for FREETHOUGHT.

I first met and heard Mr. Putnam two years ago in Portland, Or., and subscribed for FREETHOUGHT. It has become a necessity to me now that it may live and continue its good work long after I am dead, is the earnest wish of

Yours truly,

WM. SLAUSON.

Weedspert, N. Y.

The Short Farmer and Long Hours.

To the Editors of Freethought:

In reply to Mr. Gunther, I will state: I was raised on the farm and spent many hours of my life tilling the soil. I have done a little hiring of help too, and my experience always was that the hired man had to earn more than he got for his labor or I was no better off for having hired him. I also noticed that when my produce went into the market some dealer usually got the profit of our labor.

Perhaps that is one reason why so many farmers' sons leave the farm to those who are willing to work long hours and take short pay. It may be one reason why so many are disgusted with the business.

I do not think a day's work on the farm is worth less than one in the shop. Why should a man work ten to twelve hours on the farm for $1, while a brick mason can get $3.50 to $4 for eight hours? Why shall a miner work in damp, dangerous places—for a mere subsistence—while a common clerk may take life much easier?

I do not see how much more valuable a United States senator is than a good engineer, yet how many of the latter will it take to pay the salary of the former? I am not so simple as to think farmers can adopt the eight hour system under selfish competition. I proposed co-operation as a better method. I do not think it very civilizing to take advantage of people's necessities to enrich ourselves, but that is just what competition does. The co operation I suggest makes that impossible. Hence, I am not forced into either dilemma you declare. No reference I made to Mr. Ingersoll indicated that I thought him always right. I only referred to one letter of his, and a short one at that. I thought then that what he said was true, and still think so.

Yes, our dispositions are dissimilar. And I frankly tell you that I do not "discontentedly look at the flowers in other people's gardens." And sweet as the wayside flower may be to you, I never pass it by unnoticed. If I am as far from the truth in what I have to say as you are in ascribing such a motive to me, I am indeed uncivilized.

It is not in my heart to covet other people's good, or envy them their success. I do not believe in such motives, nor do I teach them. But I do know the competitive system of business has many great wrongs in it that work injustice to the majority of mankind. It is the best invention for bad men to take the advantage of modest worth that exists. We who live it and grow rich under it, accept it, as a matter of course, with easy conscience because we are not much to blame for its existence. But those who feel the effect of its injustice view it differently.

There is something essentially savage in it. Men, under it, do not eat human flesh, exactly, but they work each other to death and live on what is extorted or legally stolen from each other. The extremely selfish and acquisitive grow rich and use their surplus means to coerce more until millions are compelled to pay tribute to a few. Such a system will destroy the best republic ever built, if continued.

My idea of a republic is that form of government which will secure equal rights, privileges, and opportunities to all of its citizens; with a code of laws that will prevent any custom, method, or system from subverting the bill of rights.

Our industrial and financial systems are essentially monarchical. Our liberty-loving ancestors engrafted their republican ideas upon them, and as a result we have great social and financial discontent and injustice.

Sanel, Cal.

J. C. WEYBRIGHT.

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK
your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs of the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parry, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and read, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 523 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

RUPTURE

DR. PIERCE'S MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS
In advertising Dr. PIERCE'S Patent MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS, the assurance is given that we are offering the Best Truss in the World. This Celebrated Appliance has been extensively sold for many years and has Radically Cured thousands of cases of Rupture! This is an Electric Truss (the only successful one ever invented); has no Iron Hoops or Steel Springs about it, and being elastic, can be worn with ease and comfort Night and Day. It's a perfect retainer! For further particulars of Trusses, send 4c. in stamps for Pamphlet No. 1 and REMEMBER that Dr. Pierce's Genuine Electric Trusses contain our Private Signature exactly like that shown at top of this advertisement. Beware of inferior imitations! Address: MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COMPANY, 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,
Hygienic Physician.
Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,
Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.
Hours: 10 to 12 a.m. 25tf

Health and Hygienic Works.

Living for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
Education of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy, $1.
Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.50.
Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Keys to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer, $1.
Ever Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina, Ills. 50.
Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F.R.C.S., 30 cents

A Touch of Nature.

A waif of a boy was eating a stale half loaf on the street corner yesterday with the air of a starveling, when a stray dog came along and crouched at his feet. The hungry look remained in the boy's eyes, but he glanced down at the vagabond dog and said in a friendly way:

"Wot you want? This ain't no bone. Git!"
The dog moved off a little, and again it crouched and looked wistfully at the food.

"Say, do yer want this wuss nor I do?" asked the waif. "Speak, can't yer?"

The dog gave a quick bark, and the boy threw him the rest of the loaf.

"Nuff sed," he remarked, as he watched him eat ravenously; "I aint the feller to see a pard in trouble."

And the boy went one way and the dog he had befriended another, both the better for the encounter.

It Never Happens in America.

At Wuhu, China, a priest was burned to death by order of a higher priest for misconduct toward a woman. He was placed in a large stack of hay saturated with oil.

Prof. W. S. Bell's Lectures in Oregon.

Fox	Sept. 1, 2
John Day	" 4
Prairie City	" 5
Baker City	" 6, 7
Union	" 8
New Bridge	" 10, 11
Summerville	" 12, 13
Heppner	" 15, 16
Dayton	" 20, 21
Rosalia	" 23
Plaza	" 24
Oakdale	" 26
Spokane	" 27
Davenport	" 28, 29

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, 10 Cents.
Address, The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS, 15 cents.

THE MONARCH.

TRADE MARK.

None Genuine Without this Trade Mark on Every Bottle.

PURELY VEGETABLE.
AN INFALLIBLE CURE

FOR
RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, GOUT,

Lumbago, Asthma, Constipation, Sciatica, Dropsy, Malaria, Indigestion, and all Kidney, Liver, and Stomach Troubles.

$1 PER BOTTLE, SIX FOR $5.

C. H. WEBB, Sole Proprietor and Manufacturer, No. 40 O'Farrel Street, San Francisco.

For sale by all druggists. Send for Circulars.

NEVER FAILS. CAUTION—Beware of imitations. Note my trade mark closely

$25.00 REWARD $25.00

For any of the above diseases that C. H. WEBB'S HÆMONY will not cure.

References from People Who Have Used C. H. Webb's Hæmony.

Hon. A. Van R. Paterson, Judge Supreme Court, S. F.
Henry L. Dodge, Esq., Pres. Sather Banking Co S. F.
Captain Ferris, Steamer Apache, San Francisco.
S. M. West, Esq., 1209 Bush street, San Francisco.
Robert Smith, contractor, 1810 Larkin street, S. F.
John Birmingham, Police Officer, 340 18th street, S. F.
James T. Bonefield, Member of Lincoln Post, No. 1.
Residence, 8 Harriet street, San Francisco.
Mrs. W. Gerdes, widow of Ex-Chief Gerdes, San Jose
Fire dept. Residence, Haywards st. Los Angeles.

And I can also refer you to hundreds of others who Have Been Cured by my great remedy HÆMONY.

C. H. Webb's Hæmony, Carefully packed and shipped by Express to all parts of the world. Send money by P. O. Order or through Wells, Fargo & Co.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

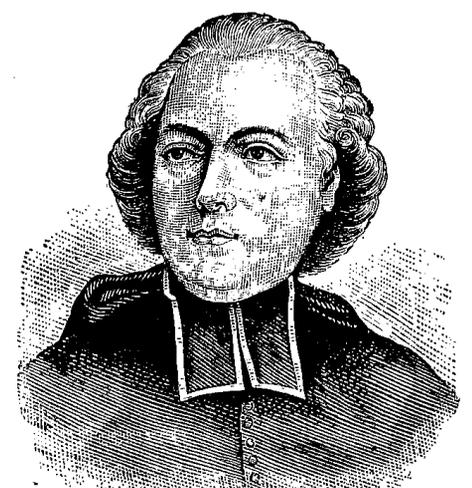

A Thrifty Missionary.

The Rev. Shirley Baker, sent as a missionary to the Tonga Islands, became at length the ruler of the kingdom, but has recently been deposed. The "Chronicle" says: "The deportation of the Rev. Mr. Baker from Tonga ends the career of a South Sea island Bismarck who made the native king a puppet and ruled with an iron hand. Baker began as a modest Methodist missionary, but his rare executive ability soon displayed itself and he was made prime minister by the king. The Wesleyan mission in Tonga was very grasping, and secured large sums of money from the natives in contributions. This coin was not spent on the islands, and no report of its disposition was ever furnished. Naturally the natives objected to this draining away of their resources, and it resulted in strained relations between the king and the mission, and ultimately in the formation of a free church. The missionaries at once jumped to the conclusion that Baker was the cause of their trouble, and they so wrought upon some of the natives who remained faithful that these attacked Baker. He had a narrow escape, but his son and daughter were crippled. Then began a hideous series of reprisals, several natives being executed and others banished, so that finally the British high commissioner decided that the only way to save the island from civil war was to remove Baker. Such is the evolution of Christianity in the South sea; yet it can be said for Baker that he suppressed drunkenness and did much to improve the condition of the people. If he could have extinguished the theological rancor of his old associates he would still be in power."

It is said the king of Tonga was so overjoyed to get rid of the officious missionary that he held a jubilee, forgave all his enemies, and invited his exiled subjects to return.

Superstition in all Ages.

—BY—

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."

339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1, German, cloth, $1. Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

The Humboldt Library

—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
7. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
8. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
12. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
13. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion.
14. Longevity. Prolonging life. John Gardner, M.D.
15. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
16. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
17. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
18. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
19. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kalley Miller.
20. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
21. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
22. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
23. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
24. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
25. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
26. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
27. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
28. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
29. The Study of Words. Richard Chenevix Trench.
30. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R. A. Proctor.
31. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
32. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
33. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
34. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
35. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
36. {Geological Sketches.
37. { Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
38. { Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
39. { Current Discussions in Science. W. M. Williams.
40. { History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
41. { Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
42. { The Dawn of History. C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
43. { The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
44. { The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
45. { Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
46. { The Suu; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
47. { Money and the Mechanism of Exchange. Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
48. { The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
49. { Animal Automatism. Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
50. { The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
51. { The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
52. { Illusions. James Sully.
53. { The Origin of Species. } Two Double Numbers.
54. { Charles Darwin. } 30 cents each.
55. { The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
56. { Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
57. { The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
58. { Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, LL.D.
59. { The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
60. { Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
61. { Technical Education, Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
62. { The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
63. { Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
64. { Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
65. { Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencr.
66. { Archaeology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
67. { The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
68. { Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
69. { The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
70. { Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
71. { Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
72. { Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
73. { The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
74. { The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
75. { Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
76. { Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
77. { The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
78. { The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
79. { The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
80. { Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson.
81. { The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
82. { Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
83. { The Rise of Universities. (double No.) J. S. S. Laurie.
84. { The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T. H. Huxley, G. Alle
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and other
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilso
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ide James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-opet tion. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spenc
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haek
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. All
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Blac
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present. Part II. Tenc
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Ev lution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30
111. The Pleasures of Life, Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controvers Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nin teenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prd T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, V H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applica tions. A. K. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applica tions. Part II. A. K. Wallace. Ill. Double N
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. J. Laim Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part I
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electric Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes an upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustration; Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whymper, Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No., 10c
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lake and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Ritchie. Administra tive Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—
EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,
ABOUT THE
Human system—the habits of men and women causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO
Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.
Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.
OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.
PRICE, $1.50.

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against
LIBERTY,
By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,
Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Company.

PRINTING!

The Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

- Letter-heads,
- Bill-heads,
- Programmes,
- Envelopes,
- Business Cards,
- Postal Cards,
- Tickets,
- Placards,
- Receipts,
- Posters,
- Dodgers,
- Circulars,
- Etc. etc

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

COUNTRY ORDERS SOLICITED.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.
Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS AND TRACTS.

- God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.
- Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.
- Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.
- God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.
- Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.
- Nameless. By Voltairine de Clelyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.
- Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.
- The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.
- Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.
- The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.
OLIVER HINCKLEY - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands. 200 and 207 Sutter St.
N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.

PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; 7 ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60, $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50; fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botches, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.
OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

DR. FELLOWS

he press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,
Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND N J

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles, M. d.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st, S F.

PORTRAITS

[Enlarged and Finished in Pastel and Crayon.]
First-class work at reasonable prices. Orders and Correspondence solicited. Satisfaction guaranteed.
F. C. Baxter & Co., 432 Sutter st., San Francisco.

Standard Scientific Works

Works by Alexander Bain.
English Composition and Rhetoric.....	$1.75
Education as a Science.....	1.75
Works by Charles Darwin.
Origin of Species, 2 vols.....	$4.00
Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....	2.00
Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin, 2 vols.....	4.50
Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....	2.00
Works by J. W. Draper.
History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....	$1.75
Works by Ernst Haeckel.
The History of Creation, 2 vols.....	$5.00
Works by Huxley.
Lay Sermons.....	$1.75
The Advance of Science.....	.25
American Addresses.....	1.25
More Criticisms on Darwin.....	.50
The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....	2.00
Works by John Stewart Mill.
Principles of Political Economy, 2 vols.....	$4.00
On Liberty.....	1.25
Works by Richard A. Proctor.
Other Worlds than Ours.....	$1.75
Our Place among Infinities.....	1.75
Light Science for Leisure Hours.....	1.75
Works by Herbert Spencer.
Studies of Sociology.....	$1.50
First Principles.....	2.00
Principles of Biology, 2 vols.....	4.00
Principles of Psychology, 2 vols.....	4.00
Principles of Sociology, 2 vols.....	4.00
Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....	2.00
Universal Progress.....	2.00
Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....	2.00
Education.....	1.25
Organic Evolution.....	.75
Works by Andrew D. White.
Paper-Money Inflation in France.....	$.50
The Warfare of Science.....	1.00
Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
Body and Mind.....	$1.50
Responsibility in Mental Disease.....	1.50
Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
Handbook of Household Science.....	$1.75
Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....	1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

By Asa Gray.
Darwiniana.....	$2.00
By L. L. McLaughlin.
Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....	$3.50
By C. Marcel.
Study of Languages.....	$1.25
By Lester F. Ward.
Dynamic Sociology, 2 vols.....	$5.00
By Frederick Overman.
A Treatise on Metallurgy.....	$5.00
B. F. G. Fairfield.
Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....	$1.25
By W. B. Carpenter.
Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....	$1.25
By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
Evolution.....	$1.50
By Sir John Lubbock.
Origin of Civilization.....	$5.00
By Charles A. Abbott.
A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....	$1.50
By Garrett P. Serviss.
Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....	$1.50
By Nathan Sheppard.
Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....	$1.50
English as She is Spoke.....	$.30
English as She is Wrote.....	.30
The Distracted Young Preacher.....	.25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

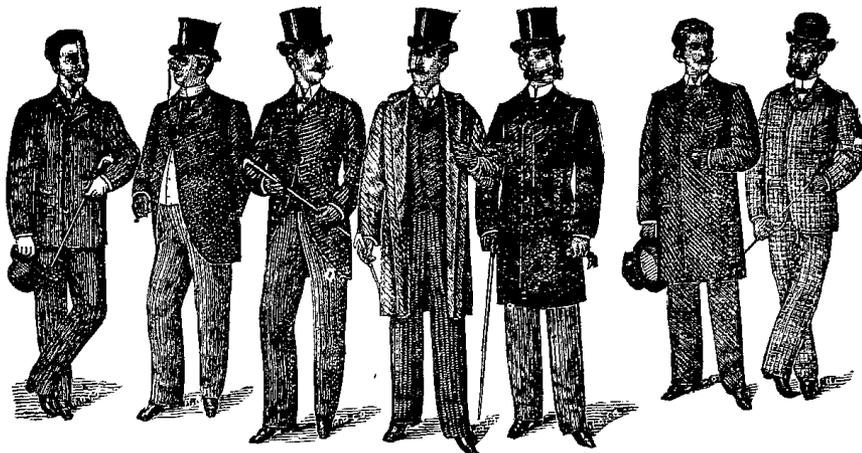

J. A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED, 375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR..... $25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Highly Moral Proceedings.

NEW YORK, August 12.—The sewing school of the Presbyterian church at Natituck, Long Island, has been holding a fair during the past week, and has horrified the church circles by opening a kissing booth, charging twenty-five cents a kiss.

There have been several results of this new church movement. The first is that the fair is a grand success and so much money is pouring in that agitation has begun for erecting a new church building.

The second result is that several engagements in the village are declared off, and there is a good prospect for a batch of divorce suits.

The fair was held on a lawn near the church and a special tent was erected which bore the sign, "Admission five cents. To Kiss the Baby, twenty-five cents." Investigation proved that "baby" was plural, and that its ages ranged from 16 to 19 years. Within half an hour the men had formed in a line which reached, on Monday, the opening night, around the grounds.

Each man, as fast as he left the tent, hastened to secure a place at the other end of the line, so as to get in again. There is now talk of running special trains from New York to the fair. The Methodist preacher, however, has announced that he will denounce this means of raising money for church purposes next Sunday, but the Presbyterian minister says that there is nothing in the Bible that forbids it, and he rather likes it himself.

A Plausible Theory.

Sunday school teacher [in Kentucky]—Johnny, how did the forbidden fruit cause the fall of man?
 Johnny—They made it inter brandy.

[CORA—How meek and lamblike the new minister is!

J. Dora—Yes, and what sheep's eyes he casts at us girls!

14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....	$ 4 0
10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....	2 0
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....	2 75
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00	6 00
10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....	3 00
14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....	4 00
10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....	3 00
14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....	4 50
10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....	5 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....	6 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm " " " Diamond*.....	14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,

Freethought Pub. Co.,
 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....	$1.50
Six Months.....	.75
Three Months.....	.50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth $1 50.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoe maker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater. C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schueneemann-Pott, speaker, 545 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burguan, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st. Rapp & Deberry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.

Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

A HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. E. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

All in the Name of Religion.

For two months Mrs. Maria B. Woodworth, the female evangelist, has been conducting a revival at St. Louis in a big tent capable of sheltering nearly 9000 people. For the past two weeks these meetings have increased in interest and excitement until they have become sensational in the extreme. Mrs. Woodworth is assisted by several singing and praying lieutenants, but she is the central figure and does the exhorting. During the past week there have been nightly from fifty to two hundred and fifty men, women, and children stretched upon their backs on the ground or on the big platform, where they lay in a religious frenzy or in a dead stupor from exhaustion, while a thousand more excited individuals shouted, danced, cried, and sung and swung their arms in the air.

Dr. Adams and Dr. Diller, investigators and authorities on insanity and neurology, both of whom have spent much time and study on the subject of hypnotism, have made an investigation, and after viewing the scenes, questioning Mrs. Woodworth closely, and examining her victims, unhesitatingly say that she is simply an insane woman of great hypnotic power, and that the trance into which she throws her auditors is simply hypnosis. They declare that she is doing great harm to thousands and is creating evils for which there is no cure, and that the state should put a stop to the hideous exhibition and lock the woman up.

When the doctors questioned the lady she gave a history of her life, telling in detail of the most marvelous visions. She claimed to have conversed with God, Christ, and the Trinity, and the devil many times, in fact, to be at the present time on familiar terms with all of them. She also said that she had seen both heaven and hell, and told what they looked like.

She is the same woman who created so much excitement all over the country when in Oakland, Cal., by prophesying a great earthquake and tidal wave that would destroy Oakland and San Francisco. She certainly possesses a marvelous power over the thousands who hear her nightly. Last Sunday afternoon 15,000 people gathered on the river front to witness a baptism conducted by her. Over a hundred persons were baptized, and the scenes were of the wild-est and most sensational character.

Needless Exertion.

"Where are all those people going to, officer?" asked the man from up country late Sunday morning. "To a fire?"

"No, I should say they were trying to get away from one; they're going to church."

IN melodrama the villain threatens that unless the heroine weds him he will foreclose the mortgage he holds on her father's ancestral acres. In real life the father borrows money from a savings bank at 5 per cent and pays off the villain's 6 per cent mortgage.

PAPA (who used a bad word when he tore his pants)—I forgot myself then, Sammy. It was wrong of me to say such a word. Sammy—Oh, you needn't apologize, papa! I often use it myself.

PROFESSION OF FAITH

OF A SAVOYARD VICAR.

—BY—

J. J. ROUSSEAU.

The above volume includes "A Search for Truth," by Ralph Iron (Olive Schreiner). Cloth, 50 cents. Paper, 25 cents. Address The Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTIANITY * * *

—AND—

* * * AGNOSTICISM.

A CONTROVERSY

Consisting of papers by

Prof. Thomas Huxley, R. v. Henry Wace,

The Bishop of Peterborough

W. H. Mallock, Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

Price, 30 cents.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS.

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Francisco

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

Price, 50 c.

Address Freethought, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

S. J. HAMMOND,

WATCHES

WATCHMAKER, $1 AND JEWELER

CLEANED.

1061 Market st., Opp. Junction of Jones and McAllister sts., San Francisco. 5134

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St

San Francisco.

Watches Cleaned

& Warranted, $1

Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry-Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 5124

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 37.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - SEPTEMBER 13, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

I am not yet out of "the land of promise" when I reach Davenport. The glorious fields of harvest stretch about here, as elsewhere in eastern Washington. I arrive on Sunday evening. The streets are crowded. There is the appearance of a gala day. In fact, the "Sabbath" is being violated. A base ball game has just been played, races are in operation, and other things that would make the heart of the clergyman ache; and his righteous soul would vent itself in anger, as it did in the pulpit here, where it was duly announced that no decent lady or gentleman would attend a base ball game on Sunday, which declaration the reverend "public functionary" concluded to retract, seeing that the best people did not see anything wrong in looking upon a display of athletic skill, and all was orderly and in good style. Of course the preachers don't like to have these things going on when they are trying to "show off" the straight and narrow way and induce people to enter therein and forswear the joys of life; but it seems that they can't help themselves, and the ball—base ball and otherwise—rolls on, and the world improves.

I did not find anything but exhilaration in these holiday affairs, and I found a good audience present in the evening, although so many had been the attractions of the day. The minister, I understand, had only four in his sanctuary, and concluded to adjourn "Deo volens." I had an audience of nearly a hundred and did not adjourn.

After the lecture I went with Mr. and Mrs. Ed Ramm to their home, where I always find the very best cheer that can uplift the heart of the wandering pilgrim. Here the pleasant sun arises, and the bright fields expand, and the day rolls on with quietude and delight. I don't feel like work, but simply enjoy the rural surroundings. I lecture again on Monday evening, and this time participate in the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Judge Robinson, who can entertain the traveler with things good for body and mind. The judge introduced me at the lectures. He is a man of remarkable and varied experience; with reminiscences of celebrated generals and politicians with whom he has associated, of a most interesting character, and he can make the hours pass by with genial intercourse. On Tuesday he took me over the town and I had a chance to make the acquaintance of almost all the business men, and to see what kind of a bright and growing place it is. Davenport is on the upward road. Two railroads are now running here. It has a new and fine hotel and elegant brick blocks. It has the spirit of enterprise. A magnificent farming country is about. Forty new binders were sold in this one place this year, and ten new threshing machines, which is a fair indication of how the harvests do multiply in this section of the country. I lectured on Tuesday evening again, and the Freethought campaign closed with promise, and the work seems to have a solid foundation and expanding future here. There are staunch and true Liberals here who will be at the front every time.

Wednesday I took a day off, and spent it with Peter Selde and family, and let dull care go by and took life at its best with social pleasures that refresh for toil. The sunshine mingles with the moonlight as the merry moments glide away.

H. L. Wilson is still on deck, a "captain true," and the good ship forward goes

"O'er the glad waters of the dark blue sea,
Our thoughts as boundless and our souls as free."

Mr. and Mrs. William O. Freese always join the camp-fire, be it in splendid dawn or golden evening; and "the soul goes marching on."

Peter Selde, Jr., Henry, Nelson, Edwin, of the Selde household, give the morning of youth to the pioneer advance.

P. N. Wiis never fails to report. Thomas O'Connor gives the grip of the loyal comrade. Mr. and Mrs. Whittaker came twelve miles each evening, from Harrington, to attend the lectures. This means success to Freethought—it makes work inspiring. John Putnam, like the "old general," isn't afraid of the enemy, and we stand side by side. Geo. Spiva, Carl Simons, Frank Caverno, P. Jenson, S. Nelson—these, and more, make cheer in the Liberal fraternity.

I am up with the sun on Thursday morning and say good-bye to these many friends. The engine goes puffing alongside the homestead of the Seldes, and on this I am borne through sparkling landscapes to Spokane and Colville.

Spokane is growing wonderfully. I have not been here for two years, and hardly recognized the place. The new buildings—hotel, opera house, and business blocks—are magnificent. The falls are resplendent, but they are harnessed to work, and the old-time glory and freedom is not here. The wild scenes and woods are disappearing, and bran-new houses appear. Alas! they spoil the poetry of the view.

Old friends are scattered. I gave no lectures here. I met Boyd, of the "Review," one of the best papers on the coast, and Miller, formerly of Coquille, Coos county, a "rustler" now in this enterprising country. These are all I came across in this brilliant metropolis, which seems to have been re-created since I was here first, and I felt like a stranger in a strange land.

On, up to Colville, eighty-six miles northward of Spokane, through a vast and wooded country just opening to civilization. Colville is a bright little place in a lovely valley that, in appearance, with the hills about it, and forests, reminded me of the place where I was born in "the old granite state." I was met by Wm. Graham, my confrere of two years ago at Waverly and vicinity, where we had jolly times together.

"In the world's broad field of battle,
In the bivouac of life,"

He is just as big and hale and broad-shouldered and ready for work as ever. They call him the "fat Infidel," but there is a good deal more of muscle and brain than "fat," and it is all alive for Freethought. There is as yet no church edifice in this place or in Stevens county, of which Colville is the county-seat, and this is an almost unprecedented honor. I think this is the first county I ever struck where there was no church building. All hail to Stevens county! What a blessed thing it is to get on the frontier and see no steeples, but plenty of good folks. There is less crime, I believe, in this country, according to population, than in any other county in the state, where the sacred edifices point their "aristocratic fingers to the rich man's heaven."

Graham was determined to open the campaign for Freethought, and he did so in his usual vigorous style, and it was a grand success. He didn't really know how many would stand by the flag, but, come to count up, there seemed to be a pretty good majority for Freethought in this precinct. The school house was full on Saturday night. There is a certain religious sect, to which I formerly belonged, the Congregationalist, holding meetings in the school house every Sunday morning and evening until such time as they can build a temple to the Lord. Of course they have the use of the school house by the courtesy of the tax-payers of the place, among whom are many Liberals. But this sect seemed to think that it owned the school-house for the time being, and its use for Sunday night was denied to the Liberal party. It was expected that a little more generosity and justice would be exhibited on the part of our Christian neighbors, and that, having the use of the public building for fifty-two Sundays, morning and evening, they might step down and out with good grace for one evening. However, we did not want any quarrel on our hands, and when it was found that the school-house was not for our use, Meyers's Opera Hall was at once secured, and a large audience was present, more than the school-house could possibly have held, while I understand that not enough were present at the school-house for a religious service. In this case there was a complete checkmate to orthodox bigotry. I lectured again on Monday evening and by this time a champion was found for the Christian faith, in the person of Wm. McDonald, a leading lawyer of Colville, formerly a Christian minister, a professor, and a school-teacher, well informed, and really an able debater, and a gentleman too. I enjoyed my discussion with him very much indeed, and a good spirit was manifested all round. The debate occurred on Tuesday evening, and if I could have stayed it would have been continued a couple of evenings more. The question debated was the following: "Resolved, That Jesus was a divine teacher." Mr. McDonald confined himself mainly to the sentimental side of the question, and did what he could to show off the good qualities of Jesus. I, of course, admitted the good qualities of Jesus, but maintained that they were simply human, and no more supernatural than the good qualities of Thomas Paine, who certainly exhibited as much nobility, grandeur, and goodness as Jesus, while he was not guilty of those mistaken teachings and actions that mar the career of the Galilean. The debate was conducted upon this line, mainly. I stuck to the Bible "clear way through" and found it a pretty good arsenal of attack upon the divine merits of Jesus. My opponent, of course, soared into generalities, and skimmed around the subject with brilliant flights of oratory. The Freethinkers were satisfied with the debate, and want to continue the matter, and I expect that next year the ground will be cleared for a further contest.

So Colville is a shining spot along the pathway of progress. Its pleasant scenes are mingled with delightful companionship.

Maggie Hope Graham, the wife of Wm. Graham, is a well-known contributor to the Truth Seeker, and I hope, also, to FREETHOUGHT. She is staunch in the cause, talented, and brave. All the children, too, are bright allies to Liberalism, with the joy of youth upon which is no darkness of orthodoxy.

R. A. Prouty, now seventy-two years of age, is one of the firmest supporters of Freethought. He is a grand army comrade, now pensioned for his services to his country, and his record is a splendid one. Both he and his wife are devoted to Liberalism, and it was a pleasure, indeed, to greet such noble friends.

J. J. Carscadden, proprietor of the Dominion Hotel, is also a pronounced Liberal. He is on the roll of FREETHOUGHT, and welcomes the Secular Pilgrim with open hand—a generous comrade.

Sam Rosenburg, who was at Ukiah when the kerosene lamp was used as a burning argument for Christianity, is now located here, and is not afraid to be counted. Everyone recognizes him as an honorable and successful business man.

Kirkpatrick is the first practicing lawyer in Colville, and he knows too much law and logic to accept the faith of the fathers. He occupies a leading position.

I was glad to meet Wm. McNeil, of Marcus. He is a Free-thinker from away back, and true as steel.

John Stewart Dick was born in the Highlands of Scotland, with plenty of Presbyterian blood in his veins, but the poetry of Burns is victorious, and he is full of the music of Freethought.

David Smith is one of the "rustlers" of the North Star hotel, which Graham runs on first-class principles and good grub. Smith is a live Freethinker.

Henry Prouty, like his father, is a worker. He puts his shoulder to the wheel every time.

J. P. Kepel, Fred Hoss, John Kleidosty, I. H. Young, E. J. Hammond & Co., Barman, Jas. Dunkin, Oscar Runnels, P. M. Runnels, and others, are representatives of the Liberalism of Colville.

Dr. and Mrs. West, from the far east, formerly with Hugh O. Pentecost of the "Twentieth Century," are now located here. In their pretty home I found the atmosphere of Freethought like the sunshine itself; art and poetry mingled with radical reform.

Mrs. Colonel Linsley and children are in this frontier line of cultivated Liberals. Her husband, Colonel Linsley, is with the surveying party among the Olympics, where interesting discoveries are being made. They were formerly of Salt Lake City.

Mr. Wilber, formerly president of the Liberal League of Eau Claire, Wis., is now living here, and is still for active service.

In this far-away picket line of the army of progress I find comrades from the east and west, a good gathering, the best and brightest of our forces. In no place have I found a more generous reception or more congenial associations.

With good-bye to Graham I take the cars that steam away to Spokane. Like a delightful picture the valley gleams away with fields of grain and grass; with wooded hills sparkling in the afternoon sunshine. I say farewell, but only for twelve months or so. This is too happy a valley to quit forever. S. P. PUTNAM.

RELIGIOUS STATISTICS.

The census shows that the members of the principal religious denominations number at present, 21,757,171. The total gain of all these sects during the past year is 1,089,853. The Roman Catholics have 8,277,039 in 1890 against 7,855,291 in 1889—a gain in that sect alone of 421,848. This is about twice the gain of any other sect, the Methodists standing second, with an increase from 4,723,881 to 4,980,230, or 256,349. The Baptists, nearly equalling the Methodists in number, have gained 213,702 adherents in the past year. There are eighteen sects representing the more important religious denominations, but seventeen of them have gathered in but 658,000 new communicants to the Catholics 421,848, though they have, probably, ten times as many churches and clergymen. The superior gain of the Romish church is to some extent accounted for by immigration, and it is also to be considered that every child born to Catholic parents is reckoned a communicant, but with these left out the church would still show itself to be the most active in proselyting.

There is another thing to be remembered, namely, that statistics of Catholic population are more likely to be accurate than Protestant figures. The Catholic parish is closely organized. It is as different from the Protestant as an army is from a mob. The communicant's name may stay on the books of the Protestant church if he is not heard from for years, while the Catholic is rounded up at the confession box once in a certain maximum length of time, or he is not accorded the benefits of his religion. As a power for any end, political or ecclesiastic, the eight million Catholics in the country are more effective than the thirteen millions of Protestants; and the scattered handful of Freethinkers are at the mercy of both.

The result would have been interesting if Superintendent Porter had taken the pains to discover how many unbelievers or Freethinkers the country contains—not the indifferent, the doubting, or the undecided opposers of superstition. For it must be understood that not all who neglect the sacraments are Freethinkers; if they were, Freethought would have an army of more than forty millions, whereas the case is that there are not forty thousand in our ranks. About the only way to judge whether a person be a genuine Freethinker is to find out if he takes a Liberal paper; and since the combined circulation of all the Liberal papers published in America does not reach forty thousand, it is evident that the country cannot boast that number of so-called Infidels. There are many denominational papers any one of which has more readers than all the Liberal papers added together. Colonel Ingersoll's secretary, I. N. Baker, used to run a Baptist paper in Philadelphia with a circulation near fifty thousand. Mr. Baker went to hear Colonel Ingersoll in order to refute him, but was himself confuted, and is now a complete Freethinker. Yet if he were to start a Freethought paper he would never find a thousand subscribers. So without any census of the Liberal denomination or sect we have to conclude that their numbers are small. This is no reflection upon Freethinkers, but upon those who are not Freethinkers, because the Freethinkers are right while the others are wrong. Truth is the most unpopular character in the world. Even Christians who teach what is true according to the Bible make no headway, as witness the Seventh Day Adventists, who adopt the scriptural Sabbath, and who are not only among the smallest of sects, but are losing ground; in 1889 they had 100,712 adherents; in 1890, 58,742.

The religious statistics are given by the different denominations, and are not taken by the enumerators from individual members of churches. We do not believe there are twenty-one millions of church-members in the United States, nor half that number. The Catholic population is exaggerated, and so are the Methodist and Baptist; but all together they have nearly a hundred thousand preachers and priests, and eighty thousand churches, chapels, and missions.

There is one consolation. The handful of Freethinkers are molding the intelligent opinion of the world. Religion governs trade and politics, but as Colonel Ingersoll has said, the orthodox brow bears the stamp of intellectual inferiority.

THE EMPIRE OF GOD.

There is, says Jean Meslier, a vast empire governed by a monarch, whose conduct does but confound the minds of his subjects. He desires to be known, loved, respected, and obeyed, but he never shows himself; everything tends to make uncertain the notions which we are able to form about him. The people subjected to his power have only such ideas of the character and the laws of their invisible sovereign as his ministers give them; these suit, however, because they themselves have no idea of their master, for his ways are impenetrable, and his views and his qualities are totally incomprehensible; moreover, his ministers disagree among themselves in regard to the orders which they pretend emanated from the sovereign whose organs they claim to be; they announce them diversely in each province of the empire; they discredit and treat each other as impostors and liars; the decrees and ordinances which they promulgate are obscure; they are enigmas, made not to be understood or divined by the subjects for whose instruction they were intended. The laws of the invisible monarch need interpreters, but those who explain them are always quarreling among themselves about the true way of understanding them; more than this, they do not agree among themselves; all which they relate of their hidden prince is but a tissue of contradictions, scarcely a single word that is not contradicted at once. He is called supremely good, nevertheless not a person but complains of his decrees. He is supposed to be infinitely wise, and in his administration everything seems contrary to reason and good sense. They boast of his justice, and the best of his subjects are the least favored. We are assured that he sees everything, yet his presence remedies nothing. It is said that he is the friend of order, and everything in his universe is in a state of confusion and disorder; all is created by him, yet events rarely happen according to his projects. He foresees everything, but his foresight prevents nothing. He is impatient if any offend him; at the same time he puts every one in the way of offending him. His knowledge is admired in the perfection of his works, but his works are full of imperfections, and of little permanence. He is continually occupied in creating and destroying, then repairing what he has done, never appearing to be satisfied with his work. In all his enterprises he seeks but his own glory, but he does not succeed in being glorified. He works but for the good of his subjects, and most of them lack the necessities of life. Those whom he seeks to favor are generally those who are the least satisfied with their fate; we see them all continually revolting against a master whose greatness they admire, whose wisdom they extol, whose goodness they worship, and whose justice they fear, revering orders which they never follow. This empire is the world; its monarch is God; his ministers are the priests; their subjects are men.

AS TO PUNISHMENT FOR MURDER.

The question of discontinuing or continuing the penalty of death as a punishment for murder has been brought up for general discussion by the bungling method used in the taking off of Kemmler, and an Eastern paper publishes the opinions of several prominent persons on the subject.

The Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, a rather Liberal clergyman preaching in Beecher's old church, believes that capital punishment, is out of place in a highly-civilized community; but Dr. George H. Houghton of the "Little Church Around the Corner," declares that "he who sheds man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed." Anthony Comstock of course believes in the death penalty, and thinks that more men should be hung, and oftener. Dwight L. Moody, the evangelist, strongly supports the scaffold, and will listen to no proposition to abolish it. Mrs. Belva Lockwood, with a woman's heart, desires that execution should be effected in some painless manner. Judge Barrett, who has doubtless sentenced many men to death, denounces the abolition of capital punishment as a monstrous idea. The Rev. Talmage, rather strangely, has no decided convictions. He has always believed in the death penalty, but finds his opinions relaxing.

All these utterances are to be taken for what they are worth. They express the views of conservative men, who never entertain opinions in advance of popular sentiment; but there are a great many progressive people who think that the old Mosaic law of blood for blood has outlived its age, which was pre-eminently a brutal one, and that the imprisonment of a murderer for life is more in consonance with the civilization of this century. One thing is certain, namely, that severity of punishment has never abolished crime. In early days the English law hanged men for picking pockets. Yet it is on record that the crowds which attended such executions had their pockets picked as numerous as though they had been attending a fair. Anthony Comstock believes that if the death penalty were abolished mankind would at once give themselves up to killing one another. He also believes that except for his law against contraceptics, fornication would become a universal practice among men and women; and his opinion is worth as much on the one subject as on the other. A few hundred years ago he would have protested against abolishing the death penalty for unbelief in Christianity.

If all who took life were hanged, the penalty might act as a greater deterrent than it now does, though there is no reason to believe that it would do away with murder altogether. A universal recognition of every man, woman, and child's natural right to life is the only remedy. While nations kill men in war; individuals will do killing on their own account. While John Doe may kill Richard Roe because Doe's wife prefers Roe's society to that of her husband, murders will be frequent.

Above all, while the doctrine is taught that the murderer may leap from the scaffold to paradise, from a halter to a harp, there will be plenty of men to take that route. It is the boast of religion that it robs death of its sting and the grave of its victory; and the murderer goes to the gallows, like a martyr to the stake, "sustained and soothed by an unflinching trust." He is leaving a world full of grief for one where trouble is unknown. From the time he is sentenced to the moment the trap falls he is attended by the consolations of religions. Sentimental women who, except for his crime, would not speak to him on the street or admit him to their houses, bring him flowers and luxuries. Clergymen who have previously taken no interest in his welfare now express a constant solicitude. The press reports his utterances as oracular. He gets attention and notoriety according to the degree of brutality in the murder he has committed, and he has achieved a distinction which he could have reached by no other method. He knows that his pain will be but momentary, and far less acute, probably, than that which accompanies the pulling of a tooth; and after this instant of discomfort—glory and the society of angels forever.

That kind of capital punishment is never going to prevent murders. It is more like rewarding a long and misspent life. The most effectual punishment to be imagined is imprisonment until death unlocks the door.

SPURGEON, the great London preacher, in commenting last Sunday upon the presence of a number of clergymen at a theatrical performance, said:

"The Christian church of the present day plays the harlot beyond any church in any age. No amusements are too vile for her. Her pastors have set their mark of approval on the labors of play actors. To this have we come at last, where we never came before, not in Rome's darkest hour. If Christians are not indignant the Lord have mercy upon them."

The Rev. Dr. Parker, another London preacher, being interviewed on the same subject, declared that the pulpit is dying of cowardice. "Suppose," he said, "there are two thousand Congregational preachers in England, it would be a great mercy if eighteen hundred of them never preached again." If the London clergy continue to make this kind of remarks about one another, there will be little left for the Freethinkers to say.

A GENERATION ago, when California held its first Admission Day celebration, the "little brown man," the "China Boy," was in the parade. In the last celebration the Chinaman did not appear, except on the sidewalk, where he was at the mercy of anyone who wanted his place. But there was a more dangerous element still in the procession. There was the "Y. M. I.," the members of a Catholic organization. Perhaps in another generation the citizens of California will discover that in excluding the Chinese and including the hordes of Rome they made a mistake worse than that of admitting the Chinaman forty years ago.

THE Ping King Tong Society and the Chee Kong Tong Society are two religious Chinese organizations existing in that part of San Francisco which is called Chinatown. Last Sunday morning the Ping King Tongs were conducting open-air worship when they were attacked by the Chee Kong Tongs, who extinguished their sacred fires and disturbed their meeting generally. A fight ensued, revolvers and knives were drawn, clubs swung, and shots fired, so that except for their color and dress the contending parties could scarcely have been distinguished from two opposing Christian sects settling a religious dispute.

THE Single Tax Convention at New York last week spent much of its time discussing the question whether women should be admitted as members of the National Single Tax League then organized. William Lloyd Garrison, Jr., deprecated any discrimination on account of sex, but he was opposed by other members. The dispatches do not state how the question was settled, but it is understood that Single Taxers as a general thing favor human equality.

It is reported that Pope Leo is obliged to keep his private apartments under lock and key when he is absent from them, because visitors are in the habit of bribing his attendants to purloin articles for relics. As the thieves are good Catholics, his holiness does not charge this scandal to the prevalence of Infidelity, or the machinations of the Italian government, which are the source of most of his alleged woes.

SAN FRANCISCO has an ordinance requiring the consent of twelve property owners on a block, where it is proposed to sell liquor, before a license can be granted, and Judge Sawyer has declared the ordinance to be unconstitutional. No doubt Judge Sawyer is right. It would be pretty difficult to frame any kind of a liquor law that would not be opposed to the constitution.

FREETHOUGHT extends thanks to those of its subscribers who have promptly answered its circular asking them to renew. Our only cause for regret is that more have not responded. A Free-thinker who will not pay for his paper might just about as well belong to the church, as in that case he at least would not be an expense to the cause of Liberalism.

WOMEN are justified in demanding political equality with men, but their lack of voting power is slight loss to them. The male citizen often uses his ballot as a means to vote away his own liberty, a thing which disfranchised woman is now incapable of doing.

MOSES HARMAN is out of prison, his counsel having secured his release on a writ of error, and there will be a new trial of the case in November. Mr. Harman was released August 30, seventeen weeks after his incarceration.

FRIENDS desiring the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Textbook" may obtain it at this office. If they wish it sent by mail they should inclose twenty-five cents for postage.

THE Liberals of San Francisco may have a lecture from John E. Remsburg this or next month if they will make the preliminary arrangements.

OBSERVATIONS.

The Admission Day proceedings were an overwhelming success. As early as Sunday one man from the country reached this office and renewed his subscription, and on Monday another paid up for two years.

There were also some demonstrations outside our place, one pleasing feature being a parade of some fifteen thousand persons. I judge that the whole town was in it, as I saw in the procession nearly everybody that I had previously met, as also many not personally known to me.

Religious and literary exercises were held at the Grand Opera House, where a clergyman gowned like an Episcopalian priest led the audience in the Lord's Prayer, and then made an eloquent invocation addressed to somebody not present. I am not sure that the employment of a Protestant priest instead of a Catholic one has anything to commend it. I protested against the Catholic priest at our last Fourth of July celebration, but when a member of the literary committee explained the matter to me I withdrew my objection. The member of the committee said: "All the boys were in favor of having a dominie, and wanted that old woodenhead Stebbins. I said, 'No sir, by God. If we are going to have any religious mummery on this occasion, let's have the genuine thing. Let's go the whole hog and get a regular pot-bellied Catholic priest.' And they had to give in." But to return to the literary exercises. The president of the day, Mr. Miller, observed that "from every eminence the auspicious bunting utters its voice in eloquent unison with the general scene, and all citizens have caught the inspiration of the hour and are here to honor the cause we espouse, for it is a just cause, a noble cause, a love for our state and our native land. Yet, my friends, vast as is our number here to-day, immense as is the array with all its gorgeousness, commanding as is the glitter and splendor of the spectacle, and beautiful as is the moral which underlies the scene, it but faintly displays the magnitude of the offering which our united homage this day offers to the loving God for having given to us this glorious California." I have here selected the best that Mr. Miller said in order not to do him injustice, but it sounds a trifle like flapdoodle. Nevertheless they had some oratory, and by the great horn spoon, it was a woman who furnished it. A native daughter, Mrs. Baker, said:

"California, it is thy day we celebrate! California, our royal mother and our queen, she was the vision of Cortez and the dream of Ponce de Leon, and the powers of the world sought her. Russia saw her riches; England counted her as won; Spain stamped her with the revered and ineffaceable marks of her fervent religion; Mexico clasped her and rested; but Columbia, proud Mistress of the Free, sent her flag westward, and the glad land saw the beauteous ensign and opened her thrilling heart to the dream of her slumbering ages."

That is the kind of sentiment to make men and women stand up and cheer.

Mr. Boland, Grand Orator of the Native Sons of the Golden West, delivered a historical address; Mayor Pond and Governor Waterman contributed valuable remarks, and distinguished singers made good music.

Old residents affirm that San Francisco never witnessed so great a display of all that is gorgeous as she has just seen on the fortieth anniversary of her admission into the Union. This thought will soothe many a brow that aches from too much joy.

The patriotism of San Francisco is under suspicion. The houses and business places are decorated with flags bearing as a device a grizzly bear, a star, and the legend, "California Republic." I understand that the adjutant-general or some other official has been asked to suppress these flags as treasonable, but the petitioned party does not respond. A member of Pacific Labor Union No. 1 and a local Grand Army post inquired in my hearing the other day, "What do you think of this community, anyhow? Here's the Stars and Stripes and the American Eagle left out, and a mangy bear stuck up in their place. General Grant's picture nowhere, and a likeness of that rank secessionist Winn everywhere. Old Glory is good enough for me. Forever float that standard sheet! Where breathes the foe but falls before us, with freedom's soil beneath our feet, and freedom's banner streaming o'er us."

I could not share this patriot's feelings altogether. I confess to as much love for America as for any other place. But I once observed a motto at a Paine celebration which read, "The World is my Country;" the sentiment struck me as broad, comprehensive, and cosmopolitan, and since then I have looked with complacency upon any flag that might chance to be fluttering in the breeze, from the Stars and Stripes down to that green affliction suggestive of Ireland and the pope. I have, however, one favored standard, and the name thereof will be found at the top of every page of this paper. It is FREETHOUGHT.

Mr. Ulysses Tanner, who lives at Cannon Falls, Goodhue county, Minnesota, is a candidate for school superintendent of that county, and in a circular presents his name for the suffrages of his fellow-citizens. He has sent me one of his circulars, which is the most candidly written document I have ever read. Mr. Tanner states that in his opinion what is commonly called education is a humbug; that to appoint public officers to perform a function that should rest wholly with the individual is one of the relics of state religion. It seems absurd to Mr. Tanner that a man who has neither children nor education himself should be taxed to pay for the education of other people and other people's children. It seems to him like vicarious atonement. Having thus stated his views, Mr. Tanner asks to be appointed county superintendent of schools, not because the office is necessary, or because he is competent to fill it, but because it is a sinecure—all pay and no work—and because as a citizen he is as justly entitled to it as anybody else. He has been paying taxes right along for other men's benefit; he has put more money into the public fund than he ever drew out, and he thinks it is about time for him to have his turn at getting a salary.

As I said at the start, Mr. Tanner's circular is a model of candor; and I believe that if all political aspirants would state their claims as fairly, the citizen would be able to vote much more intelligently than at present.

The Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge says in the "North American Review:" "If any crime is more deserving of severe punishment or more dangerous to the public weal than a crime against the ballot, it has not yet been made generally known in this country." If this dearth of information really exists, I am happy to be able to supply knowledge. In the first place I would offer the proposition that more crimes are committed with the ballot than against it, and that the acts of men honestly elected are often as corrupt as those of men dishonestly chosen. Crime against the ballot must consist of a vote illegally cast, a vote not counted, a vote illegally rejected, or the bribing of a citizen to vote some other way than according to his natural inclination. For a man to vote who is not qualified to do so by law is clearly wrong, but the gravity of the offense is not equal to that of taking human life. For instance, I arrived in San Francisco six weeks too late to vote at the last election, and if I had voted, according to Mr. Lodge, I should have committed the most dangerous of crimes against the "public weal," whatever that might have the absurdity to be. In some states I could have voted after a six months' residence, so that California, by rejecting my ballot after a residence of ten and one half months, performed an act which in these other states would have been a crime against the ballot. Yet the public weal emits no squeal. I doubt if it suffers. I see no evidence that it was hungry for my suffrage. If the public weal lives on votes, why doesn't it gather in the votes of the thousands of major women residents of the state, the most of whom are as well qualified to vote as I am?

To the question of the criminality of buying votes there are evidently two sides when looked at from a common-sense point of view. No voter when casting a ballot according to his best judgment is certain that he is doing the right thing, or that any good will accrue to him from the act. If he is intelligent and thoughtful he will know that whichever way he votes he will benefit no one but the candidate. He is like the young man who applied to a philosopher (I believe the philosopher was Stephen Pearl Andrews), and inquired of the sage if it was best for him to marry; and the philosopher replied, "Whether you do or not you will regret it." In the midst of the voter's uncertainty somebody comes along and offers two dollars and fifty cents for his vote, and if he takes it he can congratulate himself that he is one of the favored few to whom the ballot has brought something worth having.

This isn't good morality, but it is just as good morality as the raising of the ordinary and legitimate campaign fund.

Speaking of crimes against the ballot, they do not begin to equal the crimes of the ballot, for the ballot makes our legislators, and our legislators, backed by the voters who elected them, enact the unjust laws against which we kick.

The sacredness of the ballot is a thing which the politicians seek to impress upon the people and which they themselves continually violate.

I had a brief interview with Mayor Pond last week. He opened the conversation by inquiring, "Do you solemnly swear that you will truthfully answer the questions about to be put to you?" and I replied that I did. The questions which followed related to my qualifications as a judge of election; and it appearing that I had registered, paid taxes, and could speak and write the English language with more or less facility, I was labeled with the mystic characters "O. K." and accepted.

Mayor Pond did not inquire my politics, in which, as he is candidate for governor on the Demopublican or Republicratif ticket, he may have felt some interest; and I did not ask him how he stood on the religious question. Either inquiry, I have since learned, would have been out of place at the time and under the circumstances. I cannot conceal that Mayor Pond impressed me as a person of intelligence. He has a long head, made to appear more so by a lofty brow at the top and chin whiskers lower down. He looks a trifle solemn, though, and I should not be surprised to learn that he is the deacon of some prosperous church. He has promised if elected to pay his own fare to Sacramento, which makes him a dangerous political opponent.

They are more particular in choosing vote-counters here than farther East. It is necessary for the judge or inspector to reside in the election district where he serves. He must be on the tax assessor's roll; he must appear personally before the mayor, the city auditor, the tax collector, the registrar, and the city and county attorney, and answer satisfactorily any question that either of them feels inclined to ask. The method appears to me an improvement on that employed in New York, where about one hundred candidates are huddled in a pen, sworn, and released before they have time to get their hats off. I find myself here in distinguished company, a fellow-judge of elections being Mr. Jim Corbett, the eminent exponent of pugilism.

"If there is a God," says Hugh O. Pentecost, "why doesn't he do something?" I have never preached the gospel or studied the Bible professionally, as Mr. Pentecost has, but I understand that all the hairs of our heads are numbered, and that the descent of a sparrow is a phenomenon which never escapes the observation of the deity. It strikes me that a God with these details to attend to has enough to do while eight hours constitute a day's work. A man who would ask the almighty to do more than this should be looked after by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Ghosts.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

An explosion of dynamite in the Northern Pacific yards at Spokane Falls on Saturday last killed fifteen men and seriously wounded eight. The disaster was caused by the premature explosion of a blast.—A mortgage of $30,000,000 has been placed on the Great Northern Railway and the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway. The object of the mortgage is to raise money to extend the road from Assinaboine, Montana, to Puget sound. The money is advanced by English capitalists, and the mortgage is recorded at Seattle.—There were 106 deaths in San Francisco last week against 83 for the corresponding week of 1889.—The Rev. I. D. Driver, of Oregon, closed his announced course of lectures in this city last Sunday night by discoursing on the teachings of Ingersoll. Mr. Driver's labors here have not attracted marked attention.—It is reported that the Ironmolders' Union will send some fifty of their members East, where the demand for molders is brisk. The strike is not as yet adjusted.—Bacon & Co., printers, have been brought to terms by the Typographical Union, and will hereafter run a "fair" office. The firm is one of the largest in the city, and has been conspicuous as a non-union establishment.—The regents of the University of California have accepted an offer from T. A. Edison to equip the Lick observatory with a complete electric lighting outfit.—R. F. del Valle, the Democratic nominee for lieutenant-governor of California, was married last week. He is a Roman Catholic in religion.—The San Francisco Cremation Society has decided to sell its real estate on California street and Laurel place and buy a lot, better situated, on which it will erect a crematory. Max Popper, M. Greenblatt, F. Diamant, M. Levy, Fr. Schueneman-Pott, Dr. Regensberger, W. Schroeder, G. C. Davis, and Otto Norman are the directors.

The state of Vermont contains a smaller population, according to the present census, than it had ten years ago. The number of inhabitants is now 322,350, a decrease of 31.—White Caps last week so brutally beat and maltreated J. Z. Smith, a preacher who lives in Reno, Kan., that his life is despaired of. When found in the woods, where he had been taken and whipped, he was unable to speak or move. Smith is 65 years of age, and the only objection the White Caps had to him was that he proposed marriage to a widow in the neighborhood.—A new political party has been born at St. Louis. It is called the National Reform party, and its platform embraces about twenty-four planks, including the abolition of national banks, prohibition, government control of railroads, uniform marriage laws, a protest against alien ownership of lands, tariff reform, regulation of corporations, and restriction of pauper immigration.—A young Baltimore man named Saunders has developed a remarkably good case of hysteria, which is usually supposed to be confined to the female sex. He attended a revival meeting, got religion, and went into convulsions. At times he imagines himself a dog, and again a cat. His physicians warn his friends against permitting him to attend any more religious gatherings.

A so-called Social Science Congress opened at Liege, Belgium, Sept. 7. It was made up of Roman Catholics from all parts of the world, and its first act was to send a telegram to the pope of Rome and to the king of Belgium declaring the devotion of the members.—Wm. O'Brien, the Irish editor and agitator, advises Irish tenants not to pay any more rent until their families are provided for. He declares that with famine staring them in the face the Irishmen's first duty is toward themselves and not foreign landlords.—The cholera is spreading in Spain. Filth is the cause of the epidemic, and faith is the cure adopted. As a result a majority of the victims die.—Tolstoi has written another novel. It is called "From Darkness to Sunlight," and its hero, a man of the world, is landed, after many sins, in a communistic Christian colony.—The pope is working on an encyclical letter dealing with the labor problem. He approves the course of the German emperor.

INGERSOLL ON TOLSTOI.

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll has a long article in the current number of the North American Review on the "Kreutzer Sonata," and its author, from which the following extracts are made:

"Count Tolstoi is a man of genius. He is acquainted with Russian life from the highest to the lowest, that is to say, from the worst to the best. He knows the vices of the rich and the virtues of the poor. He is a Christian, a real believer in the Old and New Testaments, and an honest follower of the Peasant of Palestine.

"Shocked by the cruelties and unspeakable horrors of war, he became a non-resistant, and avowed that he would not defend his own body from insult and outrage. In this he followed the command of his master, 'Resist not evil.' He passed not simply from war to peace, but from one extreme to the other, and advocated a doctrine that would leave the base element of mankind the rulers of the world. This was and is an error of that great and tender soul.

"Following parts of the New Testament, he regards love as essentially impure. He seems really to think that there is love superior to human love and that the love of a man for a woman or a woman for a man is, after all, a kind of gluttony—a degradation—and that is better to love God than woman. To him there seems to be no purity in love, because men are influenced by forms.

"Count Tolstoi in 'Kreutzer Sonata' has drawn with a free hand one of the vilest and basest of men for his hero. If it be a true picture of wedded life in Russia no wonder Count Tolstoi looks forward with pleasure to the annihilation of the human race. The story of 'The Kreutzer Sonata' seems to have been written for the purpose of showing that a woman is at fault, that she has no right to be attractive, no right to be beautiful, and that she is morally responsible for the contour of her throat, for the pose of her body, for her red lips, and the dimples in her cheeks. The opposite of this doctrine is nearer true.

"It would be far better to hold people responsible for their ugliness than for their beauty. It may be true, the soul or the mind in some wondrous way fashions the body, and that to that extent every individual is responsible for his looks. It may be that a man or a woman thinking high thoughts will give necessarily a nobility to the expression and a beauty to the outline, but it is not true that the sins of a man can be laid justly at the feet of woman.

"Women are better than men. They have greater responsibilities.

"But the worst thing in 'The Kreutzer Sonata' is the declaration that a husband can by force compel the wife to love and obey him. Love is not a child of fear; it is not the result of force. No one can love on compulsion. Even Jehovah found it was impossible to compel the Jews to love him. He issued a command to that effect, coupled with threats of pain and death, but his chosen people failed to respond.

"Count Tolstoi would establish slavery in every house; he would make every husband a tyrant and every wife a trembling serf. No wonder he regarded such a marriage as a failure. This is the destruction of home life, the crucifixion of love. Those who are truly married are neither masters nor servants. Obedience is lost in the desire for happiness of each. Love neither commands nor obeys.

"A curious thing is that the orthodox world insists that all men and women should obey the injunctions of Christ, that they should take him as supreme in all things and follow his teachings. This is preached from countless pulpits and has been for many centuries, and yet a man who not follow the savior, who insists that he will not resist evil, who sells what he has and gives to the poor, who deserts his wife and children for the love of God, is regarded as insane.

"Tolstoi, on most subjects, appears to be in accord with the founders of Christianity, with the apostles, with the writers of the New Testament and with the fathers of the church, and a Christian teacher of the Sabbath school decides, in the capacity of postmaster-general, that 'The Kreutzer Sonata' is unfit to be carried in the mails.

"Although I disagree with nearly every sentence in this book, and regard the story as brutal and absurd and the view of life presented as cruel, vile, and false, yet I recognize the right of Count Tolstoi to express his opinions on all subjects and the right of the men and women of America to read for themselves."

WHAT IS GOD ?

The Westminster Confession of Faith makes an Atheistic declaration by saying that God is a spirit, without body, parts, or passions. God is infinite and exists in conjunction with the universe of matter. The universe comprises his physical parts in inorganic and organic matter. God is a positive reality. He is everything in the affirmative. The negative is the absence of God physically and God spiritually. In the absence of God nothing could be sustained. In the absence of the universe God could not exist, because he could have no sphere of existence or no employment.

Evil is the negative of good, not an excess of good. To the extent that a person is pure and good, God dwells with him; but to the extent that he is vile and corrupt, God is absent from him. When we walk with God, we walk in the light of science, integrity, and humanity. Righteousness is worthy of emulation; its basis is in the golden rule, because God is infinite and matter eternal. We existed in matter before we were chemically and physically organized, and it is a fact in nature that we shall continue to exist in other forms and under the conditions of transformation. Death is a change of one form of life to another. Were it possible to annihilate an atom of matter it would be possible to destroy a part of God. Were it possible to destroy a law of nature it would be possible to eradicate an attribute of deity. God works by ways and means. He is organic, inorganic, physical, and spiritual. The universe of matter demonstrates him physically. The science of chemistry proves his spirituality. The little dust atoms afloat in the air serve as nuclei for the little raindrops, while the myriads of priests who have been enemies to God and the rights of man have served as the nucleus for the hordes of ignorance, superstition, and crime. Let light spring up in dark places, for "our God is a consuming fire." Those who accept the truth in nature, in science, in humanity accept it in God and comprise his peculiar people. L. C. HILL.

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION,

R. B. WESTBROOK, PRESIDENT.

F. C. MENDE, TREASURER. IDA C. CRADDOCK, COR. SEC'Y.
BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. Westbrook 1707 Oxford st., Philadelphia.
E. B. Foote, Jr. 120 Lexington ave., New York.
T. B. Wakeman 93 Nassau st., New York.
J. E. Remsburg Oak Mills, Kansas.
Juliet H. Severance Milwaukee, Wisconsin.
F. C. Mende 1814 Green st., Philadelphia.
Ida C. Craddock, S. E. corner of Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL CONGRESS.

The Fourteenth Annual Congress of the American Secular Union has been appointed by the board of directors to meet at Portsmouth, Ohio, on Friday evening, October 31, 1890, and to continue its sessions on the Saturday and Sunday following.

The meetings will be held in the Grand Opera House, corner of Sixth and Court streets, and the orchestra of the establishment has been engaged for the occasion. Due notice will be given of the proposed reduction in railroad, steamboat, and hotel fares.

Portsmouth is situated on the Ohio river, one hundred miles east of Cincinnati and one hundred miles south of Columbus, and has extensive and convenient railway connections with the whole country. It is a port of foreign entry, and is distinguished for its numerous and magnificent manufactories. It has a population exceeding fifteen thousand (15,000), has twenty churches, the Ohio Military Academy, and a splendid system of graded schools. The Ohio Valley Fair is held there annually; and several English and German papers, daily and weekly, are published in the city.

The members and friends of the American Secular Union are sure of a hearty welcome, not only from our enterprising local auxiliary, but also from the citizens at large.

The object of the American Secular Union, as is well known, is to secure the total separation of church and state in fact and in form, to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood be established, protected, and perpetuated. While we unite on what is commonly known as the Nine Demands of Secularism, we propose to emphasize the following at the coming Congress:

1. The equitable taxation of church property in common with other property.
2. The total discontinuance of religious instruction and worship in the public schools, and especially the reading of any Bible.
3. The repeal and prevention of all laws enforcing the observance of Sunday as a religious institution, rather than an economic one, justified by physiological and secular reasons.
4. The cessation of all appropriations of the public funds for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character.

The American Secular Union is strictly unsectarian and non-partisan in both religion and politics, but will use any and all honorable means to secure its objects as above stated. It is not either publicly or privately committed to the advancement of any system of religious belief or disbelief, but heartily welcomes all persons, of whatever faith, to its membership, on the basis of "no union of church and state." The word "secular" is here used in the broadest sense, as applied to the state, and not to any system of religion or philosophy.

To discuss these questions in an orderly and friendly manner, and to devise ways and means to promote these objects, let us come together at this Congress, as Freethinkers, Spiritualists, Unitarians, Universalists, Free Religionists, Quakers, Progressive Jews, and Liberal Christians, and, laying aside our peculiar views on religious questions, unite as American citizens on the one broad platform of no union of church and state, and the complete administration of our secular government on purely secular principles.

The National Reform Association, having for its object the establishment of Christianity as the religion of the state by constitutional enactment; the American Sabbath Union, working for the enforcement, by legislation, of the Jewish and Puritanic

Sabbath on our free citizens; the Women's Caristian Temperance Union, indorsing the platforms and policy of both these organizations; the churches, both Catholic and Protestant, insisting through their ecclesiastical bodies upon the complete exemption of church property from just taxation, as well as the appropriation of public money for religious schools and other sectarian institutions; all these, and many other, which might be mentioned, are imperilling our constitutional liberties. Every true Liberal and patriot, whether man or woman, should feel called upon to aid in organizing an effective opposition to these nefarious schemes.

Due notice will be given of the selection of eminent speakers from all parts of the United States and Canada, and a free platform will be given to all persons who may have a word to say for pure state secularization. All, without exception, are welcome to this Congress in the wide-a-woke little city in the valley of the beautiful Ohio.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.
Philadelphia, Sept. 1, 1890. Attest: IDA C. CRADDOCK, Sec'y.

PROSPECTS FOR THE PORTLAND CONVENTION.

The prospects for a very large convention are exceedingly good. There is nothing in the way, and everything in favor of it. I will soon be through corresponding with speakers and will then give their names. Miss Katie Kehm, "the eloquent little German girl of Iowa," will open on Saturday morning. Hon. R. Winsor, president of the Washington Union, will speak on the legal rights of the people, which will form a basis or platform for future work. Professor Dawes will deal out a pleasant dose of pure logic. Mattie P. Krekel will convert sinners by the hundreds, as she is doing all over the state. Samuel P. Putnam will come down from "bunch grass" on poetic wings. Hon. C. J. Curtis, of Astoria, the eloquent young lawyer of Oregon, will strike the great popular heart of the people in "Equitable Taxation." Abigail Scott Dunaway, the bold champion of the rights of one-half of the human race, will take her text from the Declaration of Independence, "Governments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed." Next week I will give the remainder of our speakers.

Below are three letters which you will be pleased to read. I will now make a request of each Liberal who reads FREETHOUGHT: Write me a letter giving some information or making some suggestion concerning the convention.

C. BEAL.
Portland, Or.

The president of the Oregon State Secular Union has received the following letters:

FROM PARKER PILLSBURY.

CONCORD, N. H., August 29, 1890.

MR. C. BEAL—My Dear Sir: Your note of invitation came in my absence, and so the answer has been delayed; which to me is less a matter of regret than is the fact that only a negative answer is possible.

Your Western distances are too immense for my physical or financial resources. And besides in a few days I enter my eighty-second year, which is surely reason enough for my withdrawal from all public observation, especially from participation in deliberative assemblies and conventions for the most important discussions.

And such your approaching congress must surely be. The times are auspicious on the one hand, but eminently portentous, ominous, on the other; auspicious because the people are awakening in a degree to the condition of our national affairs in state and church; and ominous because full examination may disclose evils too great for our present statesmanship or priesthoods to successfully encounter, or the patience of the people longer to endure.

The race problem subdivides into the African, the Indian, and the Chinese. The woman suffrage question stands by itself, but towers up higher than our tallest mountains. The temperance enterprise has now taken fast hold of politics and religion both, with a strength irresistible, while the labor and capital agitation are already shaking both hemispheres to their foundations.

Now which of all these is the greater question in importance may not be easy to answer. But all can see that neither our civil nor ecclesiastical forces, of themselves, are exerting any effective influence upon them. The church exists and acts mainly in self-defense. The government is rapidly passing into the hands of heavy monopolies and millionaires, and is mainly conducted by them and for their exclusive benefit. At the average wages paid, the average wage-worker may live comfortably and support decently his family. In comfort only, never in luxury: while to become wealthy in such condition is as impossible as to create duplicates of all the planets in the solar system. Our average working men and women are not drunkards, nor addicted to gross vices of any kind, and only live at all by practicing economies and virtues unknown to the very wealthy in the congress and government, or outside of them.

Not even the highest salaries ever paid to our highest officials could or would alone create them into the plutocrats so many of them seem easily to become. And the masses of the working people are beginning to ask and are determined to know how it is done. And they will know how it is done, possibly at too great a cost!

But pardon so much of an old man's talk to so little purpose. I would greatly love to be witness to your proceedings as you take in hand the mighty problems that affect alone the present life and world, not to speak one word of the great unknown, in which, after all, like Thomas Paine, I still have hope.

Wishing great success to your coming congress, and grand results to follow, I am, my dear sir, very gratefully as well as respectfully yours,
PARKER PILLSBURY.

FROM HUGH O. PENTECOST.

DEAR MR. BEAL: When I wrote to Mr Frey about the possibility of my going to Oregon I was intending to travel throughout the West this fall. That intention I have since abandoned. It would therefore be impossible to address your Union in October, as I shall resume my Sunday meetings here.

When I spoke of money it was with no expectation of being paid for speaking, but only of having my expenses covered from some point relatively near Portland.

Hoping to see you at some future time, and with cordial sentiments of fraternity in labor, I am very sincerely yours,
HUGH O. PENTECOST.

FROM ANNIE BESANT.

LONDON, N. W., Aug. 11, 1890.

DEAR MR. BEAL: I am very sensible of the honor done me by the invitation to the Secular Convention. But it is not possible for me to leave Europe: I am closely tied by my work.

With all good wishes for your success,
ANNIE BESANT.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS.

Scappoose, Or.....	Sept. 18, 19	New Era, Or.....	Sept. 26
Carleton, Or.....	Sept. 20, 21	Molalla, Or.....	Sept. 27, 28
Canby, Or.....	Sept. 22	Summerville, Or (debate)	Oct. 1-6
Walla Walla, Wash.....	Oct. 8, 9	Butteville, Or.....	Sept. 23, 24
Portland Convention, Oct.	11, 12, 13	Wilsonville, Or.....	Sept. 25

WISE SAYINGS BY INGERSOLL.

From the North American Review for September.

Love is the perfume of the heart; it is not subject to the will of husbands, or kings, or God.

It is not true that the sins of man can be laid justly at the feet of woman. Women are better than men; they have greater responsibilities; they bear even the burdens of joy. This is the real reason why their faults are considered greater.

Tolstoi would change the entire order of human development. As a matter of fact, the savage who adorns himself or herself with strings of shells, or with feathers, has taken the first step towards civilization. The tattooed is somewhat in advance of the unfrescoed.

Men and women desire each other and this desire is a condition of civilization, progress, and happiness, and of everything of real value. But there is this profound difference in the sexes: in man this desire is the foundation of love, while in woman love is the foundation of this desire.

Again I say that women are better than men; their hearts are more unreservedly given; in the web of their lives sorrow is inextricably woven with the greatest joys; self-sacrifice is a part of their nature, and at the behest of love and maternity they walk willingly and joyously down to the very gates of death.

Of all passions that can take possession of the heart or brain, jealousy is the worst. For many generations the chemists sought for the secret by which all metals could be changed to gold, and through which the basest could become the best. Jealousy seeks exactly the opposite. It endeavors to transmute the very gold of love into the dross of shame and crime.

To sell all that you have and give to the poor is not a panacea for poverty. The man of wealth should help the poor man to help himself. Men cannot receive without giving some consideration, and if they have not labor or property to give, they give their manhood, their self-respect. Besides, if all should obey this injunction: "Sell what thou hast and give to the poor," who would buy?

According to Christianity, as it really is and really was, the Christian should have no home in this world—at least none until the earth has been purified by fire. His affections should be given to God: not to wife and children, not to friends or country. He is here but for a time on a journey, waiting for the summons. This life is a kind of dock running out into the sea of eternity, on which he waits for transportation.

We cannot cure the evils of our day and time by a return to savagery. It is not necessary to become ignorant to increase our happiness. The highway of civilization leads to the light. The time will come when the human race will be truly enlightened, when labor will receive its due reward, when the last institution begotten of ignorance and savagery will disappear. The time will come when the whole world will say that the love of man for woman, of woman for man, of mother for child, is the highest, the noblest, the purest, of which the heart is capable.

Only a little while ago an article appeared in one of the magazines in which all women who did not dress according to the provincial prudery of the writer were denounced as impure. Millions of refined and virtuous wives and mothers were described as dripping with pollution because they enjoyed dancing and were so well-formed that they were not obliged to cover their arms and throats to avoid the pity of their associates. And yet the article itself is far more indelicate than any dance or any dress, or even lack of dress. What a curious opinion dried apples have of fruit upon the tree!

Those who labor have a right to live. They have a right to what they earn. He who works has a right to home and fire-side and to the comforts of life. Those who waste the spring, the summer, and the autumn of their lives must bear the winter when it comes. Many of our institutions are absurdly unjust. Giving the land to the few, making tenants of the many, is the worst possible form of socialism—of paternal government. In most of the nations of our day the idlers and non-producers are either beggars or aristocrats, paupers or princes, and the great middle laboring class support them both. Rags and robes have a liking for each other. Beggars and kings are in accord; they are all parasites, living on the same blood, stealing the same labor—one by beggary, the other by force.

Love, human love, love of men and women, love of mothers, fathers, and babes, is the perpetual and beneficent force. Not the love of phantoms, the love that builds cathedrals and dungeons, that trembles and prays, that kneels and curses; but the real love, the love that felled the forests, navigated the seas, subdued the earth, explored continents, built countless homes, and founded nations—the love that kindled the creative flame and wrought the miracles of art, that gave us all there is of music, from the cradle-song that gives to infancy its smiling sleep to the great symphony that bears the soul away with wings of fire—the real love, mother of every virtue and of every joy.

HAS CHRISTIANITY BENEFITED WOMAN?

BY PROF. GEO. H. DAWES.

As the Bible is the foundation of the Christian religion, it will be necessary to briefly examine the contents of this holy book, and ascertain its attitude towards woman—whether or not its teachings, when carried into practical life, would tend to raise woman to a social, intellectual, or political equal with man; then to compare the condition of women in the ancient pagan civilizations with her condition in countries that are and have been pre-eminently Christian. If, then, we find that the Bible is opposed to the intellectual and political equality of the sexes; that the teachings of the Bible tend rather to subjugate and degrade woman than elevate her; and that Christianity contains no principle, nor has never established any principle that tends to promote woman's enfranchisement or political equality with man, it will then be necessary to offer some suggestions as to what we believe has been the cause of the present elevation of the female character, and the movement for woman's political equality with man.

For centuries the church has opposed woman's social and political equality with man, and the Bible has been quoted in the defense of this position. But recently the church has discovered that the Bible is really in favor of woman suffrage, and that a mistake has been made in opposing woman's enfranchisement. The Bible is a wonderful book. Its statements can be made to fit any case in any emergency. The language of this book, like most church creeds, is so wonderfully elastic that it can be drawn out or pushed up to fit the opinions of any age. For hundreds of years the Bible was the fortress and defense of slavery, but when anti-slavery principles became popular the Bible was suddenly found to be an anti-slavery work from Genesis to Revelations. The minister of "God's word" used to justify the use of wine and strong drink by passages from "holy writ," but times have so changed that the Bible now condemns the use of liquors, and the Prohibition party actually find their platform in "God's holy book." Likewise, anathemas from pulpit and press were heaped upon those who first advocated woman's enfranchisement, and the brilliant opinions of St. Paul were quoted against the arguments in favor of the equality of the sexes. But now, the movement having become popular, the Bible is really in favor of woman suffrage. The only real object the church has in advocating woman suffrage is with the hope of fastening onto the Constitution of the United States a religious amendment. Woman's education and training has been such that she is much more religious than man, and by taking advantages of woman's prejudices the church hopes to force her doctrines upon this country by constitutional authority.

I do not wish to be understood as opposing woman suffrage, but rather as advocating it. I have no more right or desire to disfranchise woman because she might differ from me in opinions than I have to disfranchise those men who might differ from me. If the right to vote is an inherent right, where, when, and how did one half of the human race inherit that right, and therefore inherit the right to rule over the other half, and this weaker half not possess this inherent right of self-government? If all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, how is it, as woman is one of the governed, that she should have no voice in making those laws by which she must be governed?

Throughout the entire Bible we find woman treated with that inferiority characteristic of all barbarous people. She is treated as a being for no other purpose than to gratify the sensual appetite of man, and as man's physical slave. In the second chapter of Genesis, in the narration of her creation, she is forgotten until it is learned that Adam can find no "helpmeet" among the animals that are made to pass before him. And in connection with this legend of Eden's sin and curse, woman is considered as having caused all the crime and suffering of the world; and this cursed dogma is the central idea around which many minor doctrines have clustered, that for many centuries have been the cause of woman's degradation in Jewish and Christian countries. The writers of the Bible treated women as property—creatures to be bought and sold, bartered for, or given away like so many cattle. The female servant belonged to her master, who held her in concubinage, as in the case of all the patriarchs. That women were bought and sold is amply sustained by such incidents as in the twenty-ninth chapter of Genesis, where Jacob agrees with his uncle Laban to work seven years for Rachel; but, according to the customs of the country, when the seven years were ended, Laban required Jacob to take Leah, the elder daughter, and work seven more years for Rachel. Thus Jacob's two wives represent the price of fourteen years' labor.

In the decalogue, i. e., the ten commandments, woman is placed in the same catalogue with other property. "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's" (Ex. xx, 17). And in chapter xxi of the same book, verses 7 and 8, we find these words: "And if a man sell his daughter to be a maid-servant, she shall not go out as the men-servants do. If she please not her master who hath betrothed her to himself, then shall he let her be redeemed. To sell her unto a strange nation he shall have no power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her."

Here we have the selling of one's own daughter to be a wife, or a concubine, or a handmaid sanctioned by the scriptures: and if she please not her master he is to let her be redeemed. A man may buy a maid, rob her of her honor, and, if he is not satisfied with his bargain, her father may redeem her. Are these the teachings that are intended to purify and elevate the character of an uncivilized people? Is this an example that would influence the stronger sex to regard with affection and respect the weaker sex?

If there is anything that tends to brutalize man and degrade woman, it is the cursed system of polygamy. Yet nowhere in the Bible is polygamy condemned, but in many instances it is actually encouraged. The Bible characters that are taken as models of righteousness were polygamists. We read in Genesis xxvi, 5, that God blessed Isaac, and gives this reason for it: "Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws." Yet Abraham kept concubines, and was cruel enough to turn his handmaid Hagar and her child into the wilderness to starve. Clearly, then, God is not displeased with the system of a plurality of wives, for he plainly said that Abraham obeyed his voice, kept his commandments, his statutes, and his laws.

David also walked in his ways, kept his commandments, and was a man "after God's own heart" and yet had a score of wives. It is often said that God punished David for his polygamy, but this is not true. God never inflicted punishment or gave one word of reproof for the practice of polygamy. God reproved David, not because he had more than one wife, but because of his crime against Uriah. When God reproved David for his crime, he says by the mouth of Nathan the prophet: "And I gave thee thy master's house, and thy master's wives into thy bosom, and gave thee the house of Israel and of Judah, and if that had been too little I would moreover have given thee such and such things."

To be Continued.

SANCTIFIED ARTS OF MONEY-GETTING.

From Dr. McGlynn's recent Lecture in San Francisco.

Some of you may remember how, some years ago, there was an alliance, offensive and defensive, between certain clergymen of the Catholic church and the infamous Tammany ring, under the management of him who was so notorious under the name Boss Tweed. The one object of the Tammany ring was to secure the favor of the Catholic clergymen, in order that, by their influence, the Tammany ring might be maintained in power, to continue its stealings. This was at the time when the leaders of Tammany were robbing the public treasury of New York of moneys to the amount of twenty millions of dollars. It was a matter of life and death to them to have their mayor re-elected, and there was an actual bargain entered into between certain Catholic clergymen (including the archbishop of New York), and Tammany that the Tammany ring would see to it that the legislature of the state of New York should appropriate public moneys for the maintenance of their private parochial schools.

The bargain was sealed at last by an interview of the archbishop and the members of the ring. The bargain was kept on both sides. The clergymen went so far as to name for re-election from their different districts men already notoriously guilty of horrible crimes. The ring kept faith with the clergy, and by trick and fraud the legislature passed a measure appropriating to the parochial schools somewhere between two and three hundred thousand dollars a year, to be paid by the people of New York.

The moment this contract was discovered, the whole state of New York began to ring with indignation. Indignant mass meetings were held in our principal cities. The Catholic church, the Catholic faith, the Catholic people, were submitted to an obloquy in this country such as they had never heard before. For a year after the discovery of the treason, Harper's Weekly continued to publish the caricatures of Mr. Thomas Nast, representing monks and priests and nuns and bishops, in no complimentary shape, stealing the public treasure, that was being handed over to them by Tweed, Sweeney, Connor, and the rest of the ring. All the priests were represented with the coarsest of features; bishops were represented in the guise of creeping, crawling monsters, coming with vehement haired to the destruction of liberty. And over the public schools of our nation floated the flags of the pope and Ireland in brotherly union, conquerors of American independence.

And when this storm was raging, and the Catholic church was very despondent and dejected, I had the melancholy satisfaction of saying to my very good friends in the church, "I told you so; I told you this would come."

Some little while before these scandals culminated—before this alliance offensive and defensive—ministers complained very often to me that they were sick and tired of the means employed to raise the money necessary for the support of their private schools. Picnics and charity fairs, at which the principal attraction was the raffling of some old horse, and where the principal source of profit consisted in the sale of intoxicating liquors—occasionally the old-horse raffles being announced from the pulpit, with an intimation that the animal possessed peculiar and invaluable properties—were ceasing to be remunerative. They were beginning to be sick and tired of these sanctified arts of raising money.

THE "SCIENCE" OF IMMORTALITY.

BY H. WETTSTEIN.

II.

Dr. Anderson next presents the following argument:

"As intelligence can only be the creation of and transmitted by intelligence, one sees at once how immense must be the waste of energy manifesting as intellect if the process of evolution has to be begun anew with each new babe born on earth to be again cut short by death when perhaps at its highest evolutionary activity unless that energy is carried forward from personality to personality by means of the repeated reincarnation of the higher ego."

A formidable argument indeed, and in its premises correct, if not perverted, for I have already shown that developed intelligence is the creation of atomic intelligence, or of the very lowest form or germ of judgment, but the conclusion he draws therefrom that the process of evolution has to be begun anew at the birth and death of every human being is fallacious; first, because he leaves out of consideration the law of heredity which transmits (normally) to every organism the condition or intellectual plane attained by its predecessors; and, second, because the results of intellectual evolution are preserved and through education imparted to every new-born babe. A higher ego is therefore not at all necessary to guard against the process of evolution being cut short by death; and as for "waste of energy," a scientist derides the very idea.

In one postulate I fully agree with him, even though old-time Materialists are slow in recognizing its truth. It is the premise before alluded to, concerning the transmission of intelligence, expressed in these words:

"For intelligence to supervene upon intelligent matter under the play of blind force demands as great an effort of the imagination, aided by 'faith' too, as the exploded theory of creation out of nothing." What grand words these to come from a Theosophist. The doctor has all the essential ingredients for a first-class modern Materialist in him. He sees the truth of the universe and the mystery of the origin of developed intellect as plain as day, but after starting out from such sound premises he suddenly "shoots off at a tangent," alighting in the quagmire of ancient superstitions. In his "religious argument" the following noteworthy passage occurs: "As human life is the type of all, so in the childhood of our individualization as human beings we were helped by the perfected humanities of former earths."

Analyzed, the following distinct ingredients can be eliminated from this proposition: First, it affirms my former position that the results of evolution are preserved and imparted to every succeeding generation, although not to the extent of transmitting them from the humanities of former earths, or through the supernatural process of reincarnation. For if he admits that our race has been helped by the perfections of former planetary developments he cannot deny their transmission from parent to offspring. Second, it vitiates his previous inference that there must be a waste of energy if the process of evolution has to be begun anew with every new-born babe (which no one asserts, and least of all, Materialists), for his admission that such transmission does take place precludes loss of energy. Third, I emphatically deny that our individualization as human beings was ever assisted by the perfected humanities of former worlds, each one being entirely independent of the other in this regard, the process of evolution commencing on each one with its inception from a nebulous mist, and terminating with its final decay. And lastly, it suggests to us the startling inquiry, What has become of the souls of the perfected humanities of former earths, and, collaterally, of those of the lower organisms, animal and vegetable, to which spiritists concede the same continuity of life as to the highest organisms, by virtue of all having a protoplasmic base or an incentive principle so precisely alike that the strongest chemical tests have failed to disclose any difference in the germ of man, reptile, or plant? In view of which fact, how can any physicist deny that if our race is immortal the sentient life of every organism ever evolved in space must be immortal also?

Where, then, I ask the doctor or any scientific believer in immortality, are the souls previously evolved from the infinite number of worlds that have preceded us?

The doctor admits that humanities of former earths existed. Now, if he is consistent in his belief that all humanities are endowed with immortality, let him answer the above question, and also whether he really believes that the necessary room for the infinite number of souls of former planets could be found in the limited or circumscribed interstellar spaces.

In conclusion, I would call his attention to the following consideration, which I also regard as absolute proof of the non-existence of soul or "higher egos." This proof is contained in the fact of the unconscious states into which we may be thrown by various means, I regarding it as self-evident that if we had an immortal principle or indestructible soul within us our consciousness would not be subject to temporary extinction. While our lower ego or personality is prostrated in seeming death and our senses are suspended, the doctor says "man's consciousness functions on an interior and higher plane" (!) and further that "this higher or true ego is untouched by the changes of state we term birth and death and transmits its acquired wisdom and intelligence from body to body by means of its reincarnation." (I revert here to his scientific arguments.) None of these dogmatic asseverations, it is noticeable, are supported by logical deduction, but their fallacy is made apparent by considering that if our higher ego or soul functions on an interior or higher plane while our senses are dormant it could not be virtually annihilated during their suspension, but would transmit its intelligence obtained through the perception of the scenes transpiring around its prostrate "lower ego" to the latter upon its resuscitation, memory, "soul," or mind being intimately related, if not identical. In other words, the higher ego while functioning in its alleged higher capacity of guardian of the lower ego would perceive what the latter's suspended senses fail to discern, so that when it recovers its consciousness, the higher ego, being "untouched" by what caused the prostration of the lower ego, would communicate the result of its perceptions to the latter's mind, thus continuing the individual's consciousness during the latter's temporary prostration of body and mind. How can a higher ego or soul function during such prostration when the resuscitated individual cannot remember a particle of such functioning, his mind or soul having been for the time being absolutely destroyed? Instead, therefore, of the higher ego being untouched by this annihilation of the lower ego's mind or senses, there is no evidence whatever to warrant the assumption that the higher responds to the physical stimuli of the efforts made to arouse both. It does so when it "gets a good ready," that is, when it pleases the physical body to resume its functions, and not before, showing that the "soul" depends on the body. That the higher ego is as much affected by the prostration as the lower is shown by the fact that the interval of suspended animation, during which the higher ego is claimed to alone retain its consciousness, is a dead blank to the individual at the restoration of his normal faculties, proving beyond all reasonable doubt that no such higher consciousness exists, no transmission of intelligence from this higher source to the personality of the lower ego having taken place. And a higher ego or soul that can be thus rendered unconscious and practically extinguished is no "soul" at all. It would be folly, therefore, to invest mind, which can be utterly annihilated during the lifetime of a human being, even, with a capacity to come to life again if the life of the individual is entirely crushed out of him! As well may the doctor say that a comparatively mild blow will kill a man, for, as far as his mind or "higher ego" is concerned, it is practically dead; but if you make the blow so severe that death actually ensues, then this annihilated soul will come to life again! Can any greater folly be conceived of?

As for the lamentation contained in the doctor's concluding paragraph that Materialistic science has "robbed" humanity of its belief in a soul and the "promise" of a future existence, I would ask him of what value is a belief if shown to be fallacious? Is persistence in error not the basest self-deception? Would he sacrifice the invaluable gem of truth for a vain conceit? Is unvarnished truth not preferable to a glittering falsehood? Do honest thinkers not aspire to the attainment of truth, be it what it may? Is truth not the goddess they passionately adore, and beside which all vanities of the world pale into insignificance? If, therefore, Materialistic science has "robbed," i. e., emancipated, humanity from a loathsome relic of barbaric ages, has it not given it the glorious gem of truth instead? And of what validity are "promises" of a future life if abstracted from a book of fables and myths? Let me assure him that Materialists glory in their emancipation from mental thralldom; that they would not exchange their disbelief in the excrescences of ignorance and superstition for all the wealth and emoluments mankind can bestow; that they are perfectly content with this life, realizing that it is the only one nature can vouchsafe to them. And why not be satisfied with this life? When our existence terminates at death, are we any worse off than though we had never seen the light of day? Should we not therefore be thankful for the existence we received instead of unreasonably demanding the eternal continuance of the lease of life nature has graciously bestowed upon us?

Marengo, Ill.

A Protest.

To the Editors of Freethought:

"The shortest way to settle the marriage question is to abolish legal ties. Then if people unhappily mated continued to live together in misery they would do so upon their own responsibility and have no one to blame but themselves.—Editorial Observations, FREETHOUGHT, Aug. 30.

Now then, when you have abolished those legal ties what guarantee, what security, is left for the maintenance of innocent children and helpless woman, if husband and father is a brute and concludes to sever the bonds of wedlock because he has met a younger, handsomer woman than the wife, who now has lost her youth and beauty, and perhaps the cheerfulness of earlier years, as a natural consequence of the cares which the rearing of children impose, let alone the sorrows of sickness and death in the family? On the other hand, where is the fostering care to be found, if for any neglect, fancied or real, a mother may desert husband and children ad. lib., all earnings, and the rightful inheritance of the children, to be squandered in debauchery? What, I ask, think you would become of society if this free-love doctrine—for such it is—were to be carried into universal practice? The abolishment of legal marriage ties would lead to the abandonment of purity of life and rectitude of conduct—virtues upon which so much stress is laid by Rationalists. Such a doctrine could only be advocated by men and women not fit to live in civilized society; by old bachelors, or perhaps married people without children, and cranks of all kinds in general. It would take away the foundation of that temple which all good Freethinkers labor to erect to the worship of that adorable trinity: father, mother, and child. Divorce is sometimes a necessary evil, but let us pause there—pause before we get there—remembering to bear and forbear. Least of all should Freethought papers put forth a doctrine so much at variance with our boasted allegiance to the virtues of fidelity and purity. Nay, friend Macdonald, whatever the private sentiments of some Freethinkers may be, when our accepted organ voices the vagaries of libertines and free-lovers its columns become unfit reading for our wives and daughters, and all just and upright Freethinkers must hang their heads in shame. H. L. HÆRKE.

Oakland, Cal.

Labor.

To the Editors of Freethought:

The date of my first copy of FREETHOUGHT is August 16, so as to what has been said before I know nothing. Being an ardent advocate of the labor cause, my attention is attracted to a letter in that issue of your paper by Frank M. Coburn, mentioned editorially, in which he says:

"In regard to foreigners doing many kinds of work that you would not like to do, there are other people who would be glad of the opportunity to do it, as you can find out by going along the water front of your city any working day at seven o'clock in the morning. You will there see men who would do any kind of honest labor if they had the chance. In fact, this country is flooded with laboring men."

It is not my purpose to criticize, but rather to make some suggestions for our free, unbiased thought. It is not to be wondered at that, at first thought, we would make things costly and labor dear in order to benefit the poor, and especially the laboring man. But after a little careful thought shall we continue so to act? Is it not a fact that if in nature everything was produced and at hand to satisfy our every need we should all be wealthy? Is it not because the man who has money can have his wants supplied without labor that we count him wealthy? We are all wealthy as to the air we breathe; surely no one would think to better our condition by making air difficult to obtain and labor expensive in producing it. Shall we not conclude, after a little thought, that the nearer we can approach to getting what we all need, for nothing, the nearer we shall be to being wealthy?

I feel quite sure that if instead of seeking to make it difficult to supply our needs, and to make labor dear, we turned our attention to the fact that we do "see men who would do any kind of honest labor if they had a chance," and to inquiring why they have not the chance, we would the sooner learn the cause of so much poverty, suffering, and want. Why is "this country," or any other, "flooded with laboring men;" men seeking employment; men desiring to produce wealth by applying their labor to the natural opportunities? Is there not work enough for all? If so, somebody must be holding from those who would work, the opportunities to which they would apply their labor. At a glance we can see that a few millionaires are holding from labor these opportunities of employment, and that while they do not themselves labor, they gain immense wealth, those who do labor and produce all the wealth remaining poor. It is evident that this is all wrong; and we shall not better the condition of mankind by further depressing labor. Under just conditions those who labor would be wealthy, and those who do not labor would be poor.

A. A. ORCUTT,

Rutland, Vt.

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK
In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 828 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

LIFE RENEWER

Wm. B. G. Pierce & Co.

NONE GENUINE WITHOUT THIS SIGNATURE.

DR. PIERCE'S GALVANIC CHAIN BELT.

is guaranteed to be the latest improved and only perfect Body-Battery now in use. The electricity from it can be instantly felt by the Wearer. This celebrated Instrument will cure, without medicine; Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Diseases of the Liver or Kidneys, Lame Back, Female Weakness, General Debility, Spinal Disease, Sexual Weakness, Impotency, Etc. Suspensory for men free with every Belt. N. B. The Electricity goes directly to all Weak Parts and restores them to Health and Vigorous Strength. For particulars call or send 4 cts. in stamps for sealed Pamphlet No. 2. Address MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COMPANY, 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal. If troubled with Hemorrhoids or Piles, send stamp for Pamphlet No. 3.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,
Hygienic Physician.
Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,
Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.
HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m. 25tf

Health and Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy, $1.
Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.50.
Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer, $1.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M.A. Ciccolina, Ills. 50.
Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F.R.C.S. 30 cents

To California the Beautiful.
JOAQUIN MILLER'S ADMISSION DAY POEM.
Thou favored, fruitful, faultless Fair!
Thou golden land! Thou lion land!
Behold thy beauty and compare
Thy Native Daughters where they stand—
More grandly fair than golden trees
That grace thine own Hesperides!
Behold thy stately Daughters crowned in gold,
In virgin gold; and virtues manifold.
My land, thou hast the lion's strength!
The strength to help but not to harm.
My land that hath the tiger's length,
The tawny tiger's length of arm—
The arm that helps and ever helps,
Behold thy splendid comely whelps!
Behold their loyal legion; and behold
Their sterling truth, as thine own sterling gold.
Thy Native Sons! Baptized in tears,
And blood were they. By burning plain
There fell ten thousand Pioneers,
And silent fell; nor fell in vain.
The plow-share followed where they led;
And cities blossomed where they bled.
Their bivouac fires lit the doubtful fates;
And lo! their gravestones mark the bounds of States.
Behold their harvest fields! Behold
Their wondrous city by the sea!
The wolf-reared Tiber town of old
Knew not such might and majesty:
The might of right, the matchless might
Of peace-born battle for the right:
The upward march of right, the sounding song
Of progress thundering through the walls of wrong.
—The Examiner.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED
CURES
Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung
DISEASES
By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen.
Positive cure for Cancer.
26t37 Room 84, Flood B'ldg.

Crimes Against Criminals.
By R. G. INGERSOLL.
Price, 10 Cents.
Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS, 15 cents.

THE MONARCH.

TRADE MARK.

None Genuine Without this Trade Mark on Every Bottle.

PURELY VEGETABLE.
AN INFALLIBLE CURE
—FOR—
RHUMATISM, NURALGIA, GOUT,
Lumbago, Asthma, Constipation, Sciatica,
Dropsy, Malaria, Indigestion, and all
Kidney, Liver, and Stomach
Troubles.

$1 PER BOTTLE, SIX FOR $5.
C.H. WEBB, Sole Proprietor and
Manufacturer, No. 40
O'Farrel Street, San Francisco.
For sale by all druggists. Send for Circulars.
NEVER FAILS CAUTION—Beware of imitations. Note my trade mark closely

$25.00 REWARD $25.00
For any of the above diseases that C. H. WEBB'S
HÆMONY will not cure.
References from People Who Have Used C. H. Webb's Hæmony.

Hon. A. Van R. Paterson, Judge Supreme Court, S. F.
Henry L. Dodge, Esq., Pres. Sather Banking Co S. F.
Captain Ferris, Steamer Apache, San Francisco.
S. M. West, Esq., 1209 Bush street, San Francisco
Robert Smith, contractor, 1810 Larkin street, S. F.
John Birmingham, Police Officer, 340 18th street, S. F.
James T. Bonefield, Member of Lincoln Post, No. 1.
Residence, 8 Harriet street, San Francisco.
Mrs. W. Gerdes, widow of Ex-Chief Gerdes, San Jose
Fire dept. Residence, Haywards st. Los Angeles.

And I can also refer you to hundreds of others who Have Been Cured by my great remedy
HÆMONY.

C. H. Webb's Hæmony. Carefully packed and shipped by Express to all parts of the world.
Send money by P. O. Order or through Wells,
Fargo & Co.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Four teenth street, New York.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
 FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
 838 Howard St., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

A HAND-BOOK
OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

Price, 50 c. Address Freethought,
 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS AND TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.

Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.

God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.

Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.

Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.

Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.

The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.

Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.

The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.
 OLIVER HUNCKLEY - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.
 N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.
 PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50 fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botchers, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

DR. FELLOWS

the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N. J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph.D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
 FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
 PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills

414 and 416 Clay St., S. F.

PORTRAITS

[Enlarged and Finished in Pastel and Crayon.]

First-class work at reasonable prices. Orders and Correspondence solicited. Satisfaction guaranteed.
 F. C. Baxter & Co., 432 Sutter St., San Francisco.

Standard Scientific Works

- Works by Alexander Bain.
 English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75
- Works by Charles Darwin.
 Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00
- Works by J. W. Draper.
 History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75
- Works by Ernst Haeckel.
 The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00
- Works by Huxley.
 Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00
- Works by John Stewart Mill.
 Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25
- Works by Richard A. Proctor.
 Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
- Works by Herbert Spencer.
 Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75
- Works by Andrew D. White.
 Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00
- Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
 Body and Mind.....$1.5
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50
- Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
 Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75
- MISCELLANEOUS.
- By Asa Gray.
 Darwiniana.....$2.00
- By L. L. McLaughlin.
 Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50
- By C. Marcel.
 Study of Languages.....$1.25
- By Lester F. Ward.
 Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00
- By Frederick Overman.
 A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00
- B. F. G. Fairfield.
 Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25
- By W. B. Carpenter.
 Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25
- By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
 Evolution.....$1.50
- By Sir John Lubbock.
 Origin of Civilization.....$5.00
- By Charles A. Abbott.
 A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50
- By Garrett P. Serviss.
 Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50
- By Nathan Sheppard.
 Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50
- English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25
- Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

J A. REED.
 FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
 375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.
 TAILOR,

— 101 FIFTH STREET 101 —

Superstition in all Ages.

— BY —

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."

339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1
 Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

Prof. W. S. Bell's Lectures in Oregon.

Summerville	Sept. 12, 13
Heppner	" 15, 16
Dayton	" 20, 21
Rosalia	" 22, 23
Plaza	" 24
Oakdale	" 26
Spokane	" 27
Davenport	" 28, 29

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5. 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm " " " Diamond* 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,

Freethought Pub. Co.,
 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
 Six Months......75
 Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. II. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth $1 50.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoe maker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater. C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schiell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st. Rapp & Debarty, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st. The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glandeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st. Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

S. J. HAMMOND,
WATCHES

WATCHMAKER, $1 AND JEWELER
CLEANED.

1061 Market st., Opp. Junction of Jones and McAllister sts., San Francisco. St34

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St
San Francisco.
Watches Cleaned & Warranted, $1

Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. St34

The Humboldt Library

—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagelot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
8. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
7. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry
12. Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
13. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
14. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion
15. Longevity, Prolonging life. John Gardner, M.D.
16. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
18. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
20. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kalley Miller.
21. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
22. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
23. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
24. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
25. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
26. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
27. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
28. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
30. The Study of Words.
31. Richard Chenevix Trench.
32. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R. A. Proctor.
33. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
34. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
35. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
36. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
37. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
38. Geological Sketches.
39. Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
40. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
41. Current Discussions in Science. W. M. Williams.
42. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
43. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
44. The Dawn of History.
45. C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
46. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
47. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
48. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
49. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
50. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange.
51. Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
52. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
53. Animal Automatism, Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
54. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
55. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
56. Illusions.
57. James Sully.
58. The Origin of Species. Two Double Numbers.
59. Charles Darwin. 30 cents each.
60. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
61. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
62. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
63. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, LL.D.
64. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
65. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
66. Technical Education, Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
67. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
68. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10 c.
69. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
70. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencer.
71. Archæology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
72. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
73. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
74. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
77. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
79. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
80. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
81. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
82. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
83. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
84. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
85. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
86. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
87. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
88. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson
89. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
90. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
91. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S. S. Laurie.
92. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T. H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haeckel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present, Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life, Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Iaing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer Whymper Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No., 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Ritchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERY.

Located Eight Miles South of San Jacinto, Cal.
P. A. CLARK, PROPRIETOR.

A full stock of everything in the Nursery line on hand.

- APPLES, PEACHES,
PEARS, PLUMS,
APRICOTS, NECTARINES,
PRUNES, ALMONDS,
WALNUTS, QUINCES, ETC.

IN ALL VARIETIES.

A fine lot of Kelsey's Japan Plums, one and two years old.

Send for price list and buy where you can get trees at living rates.

P. A. CLARK, San Jacinto, Cal.

W. M. HINTON & CO.
PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS.
536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San-Franc

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against
LIBERTY,
By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 38.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan., 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - SEPTEMBER 20, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Buckley still holds its own in the heart of the mighty forest. The columns of steam and smoke still roll up, and the wheels revolve, and the saw buzzes and eats into the vast masses of lumber, and yet the ranks of trees appear as giant and numberless as ever and toss against the sky with defiant arms. Millions of feet of lumber are shipped from here yearly, and though the hard times have pressed upon this forest village, yet it survives with undaunted front and looks to the future with hope. The big stumps are beginning to take a back seat, and the streets are passable. Many new buildings are being erected—halls, stores, and dwelling-houses—and it looks as if the genii of fortune were hovering over this busy frontier. When I first arrived the weather was dark and stormy, and only the black domain of the shaggy trees could be seen about the town, but as the clouds and mists roll away a beautiful prospect opens. Beyond the woods a chain of hills appear, and over them the massive and magnificent crown of Mt. Ranier. It is an imposing spectacle. It is like a dazzling cloud of snow which never fades from the horizon. In the evening especially it is wonderfully luminous, with resplendent color and towering face—an image of loveliness and sublimity against the glittering sky, a picture of infinite beauty.

I lectured on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday nights to fair audiences, but not so large as I expected. A ball on Friday night, a democratic meeting on Saturday night, and a storm on Sunday night made a combination that considerably diminished the numbers; but accidents will happen, and we made the best of the untoward circumstances and hope for better times. There is quite a Liberal element in Buckley, but many are indifferent and some are afraid. They are trying to build a church here, and thus put the seal of fashion upon religion. However, there is a progressive element here which is undaunted, and I think the flag will always be to the breeze whatever fortune comes.

On Tuesday night I go over to Burnett's Mine, where there is a new opening for the lecturer. It was a kind of a "trial trip" over there, and it resulted favorably. It was deep in the woods, and the only way to get there was to walk, and so after supper we started—Mr. and Mrs. Ewing, A. Wickersham, and myself—going down the railroad a couple of miles and then off into the lofty woods, by a broad trail, to the village, which, with its white houses in the deep gorge, was shining in the evening light. At the foot of the hill from the forest glade stands a school-house, and here was given the first Freethought lecture in the place. It was well attended by the men of the place, half of whom were off duty, the rest being upon the night shift in the mine. The ladies of the village, however, were not present. They probably never attended an Infidel lecture, and did not know but that dynamite or otherwise might be in readiness for the occasion. I am satisfied that if I could have given a second lecture they would have come, but it was impossible this time to arrange for more than one lecture. This one, however, was a success, as five new subscribers were added to FREETHOUGHT and a number of books sold. The way is open, evidently, to good work in the future.

E. Skanser, of Buckley, was instrumental in getting up the lecture, advertising, etc., and our thanks are due him for his energetic efforts. C. H. Burnett, superintendent of the mines, and Mr. Sheppard, foreman, who introduced me at the lectures, deserve our regards also for their kindness and good fellowship in securing house, etc. These are on the roll of FREETHOUGHT; also John Westland, C. P. Larsen, and D. W. Watkins. Altogether, I enjoyed this opening into a new field, and hope to try it again. Just as the moon arises we plunge into the forest, the silver radiance penetrating the dark recesses with soft effulgence, the vast trunks overshadowing the pathway. When we strike the railroad the moonlight splendor is like a brilliant stream, flooding the track, and in this we walk to the red lights of Buckley and the glaring torches of the mills. It was a pleasant experience, but I was glad when the end of the journey was reached. Of course there is always a new method of traveling for the Secular Pilgrim, and this time I had to "hoof it," but I had splendid company.

Coke Ewing, the unswerving supporter of Freethought at this point, has been married since I was here, and has built an elegant little home. The golden wedding bells don't lose a bit of their music in this Liberal fireside. Here I have ample entertainment, and the week has gone by like a generous holiday, and I have enjoyed every minute of my stay. On Saturday—through the woods by the White River, as last year—I went to the cottage of Mrs. R. B. Ewing, with Mr. and Mrs. Coke Ewing, and in this happy forest sanctuary enjoyed the golden afternoon amidst the trees and flashing waters. Mrs. Ewing is still as animated as ever, with the spirit of all reform, and looks into the future "far as human eye can see."

Our veteran friend, B. F. Small, is on the sick list, but we "hope on, hope ever." He has struck many a good blow for Freethought. He was in the army of the republic in many severe battles, was wounded, and wears the honors of a soldier. He has been on the roll of the noble Investigator for thirty-three years, and means to stay until he dies, and will obey the last bugle call. Mrs. Small is a comrade indeed, through good and ill fortune, and is entitled also to the badge of noble service.

The delightful home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Miller has been open to the Pilgrim. A baby has been born, since I was here, in this household—the handsomest and jolliest of babies, drinking in the sunshine with the divine complacency of a god. Oh, what a heaven these little babies do have; and in the orthodox heaven they don't have any babies. Away with this heaven! It is not a fit place to live in. Give us a baby with its smiles and tears, and the angels and harps may go.

I spent an evening with A. Wickersham, the pioneer of this place, who came here seven years ago when Buckley was not even a dream. His homestead is right alongside the town, and is, indeed, a part of it. He has a family of ten children, I believe, and not any of them belong to the church. Mr. Wickersham is one of the foremost citizens of Buckley. He helped to build the first mill, and is engaged in other enterprises of importance. He is Freethought to the backbone.

Our good friends Mr. and Mrs. Ballard are now located in Tacoma, and I have not had the privilege of meeting them this year.

I have had the pleasure of meeting D. L. Gill, of Wisconsin, a comrade of Geo. H. Dawes, the lecturer, in his old home. They can shake hands through FREETHOUGHT, via the Pilgrim.

E. VanAlstine is also one of our staunch supporters, and Freethought will never go back, with such generous comradeship.

Mark, who was with us at Burnett; August Johnson, Andrew Opdahl, Mr. Goss, and others, are on the broad platform of human rights, regardless of dogma.

I gave my closing lecture on Thursday night. All was well, and I leave Buckley with delightful recollections of its hospitable people, who are willing to be in the front without fear or favor.

Buckley is thirty miles east of Tacoma, on the Northern Pacific railroad. It is the center of the finest body of timber in Washington. Two years ago the site of Buckley was a half cultivated prairie. A side track was placed here for the convenience of a few farmers. A shingle-mill was built, other mills followed, and gradually the place was known. A station was erected, a post-office established, and the place was named after J. M. Buckley, of Tacoma. Within two years it has increased to one thousand inhabitants. It ships more freight than any other town between Tacoma and Spokane Falls. The timber consists of the best quality of fir, cedar, and spruce. The city lies half a mile from White River, which affords abundant water-power. Over one hundred thousand feet of lumber and two hundred and fifty thousand shingles are manufactured per day. The mills employ about three hundred men. The shingles find a market as far east as the Atlantic. The soil of the surrounding country is rich—adapted to fruit, as well as hay and grain, and vegetables of all kinds. Two and a half miles south-east from Buckley are the Burnett and Pittsburg coal mines, which employ about fourteen hundred men. In fact, Buckley is a pretty good place, and if any one wants to know more about one of the most thriving cities on the coast they can address Coke Ewing, of Buckley, Wash.

Puyallap—what shall I say of Puyallap? A more curious town I never struck. It is a kind of "mosaic" of nationalities.

"It is everything by fits and nothing long."

It is the centre of a big hop country, and just now they are congregating from all quarters for hop-picking. About a thousand Indians, some of them all the way from Alaska, are on hand. The Chinese, the Spaniard, the Italian, the Russian, the Milesian, are all in the multitude. Besides, the best people of the "Yankees" go to hop-picking. It is a nice and pleasant way of earning some pocket money. It is, in fact, a genteel holiday, a fashionable occupation for all classes. The women are on an equality with men and get just the same wages, a dollar a box, and a good picker can earn from two to four dollars a day. They have jolly times, all picking together, laughing and talking and gossiping in the sunshine; little babies in their cradles; in fact, it is just simply a picnic, a splendid sociable affair. Whole families—men, women, and children—"pitch in" and earn enough during the hop season to last the whole year round. You might say that the hop season is the carnival of labor.

Hops are up this year—thirty-five cents, to seven cents last year—and this makes millions of dollars to this country, and everybody is happy. The harvest glory of the Pacific coast surpasses the whole world this time, and "takes the cake," and a most elegant plum cake it will be.

Well, I struck Puyallap Friday, Sept. 6, just as all this hulla-balloo of industry was under way, and there didn't seem to be much interest in Freethought lectures. Horse races, base ball games, and variety shows and free lunches at the saloons, had the "go." A. N. Miller, our champion here, did the best he could, and worked faithfully, but the wind and tide were against us. In fact, there is not much culture in Puyallap at the present time. It is a "hybrid" town—neither one thing nor another. It has a floating population immersed in business or sport. I went to the Unitarian church on Sunday morning. Only twenty were present, including two ministers. This shows the state of religious advancement in Puyallap. The minister, evidently a recent graduate from the seminary, took for his text, "The Bound Bear," a better text, perhaps, than the Bible could furnish. He referred to the bound bear of Tacoma. Of course the "bound bears" were the orthodox, but I fear the Unitarians are in the same fix. They are "bound." They are tied to a nicer and higher pole, and the fence includes a broader area, but they are inside the fence and not outside, and tread the same everlasting path of conformity. They wear the chains of gilded custom. Not one of the Unitarians attended my lectures. They seem to be as afraid of the Freethinker as the orthodox themselves, and don't want to get out of their comfortable prison-house. The "un-fenced" universe is not apparently their desire.

After all, I think that a good staunch orthodox is better than these half-way Christians, whose religion is simply sentimental gush without the strength of ancient dogma or the glory of Freethought.

However, I had more to my lectures, three to one, than the Unitarians did at their Sunday services, and that is some consolation, for misery loves company, they say, and one reformer in ill luck is cheered by the fact that it is the world that is to blame and not himself, seeing that other reformers have the same hard fortune.

I did not have over seventy-five at any of my lectures. Mr. Miller gave the use of his opera house—which has just been remodeled and furnished—for the lectures. The lectures were well advertised. However, as Mr. Miller says, we have done the best we could, and there is no use of fretting. I hope that a beginning has been made for something better in the future.

I made up for my lack of hearers by enjoying the hospitality of A. N. Miller. He has a delightful home on the outskirts of the city; about fifty acres in hops, etc. Around his house is one of the finest orchards in the state, and I reveled in luscious peaches, apples, plums, prunes, etc. Miller came to this country thirty-one years ago, and is a "rustler." He was five years on the ocean before coming here. There were seven brothers in the family, and all have made a fortune of some kind, and although the orthodox father used to pray long and loud not one of the brothers is in the church to-day. Mr. Miller lost his wife, a noble woman, about six months ago. She died through her heroic care of the sick in her neighborhood. Mr. Miller has four children left, bright as the day and without the shadow of religion.

Saturday we drove to Tacoma. This is a wonderful city. If I had only bought a lot when I struck it four years ago I would be a rich man to-day. But I was much like the man who said that he could have bought the best lot in Chicago for a pair of old boots when he first came there. "Why didn't you buy it?" "Didn't have the old boots," was the reply. If the Secular Pilgrim had only a purse and scrip he would have a lot of chances to invest and become a millionaire. As it is, these golden streams shoot magnificently by him and he remains ashore, and must foot it and be amply satisfied if he can "foot his bills," also.

Tacoma has now thirty-five thousand inhabitants, and is booming. Apparently it has a solid growth. The railroads, the shops, the big mills, the vast elevators, the crowded wharfs attest a prosperous career. This will be a great commercial and manufacturing centre. It is a handsome place too, but, alas! the crowning edifice of its elegant blocks is the Methodist University. Religion, so far, has got the best of this place.

I was pleased to meet here Wm. H. Hunter, of Gig Harbor, who goes upon the roll of Freethought, an old-time Liberal.

I also met W. A. Ramsay, of Wisconsin, at Puyallup. He was at all the lectures, and became a subscriber. For years he has been a stalwart Liberal, and is a well-known reformer.

Bennett Carpenter is another whole-souled Liberal—a gray veteran with the spirit of youthful ardor—and he is also a dauntless comrade with us. I was glad, also, to make the acquaintance of W. Whitwell, of Portland, who is under our flag.

Mrs. F. Davidson, of Tacoma, niece of A. N. Miller, and her husband I was pleased to meet with. They are among our allies.

R. F. Little and C. E. Stream are also upon the roll of Freethought. I have met good friends here, though few, and don't feel discouraged. I guess the way will be clear in the "good time coming."

Mrs. D'Arcy, the post-mistress, is a Liberal-minded lady. An orthodox clergyman opposed her appointment on this account, and wrote a long letter to Wanamaker. The letter, however, came into the hands of Congressman Wilson, who sent a stinging reply to the clerical intermeddler. Mrs. D'Arcy received her appointment in spite of her "Ingersoll views," which she was not afraid to express. Congressman Wilson did the right thing in this matter, and the gentlemanly thing, and it is to his credit. Mrs. D'Arcy will perform the duties of her office just as well as an orthodox masculine. I have to report also, with satisfaction, that the officious clergyman was dismissed by his congregation.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

THOMAS LEE, of Grass Valley, sent a fine box of peaches to the editor of FREETHOUGHT last week, and the latter hereby returns his thanks. A reputation for veracity which it has taken long years to acquire prevents the writer from making any public statement of the size of the fruit, which is both great and good.

TO THE SUPPORTERS OF FREETHOUGHT.

I was astonished to read in the last number of FREETHOUGHT the proposed resignation of Mr. Macdonald as editor of this paper; and yet knowing the bitter and tremendous difficulties in the way of Freethought work, it is not so strange after all that he should be compelled to take this step. It is simply a matter of self-preservation. For the last three months he has practically been working for nothing; and no man can do this for any length of time.

The situation confronts us, and the question arises, Are we to give up? Are we to let the labor of years amount to nothing? Is FREETHOUGHT to be a disheartening failure?

The work in itself for the last two or three years has been brilliantly successful. Nowhere in the world has the cause been so progressive as upon the Pacific coast. We simply lack the money to make a still greater success: but if the money does not come, then the work must stop and that is the end of the matter.

If Mr. Macdonald resigns the editorship for lack of support, then the paper goes to the wall. Its career is ended. The fortunes of the one are the fortunes of the other. No man can take his place. If the Liberals will not support him the cause will suffer a most disastrous defeat. It will be a burning shame to the Liberals of the coast if this is the result of his uniring and self-sacrificing labors.

It costs money to publish FREETHOUGHT. Let me state the facts. We started FREETHOUGHT with a few hundred dollars saved from the lecture field. All this money of my own has been sunk, and also the earnings in the lecture field for the first two years, making about $2,500 solid cash that I individually have put into this enterprise, and which is gone beyond all hope of recovery. Out of my earnings; the first year I retained only seven dollars per week for my personal expenses, and the second year, ten dollars per week. All, over this, went into the publication of the paper. Mr. Macdonald, the first year, received only seven dollars per week, and the second year only ten dollars per week. The impression among some Liberals is that we are making money out of FREETHOUGHT. The fact is, that we have sunk time, work, and money to the extent of hundreds of dollars in this paper. For the last three years, I, a poor man, living on what I earn from day to day, have contributed $2,500, clean cash to the cause, the only return for which will be the success of the cause. The money itself has gone to that bourne from whence no gold or greenbacks ever return. I am not one cent ahead after six years' work. If I should be sick for one month it would bank up me. I couldn't pay the doctor's bills, and if I died I couldn't pay my funeral expenses. It is absolute nonsense for a man to talk about making money in the Freethought work. It can't be done. It is a constant sacrifice. If I wanted to make money, Freethought would be the very last field I should think of entering.

Will those Liberals who are making money support those who devote themselves to Freethought with unselfish motives, who are willing to work for a bare living, because the work in itself to them is so noble and inspiring?

I can do no more for the support of the paper than what I have done. I have exhausted my utmost means. If Liberals, the friends of Freethought, will not come to the front, the paper must be suspended, and the work upon the Pacific coast be set back for one hundred years. Every Liberal in the country, who has a particle of enthusiasm, will feel the sad effects of this reverse.

Mr. Macdonald must be retained in the editorship of FREETHOUGHT. This is the vital point. If we succeed here, I think success is assured in all other things. If he could have his salary paid by a special subscription, I believe that the present income would pay the running expenses of the paper. The editor must be relieved from this pecuniary anxiety, worse almost than crucifixion—this keeping the wolf from the door. I know that he works from ten to fifteen hours a day, not only at writing, but at manual labor, for the sake of keeping the paper going.

The question of his retention must be settled first of all. We must keep him where he is; and then the rest will be triumphantly carried on. I propose, therefore, the following plan: That a Freethought Editorial Salary Fund be raised; this fund to be used specifically to pay the salary guaranteed by the directors, to the editor, about one-half what he would receive for the same services on an ordinary newspaper. All subscribed above this amount yearly, to be kept in the bank for a reserve fund to be used in future years for the same purpose.

Let there be a grand rally of the supporters of Freethought. Let each do the best he can as long as he lives, and as long as FREETHOUGHT lives.

I will agree to head the list. I will agree as long as I live and FREETHOUGHT lives, to pay $50 yearly into the Editorial Salary Fund for the retention of Mr. Macdonald. I have to work hard in the sweat of my face for my daily bread, but I will give that much every year out of my earnings to keep Mr. Macdonald at his post.

If we settle this question, I believe all the other difficulties in the way of FREETHOUGHT will be met and overcome.

Are there not some well-to-do Liberals in the country who will pay as much as I into this Editorial Fund?

If one can't afford $50, can't he afford $25, or $20, or $10, or $5, or $1, or 50 cents? Don't be afraid to put in fifty cents if that is all one can afford. There are at least one thousand good solid friends of ours, who don't want this paper to go down. What will each of these give towards this fund. Answer at FREETHOUGHT office by return mail. Don't wait. Obey your first generous impulse. Think what you can afford a year to retain the present editor, and then give at once. If I give fifty dollars, can't you give something all the way from one dollar to fifty dollars? Just do your level best.

Christians pay $10, $50, $100, and $1000 every year to guarantee a salary of $10,000 and $20,000 to some popular preacher. Can't you help guarantee one thousand dollars to a Freethought editor who is doing more for the progress of Freethought than any clergyman in this land is doing for Christianity? Let us settle this question immediately, and then we will go on with renewed energy and courage. Yours hopefully and always,
Snohomish, Wash., Sept, 10, 1890. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

THE BIBLE AND JUSTICE.

It has often been said, remarks Thomas Paine, that anything may be proved from the Bible, but before anything can be admitted as proved by the Bible, the Bible itself must be proved to be true; for if the Bible be not true, or the truth of it be doubtful, it ceases to have authority, and cannot be admitted as proof of anything.

It has been the practice of all Christian commentators on the Bible, and of all Christian priests and preachers, to impose the Bible on the world as a mass of truth, and as the word of God; they have disputed and wrangled, and anathematized each other about the supposable meaning of particular parts and passages therein; one has said and insisted that such a passage meant such a thing; another that it meant directly the contrary; and a third, that it means neither one nor the other, but something different from both; and this they call understanding the Bible.

Now instead of wasting their time, and heating themselves in fractious disputations about doctrinal points drawn from the Bible, these men ought to know, and if they do not, it is civility to inform them, that the first thing to be understood is, whether there is sufficient authority for believing the Bible to be the word of God, or whether there is not?

There are matters in that book, said to be done by the express command of God, that are as shocking to humanity, and to every idea we have of moral justice, as anything done by Robespierre, by Carrier, by Joseph le Bon, in France, by the English government in the East Indies, or by any other assassin in modern times. When we read in the books ascribed to Moses, Joshua, etc., that they (the Israelites) came by stealth upon whole nations of people, who, as the history itself shows, had given them no offense; that they put all those nations to the sword; that they spared neither age nor infancy; that they utterly destroyed men, women, and children; that they left not a soul to breathe; expressions that are repeated over and over again in those books, and that too with exulting ferocity; are we sure these things are facts? Are we sure that the creator of man commissioned these things to be done; are we sure that the books that tell us so were written by his authority?

It is not the antiquity of a tale that is any evidence of its truth; on the contrary, it is a symptom of its being fabulous; for the more ancient any history pretends to be, the more it has the resemblance of a fable. The origin of every nation is buried in fabulous tradition, and that of the Jews is as much to be suspected as any other. To charge the commission of acts upon the almighty, which in their own nature, and by every rule of moral justice, are crimes as all assassination is, and more especially the assassination of infants, is matter of serious concern. The Bible tells us that those assassinations were done by the express command of God. To believe, therefore, the Bible to be true, we must unbelieve all our belief in the moral justice of God; for wherein could crying or smiling infants offend? And to read the Bible without horror, we must undo everything that is tender, sympathizing, and benevolent in the heart of man. Speaking for myself, if I had no other evidence that the Bible was fabulous than the sacrifice I must make to believe it to be true, that alone would be sufficient to determine my choice.

THE LICK STATUARY.

The trustees of the James Lick trust have at length chosen a design for the monumental group of historical statuary to be placed in the city hall park; and they have selected it apparently with an eye single to its unfitness. The design is from a model by one Happersberger, and represents, among other things a Jesuit priest in the act of blessing a native Indian.

As is well known, James Lick was a Freethinker. He hated the church and despised the priests with all his heart. He contributed money to build Paine Hall in Boston, and the Memorial Building stands there on the Eastern shore to be for hundreds of years a monument to a pioneer of American liberty and to a pioneer of California enterprise. But right here in James Lick's old home, in the city he helped so much to build, and which receives the benefit of the greater part of his life's labors, we erect to perpetuate his memory the statue of a Catholic priest!

On the ground from which priests and ministers were to be forever excluded, the recreant trustees of Girard's estate in Philadelphia, with Girard's money, have erected an Episcopal chapel. With James Lick's money his unfaithful and unscrupulous stewards build a monument to Jesuitism. It was not enough that these trustees should for ten years draw their own support from money acquired by Lick, for that might be forgiven them, but they must place him forever before the world as a builder of memorials to the Catholic church. From San Francisco the trustees of the Lick estate can extend greeting to the executors of Girard's will. In the bonds of perfidy they are brothers.

MODESTY AT SACRAMENTO.

The managers of the art exhibit of the State Fair at Sacramento have gained unto themselves a large amount of notoriety by their rejection of a painting by Mrs. Addie Ballou of this city. The picture is entitled "Morning" and represents a female figure standing on a globe, with its weight on the toes of one foot, the lower limbs being crossed below the knee, the arms raised above the head, and the body bent slightly backward from the hips. Through inadvertence, or for some other good reason, Mrs. Ballou neglected to paint any drapery or clothing on her representation of the dawn; and that is what has shocked the committee who are unanimous in the opinion that the picture will not do.

Mrs. Ballou's effort was put away out of sight in a closet, but a reporter of the Sacramento "Bee" heard about it, an artist copied it, and the paper published it as an engraving. The management of the "Bee" went farther, and asked the citizens of Sacramento to vote on the question whether the picture was fit for exhibition. At last accounts the balloting was eight to one in favor of giving "Morning" a show.

The result of the voting may be to replace the picture on exhibition, or it may not; but the unseemly prudery of the committee has given "Morning" a splendid advertisement, which we hope may result in bring Mrs. Ballou a good price for her work.

THE BARRY CONTEMPT CASE.

Some time ago Mr. James H. Barry, publisher of the San Francisco "Weekly Star," charged that Superior Judge Lawler had deliberately and knowingly falsified the law, in a certain case, with an intentional denial of justice. This was rather strong language, but if true Mr. Barry was justified in using it; and if untrue, the use of it merited condign punishment. As we understand the matter, Mr. Barry made his charges with the expectation, and even the hope, of being called upon to prove them in a suit for criminal libel; but in this he was thwarted, as Judge Lawler had him arrested for contempt of court, and the case was never tried. The judges acted as accusers, jury, and prosecutors, with the result that Mr. Barry was sentenced to five days' imprisonment in the county jail and to pay a fine of five hundred dollars. By the processes known to lawyers the accused was liberated on bail or otherwise, and demanded a trial by jury. The case went to the supreme court, which has lately handed down a decision denying Mr. Barry's right to a jury trial, and affirming the former sentence; and, at this writing, Mr. Barry is in jail serving out the original sentence.

Far be it from the ordinary layman to discuss the question whether or not the judges have acted legally in this case; possibly they have; but if so, the law, so far as getting at the truth is concerned, is a failure. If a citizen may not censure or condemn a public official because that official happens to be a judge, and if a judge is ex officio above criticism, then we have a class of men administering the laws to which they are not themselves amenable, and which they cannot be held responsible for violating.

The complaint is based on the ground that Mr. Barry's attack on Judge Lawler was made when the case was still pending, which, it is held, constitutes contempt of court by interfering with the administration of justice; but if it was known that the judge was unjust, it is hard to see how the cause of justice could suffer from the fact being made known. And if any citizen by watching the proceedings of a court becomes convinced that wrong is being done, what better time could there be to expose it than while the case is pending and before the injustice is consummated? There is a popular fiction that the courts represent the people, the language of the indictment being "The People vs. So and So;" but it appears that when the people delegate the function of adjudication to a judge, they delegate also their right to further discuss the subject. As the Barry case now stands, the "trial" has been had, and sentence administered, and the people have had no opportunity to find out whether Barry's charges are true or false, and never will have. This may be good law. Indeed, considering the absurdity of it, we do not really see how it could be otherwise.

MEN of means who during their life are accustomed to contribute to the maintenance of Freethought should make provision that at least a portion of what they leave behind should be devoted to the same end. We are reminded of this by the death of a subscriber and well-wisher, Charles H. Dewey, of Omaha. Mr. Dewey died in the latter part of August, and almost before his flesh was cold—even before the news of his death had reached us—came an order from the widow that FREETHOUGHT should be discontinued at once. A man's opinions, if they differ from those of his survivors, stand not the slightest chance of being respected after death robs him of the ability to maintain them. The lesson obviously is that these children of the brain should be provided for by setting apart something for their maintenance.

JUDGE SOLOMON HEYDENFELDT, who died in this city last Monday, was one of the kindest, noblest, and best of men—a man loved and respected by all who knew him. Though without the largest means, he was generous to a fault, and the Freethought movement, and especially this paper, owes him much. As these old pioneers pass away one by one, it seems that we look almost in vain for men to take their places in upholding the cause of Liberalism.

GENERAL BOOTH of the Salvation Army is to start a matrimonial bureau for the purpose of providing the Australian colonists with wives. The colonists would do well not to marry too hastily some of the women who have belonged to General Booth's brigade. If the London army resembles the San Francisco and Oakland armies, it has many female members who could be deported to the great advantage of their reputations.

THE Unitarian and the Methodist ministers of the coast have both been holding conferences within the past few days, the former at San Francisco, the latter at Pacific Grove. In one sense the Unitarian conference must have been the pleasanter, if not the more exciting gathering. The attendants did not have to try one of their number on the charge of immoral conduct.

WE go to press early enough to announce that the Free Press Association has called a mass meeting at the Metropolitan Temple, Friday evening, September 19, "to obtain an expression of public opinion on the condition of the law of California in reference to contempt of court." The case of Mr. James Barry will be one of the subjects of discussion.

SECRETARY WINDOM is moving in the direction of relieving the financial stringency under which the country suffers. The people at large have long desired him to do this, and he declined; but now that Wall street and the capitalists begin to feel the pressure he is more complaisant.

THE debate between W. F. Jamieson and Rev. T. L. Nichols will take place in Kasson, Minn., commencing September 25, and continuing eight nights. The substance of the questions to be debated is, "Is the Bible good?" and "Is the New Testament all right?"

A SUBSCRIBER at Sacramento remits $2.70 to balance his account, but he does not send his name. If this falls under his eye he will please let us hear from him. The postal order bears date of September 15.

MR. MENDUM, of the Boston "Investigator," is sustaining poor health, but it is cheering to know that, at the age of eighty, he is holding his own with the promise of recovery.

OBSERVATIONS.

Mr. Putnam has written an appeal to the supporters of FREETHOUGHT in which my name is used with more or less frequency. At first sight I did not like his proposition, and regretted that he had made it; but upon further study I have concluded to accept the proposition and confine myself to regretting the necessity for it. Being easily embarrassed, I could wish, however, that in compliance with parliamentary usage, somebody else might take the chair while they are discussing me; but if that is not practicable, let the proceedings go on. I am influenced to submit to the embarrassment not so much on my own account as on account of the work with which I have now become so entangled that my withdrawal might ravel the whole web. I have to-day received a letter from a man who practices the cheerful habit of contributing from one hundred dollars upward to the Liberal cause every year. He says: "If you are permitted to resign I certainly shall withhold further support from FREETHOUGHT. On the contrary, if you stay, I will promise twenty dollars annually toward your salary. Inclosed find draft for first installment ($20). Moreover, if you will give me the names of say a hundred of your best supporters, I think there will be no difficulty in putting you on an independent footing."

Other letters of a similar tenor lead me to think that there may be a certain relation between the work I am doing on this paper and the degree of acceptability to which it has attained. If such is the verdict, let it stand.

Here is a novel view which a correspondent takes of the matter. I had not previously thought of it. The correspondent says:

"I do not think the subscribers are dissatisfied with your work. They seem to like it so well that they would rather get it without paying for it than not to have it at all. No tribute could be more flattering."

I trust I am not expected to print all the kind words sent to me during the past week, although some of them are worthy of being framed. I prefer that Mr. Putnam's proposition, if it is to be carried out, should go with as little excitement as possible. To be the object of a subscription, without being sick, indigent, superannuated, or in jail, is a position I have not sought; so that the less conspicuously I am made to appear in it, the better it will fit me.

The point of Brother Haelke's criticism last week of something I have written is blunted by the fact that the matter to which he takes exception was not put forth as expressing my own views but the views of certain "newer light of social and political economy," of whom I do not profess to be one. The thinkers on all subjects are apt to uncover ideas which startle the most of us, but the robust mind soon resumes its balance. There are always problems before us for solution, always difficulties to meet, obstacles to overcome, misfits to adjust. Somebody has made the proposition that marriage is a failure, and, looking about us, we perceive that in some instances the statement is true, and the question how to make it a success immediately confronts us. To say that the motion to discuss marriage laws or their abolition is out of order, and unfit for publication in a Freethought paper, leaves the question exactly where it was before; and I cannot discern how any problem can be solved by avoiding it. If in the opinion of some our marriage laws are so perfect as to be incapable of improvement, then those holding that view will of course regard all discussion of them as a waste of time; but why should such discussion, if conducted courteously, be condemned as indecent? Why should our wives and daughters, whose interest this question touches so deeply, be debarred from its consideration? If we must keep our wives and daughters virtuous through force, and true through ignorance, we might as well lock them up in a harem with a eunuch at the door, after the manner of the Turks. Unfortunately it has been discovered that men and women cannot be made good by an act of the legislature; and, most fortunately, it has also been discovered that men and women will be good and true and virtuous whether the law commands them to be or not. In this last consideration lies the hope of the race, as I see it.

I know not what Brother Haelke's object may have been in placing FREETHOUGHT by implication in so unpopular a position. Possibly he wished to inaugurate a discussion of the marriage question, but if so, he must conduct both sides of it or find some one else than myself for an opponent.

A year or so ago a substantial-looking gentleman of advanced years and the physical build of Putnam came up to the office of FREETHOUGHT on Kearny street and handed me his card and twenty dollars in gold. Said he, "I want you to move your quarters down on the ground floor. I am going to bring you twenty dollars every year while you run this paper, and I am getting too old to climb stairs." He had the kindest face I ever saw on a man. He would accept no thanks for his gift, as he maintained that he was doing himself a favor as much as anybody else in helping along the business. He would not stop to talk, but just hurried in with his little complaint about the stairs, and then hurried out with his smiles and good wishes. His card bore only the words "S. Heydenfeldt." Later on he sent his check for another generous gift, but he never tried to climb the stairs again. For all purposes of Liberal work his purse was open, and he averred that only his lack of vigor prevented him from attending the meetings of the Freethought Society. He was a splendid man. Nearly everybody knew him, and all praised him. That he is dead is an occasion for sorrow, but the misfortune of his death serves to reawaken gratitude for the fact that he lived so long.

From unexpected sources sometimes come testimonials as gratifying as those we are naturally looking for. A resident of Napa, not an unbeliever, writes:

"My views are not in accord with the faith or lack of faith expressed in your editorial columns, being a firm believer in the immortality of the soul; yet I fully appreciate the just criticisms, and the happy hits made by some member of your staff in dealing with orthodox absurdities. The wit of the writer referred to is bright as an electric light and cuts like a blade of steel. His apology for the Rev. Dr. Stratton, of "telephone" memory, is worth a French dinner, which shall be accorded him should I ever be so fortunate as to know him personally. I inclose express order for $4.

The acknowledgment of FREETHOUGHT's services in clearing away the cloud which temporarily overshadowed the reputation of Dr. Stratton comes late, but it is better late than subsequently. Better still, though, if it had emanated from the reverend gentleman himself. I should be glad to receive a communication from Dr. Stratton any time, whether he is prepared to remit anything or not. Several persons have asked me who was doing the kissing now at Mills Seminary since he resigned that duty, and I have not been able to tell them.

Mariner Purdy, of the U. S. receiving ship "Independence," left at this office last week a large pattern of the kind of blankets manufactured by the people of Samoa. It is a fabric resembling cloth and paper to about an equal extent. One side looks like the bark of a tree, while the other side was originally white, but has been laboriously striped and checkered in black by some native artist. Mr. Purdy also brought some photographs of Samoan beauties, taken in their usual costume, which consists not so much of raiment as of innocence and an untutored mind.

This is from "Liberty."

The editor of FREETHOUGHT says: "I have come to the conclusion that we should be cautious about resisting by force anything that is not imposed by force." In other words, Mr. George Macdonald has come to the conclusion that the wisest philosophy is the Anarchistic philosophy.

I congratulate the Anarchists on having so good a philosophy, and I trust that hereafter they will kindly regard me as one of them, at least so far as my qualifications will permit them to do so. I would not be willing to at once declare myself an Anarchist, with all that the name implies, but ask merely to be accepted on probation. Some people have a tendency to label themselves Anarchists, when they are really nothing of the sort, as Mr. Tucker has often pointed out. Indeed, it is Mr. Tucker's severity with these people that gives me pause. I know of progressive writers who have said one thing after another casually that pleased Comrade Tucker, and he quoted them in "Liberty." Emboldened by his approval they have called themselves Anarchists and attempted to set forth the Anarchistic philosophy. Here was where they fell down, and Comrade Tucker cantered over them lengthways. When they were permitted to arise they apologized to the editor of "Liberty," and, expectorating upon their palms, grappled again the great problems of political economy. I prefer to remain unlabeled, because if I were to mark myself an Anarchist, and at some future time Mr. Tucker should make it appear that I was something else, I should have to take the label off and store it away with the photographs taken when I wore whiskers, which are now no longer useful for purposes of identification. Meanwhile I shall continue to make observations of things as I see them, and shall not be disturbed if Anarchists or other good people discover that they agree with me.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The contempt case against James H. Barry, editor of the Weekly Star, has been decided adversely to the defendant, and last Saturday Mr. Barry surrendered himself to the authorities and began the serving out of his five days' sentence in the county jail.—The warehouse of the Milling Company at Fresno burned last Sunday, destroying 45,000 sacks of grain, and involving a loss of nearly $90,000.—The Pacific Unitarian Conference opened in this city Sunday last, closing on Thursday. It was well attended, and many interesting and Liberal papers were read.—A San Francisco adventuress by personating a woman of property has just secured from a well-known real-estate dealer a loan of $8,000 on property which she never owned. Woman and money have disappeared and no one knows where to find them.—Capt. Jack Williams swam the bay from Oakland to San Francisco last Sunday. The distance is said to be eight miles, which the swimmer covered in three hours and ten minutes.—Ex-Judge Solomon Heydenfeldt, an old and respected citizen of San Francisco, and a strong supporter of Liberalism, died at his home on Post street last Monday morning. He was 74 years of age.—The Jews are now celebrating their new year's. According to Jewish chronology we are now living in the year of the world 5651.—The Republicans of California opened their campaign last Saturday evening with a public meeting addressed by Colonel Markham, candidate for governor. There were also meetings at other places in the state.—There was a marked decrease in San Francisco's death rate last week. The total number of deaths was 106 against 117 for the corresponding week of 1889. Consumption is on the decline owing to the smaller number of people suffering from that disease who come hither from the East for cure.—There were no accidents to life or limb reported during the recent celebration in this city, and few robberies, the latter exemption being due to the fact that the chief of police locked up all the known pickpockets who showed themselves while the festivities were in progress.—California has thrown a bomb among the World's Fair commissioners by protesting against the placing of the agricultural exhibit at a distance from the main part of the exposition. Such a course, the California members hold, would place the state at a disadvantage.—Part of the business of the Methodist conference at Pacific Grove, Cal., was to examine charges of immoral conduct against the Rev. L. W. Simmons. The matter was referred to a committee. The financiers in the East say that a financial panic is imminent, and Windom, secretary of the U. S. treasury, is taking steps to avert it by buying up bonds.—Robert Ray Hamilton, of New York, the young society man who created a great scandal by marrying an adventuress a year or so ago, was drowned in a mountain stream in Montana a few weeks since and his body has just been recovered.—Gen. J. S. Crocker, executioner of Guiteau, Garfield's assassin, died at Washington on Sunday last.—Prince George of Wales, who is now visiting Montreal, Canada, would pass for a tough in this country. He got into a street fight one night last week and was arrested by the police.—The population of Nevada has decreased nearly 18,000 during the past ten years.—The Senate has passed the Tariff bill by a vote of 40 to 29.—The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage is to build a new tabernacle in Brooklyn, N. Y., at once. It will cost more than half a million dollars, which Talmage has succeeded in borrowing.

Imagine a vast concourse of uncultured, brutal, and ignorant men. Among them is one only with nobility and intellectuality. The masses spoken of are all worshipers. One is not. Who is the Atheist? (This is not meant to imply that, because all ignorant men are worshipers, all worshipers are ignorant.)

There is no specific "Christian civilization." What is specially and exclusively Christian does not civilize, does not conduce to education, reform, morals. It is only a distinctly universal and general education in morals, the sciences, arts, and philosophy that produces practical results in civilizing the world. All that is good, moral, beautiful, and practical in Christianity is universal, and as an educational factor exists independently of it, and so existed ages before the Christian era. It is only the unscientific—myth, miracle, and fable—that is specifically Christian.

The universality of the god-idea is one of the favorite points made use of by the church in support of this notion. But if the Christian insists (as he does) that the Hindoo, Chinese, Mohammedan, Indian, and Hottentot gods are all false gods, and his alone the only true God, how can the false belief of the heathen tend to prove the existence of his god? And if Beecher's, Sayage's, or Swing's god does not prove the existence of the heathen's god, how can the latter's god prove the existence of the former's? And if the belief of each does not tend to prove the truth of that of the other, how, in the name of reason, can their several opposing beliefs prove their general belief?—WETTSTEIN.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS.

Scappoose, Or.....	Sept. 18, 19	New Era, Or.....	Sept. 26
Carleton, Or.....	Sept. 20, 21	Molalla, Or.....	Sept. 27, 28
Canby, Or.....	Sept. 22	Summerville, Or (debate)	Oct. 1-6
Walla Walla, Wash.....	Oct. 8, 9	Butteville, Or.....	Sept. 23, 24
Portland Convention, Oct.	11, 12, 13	Wilsonville, Or.....	Sept. 25

HAS CHRISTIANITY BENEFITED WOMAN?

BY PROF. GEO. H. DAWES.

II.

If this is not sufficient to prove that God countenanced polygamy, and that David was only punished for his crime against Uriah, a passage from 1 Kings xv, verse 5, will no doubt be conclusive: "Because David did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, and turned not aside from anything that he commanded him all the days of his life, save only in the matter of Uriah the Hittite." Solomon was another of God's favorites, and yet had a harem of a thousand wives and concubines. So much did God think of David and Solomon that he declared, in 1 Kings, chapter ii, verse 45, "that the throne of David should be established forever."

Christian apologists say that God had to countenance many of the vices of the Jews; that the Jews were such a stiff-necked and barbarous people that God could not command them to desist from all their evil practice at once, that had he done so they would have rebelled and gone farther into barbarism; that God was obliged to lead them gradually in order to civilize them. What a miserable excuse for an omnipotent God! The infinite ruler of the universe is obliged to countenance such vices as polygamy and concubinage in order to control his chosen people! God could harden and soften the heart of Pharaoh at his pleasure; why could he not do the same with the Jews? Why not have made mankind better anyway? Man was made bad and governed worse, and Jehovah not being able to manage all the people, he takes this one tribe under his especial care, and leaves the rest of mankind to take care of themselves, and many nations worked out a far nobler and grander civilization than the Jews ever attained. If polygamy and concubinage were displeasing to the Lord, he might have said something about the sacredness of the family ties and the equality of the sexes. Amid the thunders and lightnings of Sinai he might have declared that the husband should have but one wife, and the wife but one husband. But instead of this he sustains the barbarism in his prejudices, and fortifies the heathen in his crimes. If Jehovah was really desirous of civilizing the Jews, instead of being so precise about the fashioning of candle-sticks, the killing of goats, and the dyeing of ram-skins red, he might have said that the master should not hold his maid servant in concubinage, that a man should not sell his daughter, nor take to himself more than one wife. He might at least have hinted to Moses that he had not shown the highest respect to the weaker sex when he ordered several thousand captive maidens over to the lusts of brutal soldiers and licentious priests. Omnipotence certainly ought to have been able to have said something that would have bettered the condition of wife and mother. But if we read the Bible with an unbiased mind, we will see that it simply represents the civilization of the Jews; that the Jews simply put into the mouth of their God, those habits, customs, and laws they believed to be right; or, in other words, we find that Jehovah had all the vices and prejudices of the Jews.

Of all the passages of the Bible that treat woman with contempt and disrespect, the twelfth chapter of Leviticus caps the climax. Here Jehovah declares motherhood a sin. The mother that has given birth to a son is unclean for forty days, and if she give birth to a daughter she is unclean for eighty days. During the days of her "purifying" she is unfit to enter a synagogue, and to add insult to injury, she must take a sin offering to a priest and he must offer it as an atonement for her transgression. If there is anything that thrills the husband's heart with tender emotions, that fills his soul with love and adoration for the female sex, it is a pure and lovely mother clasping to her breast her darling offspring. But upon this loveliest of objects, Jehovah looks with supercilious contempt. He pronounces her unholiness and unclean. But why must her days of purifying be twice as long for a daughter as for a son? This simply shows the low estimate of the female child, and because the daughter will in her turn become a mother. Such a law as this, whether it comes from gods or devils, from heaven or hell, from the throne of the most high, or from the lowest sinks of perdition—it is savagery pure and simple, and it ought to consign to eternal oblivion the god that is said to have inspired it, the book that contains it, and the church that indorses it.

The Christian here tells us that the old Mosaic laws were done away in Christ; that the Old Testament laws are abrogated. Be this as it may, they show the barbarism of the times, and if the Jewish Jehovah inspired the writing of them he was a devil instead of a god. Whether we are subject to the laws of Moses or not, they have influenced Christendom in our own times to such an extent that by some people it is yet considered that motherhood is a curse pronounced upon woman because of her sin in Eden, and it is therefore an impious act—an attempt to thwart the will of God—if the pains of the mother are relieved during parturition, and we must judge of these teachings by their influence. And it is but recently, and now only by the more liberal, that Christians consider themselves not bound by the Old Testament. But when we examine the New Testament we find the same ideas everywhere prevailing, that woman is in every respect inferior to man, and the apostolic writings tend to subjugate and degrade her.

1 Cor., chapter ii, verses 8 and 9, says: "For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man; neither was man created for the woman, but the woman for the man." 1 Cor., chapter xiv, verses 34 and 35, again says: "Let the women keep silence in the churches, for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home, for it is a shame for women to speak in the church."

A woman is here commanded to keep silence, and if she wishes to learn anything, let her ask her husband at home. But suppose she is so unfortunate as to have no husband, or suppose her husband is a dunce as many husbands are, then the woman must either remain an ignoramus, or violate this plain injunction of scripture.

Ephesians v, 22, 23, 24, says: "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord, for the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church, and he is the savior of the body. Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in everything." The wife, then, is to be subject to her husband as the church is to Christ; or the husband is as much superior to the wife as Christ is to the church. Does this declare the equality of the sexes?

First Epistle to Timothy ii, 11-15, says: "Let the woman learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence. For Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression. Notwithstanding she shall be saved in child bearing, if they continue in faith and charity and holiness with sobriety." Here again a woman is commanded to say nothing, and if she ventures to teach she violates the commandment; and if the doctrines of the church be true she will suffer eternal torment for her temerity. But the strangest part of it is that man is superior to woman because he was first made. If this kind of logic be sound, if this reasoning be correct, then the necessary inference is that the oyster is superior to man because it had an existence before man. And Adam was not deceived, and consequently was not in the transgression, but Eve, being deceived, was in the transgression; or, in other words, if you sin knowingly, as Adam did, you are to be judged innocent; but if you are deceived into sinning, as this text plainly declares Eve was, then you are to be judged guilty. Remarkable jurisprudence to come directly from the throne of infinite wisdom! And the abominable dogma is again brought forth that for woman's sin in Eden she is to be forever subject to her husband, and he is to rule over her.

But we find woman in the pagan countries of Egypt, Greece, and Rome not only regarded with that respect and adoration due the weaker sex, but having the opportunity of reaching the highest pinnacle of fame. Minerva occupied as exalted a place in the hearts of these pagans as Hercules. With them woman was considered the social and intellectual equal of man; and instead of motherhood being a curse, the mother was considered the highest type of womanhood. Before Christ was born women sat upon the Egyptian throne. The education and the religion of that country were largely in the hands of women. Sibyls or fortune-tellers wrote the Book of Fate. Hundreds of years before the Christian era women had been accorded as high places as the intellectual arena afforded. Sappho flourished 600 B.C., and so highly were her intellectual endowments considered that Plato assigned her the honors of sage and poet, and familiarly entitled her the "tenth muse." Women occupied places in the philosophical schools and lectured on literary and scientific subjects, the last representative of which was the ill-fated Hypatia, who was murdered by St. Cyril and his mob of Christians at Alexandria A.D. 414.

It is true that in early times women had been subject to barter and sale between their male relations according to barbaric customs. "But the Roman (pagan) law having assumed on the theory of natural law the equality of the sexes, control of the persons of women was quite obsolete when Christianity was born. Her situation had become one of great personal liberty and proprietary independence, even when married, and the arbitrary power over her of her male relations was reduced to a nullity, while the form of marriage conferred on the husband no superiority." Thus as a daughter and a wife woman had grown to be honored and recognized as an equal with the son and husband under pagan law.

Sir Henry Maine, speaking of this great liberty of the pagan women, says: "Christianity tended from the very first to narrow this remarkable liberty. No society which preserves any tincture of Christian institutions is likely to restore to married women the liberty conferred on them by the middle Roman law. The expositors of the canon law have deeply injured civilization. There are many vestiges of a struggle between the secular and ecclesiastical principles, but the canon nearly everywhere prevailed. In some of the French provinces, married women of rank below nobility obtained all the power of dealing with property which Roman jurisprudence had allowed, and this local law has been largely followed by the code Napoleon. The systems, however, which are least indulgent to married women are invariably those which have followed the canon law exclusively, or those which from the lateness of their contact with European civilization have never had their archaisms weeded out."

When Christianity came into power in the Roman world, Maine says, "again began the sale of women. Christianity held her as unclean and in all respects inferior to man, and during the era that begins modern history the women of dominant races are seen everywhere under various forms of archaic guardianship, and the husband pays a money price for her." Unlike the polygamist practices of Bible characters, and as was the custom of the early Christians, the pagans of Greece and Rome strictly enjoined monogamy, and to them we are indebted for our system of monogamy, and not, as we have been taught, to the teachings of the Bible. Lecky says, in his "European Morals:" "The Roman (pagan) religion was essentially domestic, and it was a main object of the legislator to surround marriage with every circumstance of dignity and solemnity. Monogamy was from the earliest times strictly enjoined, and it was one of the great benefits that have resulted from the expansion of Roman power that it made this type dominant in Europe. In the legends of early Rome we have ample evidence of the high moral estimate of women and their prominence in Roman life. The tragedies of Lucretia and Virginia display a delicacy of honor, a sense of the supreme excellence of unsullied purity, which no Christian nation could surpass."

PORTLAND NOTES.

Liberal Friends: The time has come when I must ask all who are able and willing to send in their contributions to carry on the next convention. Remember a request last year similar to this brought in five hundred and sixty-nine dollars and seventy-five cents. I feel that you are just as noble and generous now as then. With my inexperience I made you as good a convention as I could. This time the effort will be more systematic and our demands will be presented to the next legislature for legal enactment. If necessary I will go in person and see to it.

Our talent has increased and new and powerful speakers will appear on our platform. The following telegram has been received:

PITTSFIELD, ME., Sept. 8, 1890.

To C. Beal, Pres. Secular Union: I will be at your congress; advertise as you please.

ALONZO T. JONES.

John E. Remsburg, the philosopher, thinker, and patriot, will be with us.

Moses Hull, of Chicago, the hero of a hundred debates, will give us one of his mighty efforts. It is said that he knows more about the tariff question than any man in America and will probably make a canvass of Oregon against that and other measures. His friends here say that hundreds will come to hear him at the convention.

Judge Waite, of Chicago, Charles Bradlaugh, of the British parliament, and Colonel Ingersoll have not yet sent in their answers. Ex-Chief Justice Cole, of Iowa, who was twelve years on the supreme bench, has promised me personally to be here if possible. It was he who induced General Grant to urge through his message the total separation of church and state.

Below is a letter from the Hon. Robert A. Miller, who was a candidate for Congress against Burger Herman. When Herman is sent to the United States Senate or elected vice-president, then Robert, although a young man, will go to Congress, all of which will soon be the good luck of these liberal-minded men.

C. BEAL.

JACKSONVILLE, OR., Sept. 1, 1890.

C. BEAL, ESQ, My Dear Sir: Your letter of recent date at hand. My numerous business engagements will prevent my attendance at your meeting on the 11th, 12th, and 13th of October. If possible I will be with you for a day at least, but it would not be safe to count on me as one of the speakers. You know that I am in sympathy with all lovers of liberty, whether it be of the person or of the intellect, and if possible I would strike every fetter from the body and the soul and the mind and the heart of humanity.

Wishing you a pleasant and profitable meeting, I am very truly yours,

ROBERT A. MILLER.

HOW MOSES HARMAN WAS LIBERATED.

In "Lucifer" dated August 29, though in fact printed several days later, appears an editorial by Mr. Moses Harman, headed "Home Again," and announcing to his friends that he was released from the Kansas state prison on Saturday, August 30, after just seventeen weeks incarceration there. This release, he explains, is the result of an order for a new trial, on a "writ of error" obtained by Mr. David Overmeyer, his attorney. Mr. Harman was discharged by an order from Judge Caldwell, of the United States circuit court, under bonds of five thousand dollars for his appearance for another hearing or new trial in November. In fact the execution of sentence is "stayed" for the present, and the editor is to be enabled to try his case again under circumstances that must in any event be more favorable to him than those of the first trial.

The misfortunes, mistakes, and outrages of the first trial are sufficiently fresh in the minds of readers of Liberal papers, but there are some things which it is now time to tell concerning the efforts of Mr. Harman's friends to effect his release. Two methods were put in operation, though they were apparently inconsistent, or at least seemed to bear no relation one to the other. Petitions for pardon were circulated, and presented, while at the same time Mr. Overmeyer was moving the usual processes of law to obtain a new trial.

The mills of government grind slowly, especially during the summer season, when every official must have his days or weeks of vacation, and to those who knew just what was being done it seemed a neck-and-neck race of the two plans, with little choice between them; but the "writ of error" has won, and we all rejoice, as the object was not the success of any particular method, but the accomplishment of the release of our man.

Those who helped the petition plan will be interested to know that Mr. M. M. Pomeroy obtained an interview with President Harrison and Attorney-General Miller in behalf of Mr. Harman on July 29; that he then presented verbal and written arguments and "brief" showing cause why Mr. Harman had been improperly convicted and imprisoned, together with a petition "of the vicinage" numbering nearly three hundred names of the business men of Valley Falls (about five-sixths of that class), and that on August 9 a roll of over seven thousand names, two hundred feet long, was forwarded to Washington and its receipt acknowledged by the department. Many petitions have been sent direct, and rumor says there have been enough to occasion remark in the White House that Mr. Harman had a good many friends in a great many places. Quite a number of petitions have come to hand since the large roll was sent in, so that one who is in a position to know has not the slightest doubt that over ten thousand names have been signed to Harman petitions. I was about to make another roll when the news came of Mr. Harman's release by due process of law, and it therefore hardly seems to be "timely" now to send in more pardon petitions. We may conclude either that the two methods have worked together for good, that the department of justice in Washington has favored and helped to make possible the new trial, or that now that there is to be a new trial the president and his advisers will consider it expedient to postpone further consideration of the policy of pardon until the regular court proceedings shall have been concluded.

Those who have spent time on petitions need not regret it, for this work has certainly been of great utility in forwarding the cause, giving publicity to the issue at stake and arousing sentiment favorable to liberty of press, while it is also quite possible that it has had much to do with getting the opportunity for new trial: and now let us work to insure against mistakes in the next trial. We have always recognized that as to the merits of the case, the matter under indictment, and the character and standing of the accused, we never had a better case in which to strive for the right to publish and mail proper discussions on social questions involving the relations of the sexes in general and in marriage in particular. We can hardly expect to have a better case to go before a jury with and argue on its merits.

It is now a good time to recall the fact that one great reason why our opportunities for a fair hearing of this case were utterly lost in the first trial was because Mr. Harman was so short of ready means as to feel under the necessity of economizing when it was very unsafe so to do. We do not mean to ignore other reasons, nor in the light of the past could we put forth the notion that it might have been possible to have had a fair trial before Judge Foster with any amount of financial support that it might have been possible to supply to Mr. Harman, but Judge Caldwell is credited with possessing a judicial spirit, and a respect for his court that will make impossible any such prostitution of it as occurred when Judge Foster disgracefully insulted his victim while sentencing him to five years' imprisonment. With Judge Caldwell on the bench and Mr. Overmeyer attending to Mr. Harman's and other interests we may take new hope and work with fresh courage for the cause of liberty and justice.—Dr. Foote's Health Monthly.

DEATH OF JUDGE HEYDENFELDT.

Ex-Judge Solomon Heydenfeldt, the pioneer, the jurist, and the Freethinker, died in this city Monday morning, September 15. His death is the cause of universal mourning among those who knew him.

Judge Heydenfeldt was born in Charleston, S. C., in 1816—had he lived till Tuesday he would have been seventy-four years old. He was first sent to a Pennsylvania college, where he studied Greek, Latin, and mathematics, but never graduated. Returning to Charleston he studied law under De Saussiere, son of the great South Carolina chancellor. When twenty-one years old he moved to Alabama, where he was admitted to the bar. He remained there thirteen years, and then started for San Francisco in the spring of 1850, and at once took a place in the leading rank of attorneys. He was elected judge of the state supreme court in the fall of 1851, but resigned after five years' service because the salary was not sufficient to provide for himself and family. When the test oath was adopted by the legislature he, in company with Gregory Yale, E. J. Pringle, and other lawyers of Southern birth, felt that he could not subscribe to it. He therefore ceased active practice and took up that branch of the profession for which his legal learning especially fitted him—that of advisory counsel. This formed the feature of his work up to the date of his death.

He shares with Felix Adler, of New York, in the fatherhood of the free kindergarten movement in this country. He, with Julius Jacobs and another gentleman, called the first meeting for establishing a free kindergarten in San Francisco. He has long been president of the Pioneer Kindergarten.

He leaves a large amount of property. There are three sons, Solomon Heydenfeldt, Jr., Frederick O., and Thomas.

Upon learning of the death of Judge Heydenfeldt Monday morning, Judge Wallace said from the bench:

"Judge Heydenfeldt was in some respects the most notable man of our time. He was one of the Julius Cæsar type of men—one who 'held on his rank unshaken of motion.' He was in absolute mental self-poise. His intellect was of the purest mold fixed upon a granite pedestal—truth. His intellectual integrity was exceptional. His analysis of a subject in hand was unsparing: it moved upon a straight and unobstructed pathway and was never impeded by the obstacles which so often led others astray.

"More than thirty years have passed since his judicial career terminated—all the bench and most of the bar of the day having preceded him to the grave. Only a few of us remain, but during all this time it has been a delight to recur to what he was, what he did as a judge. Much of this is, of course, to be seen in the official records of the court—its printed volumes of decisions—but more, much more in its tradition, in incident and anecdote, in the stories of professional life which, like pictures upon the memory, preserve to us Heydenfeldt's gentleness of manner on the bench, and his wonderful clearness of thought; these together illustrate his faculty as a great judge. . . . The great services of Judge Heydenfeldt, owing to their nature, I suppose, will never be appreciated by the people; they do not strike the public mind nor arrest general attention like such a thing as the accidental picking up of the first piece of gold; the state has appropriately perpetuated the memory of Marshall because he was the discoverer of the precious metal in her soil, but it may be doubtful if our people are thoughtful enough to consider that except for Heydenfeldt's decision in Irwin vs. Phillipps the benefits to us of Marshall's lucky discovery would have been comparatively small. The public will therefore probably never even think of such a thing as building a monument to Heydenfeldt, nor will the bar do anything, or even ask anything of the sort for the deceased man, who was by all odds the most illustrious member of their profession."

THREE OUT OF SIX.

To the Editors of Freethought:

You have scored three points out of a possible six, in your proposed methods of settling the difficulties which are the principal subjects now being considered by thinking people. Women should be accorded the right to vote. All restriction, whether by license tax, or internal revenue, or import impositions, should be removed from the liquor traffic. The legal ties which relate to marriages should be, to say the least, subjected to a thorough revision in the line of reduction. Churches should be deprived of all privileges not accorded to secular bodies. But "the shortest way to abolish land monopoly is" not (in my opinion) "to give monopolists no title whereby they can hold more land than they use," for the following reasons: First, invalidation of present titles to land would give rise to quite as much confusion, and would be quite as difficult to bring about, as would some project which would put a stop to the evil complained of; second, no one could establish a criterion by which to ascertain whether a holder was properly using the land he owns or not; third, if you admit the right to own land in fee simple, you have no right to restrict the owner's disposal of it, or to question his right to use it as he sees fit, or to not use it at all; fourth, all the evils which grow out of land monopoly would remain if your plan were adopted; fifth, your plan is entirely impossible, for the reason that in order to establish it it would be necessary to show the justice of your remedy, during which proceeding you would only succeed in demonstrating that land should not be subjected to private ownership at all, which would destroy all chance of carrying your point, by calling attention to the real remedy, which consists in removing all possible profit from monopolizing land, by diverting the added value which increasing population causes from individual pockets to the public purse, where it belongs. If the increment of value were taken from land-holders, no man would, or could, hold valuable land idle, and those who hold such land thus would then drop it, for the same reason that the boy let fall (without being told) the piece of iron in the blacksmith shop—it would be too hot to hold.

Nor does it appear to me that the way to settle the financial question is to allow everyone to coin or print his own money, for if we suppose that there is no other but such currency as this, we should have as many different values for a dollar as there were makers of dollars, which is equivalent to saying that we should have no standard at all. Further, if the government is still to be allowed to perform its coining functions, your plan would not operate, because no one would take the money of an irresponsible private person so long as he could get the currency guaranteed by the government.

The shortest way to settle all other questions is by finding out what is wrong, and after ripe discussion and mature deliberation, applying the remedy which there is the best ground for believing will correct the evil complained of. Such discussion and deliberation have not yet been had, either on the land or the money question, which fact impels me to enter my protest against any such out of hand settlement as you propose for putting to rest those momentous subjects.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

E. O. ROSCOE.

WORD FROM SAN DIEGO.

To the Editors of Freethought:

I send you one of our circular letters to Liberals to show what strides we are making down here in the "south west corner." The organization and incorporation of the San Diego Liberal Union is due to the untiring efforts of Dr. J. L. York, during the six months that he lectured for us. He also organized a Sunday Lyceum before his departure to other fields of labor, which will be a rallying-point for Rationalism and Freethought when we have no speakers. The lyceum is already too large for the hall where it is held. This puts us on the "warpath" to get a hall of our own, and the prospect is fair that we will have it in the near future. This will be a gala day for the Liberals of Southern California. Then we can entertain the "Secular Pilgrim" et id genus omne, and none will be turned away for want of room, as hundreds were from Dr. York's lectures, and some of our lecturers have been turned away for want of means.

It was with pain and chagrin that I read of the proposed resignation of Geo. E. Macdonald, the editor of FREETHOUGHT and secretary of the publishing company. Such a step would be ruinous. FREETHOUGHT is a paper of which every Liberal in California should be proud, and we know not where we could find a better editor. Those who have seemed to be unappreciative I hope will arouse from their lethargy. I am doubtless found among this class; but the fear of losing our editor should wake us all to renewed efforts. California cannot afford to give up her one Liberal paper or the Freethought Publishing Company.

The time has come when Secularists of every shade and grade should unite against a common enemy—the God-in-the-Constitution party. It requires no shrewdness to see that the combined forces of supernaturalism—from the Catholic hierarchy down to the W. C. T. U. and Y. M. C. A. bigots—are determined to destroy the disinctive feature of our republic—religious liberty. They are massing their batteries in California because she stands pre-eminent as a free state with no Sunday laws or church exemption. The crafty W. F. Crafts has been here the most of the time for two years past, seeking, like Paul, to "catch" the people "with guile" in his pretended anxiety about "rest for the laboring man." The W. C. T. U. of this collected last week over a thousand dollars from this overburdened people, for the purpose of carrying on their crafty schemes of Sunday rest for the poor.

We can never meet these combined foes without combination on our part. We need to be thoroughly organized all along the line. We must keep up our local organizations, sustain our papers and lecturers, and act in harmony with the head center of our Freethought army—the American Secular Union.

The broad platform adopted at the last Congress of this association and so ably sustained by its president, Dr. R. B. Westbrook, and the secretary, Miss Ida C. Craddock, is the only ground on which we can hope to circumvent the united hosts which are massing their forces to overthrow religious liberty in the United States. No one sect or ism can successfully meet these combined forces alone. We must unite on one issue, leaving minor differences to be settled when the victory is gained.

As Dr. Westbrook says in his call for the fourteenth annual Congress: "Let us come together at this Congress, as Freethinkers, Spiritualists, Unitarians, Universalists, Free Religionists, Quakers, Progressive Jews, and Liberal Christians, and, laying aside our peculiar views on religious questions, unite as American citizens on the one broad platform of no union of church and state, and the complete administration of our secular government on purely secular principles."

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your kind mention of my little book, "Natural Morality," and hoping you will not be compelled to "give up the ship" for want of sails, I remain

Yours for union and progress, MARY A. WHITE.

For a Representative Liberal Gathering.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Yet a few weeks and our Second Annual State Secular Convention will convene at Portland, Oregon. There is much work to accomplish, and hence, we, the Liberals of the West, must make of it a grand success. A better organization must be brought about before we can do effective work.

We all know that in organization lies the success of the church to-day; why, then, do we allow our forces to remain scattered? If we could once have a representative meeting of all our Western Liberals, our strength here would become known; as an organization we would command respect.

Friends, it will not do to think you have done enough for Liberalism when you have discarded your belief in barbarous creeds.

I know there are thousands of Liberals—men and women in influential positions—who are afraid to step out boldly because Freethought is not a popular movement. By why do they not make it so?

It is not the fault of Freethought, but the unwillingness of some of our wealthiest and most influential so-called Liberals.

I am personally acquainted with many teachers in our public schools, who, when talking to me, are as "true blue" as the writer, yet we find their names on that roll of ignorance—the Sunday school register. We find them teaching on Sunday what—if they do their duty—their school-room work must prove to be false.

Of course, they must for a while bear opposition—for what principle of truth was ever established without it?—but if they are capable, if they have the ability, they cannot and will not be barred from their profession.

So let us show our colors; let us at the aforementioned convention show our strength and establish the fact that among scientific, cultured, and advanced thinkers, Liberalism is a popular movement, although the combined forces of ignorance oppose us that they may keep the rotten craft of ignorance afloat. So put forth your best endeavors to be at the convention, which takes place the 11th, 12th, and 13th of next month. It will encourage you, it will give you strength to carry out the good work in your own neighborhood.

Why should you hesitate to reveal to the world the fact that you are a Liberal? And, being so, why fail to promulgate the principles which make you one? If you have never visited Portland, this will give you an excellent opportunity of seeing this commercial center; then, too, the Mechanics' Industrial Exposition takes place simultaneously, and you can see on every side the product of western intelligence and energy.

You could have no better opportunity to visit the metropolis of Oregon.

Yours ever for U. M. L., KATIE KEHM.
New Era, Oregon.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper. PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; 7 ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD and ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50 fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botchers, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50. worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle-aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It gets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N. J.

And buy where you see this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

PORTRAITS

[Enlarged and Finished in Pastel and Crayon.]

First-class work at reasonable prices. Orders and Correspondence solicited. Satisfaction guaranteed. F. C. Baxter & Co., 432 Sutter st., San Francisco.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping

PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills

414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

Volney's "Ruins."

To the Editors of Freethought:

It may seem needless to call attention to a standard classic in Liberal literature, but I know that many Liberals have never enjoyed the rare treat of reading Volney's "Ruins, or: Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires;" and time is constantly bringing new generations to the front, who find so many modern productions that the writers of the past century are apt to be ignored. It is eighteen years since I last read Volney's "Ruins;" and your notably cheap edition, advertised in FREETHOUGHT, led me to procure a copy and again digest the contents of this remarkable work.* Among the profound productions of the human mind, this work of Volney's takes an exalted position, and its style, while being scholarly and dignified, is clear, logical, and comprehensive. From the first page to the last, Volney's "Ruins" is stamped with the impress of a master mind, and reason is invariably appealed to as the rightful autocrat of man in all things that concern his happiness or welfare. Never were the many and varied religions of the earth compared, contrasted, and more thoroughly dissected in a volume of this size; and their glaring absurdities were never more clearly revealed by the pen of man. The origin, natural spread, and growth of all religions is here outlined; and with the utmost clearness we are enabled to see how sects and systems have thrived on a basis of ignorance, deception, and error.

To one interested in tracing the origin and noting the attendant results of the greatest curse that ever afflicted the human family, this work is alive with interest, and never will it lose that interest while the combat goes on between reason and religion. The startling fact is made known in this work that the despised Ethiopian, with his ebony skin and woolly hair, was the founder of a system based on the study of the physical laws of nature, from which all the religious systems of the world have descended; and the part which deception and fraud have ever played under priestly domination is plainly revealed. It is claimed by many that man is naturally religious, but the fact of the matter is, he is naturally ignorant; for he is born into the world as destitute of ideas or knowledge as he is of clothing; and both are furnished him according to the prevailing systems and styles of the country that gives him birth. In this condition of nascent manhood, it is as easy to load the mind with religious errors and nonsense as it is to make fashions in clothing; which vary from the breech clout to the broadcloth coat and plug hat. Being crammed with the falsehoods and fables of dead ancestors, is all that perpetuates religion or keeps man in religious bondage, and when reason is permitted full sway from childhood up, it is safe to say that religion will vanish as darkness flies from the rising sun. Archbishop Reardon, with his knowledge of "man's religious nature" seems to hold this view; for he once affirmed in public that "men and women may acquire religion, but it is seldom. As is the boy so will be the man."

This fact explains the anxiety of the church regarding the education of the young, for well it knows that on this vital point depends its future success or perpetuation. Note its frantic and persistent endeavors to mold the mind of childhood, and the terror which unrestricted reason inspires among all religious classes, and we see how little they are willing to let a being "naturally religious" grow up without restraint or instruction regarding his belief and duties to God. But I wander from the book, though not from the subject, and to conclude what I started to say, will remark that Volney's "Ruins" contains, in a condensed form, more profound and solid sense than any work it has been my fortune to read, and his closing essay on the law of nature is a production that stamps him as a philosophical thinker without a rival; and the laws there outlined and defined contain facts which, if universally recognized and acted upon, would cause more progress in one century, in the humanization of mankind, than has been made from the first records of history to the present era. Religion has had its day in this effort, and it is high time that nature's laws interpreted by man's highest faculty—reason—should now be given a chance; and though more than one hundred years have passed since Volney wrote his code of nature's laws, they need no revision, no amendments; and will stand as reliable and trustworthy as the position of the north star or the daily appearance of the sun. All who have not, should read and meditate on Volney's "Ruins."

C. SEVERANCE.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—
EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

CHRISTIANITY * * *

—AND—

* * * AGNOSTICISM.

A CONTROVERSY

Consisting of papers by

Prof. Thomas Huxley, Rev. Henry Wace,
The Bishop of Peterborough

W. H. Mallock, Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

Price, 30 cents.
Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co.
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, 10 Cents.
Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

The Humboldt Library

—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts.

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
7. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
8. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry
12. Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
13. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
14. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion
15. Longevity. Prolonging life. John Gardner, M.D.
16. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
18. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
20. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kalley Miller.
21. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
22. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
23. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
24. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
25. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
26. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
27. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
28. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
30. The Study of Words.
31. Richard Chenevix Trench.
32. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R.A. Proctor.
33. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
34. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
35. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
36. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
37. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
38. (Geological Sketches.
39. Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
40. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
41. Current Discussions in Science. W. M. Williams.
42. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
43. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
44. The Dawn of History.
45. C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
46. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
47. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
48. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
49. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
50. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange.
51. Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
52. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
53. Animal Automatism. Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
54. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
55. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
56. Illusions.
57. James Sully.
58. The Origin of Species. Two Double Numbers.
59. Charles Darwin. 30 cents each.
60. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
61. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
62. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
63. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, LL.D.
64. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
65. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
66. Technical Education. Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
67. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
68. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
69. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
70. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencer.
71. Archaeology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
72. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
73. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
74. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
75. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
76. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
77. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
78. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
79. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
80. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
81. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
82. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
83. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
84. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
85. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson
86. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
87. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
88. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S.S. Laurie.
89. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin)

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T. H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haeckel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present. Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life, Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Iaing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whymper, Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No. 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Ritchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERY.

Located Eight Miles South of San Jacinto, Cal.
P. A. CLARK, PROPRIETOR.

A full stock of everything in the Nursery line on hand.

APPLES, PEACHES,
PEARS, PLUMS,
APRICOTS, NECTARINES,
PRUNES, ALMONDS,
WALNUTS, QUINCES, ETC.

IN ALL VARIETIES.

A fine lot of Kelsey's Japan Plums, one and two years old.

Send for price list and buy where you can get trees at living rates.

P. A. CLARK, San Jacinto, Cal.

W. M. HINTON & CO.
PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS.
536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San Francisco

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against

LIBERTY,

By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

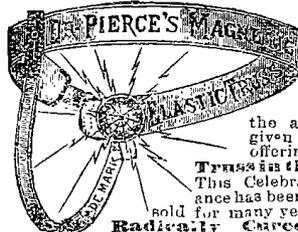

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK
In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Par-ton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co.
828 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

RUPTURE

In advertising Dr. PIERCE'S Patent MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS, the assurance is given that we are offering the Best Truss in the World. This Celebrated Appliance has been extensively sold for many years and has Radically Cured thousands of cases of Rupture. This is an Electric Truss (the only successful one ever invented); has no Iron Hoops or Steel Springs about it and being elastic, can be worn with ease and comfort Night and Day. It's a perfect retainer! For further particulars of Truss, send 2c. in stamps for Pamphlet No. 1 and REMEMBER that Dr. Pierce's Genuine Electric Truss contains our Private Signature exactly like that shown at top of this advertisement. Beware of inferior imitations! Address: MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COMPANY, 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,
Hygienic Physician.
Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,
Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.
HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m. 25tf

Health AND Hygienic Works.

- Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
- How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
- Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy, $1.
- Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.50.
- Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
- Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer, $1.
- Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.
- Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina, Ills. 50.
- Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
- Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F.R.C.S. 30 cents

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS AND TRACTS.

- God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.
- Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.
- Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.
- God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.
- Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.
- Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.
- Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.
- The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.
- Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.
- The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.
OLIVER HUNCKLEY - SUPERINTENDENT
Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.
N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED
CURES
Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung
DISEASES
By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen.
Positive cure for Cancer.
26t37 Room 84, Flood B'ldg.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT. By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors. The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS, 15 cents.

THE MONARCH.

TRADE MARK.

None Genuine Without this Trade Mark on Every Bottle.

PURELY VEGETABLE.
AN INFALLIBLE CURE
—FOR—
RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, GOUT,
Lumbago, Asthma, Constipation, Sciatica, Dropsy, Malaria, Indigestion, and all Kidney, Liver, and Stomach Troubles.

$1 PER BOTTLE, SIX FOR $5.
C.H. WEBB, Sole Proprietor and Manufacturer, No. 40 O'Farrel Street, San Francisco.
For sale by all druggists. Send for Circulars.
NEVER FAILS. CAUTION—Beware of imitations. Note my trade mark closely.

$25.00 REWARD $25.00
For any of the above diseases that C. H. WEBB'S HÆMONY will not cure.
References from People Who Have Used C. H. Webb's Hæmony.

Hon. A. Van R. Paterson, Judge Supreme Court, S.F.
Henry L. Dodge, Esq., Pres. Sather Banking Co., S.F.
Captain Ferris, Steamer Apache, San Francisco.
S. M. West, Esq., 1209 Bush street, San Francisco.
Robert Smith, contractor, 1810 Larkin street, S. F.
John Birmingham, Police Officer, 340 18th street, S. F.
James T. Bonefield, Member of Lincoln Post, No. 1. Residence, 8 Harriet street, San Francisco.
Mrs. W. Gerdes, widow of Ex-Chief Gerdes, San Jose Fire dept. Residence, Haywards st. Los Angeles.
And I can also refer you to hundreds of others who Have Been Cured by my great remedy HÆMONY.

C. H. Webb's Hæmony. Carefully packed and shipped by Express to all parts of the world. Send money by P. O. Order or through Wells, Fargo & Co.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

Standard Scientific Works

- Works by Alexander Bain.
 English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science..... 1.75
- Works by Charles Darwin.
 Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization..... 2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols..... 4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species..... 2.00
- Works by J. W. Draper.
 History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75
- Works by Ernst Haeckel.
 The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00
- Works by Huxley.
 Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses..... 1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals..... 2.00
- Works by John Stewart Mill.
 Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols..... $4.00
 On Liberty..... 1.25
- Works by Richard A. Proctor.
 Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities..... 1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours..... 1.75
- Works by Herbert Spencer.
 Studies of Sociology..... $1.50
 First Principles..... 2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols..... 4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols..... 4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols..... 4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc..... 2.00
 Universal Progress..... 2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic..... 2.00
 Education..... 1.25
 Organic Evolution......75
- Works by Andrew D. White.
 Paper-Money Inflation in France..... $.50
 The Warfare of Science..... 1.00
- Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
 Body and Mind.....$1.5
 Responsibility in Mental Disease..... 1.0
- Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
 Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life..... 1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

- By Asa Gray.
 Darwiniana..... $2.00
- By L. L. McLaughlin.
 Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50
- By C. Marcel.
 Study of Languages.....$1.25
- By Lester F. Ward.
 Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00
- By Frederick Overman.
 A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00
- B. F. G. Fairfield.
 Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25
- By W. B. Carpenter.
 Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25
- By Prof. Jos. Lo Conte.
 Evolution.....$1.50
- By Sir John Lubbock.
 Origin of Civilization.....$5.00
- By Charles A. Abbott.
 A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50
- By Garrett P. Serviss.
 Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50
- By Nathan Sheppard.
 Darwinism States by Darwin Himself..... $1.50
- English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25
- Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

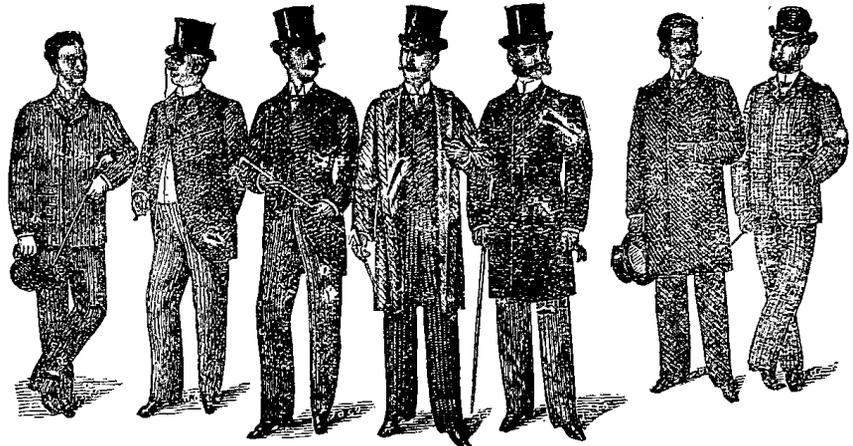

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
 375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR..... $25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

—BY—

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."
 339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1.
 Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. E. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

Prof. W. S. Bell's Lectures in Oregon.

Summerville	Sept. 12, 13
Heppner	" 15, 16
Dayton	" 20, 21
Rosalia	" 23
Plaza	" 24
Oakdale	" 26
Spokane	" 27
Davenport	" 28, 29

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 7
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 10
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond" 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,

Freethought Pub. Co.,
 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

- Per Year.....$1.50
- Six Months......75
- Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.
 12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth $1 50.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year. The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

- Architects and Builders.
F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.
- Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.
Hopper & Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.
- Assayers.
H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.
- Boot and Shoemaker.
George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoe maker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater.
C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street
- Cabinet-makers.
A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.
- Carpenters and Builders.
A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND
- Contracting Painters.
Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and
- Crockery, Glassware, Etc.
Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.
- Dentists.
S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)
- Geologist.
Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.
- Hides, Pelts, and Furs.
C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.
- Independent German Congregation.
Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.
- Laundries.
J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.
- Lawyers.
Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.
- Lodging Houses.
E. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.
- Merchant Tailors.
Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.
Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.
- Magnesia Sectional Covering.
C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.
- Music Teachers.
Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)
- Physicians and Surgeons.
G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.
Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.
- Stoves and Plumbing.
F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.
- Stoves (Gasoline).
Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.
- Upholstering and Furniture.
August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.
- Wine, Beer, and Liquor.
Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.
Rapp & Debarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.
J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.
The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.
- Watchmakers and Jewelers.
Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.
Otto Siuz, 320 Kearny st.

S. J. HAMMOND,
WATCHES
WATCHMAKER, $1 AND JEWELER
CLEANED.
1061 Market st., Opp. Junction of Jones and McAllister sts., San Francisco. 5t34

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St
San Francisco.
Watches Cleaned & Warranted, $1
Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 5t34

The Degraded Press of Russia.

Within a very recent period, says "Blackwood's Magazine"—that is, among the more or less liberal period of from 1860-80—the Russian journalistic press was conducted by an able band of editors, who, more or less regardless of consequences, made it their business to denounce abuses, to attack ministers, and to oppose corruption in all parts of the state. In spite of the censorship and all its machinery, in spite of the surveillance exercised by the late Count Tolstoi over the whole production of Russian opinion and thought, in spite of his constant desire to stifle all manifestation of liberal public opinion and to imbue others with his own ideas, in spite of all the hindrances and obstacles of which an account has been given, the newspaper press of Russia during the period just mentioned exercised a very great influence, which was perfectly independent of the government, whose acts it judged and criticised in the teeth of all the endeavors which were made to thwart and hamper its action. Far from its being dependent upon the government the latter often saw its hand forced by the newspaper press, which it was supposed to rule despotically.

It must surely be deemed to have been greatly to the credit of this gallant band of editors that, hampered and worried by all sorts of vexatious regulations as they were, they succeeded in assisting their country so much in the task of reorganization and reform. This race of editors, however, has now completely disappeared. Katkoff was the last of the race, and it is scarcely probable that Russia will see another editor so gifted as he was, who will have such powerful support in the highest quarters. During the last six or seven years there has been a most marked deterioration in the tone of the newspaper press. Even the official paper has not escaped this deterioration. The two official organs, the "Rookski Invalide" and the "Official Journal," which used to publish leading articles, have both decayed into mere gazettes. In a word, the degradation of the Russian press is complete, and, as a consequence, the Russian censor has, generally speaking, a comparatively easy time of it.

NATHANIEL VAUGHN

A Splendid Radical Novel.
BY FREDERIKA MACDONALD.
404 pages. Price reduced to $1. The Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.
Price, 50 c. Address Freethought, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.
BY W. R. GREG.
Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.
Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

PROFESSION OF FAITH
OF A SAVOYARD VICAR.

—BY—

J. J. ROUSSEAU.

The above volume includes "A Search for Truth," by Ralph Iron (Olive Schreiner).
Cloth, 50 cents. Paper, 25 cents.
Address The Freethought Pub. Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

PRINTING!

The Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

- Letter-heads,
- Bill-heads,
- Programmes,
- Envelopes,
- Business Cards,
- Postal Cards
- Tickets,
- Placards,
- Re eipts,
- Posters,
- Dodgers,
- Circulars,
- Etc. e t

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

COUNTRY ORDERS SOLICITED.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,
Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Vol. III—No. 39.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal. as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - SEPTEMBER 27, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Snohomish is gleaming amidst the woods. The giants are disappearing, and the cottage and the flower-gardens advance. The primeval forest bows its head. The mills are humming, and the white flags of glittering steam float in the van of progress.

This is a great country. I guess Snohomish is four times as large as when I first visited it, three years ago, and real estate has increased in many cases tenfold. There has been a wonderful growth all over the sound, and still the tide is coming. In the next ten years there will be a marvelous development.

There are some of the finest agricultural lands in the world about Snohomish. Good cleared lands are worth from $150 to $200 per acre. Besides the agricultural resources there are untold treasures of gold, silver, lead, tin, copper, iron, coal, and granite. The mountains are full of prospectors just now on the trail for "Solomon's mines," or something better.

The soil, of four kinds, the bench or high lands, the river bottoms, beaver marsh, and the tide marsh, is exceedingly fertile. It produces beets two feet long, cabbage three and four feet in circumference, four and five hundred bushels of potatoes to the acre, three and four tons of hay, and seventy-five to one hundred bushels of oats to the acre. The fruits are apples, pears, prunes, peaches, cherries, plums, and quinces. Strawberries, blackberries, etc., grow in profusion. Cranberries can be produced in abundance on the low lands. The hops this year yield an average of $500 per acre. There are deep-sea and river fishing all about. The climate is agreeable, a dry summer and sunny winter. There is but little snow. The timber is chiefly fir, cedar, and pine. There are trees twelve feet in diameter and three hundred feet in height. The ordinary saw-logs are twenty-four to sixty inches in diameter. Near Snohomish is a great cedar thirty-three feet in diameter.

Who can ever name the rivers of Snohomish county! The tongue must run quite trippingly to get over them without stumbling. Try it. Here it goes—Snohomish, Stillaquamish, Skyhomish, Snoqualmie, the Sultan, and the Pillchuck. That will do for one lesson. I don't think that he that runs may lead.

What these names mean I cannot tell. Like the Bible, they are the mystery of mysteries. The railroad now runs from Seattle to Snohomish, but is being built on to Silver Creek mining district, to Mukielteo and Port Gardner bay.

A handsome school-house has been built since I was here, and a new court-house at a cost of $2500 is to be erected. Alas! there are some churches here, but they are not very big, and the splendid Freethought Hall is a dream and nothing more.

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen
The saddest are these, it might have been."

The lands throughout the county sell all the way from $10 to $200 per acre. The unsurveyed townships will soon open up abundant opportunities for home-seekers.

On this "ragged edge" of tumultuous activity, the wilderness and civilization in close quarters, I did what I could for Freethought. But it is hard work to lecture in these "boom towns." I suppose if I should give a discourse on the rise and fall of corner lots I should have a large audience, but a discourse on the demands of Liberalism has not any market value. I didn't have much of a turn-out and I was quite disappointed. It didn't seem at all like old times. The new population doesn't know much about Freethought, and those who do know show a great deal of indifference, which indicates that they don't know so much as they think they do. An indifferent Liberal is profoundly ignorant of the way of the world. An indifferent Liberal may think that his indifference is based upon a superior knowledge, but as a matter of fact it is based upon "superior" ignorance. No Liberal man or woman who really understands the situation can be careless of their influence or the influence of others. Some Liberals are wont to say they know it all, and have no need of attending a lecture or reading a Liberal journal. Liberalism of this sort is simply orthodoxy turned inside out. There is a new face, but the same old body.

However, I enjoyed the campaign, for there are a choice few here who are always ready to "lend a hand," for they look upon the "broad and universal theatre" of the world, and not simply their own township, and believe in the progress of ideas as well as corner lots and the cash account. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Eddy have the latch-string always out, and the welcome is cordial. I came in the evening time, rather unexpectedly, to the music of the Georgia Minstrels, being a train ahead of the appointment, but the Secular Pilgrim found all that heart could wish—the days of labor were pleasant in the soft and genial sunshine. I could not find a more serene place for thoughts and dreams and hopes than in this quiet home, from whence I could look over the growing town, and beyond the mighty woods to the splendid face of Mt. Ranier when the mists have rolled away.

I gave three lectures, but it was like rowing against the stream, and I never felt less in a mood for talking. Bare walls and empty seats are awfully uninspiring. There was a Presbyterian minister present the first night, but he retreated during the cel-ture. He is said to be liberal and preaches evolution to the amazement of his congregation, and I hope that he will keep in the good way and that my lecture did not demoralize him for future progress. I presume my lectures had some value for the few earnest listeners that I had, and when the boom is over perhaps the harvest will appear.

Comrade J. S. Martin is still floating on "the dark, the silent stream" where the salmon leap and the trout multiply with darting forms. His boathouse rises and falls with the tide, and here he is secure as a king, with his home upon the waters; no land-tax for him. Prosperity comes to his door, and his many boats speed up and down the river with festival array. Within his neatly-furnished cabin are Freethought books and papers, and here he passes many a placid hour, rocking slowly on the billow and gathering the thoughts of the ages. He is as true as ever to the work, and it wouldn't take many like him to put Freethought away ahead of the churches. He keeps the artillery in line, and there is no retreat.

Elbridge Morse has been tumbled into good fortune with the equanimity of a philosopher. The boom "busted" his place of residence in the city and he had to find new quarters, and he bought a ranch in the country, which has quadrupled in value, and one of these days it will give him wealth and leisure for literary study and production. He writes on everything—history, philosophy, art, mythology, tide lands, farming, cabbage raising, etc. I hope he will get rich and give his stores of information in compact form to the world.

I was pleased to meet with Geo. T. Cline, of Seattle, formerly of Silverton. Peter Grevelle, an old-timer of Mukielteo, is on the roll of Freethought, a successful pioneer. H. C. Comegys, Mr. Burton, J. W. Frame of the "Sun," Mr. Head of the "Eye," and others are among our friends and acquaintances of this place. There is a fine Liberal element in Snohomish, but at present it is not in the way of practical work. There is a literary club established where all sorts of subjects are discussed and Freethought culture is advanced. I presume on some other occasions I should have full houses, but this time the stars were not in our favor and we had to make the best of it.

Port Angeles amply makes up for the disappointments of Snohomish. Although it is about the farthest western point on Puget sound, it is a live point and does not intend to be left in the race for empire, and its chances are just as good as any. It is a beautiful place. The water views are lovely. Over across the Straits of Fuca, seventeen miles distant, shines Victoria in the luminous horizon, and the bright blue hills are beyond. The spit stretches three miles to the glittering lighthouse, inclosing the broad spaces of the harbor. Mt. Baker in clear weather discloses its beaming forehead. Back of the wooded shores where nestles the incipient metropolis tower the Olympics like a massive chain of jewels. The climate is agreeable. Flowers bloom almost all winter. The summer's heat is scarcely ever above 75 degrees. It is a delightful residence city, but its opportunities for business in future are beyond calculation. Two or three railroads are pretty sure to come in here sometime, connecting Port Angeles with Port Townsend, Tacoma, Grey's Harbor, and Portland. Property has increased almost tenfold since I was here three years ago. The rush of business has somewhat changed the original purpose of the Puget Sound Co-operative Colony. It has become, as I understand it, a co-operative association for the purpose of holding real estate and improvements; but its original purpose may yet prevail. Mills are in operation by the colony. There are immense quantities of timber in the neighborhood. The harbor is ten miles square, of a sufficient depth everywhere to float the largest vessels in the world. It is unobstructed by bars, rock, or other obstacles to navigation. Sailing craft without the assistance of steam can reach this anchorage. Nature, with this enormous "spit" four miles long and five hundred feet wide, has done more for the perfection of the harbor than any engineering could possibly do. The base of this spit is from one thousand to fifteen hundred feet wide, and the action of the waves tends to increase rather than weaken this wonderful barrier. The business portion of the city is along the water front and the residence portion is on a gently-sloping elevation, reaching inland for several miles.

The last year has been the most important of all to the prosperity of Port Angeles. A city government has been established and public improvements taken in hand by a mayor and council, composed of its most energetic citizens. Through the town site itself flow four streams of sparkling water. Reservoirs will be constructed, electric lights furnished, and an electric railway is in contemplation.

Alaska, Australia, South America, and the South Pacific coast will furnish markets for this place.

Port Angeles has been made a sub-port of entry recently by act of Congress and this will double the value of its business capacities.

The early settlers of Port Angeles were those brave pioneers who are always pushing toward the setting sun. But here was the ultima thule—they could no farther go. There is no harbor between here and the ocean, and no harbor of superior excellence nearer than that of San Francisco. Besides lumber, the finest coal of all grades is to be found in the vicinity. As a home, Port Angeles cannot be excelled by any city in the Northwest. There is now daily communication by steamship between here and Pt. Townsend, Seattle, and Tacoma.

The Union Pacific and Northern Pacific have made complete surveys to this point. This will bring Port Angeles only 170 miles from Portland.

In this thriving city thus on the verge of future greatness I find one of the finest and most progressive Liberal elements in the whole country. The Secular Union is flourishing; holds a meeting every Sunday evening which is well attended. In the original colony there was a large Freethought material, and this still exerts its influence; and Liberalism finds a congenial home in this beautiful country, where the ocean gives its grandest lessons and the mountains lift to heaven their glorious peaks. This is a fit place for a magnificent temple to humanity.

I gave five lectures in all—one on Saturday evening at Macdonald's Hall, on Sunday afternoon at the West end, at Morse and Thompson's Hall, on Sunday evening at the schoolhouse, the rooms of the Secular Union, and Monday and Tuesday evenings at Macdonald's Hall. The audiences increased right along, and it might be said in some cases that there was no "standing room." On Sunday a large number could not find any accommodation. The "famous" Mrs. Molloy, having heard in far-off Kansas that Port Angeles was the choice location of Infidels, came here on purpose to start a revival, and she has held her meetings ever since I have been here, but the attendance at the lectures does not seem to be diminished. In fact, I think we are capturing some of the Christians. On Tuesday evening, the Rev. A. H. Howells, of the Congregational church, was present and invited to make a few remarks, which he did in a liberal spirit, and admitted that he had but little issue to make with what I said—that it was good. Mr. Howells is evidently upon the broad platform, and it won't take much of an evolution to bring him into open and avowed advocacy of Freethought principles, and he indicates which way the tide is turning here and many nominal Christians indorse his views. If the Liberals remain together harmoniously, and work without creed for the Demands of Liberalism, they will be a strong organization. It is purposed now to build a hall. A lot has been given by Mr. and Mrs. Peters for that object, and undoubtedly within the coming year a commodious edifice will be built, and success assured for the cause. In no place have I found brighter prospects, or better workers than here, and if any Liberal is hunting for a home in the far West, where the course of empire takes its way, he would do wisely to look in upon Port Angeles, to shake hands with good comrades, and take time by the forelock and settle down, and help make this a splendid fort for Freethought, the "Port of Angels," as the old sailors used to call it, where the riches and commerce of the world are sure sometime to create a vast center of industry and progress.

E. E. Seevers, president of the Port Angeles Secular Union, is the man for the place; genial, earnest, devoted to the cause, and an efficient officer. His father, now of Orland, California, was a Liberal before him, and author of that remarkable poem, "Truth and Error," published several years ago in the Investigator.

Frank Morse, secretary of the Union, is one of the best workers on the coast. He keeps things a-going no matter what the obstacles. He is a stalwart Liberal, thoroughly posted in the principles and facts of Freethought, and always on deck. I am under obligation to him for his kind and generous services.

L. P. Crawford gives the grasp of spiritual comradeship, but likes the earth, and would make a good neighbor, and we may touch firesides one of these days where the Olympics send down the benediction.

Mr. and Mrs. Macdonald make the pilgrim a good home, and the hard work of the campaign mingles with congenial rest.

I enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Dr. F. S. Lewis, and the time was all too short for the good fellowship. The doctor gave me more light than anybody else on the Single Tax theory, but I haven't got it through my head yet. If all the people own the land, I can see the point; but do all the people own the land? I ask the question and pause for the demonstration. Is there any ownership in land except by use? Land not used is not owned by anybody, not even by the people.

Louis Williams is on Platonic heights and contemplations, and is not ready to formulate knowledge, but prefers to revel in the infinite without any definite proposition. But his hospitable home has the firelight of real companionship and genuine humanity. Around his table, where ideas sparkle as well as other good things of more solid nature, I had the pleasure of a sociable acquaintance with the Rev. Mr. Howells. He is a graduate of Yale college, and I find him a man of broad culture. The ancient orthodoxy does not linger much about time. He is dangerously near the line of sound and sensible heresy. We can shake hands as comrades, I believe. There is no impassable chasm.

D. R. Callen is a vigorous veteran and will keep the ball rolling rain or shine.

I was pleased to make the acquaintance of Mrs. Valdo, and Miss Lila Valdo, her daughter. Mrs. Valdo has worked in nearly every state in the Union for reform, and she has not grown old yet. Woman never does. Eternal youth is hers by natural right. This is better than suffrage.

Norman R. Smith, whom I met three years ago in Colorado, full of enthusiasm for the future of Port Angeles, now rejoices in the fulfillment of his glowing prophecies. He is always going ahead. He built the first bridge in the country, secured the port of entry, drove the first horse and carriage, etc. He is never without some new enterprise for the improvement of the place. He is one of the gayest and most brilliant pioneers I ever met, full of grit, and always in good humor.

Geo. Venable Smith is now judge of probate and is deservedly popular. He has suffered and sacrificed bravely for reform, and I hope he will enter into his reward, not beyond but here and now.

We welcome upon the roll of FREETHOUGHT, W. E. Van Allen, L. P. Crawford, Mrs. Mary A. McLennan, W. S. McLaughlin, O. B. Gordon, J. P. Christensen, Fred R. Thompson, Ed. Studivan, Geo. H. Gale, O. Erickson, J. W. Allen, Louis Williams, twelve new subscribers, a glad omen of success.

Fred Edwards, vice-president of the Union, Earnest Burns, Sr. and Jr., John Cooledge, who is a passenger of the Ironclad Age, Frank McGill, Geo. Haines, Adolph Anderson and others are members of this Union, which, I guess, flings its flag farther westward than any other in the republic.

Mr. and Mrs. Woods and the children I was glad to see. Formerly of Ohio, they now find the orient of Freethought in the setting sun.

Mr. Charles Peters and Mrs. Laura Hall Peters have been visiting in Europe, and I did not have the privilege of meeting them. They are still at the front, and have generously donated a lot for the new Freethought hall. The torch of hymen mingles its brilliant rays with the glittering light of reason and liberty. Good fortune to our friends. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA.

Nearly every disinterested person returning from the scenes of Christian work in foreign lands reports that missionary effort among intelligent "heathens" is a failure. The latest testimony to this effect comes from Col. John H. Twigg, of the British service, recently stationed in India. Colonel Twigg was in San Francisco last week, and gave a newspaper reporter some facts about the religious condition of the Hindoos. In the course of his interview he said:

"While it is with much regret that I make the statement, which will be at total variance with the reports of the Christian missionaries, I can safely say that the spreading of Christianity in India is a complete failure. It has made no progress whatever in the last few years, and there is no future for religious work. The so-called native Christians are simply such in name and comprise the very worst element of the native population. In the south of India the natives have opportunities of joining the old social and religious organizations, but in northern India, where I have recently lived, the people are isolated and are outcasts in every sense of the word. Just prior to my departure a new census was about to be taken, and this will show a remarkable increase in population. The growth of India is so rapid that missionaries and the Christian religion can make no impression whatever against the native and older doctrines and beliefs. The only good work that the Christian missionaries can accomplish is that of education. The missionary schools are most excellent institutions, but they make slow progress. The spreading of Christianity is a hopeless task. The few converts made come from the lowest and vilest classes, and they take up Christianity only as a matter of profit and greed. To illustrate the character of the converts or native Christians, I can only point to an ayah, or female nurse, in my family. My sister asked her if she ever thought of becoming a Christian. She said 'No;' that the 'Karastans,' as she called them, of India were given to lying and stealing. This ayah denied that we were Christians, simply because we did not commit the crimes prevalent among the native Christians."

Colonel Twigg added that Theosophy was a thing of the past in India, its downfall dating from the departure of Madam Blavatsky and Colonel Olcott. Also that the natives know nothing of Pundita Ramabai, the Hindoo woman who raised so large a sum in America a few years ago for the benefit of the child-widows. Of course, local ministers and missionary agents deny the truth of Colonel Twigg's statements. But besides making the denial, they give no facts to the contrary. They say the "missionaries are doing good work," and that "the progress made by them is as great as could be expected," but that is all.

In defense of Theosophy, Dr. Allen Griffiths, secretary of the Golden Gate Lodge of the Theosophical Society, says that the doctrine is spreading as fast in India as anywhere, and quotes from the "Indian Mirror," the leading English paper of India, to the following effect:

"The Theosophical Society has done more for India than most people are aware. Theosophical ideas continue to spread. Every large town has a branch of the society. To become a good Theosophist is to become a good citizen. The Theosophical Society has brought the people of India together as never before."

There are, says Mr. Griffiths, one hundred and fifty branches of the Theosophical society in India. It is natural that Theosophy should be more acceptable to the Hindoo than Christianity, because Theosophy is Buddhism, and Buddhism is the native "cult;" while Christianity is a sort of revamped paganism and is readily recognizable as such by intelligent Hindoos.

The fact that Christianity is a failure in heathen countries has long been known, all the reliable testimony being to that effect. There are many English enterprises in India. Schools and business houses have been established; and to get the benefits of these, either as pupils or employees, the mild Hindoo is willing, like the crafty Chinese in San Francisco, to avow himself a Christian if necessary, and to remain one as long as the term lasts. No doubt, as Colonel Twigg says, the schools established by missionaries do more or less toward educating the Hindoo, but they would do still greater good if they were made secular, so that the native might become educated without first becoming a hypocrite. But education is not the object of Christian missions. They are proselyting concerns which use education as a bait, and when they have made enough professed apostates to wait on the missionary and his family, and to swing the big fans in the churches where resident caucasians worship, they have accomplished all they are ever likely to do.

THE THING NEEDFUL.

The hope may be a delusive one, but we indulge it nevertheless, that there are Liberals enough in the West to build up a strong, substantial Freethought paper here. During the past three years they have done nobly. We do not know of any locality where a few generous-hearted Freethinkers have done so much in so short a time. We can count one hundred or so who are as devoted to Liberalism and as unremitting in their contributions as they are to the maintenance of their own lives. Whenever a call is made for a little extra endeavor these men and women are sure to respond. Their names appear upon the subscription lists of all the Liberal papers, and their donations are made for every good purpose. To them Liberalism is not an object of charity, but a great cause worthy of their devotion, and they give to it in the right spirit. They realize that in this country there is a body of organized ignorance, ruled by hypocrisy, called the church; that this church teaches a religion which has in it almost nothing that is true or worthy of preservation; that this church is in league with all that is oppressive, with all that denies human liberty, that is tyrannical, unprogressive, and reactionary. They know that almost every injustice is supported by the church, and that every robbery of the many for the benefit of the few will find a defender in the pulpit. They know that this church springs to the support of every unjust law, and seeks not only to retain it but to enact more like it. They know, in fact, that there is a perpetual conflict between Christianity and civilization, and they are not only willing but eager to enlist under the banner of progress. To these Liberals, Freethought never needs to appeal. They see the opportunity to do good, and at once embrace it. No religionist, under the delusion that he was purchasing a home in some unending paradise, ever worked harder, gave more freely to the cause he loved, or sent more cheering words to his co-laborers than does the real, thoughtful, devoted Freethinker.

To spread this sort of devotedness, to bring to the hearts of more men and women a realization that they are needed in the present struggle, and to get from every shoulder a lift according to its strength, is the work at present to be done. There are thousands of unbelievers in religion, but they are not with us, and for all practical purposes might as well be against us. Indeed, it may almost be said that the work of Freethought is more hopeful among the sincerely religious than among those who are indifferent to both religion and Freethought; as, if a person be religious because he believes in religion, he is just the kind of a person who will become a Freethinker when he finds that Liberalism has better claims to being true. Between an honest adherent of the church and a totally indifferent and thoughtless nothingarian, give us the believer every time. The fact of his being a religionist shows that he has a conviction and has exercised the power of choice. (These remarks do not include the hereditary Catholic, who goes to church as a hog goes to his wallow—because it is born in him to do so.)

Freethought cannot offer as many delusive inducements as religion, but it can offer more genuine ones. It cannot offer another life in another world, but it can offer another life in this world; for the man who lives without thinking and without inquiry, and who takes things as he finds them, as a young robin swallows everything dropped into its throat, is exercising only one half his faculties, and is living only one-half a life. He is simply living the life of an animal. Get this man interested in Freethought, in books, in the recorded thoughts of others, and he begins to live again. He has acquired a new life that is almost independent of physical circumstances. He finds that his brain is alive as well as his stomach, and that there is more pleasure and less expense in feeding it.

This brain activity is what Freethought stimulates; this mental life what Freethought promises. It should be the object of every earnest Freethinker to awaken this life in others. For our part we would ask nothing more than a sharp division between the army of Freethought on the one side and the hosts of superstition on the other. If a man chooses to be a Presbyterian, let him get on that side of the line, and defend himself. If he is not a Presbyterian or other religionist, let him come upon our side and declare himself. He has no excuse for remaining on the fence. According to religious statistics the church has nearly twenty millions on its side of the line in this country, and from indications we cannot say that more than a few thousands are on the side of Freethought. This leaves the fence between populated by forty millions of indifferents, and the question is, Shall we let these millions remain there, to be drawn finally into the fold of superstition, or shall we by active propaganda work attract them to the ranks of Freethought? Let us be alive in this matter. Let our action be energetic, and let us show by our work that we are in earnest. We should on all proper occasions find out the standing on the question of those with whom we come in contact, and then urge everyone to activity on the one side or the other. Stir things up, keep men's minds in a state of solution until a settlement of the matter is reached. We can have no fear of defeat in a lively fight, but unless we precipitate the battle we may be starved out before it begins. We ought at least to be as enterprising as our foes; we should have as many speakers in proportion to our numbers, and circulate as much literature. All who at present take the Liberal papers should at once seek to get others to do the same, and the new recruits should use equal endeavors to pass the work along. The watchword "Activity," if adopted by all who are in our movement, would do everything that is necessary for this paper and for the object which we seek to attain.

A city daily of last Monday reports:

"A detachment of the Salvation Army for several weeks past has had undisputed possession of the area fronting the State Wharfinger's office, where services are held every Sunday. By perseverance the earnest preacher has succeeded in attracting large congregations, made up principally of water-front loungers. The army was surprised yesterday. A sudden opposition non-religionist in the person of an old man with a young voice took up his stand on a fruit box close to the Salvationists. He denounced the army and Christianity in stentorian tones, and gave a stirring address laudatory of Darwin. He attracted considerable attention and provoked laughter by his sallies against the preacher. The army held its own, however. A brother with a good pair of lungs relieved the original preacher and managed to make himself heard above the enthusiastic Infidel near him. When the latter had finished he gave his hearers notice that he would 'hold the fort' next Sunday, and with a vicious look at the Salvation Army he took up his fruit box and went away."

We have not learned the name of the "enthusiastic Infidel," and have considerable curiosity to know who he is. He deserves encouragement.

DR. R. H. McDONALD, the Vinegar Bitters man, the banker, and the leader of prohibition in San Francisco, refuses to accept as pastor of the church to which he belongs a clergyman who is not a prohibitionist. The question came up in considering the appointment of the Rev. Mr. Meredith as successor to the Rev. Mr. Barrows, of the First Congregational church of San Francisco. The Rev. Mr. Barrows, it will be remembered, went East under fire, but promising to "hasten back" to face his accusers, which he has not done. Dr. Meredith is believed to be sound on the moral law, but declares himself opposed to constitutional prohibition, hence Dr. McDonald's objection. Where

Dr. Barrows stood on the liquor question is unknown, but he is supposed to have been satisfactory to the banker. But what would Dr. McDonald say to the preaching of St. Paul, who not only enjoined the drinking of wine, but prohibited the use of water as a beverage?

THE following lively letter has been addressed to Vice-President Eastman of the San Francisco Freethought Society. It is accompanied by a five-dollar piece, to be used as stated:

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 23, 1890.

MR. W. H. EASTMAN: We must go to lively action right off. I cannot believe that the thousands of Liberals in San Francisco and throughout the Golden West will stand indifferent and not prevent the destruction of our journal, FREETHOUGHT, which we have cherished so much and regarded as one of the vital veins in our illustrious league. All our subscribers and friends must contribute something to pay off the debt in which we stand to Mr. Macdonald. A few hundred dollars will do this, and the church shepherds and their sheep will withhold the laughter, into which they are ever ready to burst.

Up, all truth-loving and progress-loving men and women, young and old, and contribute your mite, be it only a little, and the storm is abated!

I inclose $5 as my mite. It is not expected that all our friends can afford that much, but everyone ought to donate what he or she conveniently can.

MRS. ANDREA LINDAL.

EXPERIMENTS being made by the mind-reader Johnstone, in Chicago, go to demonstrate pretty clearly that some men have more than the five physical senses with which they are credited. In the presence of a large audience at the Wellington Hotel, says the account, Johnstone was blindfolded, his ears and nostrils stuffed with cotton, and a lighted cigar placed in his mouth to destroy, for the time being, hearing, sight, smell, and taste, and thick gloves placed on his hands. He then requested the proprietor of the hotel to stand behind him and think of the combination of the safe. This was done, and without contact with the gentleman the mind-reader turned correctly to the numbers and opened the safe. These phenomena belong to the class which at present there is no way of explaining on any hypothesis capable of demonstrating itself to be the true one.

IN Judge Lawler's court last week a woman was granted a divorce from her husband on the ground of cruelty. The brute confessed to having frequently struck his wife, but held that he had a "divine right" to do so. This defense is, we believe, unanswerable. The language of scripture, whence "divine rights" are drawn, instructs wives to submit themselves unto their husbands as unto the Lord; and the right of the Lord to inflict personal chastisement has never been questioned by religious people. There is nothing in the Bible that forbids a man to thrash his wife.

SUBSCRIBERS to FREETHOUGHT who receive communications from this office notifying them that their subscriptions are overdue, and requesting them to renew, should attend to the matter as promptly as they can. Postage on these notices and the necessary stationery are costing about ten dollars a week now-a-days, and some return for the outlay is hoped for. A few inform us that they get notified when not delinquent, and such are requested to forgive us. The others will do the forgetting.

THE Oregon Convention of Liberals at Portland next month promises to be as successful as its predecessor of last year. President Beal is a great worker, and he has able coadjutors whose efforts, united with his, will undoubtedly bring together at Portland the largest assemblage of Liberals ever held on this coast.

Visitors may depend upon Mr. Beal to provide a programme that will interest them from beginning to end of the Convention.

HEREAFTER Mr. Charles Blackburn and she that was Miss Elva E. Davidson will read the same copy of FREETHOUGHT, as the twain have been made one by marriage. They were united in this relation at Seattle, and now reside at Mountain View, Wash. Mr. Blackburn is a mining geologist of note, and his wife is the assistant secretary of the Oregon State Secular Union.

THE "Weekly Star" of September 20 contains a full report of the indignation meeting held at Metropolitan Temple on the 19th. The editor is Mr. J. H. Barry, 429 Montgomery street, San Francisco, and the price of the "Star" is five cents per copy.

BELIEF in the Rev. George Jacob Schweinfurth, the Illinois impostor calling himself a messiah, has come to be recognized as a heresy by the Christian church, and a Kentucky congregation have just thrust out two of their number for this offense.

Two women in black hoods, from which their faces looked out like the visage of a corpse from the coffin, made the error of calling at the office of FREETHOUGHT last week and soliciting a contribution for the support of the Roman Catholic church!

WE observe that our friend Harry Houston, of Fort Bragg, is candidate for recorder of Mendocino county. If he proves as lively a "rustler" in politics as he is in Liberalism, he is bound to succeed.

THE Secularists of Canada have just held a most successful convention at Toronto, Ont.

OBSERVATIONS.

Those acquainted with the capacity of Metropolitan Temple will know how many people were at the Barry indignation meeting last Friday evening, when they learn that the hall was crowded in every part. I should say that twenty-five hundred or three thousand persons were in the audience, one-half of them being attracted by the object of the meeting and the other half by a brass band and bonfires on the street.

At eight o'clock the musicians came in and strode down the main aisle playing "Marching Through Georgia." Mr. L. M. Manzer called the meeting to order and introduced the president, Stewart Menzies, Esq. Mr. Menzies stated that the object of the gathering was to start a movement which should change the California law relating to contempt of court so that it would conform to the federal law on the same subject. The band played "Hail Columbia."

Charles J. Swift, Esq., related how in 1831 United States Judge Peck was impeached for imprisoning a man twenty-four hours for contempt of court. Mr. Swift believed that a law good enough to protect a federal court ought to be good enough to protect the superior courts in San Francisco. The band played "America."

Eugene N. Deuprey, Esq., followed. Mr. Deuprey appeared petrified by respect for the superior judges, whose acquaintance-ship he enjoyed. He said that Mr. Barry was a God-fearing man, and closed his remarks with a Talmagian benediction. The band played "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

The Hon. Thomas V. Cator seemed to be the first to strike a popular chord, and he had not spoken three minutes before the audience evinced a desire to climb up on the backs of the seats and shout. He arraigned the judges, and called them to the bar as defendants charged with being under political control and misusing the power vested in them to subvert the liberties of the people. The band played "Rally Round the Flag."

Albert Fuhrman, president of the Federated Trades, a two-hundred pound German of leonine aspect, volleyed his denun-ciations of corrupt courts and hireling judiciary until the roof rang. The band played the "Red, White, and Blue."

Mr. Barry next appeared, and he was the event of the evening. The audience was quiet for a moment. Then it broke out, and continued for a longer time than it takes to write these lines. One of the vice-presidents proposed three cheers, and led them with wild motions of his arms and legs, leaping into the air at every shout. The three cheers multiplied themselves into a dozen, and when everybody had gasped out the last hooray that his lungs contained, Mr. Barry was permitted to say "Friends," upon which the cheering was resumed. The speaker then said that such a reception as this might make any man proud to be an ex-convict. Still he could not feel that it was in his honor personally that the vast audience had assembled, but rather to vindicate the great principle of liberty which had been violated in his person. He had been spoken of as fearless in his attacks upon wrong, and brave in his manner of facing the consequences. Yet he had not suffered greatly. The county jail was a comfortable place, the food good, the sheriff and attendants kind and obliging. "The real sufferer in this affair," said Mr. Barry, "and the one who has shown the sublimest courage, is that noble woman whom I have the honor and the unspeakable good fortune to call my wife." Here the hall rang again with applause; but when the speaker added that Mrs. Barry had urged him to tell the truth as he knew it; to go to jail if he must, and to remember that his children would be proud of him, a man in the gallery swung his hat and shouted, "Three cheers for the brave woman;" and the hurrahs that followed made the other demonstrations of the evening seem mild and lacking in enthusiasm. The band played "Annie Laurie."

At about half-past ten o'clock I came away, and as I walked down Fifth street toward home the stentorian voice of the Hon. Charles A. Sumner came out of the open windows of the hall and followed me to my door.

The Free Press Defense Association has the right to call this indignation meeting a success in itself, whatever may be its effect in enlarging the liberty of speech and press. The speakers were all very modest in their demands. They asked only the privilege of being held responsible for their language before a jury instead of a judge; and so simple a privilege as this should be granted at once by the first legislature that meets. If an editor can't have a dozen numskulls to hold him down to what they think he ought to print, then the dearest rights of the literary man are abrogated. Although myself a member of the Free Press Association, I am inclined to believe that a dozen good Catholics could be extracted from its members who might decide that no harm would be done by gently and quietly suppressing FREETHOUGHT. And although Mr. Charles Sumner declares that the "Weekly Star" is the only free paper in San Francisco, I am inclined to believe that Mr. Barry would feel safer in republishing his censure of Judge Lawler than in avowing a rationalistic disbelief in the Roman Catholic religion.

A year ago, or so, when Mr. Barry was first arrested in the contempt case, I pointed out that it was the custom for believers in any principle to contribute to the support of their standard-bearer when that principle was violated in his person; and I suggested that five hundred of Mr. Barry's friends should give one dollar each toward the payment of his fine. Several dollars were sent in by the readers of FREETHOUGHT. The suggestion was reprinted in the "Star," and numerous other dollars followed. Then a banquet was given to Mr. Barry, at which I was present. The speakers were eloquent in their defense of the right of a free press, but only one defended the right of Freethought, and his reference to it sent a noticeable chill through the assemblage. The guest of the occasion returned thanks to those men and those papers that had sustained him in his fight, and he called them by name, but he did not mention FREETHOUGHT. I knew it was not an oversight—it was simply discretion. The speaker knew his audience. He knew it was not an audience of Free-thinkers. They were personal friends of his who would have protested just as hard if he had been convicted by a jury of his peers instead of a judge who was not his peer. Except for Mr. Barry's personal popularity they would not have been there.

Now, I have long believed and still believe that Freethought is the beginning of all freedom. To place a free press first is to commence the structure at the top. Free thought, free speech, and a free press is the natural order, and without the first I fail to see how they are of any value; but having free thought to start with they logically follow. The freedom to think implies the freedom to speak, and that, again, the freedom to print. Therefore the Free Press Association should be a Freethought Association, and I am apprehensive that until it becomes such its fight will be for some special privilege instead of a universal right.

Nevertheless, whatever may be the limitations of the members of the Free Press Association, so long as they keep their flag afloat the Freethinkers are with them. Every movement in this direction is a part of the Freethought movement, and not only am I prepared to fall in line, but I should be glad to see every reader of this paper in San Francisco and elsewhere use his influence on the right side.

For my own part I would ask for no protection from even the abuse of free speech or press. The meanest lies and slanders are those for which there is no redress at law; and if we can stand these, we need not mind the lesser ones which, according to the statute books, give cause for action in cases of criminal libel.

Mr. Dennett, who has just opened a temperance restaurant on Market street, adds another to the number of religious freaks in San Francisco. He is from New York, where his signs, "Salvation's Free," "Corn Beef-Hash 10 cents," are familiar to many. Dennett never employs any but "saved" waiters drawn from the ranks of the Salvation Army. There was once a compositor in the "Truth Seeker" office who experienced a change of heart, joined the holiness band, and left his case on account of the irreligious influences which surrounded him. He also got married. His piety attracted the attention of Dennett, and he was employed in the down-town restaurant. Previously he had been a tolerably decent fellow, though inclined to be intemperate; but after he left the "Truth Seeker" office he went to the bad as rapidly as possible. He "ratted" the printing business, borrowed money which he never returned, got one of Dennett's waitresses into trouble, and finally, having acquired fifty dollars in a questionable way, he left his wife for another woman, and the last I heard of him he had emigrated with a female companion to Nova Scotia. His piety was touching and evidently sincere, his tongue was glib and his brain active though small, but the temptations of a temperance restaurant pulled him down.

One of San Francisco's benefactors is Mr. H. W. Faust, who, when the sky is clear, stands on Market street near O'Farrell and gives the public glimpses of the moon through a big telescope at a nickel a glimpse. He charged me nothing for putting my eye at the peep-hole the other evening and viewing the lunar orb. The moon, as thus seen, looks like a gray globular rock eight inches in diameter, covered with bubbles (said to be craters of extinct volcanoes), and marked here and there with fissures and canyons. It is a highly moral exhibition, much more so than looking at Luna with the naked eye, and Mr. Faust tells me that many who have patronized him have since led a better life.

Mr. T. P. Brinegar, of Coos county, Or., reached San Francisco the fore part of the present week in a desolate and lonesome frame of mind. Mr. Brinegar is a young man of twenty-three, with the blue blood of Missouri in his veins and about six and a quarter feet of its bone and muscle in his stature. A few years ago he went to Oregon to teach school and lay by enough coin to pay his way through college. Incidentally he worked in the interest of Freethought and rustled for the Liberal candidates for the legislature in the late election. On the 16th or 17th of the present month, having provided himself with the necessary outfit and capital for his college course, he left Marshfield on the steamer Ajax bound for San Francisco. On the morning of the 18th the Ajax split on a rock off Cape Mendocino, and shortly thereafter went down, carrying with her all Mr. Brinegar's earthly possessions, including his books, clothes, and a Wettstein watch. The passengers and crew, numbering fifty, all told, rowed eleven miles through the fog, landing at Shelter Cove in the early evening. Thence they came by the steamer Newport to this city. In going down the Ajax burst the top off her cabin, and the goods and chattels of the passengers have been sighted floating miles and miles away on the waves of the Pacific. Mr. Brinegar reports that his health is good, and that he has a trunk check and a fund of experience which he would be glad to realize on in the shape of hard cash.

The managers of the Mechanics' Fair, now proceeding at the Pavilion, have kindly favored me with a season ticket to their exhibition, and I have reciprocated by using the ticket, so that courtesies are now even between us. There is really a great deal at this fair to interest the citizen. The arts and industries of the state, and more especially of the city, are well represented. California is a country of large natural products, and can get up an exhibition impossible to other localities. I doubt if any other state can produce sawn timbers two hundred feet long, planks a rod wide, casks that hold a thousand barrels, or potted plants in whose branches a small boy may roost. The art gallery is worth seeing; for, while it does not contain so many great works as the Metropolitan Museum of Art, its pictures are much better than those published in the daily papers. A band discourses music, and a lady discourses songs; the visitor from the country touches everything that is hot or has fresh paint on it; nice girls who look too young to do so are making baby clothes on noisy sewing-machines; other young things make coffee or cocoa while you wait, and urge it upon your attention; many varieties of bitters which will cure all diseases are given away in small doses; the washing-machine man industriously squeezes the suds out of a piece of clean cloth; and iron pumps draw water from a tank in streams of assorted sizes, and discharge it over and over again. Any of the various things at this exhibition may be found elsewhere by traveling long distances between them, but in thus bringing them together so that they can all be seen on one carfare, the managers have placed the Yerba Buena public under deep obligations. But I think the management should do away with the numerous soda fountains which meet the visitor at every turn, and thus make it prudent for young men to go there in company with their female relatives or friends.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Jessie Fremont, widow of the late Gen. John C. Fremont, is sick and destitute at Los Angeles.—Charles C. Stevenson, governor of Nevada, died at Carson, Sept. 21, of typhoid fever. He was 64 years of age.—Last Sunday the Italian citizens of San Francisco celebrated with a street parade the twentieth anniversary of united Italy. It was an anti-papal demonstration.—The discovery of extensive coal fields in Mendocino county, forty miles north of Ukiah, is announced.—Dr. C. C. O'Donnell, the so-called sand-lot candidate for mayor of San Francisco, was obliged to descend from the platform where he was speaking last Sunday, and thrash an interrupter of his address.—The Democrats of San Francisco opened their campaign last Saturday night with a mass meeting addressed by Mayor Pond. Politics is getting very lively in this city.—I. N. Choynski is in the county jail, whence he writes interesting letters for his weekly paper, "Public Opinion." Mr. Choynski was charged with attempted extortion and failed to clear himself.—Owing to the elopement of the Rev. Mr. Sanborn, pastor of the Congregationalist church at Eureka, with another man's wife, his congregation has broken up and joined the Presbyterian denomination.—Charles S. Wieland received the most votes as the favorite Native Son, and gets the "Examiner's" badge. He received 166,797 votes, each one of which cost him or his friends five cents, representing a total of $8,139.85. The badge is worth $1500.—The coasting steamer Ajax, plying between this port and Coos Bay, was lost off Cape Mendocino last week. Crew and passengers were saved.

A statue of Horace Greeley was unveiled at the New York "Tribune" building Sept. 20.—Five persons were killed and nine injured in a railway collision between a switch train and a picnic train in Chicago last Sunday. The killed and injured persons were returning excursionists.—Three hundred persons witnessed last Saturday the public whipping of six culprits at Wilmington, Del.—A single instead of a double site for the World's Fair at Chicago is favored by a majority of the commission.—The worst railroad accident of the year occurred on the Reading road in Pennsylvania, Sept. 19. An express train collided with a freight train seventeen miles from Reading and was hurled down an embankment into the Schuylkill river. A score of passengers were killed and many more injured.—Dion Boucicault, the playwright and actor, died at New York last week.—The correspondent who reported that Prince George of Wales engaged in a street fight at Montreal was arrested and charged with libel, but by order of the queen the suit has been withdrawn.

An Irish member of Parliament named Marum died last Sunday while attending mass at Dublin.—Michael Davitt has started a paper called the "Labor World," which is pronounced a success.—A while ago there was a deplorable drouth in China, and the emperor ordered prayers for rain. The prayers were made, and now the Yellow river has broken the levees and is carrying death and devastation before it. The emperor will have prayers said for fair weather.—A Turkish war vessel foundered at sea recently, and five hundred men went to the bottom with her.—Dillon and O'Brien, the Irish agitators, have been arrested in Dublin for conspiracy against the English government.

HAS CHRISTIANITY BENEFITED WOMAN?

BY PROF. GEO. H. DAWES.

III.

Hallam says in his "History of Literature:" "Love with the ancient poets is often tender and sometimes viruous, but never accompanied by a sense of deference or inferiority. This elevation of the female sex, through the voluntary submission of the stronger, is a remarkable fact in the philosophical history of Europe. It originated partially in the Teutonic manners. Some have said the reverence and adoration of the female sex, which has descended to our own times is the offspring of the Christian dispensation. But until it can be shown that Christianity established any such principle, we must look a little farther down for its origin. Without rejecting the Teutonic influence, we might ascribe more direct efficacy to the favor shown to women in succession to lands, through inheritance or dower, by the later Roman law."

The early Christians did not look upon marriage with that sanctity that characterized the late Roman and Teutonic nations, but in its grossest forms. Lecky says that marriage under Christian rule was viewed in the most degraded form. The notion of its impurity took many forms, and exercised for some centuries an extremely wide influence over the church. Polygamy was not uncommon among the Christians, even down to the eighteenth century. And how could it be otherwise? Believing in a book that teaches polygamy and in a God that sanctions it, their lives could not be different than they were. And, strange as it may seem to Christians, the apostles, nor did Christ, ever say one word against that debasing system. There is no prohibition of polygamy in the New Testament. It is an indisputable fact that although Christianity was first preached in Asia, which had been from the earliest ages the seat of polygamy, the apostles never denounced it as a crime, and never required their converts to put away all their wives but one.

The biography of the popes is almost one continuous recital of licentiousness and crimes against females. For many years the Vatican was nothing but a brothel, and one historian declares that the licentiousness of the clergy had ruined Italy. Justinian was a polygamist and a keeper of concubines. Charlemagne, who spread Christianity and devastation by fire and sword throughout a large part of Europe, had a harem of nine wives and several concubines. And Louis XV., the "most Christian king," had a harem that cost about $20,000,000 and was supplied mostly with young girls.

The Protestant critic says that for all this Christianity was not responsible; that those people were Romanists and had turned aside from the principles and practices of Christianity. However this may be, they lived lives which were consistent with the teachings of the Bible; nor, as I have before stated, can they find that Christ or the apostles ever uttered one word against a plurality of wives. But if the Catholics practiced polygamy, Protestants did the same. Sir William Hamilton, in his "Discussion of Philosophy and Literature," speaking of Luther and Melancthon, says: "They promulgated opinions in favor of polygamy, and went to the extent of vindicating to the spiritual minister the right to a private dispensation, and to the temporal magistrate the right of establishing the practice, if he chose, by public law."

On December 19, 1539, at Wittenburg, Luther and Melancthon drew up the famous "Concillium," authorizing Philip of Hesse to have a plurality of wives. This important document bears the names of Martin Luther, Philip Melancthon, Marin Bucer, Dionysius Melander, John Lening, Antony Corvinus, Adrian Kraft, Justus Winther, Balthasar Raida—nine of the most prominent of the Protestant Reformation.

Luther advised Henry VIII. to have a plurality of wives, but by murdering two wives, and divorcing two others, the founder of the English church avoided it.

John of Leyden established the practice of polygamy at Munster, and drove from their homes all those who dared oppose the odious custom; and other Protestants followed his example.

With such a record as this it ill becomes the Christians to point the finger of scorn at the Mormons. And, with the most glaring inconsistency, the Congress of the United States will employ a chaplain to open the business of the day by reading a chapter from a polygamous book, pray to a polygamous God, and then enact a law for the suppression of polygamy in Utah.

Neither did Christians think it necessary to educate women, and too many now think that money spent for the higher education of women is a useless waste. Less than three hundred years ago a woman was hardly permitted to learn the alphabet, and to learn the multiplication table was overstepping the bounds of all propriety; and Martin Luther had the manliness to say that "no gown worse becomes a woman that she should become wise." It is a lamentable fact that the influence of the Bible and the effects of Christianity have been such that many people are to-day opposed to giving woman equal educational privileges with man, setting the monstrous and unjust excuses that it would make them vain and forgetful of their motherly duties, or that they are too frail; and these miserable excuses are justified by passages from St. Paul: "Women should learn in silence with all subjection." Yes, woman is too frail to be the intellectual and political rival of man, but she is not too frail or vain to be too many times his sexual and physical slave. She is not too frail to enter the workshops and help support a family. She is not so frail or vain but Christian capitalists can take advantages of her circumstances and employ her for a mere pittance to do labor in mines that the strongest men should do; and the Christian church looks on and says, "'Tis well, she must not be suffered to teach nor usurp authority over man."

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS.

Summerville, Or (debate) Oct. 1-6	Myrtle Point Coos co., Or. Oct. 23
Walla Walla, Wash. Oct. 8, 9	Talent, Or. Oct. 26
Portland Convention, Oct. 11, 12, 13	Fort Bragg, Cal. Nov. 1, 2
Coburg, Or. Oct. 15, 16	Boulder Creek, Cal. Nov. 9, 10
Marshfield, Coos co. Or. Oct. 19, 20	Porterville, Cal. Nov. 12, 13, 14
Coquille, Coos co. Or. Oct. 21	Tulare, Cal. Nov. 15, 16
Arago, Coos co. Or. Oct. 22

Gave It a Fair Trial.

At the gospel tent meeting on Niagara street a member had just ceased speaking about a cure of asthma effected by prayer when a lank individual arose and asked for the privilege of the floor.

"If you have any experience you may speak, brother," said the presiding officer.

"I have had experience. My father was sick with the asthma for fifteen years, and he was finally brought to pray for his recovery. [Intense interest manifested among hearers.] He prayed for fifty years, and [emphatically] he died of the asthma."

Hysterical laughter among urchins on rear seats and consternation among the leaders.

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION.

R. B. WESTBROOK, PRESIDENT.

F. C. MENDE, TREASURER. IDA C. CRADDOCK, COR. SEC'Y.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. Westbrook..... 1707 Oxford st., Philadelphia.
 E. B. Foote, Jr..... 120 Lexington ave., New York.
 T. B. Wakeman..... 93 Nassau st., New York
 J. E. Remsburg..... Oak Mills, Kansas.
 Juliet H. Severance..... Milwaukee, Wisconsin.
 F. C. Mende..... 1814 Green st., Philadelphia.
 Ida C. Craddock S. E. corner of Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION DURING AUGUST.

Sedalia Secular Union (charter fee) through Wm. Parmerlee..... $5 00
 Anton J. Kraft, Grantfork, Ill..... 2 00
 A. W. McLean, Coleridge, Cal., through Freethought Pub. Co.,... 2 10
 M. F. Braffet, Wedron, Ill., (new member)..... 1 00
 F. A. Day, Castana, Iowa, through Truth Seeker..... 50 00
 Abraham Schell, Knight's Ferry, Cal..... 15 00
 Jacob Drissler, Willapa, Wash..... 2 49
 H. A. Towner, " "..... 2 50
 P. H. Foster, Babylon, N. Y., (new member)..... 10 00
 J. P. Lowell, Nowata, Indian Ter. (new member)..... 1 00
 Mrs. Wm. Redfield, Stanley, Iowa..... 5 00
 Pamphlets..... 3 00

Total..... $99 09
 F. C. MENDE, Treasurer A. S. U.
 Per I. C. C.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL CONGRESS.

The Fourteenth Annual Congress of the American Secular Union has been appointed by the board of directors to meet at Portsmouth, Ohio, on Friday evening, October 31, 1890, and to continue its sessions on the Saturday and Sunday following.

The meetings will be held in the Grand Opera House, corner of Sixth and Court streets, and the orchestra of the establishment has been engaged for the occasion. Due notice will be given of the proposed reduction in railroad, steamboat, and hotel fares.

Portsmouth is situated on the Ohio river, one hundred miles east of Cincinnati and one hundred miles south of Columbus, and has extensive and convenient railway connections with the whole country. It is a port of foreign entry, and is distinguished for its numerous and magnificent manufactories. It has a population exceeding fifteen thousand (15,000), has twenty churches, the Ohio Military Academy, and a splendid system of graded schools. The Ohio Valley Fair is held there annually; and several English and German papers, daily and weekly, are published in the city.

The members and friends of the American Secular Union are sure of a hearty welcome, not only from our enterprising local auxiliary, but also from the citizens at large.

The object of the American Secular Union, as is well known, is to secure the total separation of church and state in fact and in form, to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood be established, protected, and perpetuated. While we unite on what is commonly known as the Nine Demands of Secularism, we propose to emphasize the following at the coming Congress:

1. The equitable taxation of church property in common with other property.
2. The total discontinuance of religious instruction and worship in the public schools, and especially the reading of any Bible.
3. The repeal and prevention of all laws enforcing the observance of Sunday as a religious institution, rather than an economic one, justified by physiological and secular reasons.
4. The cessation of all appropriations of the public funds for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character.

The American Secular Union is strictly unsectarian and non-partisan in both religion and politics, but will use any and all honorable means to secure its objects as above stated. It is not either publicly or privately committed to the advancement of any system of religious belief or disbelief, but heartily welcomes all persons, of whatever faith, to its membership, on the basis of "no union of church and state." The word "secular" is here used in the broadest sense, as applied to the state, and not to any system of religion or philosophy.

To discuss these questions in an orderly and friendly manner, and to devise ways and means to promote these objects, let us come together at this Congress, as Freethinkers, Spiritualists, Unitarians, Universalists, Free Religionists, Quakers, Progressive Jews, and Liberal Christians, and, laying aside our peculiar views on religious questions, unite as American citizens on the one broad platform of no union of church and state, and the complete administration of our secular government on purely secular principles.

The National Reform Association, having for its object the establishment of Christianity as the religion of the state by constitutional enactment; the American Sabbath Union, working for the enforcement, by legislation, of the Jewish and Puritanic Sabbath on our free citizens; the Women's Christian Temperance Union, indorsing the platforms and policy of both these organizations; the churches, both Catholic and Protestant, insisting through their ecclesiastical bodies upon the complete exemption of church property from just taxation, as well as the appropriation of public money for religious schools and other sectarian institutions; all these, and many other, which might be mentioned, are imperilling our constitutional liberties. Every true Liberal and patriot, whether man or woman, should feel called upon to aid in organizing an effective opposition to these nefarious schemes.

Due notice will be given of the selection of eminent speakers from all parts of the United States and Canada, and a free platform will be given to all persons who may have a word to say for pure state secularization. All, without exception, are welcome to this Congress in the wide-a-wake little city in the valley of the beautiful Ohio.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.
 Philadelphia, Sept. 1, 1890. Attest: IDA C. CRADDOCK, Sec'y.

THE PORTLAND MEETING.

Liberal Friends: It will be gratifying to know that we will have the greatest array of talent which has ever met on any one platform in Oregon. Miss Katie Kehm, S. P. Putnam, Prof. Dawes, Matie P. Krekel, Hon. C. J. Curtis, Judge Winsor, Abigail Scott Dunaway, John E. Remsburg, Elder Alonzo T. Jones, Moses Hull and Hon. William Jackson Armstrong, late Inspector-General of United States Consulates for Europe. It is claimed by many that Mr. Armstrong is one of the greatest orators living. At the request of Mayor Hewett he addressed 5000 in Cooper Institute on Russian Nihilists, delivered the same in Beecher's church, was then invited by Congress to repeat this lecture in Washington, D. C., where he resides, being introduced by Col. Ingersoll, which resulted in the Century Magazine sending Mr. George Kennan to Siberia to examine her living hells.

Major-General Nelson A. Miles of the U. S. Army says: "I have heard all the great speakers of this country, and I consider William Jackson Armstrong among the very foremost. He looks and is every inch the orator." To-day I commence sending out 3,000 bills; was delayed some in obtaining speakers. Please post them without fail. David Wittenberg, our Hungarian patriot and Liberal, handed in five dollars, says he wants to be the first on the list, and told me to tell you "to let the money now come." A hint to the wise is sufficient.

Let me say that I heard Moses Hull deliver his farewell address in Metropolitan Temple, San Francisco, to more than a thousand people, after talking to them thirteen weeks and that he is one of the finished platform orators of this country. Ex-Chief Justice Cole of Iowa will endeavor to come. It is he who induced Gen. Grant to insert in his message the clause urging the total separation of church and state. The following letter you will be pleased to read. Now, friends, we are having a pull all together and will soon be happy.

C. BEAL.

TORONTO, ONT., CANADA, Sept. 9, 1890.

C. BEAL, Esq., My Dear Sir: On returning from England I find your note awaiting me. It would afford me great pleasure to attend your convention in October, but I fear that I cannot leave Canada at that time. I have a great desire to visit Oregon, and as soon as arrangements can be made I shall make an effort to do so.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12, 1890.

C. BEAL, ESQ., Dear Sir: Your favor of September 2 at hand, containing your hospitable invitation to be present at the coming Congress of the Secular societies in your state. I have delayed answering until I could send your invitation to President Westbrook, and confer with him on the possibility of accepting it.

To my great regret, we find it impossible for me to be present at your Congress. I especially regret this because, having lived for two years and a half upon the Pacific slope, I know how enterprising you Westerners are. I know that if Liberalism is ever to come to its full flower and fruition, it will be on the Pacific coast first of all, because there the breezes of mental independence blow ever fresh and free—far more freshly and freely, indeed, than they do here in the East. I long for the time when I may again participate, if only for a brief season, in that joyous, fearless march forward to a higher and broader civilization in which the West is leading the way. But this year it is impossible for me to come. We are as busy as we can be, getting ready for the National Congress which is to take place at Portsmouth, Ohio, on October 31, November 1 and 2. We are anxious to make it a means of uniting our fellow-Liberals more closely than before, so that we may be able to present something like a compacted, organized front to the well organized church enemy. There are Liberals of all shades of belief to be appealed to, if we would have a full representation; and all this takes an enormous amount of correspondence.

But, if I cannot come, I can at least send you my best wishes for your success as a state congress. And I take this opportunity to put in my little plea for closer union among us all. If Liberals would hold their own against the organized aggressiveness of the church party, they must likewise organize; they must co-operate faithfully; they must be loyal to that one principle in which we all believe, no matter what our particular "ism"—total separation of church and state.

I hope the day is not far distant when Liberals everywhere shall be united into one great army, pledged to combat for this principle of total separation of church and state, well organized, well equipped, well disciplined, and faithful to each other and to the leaders of their choice. It cannot be sufficiently emphasized, that co-operation and organization are the order of the day in all departments of business. If we would succeed in preserving our freedom from both the open and the subtle encroachments of the church, we must stand together, shoulder to shoulder, in an organized army.

With my best wishes for a glad and helpful re-union among the Secularists of Oregon, I am, with much regret at being unable to participate, Yours very truly, IDA C. CRADDOCK, Corr. Sec'y A. S. U.

To the Editors of Freethought:

I wish to call the attention of the Liberals of Oregon, to the Second Annual Congress of the Oregon State Secular Union, to be held in Portland, at New Arien Hall, corner of Second and Oak streets, on Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, the 11th, 12th, and 13th of October next.

The object of this meeting, and of the Oregon State Secular Union, is to guarantee civil and religious liberty to the people; secure the taxation of church property, and oppose the union of church and state.

We want this meeting to be a grand success, and we ask every Liberal in the state to co-operate with us, and aid us in making it so. Will you come forward, one and all, and "lend a helping hand?" Announce the Congress through your local papers; circulate cards of invitation; post up notices at your post-office and country stores. In fact, do all you can to let everyone know of this great, important meeting, that all may attend if they so desire. Write to President Beal, and let him know what you are doing toward aiding the Congress—let words of cheer resound from every city, town, and village in the state.

We most cordially invite every Liberal—every person who is in favor of the total separation of church and state, to be present. We want our convention to be a noble and useful one. The speakers who are to be present will be the best that have yet been together.

The members of the Union last year voluntarily decided that they could manage and maintain the Union, without aid from other states, so now let them all come forward and show that they meant, and can do, what they said. We can make our Congress a success if we only try. If everyone will help, even a little, our meeting will be all that we desire.

Rents are as high as they were last year, and it will cost quite a sum to pay the expenses of the Congress. We need financial aid. Let every Liberal, who is willing and able to do so, forward a few dollars to help defray the expenses. All financial aid will be most thankfully received. Send all money to President Beal, Portland, Oregon, and he will give credit for it in FREETHOUGHT. Don't wait until it is too late, for now is the time we need encouragement.

We have lately had some neat blanks printed, petitioning the Legislature of Oregon for the taxation of church property, and we would be pleased to place copies of this petition in the hands of every earnest Liberal worker in the state, for circulation. The exemption of ecclesiastical property from just taxation is a gross injustice to the people. It is unconstitutional, and not in keeping with the general principle of our government, and all laws favoring this unjust exemption should be immediately repealed.

We also have had copies printed of the Constitution of the O. S. S. U., and we ask our Liberal friends to send for them, and circulate them throughout the state, and secure as many signatures for membership as possible. There is no membership fee—all that is required is the name and address of those who indorse the objects of the Union, and wish to become members. We would like to have the name of every liberal-minded person in the state recorded on our Membership Book. We already have a large number of names.

Now, Liberals, one and all, if you think you can secure any signatures for the petition, or for the Constitution of our Union, by presenting them to your friends and neighbors in your locality, please send for them at once, and they will be promptly forwarded to you. Copies of the petition and constitution, and also cards of invitation, are to be obtained from either President Beal, or myself. My address is Oswego, Clackamas county, Oregon.

With best wishes for the success of our Congress, and sincerely hoping that as many as possible will attend our grand meeting, and join with us in helping to promote liberty, truth, justice, and equality, I am, ever,
Yours faithfully,

ELVA DAVIDSON BLACKBURN,

Sept. 15, 1890. Assist. Sec. Oregon State Secular Union.

THE LAW OF CONTEMPT.

On March 31, 1831, Congress, in order to prevent a judge from depriving a man of a trial by jury, for publishing a criticism of the decisions of courts, passed the following law:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That the power of the several courts of the United States to issue attachments and inflict summary punishments for contempts of court, shall not be construed to extend to any cases, except the misbehavior of any person or persons in the presence of the said courts, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice, the misbehavior of any of the officers of the said courts in the official transactions, and the disobedience or resistance by any officer of the said courts, party, juror, witness, or any other person or persons, to any lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree, or command of the said courts.

The courts of California, in defiance of the doctrine of this law, decide that an editor can be brought before a judge and punished for his criticism on such judge, without the right of showing the truth of what is published to a jury of his peers.—Weekly Star.

Is there any good in Christianity outside of myth and miracle? Well, all this good we indorse, love, seek to disseminate and perpetuate. It is the mythical and miraculous only against which we protest; not that which may be verified by science, and elevate the human race—the true, the beautiful, the good.—W.

MR. P. A. JOHNSTONE'S SIXTH SENSE.

P. Alexander Johnstone, the mind-reader, performed a feat in this city to-day which eclipses all similar records, says a dispatch from Chicago dated Sept. 10. He has been doing many remarkable things here, and finally his manager decided to attempt the same test which resulted in the death of the well-known mind-reader Bishop in New York—that of finding a name in a register and pronouncing it. A committee of well-known men and a physician drove in a hack from the Auditorium Hotel to the Grand Pacific by a tortuous route, and going to the register selected a name.

Leaving one of their number in charge of the register, they returned to the Auditorium, where Johnstone had remained in custody of another committeeman. They then bandaged his eyes securely.

When the committee came back to the Auditorium, after settling on the name in the Grand Pacific register, a considerable delay was necessary, in order for Mr. Johnstone to test the committee regarding their ability to concentrate their minds on the route and knowledge of the city, and also to have them trace on the wall how many blocks north and west, etc., they had driven.

When all was ready, however, the doors of the south parlor were thrown open, and with a tiger-like bound the "black-hooded" man made a rush for the stairs. The street was reached in safety, and immediately upon being assisted to his seat on the box of a carriage, he grabbed the lines and drove very fast down Michigan avenue. The course taken did not correspond with that of the committee in any respect, and was due, Mr. Johnstone claims, to the nervous condition of Mr. Dean, who occupied the front seat with him, and after the excitement was over Mr. Dean was forced to admit that he was "slightly rattled" and very much afraid that he would run into some vehicle or be run into himself.

The drive taken by Mr. Johnstone was north on Michigan avenue to Adams, west on Adams to Wabash, south on Wabash to Van Buren, west on Van Buren to Third avenue, where he stopped and got out. After walking to Dearborn street he said, "We are on the wrong track," and again got onto the rig and again continued west on Van Buren to Clark, and north on Clark to McCoy's Hotel, where he again alighted and ran headlong, assisted by Mr. Butler, to the Grand Pacific Hotel. At once he made a rush for the clerk's desk, where it was supposed Mr. Lederer would be with the register, but it was found that he had been assigned to clubroom "A," and, as a consequence, the committee was obliged to rush to that point. The crowd had become so dense at this juncture that Mr. Johnstone called for air and whisky. He also desired to be assigned to a private room for a few minutes.

After a delay of ten minutes he reappeared and the test commenced. The name chosen by the committee was that of J. G. Butler, Jr., Youngstown, O., registered August 25, 1890.

With the committee around him, and having Mr. Lederer by the hand, he asked them to close his eyes and keep perfectly quiet. Soon he stopped on a certain page and asked Mr. Lederer if it were not correct.

Then he called out the date and again requested Mr. Lederer to close his eyes and fix the signature in his mind, and he then produced it in the exact handwriting of the original writer.

Meanwhile, however, he was obliged to have a large glass of whisky to brace up on. The task, nevertheless, was completed to the satisfaction of the committee, and Mr. Johnstone was at once led to the parlor and his bandages removed, when he again called for whisky. He was removed to 2520 Calumet avenue, where two doctors were obliged to work hard on him to bring him out of a cataleptic fit.

Many curious phenomena were manifested incidentally. Tuesday, having wrought his mind up to the reading pitch, Johnstone made a mental trip over the route he was to take on the morrow.

He afterward confided to Mr. Gooding that in this visionary ride the carriage-tongue of his vehicle had come in collision with a wagon, and predicted that such an incident would occur when the real trip took place.

Sure enough when Johnstone and his carriage reached the intersection of State and Van Buren streets the carriage tongue was forced through the wheel of an express wagon. When the Grand Pacific was reached, and just prior to the register test, Johnstone was in a singularly critical condition. His pulse was fluttering in an alarming way, running at times above 150 beats to the minute; his temperature from a normal state had jumped to 103, and on the whole it looked very much as if total collapse was imminent. Messrs. Clark and Johnson were kept busy ministering to his wants. When the test had finally been accomplished the man, now at the height of the great mental strain, fell back exhausted.

FOUR HUNDRED MILES OF STAGE RIDING.

After many days' riding on stage, buckboard, and nameless other "vehicles" over the roughest kind of roads in the interior of Oregon, I have again struck the railroad. Thank my stars that I live to see the iron rail and hear the locomotive whistle once more. I have been at times sadly demoralized by the jolting, bouncing, and sudden, abrupt, and emphatic sit-downs that fell to my lot while rattling along through deep canyons or down steep mountain grades, holding on with both hands, one foot on the dashboard, and the other planted at right angles to keep from going over the wheel or under the horses' heels. It is needless to say that my form was not improved by these eccentric movements. Almost all my travel was done in open stages. The sun burned down on the itinerant with a vengeance. My face has taken on a ham-colored tan, and at times bore striking resemblance to the aforesaid article when the perspiration rolled over it.

There were abundant opportunities to lecture, but the people are in all this country poor—that is, those who go by the name of Freethinkers. As a general thing they are open-hearted and free-handed. The mountain air is not conducive to piety. A very small per cent of the male population go to church. Many are not Christians and not Liberals. Liberal literature is not extensively read. The people seem to take little interest in reform or progress. To live in these mountains is to live a hearty and rugged, but not an intellectual life.

It impressed me deeply to see how far neighbors lived apart in some of the canyons (they spell canyon with a y up here). I have some days traveled eight or nine miles without any sign of a habitation. Then perhaps we would reach a house and barn, where the stage changed horses. The cabin that the family occupy is rude and small. All the garden they have is a very small patch of a hundred feet square or more, that will grow only a few the more hardy vegetables. There is very little fruit grown in the canyons or valleys; and, by the way, there are only a few valleys in all of Central Oregon, and they are, as I have indicated, too high to grow the best fruits and vegetables.

The Willamette valley is the garden spot of this state. The wealth of Central Oregon is not visible to the pilgrim. It consists in sheep, cattle, and horses. These in summer are away up in the mountains. Occasionally I saw a band of sheep consisting of two thousand head. The sheep and herder were not so interesting to me as were their dogs. A well-trained sheep dog knows more than the ordinary San Francisco voter. Without them the sheep would have a sorry time, as they not only drive them, but also defend them from the coyote and bear.

It is utterly impossible for me to mention details of my lectures within the space allotted to one letter. I am happy to say that I have met and made the acquaintance of many good Liberals, a large number of whom who are now not able to subscribe for FREETHOUGHT, I am sure will do so hereafter. There is no question about the hardness of the times in this part of Oregon. There is every prospect that Oregon will be in the near future one of the very foremost states in the ranks of Freethought. The material is here, and the spirit of liberty also.

I shall soon turn my face from Spokane Falls, Wash., towards San Francisco and about the middle of October reach there.

Summerville, Or.

W. S. BELL.

Correspondence Wanted.

A young San Francisco gentleman (dark), of steady habits and domestic tendencies, holding Freethought views, would like to correspond (in confidence) with an intelligent young lady. Address, "S.T.," this office

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper. PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; 7 ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60, $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entered satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled: seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50; fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less.

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Bardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botches, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle-aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N. J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

PORTRAITS

[Enlarged and Finished in Pastel and Crayon.]

First-class work at reasonable prices. Orders and Correspondence solicited. Satisfaction guaranteed. F. C. Baxter & Co., 432 Sutter st., San Francisco.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles M. d.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution: Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping

PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills

414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

WHO GETS OUT THE PAPER?

A Study in Journalism That Is True to Life.

(The managing editor, news editor and city editor seated in the managing editor's room, smoking cigarettes, exalting the scoops they had that morning and belittling the scoops of the esteemed contemporaries. Enter the proprietor and editor smoking a cigarette.)

Proprietor and Editor—Gentlemen, there's got to be more pop about this office, or there will be some high salaried positions vacant. We were beat to death by 'The Bawl on the striker's riot; the seminary scandal should have been headed up and run on the first page; that dreary old Apache outbreak stuff should have been boiled or killed, and—say, who was on when that Apache story came?

Managing Editor—It came late. Bowler was in charge.

Proprietor and Editor—Take Bowler off the night desk to-morrow and put him in charge of the weekly. Take Plater off baseball and give him the night desk. I want some pop around here at night. I want some one to make up the paper who knows the difference between a first page story and Doxology I want"—(Exit, kicking.)

(When the proprietor and editor is gone the others smile knowingly and wearily.)

Managing Editor—That's the kind of a fool the Lord ordains shall own news papers. Still, as long as he has sense enough to hire good newspaper men, he can have the credit of being one himself. You can have twelve columns for local to night and sixteen for telegraph.

(News editor and city editor retire to news editor's room.)

News Editor—Wasn't that rich—Puffer saying the boss was no newspaper man?

City Editor—Pot and kettle!

News Editor—Puffer ordered that Apache story himself without consulting me. He doesn't know a news story from a hair mattress. Got a cigarette, Billy? Thanks. Keep that fight inside of a column to-night, and spread on the strikers' riot.

(The city editor goes to his room and explodes to his assistant and a copy reader.)

City Editor—Once a city editor had something to say about local matter, but now a news editor, with no more newspaper sense than a jay, orders you—oh, it makes me tired!

Assistant City Editor—What has that luminous gentleman been ordering now Billy?

City Editor—Says we must keep the fight down and spread on the strike.

Assistant City Editor—Rats! 'The Bawl spread the strike this morning only because they knew we would keep it down.

City Editor—Yes, and to-morrow it will spread the fight for the same reason. Then the "boss" will come shouting for pop, and blame this end of the shop—

Assistant City Editor—The only end with any news sense in it. (Winks prodigiously at copy reader.)

City Editor—Guess you're about right, Jack. Got a cigarette? Thanks. Let's go out and get a wad. Join us, Jimmy?

(Late that night. Night Editor and Foreman standing over forms. Night Editor with handfuls of proofs, Foreman with handfuls of type.)

Night Editor (to boy)—Johnny! Take this to the telegraph room, and ask one of the young professors there to raise it to a four head, and say that that Chicago special must be chopped off, and to rush up the tail of the Sacramento stuff, and ask New York what he means by duplicating the Associated Press with this Prince George rot.

Johnny—Yezzir

Foreman—It's a good thing there's one newspaper man in the shop, Mr. Bowler.

The Humboldt Library

—OF—

SCIENCE AND CIVILIZATION

- 93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
- 94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
- 95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
- 96. A Half-Century of Science. T.H. Huxley, G. Allen.
- 97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
- 98. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

LIFE RENEWER

NONE GENUINE WITHOUT THIS SIGNATURE.

Dr. Pierce's Galvanic Chain Belt is guaranteed to be the latest improved and only perfect Body-Battery now in use. The electricity from it can be instantly felt by the Wearer. This celebrated Instrument will cure, without medicine; Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Diseases of the Liver or Kidneys, Lame Back, Female Weakness, General Debility, Spinal Disease, Sexual Weakness, Impotency, Etc. Suspensory for men free with every Belt. N. B. The Electricity goes directly to all Weak Parts and restores them to Health and Vigorous Strength. For particulars call or send 4 cts. in stamps for sealed Pamphlet No. 2. Address MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS CO. Y. 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal. PILES. If troubled with Hemorrhoids or Piles, send stamp for Pamphlet No. 3.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,

Hygienic Physician.

Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,

Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.

HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m.

251f

Health AND Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.

Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy, $1.

Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.50.

Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook, $1.

Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer, $1

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.

Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina, Ills. 50.

Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook, $1.

Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F.R.C.S. 30 cents

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS AND TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.

Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.

God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.

Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.

Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.

Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.

The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.

Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.

The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.

OLIVER HUNCKLEY SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N. W. and S. W. Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED

CURES

Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung DISEASES

By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen. Positive cure for Cancer.

26t37

Room 84, Flood B'ldg.

A HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS, 15 cents.

THE MONARCH.

TRADE MARK.

None Genuine Without this Trade Mark on Every Bottle.

PURELY VEGETABLE.
AN INFALLIBLE CURE

—FOR—

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, GOUT,

Lumbago, Asthma, Constipation, Sciatica, Dropsy, Malaria, Indigestion, and all Kidney, Liver, and Stomach Troubles.

$1 PER BOTTLE, SIX FOR $5.

C. H. WEBB, Sole Proprietor and Manufacturer, No. 40 O'Farrel Street, San Francisco.

For sale by all druggists. Send for Circulars.

NEVER FAILS. CAUTION—Beware of imitations. Note my trade mark closely

$25.00 REWARD $25.00

For any of the above diseases that C. H. Webb's HÆMONY will not cure.

References from People Who Have Used C. H. Webb's Hæmony.

Hon. A. Van R. Paterson, Judge Supreme Court, S. F.
Henry L. Dodge, Esq., Pres. Sather Banking Co. S. F.
Captain Ferris, Steamer Apache, San Francisco.

S. M. West, Esq., 1209 Bush street, San Francisco.

Robert Smith, contractor, 1810 Larkin street, S. F.

John Birmingham, Police Officer, 340 18th street, S. F.

James T. Bonefield, Member of Lincoln Post, No. 1.

Residence, 8 Harriet street, San Francisco.

Mrs. W. Gerdes, widow of Ex-Chief Gerdes, San Jose

Fire dept. Residence, Haywards st. Los Angeles.

And I can also refer you to hundreds of others who Have Been Cured by my great remedy

HÆMONY.

C. H. Webb's Hæmony. Carefully packed and shipped by Express to all parts of the world. Send money by P. O. Order or through Wells, Fargo & Co.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourth street, New York.

Standard Scientific Works

- Works by Alexander Bain.
 English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75
- Works by Charles Darwin.
 Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00
- Works by J. W. Draper.
 History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75
- Works by Ernst Haeckel.
 The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00
- Works by Huxley:
 Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00
- Works by John Stewart Mill.
 Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25
- Works by Richard A. Proctor.
 Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
- Works by Herbert Spencer.
 Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75
- Works by Andrew D. White.
 Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00
- Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
 Body and Mind.....$1.5
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50
- Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
 Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

- By Asa Gray.
 Darwiniana.....$2.00
- By L. L. McLaughlin.
 Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50
- By C. Marcel.
 Study of Languages.....$1.25
- By Lester F. Ward.
 Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00
- By Frederick Overman.
 A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00
- B. F. G. Fairfield.
 Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25
- By W. B. Carpenter.
 Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25
- By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
 Evolution.....$1.50
- By Sir John Lubbock.
 Origin of Civilization.....$5.00
- By Charles A. Abbott.
 A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50
- By Garrett P. Serviss.
 Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50
- By Nathan Sheppard.
 Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50
- English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25
- Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

J A. REED.
 FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED, 375 Natoma cor. 5th, S. F.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.09

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.
 TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

—BY—

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."
 339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1.
 Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made referred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. E. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

BRAIN AND THE BIBLE.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.
 BY EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

We can recommend this as one of the most valuable works in the list of Freethought publications. Printed in large type on fine paper and elegantly bound. Price $1. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co. 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....5 10
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond".....14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

- Per Year.....$1.50
- Six Months......75
- Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth $1 50.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoe maker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater. C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. aywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

I. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.

Rapp & DeBarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment

cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.

Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

Price, 50 c. Address Freethought, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, 10 Cents.
Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Two and Two Are Twenty-Two.

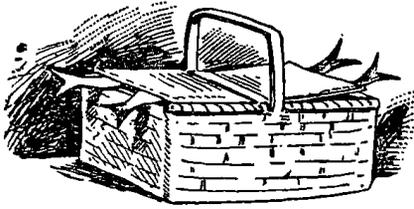

"Mr. Brief," said the judge grimly, "it seems to me that you are wasting time; you might as well attempt to make the court believe that two and two do not make four."

Brief settled his eyeglasses a little more firmly on his nose, and responded blandly: "May it please your lordship, I am prepared to do that. Two and two make twenty-two."

The shadow of a smile played round the corner of the judge's mouth as he sat back in his chair and said, "You may go on with your argument, Mr. Brief."—Chatter.

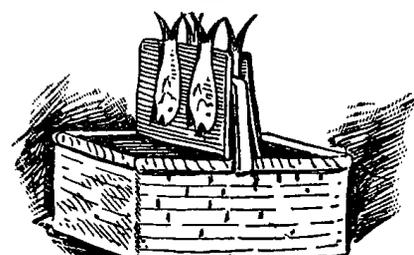

The Angler's Trick.

I.

A BIG CATCH.

II.

A BIG DISCLOSURE.

—Munsey's Weekly.

Instructed.

"Now, looker here, young uns," said an exclusive Arkansas mother, coaching her children in regard to their table manners when a stranger was to be a guest at dinner. "I don't want any of you to tech that nice new butter knife yer pa got in a raffle the other day. That's fer comp'ny only, mind ye, an' I'm goin' to put it on speshly fer that strange guest to use, an' when the rest of ye want butter you jist dab in with yer own knives an' let folks see that you know what good manners is."—Drake's Magazine.

He Left It Outside.

I hear the rustle of her dainty skirt,
And catch a whiff of some sweet perfume rare,
As like a queen she sweeps upon her way,
With form erect and head held high in air

But when she's passed beneath my breath I swear,
And wish she wouldn't swing her dress like that.

In going by my pew her skirtlets caught
And swept the floor with my new stovepipe hat.
—New York Herald.

Hope for Graduates.

Business Man (to applicant for position)
—Your references as to character are very good, sir, and although you have had no experience I will try you.

Applicant—Thank you. I forgot to tell you that I have a college education.

Business Man—Well, don't worry about that. You'll soon forget it.—Street & Smith's Good News.

They Wouldn't Take It.

If Columbus were present—
Discoverer rare—
Perhaps he could find them
A site for the Fair.

—Washington Post.

PROFESSION OF FAITH

OF A SAVOYARD VICAR.

—BY—

J. J. ROUSSEAU.

The above volume includes "A Search for Truth," by Ralph Iron (Olive Schreiner). Cloth, 50 cents. Paper, 25 cents.

Address The Freethought Pub. Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTIANITY * * *

—AND—

* * * AGNOSTICISM.

A CONTROVERSY

Consisting of papers by

Prof. Thomas Huxley, Rev. Henry Wace,
The Bishop of Peterborough

W. H. Mallock, Mrs. Humphrey Ward.
Price, 30 cents.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 40.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan., 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - OCTOBER 4, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Leaving Port Angeles in the foggy morning, Wednesday, Sept. 17, I arrive at the flourishing city of Port Townsend at nine o'clock. This city is making rapid strides. The hills about are covered with elegant dwellings, and the water-front is crowded with business.

I remain only an hour and then speed over the waters that begin to shine in the glimmering sun, to Seattle, where I arrive at half past one. I am simply surprised. All the landmarks have disappeared. I don't know where to look for any of the old campaigners. The hotel where Amunds and Wickstrom used to be is gone up in the fiery blast. However, the Hummells are still at the "old homestead," which has undergone a transformation, and the front lots are decorated with handsome houses, which is a pleasant indication of prosperity. I also visited at the home of Geo. T. Cline, where the friends of the first campaign at Silverton were present, and so time went rapidly by in this frontier city, where the march of wealth and enterprise has been so marvelous. I was sorry that I could not remain a day or two in this place where there are so many good and staunch friends of Freethought. I am obliged to hurry on, and leave the same night for Tacoma and the South.

At noon the next day I strike Kalama, and Svensson is on the U. P. Transfer boat and I have the pleasure of meeting him. Kalama was "dead as a door nail" when I was here last. It has now its day of promise, and lots that I might have bought for $5 are now worth $100 and $500. When will wonders cease in this land of forest and of river?

I likewise learn that the fair secretary of the Oregon State Secular Union, Miss Elva Davidson, is married to our comrade Blackburn. Long life and happiness to these in their mountain home, and may the gold and the silver streams flow plentifully along.

In the afternoon of Thursday I reach Scappoose, where W. W. West is on hand for welcome. Scappoose don't grow much, but its primeval forest is beginning to feel the stroke of the axe. My friend West has built him a new mansion, and here I passed a pleasant day. In the evening I lectured to a very good audience for a country place where the farmers are pretty busy. Comrade Dangerfield is still engaged in the delectable occupation of bee raising, and he finds a great deal of poetry in the study of these little animals, who sing and work with such harmonious delight. Harry West, Peter and Leander Johnson, and others, I was pleased to meet again at this time, and I feel sure that Scappoose will not go backward in the ranks of Liberalism. Our friend West used to be the schoolmate of Ingersoll, and the spirit of those "good old times" is as fresh as boyhood's zest, in the toil of later years.

On from Scappoose to Portland. I catch C. Beal hard at work. The prospects of the Oregon Convention are most brilliant. There is a splendid array of talent. Friend Beal has a kind of magic power to get together the finest material, and marshal the forces for effective work. All sides are represented, and the whole broad issue of the Demands of Liberalism will be presented to the country in a comprehensive manner. Those who do not attend the convention will miss a rare treat, besides a magnificent opportunity for progress and education. I believe this will be one of the greatest conventions ever held in this republic.

I have received such encouraging reports from Texas, while at Portland, that I have planned to be in that state for lectures during December and January. I have already received invitations from the following places: Ft. Worth, Burnet, Big Springs, Goldthwait, Flatonina, Forney, Sherman, and Trenton. Friends in other places who desire lectures will please communicate with me at once. I expect to strike Texas about the last week in November, and return in time for the California State Convention the last of January. I want to put in as much work in Texas as possible during that time. I have not been in Texas yet, and I look forward to a delightful field of labor in this splendid state, where friend Shaw and his noble coadjutors are making the shadows of superstition fly.

Failing to make connection with Carleton as I expected, I dash out, on the spur of the moment, to New Era, where the Oregon Spiritualists are holding their annual camp-meeting, and I happened to strike it just right, and Sunday was a work-day with excellent results. I come to the home of W. W. Jesse, a home indeed for the Secular Pilgrim, where the greeting was as cordial as the sunshine. Jesse was burned out last year, and the devouring flame took about everything he had; but a good name is about as valuable as a bank account. Everybody knew that Jesse was honorable to the backbone, with plenty of grit. Right on the ruins, almost, he began to sell goods again, and has conquered fortune and is again on the road to prosperity, although he is such an "awful Infidel." The "Lord" doesn't seem to get the better of him at all, and humanity is on top.

I lectured Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon and evening in the hall where the spirits are wont to congregate, but they did not disturb me, and we had a cordial union all round. The heart of Spiritualism is for reform and progress every time, and the question of immortality brings no division. Let the "soul go marching on" if it will, only let it be free, and upward and onward. I am willing to accept the world beyond if I get there, and keep up the battle for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. I lectured on the "Demands of Liberalism" and the "New Heaven and Earth," and all seemed to agree in principles and method—reason, science, and humanity.

I can't enumerate the friends I met here. There was Mr. and Mrs. Fuller, from McMinnville; the Kruses, of Wilsonville; Trullinger, of Viola; Phillips, of Clackamas; Mrs. May, of Canby, and L. P. Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Lee and family; George Johnson, of Oregon City; Mr. Linn, and Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Short—these are a few of the many I met in this "temple of nature," where the dim religious light is lost in the sunshine and shadows of the radiant forest.

Sunday morning I listened to Mr. Hendee, of Portland, while under "spirit control." He is a young man who developed mediumistic powers only a few months ago, after the death of his little children. So far as the discourse was concerned, which was a sensible one, I think the speaker would have done just as well without the "control" as with it, but this shows that the spirits don't know any more than we do about things in general, and cannot add to our knowledge. As to the fact of the "control," this is a question of physics that I have not yet determined upon. I don't know exactly what that influence is. Mr. Hendee is well known as a capable business man, and it does not appear that he would be deceived, or that he would deceive others.

I was glad to meet the "Infidel schoolma'am," Miss Katie Kehm. She is a born teacher, indeed, and keeps the best school in the county. In Iowa, where her Freethought principles were against her standing, she still ranked among the foremost teachers, and her mark of scholarship was the highest. She delights in her chosen profession, and the Christians cannot find fault with her methods in the school room. They are strictly unsectarian, purely educational, and you wouldn't know that she was an outspoken Freethinker by anything that is expressed in the school room. She has the gift of interesting the children. I visited the little schoolhouse on the hill, with Mr. Jessie, who is one of the school directors, and was pleased to see all the pupils so animated in their lessons.

When Miss Kehm came to Oregon, after her troublesome persecutions for opinion's sake in Iowa, she determined to keep still and do nothing but teach. But it couldn't be helped. There were calls to action; for Freethought can't be hid under a bushel. She gave the Fourth of July oration at Molalla, which was warmly received. She has since lectured in various places, and will speak at the Portland convention, and at neighboring places as the duties of teaching will allow. But she means to stick to her profession where such important work can be done for true education, and in connection with this to organize, at New Era, a Science Sunday-school; and certainly there could be no more beneficial undertaking than this for the triumph of Secular principles, and with such an able and enthusiastic teacher the constructive and scientific ideas of Liberalism will be vindicated.

Colonel White, a veteran from all around the world, whose experiences of life would fill a volume, gave me a call on Monday morning. He is ready for work and doesn't mean to pass in his checks yet awhile. He has fought superstition from the word go, and, like the "Old Guard," never surrenders.

Monday afternoon Jesse drives me over to Canby, where I lecture that evening in the school-house, which was crowded, and I never had a more attentive audience to listen to a discourse on "Evolution and Creation." Canby is evidently on the forward march. Well, with such friends as the Howards, the Lees, the Macks, the Knights, the Coates, there must be progress; and Wm. Barton, too. Although he is kept busy all the time he doesn't let Freethought go by the board. He is on hand, although I guess he traveled pretty near a hundred miles that day.

Horace Seaver Ramsby, worthy of his namesake, was there, and, good fortune, his father, Maxwell Ramsby, too, all the way from Haystack, who has piloted me over many a rough journey in Eastern Oregon. It was a surprise and delight to meet him again in such different surroundings. I was only one night at Canby, but it was a bright and profitable one, I guess, with omens of future work.

Tuesday morning I am off for Butteville. It was my good luck at the camp-meeting to shake hands with J. W. Batcheller, of Butteville, and he became my "special providence" so far as Butteville was concerned, and it was fortunate that I had such a genial and go-ahead companion. I might have got "left" if he had not arranged the programme. He met me at Aurora, where I have to leave the railroad. Butteville is five miles away on the river bank. Batcheller is a Spiritualist and a Prohibitionist, but that did not prevent a good understanding between us, and where we did agree we could join forces as if there was no difference of opinion. He believes in the Demands of Liberalism, and in progress, and that's the main thing. He took me to his home, and a pleasant resting-place it was. In the afternoon we went down to Butteville and met J. S. Vaughan and others. The lecture is given in the evening at Grange Hall. I find Butteville to be a most uncertain place. Last year the hall was crowded. This year it was not more than half full. Perhaps the main reason was that the men are busy with the hops. Still, I expected better things, and was disappointed that a larger number were not present. Something of a religious element has sprung up in Butteville since I was here, and the church is getting a stronger hold upon the community, and it may be that weak-kneed Liberals don't care to be counted. Whatever the cause, we have to take the ups and the downs and hope that things will be more promising as time rolls on.

However, I have a good time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Batcheller. I find a sunny harbor here, and enough to interest. The fireside blazes in the chilly morning, and roaming over the farm, apples, pears, peaches, and plums can be enjoyed to the heart's content, and the fine Merino sheep and horses attract the eye. Mingling with these are the reminiscences of mine host of pioneer life and spirit, for he struck this country thirty-seven years ago and has experienced much of the varied adventures of this land besides that of "the beyond," which I do not profess to understand. My disappointment was thus combined with pleasure, and I don't have to mark Butteville altogether upon the black-list. J. W. Grim, Jr., of Hubbard; A. Yergen, of Aurora, and others present from outside made up for the absence of those who lived nearer by. About twenty names were added to the list on the petition for church taxation. Take it all in all, there was some gain at Butteville. Thursday morning I drop down the river. Hop-picking is over and crowds of Chinamen throng the wharf, a motley company, ready for transportation to Portland. It doesn't seem as if there was room for them on board the boat, but they pack themselves into all sorts of corners and almost disappear.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

MR. PENTECOST'S DEFIANCE.

Mr. Hugh O. Pentecost, editor of the "Twentieth Century," has resumed his weekly meetings in and around New York. In announcing the meetings Mr. Pentecost explains that circumstances are forcing him into closer quarters than he occupied last year. Library Hall, in Newark, N. J., is to be torn down, and the owners of Oraton, the only available large hall in Newark, refuse to let it to him on account of the doctrine he preaches. In that place, therefore, he falls back upon Liberal League Hall, which, though comfortable, is much too small.

In New York Mr. Pentecost goes from the Masonic Temple on Sixth avenue, where the congregation of the Rev. O. B. Frothingham formerly gathered on Sunday under the impression that they were attending church, to Grand Opera House Hall on Eighth avenue and Twenty-third street. The expenses of each meeting at Masonic Temple, he states, were seventy-five dollars. Of this sum three generous friends paid twenty-five dollars and the audience fifty. It speaks well for Mr. Pentecost's powers of attraction that he could hold such expensive meetings so long as he did. But Mr. Pentecost discovered that his doctrines did not commend themselves to the rich, and while his audiences did not decrease in numbers, they were made up of poorer persons than attended his lectures at first. His work associated him more and more with the poor, not only through sympathy with the nature of the work, but also as one of them; for he declares that he is getting poorer himself every year.

In view of this state of affairs it is worth something to notice that Mr. Pentecost is not weakening in his determination to speak his mind regardless of consequences. He says:

"I shall not change my course. I shall not 'trim' anything I have to say to suit the opinions of my hearers. I shall go on just as I have been going even if the meetings entirely fail from lack of support. Unless I speak the whole truth, as I am able to see it, I may as well cease talking and writing altogether. There are enough 'trimmers' talking and writing. I do not intend to join the number. The truth that it seems to me should be spoken I intend to utter whether any one will listen or not."

These are good strong words, and happy is the editor or the advocate who can afford to speak them. Of course Mr. Pentecost is not blind to their effect. He knows that people do not as a rule listen to a speaker in order to get new ideas, but simply to hear him express their own thoughts in more forcible language than they can themselves command. The religious person does not want to hear Freethought lectures, especially if it pays him to be religious. The Socialist does not want to listen to Anarchism, nor the Anarchist to Socialism, and the Single Tax reformer holds aloof from both. The politicians will avoid the man who tells them they are parasites. The rich will not give of their means to hear themselves denounced; and Mr. Pentecost must prepare himself to see his constituency narrow to that philosophical but not numerous class of people who describe themselves as individualists, with such as he may retain among religious radicals who are willing to "hear the other side." Stepping from the pulpit to the radical platform, and bringing with him brilliancy as an orator, straightforwardness and facility as a writer, and an undeniable earnestness of purpose, he has achieved a splendid popularity. He had the good fortune to be comfortably situated as to money matters himself and to find wealthy sympathizers and an enterprising business coadjutor. Hence success came. But it is a fact that the truth told on any particular subject offends more than it pleases; told on all subjects, it offends nearly everybody; and the time is likely to come when Mr. Pentecost will publish the "Twentieth Century" as "Liberty," "Egoism," and the "Individualist" are published, at the expense of the editors. His hall rent he will pay out of his own pocket, from money earned in the sweat of his own face. For Mr. Pentecost is an independent man, and this is the inevitable result of independence.

OUR LOCAL SOCIETY.

To the Members of the San Francisco Freethought Society:

As the season has now arrived when the attractions which induce people to spend their Sundays away from the city begin to lose their force it is to be hoped that the regular weekly meetings of the society can be resumed, and if each member will do what he can towards their support they may be conducted with increasing success, and before the winter is over our society will become strong and useful for the spread of those principles of freedom and progress for which it was organized.

In October John E. Remsburg, one of the best Freethought speakers in the country, will visit San Francisco, and if possible arrangements should be made with him for at least one lecture. Samuel P. Putnam will also be here in October, and he is so well known and so popular with Freethinkers here that it is only necessary that it should be known he will lecture to secure a large audience.

It is desirable that the sociables should be kept up, for this feature is the means of the members becoming acquainted with each other and of strengthening the bonds of fraternity and the feeling of a common interest in the work to be done.

The board of management appeals to the members to give what financial aid they are able for the carrying on of these meetings, and asks that they send their names and addresses to the secretary, Emil S. Lemme, 938 Howard street, stating the amount they are willing to contribute towards paying the necessary expenses, such as hall rent, music, advertising, etc.

The society at present not only has no funds, but is indebted to Mr. Macdonald for money advanced by him to pay hall rent due at the close of the meetings in July, about $10.

If each member will agree to give fifty cents or one dollar, as he can afford, the managers will feel confident that they can go ahead and make the meetings a success this winter.

W. H. EASTMAN, Vice-President,
EMIL S. LEMME, Secretary.

SUGGESTIVE REMARKS.

In renewing his subscription a valued subscriber concludes his letter thus:

"I should suppose that, considering the difficulty you have in collecting funds sufficient to pay the cost of existence, etc., it would sometimes occur to you that those who support your work for the good it is doing may possibly have similar difficulties to meet."

That is just what does occur to us often. We know what a struggle existence costs a majority of men and women. There are a hundred calls for every dollar the most of us can acquire, and no one can censure the man who devotes his money to that from which comes the greatest amount of pleasure to him. We cannot close our eyes to the fact that the support of the Liberal cause is a tax upon a not large number of men and women. The situation is that the movement is to be maintained by these or not at all; and the question arises whether, in one way or another, they get their money's worth. Presumably they are convinced that they do, or they would spend it for something else. The proposition, "Is Liberalism worth supporting?" is a legitimate one for discussion. We are willing to take the affirmative; if we were not, we should not be asking anyone to subscribe for FREETHOUGHT. Those who prefer to let things drift may do so. Those willing to allow the reactionary influences of superstition to carry the world back under the heel of priests and slave-drivers, will make no attempt to prevent it. Perhaps during their lives, if they are not too young, they would not be seriously inconvenienced. If they could with serenity witness the teaching of lies to the rising generation by arrant frauds, their existence might not be rendered unhappy. Provided they are willing to have one after another of their natural rights denied them, to see religious liberty exiled, and ecclesiastical tyranny reigning in the place of justice, life without Freethought or progress might after all have some attractions for them.

But the man who looks upon the welfare of others as in some way related to his own, and who thinks it worth while to plant even though the harvest should benefit somebody else, will feel that in promoting Freethought he is doing the best he can with his time and means. The youngest of us can see an advancement in Liberal thought, and the blindest can not fail to recognize that it is due to the work of a few Freethinkers. Shall this work go on or stop?

THE OREGON LIBERALS.

In a few days the convention of Secularists at Portland, Or., will be held. President Beal has worked well, and undoubtedly its success is assured. FREETHOUGHT devotes two columns of its space this week to an advertisement of the convention, and hopes that every reader who possibly can will be there. Numbers count in any movement, and a well-attended convention will not only reward the workers who have organized it, but will have a vast influence with the general public. Added to this, they give opportunities for sociability and acquaintance among Liberals that lead to life-long friendships among members of our party, and stimulate interest all around. There is every reason why the Oregon friends should turn out with their families and make the convention memorable in the annals of Secularism.

TIMELY WORDS AND DEEDS.

LOTUS, CAL., Sept. 23, 1890.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, Dear Sir: Realizing the fact that something must be done to keep the banner of FREETHOUGHT afloat, and deeming Mr. Putnam's proposition the best that could be adopted for that purpose, I hereby agree to pay twenty dollars a year into the Editorial Salary Fund, and inclose herewith an order for that amount.

Trusting that enough will come to your assistance to enable you to "hold the fort," I remain yours truly,
G. W. RAMSEY.

UKIAH, CAL., Sept. 22, 1890.

FRIEND GEORGE: I was much astonished indeed on reading in a late issue that at an informal meeting you had proposed your resignation as editor. . . . Now this is a serious matter for consideration and action. Is the FREETHOUGHT, one of the best papers in the country, and the only one on this coast, going to be allowed to go down to oblivion after the gallant and persevering struggle it has made, and now at the very time when it is just about ready to occupy a permanent and solid foundation? Is it going to die for want of support, when a mere trifle, I might say, from those who profess and indorse its principles would put it on an easy footing? I hope not; I sincerely hope not. It would be a lasting disgrace and shame to our name and cause. Let us avert this difficulty. We can do it, and do it easily if we will. A little from each and that paid punctually will do it—what you can afford, however little. Nearly all of us can give something.

I like Mr. S. P. Putnam's proposition of making an Editorial Fund. Mr. Macdonald has filled his position efficiently, honestly, and faithfully; has worked hard, has spent his money and his time, and ably done his duty. We can't afford to lose him. We cannot do without him; he must not leave us. Then let us retain him; let us pay him something for his services. Here inclosed I send ten dollars, the first payment, and I agree and pledge myself to pay the same amount punctually in advance every year while FREETHOUGHT lives and I live and Mr. Geo. E. Macdonald is editor, if I have nineteen more persons to join me. This will be a beginning of establishing an Editorial Fund, and of course does not prevent or interfere with others subscribing whatever amount they can afford or see fit.

I also send you two dollars to renew my subscription, twenty-five cents for Putnam's "Experience," and thirty cents for Lilian Leland's "Around the World" (if I have the price right), if you have a copy on hand.
Yours ever,
JOHN MCGLASHAN.

The following additional amounts have been subscribed to the Editorial Salary Fund: S. P. Putnam, $50; Otto Wettstein, $10; D. Christie, $1; paid: A. Derming, $5; W. A. Pingree, $1; C. H. Furgason, $1; J. H. Hunt, $10; James A. Greenhill, $10.
Total subscribed, $118.
F. L. BROWNE,

Chairman pro-tem. Board of Directors.

IN conducting the case against the sellers of Tolstoi's tabooed work at Philadelphia last week, the prosecutor reminded the judge that the work had been suppressed as unlawful by the czar of Russia. For this reason, and because Czar Wanamaker of the post-office had condemned it, conviction of the defendant was asked for. The judge sat down upon the zealous attorney in this language: "Without disparaging in any degree the respect due to these high officials within their respective spheres, I can only say that neither of them has ever been recognized in this country as binding authority on questions of either law or literature. The defendants have committed no offense against laws and are therefore discharged." There is some relief in the knowledge that Czar Alexander's decisions are not regarded as good precedents in all our courts.

THE Adventists of Oakland, at one session of their late camp-meeting, had under discussion the Blair Sunday-rest bill, and passed the following resolution:

"The enemies of religious liberty are putting forth great efforts to educate and win the people to the principles embodied in these measures; therefore resolved that it behooves us to slack not our hands in the work, but to put forth every effort to enlighten souls in the principles of true religious liberty, and to win them to freedom found only in Jesus Christ."

We cannot understand exactly what "liberty in Jesus Christ" signifies, but if it means freedom from laws enforcing religious beliefs and practices it is good enough liberty for practical purposes. Mental liberty is a thing upon which no legislation is necessary except for its protection.

THE Senate bill to amend the laws with reference to bigamy and the restriction in the ownership of churches to real estate above a fixed value has been reported favorably from the Committee on Judiciary of the Senate. This bill has special reference to the Mormon or Church of the Latter Day Saints, whose charter was forfeited in 1887, and the proceeds of the sale of real estate turned over to the school fund, but no disposition was made of the personal property of the corporation, which amounts to nearly $400,000 and is awaiting the action of the court. The committee deems it wise to let the money take the same course as that derived from the sale of real estate, and place it in the school fund.

THE agitation of our government officials over the proposition of the Louisiana Lottery to start a paper in Montreal, to be circulated in this country, is painful. The annexation of Canada may be the only way out of the difficulty. FREETHOUGHT has no interest in lotteries further than their abolition by the boycotting process. We have refused lottery advertisements, though assured by the men who handle the mails that such advertisements are considered legitimate. The evil of lotteries is that they foster a delusive belief in luck, and a dependence on it for a livelihood, which disinclines people to seek their living by honest labor or business. Hence gamblers, thieves, and all manner of dead beats.

“CHRIST,

“The labor reformer, will be held up on the wharf between the Clay-street pier and San Rafael slip. Look out for the Gospel sharks. Come and hear the true doctrine of Jesus, the carpenter of Nazareth. No dying to get to the heaven of Jesus. ‘God is not the God of the dead, but of the living.’ Services commence at 2 P.M., sharp, every Sunday.”

The above is the notice that Dr. Willey, president of Pacific Labor Union No. 1, gives of his open-air meetings at the water front. He is drawing good audiences, and is believed to be the only pastor on the coast who “holds up” Christ as the Bible describes that character.

THE prospectus of the Stanford Junior University at Palo Alto is before the public. Among other things it states that “while the articles of endowment prohibit sectarianism, they direct that there shall be taught that there is an allwise, benevolent God, and that the soul is immortal.” Who will teach these things? Who is qualified to say, least of all to demonstrate, that there is an all-wise, benevolent God, and that the soul is immortal? And of what value to the world are these facts? It is understood that Senator Stanford is a Spiritualist.

FOR predicting that Emperor William of Germany would in time become a Socialist, Herr Sonneburg, of Berlin, has just been sentenced to three months’ imprisonment. Considering that the emperor has lately advocated some of the tenets of Socialism, this imprisonment seems to be the penalty of drawing a logical conclusion from known premises. It would be as great an outrage, however, if the prediction was without foundation.

A RELIGIOUS person living in the city got a message from the Lord last Saturday night, warning him against a fire to come, and he thereupon proceeded to turn in an alarm, which was responded to by an engine and the hook-and-ladder company. This is, we believe, the first time that danger from such a source has been deemed serious enough to justify calling out the fire department.

P. H. FOSTER, of Babylon, L. I., whose name appears in FREETHOUGHT’S Business Directory, is one of the oldest of American Freethinkers, having been in the ranks for the past forty years. Every Liberal enterprise has felt the benefit of his generosity. He says he does not believe so much in words as in works, and he practices according to that precept.

LONGFELLOW’S poem, the “Building of the Ship,” has been ruled out of a school in Brooklyn, N. Y., because the pupils, in parsing, drew harmful inferences from some of its passages. “The Mask of Pandora,” another of Longfellow’s works, was similarly condemned. The smut-hunters are running things into the ground.

FREETHOUGHT acknowledges the receipt of the following sums: from Samos Parsons, for Freethought Publishing Co., $5; from A. Derming, for American Secular Union, $1, for San Francisco Freethought Society, 50 cents; from W. A. Pingree and C. H. Furgason, for Freethought Society, 50 cents each.

To Remitters.

If you must pay your subscriptions by check on a local bank, please add the 25 cents it costs us to collect it. Drafts on San Francisco or Eastern banks are good for their face value, but checks on local banks are not. It is better to pay small sums by post-office order, postal note, express money order, or registered letter.

OBSERVATIONS.

From present appearances it is safe to say that the discussion of the “Kreutzer Sonata” has just begun. Wanamaker has delivered himself of an opinion shutting the work out of the mails; but the book lives and the postmaster-general might as well be dead for all anybody cares. He has played the Anthony Comstock to Tolstoi’s Walt Whitman, with the result that while Tolstoi remains the central figure on the stage, Wanamaker survives only in unpleasant memory. In my opinion Wanamaker deserves the obscurity into which he has sunk, but Tolstoi is not an ornament to the conspicuous height he has attained. The hero of the “Kreutzer Sonata,” Posdnicheff, is a monstrosity, and he tells a story that, as it progresses, gives the reader an ever-increasing desire to wring his neck. He is a little animal who made a well-meaning woman’s life miserable, and then killed her through unfounded jealousy. If the man who caused his jealousy had given the wretch a lively shaking up and then kicked him downstairs, a better lesson would have been taught him than can ever be learned from the “Kreutzer Sonata.” There are times when a headstrong man may have his face turned the right way by the prompt action of an athletic adviser. We all need occasionally to take a tumble to ourselves and change the set current of our conduct, provided we discover that we are drifting in an undesired direction. Posdnicheff was an irritable, irascible little beast, who approached his wife only for the purpose of gratifying his animal instinct, and for this reason she loathed him as it was natural that a tired woman should do. He has an ill-word for the doctors on almost every page, yet the advice of an intelligent physician was his greatest need. Even the skill of a surgeon, applied judiciously, would have made him a different man. Dr. Foote’s “Plain Home Talk” ought to be circulated among the Posdnicheffs, for Dr. Foote’s common sense is more than Tolstoi’s philosophy.

I notice that some writers acknowledge the fidelity of Tolstoi’s picture of conjugal life. Mr. Bierce, of the “Examiner,” says every man who has been married a year knows it to be true, and Mr. Pentecost, of the “Twentieth Century,” admits as much. Now, while every heart knoweth its own bitterness, and the stranger intermeddleth not with its joy; while we cannot tell how life goes on behind doors that we see only one side of, I earnestly hope that these gentlemen are mistaken. For if they are right, the home is a rather worse institution than the brothel. Tolstoi’s particular hobby is to found marriage on some other basis than that of sex, and he proposes to substitute a “union of beings,” which, as I understand it, would be a reversion to the vegetable stage of development, and living on soil and climate. But it was the union of beings that made the trouble. Posdnicheff tells us that he and his wife were like “two convicts chained together, the rust of whose fetters eats into their flesh and poisons their blood.” An improvement on this state of things, I should remark, would be a separation of beings and an end of that familiarity which breeds contempt.

Tolstoi is such a fussy old granny that I am at a loss to know why his opinions should have achieved the distinction of being seriously discussed. In this story he contradicts himself a hundred times. He confesses, in his apology, that he did not know where his line of thought would lead him; and when he gets to the point of saying that the man who marries a woman ruins her for life, nobody will care to hear his further conclusions.

I have myself written a little piece that is to some extent a more natural if less dramatic work than that of the Russian count. I call it

THE SCHWEITZER TOMATO.

"Listen, and I will relate to you my life's history, and the horrible tale of it, for it is very, very horrible. You observe that I stand while speaking. When you have heard my story you will not wonder that I do not sit. I see that you have recognized me. I am Podsnap.

"I am the son of a wealthy maiden lady. I was born young. When I think of my extreme youth at that time and of my indiscretions I realize the truth of the words spoken nineteen hundred years ago, 'He that is born of woman has experienced his first misfortune.' You do not see the bearing of these details. Neither do I.

"I lived a bachelor life till the age of thirty. I believed myself moral, but I was not. I played fifteen-ball pool for the drinks, for which my wealth enabled me to pay when I was stuck. Once I sat into a game of penny ante, and lost forty-five cents."

The speaker paused, overcome by emotion, but recovering himself, resumed in a harsh, hollow voice:

"From the window of my room I could look out upon the backyard containing clotheslines. One day I saw a woman hanging out her wash. She had clothespins between her teeth, and used them to fasten a pair of striped stockings to the line. I was caught by a pair of striped stockings. The wind inflated the stockings, and I was insane. I was as a New England poet in the presence of pie. I married the woman and saw the stockings when she had them on. They were not as full as when inflated by the wind. Young man, marriage is a disappointment and a sham. All married men know this, but will not confess it.

"The honeymoon was a cheat. The nights were too short. After we were married my wife did no more washing; I told her that work was necessary to her health, but she shuffled and evaded the question by pleading that she was quite robust. When I insisted she wiped the floor with me. Ah, the horrible sensation! The idea that work is necessary to muscular development is a lie.

"We had children—that is, my wife did. You may have children; if not, your wife may have. The children were a source of contention, because each of us insisted that the other was responsible for them. But I know that except for her I should have been childless.

"We quarreled and one day I struck her. She did not scream. She looked at me for a moment, and then picked up a tomato and hit me with it in the eye. Young man, never lift your hand to woman save in self-defense. Since then I have hated tomatoes.

"There was a Dutch grocer on the corner, and he kept my wife supplied with the fruit. Yesterday I saw him carrying a bundle into the house. I knew it contained tomatoes, and I followed him, filled with a devouring jealousy. Quietly I crept up the stairs with a club in my hand. It was a desperate thing to do, but I was a desperate man. Softly I opened the door, and confronted them. They were eating tomatoes from the paper bag which lay upon the table. Upon seeing me they continued to eat. Keeping the club concealed behind me I advanced toward the table, when, suddenly producing my weapon, I struck the bag a blow which scattered its contents to the four winds. What excess will a man not commit under the promptings of the passions!

"How can I describe what followed. That wretch, the Dutch grocer, arose from his seat, grasped me by the shoulders, turned me suddenly about, and kicked me not only out of the room, but down the stairs and far into the street.

"That is why I am standing as I relate to you my very horrible story."

[Period of two years elapses, and the narrator resumes:]

"My wife is now tending store for the Dutch grocer, having obtained a divorce from me on account of incompatibility of temperament. There was no union of being between us. I shall shortly marry again. Marriage is a humbug, but the unmarried state is worse than the first.

I hold it true whate'er befall—
I felt it when the grocer kicked—
'Tis better to be loved and licked
Than never to be loved at all."

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The census gives San Francisco a population of 297,990. It is quite a lively city for its size.—San Francisco's "pugilistic wonder," McAuliffe, was soundly thrashed by Slavin in London last week.—The rainy season has begun early with light showers.—Sister Rose Gertrude (Miss Fowler), who went to the Sandwich Islands to nurse lepers, is the subject of scandal involving a hospital physician. Miss Fowler has resigned and so has the physician, but both indignantly deny the charges.—W. E. Norwood, president of the Stock Exchange, and Charles Ahlborn, of the Ahlborn House, died last Sunday.—The successor of Dr. Harcourt, the "Liberal" pastor of the Howard-street Methodist church, is the Rev. C. V. Leech, late of Albany, N.Y. He is a fossilized orthodox, and a great disappointment to the many Liberal followers of Harcourt.—San Francisco has two candidates for mayor in the field, each of whom will make a lively fight. One is James M. McDonald, Reformed Democrat; the other, Dr. C. C. O'Donnell, Independent. The regular candidates are not yet named.—There were 106 deaths in San Francisco last week, a falling off of 19 from last year's record for the corresponding time.—The "Kreutzer Sonata" is sold by street vendors in San Francisco. No arrests have been made.—The woman journalists of the coast have formed a Women's Press Association. Mrs. Nellie B. Eyster, of the Harrisburg "Telegraph," is president.—W. E. Huey, a collector in the service of the State Harbor Commissioners, is a defaulter to the extent of $3000. Gambling led to it.—William Cuddy, a printer in the employ of Bacon & Co., turned in a false alarm of fire last Saturday evening. His reason for doing so was that he had a "message from the Lord." He was arrested, but later on released.—The Woman's State Suffrage Society met last Friday afternoon at Washington Hall, 35 Eddy street. Laura de Force Gordon gave a brief resume of the work of the society during the past five years, and told what had been accomplished in that time by the enactment of laws pertaining especially to women, such as the bill for the age of consent, marriage laws, and the rights of married women and property rights. Plans were discussed to secure proper legislation for giving women the right to exercise the elective franchise. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term: President, Laura de Force Gordon; vice-president, Addie L. Ballou; recording secretary, Mrs. Julia Schlesinger; directors—Dr. Alida C. Avery, of San Jose, Jennie Phelps Purvis, of Stanislaus, Mrs. R. A. Loomis, of Oakland, Mrs. Ravena G. Steele, of Merced, and Emily Pitt-Stevens and Mrs. Nellie Eyster, of San Francisco.

A special from Braddock, Pa., Sept. 27, says: A notice was posted to-day in the offices of the Edgar Thompson Steel Works that all boys under 16 years of age must be discharged. This is an idea of Andrew Carnegie, who has always been opposed to young labor. The order will affect many widows who depend on their sons for support. Some 250 boys at Braddock and over 100 at Homestead will be discharged in accordance with the order.—Roderick McKenzie, of Ottawa, Can., was engaged to Miss Florence Harrison, but read Tolstoi's book and determined not to marry. Miss Harrison has sued him for $5000 damages for breach of promise.—A score of striking cigarmakers, men and women, at Binghamton, N. Y., were arrested last week for the offense of "picketing" shops, and five of them were railroaded to the Albany penitentiary.—The Louisiana Lottery Company proposes to start a paper at Montreal, Can., to be circulated through the United States. Measures to keep the paper out of the mails are being discussed by the government officials.

Another unsuccessful attempt has been made to kill the czar of Russia by wrecking his train. The report is less thrilling because he was not on the train, and the train was not wrecked.—There may be a world's fair at Genoa, Italy.—A worshiper in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, committed suicide last Sunday by shooting himself through the head.

HAS CHRISTIANITY BENEFITED WOMAN?

BY PROF. GEO. H. DAWES.

IV.

Our own country is probably in advance on the question of the equal rights of the sexes, and yet with us there are many prejudices to overcome. There is a general impression that the woman that has the audacity to enter any of the learned professions is not a genuine lady. Happily, this opinion is being rapidly overcome, yet there is the opinion that the woman that enters the legal or medical profession, or that makes her living by public lecturing, is "very masculine"—that she is attempting to do that which an "all-wise God" did not intend she should do—that she is making an attempt to "usurp authority over man." Woman has had to meet the calumnies and slanders of the bigoted and the envious. In our own country, at Baltimore, in 1829, the first girl passed an examination in geometry, and a howl of righteous indignation went up all over the country.

In countries where the ecclesiastical spirit is yet strong women have the fewest privileges. Compare the condition of women in the Christian countries of Spain and Russia, with their social and educational privileges in this skeptical country of the United States. In Germany, though the intellectual class is thoroughly skeptical, yet the government is as thoroughly orthodox, and the masses are superstitious, it is believed to be good for the "safety of society" to annually degrade several thousand girls. Mrs. Gage says that the ten thousand "women of the town" of the city of Hamburg, before they are permitted to carry on their business, have to procure a certificate showing that they are regular attendants at church, and that they partake of the sacrament, thereby putting both church and state sanction on the vilest practice to which a woman can be subjected. She is considered simply a creature for the gratification of the lowest passions of men. And the more ignorant and orthodox people are, the more is this cursed idea entertained. In Russia it is yet, in many places, considered a sin for a woman to sing in the church, and the soprano is supplied by boys. In England, though woman has recently made much progress in literature, it has not been long since, in some of the old Swiss cantons, that women were led to the market, with a halter around their necks, to be sold to the highest bidder.

In 1877, four professors in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in London resigned because some women were admitted to the college, and they received the thanks of the London populace. And in 1869, four women were mobbed at the Christian university in Edinburgh when they were admitted to the College of Physicians and Surgeons. There are now, in England, medical colleges open to women, but female students do not receive the same clinical advantages as male students.

Woman certainly does not owe her present elevated position to the influence of Christianity, but to the secular movement that has been slowly but surely undermining the church. She is indebted to that spirit of independence and sense of justice which is the result of secular education, which demands that every person, whether white or black, male or female, shall have equal rights and privileges before the law. And nowhere is this progressive tendency better illustrated than in the establishment of institutions of higher learning in which women are admitted on equal terms with men.

It is a notorious fact that the older colleges, those founded when skepticism had not yet begun to influence society, have been the most strenuous opponents of the equal rights and equal educational privileges of the sexes. Of the twenty-four colleges existing in the United States before the year 1800, not one of them was open to women; and of the three founded in the first decade, only one, after the lapse of seventy years, admits them. But from 1860 to 1870, when society, both in the church and out of the church, is completely honeycombed with skepticism, more than four-fifths of the seventy-five colleges are open to both sexes. In 1837, four women were admitted to the freshman class of Oberlin College, three of whom graduated four years later, and were, in the opinion of President Fairchild, the first women to receive a collegiate degree in the United States. And Harper's Magazine of December, 1880, says: "Vassar was incorporated in 1861, and is acknowledged to be the first well equipped college in this (if not in any) country designed exclusively for the education of young women. Smith College, in the Connecticut valley, and Wellesley, both chartered in the last decade, are prosecuting the work which the college of Poughkeepsie began ten years earlier. In a select list of 311 institutions bearing the name of college, 170 admit both sexes on equal terms, and five admit women only. The college is still unknown which, having made a fair trial of co-education, has excluded women, and upon many conservative institutions a strong pressure is brought to persuade them to open their doors—a pressure to which a few of them yield each year."

It will be seen from this that woman owes nothing to the church for the advancement made in this (or any) country toward her social, educational, or political equality with man. It is true that the church is now endeavoring to give woman equal political privileges with man, but, as I have said, for the purpose of making the church a state institution. It is also true that the Protestant churches are now generally willing to give woman equal educational privileges with man, but this is owing entirely to skeptical, and therefore the progressive tendency of the times, and is contrary to the spirit and traditions of the church.

Why, then, should woman cling so tenaciously to the church? She is the untiring beggar for its support, and without her influence the church would long ago have sunk into oblivion.

The church is a great social organization; woman loves society more than man does. Until recently all of her education has been of a religious character; she dreads the social ostracism to which she would be subjected by withdrawing her support from the church, more than man does. Then woman, owing to her sensitive nature, loves the excitable emotions furnished by religion. Her whole thought has been purposely trained in a religious direction, and by taking advantage of her constancy and tender emotions the priests have ever played a winning card.

But, thanks to a few brave, heroic people who had the moral courage to battle for a principle of right against religious prejudices; men and women who could endure orthodox venom, a movement was inaugurated which will gradually lead woman from the bondage of superstition. She is beginning to read and think for herself, and will soon be the equal of her lord and master. She is beginning to learn that the clergy have too often proved a treacherous enemy, and that the church has not always been the truest guardian of her sacred rights. The veil is being drawn from the face of Christianity, and instead of the beautiful system women once thought it to be, she sees a superstition, the features of which are far more horrid than Zelica saw when the veil was drawn from the face of the prophet of Khorassan.

As the clear treble of the prima donna pierces the atmosphere far beyond the united voices of the massed chorus, so the belief of one who makes the study of the universe a life's mission—as Humboldt, an Atheist—is of far more importance than that of inferior millions. Suppose we represent the intellectual degree of a Humboldt by 100, that of his bootblack by 0, that of another bootblack by 0, that of a thousand plantation negroes by 0, and so on. How many such ciphers would be required to aggregate the intellectual degree of a Humboldt?—who, in one season, in Berlin, delivered a series of over sixty scientific lectures on the general characteristics and physical attributes of the cosmos without uttering the word "God."—WETTSTEIN.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS.

Summerville, Or (debate) Oct. 1-6	Myrtle Point Coos co., Or. Oct. 23
Walla Walla, Wash. Oct. 8, 9	Talent, Or. Oct. 26
Portland Convention, Oct. 11, 12, 13	Fort Bragg, Cal. Nov. 1, 2
Coburg, Or. Oct. 15, 16	Boulder Creek, Cal. Nov. 9, 10
Marshfield, Coos co. Or. Oct. 19, 20	Porterville, Cal. Nov. 12, 13, 14
Coquille, Coos co. Or. Oct. 21	Tulare, Cal. Nov. 15, 16
Arago, Coos co. Or. Oct. 22

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION,

R. B. WESTBROOK, PRESIDENT.

F. C. MENDE, TREASURER. IDA C. CRADDOCK, COR. SEC'Y.
BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. Westbrook 1707 Oxford st., Philadelphia.
E. B. Foote, Jr. 120 Lexington ave., New York.
T. B. Wakeman 93 Nassau st., New York.
J. E. Remsburg Oak Mills, Kansas.
Juliet H. Severance Milwaukee, Wisconsin.
F. C. Mende 1814 Green st., Philadelphia.
Ida C. Craddock, S. E. corner of Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL CONGRESS.

The Fourteenth Annual Congress of the American Secular Union has been appointed by the board of directors to meet at Portsmouth, Ohio, on Friday evening, October 31, 1890, and to continue its sessions on the Saturday and Sunday following.

The meetings will be held in the Grand Opera House, corner of Sixth and Court streets, and the orchestra of the establishment has been engaged for the occasion. Due notice will be given of the proposed reduction in railroad, steamboat, and hotel fares.

Portsmouth is situated on the Ohio river, one hundred miles east of Cincinnati and one hundred miles south of Columbus, and has extensive and convenient railway connections with the whole country. It is a port of foreign entry, and is distinguished for its numerous and magnificent manufactories. It has a population exceeding fifteen thousand (15,000), has twenty churches, the Ohio Military Academy, and a splendid system of graded schools. The Ohio Valley Fair is held there annually; and several English and German papers, daily and weekly, are published in the city.

The members and friends of the American Secular Union are sure of a hearty welcome, not only from our enterprising local auxiliary, but also from the citizens at large.

The object of the American Secular Union, as is well known, is to secure the total separation of church and state in fact and in form, to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood be established, protected, and perpetuated. While we unite on what is commonly known as the Nine Demands of Secularism, we propose to emphasize the following at the coming Congress:

1. The equitable taxation of church property in common with other property.
2. The total discontinuance of religious instruction and worship in the public schools, and especially the reading of any Bible.
3. The repeal and prevention of all laws enforcing the observance of Sunday as a religious institution, rather than an economic one, justified by physiological and secular reasons.
4. The cessation of all appropriations of the public funds for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character.

The American Secular Union is strictly unsectarian and non-partisan in both religion and politics, but will use any and all honorable means to secure its objects as above stated. It is not either publicly or privately committed to the advancement of any system of religious belief or disbelief, but heartily welcomes all persons, of whatever faith, to its membership, on the basis of "no union of church and state." The word "secular" is here used in the broadest sense, as applied to the state, and not to any system of religion or philosophy.

To discuss these questions in an orderly and friendly manner, and to devise ways and means to promote these objects, let us come together at this Congress, as Freethinkers, Spiritualists, Unitarians, Universalists, Free Religionists, Quakers, Progressive Jews, and Liberal Christians, and, laying aside our peculiar views on religious questions, unite as American citizens on the one broad platform of no union of church and state, and the complete administration of our secular government on purely secular principles.

The National Reform Association, having for its object the establishment of Christianity as the religion of the state by constitutional enactment; the American Sabbath Union, working for the enforcement, by legislation, of the Jewish and Puritanic Sabbath on our free citizens; the Women's Christian Temperance Union, indorsing the platforms and policy of both these organizations; the churches, both Catholic and Protestant, insisting through their ecclesiastical bodies upon the complete exemption of church property from just taxation, as well as the appropriation of public money for religious schools and other sectarian institutions; all these, and many other, which might be mentioned, are imperilling our constitutional liberties. Every true Liberal and patriot, whether man or woman, should feel called upon to aid in organizing an effective opposition to these nefarious schemes.

Due notice will be given of the selection of eminent speakers from all parts of the United States and Canada, and a free platform will be given to all persons who may have a word to say for pure state secularization. All, without exception, are welcome to this Congress in the wide-awake little city in the valley of the beautiful Ohio.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.
Philadelphia, Sept. 1, 1890. Attest: IDA C. CRADDOCK, Sec'y.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

At the Congress of the American Secular Union, to be held at Portsmouth, Ohio, October 31, November 1, and November 2, 1890, the following amendments to the constitution will be proposed:

- (1) Strike out the word "constitution" wherever it occurs (as applied to this society) and insert "by-laws." Also make any other verbal alterations necessary to have the instrument conform to any charter of incorporation that may be offered and accepted by the Union.
- (2) Amend Article IX. by adding the following: "He or she shall deliver lectures in behalf of the Union as occasion may require and other duties may permit, and shall also solicit annual and life members, and subscriptions to the funds of the association."

R. B. WESTBROOK, President A. S. U.
Attest: IDA C. CRADDOCK, Cor. Sec. A. S. U.
Philadelphia, Sept. 18, 1890.

THE WASHINGTON SECULAR UNION.

The following remonstrance tells its own story; it proved effective, and the petition of the barbers was tabled. But it was another proof that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. The ordinance asked for came very near being passed by the city council. I only discovered the attempt in the nick of time, as the following extract from the proceedings of the city council will testify:

Mr. Hall said he was advised that there was nothing to prevent the council passing an ordinance closing the barber shops on Sundays. The judiciary committee might as well report favorably and the council could do as it pleased about passing it. The mayor remarked he had been requested to ask the council to defer action for the present, as a remonstrance would be presented.

WASHINGTON SECULAR UNION,
2104 Sixth street, SEATTLE, WASH.

To the Mayor and Council of the City of Seattle—GENTLEMEN: The Washington Secular Union having been organized to protect its members and all other worthy citizens in the "absolute freedom of conscience in all matters of religious sentiment," as guaranteed by our state constitution, respectfully call your attention to and solicit your earnest consideration of the following facts in connection with a petition of the master barbers of Seattle asking your honorable body to pass an ordinance prohibiting barbers from doing business or work at their trade or craft on Sundays, under penalty of a fine of $25 for the first, $35 for the second, and $50 for the third offense.

Such an ordinance prohibiting men from following their honest occupations at any time under penalty of arrest and fine is to relegate honest work to the realm of crime.

If it is wrong for barbers to work on Sunday, why is it not equally so on Saturday or Monday? If you pass an ordinance and make shaving or hair-cutting an offense because done on Sunday, then the law declaring such acts to be illegal is a religious law enacted for the purpose of favoring one class of religionists. For if your honorable body were to enact an ordinance that no shaving or hair-cutting should be done on Wednesday under like penalties, every barber in Seattle would demur. A law enforcing Sunday observance or the cessation from honest work from respect to any day as a religious or holy day would be unconstitutional. Our state constitution, Art. I., Sec. 2, declares "absolute freedom of conscience in all matters of religious sentiment, belief, and worship shall be guaranteed to every individual, and no one shall be disturbed in person or property on account of religion." Hence no person pursuing any legitimate occupation or lawful pleasure or pastime on Sunday, any more than on any other day of the week, can be disturbed either in person or property because of any one else's religious sentiments.

The constitution clearly defines and positively states the only conditions which can render a person liable to be disturbed in person or property, to wit: acts of licentiousness or practices incompatible with the peace of the state.

The attention of your honorable body is especially called to the fact that in our state constitution not alone religious faith and worship is assured, but absolute freedom in all matters of religious sentiment, and no citizen can be disturbed in person or property on account of religion or religious rites or observances.

The greater part of the community may be fully agreed concerning some matter of conscience, but if only one of them holds a different opinion, his or her rights of conscience are just as sacred as those of all others, and must be respected; for our constitution guarantees absolute freedom of conscience in all matters of religious sentiment to every individual.

If any number of the master barbers of Seattle desire to abstain from work on Sunday or any other day there is nothing to prevent their so doing. No law or city ordinance is necessary to enable them to exercise that undisputed privilege. But simply for the purpose of protecting a number of master barbers from each other's cupidity and lack of faith in keeping agreement to close their shops and do no work on Sunday, they should not seek from your honorable body the passage of an ordinance that would deprive others of their constitutional rights and render honest occupation infamous and unlawful.

George Washington declared that "every man who conducts himself as a good citizen is accountable alone to God for his religious faith."

The observance of Sunday, or sun's day, is a good old pagan custom. Its enforcement at the muzzle of a municipal ordinance would be as obnoxious and uncalled-for as enforcement of church attendance or family prayers by the same means. We have no established religion in the state of Washington. The Mohammedans, who abstain from work on Friday, the Jews, Seventh-day Adventists, and Baptists, who rigidly observe Saturday, the seventh day, can only be made to observe Sunday by an infringement on their constitutional right to their own opinions in all matters of religious sentiment and observance.

Seattle is a city of progress, the metropolis of the most prosperous state of the Union, and your petitioners pray that no act of yours shall relegate us back to the days of the inquisition or of religious dictation.

Under the constitution of the young giant state of Washington every man enjoys the same right of conscience and is responsible to no earthly tribunal for his religious faith and cannot be made by fine or penalty to observe holy days or other religious festivals against his earnest convictions.

Legislative bodies having jurisdiction can declare legal holidays in which no business can be enforced by one man on another, but have no right to dictate the manner of observance of the day by the individual. One man can work, another pray, and so on, as it suits the individual taste, but no man or set of men under the constitution of Washington has a right to say to any individual, whether barber, butcher, or priest, "Thou shalt not work."

We therefore as individuals and as an organization protest against your honorable body assuming to pass an ordinance in violation of the constitutional rights and religious liberties of the citizen, thereby imposing on him the expense of defending himself and his constitutional rights.

Respectfully submitted,

R. WINSOR, President.

C. B. REYNOLDS, Secretary.

THE OREGON CONVENTION.

"Why have you not said more about the convention in FREETHOUGHT?" was asked me the other day. I said because it was not necessary. The Liberals know that it will be held. Thousands will come from Portland. We have the best hall and best music north of San Francisco. Our speaking talent for this congress is literally immense. It is worth living a lifetime to hear. Twelve hundred can come within the voice of the speaker. You will be fortunate if you get a seat.

On Monday evening there will be a grand reunion at the ball. Everybody will be there except those who are too poor to pay a dollar. Ladies will be admitted free; gents, one dollar.

Unfortunately Professor Dawes will be unable to be here, but the Hon. T. B. Handley will take his place and give us a legal argument of thirty minutes. It is considered an honor now to speak on our annual platform. Will you maintain it?

It comes in the middle of the great exposition and you can obtain reduced fare and take in both. All is ready for you. There is but one thing more, and that is to come.

Come as the winds come when forests are bended;
Come as the waves come when navies are stranded.

C. BEAL.

RANDOM NOTES.

The question of "closer organization and co-operation" is at present uppermost in the minds of Liberals. It is being given consideration in a spirit and with a vim that signifies victory to the Secularist hosts. There is no doubt in my mind that the coming year will find Liberals organized as they have never been before. The signs of the times indicate it.

The tendency of Liberal bodies is to get together under one banner, that is to say, unite with the American Secular Union. And the Union, in my opinion, will be improved in several ways. This must come of necessity in order to bring to her fold, to gather under her wing as it were, the "chicks of the entire henery." Then what a crowing and a cackling there will be!

The coming Congress promises to be the grandest, the mightiest, and the best annual gathering ever held by American Liberals. At it will meet the true leaders, the true patriots of our country. These thinkers will do a work that will bring about the result anticipated above. The handwriting is on the wall and it reads: "The Congress is the place to do the work, and there it will be done."

As Jaminson says, "There should be an auxiliary in every town and hamlet." That's correct. So let us be up and doing. Let us make our national order stronger. Let us fall in line, shoulder to shoulder. Let us establish a mutual aid society. Let us inaugurate the lecture course system. Let us be as true and liberal to our able president as our enemies are to their brainless and stupid leaders. In this way, and in no other, can we win.

Did it ever occur to you that there was a time in this country when the church was poor? When they were almost on the verge of taking up the march over the hill? How did they change? How did they face about? I will tell you. Their preachers traveled the circuits, over rugged hills, through dreary forests, and tangled swamps. They did it, I might say, free gratis. They preached for a bare living, and in that way made possible the high salaries of our day and time. The question arises and stares us in the face: Will Liberal lecturers do the same? Will they tour the country the coming year at lower rates than heretofore? Will they for once travel under the guidance of the American Secular Union and at living and not gilt-edged prices? Will they do this for one three hundred and sixty-five days? If all lecturers would agree to take the rounds at a salary sufficient to keep the wolf from the door and carry on a brisk campaign for a period of one year they would at the end of that time have so organized Liberals that a larger salary would be forthcoming and with a surplus in the American Secular Union treasury. Yes, by all means, work under the American Secular Union management and for prices to suit the times. Be as magnanimous and sincere as the preachers of fifty and a hundred years ago.

Every auxiliary should see to it that their meeting hall is decorated with the photos of leading Freethinkers; in fact there should be two divisions, one for the portraits of the dead, and another for those of the living. Now we have a large surface covered with plush, the pictures set in this, and flagging encircling the whole in the shape of a deep frame. Another thing we intend to do is this: "Have our local lecturers visit the different churches, take notes of the sermons delivered, and then create a stir by announcing that Rev. So and So will be answered in the Secular meeting hall next Sunday evening." Here we have the papers on our side. This is rare, you know. I have noticed all along that there is a general complaint among Liberals as to the refusal of the press to print their articles. The trouble is, these Freethinkers who complain are too quick to find fault with editors. If refused once they should kindly and politely receive the same, and after a while try again. By treating a journalist kindly you will lose nothing and by and by you will win him. We have been mild with the reporters and editors, and now they are with us.

WILL S. ANDRES,

Portsmouth, O.

BORN FOR A PURPOSE.

"Washington and Lincoln were born for a purpose."—J. Shock.

This would prove design, and design proves a designer. Now, we know nothing about any being or power that designs one man for this or another for that. As well say this man was designed for a murderer, that one to be murdered, the other to be starved, and still others to be shipwrecked or burned to death. It is circumstances that make the man. The conditions made Washington and Lincoln. Being fitted by nature and education for filling the role they did fill, the opening gave the opportunity.

There may have been men better fitted for these positions than either Washington or Lincoln, but they were not just there at the critical time, nor did they have the proper conditions about them pushing them into the openings. All is as it is, not by design, but from force of circumstances.

From all the long chain of cause and effect running back into all the past, one different event, one different marriage, one different birth, and all might be changed. Nothing comes by design, and neither does it come by chance. Law governs all things. We are because forces combined to produce us. We are what we are because of the inevitable past that evolved us. We shall become what we shall be by force of coming events growing out of the past.

That you are here—
That life exists and identity,
That the powerful play goes on,
And you may contribute a verse.—Whitman.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

THE MARRIAGE LAW.

The protest entered by Mr. H. against the editorial utterance of FREETHOUGHT, August 30, seems to me to be rather misplaced. A Freethought organ should voice the different opinions of its contributors on all moral, religious, and economic questions clothed in decent language. If it does not it ceases to fulfill its mission. If marriage in its different aspects cannot be discussed without shocking cut-and-dried morality it must per se be an immoral institution, and as such should be abolished as a legal contract; and the only way to prevent such discussion is to place the paper under a censorship—for instance, Comstock & Co.

Now, then, since Mr. H. is such an admirer of the legally-enforced marriage, and seems to feel secure in it that innocent children and helpless women are protected by it, how does experience bear him out? In what case does marriage prevent desertion, and in what case does it secure maintenance? Only there where love and desire to stay together dwells, performs the legal marriage what it claims; not because of the legal tie, but because of the identity of desires of both contracting parties. Moreover, as far as maintenance is concerned, in many cases the woman supports not only the helpless children but the worthless husband in the bargain, proving beyond a doubt that riddance of the encumbrance would be a blessing to her. And suppose a husband brute enough to desert his faded wife and his children, common sense teaches us that the sooner he rids them of his presence the better, even if he leaves them to public charity. No legal ties keep people together of free will; the only binding bond is reciprocal love.

Did it ever strike Mr. H. that there would be very few of those women who have lost their youth and beauty and the cheerfulness of earlier years if marriage was only a mutual understanding between two parties, without a meddling state or priesthood to make it indissoluble? Does not Mr. H. know that most of those worn-out, lack-lustre eyed, hatchet-faced women are the victims and legal products of his much-vaunted legal marriage, and that theirs would be the elastic step and the cloudless brow if the gilded chain around their necks had been removable at will?

Marriage is nothing but a contract between two parties, and could, like any other partnership, give to both participants equal rights. Does it do so in practice?

Does it not reduce the weaker sex to a state of bondage, as is indicated by the ring, that old symbol of slavery? Is it not over well known that the stronger sex is not restricted at all? By marriage the woman loses the freedom of her body. What does she gain? A home, such as it is, and a lord and master. The so-called beloved mother brings forth children she does not want, and the sanctuary of the bedroom knows many and many a scene of disgusted subjection on the one side, and tyrannical, criminal assertion of authority on the other. I dare assert on the strength of twelve years' practice as physician, and that amongst a very marriage-adoring class of people, that one-half of the miscarriages I attended in professional life were caused by undesired but enforced marital conditions; while every physician can record score on score of applications made to him by so-called beloved wives to rid them, in the name of pity, of the undesired fruits of the loving husband's attentions.

And is it not a crowning glory to that healthy social institution, the sheltering-place of purity and rectitude of conduct, that one-sixth of the women come some time or another under the care of the gynecologist; and that one of the first injunctions of the practitioner is to avoid the marriage habits; and is it not a delightful proof of the equal rights obtained under the legal-bound partnership that the customary answer is, "I will tell my husband," showing that not her but his will is to be considered—that her body is not her but his property?

And how many cases of special diseases come out under treatment where the woman is as pure as the driven snow, having contracted the same under the restricting obligations of the blessed legal ties of marriage, the legal ties that without redress allow her health to be destroyed and her body to be ruined.

Why is it that even young girls are suffering with sexual complaints if it was not that sexually abused mothers have borne sexually weak children for generation after generation? Evolution never wavers, but works backward as well as forward.

What is it that we, the "libertines" and "debauchees," desire? Do we want to force two loving people, whose joy is to live together, whose love-born children are the apple of their eyes, asunder? Do we want them to leave each other? Do we want to force them in practices repugnant to them? Will not we, the "libertines," allow them to enjoy their personal freedom to their hearts' content, admiring that Ingersollian contract where the one man adores the one woman, the one woman loves but the one man, both reveling in the possession of an offspring, the blessing of love and free will?

What is it we "libertines" desire? The equal freedom of all humanity. We cranks desire that everybody shall have the free and full control of the fruits of his labor, of the gifts of his love, of the disposal of his body. We, the "debauchees," contend that a woman who is forced to bear children against her will, who is forced to endure the amorous manifestations of either husband or any other person against her will, is a slave; and we, the impure, clamor for the deliverance of woman from such unbearable, disgusting, abominable thralldom to a state of liberty, which can only be attained by the abolition of that corrupt and rotten relic of ancient religious and political superstition, the compulsory legal marriage tie.

And only then will a mother be the ideal mother, who adores the children, whom she will never desert, and on whom as long as she loves she will lavishly bestow her fostering care. When freed from sexual slavery she glories in the offspring of her free will and love.

Liberty, more liberty! is the cry of mankind. I glory in being one of those "cranks, libertines, and debauchees" who would gladly abolish the holy legal marriage tie as it is enforced, and gladly acknowledge that I am not fit to live in the civilized society of those who sanction and revere the legalized prostitution called marriage.

G. A. F. DE LESPINASSE, M.D.

No MAN should get mad because a newspaper duns him for money. A dun is not an impeachment on the subscriber's integrity, but simply an outcropping of the publisher's necessities. For instance, a thousand men owe a man from $1 to $4 each. He has to dun them to get money to pay expenses. Instead of getting mad because the editor asks him for his honest dues, the subscriber should thank the editor for waiting so patiently.—Pomona Progress.

Love Learnedly and Philosophically Defined.

In his Observations in FREETHOUGHT of August 30, its office editor observes as follows:

The editor of a San Francisco paper of great typographical beauty, called "Egoism," has many original thoughts. The doctrine of Egoism is what has been more or less known heretofore as "enlightened self-interest." I quote one of its editorial paragraphs. Be it understood that the editor of "Egoism" repudiates as a superstition the idea of sentimental love between the sexes. He says:

"If you don't 'fall' in love with anybody but yourself, and love wisely enough to do it well, you have the advantage of the situation; for the object of your affection will never die or forsake you while you live, and when you die you will not miss it."

There is one other consideration which the editor has neglected to call attention to, namely, that the person who falls in love with himself or herself, as a general rule, is not troubled with rivals.

The implication is that to be without rivals in such self-love might be undesirable; but, in these days of rampant paternalism, much depends on whether such rival in one's pursuit of his welfare has in view the gratification of a mutual desire, or a subjective one which has no probability of becoming so. In the latter case, the absence of a rival would be immeasurably desired, and it was to cover this point that the perhaps-somewhat-obscure clause, "love wisely enough to do it well," was introduced in the sentence quoted by the friendly critic, and which it is now the purpose to clear up.

Now, the condition known as "love" is a subjective state of mind consisting of an intense desire to exercise upon and have exercised upon us, for our own gratification, various caresses, and interest in our pleasure, by a certain object desired to be in a similar state of mind. The object is usually determined by circumstances of proximity and favorable impressions on the semi-intellectual faculties, by form or actions, or both. The desired state of similar subjectivity on the part of the object of our subjective condition is, if at all, accomplished by suggesting to that object our subjective state so gradually and evasively that the object becomes reciprocally conscious of it without direct verbal communication of the fact, and is a process which admits of a skill the subtle delicacy of which taxes to despair the psychologic resources of the subjectively-entranced lover. This incompleted ordeal passed, the similarly subjective state between two such persons finds pleasant exercise in continually suggesting each to the other such state. The writer has sometimes witnessed this exercise between two in mixed company, and noticed the entire absence of rivalry they enjoyed. The same is true in self-love. If the suggesting to self is marked, a corresponding absence of rivalry will accompany it, and the wisdom of thus loving depends upon judiciously making the suggesting conform to the desire for rivalry. This un-"fallen" in-love-with-another condition leaves us ever free to sip the proffered sweets of the fair, as of the field, with the positive assurance of not paining our original lover with the ventures of the ever-passing opportunities, one of which ordinarily is the occasion for the usual "fall" into—obligations of mutual slavery in which these sweets are seen only as the necessary bait to a trap that seldom opens save to take out the dead rats. It is an advantage, the taking of which relieves all from obligation.—H. P. Reploglé in "Egoism" for September.

An Unwarranted Presumption.

Attorney (defending prisoner charged with swindling)—Your honor, one of my witnesses alleges that my client rung a cold deck on him. A cold deck, your honor, it may be necessary to explain, is a—

Judge (of Montana court, severely)—The assumption that the court doesn't know what a cold deck is, Mr. Sharp, is an impertinence that will subject you to fine for contempt of court if persisted in. Proceed with your argument.

A GOOD story is told of the Rev. Sam Jones. Once in a crowded assembly, after his sermon, he said: "I want everybody to stand up who wants to go to heaven." Almost everybody stood up, and then he said: "Now, if there is anyone who wants to go to hell, stand up." For a moment no one stood up; then an individual in a back seat arose and said: "I don't exactly want to go to hell, but I am willing to stand up rather than let the preacher stand alone."

The fall of man and anthropology will be further discussed by Dr. Andrew D. White in the Popular Science Monthly for October. In this article he reviews the futile efforts of Archbishop Whately and the Duke of Argyll to prove that the lowest races of men have sunk from an earlier civilization and the equally successful attempts of certain church organizations in recent years to silence professors of science who were teaching the truths of evolution.

THE "Freethinkers' Magazine" for October contains, among other things: "The Last Words about Protoplasm," by T. B. Wakeman; "Who Inspired Him? The Cyrus Story in the Old Testament," by Prof. A. L. Rawson; a fine portrait of Judge Charles B. Waite, as frontispiece, with an editorial biographical sketch of his life. Price 20 cents. For sale at this office.

Crocodile Tears.

To the Editors of Freethought:

"Vigilance is the price of liberty." The cruelty-to-animals gag is becoming immensely popular; hence some of our intensely moral newspapers are shedding large crocodile tears over the matter.

Speaking of overloading horses, the "Examiner" says: "It should be the business of the supervisors to put a stop to this barbarous practice." The editor evidently thinks that owners of horses, dray teams, etc., know nothing of their own business or how to take care of their most valuable property.

A Mrs. Emily Newel wants to display the badge of authority in this matter. She wants to have "ministers preach in the interest of animals and teachers explain to their pupils that helpless creatures have rights," etc.

Well, these people who make so much ado about cruelty to animals seem to have no conception of a difference between necessary and wanton cruelty, nor do they appear to have one solitary pulsation of sympathy for suffering humanity.

Mr. John Partridge thinks "this question may be brought into politics this fall." If so, it will be a good move. The law of 1868, granting police powers to societies, and placing in the hands of inexperience, ignorance, and arrogance the means of spite-work and persecution, should be repealed. The state law, which provides for the punishment of wanton cruelty to domestic animals, in the hands of experience, practical sense, and in the hands of the people at large, ought to be sufficient.

A friend of laboring men as well as animals, J. C. P. Turlock, Sept. 28, 1890.

Secularism at Port Angeles.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Liberalism has had a grand revival here. Mr. Samuel Putnam lectured to large and attentive audiences on the 13th, 14th, 15th, and 16th, on the "Demands of Liberalism." Some of our Christian friends have accused us of combating them, but Mr. Putnam explained to them that we only ask for equal rights. We wish them to pay their own taxes, as we pay ours; we do not wish them to teach their Bible or religion in the public schools, as we never attempt to teach Paine's "Age of Reason" or Ingersoll's "Mistakes of Moses" in the schools. Neither do we appoint a day for them to rest, and persecute them for not resting when we tell them to. Our Christian friends, in following creeds and customs formed hundreds of years ago by ignorant barbarians, have become so accustomed to trampling on other people's rights that they do so without realizing it, and many of them, as soon as it is explained to them, become ashamed of themselves and quit. The only way they can resist the eloquence and logic of Mr. Putnam is to keep away from him and not listen to his lectures.

This town is situated similarly to San Francisco. It has more than doubled, during the past year, in population and business, and has fair prospects of soon becoming a large city and strong fort for Liberalism. The present population is nearly two thousand. Several railroads are coming this way, and when they arrive here the price of land will soon go out of the reach of the poor man. All who wish to secure homes in one of the most thriving and Liberal towns in the west should come to Port Angeles as soon as they can.

For further information see Mr. Putnam's "News and Notes," and address P. S. Lewis, real estate agent, Port Angeles, or Frank Morse, corresponding secretary Port Angeles Secular Union. FRANK MORSE, Port Angeles, Sept. 17.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.
PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; 7 ounce, $28.50; 8 ounce, $30.50; 9 ounce, $32.50; 10 ounce, $34.50; 11 ounce, $36.50; 12 ounce, $38.50; 13 ounce, $40.50; 14 ounce, $42.50; 15 ounce, $44.50; 16 ounce, $46.50. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entered! satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50 fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botches, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N. J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St.
San Francisco.
Watches Cleaned & Warranted, $1

Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 5134

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

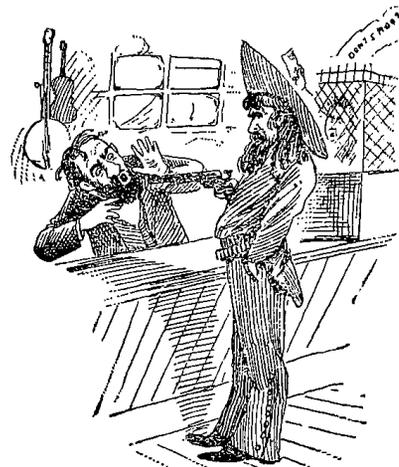

An Awful Load.

An enterprising merchant placed a number of brass plates cut in the form of human tracks in the stone sidewalk leading toward his door. He moved away shortly afterward, and desiring to use the brass plates at his new establishment gouged them out, of course leaving the foot forms imbedded in the stone.

One day an old fellow from the country, accompanied by his son, came along, and seeing the tracks in the stone stopped, and after a loud exclamation of astonishment said:

"Bill, fur mussy sakes, jest look here. Gracious alive, what a load that feller must 'a' had when he come along here. Sunk right down in this here solid rock. I'll bet he was either a totin' a yoke of steers or had filled up on that drug store licker."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Ready to Take His Word for It.

Wildcat Bill (the cowboy)—I say, pard, kin you advance me something on this revolver?

Pawnbroker—H'm! Was it in good order?

"Jus' lemme take a couple of shots at you and see!"

"Oh, dat vas all right. Nathan, give this shentleman ten dollars."—Texas Siftings.

A Novelette.

The hands of the clock were toiling around to the place that marks the hour of midnight. Harry had come early that evening, but he took no chances on Maud's becoming lonely.

"Sometimes," he said, "you look at me in a way that I do not understand. It seems more than anything else as if you experienced a dread of me."

"I don't know," she mused, "perhaps I do."

"In what way?"

"I think it might be best described as a lingering dread."—Washington Post.

A Discreet Watchmaker.

Lady (paying for repairs on her husband's watch)—What ailed it?

Jeweler—A hair was tangled in with the escapement.

Lady (anxiously)—What color?

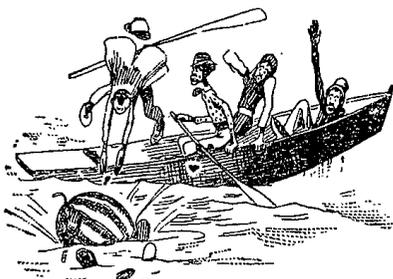

Jeweler—Exactly the color of yours.—Jewelers' Weekly.

Where It Was.

Careful Housekeeper—Where is that sheet of sticky fly paper I left on this table?

Small Boy—I put it on th' arm chair in th' parlor. You'll find half of it on sister an' th' other half on Mr. Hughard.—Street & Smith's Good News,

All Hands to the Rescue.

Mr. Betts—Golly! Pete Johnsing's done knocked de watermelon overboard wif him!

Chorus—All in! Dat striper beats bass all holler!—Judge.

A Keen Thrust.

Mrs. Cumso—I noticed today that the young man who boards across the street flirts with our hired girl.

Mr. Cumso—Dear me, you must put a stop to it immediately.

Mrs. Cumso (sweetly)—Why, I didn't think you capable of so much jealousy.—New York Herald.

Just Home from the Shore.

"Aren't you calling at the Brownes' any more?"

"No. It isn't safe."

"Why not?"

"Her father's back and the undertoe is too strong."—New York Herald.

A Sure Preventive.

Johnson—What do you have that big pile of wood in your yard for? Don't you burn coal?

Jackson (who lives in the suburbs)—Oh, yes. I just keep that there to frighten away tramps.—Lowell Citizen.

An Indication.

"There must have been evil news in that letter."

"Why do you think so?"

"He swore so terribly. It takes evil communications to corrupt good manners.—New York Herald.

wrong conclusion.

Fond Mother—My dear, did you refuse Mr. Foster last night? I heard you say, "No, no. Never!" in quite an agonized tone.

Daughter—Pshaw! that was nothing. George was just asking me if he made me tired.—New York Herald.

A Decided Coolness.

"I noticed a coolness between Miss Roseleaf and Mr. Treatley last night."

"Is that so? And they're engaged, too."

"Yes; they were eating ice cream when I saw them."—Munsey's Weekly.

He Aims High.

"Tommy, what do you want to do when you are a man?"

"I want to be an electrician."

"Ah, you have a volt-ing ambition, I see!"—Drake's Magazine.

SECULAR GOVERNMENT!

UNDISTURBED RELIGION.

Keep Church and State Forever Separate—U.S. Grant

THE SECOND ANNUAL CONGRESS

—OF THE—

Oregon State Secular Union

—MEETS AT—

PORTLAND, OREGON,

AT NEW ARION HALL, CORNER SECOND AND OAK STREETS,

Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, Oct. 11, 12, 13.

OBJECTS: To guarantee Civil and Religious Liberty to the people, secure the Taxation of Church Property; and oppose the Union of Church and State.

SPEAKERS: Miss Katie Kehm, the eloquent German girl, of Iowa; S. P. Putnam, the poet and author; Professor Dawes, the logician; Mattie P. Krekel, of Kansas City, an eminent platform orator; Hon. C. J. Curtis, of Astoria, the eloquent attorney of Oregon; Abigail Scott Duniway, the world-renowned champion of Female Suffrage; Judge Winsor, of Seattle, president of the Washington Secular Union; Elder Alonzo T. Jones, the Mirabeau of the American pulpit; John E. Remsburg, the Materialistic orator and author; Moses Hull, of Chicago, the hero of a hundred debates, and the renowned exponent of Spiritualism; Hon. W. J. Armstrong, of Washington, D. C., late Inspector-General of United States consulates for Europe, thought by many to be the greatest living orator. (Mayor Hewitt requested him to deliver his lecture on Russian Nihilists, in Cooper Institute to five thousand people; Congress invited him to deliver it in Washington, where he was introduced by Colonel Ingersoll, which led the Century Magazine to send George Kennan to Siberia to examine her living hells. Major-General Nelson A. Miles says: "I have heard all the great speakers of this country, and I consider William Jackson Armstrong among the very foremost; he looks and is every inch an orator.")

BALL. On Monday evening there will be a grand ball. Ladies admitted free; gentlemen, $1.

MUSIC. Roose & Hodson's Ariel Orchestra of seven professors will render music for the Convention and ball.

COMPLIMENTARY. You and your friends are most cordially invited to attend these free meetings. Please remember the time and place and do not miss hearing some of the great speakers on Saturday.

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK
In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parson, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

RUPTURE

In advertising Dr. PIERCE'S Patent MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS, the assurance is given that we are offering the Best Truss in the World. This Celebrated Appliance has been extensively sold for many years and has Radically Cured thousands of cases of Rupture! This is an Electric Truss (the only successful one ever invented); has no Iron Hoops or Steel Springs about it, and being elastic, can be worn with ease and comfort Night and Day. It's a perfect retainer! For further particulars of Truss, send 4c. in stamps for Pamphlet No. 1 and REMEMBER that Dr. Pierce's Genuine Electric Trusses contain our Private Signature exactly like that shown at top of this advertisement. Beware of inferior imitations! Address: MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COMPANY, 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,
Hygienic Physician.
Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,
Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.
Hours: 10 to 12 a.m. 25tf

Health AND Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.
Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy. $1.
Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.50.
Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook. $1.
Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer. $1.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.
Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina. Ills. 50.
Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook. $1.
Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F.R.C.S. 30 cents

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS AND TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.
Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.
Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.
God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.
Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.
Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.
Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.
The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.
Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.
The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.
OLIVER HINCKLEY - SUPERINTENDENT
Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.
N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED
CURES
Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung
DISEASES
By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen.
Positive cure for Cancer.
26t37 Room 84, Flood Bldg.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT. By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.
The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS", 15 cents.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERY.

Located Eight Miles South of San Jacinto, Cal.
P. A. CLARK, PROPRIETOR.
A full stock of everything in the Nursery line on hand.

APPLES, PEACHES,
PEARS, PLUMS,
APRICOTS, NECTARINES,
PRUNES, ALMONDS,
WALNUTS, QUINCES, ETC.
IN ALL VARIETIES.

A fine lot of Kelsey's Japan Plums, one and two years old.
Send for price list and buy where you can get trees at living rates.
P. A. CLARK, San Jacinto, Cal.

W. M. HINTON & CO.
PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,
536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San Francisco

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against
LIBERTY,
By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

WRITE TO ELMINA!
Please send stamp for circulars and prices of Books, Blankets, Woolen Goods, and Stocking Yarn.
Snowville is now a Money Order office.
Address, E. D. SLENKER, Snowville, Va.

Standard Scientific Works

- Works by Alexander Bain.
 English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75
- Works by Charles Darwin.
 Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin, 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00
- Works by J. W. Draper.
 History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75
- Works by Ernst Haeckel.
 The History of Creation, 2 vols.....$5.00
- Works by Huxley.
 Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00
- Works by John Stewart Mill.
 Principles of Political Economy, 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25
- Works by Richard A. Proctor.
 Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
- Works by Herbert Spencer.
 Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology, 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology, 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology, 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75
- Works by Andrew D. White.
 Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00
- Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
 Body and Mind.....$1.5
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50
- Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
 Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

- By Asa Gray.
 Darwiniana.....$2.00
- By L. L. McLaughlin.
 Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50
- By C. Marcel.
 Study of Languages.....$1.25
- By Lester F. Ward.
 Dynamic Sociology, 2 vols.....$5.00
- By Frederick Overman.
 A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00
- B. F. G. Fairfield.
 Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25
- By W. B. Carpenter.
 Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25
- By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
 Evolution.....$1.50
- By Sir John Lubbock.
 Origin of Civilization.....$5.00
- By Charles A. Abbott.
 A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50
- By Garrett P. Serviss.
 Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50
- By Nathan Sheppard.
 Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50
- English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25
- Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
 375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

—BY—

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."

339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1.
 Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

BRAIN AND THE BIBLE.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

BY EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

We can recommend this as one of the most valuable works in the list of Freethought publications. Printed in large type on fine paper and elegantly bound. Price $1. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond" 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy.
 Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,
Freethought Pub. Co.,
 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!
 Per Year.....$1.50
 Six Months......75
 Three Months......50

EDITED BY
F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.
 OFFICE:
 429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.
 12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth $1 50.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoe maker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater. C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Nurseryman.

R. H. Foster, Babylon, N. Y.

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st. Rapp & DeBarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st. Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

ORIGINAL

BROWNSVILLE

WOOLEN MILLS

CLOTHING STORE.

164 and 166 Second Street,

Near corner of Morrison,

The Best Goods in the Country

PORTLAND, OR. W. R. BISHOP, AGT.

Call, or send orders and measure.

MORE THAN HE BARGAINED FOR.

He Was Chief Surgeon, Physician and Nurse Without Knowing It.

"We had a case of smallpox in our lower camp once," said the colonel, "which gave us a good deal of trouble. You see there were only six of us, and we did not want to lose any more men than possible. We determined to send the case to the upper camp, five miles away, but the problem which worried us most was who should go along as nurse.

"'Bob,' the cook, was a hard drinker, and as soon as he heard of the case he proceeded to drown his cares in whisky. He was terribly frightened at first, but the more he drank the more resigned he became to circumstances.

"When Bob was drinking he could beat any man in Colorado at boasting and before long he began to declare that smallpox had no terrors for him. In fact he had nursed nineteen patients at one time when every one else had deserted them. He had brought them safely through, too. In the end he gravely asserted that he couldn't catch the smallpox anyway, for he had already had it.

"Five of the boys looked at me significantly, and I nodded my head. We bundled the sick man up carefully and put him in a wagon. Two hours later we had established a hospital at the upper camp, with the cook as chief surgeon, physician and nurse. The cook, by the way, was sleeping as peacefully as a child when we left the hospital.

"The next morning we heard wild shouts and saw Bob tearing for the lower camp, half dressed. We immediately established a shotgun quarantine.

"'Hold up, Bob,' one of the boys shouted, 'this camp is quarantined. You can't come past the whistling post.'

"'But, say,' pleaded the frightened cook, 'that man has the smallpox.'

"'Well, you volunteered to nurse him.'

"'I?' he screamed incredulously.

"'Remember those nineteen patients you nursed.'

"'What nineteen patients?'

"'And then, you know, you had it yourself.'

"'I never saw a case before,' he howled.

"'Can't help it. You've started on it now and must keep it up.'

"We chased him back from the post, and left some whisky and provisions for him on the ground. We told him to come down every evening at sundown for a new supply, and we never let him come near the camp.

"He used regularly to come down and beg to be allowed to come into camp, but the shotgun policy was strictly maintained. Then he would take up his whisky and provisions and shout out to us that he would have every one of us hanged for deliberate murder."

"Did he catch the smallpox? No, nor did that experience cure him of lying and bragging. He afterward boasted to people that he had nursed us all, only he swelled our number to nine, for five weeks without closing his eyes, that he rode thirty miles twice a week for medicine and looked after all the cattle besides."—New York Tribune.

Where Father Comes In.

"I hear Charley has gone to Europe on his father's account."

"Yes, on his cash account."—Boston Times.

He Was a Stayer.

"Did you hear young Wopely's latest?"
"No, but I can guess. Four o'clock in the morning."—Philadelphia Times.

PROFESSION OF FAITH

OF A SAVOYARD VICAR.

—BY—

J. J. ROUSSEAU.

The above volume includes "A Search for Truth," by Ralph Iron (Olive Schreiner). Cloth, 50 cents. Paper, 25 cents.

Address The Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTIANITY * * *

—AND—

* * * AGNOSTICISM.

A CONTROVERSY

Consisting of papers by

Prof. Thomas Huxley, Rev. Henry Wace, The Bishop of Peterborough

W. H. Mallock, Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

Price, 30 cents.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO. 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo. 399pp., $1.50.

Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.

Address The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 41.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - OCTOBER 11, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

I drop down the river to Kruse's Landing, Thursday, Sept. 25, and lecture that same evening to a full house. The Liberals about Wilsonville, with the Kruses, are doing a splendid work. They have organized, and hold meetings every other Sunday, and the attendance is good. Hon. John Kruse came to this country a quarter of a century ago, and went to "grubbing out" the mighty forests, and now, to-day, his broad acres shine beneath the unobstructed sun, with varied products. He has quite an army of children and grandchildren, and all under the banner of Freethought. His boys tip the scale all the way from two hundred to three hundred and fifty pounds. This brawn and brain is for liberty every time. I had a delightful visit at this home, where books, music, and pioneer memories give animation to the scene. R. V. Short, a genial co-laborer, was with us. In the afternoon I took a drive over the surrounding country, which presents quite a picture of prosperity. I never had a more attentive audience than gathered at the Grange Hall, and the disappointment of the previous days was made up by the generous appreciation of the Liberals of Wilsonville, and I look forward to future work with cheerful mind. Albert O. Kruse is president of the Secular Society, and makes an able officer. His wife and children are a happy addition to the circle. Homer Kruse has the gift of music indeed, and can pour forth the glowing melodies of progress. Frank has the broad shoulders of Atlas, and takes the prize for solid humanity, while I. L. Kruse is not least of the stalwart band. With such genial companions, like the tall trees of the forest, the heart of nature gives its brightening impulse.

Friday morning, with the sun struggling through the varying mists, Mr. and Mrs. Kruse, Homer, and myself speed down the winding river, and as the mists melt to sunshine, soft and beautiful prospects appear—sheen of flowing water mingling with shadowy forest and rocky shore. At a little before ten o'clock we land at New Era and proceed to the camp-ground. I gave a lecture on "The Bible." The Catholic priest was there and interrupted several times. Finally he was requested to keep still, which he did with an ill grace. At the close he was permitted to address the audience and correct my statements. But instead of doing this he launched out into a stream of abuse and vituperation with the true spirit of a priest and inquisitor. He called me liar, slanderer, and all the bad names that theology delights in, and exhibited the claws of the wild beast hidden in the folds of the born ecclesiastic. I did not notice his attack, seeing there was no time or place for the tactics of a John Sullivan, and he departed. Had he the power undoubtedly I would have been burned at the stake then and there. He was an apt representative of the church. He was the "bad example." I had no use for him except to let him show the malignity of his own creed.

Miss Katie Kehm lectured on Saturday morning on "The Religion of Humanity," which was enthusiastically received. Miss Kehm is an impetuous speaker, and don't let her audiences go to sleep. She has suffered cruelly from the church and has no particle of love for it, and her indictments of its teachings and career are radical and uncompromising, and the audience was in sympathy with her from beginning to end.

I remained over Sunday at New Era. Mr. Hardee lectured again under spirit control, in the morning. I was not convinced that there was anything more than the magnetic influence of the audience itself. The sentiments expressed were in accordance with my own, and if there were "spirits," why, we could shake hands across the chasm.

Mrs. Brown, a medium, gave a nice discourse on the spiritual philosophy, which was quite interesting, and then she gave some tests. I liked the philosophy, but the tests were not adequate—the conditions were not scientific and the conclusions, of course, could prove nothing.

In the afternoon I gave my lecture on "The Religious Conspiracy," which was well received by the vast majority of the Spiritualists present. This shows that their heart is in the right place, but, alas! there were some Spiritualists who would not attend my lecture because they didn't like that sort of thing. They are opposed to Secularism and want Christianity and the Bible mixed with their Spiritualism in large quantities. They go back to Jesus, and will not confront the issues of to-day. There are only a few, however, of this kind. They don't represent Spiritualism, which by its very nature is committed to freedom and progress.

In the evening D. E. Swank, of Aumsville, gave one of the best discourses I have ever heard, on individuality, liberty, labor reform, and spiritual culture. Then Jim Covely, as they call him, of Silverton, took the stand. He is a favorite speaker. He is a farmer and digs chunks of wisdom right out of the earth and gives them for what they are worth, straight from the soil. He is a rattling talker, a good deal like sheet lightning, but he hits the mark. He has had some startling experiences in the spiritual line, and the way he knocked the ministers out with "Old Nick" was both amusing and instructive. He is a born heretic, and all the spirits in this world or the next can't make him otherwise. I like to hear him talk. His thoughts, as he says, come like brick-bats. But they are bright thoughts and keep one on the move in wild and effective fashion. He is level-headed, withal, and is just as good for this world as if there were no other.

I was glad of the opportunity to attend these camp-meetings, and get acquainted with our allies of the other line, who are among our best friends and supporters. Whatever may be the ultimate truth of Spiritualism, it can only flourish in the atmosphere of liberty and investigation. If the church triumphs, it will lay its iron hand upon this as on other progressive movements.

On Monday I return to Portland, and find President Beal hard at work. The tide is rolling towards the convention, and there will be a grand gathering.

I met Mr. and Mrs. Garfield, of Marshfield, on the train Friday. They are on a pleasure trip. J. D. Garfield is one of our staunch workers. He is now in politics with plenty of Liberal backbone. He was elected to the legislature by a splendid majority in spite of ecclesiastical opposition.

I was glad to meet Mrs. Krekel after her arduous summer's campaign. Like myself, she has had plenty of ups and downs, and the main hope is in thought planted for the future. The Liberals of Oregon must keep this brilliant and popular lecturer at the front without fail. Miss Mattie Blaisdell still keeps the beautiful banner afloat. A visit to the Hights found them ready for the advance. Mrs. Waisbrooker is far to the East. Professor Seymour is on hand to materialize.

I found S. D. Bryan and wife, of Vancouver, and of the Freethought roll, on the cars taking a six-months' journey to Michigan, etc., his old home. He tells me that our comrade, Eugene Berth, is married and settled down, and I wish all sorts of good luck to the happy pair, and may Freethought weave its orient colors over flowery paths.

I was also pleased to meet in Portland W. R. Bishop, agent of Original Brownsville Woolen Mills clothing store, 164 and 166 Second street. Mr. Bishop is so Liberal and unorthodox that he doesn't put one bit of shoddy into his goods, and therefore they will stand all sorts of weather, and purgatory if need be; and therefore I can recommend them to the heretic with good conscience. As Mr. Bishop is not afraid to have his name in the advertising columns of FREETHOUGHT he can be depended upon for a square deal. I made his acquaintance through the friendship of Hugh Fields, of Heppner, who is for Freethought always.

I met McComas, of the Pendleton "Tribune," on the train, and also I. N. Muncy, of the Pasco "Headlight." Pasco is booming. Frank Schueneman has struck a gold mine, I believe. Captain Grey and O'Kiefe are in the swim of politics and railroads.

At Pendleton E. S. McComas boarded the train, and W. S. Bell, going on to Baker City. Bell has taken the "round trip" of Eastern Oregon and the Blue Hills. Being guided by the trail of the Secular Pilgrim he didn't get lost, and came out right side up with care. He looks as if ready for many a campaign. He reports progress along the line. S. P. PUTNAM.

JOHN E. REMSBURG will speak in San Francisco during the first week of November. The exact date and place will be given in due time.

A LESSON FROM PAINE—ANOTHER FROM THE BIBLE.

Under the heading, "A Lesson From Paine," the "American Sentinel" prints the appended quotation:

"Infidels of the present day profess to believe that bigotry and intolerance are inseparable from Christianity, that it is indeed part and parcel of Christianity. But they should learn better than this, even from their patron saint, Thomas Paine. In his 'Rights of Man' Paine says:

"All religions are, in their nature, mild and benign, and united with principles of morality. . . . How is it that they lose their native mildness and become morose and intolerant? By engendering the state with the church, a sort of mule animal, capable only of destroying, and not of breeding up, is produced, called the church established by law. The Inquisition in Spain does not proceed from the religion originally professed, but from this mule animal engendered between the church and state.

"And again, of governments established by force, Paine says:

"Governments thus established last as long as the power to support them lasts; but that they might avail themselves of every engine in their favor, they united fraud to force, and set up an idol which they called divine right, and which, in imitation of the pope who affects to be spiritual and temporal, and in contradiction to the founder of the Christian religion, twisted itself afterward into an idol of another shape, called church and state.

"Paine, Infidel though he was, knew full well, and was man enough to acknowledge it, that the doctrine of church and state was not Christian doctrine in any proper sense of the word, and it would be well if his disciples of the present day had equal discernment and as great candor."

The "American Sentinel" is a Secular paper published by the Seventh Day Adventists in the advocacy of a total separation of church and state, and is doing splendid work. On that subject it is sound, but when its editor touches the religious question either to defend Christianity or to refute Infidelity, he is as weak as any other religionist. He remarks, as above, that "Infidels profess to believe that bigotry and intolerance are inseparable from Christianity," which he denies. It all depends on the definition of Christianity. The "Sentinel" will of course hold that those who persecute are not Christians; therefore Christians do not persecute. But if we accept the church as the exponent of Christianity, then Infidels are perfectly correct in believing that bigotry and intolerance are inseparable from Christianity, since that kind of Christianity has always persecuted, and continues to do so, as the Seventh Day Adventists know by bitter experience. And if the Bible is to be accepted as the rule of conduct for Christians, they have all the justification needed for their course.

It is the Bible that says: "If thy brother entice thee secretly, saying, Let us go and serve other gods, thou shalt surely kill him."

It is the Bible that says: "If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house."

It is the Bible that says: "If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."

It was Jesus Christ himself who demanded: "But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me."

Following these instructions, drawn from the Bible, Christians have always persecuted; and bigotry and intolerance must be inseparable from Christianity just as long as Christians accept the Bible as an infallible moral guide. If the spirit of persecution were not in religion, religion would not seek the use of the state for an instrument of persecution; but the truth is that the state furnishes the machinery and the church directs it. If the church were mild and benign, it ought naturally to have a mild and benignant influence on the state, but we know that it has not.

The first reason for urging a separation of church and state is that they have totally different functions; and the one has no business with the offices of the other. The second reason is that the church teaches a mass of falsehood and superstition that is an evil in itself, to be gotten rid of rather than fostered and supported by compulsion. The "American Sentinel," pleading the first reason given, would simply lop off the branches of the upas-tree that overshadow the state. FREETHOUGHT would go at the root of the unhealthy growth and destroy it altogether.

POLITICS AND CHARITY.

There is now, as almost perpetually, a movement on foot in this country to raise money for the relief of the poor of Ireland, but if what the London papers say is true the present agitation has more of a political than philanthropic object. No doubt there are many poor people in Ireland, as there are in California, and particularly in San Francisco, but that anything like a famine, or even unusual distress, prevails seems to be open to denial. The London "Times," of October 2, says:

"The fall elections in America are close at hand, and the party bosses and wire-pullers of all sorts are diligently cultivating the various interests on which the composition of the new House of Representatives depends. Now that that gigantic electioneering job, the McKinley bill, is out of the way, the astute personages whose trade is to manipulate the electorate of the great republic have turned their attention to the Irish vote. Both parties are keenly alive to the importance of exhibiting the intensity of their affection for Ireland in the brief interval that remains before the Irish managers march their well-drilled squadrons to the polls.

"Under ordinary circumstances members of that body might have waited to get some news of the impending calamity from this side of the Atlantic. Britain is a good deal nearer to the congested districts than New York, and we assure this committee of American politicians and journalists that the famine with which they hope to angle for the Irish vote has not yet been heard of here, outside of the columns of Mr. Parnell's papers. The appeal of the committee, with splendid consistency, ignores the existence of this country. The authors of this remarkable manifesto, in a feverish haste to anticipate the coming elections, have forgotten that a very large number of persons in this island are eager to grant every demand Irishmen can make, and that no party, creed, or section of people of Great Britain ever displayed indifference to suffering subjects. The transparent truth, of course, is that the framers of this impudent, mendacious document are bent not on charity, but electioneering."

It would be well for Americans, before denying themselves or their less-fortunate fellow-countrymen in order to assist the poor of other lands, to inform themselves of the real state of affairs. We see hundreds of thousands of dollars leaving America for the purpose of carrying the gospel to the heathen of foreign lands, and we know that this money is used mainly to pay the living expenses of the missionaries, and convert just enough heathens to act as servants in the missionaries' households. But reports of large donations to the missionary fund from wealthy Americans are frequently followed by reports of a cut-down in the wages of those same wealthy persons' employees. Surely it is better that American working people should be well-paid than that some inhabitant of Asia or Africa should exchange his native superstition for another in no sense superior.

We see money flowing in a tolerably steady stream from America to the Emerald Isle, or at least into the hands of some self-appointed "Committee for the Relief of Ireland," and at the same time the Catholic papers report such sums as fifty thousand dollars or sixty thousand dollars, or even more, contributed by the Irish people to the pope in the form of Peter's pence. It is to be remembered, too, that this Peter's pence comes from the same people, the Catholic Irish, who are always asking aid. The Orangemen look out for themselves.

The statement of the London "Times" that the present "famine in Ireland" has not been heard of in England contains a hint that there is something suspicious in Michael Davitt's appeal for subscriptions, as also in the enthusiastic manner in which American politicians are "working the racket." Sympathy for Ireland and hatred toward England are the two strings of the politicians' fiddle, and the Irish Catholic is equally charmed by the music of either. And yet there is no special reason for either the sympathy or the hatred, unless it be that the trade of England fills our pockets and her scholars our libraries of learning, while Ireland occupies our local offices and our penitentiaries.

THE Liberals in convention at Portland and all other places should include among the resolutions passed a strong appeal to the World's Fair Commission to keep the doors of the Exposition building open on Sunday. The convocations of clergymen are resolving that "to ignore the holy Sabbath would be a fatal concession to the enemies of the Sabbath and our American Christianity." Liberals must put in their protest before the commission makes up its mind in favor of Sunday closing. There are so many who could not afford to visit the exposition on any day except Sunday, that to deny them the privilege then would be no less than a hardship, to say nothing about concessions to either the enemies or the friends of the Sabbath. The Labor Unions should likewise speak on the subject with no hesitating voice.

DR. J. L. YORK reports that while in San Diego recently he held a newspaper discussion with a Catholic priest named Carden. The priest defended his church the best he could, but his efforts were not appreciated by his superiors; he was dismissed from his parish and ordered to some retreat in Oregon. Father Carden left San Diego, but his unjust treatment by the church was more than he could swallow, and whether convinced by Dr. York's arguments or desirous to avenge himself on Rome, he has agreed to return and deliver a course of lectures under the auspices of the San Diego Liberal Union, in which he will make it extremely warm and interesting for his former bishop. He is described as a highly educated gentleman of attractive social qualities.

SIR JOHN A. MACDONALD, the Canadian premier, has been unkind enough to refer to the United States as a country of "foreign ignorance, Communism, Atheism, and Socialism," and to say that he wants nothing to do with the movement to join us by annexation. If Sir John could manage to stop the flood of "foreign ignorance" flowing across the border of Canada into New England, we would try to bear with the other elements which he mentions. The reign of "Communism, Atheism, and Socialism" are not so humiliating to freedom-loving people as is the rule of the Roman Catholic church. It is the lack of these progressive movements that has fossilized Canada into a relic of past ages.

At the Presbyterian convention just held in this city, the Rev. Dr. Wheeler said:

"The State University is confessedly skeptical in its tendencies. It is vital that our boys and girls be trained from the start under Christian influences. A great deal has been said about the Stanford university, and we have looked upon it as a sort of wonder, but I am greatly disappointed in it. It is not to be a Christian institution at all. It is only provided that the existence of God shall be taught, and a Mohammedan could indorse it."

Here is the old, old plea for sectarianism in our public institutions, and the same attempt to fasten theology upon a state school. The State University is not "skeptical." Even Professor LeConte, who has some claims to the title of scientist, is committed to a belief in God and immortality, and in these days of enlightenment a man holding to those two doctrines is more than half orthodox.

A WRITER in the Catholic "Monitor" thus deplores the departure of the good old days: "Every nation, no matter how deeply sunk in barbarity, have [has] considered worship of absolute need. All things else were secondary to it. Refusing to worship was punishable by death. Were such stringent laws enacted in our days there would be few indifferentists and fewer Infidels." When Catholics get numerous enough no doubt they will proceed to pass the laws referred to. It is their fondest hope, but possibly the Infidels will object, while the indifferentists will calmly watch the fight, and hop off the fence, as nowadays, on the winning side.

NEWS was received last week that two German Catholic priests had been refused a landing at New York under the Contract Labor law. Upon the clergymen making affidavit that no stipulated sum had been named as their salaries, they were released and proceeded to the scene of their labors at St. Paul. The fact does not seem to be disputed, however, that they were under contract, and the injustice of discriminating in their favor because they were priests is only equaled by the absurdity of the law as it is generally applied.

UNDER the new lottery law the term "lottery," as defined by the authorities, "embraces all kinds of schemes, general or local, for the distribution of prizes by lot or chance, such as gift exhibitions, enterprises, concerns, raffles, or drawing prizes in money or property at fairs." There is evidently some oversight in the omission to make an exception of fairs held in the interests of religion and charity. If the church raffle, the church grab-bag, and the church lottery must go, religion will be robbed of its most efficient means of raising money.

THE directors of the American Baseball Association should be encouraged. At a recent meeting they decided to sustain the umpires in all the fines imposed for umpiring Sunday games, and to take up the fight of the Rochester club and push the matter through the courts. In San Francisco there is no restriction on Sunday amusements. As a result thousands of boys and young men spend the day on the baseball grounds instead of, as in Eastern cities, in saloons and pool-rooms.

WITH the exception of the very last details the new Lick Baths on Tenth street are completed. The baths should be opened for the public within two weeks. The completion of the baths fulfills the eleventh clause of the trust deed made by the philanthropic millionaire. This clause set aside $150,000 for the erection and maintenance of free baths. Of the original trustees only two, Ira P. Rankin and John O. Earl, are now alive. The trust deed was dated September 21, 1875.

BEFORE the appeal case of Moses Harman can be reached he will be tried again in Judge Foster's court at Topeka, Kan., this time on the indictment found in April. He is charged with mailing a copy of "Lucifer" containing the O'Neill letter. Court opens October 11.

IN the confusion incident to sorting out papers last week containing references to lotteries, it is evident some not containing such references suffered delay in the postoffice. Numerous city subscribers inform us that FREETHOUGHT did not reach them. Still we cannot complain. The "Examiner" lost a whole edition because it printed a list of drawings, mostly doll babies and pin-cusions, at a church fair.

CALIFORNIA has increased her population nearly forty per cent during the past decade. In 1880 the state had 864,694 inhabitants; now, according to the census returns, it has 1,204,007. There is no reason why this rate of increase should not be maintained for many decades, since the attractions of the state, its soil and climate, are of a permanent nature, and its resources are only beginning to be developed.

A PREACHER and a judge returning from the Methodist camp-meeting at Pacific Grove were recently heard discussing the question, under secret advisement among the leaders of the sect, of uniting forces with the Catholics in order to more easily secure such legislation as might be desired by both Protestant and Catholic churches. Such a union is one of the possibilities of the future.

THE grand jury at Rockford, Ill., have concluded to investigate the Rev. Messiah Schweinfurth's Weldon farm called "Heaven" with the object of finding out Schweinfurth's relations with the women. Why not investigate a few Catholic convents and find out the archbishop's relations with the nuns?

EZRA H. HEYWOOD, the imprisoned editor of the "Word," mends the clothes and stockings of his fellow-convicts. As Dr. E. B. Foote, sr., who has lately visited him, suggests, he could do much more good outside of jail mending the ways of the bigoted and disgraced commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"It is understood," says a dispatch from Rome, "that the pope has decided to advise all Catholics to abstain from voting at the coming elections in Italy." No great harm would be done if the Vatican should extend its advice so as to include this country and the coming elections in America.

By looking at the date on the wrapper of their paper subscribers who have remitted will note that their date has been changed, and will regard this as an indication that their remittance has been received. Those wishing a written receipt may have one by mentioning their desire.

OBSERVATIONS.

Although I am in politics this year, no overtures have been made by any political faction toward caving this paper down the bank; and as election day is rapidly approaching I am getting a trifle nervous about the state of affairs. So far I have got only one job of political printing, and that was from a subscriber in Mendocino county. In looking over the exchanges I notice that the majority of them have been caved down by one party or the other, and are carrying preferred advertisements at top of the column next to reading matter, and publishing editorial notices evidently written by the candidates. I have no partisan tendencies, but shall support the man who has been out of a good paying job the longest, unless interfered with by the proper influences. If either Colonel Pond or Mayor Markham wants to put himself in my hands as a friend he must call at this office and present his claims, preferably during the latter part of the week, as I am not so much engaged then as earlier, and would have more leisure to devote to shaking hands and making special rates for repeated insertions of any advertisement of an unobjectionable nature. I do not control any votes that I know of, but that fact need no be published. Democratic readers will vote for the Democratic candidate, and Republican voters, in default of indifférence to the contrary, will observe the same time honored custom, but if any of the nominees has money to fool away on printer's ink he may as well leave it here as elsewhere.

Statesmen will now bring on the sack. We are seated precariously upon the bank waiting to be caved down. It is lonesome to be out of the swim, and not in it, as the saying is. I understand, of course, that a political crisis is at hand. I am ready with you to point with pride at your record or to view with alarm the record of the other fellows. It is our duty, without being told, to pocket—that is to say, to guard the money of the people. Of course it is also understood between us that the people are not very anxious to have you elected. They had about as much choice in your nomination (so I heard a man say) as the unmuzzled purps have in naming the dog catchers, but they have got in the habit of appointing political and spiritual advisers, and it is to your interest to perpetuate the custom. To you election day is greater than the Fourth of July, for whereas on the Fourth of July they declare their independence, on election day they delegate their powers to you. As aforesaid, this is all understood, and being understood let the campaign proceed.

It always gives me pleasure to see a live man getting along well, but taking the ups and downs of life with equal cheerfulness. Two years ago my esteemed friend Mr. J. A. Williams had the best livery stable in Park City, Utah, and owned fifty head of fine stock besides working horses and cattle. He was the main support of the Liberal movement there. But misfortune set in, and in a few months afterwards, through no fault of his own, his possessions vanished, and with a small sum of money Williams set out for California. In Arizona he was assaulted and robbed, and reached San Francisco with almost empty pockets. He never lost his cheerfulness. If he couldn't strike a job that suited him, he tried something else. The city was full of workless and hungry men, but Williams caught on to one thing and another and made a living. The other day he passed this office driving an ice wagon. A few days later he went by in a buggy, and wearing a look of deep business responsibility upon his countenance, and when I inquired the cause of this sudden accession of style he explained that he was now superintendent of the stables of the Consumers' Ice Company, whose works are among the largest and finest in the world. He said he knew that if he ever got around where there were good horses to look after, his strong points would come out. He is still cheerful and looking ahead.

The Mormons have set an example for the edification of the other religious denominations. They have agreed that since there is a law against polygamy they will hereafter refrain from more than one wife. Now we have a new lottery law under which the sinful games indulged in at Protestant and Catholic church fairs are prohibited, and reports about them declared unmailable. If the Protestants and the Catholics are as good citizens as the Mormons, let them bow to the law. Let them eschew the grab bag. There is no way of knowing how many young men have paid a quarter to draw a ten-cent doll, and then rushed out under the flaring lamps and drank something that stole away their change. The Mormons are now working hand in hand with Senator Edmunds to promote morality, and if the other churches will back up Wanamaker the country may yet be saved.

And here I beg leave to make a pertinent inquiry: Since the offensive practices of the Mormons in one matter of morality was deemed sufficient cause for confiscating their property and turning it over to the school fund, do not the offensive practices of the Christian churches on this other question of morality furnish equally strong cause for disposing of their possessions in the same way? If not, why not?

Mr. J. H. Barry is too modest in disclaiming the personal popularity which he enjoys as a stalwart standard bearer of the movement for guaranteeing a free press in California. He has wielded for some years, through his paper, the "Weekly Star," a free lance in the political arena. During that time he has not, I believe, been accused or suspected of anything but strict honesty of purpose. He is a favorite with the labor organizations, and has considerable influence in local politics. A newspaper editor, at the banquet mentioned, remarked to me that Barry was wrong in the present instance, but that his intentions were so upright, and his paper doing so much good, that he couldn't be spared, and all his friends ought to stand by him. Again, among the guests, and one of the speakers, was Mr. W. M. Cubery, who is on a committee with Dr. R. H. McDonald and another to urge the passage and enforcement of a Sunday law in this state. I do not imagine that Mr. Cubery would be in favor of granting the Sabbath breaker a hearing before even so high a tribunal as a superior judge. What principle consistent with the right of one man to control the liberty of another one-seventh of the time could have brought Mr. Cubery to a meeting called in defense of freedom?

Supposing that according to either law or precedent the editor of a paper who comments upon the conduct of a judge in a certain case while the case is pending is guilty of contempt; and supposing that instead of summarily inflicting the penalty the judge grants the accused a trial by jury. To these twelve good men and true the court expounds the law; they are to judge only of the facts, and if they find the defendant guilty under the statute they are sworn to convict him. Yet the injustice is as great when the innocent is convicted by twelve men as when arbitrarily punished by one. On the whole, I would choose to trust my case to an upright judge, like J. G. Maguire, for instance, than to a jury drawn regularly or irregularly from the box. Likewise I would rather tie to Mr. Barry personally than to the principle that an editor may under any circumstances be imprisoned for telling the truth, whether upon conviction by a judge or a jury.

The plea for the right of trial by a jury chosen by the consuetudinary methods looks to me like a quibble. I went to the banquet prepared to hear a free press defended, but instead I heard a discussion of the best method of suppressing it. From this I judged that the friends had come there to show their sympathy for Mr. Barry rather than to vindicate that principle of liberty which lay further down than they cared to penetrate.

Speaking of juries, a jury convicted D. M. Bennett in New York, Ezra H. Heywood in Massachusetts, C. B. Reynolds in New Jersey, and Moses Harman in Kansas. None of these men had injured another in person or reputation. No injury was claimed, no complaint made. I think somebody said that society must be protected, but society did not appear at the trial, for the very good reason that society cared nothing about the matter. The truth was that they offended the priests of religion and morality, as Mr. Barry offended the priests of politics and monopoly. The sort of press I mean when I refer to a free press is one that will allow either of these men to say anything they choose, public opinion being left to take care of the result.

I wish to return thanks to the many friends who have written me words of commendation. I wish I deserved them. I must also thank the few who have told me of my mistakes and instructed me as to the course I must pursue in order to achieve success in the future. Would that I could profit by their admonitions.

Geo. E. McDonald

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The California Nationalist Club, of which Thos. V. Cator is president, held a well attended meeting last Sunday. Mr. Cator is a candidate for Congress and will doubtless get the support of many Nationalists.—Walter Huey, the defaulting collector for the harbor commissioners of this city, is in Victoria. He was seen by a newspaper reporter, and promises to return the money which he "borrowed."—The Single Tax meeting in this city was addressed last Sunday evening by the Hon. Charles A. Sumner on the subject, "A Genuine Postal Telegraph before we can have a Free Press."—The San Francisco "Examiner" was excluded from the mails last Sunday because it contained a list of prizes won at a church fair lottery.—The McKinley Tariff bill greatly increases the duty on foreign cigars. Some domestic cigar manufacturers think it will result in bringing many Cuban cigarmakers to this country to compete with home labor, while others hold that it will increase the price of domestic cigars and be of benefit to American workmen.—Louise Esslinger was married to George Wehrlin at Redwood City, Cal., last Saturday, and committed suicide on her wedding night.—They have a "sleeping preacher" named J. D. Kaufman at Redding in this state. While entranced he is insensible to pain, and no pricking with needles will awaken him. His preaching is not very edifying.—The Republicans have nominated Georgh H. Sanderson for mayor of San Francisco, and the Democrats have nominated Frank McCoppin.

A Des Moines, Ia., preacher named Brown has resigned from his pastorate of the Christian church at that place. He had betrayed the confidence of five young women of the choir, who became jealous and reported him to the trustees.—A. Wanamaker committed suicide at St. Louis last Sunday. No cause is given for the act except the fact that he was a near relative of the postmaster-general.—The Emanuel Baptist church at Albany, N. Y., received three Chinamen into the fold by baptism on the 5th.—Herr Most, the professed Anarchist, was advertised to lecture at Newark last Sunday, but the police took him into custody and gave him half an hour to leave town. He complied.—Postmaster-General Wanamaker has made public a letter addressed to the chairman of the House Committee on Postoffices arguing in favor of a postal telegraph system.—The Mormons, as represented by George Q. Cannon, say they will obey the law against polygamy, and let the Lord take the responsibility.—The Rev. Peter Roberts, of the Plymouth Congregational church at Scranton, Pa., has been obliged to pay a woman $3000 for breach of promise and seduction.

Thirty arrests have been made at St. Petersburg Russia, in connection with the workmen's political movement. Many other arrests have also been made in the interior.—In his last Sunday's sermon the Rev. Sensational Parker, of the City Temple, London, said: "It is high time that intoxicating wine should be banished from the sacramental service. It has often driven men to long-abandoned habits of intemperance. I am also opposed to the use of vile concoctions by which in some instances intoxicating wine has been displaced, and this objection to the makeshifts of the extreme teetotalers is not surprising, as a certain pastor is credited with the employment of zoedone for the purpose." The question might be settled without further discussion by abolishing the sacramental service, which is a superstitious mummery and a relic of paganism.—Several Jewish merchants in Odessa have been ordered by the authorities to settle up their business within four weeks and leave Russian territory. No charge is made against them except that they are Jews.—The alleged miracle-working wells of Galgoeze, in the district of Pressburg, Hungary, are attracting so many thousands of pilgrims from the surrounding country that the authorities have been forced to call in the military to keep order.—Mormon elders on a proselyting tour were flogged and tarred and feathered at Sherbourne, in Dorsetshire, Eng., last week.

THE COMING CONGRESS.

"Oh, what a whopper!" That is what those will say who attend the coming Congress of the of the American Secular Union. And they will not stop at quantity. They will go further. They will speak of quality, and remark that it is one of the finest.

If indications go for anything it will be the largest gathering of Secularists ever held. The signs of the times point that way. The railroads and steamboats will carry the orators, officers, delegates, and visitors to and from the three-day and three-night session, and at reduced rates. After arrival here the hotels and restaurants will feed and lodge at liberal prices.

The national organization, President Wesbrook, and his able corps of assistants are doing yeoman service to make the Congress exceed the most sanguine expectations. We, the Portsmouth auxiliary, are aiding them in every way we can. We are leaving no stone unturned to make the local entertainment extended of a first-class order, an entertainment in fact of oratory, music, and song. We have a splendid musical programme under way, whereby a band of colored jubilee singers, the Kellison family (all singers), a drum corps, brass band, etc., will be present. Friday and Saturday evenings brass band and the G. A. R. drum corps will play in front of Opera Hall previous to the opening of the oratorical exercises. On the inside Abe White's superb orchestra, Miller & Nagleireu's Spanish students and their orchestra of six pieces will render selections. During the afternoons of Friday and Saturday Miss Sarah Stevens will perform on the piano, with her sister, Miss Polly, accompanying on the violin.

Sunday afternoon and evening will occur the best of the musical treats. At that time Al. G. Field, the great minstrel king, and his famous company of artists will be present. His orchestra will render difficult and beautiful selections, his world-celebrated sextette will sing popular melodies, and his $10,000-challenge brass band will give open-air concerts in front of the house. Mr. Field and his people will come to Portsmouth in their own special palace car. He and they are Liberals, and as such donate their services on this coming occasion. I have known Al. Field personally for years, and during this period of acquaintance and friendship I have always found him to be a man of honor bright, a man adding sunshine and happiness to life and doing a world of good.

Let Liberals everywhere attend. Loan your presence and your time to the event. "Act well your part, there all the honor lies."

WILL S. ANDRES.

Portsmouth, O.

JEHOVAH'S IDEA OF CIVIL GOVERNMENT.

As it is claimed that our government would be improved by the recognition of God in the Constitution, and by having the government reconstructed in accordance with the ideas of the unchangeable Jehovah, I would like to invite the attention of the readers of FREETHOUGHT to a mild specimen of Jehovah's work in reconstructing a government, so that we may see what kind of a government it was when he got it fixed just to suit him. The government of Egypt, like our present government, did not suit Jehovah, so he fixed it over to his liking. He worked out his scheme by employing the son of an Arab sheik to dream for him and by means of a famine, as will be seen by reading from the fortieth to the forty-eighth chapter of Genesis.

"And Joseph went out from the presence of Pharaoh and went throughout all the land of Egypt. And in the seven plenteous years the earth brought forth by handfuls, and he gathered up all the food of the seven plenteous years which were in the land of Egypt and laid up the food in the cities; the food of the fields which was round about every city laid he up in the same. And Joseph gathered food as the sand of the sea, very much. . . . And the seven years of plenteousness were ended. . . . And the seven years of drouth began. . . . And when all the land of Egypt was famished the people cried for bread; and Pharaoh said, Go to Joseph. . . . And the famine was over all the earth; and Joseph opened all the storehouses and sold to the Egyptians. And the famine waxed sore in all the land of Egypt, and all countries came to Joseph to buy corn. . . . And there was no bread in all the land; for the famine was very sore. And Joseph gathered all the money that was found in the land of Egypt and brought the money into Pharaoh's house. And when the money failed Joseph said, Give your cattle. . . . And they brought their cattle unto Joseph. And Joseph gave them bread in exchange for horses and for the flocks and for the cattle, and he fed them with bread for all their cattle that year. When that year was ended they came unto him the second year and said unto him, We will not hide it from my lord how that our money is spent; my lord hast also our herds of cattle; there is not aught left to us but our bodies and our lands. Wherefore shall we die before thine eyes? Buy us and our land for bread. And Joseph bought all the land of Egypt for Pharaoh. And as for the people, he removed them to the cities from one end of the borders of Egypt to the other end thereof. Only the land of the priests bought he not. For the priests had a portion assigned them by Pharaoh. And Joseph said to the people, Behold I have bought you this day and your land for Pharaoh. And Joseph made a law unto this day that Pharaoh should have a fifth part, except the land of the priests, which became not Pharaoh's."

I thought, when I copied the above, that I would try to make some appropriate comments upon it. But, really, since tongs have gone out of fashion, there does not seem to be anything suitable to handle it with. In the presence of Jehovah-jireth and his servant Joseph the Tammany ring, the pope, the Irish landlord, the czar, and the king of Dahomey are all humane and respectable. In fact, after the end of the seven years famine, the government of Egypt seems to have been nearly a model Christian government. About all they seem to have needed was a Sunday law, so that the dear people could take a rest.

Supposing the meanest devil that one could imagine had procured the services of the most heartless tyrant on the face of the earth and had proceeded to reconstruct a good government so as to make it like unto hell, if you please, what could he have done worse than Jehovah and Joseph? The people, according to this account, were free and freeholders, each family settled on its own little tract of land. They had produced a surplusage of grain sufficient to feed the whole world for seven years. Jehovah and Joseph took from them all this grain, and then as a reward for all their labor reduced them to slavery; and we see them crawling at the feet of this fiendish despot, Joseph, and calling him "my lord." You can see the like in all Christian countries to-day. How thankful we should be that, in the words of Washington, "this government is in no sense founded on the Christian religion."

Pharaoh did not work, and he got all the money and all the land. The priests did not work, but they retained their land and were exempt from taxation. Joseph's relatives had done nothing but to sell Joseph and realize the cash, and they were given the richest part of Egypt and were fed out of the labor of these formerly free citizens, who were reduced to pitiless slavery.

By the way, what a nice financial system Jehovah established. He had Joseph take all the people's money and put it in Pharaoh's house.

Of course we know that this is not historical. Real events do not occur by sevens. When you come to a story in which events are arranged in that way you have left the regions of history and entered the province of myth and legend. You are perusing an "inspired novel." But the fact that Jehovah will permit such fiendish rot and rubbish to be circulated as his book proves that he has no regard for his reputation or that he takes no more interest in the affairs of this world, or that he is asleep or peradventure he has gone on a journey, or possibly he is too dead to skin.

O Jehovah-jireth! Your professed followers are making a fearful mess of that strange hotch-potch salmagundi they call your book. Please do wake up and disown the holy mixture of blood and dirt or have the grace to keep your name out of the Constitution established by "we the people of the United States" and signed by patriots and freemen. Leave our laws alone. We want none of your holy ghosts, holy books, holy days, or holy saints.

"The one sole sacred thing beneath the cope
Of heaven is man."

Milwaukee, Or. _____ D. PRIESTLEY.

MR. BARRY'S DISCLAIMER.

From the Weekly Star.

We are under obligations to our esteemed contemporary FREETHOUGHT for kind and complimentary notices, which we fully appreciate, and we are for that reason the more deeply pained to note in its columns the following unjust reference to the banquet given a few months ago by the Free Press Defense Association to one of the editors of this paper:

"The guest of the occasion returned thanks to those men and those papers that had sustained him in this fight, and he called them by name, but he did not mention FREETHOUGHT. I knew it was not an oversight—it was simply discretion. The speaker knew his audience. He knew it was not an audience of Freethinkers. They were personal friends of his who would have protested just as hard if he had been convicted by a jury of his peers instead of a judge who was not his peer. Except for Mr. Barry's personal popularity they would not have been there."

A rationalist should be more rational, and a little more particular about his facts. Mr. Barry may have mentioned a few, but he certainly did not mention, nor claim to mention, all of the men and papers that sustained him in his fight. He was speaking under the excitement of the occasion, and wholly without preparation, and therefore omitted to name many papers which rendered equal service with FREETHOUGHT. This omission was not due to "discretion," and no one who knows Mr. Barry could for a moment suppose that it was. He has never before been charged with being afraid to acknowledge the services of a friend.

Again, FREETHOUGHT makes a mistake in asserting that those who assembled for the avowed purpose of supporting and defending a great principle were really not present for that purpose, and that "except for Mr. Barry's personal popularity they would not have been there." They all professed to be there for principle, and there was only one person present into whose inner consciousness the editor of FREETHOUGHT could look to determine his real motive for being present, and that was himself. If he attended the banquet out of regard solely "for Mr. Barry's personal popularity" his presence was misleading, and he was sadly out of place. We know that he was there for principle, and we have the same reason for believing that the others present understood the principle involved and were there to sustain it.

SUPERSTITIOUS SECULARISTS.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Among the resolutions passed by the late convention of Canadian Liberals was one expressing sympathy with the American Secular Union "in its efforts to destroy superstition." This indicates a misapprehension of the object of the Union, which is simply the separation of church and state. The American Secular Union, as its constitution declares, is "non-sectarian." Any person who favors the separation of church and state, whether he be Jew or Christian, Spiritualist or Materialist, Moralist or debauchee, is welcome in its ranks, just as he is in the ranks of other political organizations. It is true that many of the members of the Union are anti-superstitionists and belong to the Brotherhood of Moralists, which makes the overthrow of superstition one of its main objects. It is also true that very many members of our Secular Union are exceedingly superstitious. I can go almost any evening and find a score or more of them sitting in a "dark circle," gripping each others' hands, watching for ghosts to appear. Heston left this scene out of his picture in the "Truth Seeker" of February 1, probably because so many of the A. S. U. are in love with this kind of superstition, and a majority of the balance let it pass because the devotees are Liberals. Combating the church usurpation of civil power is good, but eradicating superstition is the first step towards the real elevation and liberation of mankind.

A. R. AYRES.

Hannibal, Mo., Sept. 28.

We regret to announce the death of M. Joffrin, the member for Montmartre, in the French Chamber. Last year he took part, as vice-president, in the reception by the Paris Municipal Council of the International Freethought Congress. He was then suffering from cancer in the cheek, which has now killed him. He bore his great sufferings with lofty fortitude, and never slackened his activity for the people's good while his strength lasted. France could have better spared some of the vain, ambitious, or mercenary intriguers who are now exposing each others' crimes.—London Freethinker.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS.

Walla Walla, Wash.	Oct. 8, 9	Myrtle Point Coos co., Or.	Oct. 23
Portland Convention, Oct. 11, 12, 13		Talent, Or.	Oct. 26
Coburg, Or.	Oct. 15, 16	Fort Bragg, Cal.	Nov. 1, 2
Marshfield, Coos co. Or.	Oct. 19, 20	Boulder Creek, Cal.	Nov. 9, 10
Coquille, Coos co. Or.	Oct. 21	Porterville, Cal.	Nov. 12, 13, 14
Arago, Coos co. Or.	Oct. 22	Tulare, Cal.	Nov. 15, 16

FREETHOUGHT gratefully acknowledges a donation of $4 from J. H. Schroeder, Emily Schroeder, W. Schroeder, and James McNaughton, of Arago, Or.

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION,

R. B. WESTBROOK, PRESIDENT.

F. C. MENDE, TREASURER. IDA C. CRADDOCK, COR. SEC'Y.
BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. Westbrook 1707 Oxford st., Philadelphia.
E. B. Foote, Jr. 120 Lexington ave., New York.
T. B. Wakeman 93 Nassau st., New York.
J. E. Remsburg Oak Mills, Kansas.
Juliet H. Severance Milwaukee, Wisconsin.
F. C. Mende 1814 Green st., Philadelphia.
Ida C. Craddock, S. E. corner of Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL CONGRESS.

The Fourteenth Annual Congress of the American Secular Union has been appointed by the board of directors to meet at Portsmouth, Ohio, on Friday evening, October 31, 1890, and to continue its sessions on the Saturday and Sunday following.

The meetings will be held in the Grand Opera House, corner of Sixth and Court streets, and the orchestra of the establishment has been engaged for the occasion. Due notice will be given of the proposed reduction in railroad, steamboat, and hotel fares.

Portsmouth is situated on the Ohio river, one hundred miles east of Cincinnati and one hundred miles south of Columbus, and has extensive and convenient railway connections with the whole country. It is a port of foreign entry, and is distinguished for its numerous and magnificent manufactories. It has a population exceeding fifteen thousand (15,000), has twenty churches, the Ohio Military Academy, and a splendid system of graded schools. The Ohio Valley Fair is held there annually; and several English and German papers, daily and weekly, are published in the city.

The members and friends of the American Secular Union are sure of a hearty welcome, not only from our enterprising local auxiliary, but also from the citizens at large.

The object of the American Secular Union, as is well known, is to secure the total separation of church and state in fact and in form, to the end that equal rights in religion, genuine morality in politics, and freedom, virtue, and brotherhood be established, protected, and perpetuated. While we unite on what is commonly known as the Nine Demands of Secularism, we propose to emphasize the following at the coming Congress:

1. The equitable taxation of church property in common with other property.
2. The total discontinuance of religious instruction and worship in the public schools, and especially the reading of any Bible.
3. The repeal and prevention of all laws enforcing the observance of Sunday as a religious institution, rather than an economic one, justified by physiological and secular reasons.
4. The cessation of all appropriations of the public funds for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character.

The American Secular Union is strictly unsectarian and non-partisan in both religion and politics, but will use any and all honorable means to secure its objects as above stated. It is not either publicly or privately committed to the advancement of any system of religious belief or disbelief, but heartily welcomes all persons, of whatever faith, to its membership, on the basis of "no union of church and state." The word "secular" is here used in the broadest sense, as applied to the state, and not to any system of religion or philosophy.

To discuss these questions in an orderly and friendly manner, and to devise ways and means to promote these objects, let us come together at this Congress, as Freethinkers, Spiritualists, Unitarians, Universalists, Free Religionists, Quakers, Progressive Jews, and Liberal Christians, and, laying aside our peculiar views on religious questions, unite as American citizens on the one broad platform of no union of church and state, and the complete administration of our secular government on purely secular principles.

The National Reform Association, having for its object the establishment of Christianity as the religion of the state by constitutional enactment; the American Sabbath Union, working for the enforcement, by legislation, of the Jewish and Puritanic Sabbath on our free citizens; the Women's Christian Temperance Union, indorsing the platforms and policy of both these organizations; the churches, both Catholic and Protestant, insisting through their ecclesiastical bodies upon the complete exemption of church property from just taxation, as well as the appropriation of public money for religious schools and other sectarian institutions; all these, and many other, which might be mentioned, are imperilling our constitutional liberties. Every true Liberal and patriot, whether man or woman, should feel called upon to aid in organizing an effective opposition to these nefarious schemes.

Due notice will be given of the selection of eminent speakers from all parts of the United States and Canada, and a free platform will be given to all persons who may have a word to say for pure state secularization. All, without exception, are welcome to this Congress in the wide-a-woke little city in the valley of the beautiful Ohio.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.
Philadelphia, Sept. 1, 1890. Attest: IDA C. CRADDOCK, Sec'y.

OUR UNCHURCHED MILLIONS.*

BY THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.

"The proper religion for an American citizen is the United States of America."—James Parton before the New York Nineteenth Century Club.

It is not generally recognized, as it should be, that the large majority of our people are unchurched. Not a third of the population of the United States attend public worship, or could be accommodated if they desired so to do—but they do not desire to attend. They have unchurched themselves.†

The churches boast of their growth, but it is a growth left further and further behind by the general increase of population. The time must, therefore, surely come when but a small fraction of the masses of the people will be church-goers, and yet upon these masses the government institutions, character, and welfare of the great republic must rest.

Whether this state of things will be regrettable; whether a "godless" and "irreligious" people ought to be or not, it is hardly worth while to inquire. It is enough that such will be the immense majority of our people before the close of this century, if the old definitions of "religion" are to prevail, which commonly identify religion with some form of ancient supernaturalism. It may be that the people know what is best, after all, and that the evil consequences, often predicted as the result of the general neglect of the old creeds, may not ensue, but benefits rather. The reason that people do not go to church is, evidently, because there is no longer an impelling motive. Something of greater interest and importance takes the place of churches. There is in all this simply an illustration of the great law of evolution and progress, viz.: every disintegrative change comes about, because a new and a higher integration has called away the forces, interests, beliefs, and feelings which sustained the old. When Sindbad's ship sailed by the magnetic mountain, all the iron was drawn out by attraction, and the vessel fell to pieces.

The old arks of the supernatural seem to be drifting into a new world so much more vast, real, true, and necessary than the old world in which they were built, that they seem and are, therefore, often regretfully left, but left, nevertheless, to the natural and disintegrative chemistry of time. In a word, Uncle Sam's people have concluded that it does not pay to go to church, that there is not much necessity for going, and so they go less and less.

There is a general feeling that the old creeds are not surely true; that they have been discredited by the astronomy of Copernicus, by the evolution of Darwin, and by the progress of history

* From the Arena for October.

† According to the last census the population of the states is 64,000,000. The New York World Almanac (pp. 154 and 209) gives the total population of United States Jan. 1, 1890 [including Indian and other territories], as 66,360,525. All denominations claim, according to the New York Independent, 21,757,171; but these claims are doubtless excessive; for instance, the Roman Catholics claim 8,277,039, but this claim includes the whole Catholic population, of which a large part have left the church forever. The rate of increase of the secular over the church population is very large—nearly double; but accurate figures are not obtainable.

beyond the state of things contemplated in the old "revelations." In short, the sky now above us is no longer the old "heaven," but infinite space glowing with countless suns; the space below is the center of the earth, and no "hell." The earth's surface, with its teeming peoples, is no "state of probation" for the above or the below. The old, three-story tenement-house of heaven, earth, and hell, has vanished forever, and with it the creeds which were simply its description, and the adjustment of human fate here and hereafter to it. Even where the belief in "spiritual" manifestations is retained, the modern variety calls itself spiritualism, or theosophy, and claims harmony with science. The supernatural and miraculous are dropped, and natural immortality of the human soul or consciousness in or about the earth, is substituted. Such a natural evolution of the spirit into another form of life is in itself a powerful disintegration of the beliefs founded upon ancient and miraculous manifestations, and it replaces them. Thus to the modern mind the new, true, and higher-integrations of science have silently and often unconsciously discredited and replaced the former general belief in the supernatural religions, and left the masses of the people intellectually outside of the old churches. If we ask, What is the creed which alone satisfies the modern American? the answer is, That which he knows to be true—and that, in one word, is science. The majority of the American people are already practically secularists—people of this world.

If we turn to "the heart," or the emotional nature of young America, we find, similarly, that the "touch which makes the whole world kin," the human, is the touch to which he responds. It is not something which has happened or is going to happen in some other conceivable, unlocated, ghostly world, but which affects him and his now in this world. That human touch makes it utter folly to try to feel that a heaven can be at all, as long as there may be a single human being in a hell; and without a hell where is the foundation for a heaven?

The common sense and hearts of the masses therefore say to the priests of the supernatural and the metaphysical—we are no longer able to understand your dogmas. They do not agree with what we see and experience to be true, nor with what we feel to be human, good, and right. Some of our women, children, and weak or fashionable brethren, may from habit, fear, fashion, or social attractions, or special interests, patronize you for a while, but the great business and realities of this world will go on for the future with less and less regard to your ancient notions about spooks or ghosts, gods or devils, angels or fairies, churches and creeds. Because the census proves all this to be true, shall we say with Schiller's hero, that the "beautiful race has emigrated," and lament that the "fair humanities of old religions are gone?" Shall we take refuge in the memories of old superstitions, and like Wordsworth find solace in "Proteus' changing form," and "Triton's wreathed horn?" That depends whether we continue to look backward or turn our faces to the dawn. For, when read from that direction, we find that the disintegration of the old by inevitable law means the integration of the new. Nothing can kill an old religion but the incoming of its greatest successor. Our people are unconsciously welcoming the incoming sway of science and man; and this is proved by their absence from the churches.

The unchurched millions indicate a growing and healthy faith in things, and the laws of things, as they are. They find health in Emerson's prescription, that "the cure for false theology is mother-wit." Even the churches cannot escape this influence. The Presbyterians are voting their creed into a new and humanized shape. Beecher's successor knows nothing of hell. Even Cardinal Gibbons abandons all hope of "coercion;" and the church which cannot enforce the law of its God, lives chiefly to announce his practical abication in the practical world. Whether this new faith in the actual, real, scientific world—or the true, and in the present human practical world—or the good, shall be called a "religion," is a matter of realization, definition, and taste. The votes of those outside of the churches who seem most entitled to decide, are in favor of the continuance of the use of the old and often hated word, "religion,"—with the explanation, that the religion of the new, natural, real world is the reversal of the old. Thus Thomas Paine in number seven of his "Crisis" charges the enemies of America with employing savages in warfare, and thus violating "The Religion of Humanity," and compelling war to the knife. He uses this happy phrase as though a natural and common one; but who used it before him? Auguste Comte, the great Positivist philosopher of France, as all know, made this religion of humanity, as cast into form by him, the outcome of the grandest elaboration of the sciences and of history ever made. In Germany, David Strauss, following the inspiration of Goethe and Herder, gives us the "religion of the new faith" instead of the old. While Johannes Range, in Germany, had long before organized the "free congregations," to put into practice similar conceptions.

In England, Secularism, as a religion, is the result of a line of free thought that has come down from Hobbes, Hume, Cobbett. It was reformulated by Holyoake, and continued by Watts, Bradlaugh, with the two Mills, Miss Martineau, Lewes, and George Eliot as side sponsors.

In America, the attempts to form secular religions and religious societies, churches, ethical societies, etc., have been, and still are, multifarious. It is hardly a year ago that Mr. Charles Watts, the English Secularist, formerly of London but of late years the editor of the Secular Thought at Toronto, Canada, appealed to Col. R. G. Ingersoll for his view; which appeal resulted in the approval by that arch Freethinker of the use of the word religion with the usual reversal and enlargement of its meaning and a disavowal of all supernaturalism. Thereafter in his famous reply to Dr. Field, the poetical colonel joined the new "church" in far-reaching words which have become the motto of the Boston Ingersoll society, and which thousands are learning to repeat in a sort of secular confession of faith, thus:

"I belong to the great church that holds the world in its starlit aisles; that claims the great and good of every race and clime; that finds with joy grains of gold in every creed, and floods with light and love the germs of good in every soul."

To be concluded.

LITERATURE.

"The Rights of Labor According to John Ruskin" is published in a 5-cent tract by W. E. Price, 1203 Market street, San Francisco.

For an answer to the question, "Is Marriage a Failure?" send five cents to "Lucifer," Valley Falls, Kan., and get H. J. Hunt's pamphlet with that query for a title.

"St. Mungo: Being the Life and Adventures of the Son of a Virgin," by "Saladin," is received. It is one of the most amusing of this writer's many clever works.

Equity Publishing Company reprints a lecture by Alfred B. Westrup under the head of "Citizens' Money," and sells it for ten cents. The work sets forth the Anarchistic theory of finance. Copies may be obtained at this office.

Charles Watts, editor of "Secular Thought," is one of the most industrious pamphleteers in America. His latest is "Science and the Bible: Wherein They Differ," published at "Secular Thought" office, 35 Adelaide st. East, Toronto, Can., price 15 cents.

We are glad to see a second edition of Parker Pillsbury's "Ecclesiastical vs. Civil Authority," treating of "God in the federal Constitution: Man and Woman Out." This little pamphlet should be circulated everywhere. Mr. Pillsbury, who won his fame in the antislavery agitation, is an all-round reformer, and believes in woman's rights as well as men. The pamphlet is for sale by the author at ten cents per copy, fifteen for one dollar. Address Parker Pillsbury, Concord, N.H.

Benj. R. Tucker, Boston, Mass., has brought out an abridgment and rearrangement of Lysander Spooner's "Trial by Jury." The present work, a pamphlet of about fifty large pages, is edited by Victor Yarros and entitled "Free Political Institutions: Their Nature, Essence, and Maintenance." In writing his work, as the editor explains, Mr. Spooner's intention was to discredit and denounce the perversion of trial by jury and to promulgate the correct and legitimate system by which alone free political relations could be preserved. The explanation of the nature of such relations was of secondary importance to Mr. Spooner, but to Mr. Yarros they are a vital question. Hence the abridgment and rearrangement in the present form. Price 25 cents.

In a thick pamphlet entitled "Christ and Krishna" John M. Robertson, an English Freethinker and a writer of ability, examines the claims of these two myths (the Christ myth and the Krishna myth) and seeks to discover which was the forerunner of the other. The researches of orientalists in the present century, especially the students of Sanskrit and Hindu legends, have brought out the fact that Jesus was not by any means the first Christ, and have given to the world the story of Krishna. The Christian apologists have therefore set themselves the task of showing that the Krishna myth is a late creation, borrowed from the story of Jesus. Mr. Robertson says that this claim is without foundation, and shows why. The pamphlet is published by the National Reformer, 63 Fleet street, E. C., London, Eng., and with duty and postage paid would cost about 75 cents in San Francisco.

"Reminiscences," by Lucy N. Colman, comes fresh from the press of H. L. Green, at Buffalo, N.Y. It is a handsomely bound book of 86 pages, and contains a fine likeness of the author; a preface by Amy Post, also a picture of Mrs. Post and a sketch of her life by Mrs. Colman. The author of these "Reminiscences" is nearly as old as the century. She entered the antislavery movement almost as soon as that movement was started, and never left it until the colored slaves were free. Her book is made up of anecdotes and a history of her labors. There is just enough of each to make the story so interesting that one does not know when to stop reading it except at the end of the final page. Since slavery days were over Mrs. Colman has been in the ranks of Liberalism, and her voice has been raised in no unhesitating way against every assault upon liberty. She is in all respects a remarkable woman; has led an active life, had as many adventures, done as much good, and is as deserving of the gratitude of mankind as any woman of this century. We hope her book will have the large circulation it deserves, and to that end the Freethought Publishing Company will fill as many orders for it as may be sent to this office. "Reminiscences" by mail $1.

ON CALVINISM.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, in the Atlantic Monthly for September, 1890.

While in my simple gospel creed
That "God is love" so plain I read,
Shall dreams of heathen birth affright
My pathway through the coming night?
Ah, Lord of life, though spectres pale
Fill with their threats the shadowy vale,
With thee my faltering steps to aid,
How can I dare to be afraid?

Shall mouldering page or fading scroll
Outface the charter of the soul?
Shall priesthood's palsied arm protect
The wrongs our human hearts reject,
And smite the lips whose shuddering cry
Proclaims a cruel creed a lie?
The wizard's rope we disallow
Was justice once—is murder now!

Is there a world of blank despair,
And dwells the Omnipresent there?
Does he behold with smile serene
The shows of that unending scene,
Where sleepless, hopeless anguish lies,
And ever dying, never dies?
Say, does he hear the sufferer's groan,
And is that child of wrath his own?

O mortal, wavering in thy trust,
Lift thy pale forehead from the dust,
The mists that cloud thy darkened eyes
Fade ere they reach the o'erarching skies!
When the blind heralds of despair

Would bid thee doubt a father's care,
Look up from earth, and read above
On heaven's blue tablet, God is Love!

THE GENEROUS IMPULSE.

Mr. Putnam's suggestion that friends should follow their first generous impulse and let us know what they will do to carry out the plan proposed by him, has been adopted by an encouraging number. This inquiry comes from a point where FREETHOUGHT has always found a hearty welcome:

FRESNO FLATS, CAL., Oct. 1, 1890.

MR. MACDONALD, Dear Sir: I noticed in your enterprising paper, FREETHOUGHT, that you were working for very small returns. If the Freethought Society of this coast will unite and subscribe, I will subscribe $5. Mr. J. E. Crain will subscribe $5 and Mr. J. Oaks $2, and we will do our best to get more. Let us know through your paper what the Freethinkers of the coast are willing to do. Yours truly,

W. E. LARAMORE.

The appended letters, together with those published last week, give a partial reply to Mr. Laramore's inquiry, and it will be more fully answered next week by words that have come in too late for this issue:

MOUNTAIN VIEW, WASH, Sept. 27, 1890.

I herewith donate $5 to the Editorial Salary Fund. I cannot promise any certain amount per year, but will promise to always do what I can for the support of FREETHOUGHT.

Yours in the cause,

Oswego, Or.

ELVA DAVIDSON-BLACKBURN.

ROCHELLE, ILL., Sept. 24, 1890.

TO THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY: I can't account for it that the average Liberal should be so much less liberal than the average Christian, Jew, or pagan in regard to the institution he pretends to be most interested in. Where is the poor Catholic servant girl that will not cheerfully give $25 per year, if called upon, to help her church? The laborer, mechanic, or merchant who does not cheerfully donate this amount annually to the institution which expounds the gospel according to his belief? Yet, alas! there are thousands of those who enthusiastically indorse the gospel according to FREETHOUGHT, yet who are content to borrow the same from a neighbor, or consider they have done their whole duty when they have contributed $2 or at most $5 per year for its support.

When this sad state of affairs is changed, when our Liberals are aroused to their full sense of duty towards their leaders, then will our cause quickly triumph.

I desire to donate $10 per year to retain the editorial services of the genial "man with a badge-pin" at his post of duty, which in the past he has occupied with so much credit to himself and pleasure to his readers. If balance due me for badges does not cover the above amount I shall promptly remit, and would cheerfully make it $100 did my finances permit.

Sincerely yours,

WETTSTEIN.

INGOMAR, CAL., Sept. 24, 1890 (in Christian computation).

EDITOR FREETHOUGHT, Dear Sir: You will find inclosed $2.25, twenty-five cents to be used to send sample copies to the person whose address you will find below, and two dollars to be used for ammunition.

Now I would like to give you my opinion about those who don't pay for their paper. In the first place, I don't believe that more than one-fifth of them read it. I think that a man that reads FREETHOUGHT will pay for it, and undoubtedly a great many of these had friends who paid for the paper the first year, and of these I don't believe that there is one out of ten that will read a paper he gets that way. When you get your mail and throw a lot of papers on the table when you come home, and a person picks out FREETHOUGHT for the first one every time and reads it, if that person don't subscribe for it, then is your time to hand in your check and pay for his paper.

In my estimation it is a useless thing to pay for a paper and have it sent to a person that is not interested in such a movement. A great many of these supposed Freethinkers have long ago forgotten that they were slaves at one time and were worshiping and flattering a tyrant, and at the same time supporting a smokestack of the infernal regions. This class of Freethinkers forget that there are yet thousands of honest minds in dungeons on which no ray of sunlight ever shone. They forget that these unfortunates must be unchained by those that are free. Thomas Paine said the best way to be happy in this world is to make others so; and it might be said to be free in this world is to make others free, but whether a Freethinker obtained his freedom either by his own efforts or by the efforts of others his duty is to help to free those slaves who are under the dictates of other slaves, and of such there are many.

J. D. KAUFMAN.

MASSILLON, O., Sept. 26, 1890.

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY: Find draft for Editor MacDonald.

J. H. HUNT.

SALMON CITY, IDAHO, Sept. 28, 1890.

EDITORS FREETHOUGHT: Inclosed please find $5—$2 to be applied on my subscription, and $3 to the Editorial Fund.

I would gladly give as much as S. P. P. if my circumstances would permit it; will try to do better next time.

Hoping for success, I am very truly yours, J. M. MOORE.

These pledges and payments have been received. The sums are contributed to what is called an Editorial Fund guaranteeing the present editor of FREETHOUGHT a sufficient income to keep him at work where he can do the most good. S. P. Putnam, $50; Mrs. A. Lindal, $5; H. L. Aiken, $5; John McGlashan, $10; G. W. Ramsay, $20; John Hubbel, $5; Chas. de LaBaume, $5; W. A. Pingree, $1; C. H. Furgason, $1; J. D. Kaufman, $2; Jas. Williamson, $1; Jas. A. Greenhill, $10; J. H. Hunt, $10; John Thomas, $1; J. M. Moore, $3; A Philadelphia Friend, $1; Alex. Hardie, $8; Chas. F. Blackburn, $10; Elva Davidson Blackburn, $5; Robt. Gunther, $10; N. B. Parnell, $5; Fred Kerz, $1; Mrs. E. C. Linn, 50 cents; Otto Wettstein, $10; D. Christie, $1; A. Derming, $5.

The list is still open. Mr. E. A. Stevens, in pledging $5, says: "If the Liberals of the West appreciate, as those in the East do, what a splendid and brilliant paper you are giving them, you will not only be sustained in your present work, but be given encouragement to still greater efforts. Yours for success." That is the general sentiment. The Liberals of the West are able and generous, and have never been called on in vain when any good work was to be done.

F. L. BROWNE,

Chairman pro-tem. Board of Directors.

Told of Wendell Phillips.

One day Mr. Phillips was in a railway car in which were a number of ministers returning from a convention. Among them was a man with a loud, strident voice, who was loudly declaiming against the Abolitionists, and especially against Mr. Phillips. He was talking at every one in the car, and finally shouted that he understood Mr. Phillips was on board. Calling the conductor, he asked him to point out Mr. Phillips. The conductor indicated the orator, who had been an interested listener.

The little man with the voice strode up the aisle to a disrespectful distance and, after striking an attitude, the following colloquy took place:

"So you are Wendell Phillips?"

"I am sir," replied the orator quietly.

"Then why don't you go South and preach your doctrine there?" shouted the little minister.

"At that time," explained Mr. Purvis, in relating the incident, "any Abolitionist would have been lynched in the South."

Replying to the clergyman, Mr. Phillips asked:

"You are a minister of the gospel?"

"I am, sir."

"Your mission is to save souls from hell?"

"It is, sir."

"Then why don't you go there, sir?"—Philadelphia Press.

The Right Kind.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Find inclosed two dollars. I hope you may keep the ball rolling. Your FREETHOUGHT is an educator in the right direction. I would rather ante a big $20 every year than to have FREETHOUGHT less free and thoughtful or one number less in circulation. Your friend,
Kings River, Cal. A. C. SMITH.

As Represented.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Inclosed please find $15.50 in full for statement rendered and renewal of subscription for FREETHOUGHT. The three pins received O.K., and are fully what they are represented to be.

Accept our best wishes for the ultimate success of your undertaking, which is worthy of support by all free-minded men.

With kindest regards to all co-workers of the lofty cause, we remain,
Fort Bragg, Cal. Yours truly, BUCHOLTZ BROS.

Rensburg in Ogden.

To the Editors of Freethought:

On Sunday, the 28th, we had a rare treat in Freethought in the form of two lectures given by J. E. Rensburg, the eloquent champion of human liberty, political, social, and mental. The afternoon audience in Union Opera House was slim, but in the evening there was quite a gathering of eager listeners, with a fair sprinkling of ladies and a score or two of young men, who evidently took their first lesson in Secularism, but appeared to like it none the less. Mr. Rensburg, in his calm and moderate but altogether incisive and impressive language, treated "Bible Morals" in a critical manner, which knocked the props from under the theological fabric built upon the rotten foundation known as holy writ. His arguments were corroborated and enlarged in the evening, when the speaker with irrefutable logic knocked the daylight out of the "False Claims of the Clergy," when he showed the futility of the clergy's claims for the abolition of slavery and for temperance reform. The numerous telling hits were favorably received and frequently applauded, and the audience, after expressing their appreciation by a comparatively liberal contribution, dispersed well pleased with the time spent in listening to one of the best Freethought exponents it has been Ogden's luck to hear.

Mr. Rensburg left on Monday for some towns in Wyoming, after which he will pass through the junction city again, to go north. He is undoubtedly doing a good work in the best of all causes, that of the emancipation of the human race.

I cannot close this report without a tribute of appreciation in behalf of the Liberals to Mr. John A. Jost, the ever alert, ever ready, venerable veteran in the cohorts (wish they were legions) of Freethought. To him was this time again, as on all previous occasions of a similar character, due the credit of securing both the speaker and the hall, also the (modest) support of the local press and the gathering of an audience such as we dared to hope for, considering the Sunday afternoon attractions out of town and the deplorable unpopularity of the cause. But we will yet penetrate through the darkness of superstition to the brightness of knowledge. Yours fraternally,
Ogden, Sept. 30, 1890. LEO HÆFELI.

If you ask me to choose between a sentence to eternal death and a sentence to eternal life, I unflinchingly decide in favor of eternal death. This, at least, insures me against possible future grief, pain, or horror. Furthermore, the absolute unconsciousness which death implies will spare me from the torture during all eternity of the painful recollection of the many good things enjoyed during life, which, alas! in the absence of the physical body, will necessarily be denied to all "spirits."—WETTSTEIN.

To Remitters.

If you must pay your subscriptions by check on a local bank, please add the 25 cents it costs us to collect it. Drafts on San Francisco or Eastern banks are good for their face value, but checks on local banks are not. It is better to pay small sums by post-office order, postal note, express money order, or registered letter.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.

PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; 7 ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60, $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50; fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less.

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botch-ers, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

MAGIC LANTERNS AND STEREOPTICONS afford the best and cheapest means of object teaching for Colleges, Schools and Sunday Schools. Our assortment of Views, illustrating art, science, history, religion and travel, is immense. For Home Amusement and Parlor Entertainment, etc., nothing can be found as instructive or amusing, while Church Entertainments, Public Exhibitions and Popular Illustrated Lectures—PAY WELL. An instrument with a choice selection of views makes a splendid Holiday present. We are the largest manufacturers and dealers, and ship to all parts of the world. If you wish to know how to order, how to conduct Parlor Entertainments for pleasure, or Public Exhibitions, etc., for MAKING MONEY, send us your name and address on a postal card (naming this paper), and we will mail you our 208 PAGE BOOK FREE. McALLISTER, Manufacturer Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y. City.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle-aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unrelenting practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National Press.

Ad. Cross,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND N. J.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles M. d.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

He Locks Up.

"It's pretty damp for a person with the rheumatism to be prowling around, Uncle Josh."

"Mehhe, boss, but it's the doctor's advice."

"Do you mean to tell me the doctor advised you to be out nights?"

"Not 'zactly dat away—but he said I must have chicken brof."—Life.

A STORY OF A BIG MAN.

He Had Bear Claws and a Fur Coat, but He Wasn't "In It."

At Fargo we got news of an accident on the line beyond, and the train had to wait there for two hours. Everybody got out to stroll around, and there were a good many people at the depot to look the passengers over. Among these we had our attention attracted to a big man who had on a buffalo overcoat, a wolf-skin cap and from the collar of the coat dangled seven or eight claws which had once assisted grizzly bears to scratch their way through life. He had long hair, a wild eye, buckskin leggings, and was evidently a mighty Nimrod, if not a western terror. He was walking up and down the platform to show himself off when an undersized, insignificant looking passenger on our train, who had been dubbed "Godfrey's Cordial" ever since we left Chicago, approached him and asked:

"Mistah man, ith that overcoat for thale?"

"No, sir!" was the thunderous response, as the wearer of it turned on the questioner.

"Oh! excuthe me, I thee yur have thome claws there. Did they belong to a cat?"

"Cat! cat! Did you ever see a cat with such claws?"

"No, thir, and that's the reason I asked you. Ith that cap made of lambskin?"

"Lambskin! What are you driving at?"

"My deah sir, I nevah drive. It's against my principles. I am thimply theeking thold facts. Why don't you have your hair cut and put on thome woolen pantaloons? I should think you would catch cold."

"Look here!" growled the big man as he came to a halt, "I want you to go away."

"Do I make you tired?"

"You do."

"I am tho thorry!"

"Now you clear out or I'll get mad."

"Real mad?"

"You hear me!"

"I should so like to buy one of those claws. I'll give you two shillings for"—

"If you don't clear out I'll slice an ear off!"

"Would you really slice my ear off?" innocently asked Cordial.

"I would and I will!"

"Which ear?"
 "Both of 'em, you infernal fool!"
 "Thay," said Cordial, after looking him over, "I don't like the way you talk. I think you ought to apologize."
 "Apologize! Why, you grasshopper, I've a good mind to hold you by the hair!"
 "Don'th you try it!"
 "But I will!"

And he did, but he had scarcely reached out when Cordial was all chain lightning, and fish bones, and pounded glass. He jumped in with his left on the big man's nose, took him on the mouth with his right as he fell, and the buffalo overcoat had no sooner hit the platform than the little man was swarming all over it, with both fists working like piston rods.

In one minute the big man was licked, and then he was led off one way while we took Cordial the other. I don't know what old bear's claws had to say, but as we got the little fellow into the coach he retied the bow at his collar, dusted his shoes with his handkerchief, and explained:

"Wath I to blame? When I thaw those claws wasn't it natural that I should wonder where the cat woth? And I never thaw a wolf nor a buffalo in my life—in my whole life!"—New York Sun.

Sorry When He Came to It.

First Urchin (wiping his mouth)—Say, Billy, dey's one ting about er watermelon wot I don't like. I don't see why dey can't grow some that wouldn't be that way either.

Billy—What is it that yer doesn't like about 'em, Dickey?

First Urchin—It's too bad that the white rind ain't red.—Munsey's Weekly.

Getting Even.

Bimley—What do you think that rascal Jonesley did?

Standoff—Can't imagine.

Bimley—He forged my name for $500.

Standoff—You don't say! Didn't you do anything about it?

Bimley—Yes; I got even with the scoundrel. I forged his name for a thousand.—Judge.

The Scarcity of Fruit.

The man who owns a peach this year
 Has reason to be proud
 Of means of wealth that raises him
 Above the common crowd
 And so the prize that Fortune gives
 To him who best may reach her
 This winter's like to lie between
 The plumber and the peacher.
 —Philadelphia Times.

The Stove Went Out.

Mistress (during a heated term)—Get dinner today on the gasoline stove, Bridget.

Bridget—Plaze, mum, I did thry, but th' stove went out.

Mistress—Try again, then.

Bridget—Yis, mum, but it's not come back yit. It wint out t'rough th' roof.—New York Weekly.

Time for All Things.

Miss Upton—Ma, Miss Flighty and Mr. Saphead are to be married today. Shall I tske some rice along to throw after them?

Practical Mother—No, my dear. Wait until they have run through what little money they have and then give it to them.—New York Weekly.

The Old Name Would Not Do.

Gazlay—Isn't Colon the name of that town on the Isthmus of Panama?

Bunting—That used to be its name, but it has been changed to Period since the Panama canal came to a full stop.—Munsey's Weekly.

The Humboldt Library
 —OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts.

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
8. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
7. The Study of Languages. C. Marcell.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
13. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
14. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion.
15. Longevity. Prolonging Life. John Gardner, M.D.
16. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
18. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
20. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kaley Miller.
21. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
22. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
23. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
24. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
25. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
26. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
27. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
28. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
30. The Study of Words.
 Richard Chenevix Trench.
32. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R. A. Proctor.
33. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
34. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
35. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
36. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
37. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
38. Geological Sketches.
 Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
40. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
41. Current Discussions in Science. W. M. Williams.
42. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
43. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
44. The Dawn of History.
 C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
46. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
47. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
48. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
49. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
50. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange.
 Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
52. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
53. Animal Automatism, Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
54. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
55. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
56. Illusions.
 James Sully.
58. The Origin of Species. Two Double Numbers.
 Charles Darwin. 30 cents each.
60. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
61. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
62. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
63. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, LL.D.
64. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
65. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
66. Technical Education, Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
67. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
68. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
69. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
70. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herb. Spencer.
71. Archaeology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
72. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
73. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
74. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
78. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
79. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
80. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
81. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
82. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
83. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
84. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
85. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
86. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
87. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
88. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson.
89. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
90. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
91. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S.S. Laurie.
92. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number to cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T. H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haeckel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen.
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number, 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present. Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life, Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Laing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whymper, Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No. 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Ritchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Employment!

Any lady desiring to devote a few hours each day to the management of a pleasant and remunerative business, should communicate with Mrs. Browne, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.
 No canvassing.

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St.
 San Francisco.
 Watches Cleaned & Warranted, $1

Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,
 Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!
 Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
 PAPER BAGS, TWINE.
 Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
 414 and 416 Clay st., S F.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.
 BY HELEN H. GARDENER.
 Price, 50 c. Address Freethought,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Crimes Against Criminals.
 By R. G. INGERSOLL.
 Price, 10 Cents.
 Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parson, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 828 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

LIFE RENEWER

NONE
GENUINE WITHOUT THIS SIG-
NATURE.

Dr. Pierce's Galvanic Chain Belt is ELECTRIC and only guaranteed to be the latest improved now in use. The electricity from it can be instantly felt by the Wearer. This celebrated instrument will cure, with out medicine; Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Diseases of the Liver or Kidneys, Lame Back, Female Weakness, General Debility, Spinal Disease, Sexual Weakness, Impotency, Etc. Suspensory for men free with every Belt. N. B. The Electricity goes directly to all Weak Parts and restores them to Health and Vigorous Strength. For particulars call or send 4 cts. in stamps for sealed Pamphlet No. 2. Address MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COMPANY, 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal. If troubled with Hemorrhoids or Piles, send stamp for Pamphlet No. 3.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,

Hygienic Physician.

Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,

Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.

HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m.

25tf

Health & Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.

Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy, $1.
Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.50.

Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer, $1.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.

Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina, Ills. 50.

Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F.R.C.S., 30 cents

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS AND TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.

Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.

God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.

Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.

Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.

Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.

The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.

Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.

The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.

OLIVER HINCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED

CURES

Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung DISEASES

By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen.

Positive cure for Cancer.

26t37

Room 84, Flood B'ldg.

A HAND-BOOK OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS", 15 cents.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERY.

Located Eight Miles South of San Jacinto, Cal.

P. A. CLARK, PROPRIETOR.

A full stock of everything in the Nursery line on hand.

APPLES, PEACHES,
PEARS, PLUMS,
APRICOTS, NECTARINES,
PRUNES, ALMONDS,
WALNUTS, QUINCES, ETC.

IN ALL VARIETIES.

A fine lot of Kelsey's Japan Plums, one and two years old.

Send for price list and buy where you can get trees at living rates.

P. A. CLARK, San Jacinto, Cal.

W. M. HINTON & CO. PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS.

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Franc

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against

LIBERTY,

By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

WRITE TO ELMINA!

Please send stamp for circulars and prices of Books, Blankets, Woolen Goods, and Stocking Yarn.

Snowville is now a Money Order office. Address, E. D. SLENKER, Snowville, Va.

Standard Scientific Works

- Works by Alexander Bain.
 English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75
- Works by Charles Darwin.
 Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00
- Works by J. W. Draper.
 History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75
- Works by Ernst Haeckel.
 The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00
- Works by Huxley.
 Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00
- Works by John Stewart Mill.
 Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25
- Works by Richard A. Proctor.
 Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
- Works by Herbert Spencer.
 Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75
- Works by Andrew D. White.
 Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00
- Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
 Body and Mind.....$1.50
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50
- Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
 Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

- By Asa Gray.
 Darwiniana.....$2.00
- By L. L. McLaughlin.
 Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50
- By C. Marcel.
 Study of Languages.....$1.25
- By Lester F. Ward.
 Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00
- By Frederick Overman.
 A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00
- B. F. G. Fairfield.
 Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25
- By W. B. Carpenter.
 Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25
- By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
 Evolution.....$1.50
- By Sir John Lubbock.
 Origin of Civilization.....$5.00
- By Charles A. Abbott.
 A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50
- By Garrett P. Serviss.
 Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50
- By Nathan Sheppard.
 Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50
- English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25

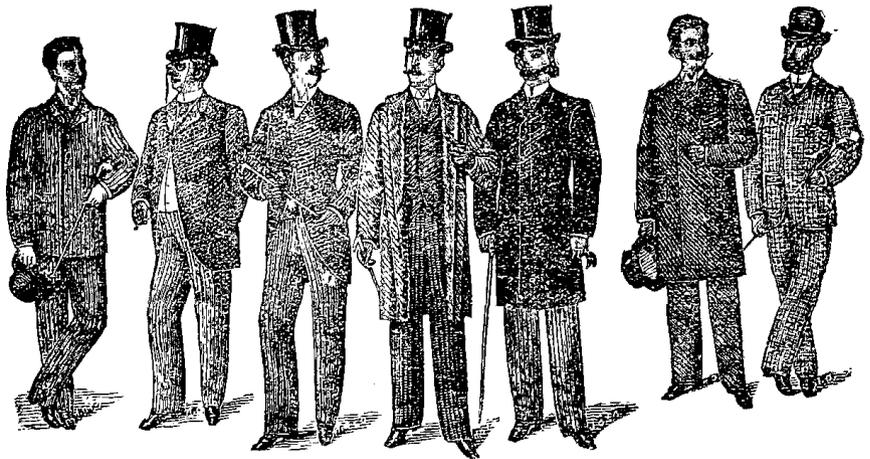

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

J. A. REED.
 FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
 375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,
CHAS F. BURGMAN.
 TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."

339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1.
 Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

BRAIN AND THE BIBLE.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

We can recommend this as one of the most valuable works in the list of Freethought publications. Printed in large type on fine paper and elegantly bound. Price $1. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 00
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge 1 in.....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond" 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

- Per Year.....$1.50
- Six Months......75
- Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 vignets. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth $1 50.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoe maker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater. C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Ingulewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Nurseryman.

R. H. Foster, Babylon, N. Y.

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.

Rapp & DeBarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment

cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.

Otto Siuz, 320 Kearny st.

ORIGINAL

BROWNSVILLE

WOOLEN MILLS

CLOTHING STORE.

164 and 166 Second Street,

Near corner of Morrison,

The Best Goods in the Country

PORTLAND, OR. W. R. BISHOP, AGT.

Call, or send orders and measure.

A TRAGEDY.

Walking up the village street
Came a maiden young and fair.
Tripping on with fairy feet,
Clad in gown of texture rare

Walking down the village street
Came a gallant debonair;
And he could not help but meet
With the lily maid so fair

And he whispered, as they passed,
Something in the maiden's ear;
She an instant stood aghast,
Then she screamed aloud with fear

Seemed the maid as one distraught,
Helpless in her sudden fright—
Shame upon the wretch who brought
Her to such a piteous plight!

Ere you heap upon his head
Scorn unbounded, can you guess
What unlucky words he said?
"There's a spider on your dress!"
—West Shore.

His Head No Aig Shell.

Two negroes engaged in a quarrel, when one struck the other on the head with a wagon spoke. The negro that had received the blow rubbed his head for a moment and then said.

"Look yere, Stephen, dar's one thing dat is er powerful blessin' fur you."

"Whut's dat?"

"De fact dat my head is ez thick ez it is. W'y ef my head wa'n't no thicker den de common run o' heads dat lick would er killed me, an' den you would er been tucl' befo' er justice o' de peace an' fined mighty nigh twenty dollars. You'd better thank de Lawd dat I ain't got one deze yere aig shell heads."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Not the Proper Season.

"It wouldn't be fashionable, don't you know," said the sweet summer girl. "out of the season."

"How? It is always fashionable to elope," said the despondent lover.

"Oh, no! This is the season of the caute-lope."

And the lover brightened and thanked his stars.—Boston Courier.

Romantic Environment.

He (sentimentally)—It seems almost impossible to be among these woodland scenes and not to love—some one.

She (languishingly)—Indeed it does. The placid lake, the sunlit hills, the shady dells and the sweet song of birds drive from one's head all thought of what it costs to live respectably.—Street & Smith's Good News.

Smaller Size Wanted.

Summer Girl—I should like to go sailing. You take people out, I believe.

Fisherman—Yes, mum. That there's my catboat at the dock.

Summer Girl—Oh, dear me, that's too awful big. I'm afraid to go in that. Haven't you any kitten boats!—New York Weekly

She Saw Too Much.

She (after marriage)—You told me that I was your first love, but I have found a whole trunkful of letters from all sorts of girls just bursting with tenderness.

He—I—I said you were the first I ever loved. I didn't say you were the only one who ever loved me. See?—New York Weekly.

Just Out.

"Your overcoat is just a spotted as ever John."

"I know it, my dear. Did you suppose it had been cleaned?"

"Why, yes. Didn't you tell me you had soaked it a month ago?"—Chatter.

PROFESSION OF FAITH

OF A SAVOYARD VICAR.

—BY—

J. J. ROUSSEAU.

The above volume includes "A Search for Truth," by Ralph Iron (Olive Schreiner).

Cloth, 50 cents. Paper, 25 cents.

Address The Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTIANITY * * *

—AND—

* * * AGNOSTICISM.

A CONTROVERSY

Consisting of papers by

Prof. Thomas Huxley, Rev. Henry Wace,

The Bishop of Peterborough

W. H. Mallock, Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

Price, 30 cents.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

Freethought Publishing Co.,

838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.

Address The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 42.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-Class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - OCTOBER 18, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

THE SUMMERVILLE DEBATE.—I found all arrangements made for the debate at Summerville, and Elder Jones was on hand with a whole library of books. He rather thought I would not put in an appearance. He seemed to think that I was trembling in my boots, and when the stage came up Wednesday morning and I was not on board there was a kind of jubilation among the church people, and one man bet a sack of flour that I would not meet my reverend opponent. He lost his sack of flour. I missed the stage, but chartered a special conveyance and was there in plenty of time, and whether the Christians were happy or not remains to be seen.

The debate occupied seven nights. An extra night was thrown in in order that God might have a chance to appear in court and prove that he creates all things, and therefore the Bible.

Elder Jones thrust this question into the debate the very first evening, although when the list of questions at issue were propounded, the question, "Is there a God?" was not accepted, but the question only: "Is the Bible of divine origin?" As a matter of fact, if the god question was not raised by me it certainly did not come into the debate. I did not intend to raise that question for the simple reason that time did not permit. I wanted to stick to the Bible. Why my opponent "side-tracked" on to the "god question" I do not know. For the purposes of the debate on the Bible origin to which the audience had come to listen, I granted the existence of a divine being, after the fashion of Thomas Paine. As this admission on my part was twisted into a back down, I offered to debate the question on a separate night, and so the arrangement proceeded.

Six evenings were devoted to the Bible, and the following was the battle-ground each evening:

First evening—The genuineness of the text, the credibility of the gospels, etc.

I denied the existence of any original text, and affirmed that the present version was founded on MS. copies of no earlier date than the 10th century, and that the gospels as we now have them were not written until one hundred and fifty years after the death of Jesus.

Elder Jones granted my first position, and said the fact that the present version was a copy did not invalidate its historic truthfulness. He affirmed that the Gospels, as we now have them, were written almost immediately after the death of Jesus.

Second evening—I affirmed, and proved by such authorities as Eusebius and others of the Christian fathers, and by modern scholarship, that the Bible was entirely of pagan origin; that there was nothing "new or strange" in it; that the cross, the rite of baptism, and the Lord's supper, as well as the theology and mythology of the Bible, could be found in anterior religions.

Elder Jones endeavored to rebut my position and show that the Bible was a revelation, and not simply a republication of what was in the world before.

Third evening—The battle ground was the prophecies. Elder Jones had an immense chart on the blackboard at the rear of the platform, on which was depicted in various colors the image of Daniel, etc. This was Elder Jones's strong point. He had got the whole thing by heart, and he made a pretty good display of historic knowledge. Who but a divine being could have given Daniel such a wonderful amount of historic information?

I replied as follows: First, there are recorded prophecies outside of the Bible as marvelous as any that are in it, to which no divine origin is ever ascribed; Second, that there are many false prophecies in the Bible—the prophecies concerning Babylon, Tyre, Damascus, Egypt, and the prophecy of Jesus concerning the end of the world. If the truth of a prophecy proves divine origin, then certainly the falsehood of a prophecy disproves with equal force.

Fourth evening—The main question was as to the character of God as given in the Bible. I affirmed that the character was that of a partial, unjust, cruel, and tyrannical being. Elder Jones affirmed that God had a right to murder, or to do anything that he desired with his creatures, and at the very worst the Bible God was no more atrocious than the God of nature. I answered that the badness of nature did not justify the badness of a God. If God made nature he was responsible for all its horrors; if he did not make nature and had, like man, to submit to the evil of nature, then he was no more divine than man himself. The crimes of God cannot be justified by the cruelties of nature. From the standpoint of humanity both are to be condemned.

Fifth evening—The chief discussion was on the immoralities of the Bible. I showed that it justified and endorsed slavery, polygamy, wars of extermination, etc. Elder Jones affirmed that God did not want slavery or polygamy, but on account of the conditions of the age was obliged to regulate until such time as he could abolish. I answered that according to this God was not so determined a reformer as Garrison, nor so powerful as Abraham Lincoln.

Sixth evening—The ground of debate was the miracles and crucifixion of Jesus, and the scientific truthfulness of the Bible. Elder Jones affirmed that the Bible was not at variance with geology or any of the sciences; that we had a valid account of the miracles, and the crucifixion of Christ, and that such a wonderful event, so well attested and admitted, must prove the divinity of Jesus, and thus the divinity of the Bible.

I answered that so far as history was concerned Jesus was a myth; there was no evidence, that could be accepted in court, that testified such a man ever lived; there was a chasm of two hundred years from the alleged death of Jesus where there was no account of him at all. There was not a particle of proof that he ever lived. He is merely, like William Tell, a supposition of history and no more. The conflict between the Bible and science is irreconcilable. The knowledge of to-day demonstrates beyond doubt that the Bible is absolutely an untruthful book and entirely of human origin.

I have endeavored in this short resume to give a fair account of the arguments of Elder Jones. He debated well. He did not resort to any personalities, but stood bravely to the argument. He is about as thoroughly posted as any preacher I know of. He evidently believes in his side of the question, and defends it earnestly, and in this case the Christians chose as good a representative as could be found in this part of the country.

The Christians, outside of the debate, adopted tactics which did not at all conduce to the benefit of their cause.

The Rev. Parker, however, pitched in on the merits of the Presbyterian creed. He announced to answer me on Sunday morning, and I announced an extra lecture on Sunday afternoon to answer him. I attended his services on Sunday morning, and so did other Liberals, but they never will again, nor would I ever again notice that kind of attack. It was simply a tirade of abuse of which his own party were thoroughly ashamed. He has inflicted an injury upon his church from which it will never recover.

I had a crowded house in the afternoon to my reply. I let the dirt alone, and did my best to show the "beauties" of the Christian creed.

The debate on Tuesday evening between Elder Jones and myself was about God. The elder is a philosopher after the heart of Wilfred Hall. He endeavored to show design, etc.; that there was a spiritual substance; that mind antedates matter, etc. He is a thorough anti-evolutionist, and rejects the science of Huxley, Tyndal, etc., for that of Wilfred Hall.

I maintained the following positions: that reason and experience are the sole source of knowledge, therefore to prove the existence of a God, knowledge must be infinite, which it is not. Matter and motion and the laws of matter and motion are eternal, and there is no need of a God to make them. Design is simply adaptation, and adaptation is as much for evil as good; as witness the cancer which is one of the most beautiful adaptations in the universe—to the eye of science it is simply lovely—but what is it? one of the most perfect instruments of torture conceivable. Did God make this? What is God? Infinite wisdom and infinite love. Therefore only a perfect universe can be the result of God's existence, perfect beauty, perfect delight. The universe is one of evil as well as good, and therefore there cannot be a God.

This is the drift of the arguments. Liberals who understand will know how the matter was presented from evening to evening along these various lines of debate. Of course there was really nothing new, but large audiences were present and the interest was maintained until the close. I am amply satisfied with the outcome, and that Freethought is on the gain.

My visit outside the work of the campaign was most enjoyable. The hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. N. C. McLeod, Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Huber, Mr. and Mrs. G. Wealty, mingled the hours of labor with cordial entertainment. Daniel Somers, Charles Hinckley, W. C. Lyons, Harvey Rinchart, John Kirchoffer, A. J. Patten, S. L. Brooks, Justus Wade, and the Wade Bros., and others, I am glad to count upon the list of friends.

A. Meacham is now editor of the Annotator and gets out a lively paper.

N. C. McLeod, like Bobbie Burns, puts in a little poetry now and then for the benefit of Freethought, besides some rattling prose. J. W. Norval and family are staunch and true, with the bright blood from the Grampian hills, that never turns back from freedom and progress.

I have to thank Mrs. M. S. Wealty for the generous gift of flowers, which from the heart of nature kindles hope for the triumph to come.

C. D. McDowell, postmaster, can make things cheerful even if the storms do blow and the orthodox thunders rattle.

I was pleased to meet Rev. Wm. Fancher, of the Methodist church. I haven't seen him since we struck hands at Bellevue, Idaho, five years ago. He is a hospitable Christian, and wouldn't burn one at the stake if he had a chance. He believes in humanity.

R. D. Ruckman presided with genial impartiality. J. W. Cowan, representative of the Christian church, on the committee with J. W. Norval was fair and honorable.

The audiences were attentive and appreciative, and so far as the debate was concerned each speaker was treated with respect and politeness.

Outside of the debate, on Monday evening an endeavor was made in the direction of a personal attack. But it was not well received, and as most of those who signed the document did not understand its purport nothing more will be said about it, unless the matter is carried further by its originators. If this is the case then there will be war to the knife. With the exception of this and the uncalled-for abuse of the Rev. Parker, I have only the most pleasant memories of this varied and interesting week.

Dr. and Mrs. McNaughton, of Elgin, were present a part of the time. The doctor is one of the jolliest men I ever met, full of information, and a Freethinker until the heavens fall. I hope the banners will sometime float in Elgin and that I shall meet these and other friends again.

I have to thank A. Terwilligar and J. Long for a good ride and good company to La Grande.

I arrive in Portland safe and sound though the sand storms delayed the train over twelve hours, and we had to dig our way through, at times, about three feet of sand on the railroad, accumulated in a few hours.

All promises fair for the convention. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

THE CATHOLIC DEMAND.

The address of the Catholic Archbishop Ireland before the late National Educational Committee at St. Paul, Minn., reaches us through the "Record of the Catholic Benevolent Union" published at Brooklyn, New York. It is a craftily-worded plea for Catholic instruction in the public schools. The archbishop charges that the present secular school tends to eliminate religion from the minds of pupils by treating of "land and sea, but not of heaven;" of "statesmen and warriors, but not of God and Christ;" of "how to succeed in this world," but is silent as to the "world beyond the grave." The evil, he says, is abroad, "scorning salvation through the teachings and graces of Jesus Christ, sneering at the Biblical page, warring upon the sacredness of the Christian Sabbath and the music of its church bells, telling of heaven and of the hopes of immortal souls. Let us be on our guard. In our jealousies lest Protestants gain some advantage over Catholics, or Catholics over Protestants, we play into the hands of unbelievers and secularists. We have given to them the school, the nursery of thought. Are we not securing to them the mastery of the future?" He charges that non-religious schools break up Christian creeds, stimulate the growth of Agnosticism and unbelief, and weaken public and private morals. It is true, he admits, that the schools attempt to teach morals, but he denies that morals can exist without the positive principles of religion to give them root and sap. Therefore, affirms Archbishop Ireland, we ought to have religious instruction in connection with the schools. Secularists and unbelievers may interpose their rights, but while the Catholic will not impose his religion upon them, neither shall they impose their religion [!], which is secularism, upon him. For secularism, he holds, "is a religion of its kind, and usually a very loud spoken and intolerant religion, and when non-sectarianism is intended, the secular sect must not claim for itself the field which it refuses to others." Some sort of compromise between Protestants and Catholics may be necessary, the archbishop presumes to say, but he inquires, "Is it not ten thousand times better that we make the compromise rather than allow Secularism to triumph and own the country?"

Archbishop Ireland suggests two schemes by which the church and state may be brought into partnership. The first is as follows:

"I would permeate the regular state school with the religion of the majority of the children of the land, be it as Protestant as Protestantism can be, and I would, as they do in England, pay for the secular instruction given in denominational schools according to results—that is, each pupil passing the examination before state officials and in full accordance with the state programme would secure to his school the cost of the tuition of a pupil in the state school. This is not paying for the religious instruction given to the pupil, but for the secular instruction demanded by the state and given to the pupil as thoroughly as he could have received it in the state school."

The other scheme is the well-known but despicable system which has achieved notoriety under the name of the "Poughkeepsie plan." The archbishop thus describes it:

"In Poughkeepsie, the city school board rents the buildings formerly used as parish schools and from the hour of 9 A. M. to that of 3 P. M. the school is in every particular a state school—teachers engaged and paid by the board, teachers and pupils examined, state books used, the doors always open to superintendent and members of the board. There is simply the tacit understanding that so long as the teachers in those schools, Catholic in faith, pass their examinations and do their work as cleverly and as loyally as other teachers under the control of the board, teachers of another faith shall not be put in their place. Nor are they allowed to teach positive religion during school hours for which the buildings are leased to the board. The state, it is plain, pays not one cent for the religious instruction of the pupils. In the other schools Protestant devotional exercises take place in fullest freedom, before the usual school hour."

In closing the speaker stated the Romanists' claim: "The Catholics demand the Christian-state school."

When we remember that by the word "Christian" every papist means Catholic we have the gist of Archbishop Ireland's address. He desires that the state shall engage Catholic teachers who will see to it that the pupils are instructed in the catechism. We have made this epitome of the archbishop's address in order that Freethinkers may see where the Catholic church stands on the question of religion in schools. The church is uncompromising. It insists that Christianity shall be taught. It will not admit that schools are secular institutions, organized to instruct children in known facts. It must have them taught dogma as well.

There might be more pleasure in comforting ourselves with the assurance that the Catholics will not get what they demand; that a free and liberty-loving people, a people pledged to the total separation of church and state, will not sit supinely by and see the partnership of politics and ecclesiasticism entered into without an effective protest, and so forth, but we discern no reason for such a hope. The schools are becoming more and more the spoils of partisan warfare, and it is in the nature of partisanship to befoul and corrupt all that it touches. In politics everything is sacrificed, honor included, for the sake of temporary victory; and the politician who places party before principle, as the majority of them do, would make a deal with the Catholic church as readily as with any other political organization. There is no disguising the fact that the Catholic church and both the large political parties are drifting into closer relationship. These parties are bidding for Catholic support, and the church stands ready to sell out to the party that will pay the largest price in the form of concessions to the Catholic demands. We see all manner of electioneering schemes to catch the Irish, that is to say, the Catholic vote. These schemes take the form of "bluffing" England, subscribing to Irish relief funds, exclusion acts, appropriations for the support of Catholic institutions and schools, and fulsome flattery of the church in general. The church takes everything with a greedy hand and asks for more. And it will get more; it will get all it asks sooner or later. There is no mistaking the drift of things. The church owns the politicians, and will continue to purchase and own them just as long as politicians are vested with capacities abrogated by the people. It therefore becomes as important to deal with the politicians, and to curtail their powers, as it is to fight the church direct. If there are those who can see one hopeful sign that the rights of the people are not to be crucified between the two thieves of church and state we would like to have that sign pointed out.

The Catholic has stated his demand—"Christian-state schools." The Secularist has his Nine Demands of Liberalism. Which is to win?

SCHWEINFURTH'S "HEAVEN."

It is possible to be a trifle too previous in invoking the law to suppress unpopular religious or other societies. The "Chronicle" of Sunday last contained this editorial paragraph:

"It will be a good thing if the authorities succeed in breaking up the 'heaven' of the prophet Schweinfurth at Weldon, Ill. This vulgar mountebank has preyed upon the credulity of his dupes and has amassed a large fortune. The law ought to get a firm grip upon him, as he has practically carried out the same free-love doctrines that led to the downfall of the Oneida community."

On October 13 the grand jury of DeWitt county, Ill., returned the following report concerning the new messiah and his followers:

"We would respectfully report that at the instance of the state's attorney, in his charge to us, and upon the formal complaint of one of our body, we have made a thorough investigation of the alleged immoral practices of George Jacob Schweinfurth and his followers, who live at the Weldon farm, in the town of Winnebago, this county; that we have taken the testimony of all persons whom we had reason to believe would be cognizant of any facts in the case, including nearly all those who live on the Weldon farm and their nearest neighbors, and that we find absolutely no proof whatever upon which to base any criminal prosecution, with the exception of the fact of the birth there of one illegitimate child, whose paternity cannot be ascertained, the mother, Mary Weldon, making a preposterous claim in relation thereto. No fact has come to our knowledge that in any manner bears against any of these people, so far as the morality of their lives is concerned."

The woman Mary Weldon claims, like the Mary of Judea, that her child is the daughter of the Holy Ghost, and any application of the law in the matter would throw discredit upon the parentage of Jesus Christ. The way to attack the impostor Schweinfurth is not with law, but with common sense. When people have reached that stage of enlightenment where they will know that all claiming messiahship are either deluded or seeking to delude, such insanities as the Schweinfurth craze will be impossible; but so long as it is held and generally taught that such a personage as the son of God once appeared upon this earth and is likely to appear again, there will be plenty of Schweinfurths to lead the ignorant astray.

If the heaven at Weldon contains only one illegitimate child, and that by the Holy Ghost, it is as moral as any other religious institution. We understand that the heaven of the orthodox Christian boasts of one distinguished inhabitant whose father was not his mother's husband.

THE TOMB OF JAMES LICK.

Concerning the proposed removal of the remains of James Lick from their present resting-place beneath the Observatory on Mt. Hamilton, Prof. Edward S. Holden, director of the Observatory, writes as follows under date of September 24:

"So far as I know it is not now proposed by any person to remove the remains of the generous founder of this observatory from the tomb in which they now rest. No such proposal or suggestion has come from any person at Mt. Hamilton, and, so far as I know, no such proposition has been made by the Regents of the University.

"It is, however, intended by the Regents to expend a large sum of money in making the external surroundings of Mr. Lick's tomb such as to convey an idea of the respect due to his memory. When the university took possession of the observatory the surroundings of this tomb were lacking in dignity and even in decency. It is now proposed to expend a considerable sum of money in covering the tomb with white marble tiling, in making a white marble platform about it, in inclosing this platform with a handsome railing, in covering the unsightly water-pipes from view, and in isolating the machinery from the immediate surroundings of the tomb itself.

"In this way it is intended to honor the memory of Mr. Lick, and make his tomb externally what it is in idea; that is, 'a monument as no old-time Pharaoh could have imagined or commanded.' I submit that those engaged in this work deserve the hearty support of all Californians, and I hope that this note will set at rest any unfounded rumor regarding this matter."

THE MORE "GOSPEL," THE MORE WICKEDNESS.

Catholic editors and prelates seem to have suddenly discovered the fact, which has long been apparent, that their followers belong to the most brutal and disreputable classes of society. The St. Louis "Western Watchman," in an article on "Lost Catholics," makes these admissions:

"We have in this city—St. Louis—and in every large city in the country, for that matter, a fine crop of young Catholic scamps. They grow in rows and follow special lines of avocation. They are first, politicians; then, some of them are policemen; others are firemen, while many follow the railroads. In these four pursuits you will find nine-tenths of the Catholic bankrupts of every large city. A number of recent deaths in these ranks and the sinful careers which those deaths closed has drawn our attention to them,"

"Our firemen are worse than the policemen. It is generally believed that the firemen are the most profane and blasphemous men in the whole community. There is not a lady in this city who wants to pass in front of an engine-house. If she hears not ribald talk she is almost certain to be treated to some choice blasphemy. We believe the majority of our firemen are Catholics, and it is said that the lowest blasphemers are of that way of belief."

"Our ballot stuffers and corrupt ward politicians are almost all Catholics. They are like flies; they live but one season and die when frost comes. Whisky kills them off, where they escape the penitentiary."

The "Watchman" adds that in the line of mechanical industry the Irish-American Catholics are far behind those of other nationalities and beliefs, the trades being monopolized by Infidel Germans.

Archbishop Riordan, of San Francisco, last Sunday gave his congregation a dose of the same medicine. Catholics, he said, reveled in "scenes of drunkenness and debauchery shocking to every self-respecting person, until the Catholic name had become a byword and a reproach." "Protestants," he continued, "who do not have the blessing of the full revelation of the gospel, and Infidels who have none, point to us and ask if this is the fruit that our teachings produce?" Referring to intemperance the archbishop said again: "Protestants, who have not the true faith; Infidels, who have no faith, who cared not for the body here nor hereafter, are not so bad, and they point the finger of scorn at the Catholic church for the weakness of its members."

These statements are true, and to them may be added a report from the county jail that "nine-tenths of the convicts are Catholics." We should think that the church leaders would begin to inquire why this is so, and whether the convicts are Catholics because they are criminals or criminals because they are Catholics.

TO SUBSCRIBERS IN ARREARS.

It is absolutely necessary that subscribers to FREETHOUGHT whose subscriptions have expired should renew at once. We have lately mailed hundreds of notices of expiration, and cannot afford the expense of repeating the operation, which should be unnecessary. You have been advised that your time is out. We have sent you a return envelope, and a blank for renewing. Please fill out the blank with your name and address, inclose $2 and forward to this office.

NOW WE HAVE IT.

The Freethought Publishing Company has become a monopolist to the extent of acquiring possession of the entire edition of "TRAVELING ALONE: A WOMAN'S JOURNEY AROUND THE WORLD," by Lillian Leland.

This book has had a brilliant but brief career. When it first appeared it jumped into popularity at once. The secular newspapers took it up and gave it columns of notices which, if reprinted, would make a volume larger than the book itself, while the orthodox journals, particularly the Catholic, "praised it with faint damns." The American News Company took the agency for the book, and placed it everywhere, on news-stands, in book-stores, and on the railroads, and thousands of copies were sold. But suddenly it disappeared and could not be found anywhere, and inquiry at the local office of the News Company developed the fact that it had been called in. The head of the News Company at New York is a Roman Catholic; Lillian Leland satirized the relics and poked fun at the holy paintings, and her book went on the index expurgatorius with Mark Twain's "Innocents Abroad." All unsold copies were returned to the publisher at the publisher's expense. Fortunately, however, one man does not control all the channels through which a book may be circulated, and by the grace of Wanamaker we shall do what we can to replace "Traveling Alone" on the market.

A word as to the book and its author. Lillian Leland is the daughter of T. C. Leland, a reformer of the past generation. He was at the time of his death one of the oldest stenographers in America, one of the most brilliant writers, and one of the most uncompromising Freethinkers. The last years of his life were devoted to Liberal work. He held the office of secretary of the National Liberal League and was associated with T. B. Wakeman in the publication of the weekly Freethought paper, "Man." Lillian inherits her father's wit and literary facility, as well as his unorthodox views on the subject of religion. She has been accorded the distinction of being the first woman to make the circuit of the earth unattended by male escort or female companion. This distinction, however, she yields to Madam Ida Pfeiffer, who forty-five years ago started on a visit to Palestine and compassed the globe before she returned. The following extracts from the publisher's introduction to "Traveling Alone" will give the reader a glimpse at the personality of our traveler:

Lillian Leland, at the age of twenty-five, without premeditation or preparation, started upon a voyage which, unexpectedly, became the commencement of a journey which carried her around the world, to many lands and on many seas, from Cape Horn to the North Cape, and from the Rocky Mountains to the Himalayas; but little less than sixty thousand miles in distance and covering a period of about two years. She traveled without escort or protection except chance acquaintances met on the way.

Although so fragile and petite that at twenty-five she had the physical appearance, as well as the diffidence and timidity of a girl of seventeen, she possessed an amount of nervous energy and a power of endurance seldom found in a woman. Retiring and reserved in manner, she was, nevertheless, capable of facing the greatest possible danger without flinching, or the most aggravating difficulty without annoyance. With a highly nervous organization which renders her keenly alive to everything calculated to excite fear or irritability, she has a self-control which enables her to meet every emergency with perfect composure.

Charming in person and manner, she conceals beneath an attractive exterior a perfect self-reliance and an indomitable will. She never complains, never finds fault, is always smiling and cheerful in appearance, no matter what she feels or thinks. Always anxious to oblige others, she is never willing that others should discommode themselves for her. That such a woman should make such a journey, and be everywhere the recipient of kind, respectful, and courteous treatment, is not strange.

Since Lillian Leland's return two young women have made the journey around the world alone—Miss Elizabeth Bisland and the New York "World's" correspondent, Nellie Bly. The circumstances of their travels, however, were totally different from hers. They traveled ostentatiously, heralded by telegraph, awaited by agents, and carried forward when necessary by special trains or boats. They had even less responsibility than they would have had if accompanied by escorts unacquainted with the route. Lillian Leland pursued her long journey quietly and unknown. They wrote books covering eighty days of confinement in boats or cars. Her book covers nearly two years spent in observing the outer world. It is not a book that one can pick up and skim through in an hour. It is not padded out to occupy space and paper. It embraces over 350 good-sized pages honestly filled.

Our chief object in securing this book and advertising it is to help do justice to the gifted young authoress. It is often easier to do a wrong act than a right one, and it was easier for the News Company to withdraw "Traveling Alone" than it will be for us to get it back into circulation, but we believe that the Liberals everywhere will co-operate in the work. As a speculation there is nothing in it for the writer and very little for the dealer, but there is a great deal in it for the reader. We shall continue to send "Traveling Alone" in paper covers postpaid for 30 cents; in fine cloth binding one dollar. In paper covers we can fill orders for a single copy or a thousand.

THE principals of some of the schools in Brooklyn, N. Y., are trying to have Longfellow's poem, the "Building of the Ship," excluded from the text books as dangerous to the morals of their pupils. Here are some of the passages complained of. Those familiar with the poem will recall that the ship about to be launched is figured as a bride and the Ocean as the groom:

"And for a moment one might mark
What had been hidden by the dark,
That the head of the maiden lay at rest,
Tenderly, on the young man's breast!"

"She starts—she moves—she seems to feel
The thrill of life along her keel,
And spurning with her foot the ground,
With one exulting joyous bound,
She leaps into the ocean's arms!"

"Take her, O bridegroom, old and gray,
Take her to thy protecting arms
With all her youth and all her charms!

"How beautiful she is! How fair
She lies within those arms that press
Her form with many a soft caress
Of tenderness and watchful care!"

Where will lewd minds look next for indecency? Possibly the principals of these Brooklyn schools have never read the Bible. Let them peruse the pages of that inspired book; if they survive that ordeal nothing else in current literature is likely to phase them.

MRS. NANCY SULLIVAN, of Springfield, O., says a dispatch, has been crazy for some time on the subject of religion. She was an earnest member of the Presbyterian church and of late has been sitting up until 1 and 2 o'clock reading the Bible. Her mania was so mild that it was not feared. On the morning of October 10, however, her manner changed, and she became a raving maniac. She became imbued with the idea that she ought to offer up a human sacrifice; to that end she constructed an altar, and undressing her six-months-old son, placed him upon it. While hunting for a butcher-knife relatives broke in opportunely and overpowered her. She demanded that she be allowed to proceed, and said that the Lord had commanded her to do it, and that she wanted to wash her hands in the blood of the lamb. They put the poor woman in an asylum, but the hundred thousand priests and ministers in this country continue to preach the religion, a belief in which made her insane and led her to attempt the sacrifice of her child.

THREE of the leaders of Nationalism in this state are standing upon the points of the triangle of discord with no common ground between them. Thos. V. Cator, who led the split in the convention last winter, is opposed by Burnette G. Haskell, of Kaweah, and by W. C. Owen, of Los Angeles, and he is opposed to them. Messrs. Haskell and Owen have also severed their business and other relations, Mr. Owen denouncing the Kaweah colony scheme as an autocracy and declining longer to advertise the "Kaweah Commonwealth." Mr. Cator is running for Congress on a Reform Democrat ticket; Mr. H. G. Wilshire, of Orange county, is candidate for the same position on a "let-the-producer-have-all-his-product" platform. Mr. Haskell has run for Kaweah and got there. Mr. Cator's candidacy has split the Pacific Nationalist Club, a portion of whose members decline to go into politics. It has likewise bred discord in the Single Tax Society, whose journal, the "Weekly Star," supports Mr. Cator, but whose most distinguished member, Judge J. G. Maguire, has broken away from the candidate, and will vote for the Hon. Robert Ferral. Mr. C. F. Burgman, a prominent member of the Pacific Nationalist Club, declares for Cator and Reform, which the editor of the "Weekly Nationalist" characterizes as a side-show. The "Pacific Union," J. W. Hines editor, seems to have lost its interest in Nationalism, and is booming a Farmers' Alliance at San Jose. The Nationalist movement is demoralized, and politics is the cause of it.

BEFORE sending their missionary schooner "Pitcairn" to sea, the Seventh Day Adventists take the precaution to have the vessel insured. This shows that the Adventists' faith in providence is not implicit. The insurance company also took a wholly worldly view of the matter, and insisted that the crew should be made up of ordinary sinful but able seamen, selected on account of their experience at sea rather than their experience in battling the hosts of Satan. The agent of the company even took the precaution to inquire of the captain if he could swear. It is probable that when an officer of the "Pitcairn" rushes forward among the men with the remark that they are slower than the second coming of Christ, the missionaries will gain new light on the wide application of religious terms.

POSTMASTER BACKUS, of San Francisco, has communicated to the "Examiner" the fact that he attended a church fair and drew a prize in the church lottery. Under the new lottery law Mr. Backus's statement renders the paper it is printed in unmailable at the office over which he presides. The man who tried to lift himself over the fence by his bootstraps was a philosopher compared to those who endeavor to make people better by laws that the people know to be absurd.

THE Radical Club is the latest addition to New York's Liberal organizations. Its membership includes all phases of radical thought—Freethinkers, Nationalists, Socialists, Anarchists, Single-taxers, etc. It has no president, and when any question is to be voted upon a printed notice is sent to all the members, who vote in writing. Among the officers of the club we note the names of Ed. W. Chamberlain, T. B. Wakeman, and Herr Moses Oppenheimer.

THE stupidity of the average custom house officer who sets himself up as a censor of literature would be amusing if it were unofficial. The customs idiots at Melbourne, Australia, have recently seized and burned copies of a work entitled "Letters from Hell," on the ground that it is blasphemous. The work is by a Scotch clergyman named George Macdonald, and is too orthodox to be readable.

COUNT TOLSTOI, who now so fervidly denounces the marriage union, is the father of nine children, the youngest a baby in the crib. Tolstoi's latest work contains the severest censure of the medical fraternity, yet chronic liver trouble has forced him to consult a physician and take medicine. Perhaps the great writer's queer view of things is referable more directly to his liver than to his brain.

THE Rev. Dr. Barrows, of the First Congregational church of San Francisco, has come out of the "investigation" with a thin coat of whitewash. He was charged with drunkenness and debauchery, but when his defenders charged the committee, saying, "Let him that is without sin among you cast the first stone," not a rock was to be found.

THE Constitution of the United States, and of nearly all the individual states, provides that "no religious test shall be required as a qualification to any office." How about chaplains in the legislature? If no religious test is required how happens it that none but clergymen are ever appointed to that office?

UNDER the laws of England all money left by bequest to Secular or Freethought purposes may be confiscated to the crown. A movement has been inaugurated by Mr. G. J. Holyoake and others to secure the passage of laws legalizing Freethought bequests.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

On the morning of October 1 a mob of masked men took Lawyer James Herrington from the jail in Bakersfield, shot him in the back, tarred and feathered him and turned him loose, naked, to make his way over stubble and through wire fences out of the county. Herrington was picked up on the road in a terrible plight, and sent to Stockton, where he is now recovering from his injuries. According to current statements of the case Herrington had made himself obnoxious to the land grabbers, and was jailed on a trumped-up charge. He will sue the county for $100,000 damages and prosecute the men who assaulted him.—As many as 14,000 people attended the baseball game at the Haight-street grounds last Sunday. The contest was between the Oakland and San Francisco clubs, and was won by the former.—Mr. F. McCoppin, who was nominated by the Democrats of San Francisco as candidate for mayor, declines to run.—There were 129 deaths in San Francisco, last week; thirty more than were recorded in the corresponding week of 1889.—Bear hunters in Fresno recently discovered what is thought to be the largest tree in the world. It measures 129 feet in circumference.—The Rev. Andrew Gardiner, of Sydney, who was recently in San Francisco, has returned to Australia, where his wife is suing him for divorce. He has taken to himself another female companion who remains in San Francisco.—A kindergarten school in this city is to be named the Heydenfeldt in honor of its deceased president, Judge Heydenfeldt.

The death of Supreme Justice Miller at Washington is announced.—President Harrison is on a trip West. He will probably visit California.—The Tolstoi club of Boston, organized before Tolstoi wrote the "Kreutzer Sonata," is now desirous of changing its name. The Rev. Edward Everett Hale is president of the club.—Henry Bonas, of Woodhaven, L. I., has sued his wife for a divorce, charging that she has been on too familiar terms with the Rev. Father Steffin of the Catholic church of that place.—The Presbyterian Committee on the Revision of the Westminster Confession of Faith, meeting at Pittsburg, Pa., has adjourned without announcing any changes in the creed.—One of the attractions of the World's Fair at Chicago will be the log cabin in which Lincoln lived when a boy. The cabin, which now stands in Washington county, Ky., is to be taken down and removed to Chicago, where it will be erected on a prominent site at the fair grounds.—The population of New York state is 5,981,934, an increase of 896,063, or 17.69 per cent in the last ten years.—A petition has been received by the mayor of Boston protesting to the aldermen and councilmen emphatically and earnestly against the appropriation of public funds or allowing the erection of any memorial in any public grounds in the city in honor of the late John Boyle O'Reilly, editor of the Boston Pilot. The protest is signed by 10,000 people, and in it O'Reilly's is characterized as the "indefatigable enemy of the public schools." O'Reilly was a Catholic.—The postal authorities last week seized an edition of the Atlanta "Constitution" which contained a prize distribution offer to its subscribers.—Dr. Gatchell, a Chicago physician, claims to have discovered the trick in the feats of so-called mind-reading by P. Alexander Johnstone, and is repeating Johnstone's performances.

A socialist workingmen's congress, attended by representatives of 212 associations opened at Lille, Switzerland, last Sunday.—Dillon and O'Brien, the Irish agitators under arrest charged with holding prohibited meetings, are supposed to have jumped their bail and embarked for America.—A young professor of medicine delivering a lecture to students on poisons last week at St. Petersburg, Russia, illustrated his remarks by swallowing a dose of acid and dying in about two minutes.—Sister Rose Gertrude, otherwise Miss Fowler, who went to the Sandwich islands to nurse lepers, will return, the priests and sisters already located there having made it too uncomfortable for her to remain.

DR. HOLMES ON CALVINISM.

Last week FREETHOUGHT printed a poem from the "Atlantic Monthly" by the editor, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes. It dealt with the emotional side of the question of future punishment. Following is Dr. Holmes's argument, taken from the same issue of the "Monthly:"

The generally professed belief of the Protestant world as embodied in their published creeds is that the great mass of mankind are destined to an eternity of suffering. That this eternity is to be one of bodily pain—of "torment"—is the literal teaching of scripture, which has been literally interpreted by the theologians, the poets, and the artists of many long ages which followed the acceptance of the recorded legends of the church as infallible. The doctrine has always been recognized, as it now is, as a very terrible one. It has found a support in the story of the fall of man, and the view taken of the relation of man to his maker since that event. The hatred of God to mankind in virtue of their "first disobedience" and inherited depravity is at the bottom of it. The extent to which that idea was carried is well shown in expressions from Jonathan Edwards. According to his teaching—and he was a reasoner who knew what he was talking about, what was involved in the promises of the faith he accepted—man inherits the curse of God as his principal birthright.

What shall we say to the doctrine of the fall of man as the ground of inflicting endless misery on the human race? A man to be punished for what he could not help! He was expected to be called to account for Adam's sin. It is singular to notice that the reasoning of the wolf with the lamb should be transferred to the dealings of the creator with his creatures. "You stirred the brook up and made my drinking-place muddy." "But, please your wolfship, I couldn't do that, for I stirred the water far down the stream—below your drinking-place." "Well, anyhow, your father troubled it a year or two ago, and that is the same thing." So the wolf falls upon the lamb and makes a meal of him. That is wolf logic—and theological reasoning.

How shall we characterize the doctrine of endless torture as the destiny of most of those who have lived, and are living, on this planet? I prefer to let another writer speak of it. Mr. John Morley uses the following words: "The horrors of what is perhaps the most frightful idea that has corroded human character—the idea of eternal punishment." Sismondi, the great historian, heard a sermon on eternal punishment, and vowed never again to enter another church holding the same creed. Romanism he considered a religion of mercy and peace by the side of what the English call the Reformation. I mention these protests because I happen to find them among my notes, but it would be easy to accumulate examples of the same kind. When Cowper, at about the end of the last century, said satirically of the minister he was attacking,

"He never mentioned hell to ears polite," he was giving unconscious evidence that the sense of the barbarism of the idea was finding its way into the pulpit. When he was only appealing to the common sense and common humanity of his fellow-countrymen.

Burns, in the midst of the sulphurous orthodoxy of Scotland, dared to say,

"The fear o' hell's a hangman's whip
To haud the wretch in order,"

Where did this "frightful idea" come from? We are surprised, as we grow older, to find that the legendary hell of the church is nothing more nor less than the Tartarus of the old heathen world. It has every mark of coming from the cruel heart of a barbarous despot. Some malignant and vindictive sheik, some brutal Mezentius, must have sat for many pictures of the divinity. It was not enough to kill his captive enemy, after torturing him as much as ingenuity could contrive to do it. He escaped at last by death, but his conqueror could not give him up so easily, and so his vengeance followed him into the unseen and unknown world. How the doctrine got in among the legends of the church we are no more bound to show than we are to account for the intercalation of the "three witnesses" text, or the false insertion, or false omission, whichever it may be, of the last fourteen verses of the gospel of St. Mark. We do not hang our grandmothers now, as our ancestors did theirs, on the strength of the positive command, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live."

A Timely Hint.

The attention of Postmaster-General Wanamaker should be called to the fact that extensive preparations are under way for a voting contest, or gift enterprise, to be decided on the 4th of November. Several hundred prizes will be awarded in the different states to the persons who are declared the most popular. Nobody can tell in advance how the prizes are to be awarded; so the contest is clearly a lottery. We are informed that all the newspapers in the country have entered into a conspiracy to publish the results of the drawing on the morning of November 5. With this hint Mr. Wanamaker will be able to save his hired men the trouble of handling all this vast mass of illicit mail matter.—Examiner.

JULIAN RALPH runs a bright little weekly in New York called "Chatter." One time Mr. Ralph incautiously admitted to his columns an unconventional poem containing the information:

"Johnny Wanny's Got the grip."

Forthwith the offending publisher was notified that "Chatter" was excluded from the privilege of transmission through the mails as second class matter. The reason assigned was that as the paper offered an accident insurance policy as a premium to every subscriber it was merely an advertising sheet for the insurance company. At the same time a publication called "Book News" was regularly issued from Mr. Wanamaker's store as an advertisement of that emporium and sent through the mails at second class rates.—Examiner.

THE book, "How to Make Marriage a Success," is attracting considerable attention. Until it attracts the attention of Brother Wanamaker we shall continue to mail it at 80 cents per copy to any address.

ROCKFORD, Ill., where the Rev. Geo. Jacob Schweinfurth conducts the business of Messiah, is also the home of Dr. G. W. Brown, a deeply-read Freethinker, whose work entitled "Oriental Researches" is well known to the Liberal public. Schweinfurth's labors do not appear to interfere with Dr. Brown's, nor Dr. Brown's with Schweinfurth's. The latter-day messiah is eminently Christian, while the disciple of Esculapius is unqualifiedly skeptical. Every one should read Dr. Brown's work, and see how much any messiah or any Christian's belief is worth. We send "Researches in Oriental History" by mail for $1.50.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS.

Coburg, Or.	Oct. 15, 16	Talent, Or.	Oct. 26
Marshfield, Coos co. Or.	Oct. 19, 20	Fort Bragg, Cal.	Nov. 1, 2
Coquille, Coos co. Or. . . .	Oct. 21	Boulder Creek, Cal. . . .	Nov. 9, 10
Arago, Coos co. Or.	Oct. 22	Porterville, Cal.	Nov. 12, 13, 14
Myrtle Point Coos co., Or.	Oct. 23	Tulare, Cal.	Nov. 15, 16

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION,

R. B. WESTBROOK, PRESIDENT.

F. C. MENDE, TREASURER. IDA C. CRADDOCK, COR. SEC'Y.
BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. Westbrook 1707 Oxford st., Philadelphia.
E. B. Foote, Jr. 120 Lexington ave., New York.
T. B. Wakeman 93 Nassau st., New York.
J. E. Remsburg Oak Mills, Kansas.
Juliet H. Severance Milwaukee, Wisconsin.
F. C. Mende 1814 Green st., Philadelphia.
Ida C. Craddock, S. E. corner of Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia.

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION.

CONTRIBUTIONS DURING SEPTEMBER, 1890.

A. W. McLean, J. L. Rowell, and G. S. Mains, Coleridge, Cal.	$5 00
John Turner, Philadelphia	5 00
John Corbett, Minneapolis	2 00
Geo. K. Muller, Philadelphia, (new member)	25 00
Wm. Krim, Beverly, N. J. through "Truth Seeker"	5 00
S. W. Moore, Adrian, Mich.	5 00
John W. White, Goshen Valley, Utah	2 00
S. R. Shepherd, Leavenworth, Kan.	1 00
Thomas Knight, Ceresco, Mich.	5 00
C. M. Powers, Greenwich Centre, Vt.	5 00
A. W. Tucker, N Waterborough, Maine	1 00
James H. Handy, Cotuit, Mass.	5 00
R. Cole, Oakwood, Mich., through Investigator	9 00
Joseph Haigh, Chebanse, Ill.	2 00
Ida C. Craddock, Philadelphia	14 00
Ruth Brettell, Rochester, N. Y.	1 10
Friendship Liberal League, Philadelphia (collections)	12 35
T. R. Burrows, Chatham, N. Y.	1 00
Wm. Smith, Geneva, N. Y. (for printing 1000 "Church Taxation.")	17 50
Leonard Geiger, Hudson, N. Y.	50 00
M. Reiman, Chicago, Ill.	10 00
Alexander Cochran, Franklin, Pa.	21 00
Total	$203 95

Philadelphia, Oct. 1, 1890.

F. C. MENDE, Treas. A. S. U.

PROGRAMME—FOURTEENTH ANNUAL CONGRESS.

While we are not prepared to give an exact list of the exercises at the coming Congress, we herewith furnish some information that may be of interest to our friends.

The Congress will assemble on Friday evening, October 31, 1890, in the Grand Opera House at Portsmouth, O. President Westbrook will call the meeting to order, and announce certain committees. An address of welcome will be delivered by J. L. Treuthart, president of the local Union, and an original poem will be read by Lawyer Searl on the same subject—to both of which President Westbrook will make a reply. The secretary's report will then be read, at the close of which she will deliver an address on organization. This will be the keynote of the Convention; and it is very desirable that our friends be present on this occasion.

On Saturday morning, at nine o'clock, the election of officers and other business will claim the attention of the Congress; and on Saturday afternoon there will be a general discussion of the best methods of promoting the objects of the American Secular Union—a discussion which will consist of short speeches. This, of course, will be open to all. Dr. Henrietta P. Westbrook will read a short paper on "Common Sense." On Saturday evening an address will be delivered by Mrs. M. A. Freeman on "The Battle for Bread;" and another address will be delivered by Judge C. B. Waite, probably on "God in the Constitution." Dr. Paul Carus, editor of the "Open Court," and Lawyer Geeting, of Chicago, will also deliver short addresses.

On Sunday morning addresses will be delivered by Rabbi David Philipson, of Cincinnati, and by the well-known lecturer, W. F. Jamieson. On Sunday afternoon President Westbrook will deliver an address on "The Bible in Public Schools," and will be followed by the well-known New York lawyer and philosophical writer, T. B. Wakeman. On Sunday evening addresses will be delivered by L. K. Washburn, of the "Boston Investigator," on "The Sunday Question," and by Charles Watts, of Canada, editor of "Secular Thought," on "The Church and the Throne."

Other addresses will be made by various speakers whom we are not yet prepared to announce; and the above programme will be subject to alterations and emendations, should it be found necessary to transfer any speaker or speakers from one evening to another, etc. We have not yet received answers to the invitations given to Dr. McGlynn and Professor Adler.

Fine musical selections, both vocal and instrumental, will be furnished at each session, through the enterprise and liberality of our Portsmouth friends.

We are sorry to announce that Colonel Ingersoll will not be present. He has not delivered a lecture for nearly five years; and the present state of his health, as well as his business engagements, will not permit him to make the journey to Portsmouth.

Through the efforts of our friends in Portsmouth and Chicago we have succeeded in obtaining reduced rates on railroads running to the Congress; and these reductions are obtainable by all who attend the Congress, whether members or otherwise.

Friends leaving Chicago for the Congress will find it to their advantage to go by the B. & O., as this road charges but $14.75 for the round trip, and does not compel those purchasing tickets at this rate to go all at the same time on one ticket, as other roads do, but will sell separate tickets, so that members who may be delayed to a later train can still have the advantage of the reduced fare. Those who wish to get their tickets at this reduction should consult Mr. A. M. Freeman, 402 West Madison street, Chicago, by mail or in person.

Our Portsmouth friends inform us that the Eastern, Central, and Southern railroad lines (the Western Passenger Association has declined to enter the pool) will grant us a reduction of two-thirds the regular fare on our homeward tickets, provided we comply with the following conditions:

1. Each person desiring the reduction must purchase a first-class ticket to Portsmouth, Ohio, for which he will pay the regular fare; and upon request the ticket agent will, at the time he buys the ticket, give him a printed certificate of purchase properly filled up and signed by said ticket agent.

2. If through tickets cannot be procured at the starting-point the traveler must purchase to the most convenient point where through tickets can be obtained; and repurchase through to Portsmouth, requesting a certificate from the ticket agent at the point where the repurchase is made.

3. Tickets for the return journey will be sold by the ticket agent at Portsmouth, O., at one-third the highest limited fare, only to those holding certificates (referred to above) signed by the ticket agent at the point where through ticket to Portsmouth was purchased, and countersigned by Ida C. Craddock, Secretary of the American Secular Union, certifying that the holder has been in regular attendance at the Portsmouth Congress.

4. It is absolutely necessary that such a certificate be procured by each traveler, as it proves that full fare has been paid for the journey to Portsmouth, and that the purchaser is therefore entitled to the excursion fare returning. It will also determine the route via which the ticket for the return journey should be issued.

5. On some of the roads tickets for the return journey will be furnished only on certificates procured not more than three days before the meeting assembles, nor later than three days after the commencement of the meeting, and will be available for continuous passage only; no stop over privileges being allowed on tickets sold at less than full fares. Certificates will not be honored unless presented within three days after the date of the adjournment of the Congress.

6. Ticket agents will be instructed that the excursion fares will not be available unless the holders of certificates are properly identified, as above described, by Ida C. Craddock, Secretary of the American Secular Union, on the certificate.

7. These certificates are not transferable.

8. The reduction on the return journey will apply only to the point at which the traveler's through ticket was purchased to Portsmouth on his way to the Congress.

9. (Very important.) No refund of fare will be made on any account whatever because of failure on your part to obtain a certificate. Should you neglect to obtain a certificate as the above conditions provide, you will be obliged to pay full fare both ways.

10. Last, but not least, it is recommended that those who wish to obtain certificates shall arrange to be at the ticket office a half hour before trains start, in order to receive proper attention from the ticket agent.

Several hotels in Portsmouth have reduced their rates for those attending the American Secular Union Congress. The Briggs House will charge two dollars per day, and several of the other hotels will charge only one dollar per day.

We hope that our friends everywhere will make a special effort to be present at the Portsmouth Congress. This Convention will be a turning-point in our history; and it behooves all good Liberals to strengthen the hands of the A. S. U. Congress, either in person or by representation through delegates. With the more thorough and widespread organization which this Congress, it is hoped, will secure, Liberalism can accomplish wonders this coming year; without better organization than we now have, we may as well resign ourselves, with closed eyes and folded hands, to be pushed to the wall by the encroaching ecclesiastical party.

Which shall it be, dear friends? It all depends on yourselves, whether the cause of intellectual and religious freedom shall be helped or hindered for the coming year. With your aid—financial, personal, or by special delegation—we can make this a red-letter Congress in the annals of the American Secular Union. Will you not one and all help?

R. B. WESTBROOK, President A. S. U.
IDA C. CRADDOCK, Cor. Sec. A. S. U.

Philadelphia, Oct. 6, 1890.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

At the Congress of the American Secular Union, to be held at Portsmouth, Ohio, October 31, November 1, and November 2, 1890, the following amendments to the constitution will be proposed:

(1) Strike out the word "constitution" wherever it occurs (as applied to this society) and insert "by-laws." Also make any other verbal alterations necessary to have the instrument conform to any charter of incorporation that may be offered and accepted by the Union.

(2) Amend Article IX. by adding the following: "He or she shall deliver lectures in behalf of the Union as occasion may require and other duties may permit, and shall also solicit annual and life members, and subscriptions to the funds of the association."

R. B. WESTBROOK, President A. S. U.

Attest: IDA C. CRADDOCK, Cor. Sec. A. S. U.
Philadelphia, Sept. 18, 1890.

OUR UNCHURCHED MILLIONS.*

BY THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.
II.

The sublime oration of Victor Hugo on Voltaire is filled with similar secular religious sentiments. While in the almost equally grave and more epoch-making oration Prof. Bovio, in consecrating the monument to Giordano Bruno at Rome on the ninth of June, 1889, in speaking for the whole world outside of the churches of the supernatural, distinctly makes the new religion the foundation of the new era of man in these memorable words:

"The nations assembled here are clearly aware that, as the year 313 was fixed by imperial decree in Milan as the era of the Christian religion, so this ninth of June is fixed in Rome, by the consent of free peoples, as the era of the 'Religion of Thought.'

"Is it, then, a religion? And is this its age and this its place?"

"This faith has no prophets—it has thinkers. If it seeks a temple it finds the universe; if it seeks an inviolate asylum it finds the conscience of man. It has had its martyrs, it insists from this day on that reparation shall not be posthumous.

"Rome may make this proclamation. Here have been celebrated the millenaries of the successive religions. All the gods of the earth met in the universal Pantheon—here, where law had become universal, and a church bade fair to become catholic. Here, too, it is now possible to fix the new millenary, which shall replace the Catholicity of one man by the catholicity of human thought."

"This is the time forecast by Bruno: O Rome, world-wide, universal, to-day thou dost truly reconcile thyself with the word "catholic" pronounced not by dogma, but by the concordant thought of the nations!"

The new era thus referred to before assembled thousands by Professor Bovio, in contrast to the Christian era established at Milan in A.D. 313, is none other than that of the NEW FAITH dating from A.D. 1600, the date of the martyrdom of Bruno, of the publication and public recognition of the Copernican Astronomy, the founding of the East India Company, the first step towards the settlement of America, and of the founding of international law by Grotius—an era which actually gave to mankind a new heaven, a new earth, and a new brotherhood of the race, entirely independent of the old supernaturalism. If the reader receives a letter dated May 15, 290, let him remember that the "290" is instead of 1890, and represents this new era dating from A.D. 1600, as the era of Science and Man; i.e., from the death of Bruno and the recognition of the true solar system, with the attending historical events above noted, which gave the human race the first conception of its own extent, and of its solidarity and continuity.

From the above instances it is quite evident that the new "religion" or "faith" has made its appearance upon a solid, secular, scientific, and human basis; but it is equally clear that it is still in the process of being worked out, and that its era and fundamental conclusions are in actual formation about us. It is due to this fact that the older creeds and faiths are disintegrating. So rapidly is this the case that it is difficult to follow the meanings of the words used in theological controversy, such as Infidel, Deist, Theist, Atheist, etc. Who of the last generation, for instance, would have understood the article on "Theism" in the last Encyclopædia Britannica, although written by a clergyman?

Take as an instance of thought-change the word "Monism," which has been brought to the front by the "Open Court," a scientific religious weekly published at Chicago, as the last and best name for the new faith or religion. This term, Monism, was adopted by Professor Haeckel, the well-known German biologist, as avoiding the limitations that seem to inhere in the words Materialism, Positivism, Secularism, Cosmism, etc., which had been previously used as names for this new birth of time. The "Open Court" has gone into the business of spreading the new and scientific solution of the world under this name, and is throwing a new light over the whole subject. It fights for and applies the new "religion" through the whole range of existence, from star-mist, through the protozoa, and up to MAN, and to the angelic "invisible choir" of the new faith described so grandly in George Eliot's exquisite poem.

We have so far referred only or chiefly to those theoretical and vocal Secularists who publicly declare their new faith. The fact is, however, that the larger part of the two-thirds of the American people who do not molest the churches are silent but practical Secularists; that is, they, in fact and in practice, attend to this world's and their own affairs, and let the affairs of the other world go as they may. Their dissent is practical and even largely unconscious. Very generally no reason in words for their conduct is or could be given. The religion of this world becomes sufficient, and that is of the silent kind. They have no religion to "brag on," and they compromise by letting everyone have his own. They will agree that all sensible people have in substance the same religion; but what that is, it is better never to say. This feeling lay back of Schiller's oft-quoted Zenion:

MEIN GLAUBE.

Welche Religion ich bekenne? Keine von allen,
Die du mir nennst. Und warum keine? Aus Religion?

"Of what religion?" Of none you may name.

"Why none?" Because of my religion.

Yet both Goethe and Schiller could talk the new universal religion fast enough when sure of the proper audience. Thus Goethe's play on the word religion is a fine contrast:

Who science has and art

Also has religion;

Who of them neither has,

Let him have religion!

Wer Wissenschaft und Kunst besitzt,

Hat auch Religion;

Wer jene beiden nicht besitzt,

Der habe Religion.

Here science is faith according to knowledge, and founds life upon what man does or can know instead of what he does not. The art which adds to and supplements nature by the higher nature of human beneficence crowns the universal religion of man, which the great poets, Shakespeare and Goethe, more than any others have helped to found.

*From the Arena for October.

Thus the religion of the churches gradually and generally is silently passing into the Religion of the World and of Man. The old names of religious ideas are either dropped or acquire new meanings. The old church with its anthropomorphic God, heaven and hells, and creed have become symbols and are to be read with a scientific glossary, somewhat like this.

Instead of the old personal God we find the "Not I," the infinite world or universe; the sum of its laws, activities, and powers, which, when properly heeded, "make for righteousness."

The Christ has become the ideal man, or Humanity, and the historical Jesus vanishes from "definite history" as a person, to reappear as an ideal of the best in human nature and history.

Heaven is no longer a place in the skies. Even "the firmament" has vanished into infinite space. St. Peter, or his papal successor, still holds the key, but the door is gone! In place of those "mansions" we dream of the heaven on earth, the ideal of the human race and its triumph.

Hell, which was the foundation of the old three-story tenement-house of theology—hell, earth, and heaven—has no place in the Copernican solar system, nor in the modern human heart. The evils and misery of existence, and the remorse, obloquy, and reproach of evil-doing have taken its place. We have now a natural hell and a natural heaven, instead of the old supernatural.

The Holy Spirit flits no more between earth and sky. The only Holy Ghost recognized is the soul of man in communion with the world and its brother soul. Its assured immortality is in the future of the human race. If there is another state of existence, by natural law and all analogy, the only worthy preparation for it is the best and completest life here and now. Calvin was right: The beliefs and wishes of men cannot change the laws of God or of nature here or hereafter. But by learning, conforming to, and using those laws, may we not, in Bacon's happy phrase, conquer all nature and fate by obedience? Thus man has acquired unbounded confidence and hope of progress. Heaven is re-located by science not in the above but in the beyond.

Scarcely can an American audience be assembled but to consult about some political, social, or other matter looking towards this new natural millennium. Even the churches have as much or more to say of this heaven than of the old; while the end of this world, and the day of judgment which was to introduce their old heaven have dropped out of the theological almanac altogether, and no one believes they will ever come except a few half-demented Millerites.

The reader may continue this glossary at will. We can only note the general result. The sacredness of the old supernatural has happily begun its transition to the new natural world replacing it. Even common things and relations are fast becoming sacred and earnest beyond the old conception. So was it with Goethe and Schiller, so is it becoming to the great exponents of the secular faith of every phase. The new reverence is often silent, but thoughtful and deep. Religion becomes the sense and sum of our relations to the All, to the World, and to Man. The duties imposed by those relations are the highest possible. Health is a personal virtue, the duty of unity with nature; patriotism, the duty of union with our country as a part of humanity, the true country of mankind. The state becomes the true church. In the words of James Parton, our biographer of Voltaire, at the head of this article, the republic is the grandest church known. The dual existence is at an end. One life with its infinite consequences is enough. Who can meet its requirements? None by dreaming of another.

The welfare of the great republic as the ideal and leader among civilized nations is the supreme interest of our earthly life. In that the religion of humanity concentrates. Its future is the ideal of the world, the heaven of humanity, to realize which each generation must provide that a better shall take its place. In this view it is a healthy sign to see how fast the ghostly hells and heavens are dropping out of view. They are believed in not at all, or in an incredible way. For this reason the advanced peoples are full of "reforms" which are the steps towards the earthly, human heaven.

This idea of progress is the greatest achievement of modern times. It did not exist, as we have it now, among the ancient peoples or during the Middle Ages. It is the inspiration; the life, and the hope of our New World. The law of evolution is its discovery and its formula. The collective human will is the supplement and complement of that law, and by co-operation, acting in harmony with that law, and based upon it, our unchurched millions are taking hold of a new life and hope as much grander than the old as the known universe of to-day transcends that of Ptolemy.

NEW YORK LETTER.

One would fancy that the following theatres would be ample for our population: Old Bowery, Winsor, Jacobs', Niblo's, the Star, Union Square, Fourteenth-street, Grand Opera House, Miner's, Madison Square, Lyceum, Garden, Fifth Avenue, Hermann's, Daly's, Palmer's, Bijou, Standard, New Park, Casino, Metropolitan Opera House, Broadway, Proctor's, Eighth-street, Mount Morris, Hammerstein, Academy of Music, Amberg, and Tony Pastor's. Besides these are the Eden Musee, Koster & Bial's, the Burkley Lyceum, the Lyceum Hall at Fifty-ninth street and Madison avenue, Chickering Hall, Steinway Hall, Hardmann's, Lexington-avenue Opera House, and the grand Madison Square Concert Hall. Mr. Harrigan thinks not, and is building his new theatre on Thirty-fifth street just east of Sixth avenue, and Mr. Hammerstein is building on Forty-second street just west of Sixth avenue. The Music Hall on Seventh avenue and Fifty-seventh street is approaching completion. It is an imposing building and will be perfect in every respect. The New Park has been re-decorated. Hermann's (the old San Francisco) has been greatly altered. Sadie Martinot is at the Garden; Agnes Huntington—a Michigan girl by birth, a New Yorker by adoption—is to give us Paul Jones. She comes to us with a reputation made in England. It is expected that she will carry New York by storm. She is a most charming girl. At this moment there is nothing on the stages that is startling or particularly popular.

We are dependent this year on California for our fruit. It is a substitute, and that is all. It has not the lusciousness of our Eastern fruit and is not popular with our fruit eaters. Your peaches are large, your pears are large, but who would think of comparing a Delaware peach or a New Hampshire pear with those grown on the Pacific coast? I doubt if there has been a year since 1816 when there has been such shortages in all our crops as this year. Hay is the only abundant crop. Wheat is off 90,000,000 bushels from last year, corn over 500,000,000 bushels, oats almost 200,000,000 bushels, potatoes only about six-tenths of a crop. Cotton and tobacco are less. The result is the usual one: higher prices. Wheat is 16 cents, corn 14 cents, and oats 20 cents a bushel higher. The farmer is about as well off as last year. In the new tariff he is well taken care of, and ought to be contented.

The political pot is simmering. Tammany says she will go it alone. The opposition is trying to unite on a ticket. It will be a difficult task to unite all these warring elements—county Democrats, Republicans, and Mugwumps, an incongruous crowd. A great effort is being made by a lot of old played-out politicians. A ticket composed of good citizens may be put in the field, but I doubt the leadership of this combination, and expect to see Tammany victorious. It has the organization and discipline, and reinforced as it will be by the rum element it will make a big fight. Among the opposition are ex-Mayor Grace, Wheeler Peckam, Father Dacie, Heber Newton, and Dr. Crosby.

Business in the dry-goods district is good, sales being larger and collections fair. In Wall street it was never duller. The Stock Exchange is almost deserted by the public and stocks are depressed. Silver is being made the shuttlecock of the street. One day it is up, the next it is down, just as it suits the clique. There is one thing certain, Wall street in the future is going to make the price of silver for the world.

Miss Britannica is not going to buy her wheat in Russia and India as cheap as she has in the past, and as she buys annually some 145,000,000 bushels the price is quite an item with her. She buys her wheat in those countries in silver, and buys her silver with gold. As the price of silver advances in gold value, so the cost of wheat goes up in Russia and India. In this respect the American farmer has those countries at a disadvantage. The importer of grain to England and the continent can no longer "whack" us over the head with India wheat. We can at any moment "take the wind out of their sails" by advancing the price of silver.

Money in the East is easy. There is no doubt that its tightness in August and the first part of September was the result of manipulation. When Secretary Windom told Wall street that he would only buy so many bonds, and would not pay an exorbitant price for them, he got them at a fair price, and the money market eased up at once. It was not $22,000,000 paid out of the treasury that did it all. Untold millions were unlocked by these sharks as soon as they found that they could no longer bull the treasury department.

The fall has been unusually warm. It is to be hoped that cold weather will soon come. EUDORUS.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF MORALISTS.

During the month of September twenty-three membership certificates were issued. The new members are from Missouri, California, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, and Texas.

The total number of members enrolled is eleven hundred and eighty. They are scattered all over the civilized world, and the good seed is being sown in every quarter of the globe.

F. H. RAU, Secretary.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Balance from last report.....	$111.95
L. R. Titus, Cal.....	1.00
Max Guhlow, S. Dak.....	.50
Samuel Carter, Kan.....	.50
A. L. Post, Kan.....	.50
Small contributions.....	.30
		Total $114.75
Mailing constitutions, etc.....	4.15
Printing 2000 application blanks.....	3.00	7.15
		Balance 107.60
	A. R. AYRES, Treasurer.

A CARD.

It is with regret that I find myself obliged to forego the anticipated pleasure of attending the Secular Congress at Portsmouth, Ohio. My home in Colorado is threatened, in our absence, by the money lender. My best efforts will be required to save it; and I hope that I can still devote my time to lecture work.

P. O. Box 366, Des Moines, Ia. W. F. JAMIESON.

On the Trail.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Bidding good-by to Randolph and the many friends I found there, as well as to Coos county generally, after giving nearly one hundred lectures in southwest Oregon during the hot summer months of June, July, and August, I took the stage for a seventy-five mile ride over the mountains to Roseburg for a trip to Washington. The ride was a very tiresome one, and excessively hot and dusty. We followed the new route that was nearly all washed away or buried up by land slides last winter. The scenery was grand in many places. For miles we seemed to hang on the verge of a precipice, with the river dashing in torrents over the huge boulders a thousand feet below, while the steep mountain on the other side seemed to rise to the clouds, often overhanging us when it seemed that but a breath was needed for it to topple over and carry us into the depths below. These gorges and canyons, peaks and slopes, are all densely wooded with the most magnificent evergreen forests imaginable. The cascades in the river, the cabins of the venturesome homesteaders, the tents of the campers who were here for health, recreation, and trout—with which the streams are filled—the smoke and smell of the burning woods, the stories of our Jehu driver, the loud laugh and songs of our fellow travelers, all made a scene long to be remembered. "Through by daylight," is the motto of this breakneck mountain line, and in order to do it, every horse was constantly urged by the lash of the Bohemian who handled the ribbons. We ate a splendid dinner at the top of the divide, and under a large shed where the cooking and eating were done. Here at this half-way house the stage lines meet. We were all browner than moon-eyed celestials from the accumulation of the dust. The "Melican man" could not be told from the celestial except by the absence of the pigtail, so for once we could see a use for the "queue."

We got into Roseburg by daylight, or "on time," utterly worn out with the joltings over rocks, the dust, heat, and nearly seventy miles ride since eight in the morning. Verily, the gypsy lecturer's route is not always cast in pleasant places.

A good night's rest, with the sleep that the righteous ever enjoy, and we take the early morning train for Portland two hundred miles away to the north. It seemed that I had returned to civilization again to be whirled along over the iron trail by the shrieking locomotive, for there is as yet no railroad in the coast counties of southwest Oregon, where I had traveled for so many long weeks.

I met many old friends at Portland, where I stopped over the "Lord's day" and spoke by invitation for the first Society of Spiritualists in their splendid and beautiful hall, at First and Taylor streets. The audience was small, as a spiritual camp meeting was running only a little way from the city, and many had gone there to commune with the spirits. Nevertheless, we had a feast of reason and flow of soul, and if the dear departed were not there, they should have been. Mrs. West, the great materializer from your city, is in Portland; also two others of the same genera, from the East, with the same cry ever going up, of "fraud, humbug," etc. Verily, the female materializer of my "father's ghost" and loved ones gone before has a hard road to travel, for the members of the circle of the male persuasion have a habit of hugging the pretty female spirits, that come out in the very dim light, and then of striking a light, and finding their arms full of something that belongs to mundane spheres. This paying a dollar to hug a sprite from the summer land and finding your arms full of mortal flesh seems to be a little irritating to the average biped, judging from the cuss words I heard about an exploded circle of a few evenings before, but in justice to Mrs. West, I believe she was not in the circus.

In the afternoon I attended a labor meeting called the Reform Club, where I was again called to the front and in a half hour's speech gave them the creed of Bellamy, in "Looking Backward," or State Socialism as the only relief from the powers of church and state monopoly, which seemed to be well received.

I called on Brother C. Beal, president of the Oregon Secular Union, at his office, and found him worked to death, as last year, making up and getting ready for the second annual grand rally of all the Liberals of the northwest.

From Portland, I took the night boat, R. M. Thompson, a magnificent steamer, down the grandest river on the Pacific coast—the mighty Columbia—to Astoria. Then by railroad to Willapa harbor, then by steamer to Willapa city, where I have just given four lectures in Odd Fellows' Hall to good audiences. C. B. Reynolds, secretary of the Washington State Secular Union, had just been here two days before, and in his fire and tow plan had scorched orthodoxy as it was never burned before in this neck of the woods. Reynolds pounds them all to pieces so with their own weapon, the Bible, that he becomes a holy terror to the troubled saints who rely on Jesus. Two men here, Jacob Drissler and a Mr. Towner, paid for the hall and gave the speaker fifty dollars, which shows what men will do, if in earnest, for the cause they love. Mr. Drissler I know personally; he is a farmer, a confirmed old bach, but one of Bingen on the Rhine's most noble sons, whose heart and purse are ever open for the cause of one world at a time, and the latch-string of his fine farm cabin ever hangs out to ye tired and hungry lecturer who may wander in this far away land of mighty forests by the sea. Mr. Drissler has two brothers here who are also Freethought and do not believe in the folly of God worship nor joss-houses. D. C. SEYMOUR.

If a "spirit" were seated on a keg of dynamite, and it should explode, what would be the result? If it were not harmed or killed, we would have a miracle; if it were killed, we would have in that case no "immortal soul."—OTTO WETTSTEIN.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.

PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entered satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50; $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic, engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50 fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botches, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

MAGIC LANTERNS

ment and Parlor Entertainment, etc., nothing can be found as instructive or amusing, while Church Entertainments, Public Exhibitions and Popular Illustrated Lectures—PAY WELL. We are the largest manufacturers and dealers, and ship to all parts of the world. If you wish to know how to order, how to conduct Parlor Entertainments for pleasure, or Public Exhibitions, etc., for MAKING MONEY, send us your name and address on a postal card (naming this paper), and we will mail you our 208 PAGE BOOK FREE. McALLISTER, Manufacturer's Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y. City.

AND STEREOPTICONS

afford the best and cheapest means of object teaching for Colleges, Schools and Sunday Schools. Our assortment of Views, illustrating art, science, history, religion and travel, is immense. For Home Amusement and Parlor Entertainment, etc., nothing can be found as instructive or amusing, while Church Entertainments, Public Exhibitions and Popular Illustrated Lectures—

PAY WELL. We are the largest manufacturers and dealers, and ship to all parts of the world. If you wish to know how to order, how to conduct Parlor Entertainments for pleasure, or Public Exhibitions, etc., for MAKING MONEY, send us your name and address on a postal card (naming this paper), and we will mail you our 208 PAGE BOOK FREE. McALLISTER, Manufacturer's Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y. City.

208 PAGE BOOK FREE.

McALLISTER, Manufacturer's Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y. City.

DR. R. P. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N. J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles M. d.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution: Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

To the Bitter End.

"You speak of her as a 'three ply girl,'" observed a St. Paul matron to a young man; "what do you mean by that?"

"Well, she is handsome, sweet tempered and rich. Those triple virtues make her a three ply girl."

"Why do you not carry the simile out to its logical conclusion?"

"How?"

"Why, if she marries you she will be worsted."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The Difference to Him.

Teacher (finding out who had hit him with a paper ball)—You thought that very funny, didn't you?

Johnnie—I would have if I hadn't been caught.—Life.

He Had Heard Enough.

Two nights after the completion of the telephone line between Farnville and Hampden Sidney, Va., one of the largest tobacco warehouses in Farnville was burned. The fire was thought to be the work of an incendiary. Next morning a negro man with a bad reputation and very little sense went into the telephone office.

"W'uts dat ar thing you's talkin' inter, Mr. Blanton?"

"That's a telephone."

"Er tell you what?"

"A thing to talk into. You just ask it anything you want to know and it tells it."

"Is dat so? I done hyard 'bout dat conversation hangin' up on de wall, but I ain' knowed it could tell all dem things."

"Oh, yes; I am busy now, but if you will come back in an hour I'll get it to tell you who burned the warehouse."

"I dinno ez I got time fer dat."

"Well, you'd better take time, or I'll think you did it."

As soon as Sam left, Blanton called up the other end, described the negro and gave the operator the tip.

Sam came back in an hour, the Hampden Sydney operator was called up and Sam put the bell to his ear. This is what he heard:

"The person that burned the Planter's warehouse last night is a ginger cake colored negro, 5 ft. 10 in. high, little finger gone from left hand"—Sam's eyes began to bulge—"one front tooth gone, wears a mustache and goatce, has three children, has been in jail for stealing a sheep from Maj. Venable, and his name is Sam."

With a wild yell and eyes starting out of his head Sam bolted from the room, jumped on a passing freight train, and never came back to claim the reward offered for him.—Chicago Herald.

All at the Fair Grounds.

She—Where do you suppose Goldsmith got his idea for his "Deserted Village?"

He—Probably he had visited a country town when a circus performance was in progress.—Lowell Citizen.

Old Times Are Gone.

Passenger (to colored porter)—I suppose you notice a great change in riding back and forth so many times?

Colored Porter (sadly)—Yassuh, I notice the change, but I doan git much of it no mo'. People ain't brung up as liber nowdays as dey used to be.—New Y Herald.

An Old Saw Aptly Applied.

Watchmaker—The first time I cleaned your watch it was in a gold case, the next time in a gold filled case, and now it's in a silver case.

H. A. R. D. Uppe.—Yes, sir, "circumstances alter cases," you know.—Jewelers' Weekly.

The Dear Little Things.

Farmer Haighcde (warningly)—There be a hornets' nest in that tree, young ladies! Miss Metropole (just arrived from New York)—Oh, we won't disturb it; we both love birds.—Puck.

His Best Days.

Minister—You look, my friend, as if you might have seen better days.

Convict—Yes, but you can't always tell by a man's looks. Regular meals will do a heap for a man when he's all run down. I was once a lawyer.—New York Ledger

Good at Arithmetic.

Lady (in employment office)—As there is only my husband and myself in the family I think you ought to be willing to come for less than you ask. There are only two persons to cook for.

Domestic—But, mum, when I'm wid you there 'ud be three.—New York Weekly.

This Was Old in Noah's Day.

Farmer—You kin feed them cows some corn in the ear tonight.

New Hand—I tried that yesterday, sir, but they 'peared to like it better in the mouth.—Boston Times.

Pretty Slick Compliment.

"I remember just twenty-five years ago," began Rosalie.

"Yes," said her caller gallantly, "when you were in heaven."—New York Herald.

The Qualification.

First Tradesman—Is he a gentleman?
Second Tradesman—Well, I suppose so. He doesn't pay his debts till you make him do so.—Munsey's Weekly.

Behind the Scenes.

Visitor—What is that noise in the wings?
Theatre Attache—The gentlemen who played the parts of Damon and Pythias are fighting.—Yankee Blade.

The Humboldt Library
—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts.

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix) Chas. Kingsley.
7. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
8. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry
12. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
13. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion
14. Longevity. Prolonging life. John Gardner, M.D.
15. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
16. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
17. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
18. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
19. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kalley Miller.
20. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
21. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
22. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
23. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
24. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
25. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
26. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
27. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
28. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
29. The Study of Words. Richard Chenevix Trench.
30. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R.A. Proctor.
31. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
32. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
33. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
34. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
35. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
36. Geological Sketches. Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
37. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
38. Current Discussions in Science. W.M. Williams.
39. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
40. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
41. The Dawn of History. C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
42. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
43. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
44. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
45. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
46. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange. Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
47. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
48. Animal Automatism, Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
49. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
50. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
51. Illusions. James Sully.
52. The Origin of Species. Two Double Numbers. Charles Darwin. 30 cents each.
53. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
54. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
55. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
56. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, LL.D.
57. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thisleton Dyer.
58. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
59. Technical Education, Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
60. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
61. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
62. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
63. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencer.
64. Archaeology. (with an appendix) Daniel Wilson.
65. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
66. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
67. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
68. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
69. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
70. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
71. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
72. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
73. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
74. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
75. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
76. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
77. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
78. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson
79. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
80. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
81. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S.S. Laurie.
82. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T.H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haeckel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present, Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life, Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Laing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whymper, Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No. 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Ritchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Employment!

Any lady desiring to devote a few hours each day to the management of a pleasant and remunerative business, should communicate with Mrs. Browne, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

No canvassing.

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St. San Francisco.
Watches Cleaned & Warranted, $1

Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 40tf

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,
Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping PAPER BAGS, TWINE.
Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S F.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

Price, 50 c. Address Freethought,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, . . . 10 Cents.
Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK
In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co.
828 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

RUPTURE

In advertising Dr. PIERCE'S MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS, the assurance is given that we are offering the Best Truss in the World. This Celebrated Appliance has been extensively sold for many years and has Radically Cured thousands of cases of Rupture! This is an Electric Truss (the only successful one ever invented); has no Iron Hoops or Steel Springs about it, and being elastic, can be worn with ease and comfort Night and Day. It's a perfect retainer! For further particulars of Trusses, send 4c. in stamps for Pamphlet No. 1 and that Dr. Pierce's Genuine Electric Trusses contain our Private Signature exactly like that shown at top of this advertisement. Beware of inferior imitations! Address:
MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COMPANY,
704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,

Hygienic Physician.

Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,

Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.

HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m. 25tf

Health and Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.
Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy. $1.
Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.50.
Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook. $1.
Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer. $1.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.
Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina. Ills. 50.
Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook. $1.
Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F.R.C.S. 30 cents

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS AND TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.
Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.
Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.
God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.
Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.
Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.
Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.
The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.
Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.
The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.
OLIVER HUNCKLEY - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.
N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED
CURES

Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung
DISEASES

By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen.
Positive cure for Cancer.
26t37 Room 84, Flood B'ldg.

A HAND-BOOK
OF

FREETHOUGHT.
By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.
The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS", 15 cents.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERY.

Located Eight Miles South of San Jacinto, Cal.

P. A. CLARK, PROPRIETOR.

A full stock of everything in the Nursery line on hand.

APPLES, PEACHES,
PEARS, PLUMS,
APRICOTS, NECTARINES,
PRUNES, ALMONDS,
WALNUTS, QUINCES, ETC.

IN ALL VARIETIES.

A fine lot of Kelsey's Japan Plums, one and two years old.

Send for price list and buy where you can get trees at living rates.

P. A. CLARK, San Jacinto, Cal.

W. M. HINTON & CO.
PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,
536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Franc

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against

LIBERTY,

By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

WRITE TO ELMINAI

Please send stamp for circulars and prices of Books, Blankets, Woolen Goods, and Stocking Yarn.

Snowville is now a Money Order office. Address, E. D. SLENKER, Snowville, Va.

Standard Scientific Works

- Works by Alexander Bain.
 English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75
- Works by Charles Darwin.
 Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin, 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00
- Works by J. W. Draper.
 History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75
- Works by Ernst Haeckel.
 The History of Creation, 2 vols.....$5.00
- Works by Huxley.
 Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00
- Works by John Stewart Mill.
 Principles of Political Economy, 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25
- Works by Richard A. Proctor.
 Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
- Works by Herbert Spencer.
 Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology, 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology, 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology, 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75
- Works by Andrew D. White.
 Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00
- Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
 Body and Mind.....$1.5
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50
- Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
 Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

- By Asa Gray.
 Darwiniana.....$2.00
- By L. L. McLaughlin.
 Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50
- By C. Marcel.
 Study of Languages.....$1.25
- By Lester F. Ward.
 Dynamic Sociology, 2 vols.....$5.00
- By Frederick Overman.
 A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00
- B. F. G. Fairfield.
 Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25
- By W. B. Carpenter.
 Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25
- By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
 Evolution.....$1.50
- By Sir John Lubbock.
 Origin of Civilization.....$5.00
- By Charles A. Abbott.
 A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50
- By Garrett P. Serviss.
 Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50
- By Nathan Sheppard.
 Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50
- English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25
- Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

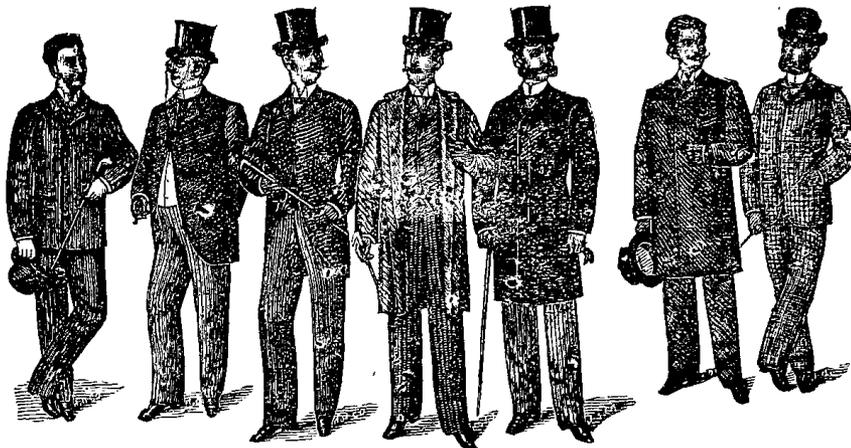

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
 375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

—BY—

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."

339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1.
 Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. E. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

BRAIN AND THE BIBLE.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

We can recommend this as one of the most valuable works in the list of Freethought publications. Printed in large type on fine paper and elegantly bound. Price $1. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Chain (for watch chain).....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Chain (for watch chain).....4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm " " " Diamond* 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,

Freethought Pub. Co.,

838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

- Per Year.....$1.50
- Six Months......75
- Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 vignettes. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth $1 50.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoemaker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater. C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Nurseryman.

R. H. Foster, Babylon, N. Y.

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st. Rapp & Deberry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st. The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st. Otto Sinz, 320 Kearny st.

ORIGINAL

BROWNSVILLE

WOOLEN MILLS

CLOTHING STORE.

164 and 166 Second Street,

Near corner of Morrison,

The Best Goods in the Country

PORTLAND, OR. W. R. BISHOP, AGT.

Call, or send orders and measure.

At the Church Door.

Mr. Pawrent—Your sermon on "Economy" this morning, doctor, was a very sensible discourse.

Dr. Churchmus—Thank you; it seems to have been appreciated, from the appearance of the contribution bag.—Chatter.

A Train Robber with a Heart.

"You don't seem to have anything of value but your ticket," said a disgusted train robber to a passenger.

"No. I was at a church fair last night." "Is that so? Here, let me give you a five-dollar bill."—Judge.

A Close Appraisal.

Miss Sweetlips (slyly)—A penny for your thoughts, Mr. Stubpen!

Mr. Stubpen—Thank you, Miss Sweetlips. That is just about what I am getting now in the literary market.—Burlington Free Press.

An Unbroken Package.

"Do you love me?"

"Yes."

He wrapped her up in his arms, and for several hours practically they were an unbroken package.—Philadelphia Times.

A Rank Donation.

Dumpsey—Blobson, it is said that "a gift blinds the eye."

Blobson—Yes, and I believe it since I smoked that cigar you gave me last evening.—Burlington Free Press.

The Kind of a Net.

Fred—So Charlie is engaged at last! Frank—Yes; he has been caught in the matrimonial net.

Fred—I thought it was a brunette.—Drake's Magazine.

They Are Common Nouns.

"I wonder why we don't use a capital letter in spelling 'jail,' 'penitentiary,' and the like."

"Because they are not capital places."—Yeowine's News.

Which Was True Enough, Probably.

Irate Citizen—Look a-here, mister! You are taking my umbrella.

Sleek Citizen—I beg your pardon, sir! I thought it was somebody else's.—Burlington Free Press.

But Boys Are Brave.

Johnny Greyneck—Oh, mamma, May's a coward!

Mamma—Why, Johnny, what makes you say so?

Johnny—Because she is; she's afraid of dirt.—Boston Times.

How It Could Be Arranged.

"I want to git arf at Yonkers."

"This train don't stop there."

"Thin I'll till yez what we'll do; I'll git disorderly just beyant Shpyten Duyvil, and yez can kick me arf at Yonkers."—Harper's Bazar.

At Rare Intervals.

First Literary Man (anxious about the other's health)—Do you enjoy a good appetite?

Second Literary Man—I do, when I have the means of satisfying it.—Lowell Citizen.

It's the Way with Tramps.

"Now that you've eaten," the good lady cried, "Take up the saw and make your promise good." She showed him where the buck and woodpile were, But the tramp said nothing and didn't saw wood.

—Philadelphia Times.

PROFESSION OF FAITH

OF A SAVOYARD VICAR.

—BY—

J. J. ROUSSEAU.

The above volume includes "A Search for Truth," by Ralph Iron (Olive Schreiner).

Cloth, 50 cents. Paper, 25 cents.

Address The Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTIANITY * * *

—AND—

* * * AGNOSTICISM.

A CONTROVERSY

Consisting of papers by

Prof. Thomas Huxley, Rev. Henry Wace,

The Bishop of Peterborough

W. H. Mallock, Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

Price, 30 cents.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO. 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

Freethought Publishing Co.,

838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.

Address The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 43.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1885

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - OCTOBER 25, 1890

THE PORTLAND CONVENTION.

It has come and passed and added a bright page to the history of Freethought. It was opened on Saturday morning with an eloquent address by Miss Katie Kehm on "The Bible in the Schools." S. P. Putnam followed with "The Religious Conspiracy," and W. S. Bell with "The Christian Crusades."

In the afternoon Mrs. Mattie Hull made a stirring plea for "Liberty and Reform," and Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel added the "Moral Factors of Liberal Work." Professor Seymour gave the closing speech.

Saturday evening Rensburg delighted his audience with incisive eloquence and a masterly treatment of "Sabbath Breaking." Mrs. Scott Dunaway, in a gentle and motherly manner, elucidated the "Woman Question" as related to Freethought.

Sunday was a gala day of brilliant lectures. Moses Hull led off in the morning with his usual dash and bravery amid tumultuous applause. Hull is a born preacher. He never missed his calling. There isn't a Methodist bishop who can beat him in fervid oratory. He hasn't lost any of the sparkle of his youthful enthusiasm. Rev. Alonzo T. Jones again graced the platform with a noble plea for religious liberty. He is an earnest and admirable debater. He spoke over two hours and thoroughly annihilated the defenders of the state church, and demonstrated beyond cavil the dangerous tendency in political affairs.

In the evening a new orator appeared upon the platform in the person of William Jackson Armstrong. Mr. Armstrong has much brilliancy of delivery. He flashes with fine displays of word-painting, while good logic and sound fact pervade his discourse. He presented "Romanism in American Politics" with vivid power.

The meetings were grand, the enthusiasm splendid, and the result hopeful.

Monday was the labor day. The workers present organized for victory. Oregon is fortunate in the material it possesses for action. C. Beal was re-elected president. His generous efforts are appreciated. He has made the conventions successful beyond expectation. He wanted to resign his arduous office, but the Union would not allow him to do so.

It was decided to make an aggressive campaign—no longer "quiet on the Potomac." Mrs. Krekel was elected secretary. Her ability as a speaker and her devotion to the cause will mark a splendid era in Oregon Liberalism.

Miss Katie Kehm is assistant secretary, bright and brave and overflowing with the Religion of Humanity.

Mrs. Elva Davidson Blackburn is first vice-president, with a long roll of other effective workers from the Willamette to the John Day, from Astoria to Eagle Valley.

Reuben Wright is treasurer. No man is better fitted for the "sinews of war." Lee Laughlin is chairman of the executive committee and J. Henry Schroeder of the finance committee, and a better board of directors could not be selected.

A legislative committee was appointed to push the movement for church taxation the coming winter.

From five hundred to one thousand attended the meetings on Saturday and Sunday.

Liberals were present from all parts of the state. The convention was perfectly harmonious. Every vote was unanimous.

I think Oregon to-day is the banner state of Liberalism. I hope she will keep at the front and that other states will emulate her courageous example. She sends greeting to the American Secular Union, and the national guard must advance. State action must combine with general action throughout the country in order to meet the enemy. Local action must combine with state action for moral, intellectual, and political advancement.

We are pioneers still. We must blaze the pathway of human progress. But amid the brightening and glorious dawn what hopes we have and what comradeship ennobles our toil and makes every labor a delight.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

KATIE KEHM'S REPORT.

The second annual convention of the Oregon State Secular Union met at New Arien Hall, Portland, Saturday, October 11, at 10:15 A. M., President C. Beal in the chair.

After the rendition of a fine selection by Roose & Hodgson's Ariel orchestra the president introduced to the convention Miss Katie Kehm, of New Era, Or., who delivered the opening address. Her theme was "The Bible in the Public Schools."

Mr. S. P. Putnam followed with an able address on "The Religious Conspiracy." He fully demonstrated to his hearers the existence of organizations which are threatening the welfare of our republic, quoting from their records statements and suggestions which, if carried into effect, would revolutionize our governmental affairs and turn back the hands of progress to the dark ages of the past.

The National Reform Association, aided by the Sabbath Unions, the Catholic church, the W. C. T. U. and the White Caps, uniting their efforts to establish in this country the Christian religion, to force upon us a Puritanic Sabbath, to introduce religious exercises into our public schools, were all arraigned by the speaker as enemies of progress and liberty, and the applause which followed the eloquent and effective words plainly showed the audience in sympathy with the thoughts expressed.

Prof. W. S. Bell followed Mr. Putnam with a finely written address upon "Religious Crusades." Mr. Bell's address showed deep thought and research.

At the close of this address Moses Hull and wife, of Chicago, delighted the audience with a song, the words of which were composed by Mrs. Hull on the occasion of the imprisonment of that noble leader of truth and reform, D. M. Bennett.

The convention then adjourned till two o'clock, when Mrs. Mattie E. Hull, in a clear, forcible, and eloquent address, set forth the necessity of co-operation among all Liberals to thwart the pernicious aims of priestcraft.

Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel then addressed us. This eloquent speaker is deservedly popular, true, earnest, noble woman—just such a one as the teachings of Liberalism alone can make. Mrs. Krekel urged upon her hearers a more effective organization, better equipped local Unions, and a more vigorous effort to present to the world the constructive side of Liberalism, urging the establishment of science Sunday-schools, where the young mind can be trained in the truths of science, rather than the narrow channel opened by church and Sunday-school. Every thought was a sparkling gem, whose rays so lit up the minds of her audience that her remarks were followed by prolonged applause.

Prof. D. C. Seymour followed with a few remarks on the work to be accomplished by the Secular Union and the need of practical organization among us. The convention then adjourned till 7:30 P.M.

The evening session was called to order by President Beal, who, in a few well-chosen words, introduced to the convention the eloquent orator, thinker, and author, John E. Remsburg. The storm of applause which followed the president's remarks showed that the work of the man who stood before them was well known and appreciated. At the suggestion of the president he addressed the convention upon the Sunday question. His address was a masterly effort, plain, practical, and effective.

At the close of Mr. Remsburg's address Mrs. Abigail Scott Dunaway gave a short speech, taking as her text, "Governments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed." Mrs. Dunaway's remarks were listened to with marked attention and frequently interrupted by hearty applause.

Convention adjourned until Sunday morning at ten o'clock, when a fine audience assembled to listen to the far-famed debater, Moses Hull, of Chicago. In a clear and comprehensive manner he placed before his hearers the demands, the hopes, the aspirations of those working in the field of Liberalism; with burning eloquence pictured the evils which threaten the principles which lie at the foundation of our republic, and urged upon the Union the necessity of bravely facing all opposition to liberty and progress.

At the close of the address Mr. and Mrs. Hull again favored the audience with a song, after which the convention adjourned till 1:30 P.M.

The afternoon session was given to Elder Alonzo T. Jones, of New York city, whose address on ecclesiastical legislation was well received. Mr. Jones's address showed a thorough knowledge of the subject under discussion. In an earnest manner he pointed out to his hearers the dangers which a union of church and state would lead to, and hence urged that they forever be kept separate. Mr. Jones is a noble worker for human rights, and as such indorses the Nine Demands of Liberalism.

In the evening the convention was addressed by William Jackson Armstrong, of Washington, D. C., who talked upon "Romanism in the Republic." The hall was filled with a most attentive audience, who showed by frequent applause the appreciation of the truths as they fell from the lips of the celebrated orator.

At the suggestion of President Beal Miss Katie Kehm then addressed the convention upon the work to be accomplished the following day, after which the meeting was adjourned until 10 o'clock A.M. Monday.

Monday morning found assembled at New Arien Hall enthusiastic, earnest workers for humanity. The first business before the convention was the appointment of a committee on resolutions, which was as follows: S. P. Putnam, Moses Hull, W. S. Bell, Mattie P. Krekel, and Katie Kehm.

The following dispatches were then read by President Beal:

SEATTLE, Oct. 13.
C. BEAL, President Oregon Secular Union, Arien Hall: Victory. Have won the case against the Sunday-law fanatics.
C. B. REYNOLDS.

SEATTLE, Oct. 13.
C. BEAL, President Oregon Secular Union, Arien Hall, corner Second and Oak streets, Portland: Washington Secular Union sends fraternal greeting. Our president is in court defending members arrested under Sunday law. To-night we appear before school board to stop reciting Lord's prayer. Union, eternal vigilance, and efficient organization absolutely essential to preserve liberty. Success to Oregon Union.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Secretary.

The selection of president next came before the convention, and Mr. Putnam voiced the opinion of the assembly when he said that there was not in the state any one who could more effectively and admirably fill said position than Mr. Beal.

Messrs. Seymour, Laughlin, Bell, Mrs. Jennie Vose Graham, and others reviewed the work done by our noble president, and insisted that no one could more creditably fill the chair.

Mr. Putnam then suggested the appointment of a field secretary, whose duties would be to organize throughout the state Secular Unions, and to promote the cause by lecturing, by scattering Liberal literature, and making regular reports of the work done to our various Freethought papers.

This subject furnished food for thought during the time of adjournment.

When the Union met at 1:30 the committee on resolutions, —S. P. Putnam chairman—submitted the following resolutions, which were adopted by the convention:

Resolved, That the recognition of the rights and dignity of labor are necessary to the perpetuity of the American republic, and this convention recognizes the importance of all reform, the purposes of which are for the advancement of the working people. The power of the government cannot be made conducive to the success of these measures until the ecclesiastical usurpations in the state are successfully resisted and civil and religious liberty is secured to all.

Resolved, That this convention urges upon Liberals the importance of organizing local societies for the purpose of disseminating Secular principles, involving natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

Resolved, That while this convention recognizes the importance of working for all the demands of state secularization, it would advise that special efforts be made to secure the taxation of church property, and instructs the board of directors to provide, from the funds of this Union, petitions to be circulated among the people of Oregon for their signatures asking the legislature of Oregon to repeal the law exempting church property from taxation.

Whereas, We have invited the whole world, Christians, Jews, and pagans alike, to our Columbian Exposition; and whereas there are millions of poor people whose duties and poverty will prevent their attending the exposition on any other day except Sundays; and whereas, we believe it no less than a swindle on that portion of the public who desire to attend the exposition on Sunday to close it against the public on that day for the benefit of the churches and ministers, who claim a monopoly of the amusement and instruction to be afforded on that day, therefore

Resolved, That we enter our most earnest protest against the attempts to close the World's Fair on Sunday.

Resolved, That this convention demands the repeal or modification of all laws which can be used to interfere with the just freedom of the mails.

Whereas, That during the past year our Liberal brother and life member of the Oregon Secular Union, G. W. Tiffany, has passed from life in the order of nature, we express our painful regrets; and further that we hereby extend to his bereaved family our profound sympathy and condolence.

Resolved, That we return our sincere thanks to Elder A. T. Jones for his kindness in coming so far to attend our convention, and for his very able lecture.

Resolved, That we extend to Elder Jones a cordial invitation to lecture before the Oregon Secular Union next year.

Resolved, That this convention urge upon Liberals the fact that they must rally to the support of all Liberal papers, for we depend upon them for the propagation of our ideas and the publication of our proceedings; and especially does it urge upon the Liberals of this coast the necessity of more generously supporting FREETHOUGHT.

Committee { S. P. PUTNAM,
MOSES HULL,
W. S. BELL,
MATTIE P. KREKEL,
KATIE KEHM.

After the adoption of these resolutions the convention further discussed the necessity of a field secretary and then proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year. The following officers were chosen:

PRESIDENT.
C. Beal, of Portland.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

Mrs. Elva Davidson Blackburn, of Mountain View, Wash.; J H Sears, Moses Hull, Chicago; R Rosenthal, Portland; Dr. Hendee, Portland; L C Gilmore, Independence; W S Bell; Mrs. D A Baylor, Portland; Mrs. Charles Beacher, New Era; Anton Werth, Marshfield; William H Campbell, Prineville; W Cop, Langlois; Henry Plorger, Empire City; George A Evans, Portland; D Priestley, Milwaukee; William Oakfield; Kenneth Campbell; C. Rogers, Prineville; M Miller, Dayton, B Fostner, Salem; Mrs. B B Hayes, J McRoy, Tillamook; J W McClure, Silverton; B F Hyland, Corvallis; J D Garfield, Marshfield; H Arnold, Shedd; J T Ford, Independence; W J Dean, Talent; Moses Hard, Newport; John Settle, Lebanon; F S Matteson, Aumsville; W J Booth, McMinnville; B W Dunn, Lafayette; H B Nichols, Portland; A K Olds, McMinnville; C Trullinger, Union Mills; O B Vose, Rainier; H McElsander, Eagle Creek; W H Breese, Talent; P Britt, Jacksonville; O Coolidge, Ashland; W F Benjamin, Roseburg; J Laird, Dora; Judge Low, Bandon; T J McClary, Stayton; William Chance, Astoria; Mrs. C E Haight, East Portland; J Cleaver, Newburg; A J Shrum, Burnt Ranch; J L Baisley, Judge Schofield, Baker City; R D Allen, Silverton; E C Brainard, Union; C. Scott, Scotts Mills; Mrs. S C Todd, Forest Grove; W C Clow, Hillsboro; F Hauswirth, North Yamhill; Mrs. L E Bennett, Corvallis; Wright Forshay; Mrs. H D Mount, R C Greer, Silverton; I Newman, North Powder; L P Howard, Canby; R B Short, John Vaughan, Butteville; John Kruse, Wilsonville; W W Jesse, New Era; John Devine, R Laughton, North Yamhill; S B Cathcart, Coos county; S B Huston, Hillsboro; J B Hoss, Newport; Dr. Semler, Portland; E P Wallace, Amity; H A Lee, Canby; — Fuller, McMinnville; Miss Mattie Blaisdell, Portland; Samuel French, G W Bates, Prairie City; L T Elington, Mt. Vernon; Mrs. Almira Sweek, Hamilton; Mrs. Hayden, Haystack; Geo H Dawes, North Yamhill; Mary C Ordway, Portland; S C Derrick, Eddyville; P O Chilstrom, Thos M Hines, Forest Grove; Martin Manning, Greenville; Jos Bucher, Gales Creek; Mrs. Orla D Phelps, Newburg; Mrs. Myra Prickett, Forest Grove; Mrs. Sue B Keenan, East Portland; R R Hayes, Mrs. J McCoy, Tillamook; H Flickinger, S B Eddy, Pendleton; Jennie Vose Graham, Rainier; John D amond, E P Coleman, Coburg; J Tozer, J D Fountain, Ashland; W B Davis, Prairie City; John Smith, Canyon City; O P Platter, Fox; C V Sweek, Hamilton; Ed Allen, Long Creek; Joseph Putnam, Monument; W N Putnam, Benton Mires, Fossil; Maxwell Ramsby, Haystack; Harry Hawson, Arlington; Alex Hardie, Lost Valley; Alex Crawford, Lone Rock; J W Norval, Summerville; — Jones, Union.

FIELD SECRETARY.
Mattie P. Krekel, of Portland.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY.
Miss Katie Kehm, of New Era.

TREASURER.
R. Wright, of Molalla.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Hon. Lee Laughlin, of North Yamhill, chairman; M. Lidden, Milwaukee; M. Fitzgerald, Silverton; Gertrude Vose Meserve, Rainier; J. K. Olds, Lafayette.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

J. Henry Schroeder, of Coos county, chairman; O. Jeldness, Portland; Mrs. M. J. Olds, McMinnville.

The following legislative committee was appointed to work to secure the repeal of laws exempting church property from taxation:

Mr. C. Beal, Portland; Hon. Lee Laughlin, North Yamhill; Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel, Portland; J. Henry Schroeder, Arago; Dr. J. W. McClure, Silverton; Mr. John Long, Coburg; Mrs. D. A. Baylor, East Portland.

After the election of officers a vote of thanks was extended to President Beal for his excellent management of the convention, and to all others who spoke and participated in the proceedings.

Mr. R. Wright, of Molalla, then moved that the society pay to Messrs. Bell, Putnam, Remsburg, and Hull, and Mrs. Krekel the sum of ten dollars each for services rendered the convention. Motion seconded and carried. The convention then adjourned to meet at the call of the board of directors.

The convention was fittingly closed by a grand ball. All went "merry as a marriage bell." We tripped the light fantastic till the wee small hours, and then with many a cordial shake of the hand and the exchange of good wishes, our minds filled with greater enthusiasm and our hearts in sympathy with the pure and true, we bade one another a loving "adieu."

NOTES.

The thanks of the convention are due to Mr. and Mrs. Hull for the sweet songs rendered by them at the various sessions.

These noble workers are ever ready to "gird on the sword of the right, and battle wrong."

The beautiful banner presented to the Union last year by Miss Mattie Blaisdell occupied a place on the platform, as it will upon every similar occasion. It is certainly a masterpiece of art, that emanated from the brain of a gentle, loving, noble woman.

The music rendered by Roose & Hodgson's orchestra, of seven professors, was of the highest order and added much to the success of the convention.

I was pleased to meet that active worker, Mrs. S. C. Todd, of Forest Grove. Well read, keen, and witty, she is ever ready to strike an effective blow for liberty.

The success of the Portland convention is largely due to our honored president, Cornelius Beal. With untiring efforts, ever aided and encouraged by his noble wife, he has worked for the cause. We honor, we trust, we love him for it, and let us begin early to rally to his assistance for a still grander convention next year.

With equal energy have our retiring secretaries, Mr. J. K. Sears, of McCoy, and Mrs. Elva Davidson-Blackburn, of Oswego, worked for the convention.

These names shall ever hold a warm place in the memory of Oregon Liberals who know their efforts have been crowned with success.

OUR FIELD SECRETARY, MRS. MATTIE P. KREKEL.

Such has been the choice of the Oregon State Secular Union, and a better choice could not have been made.

We recognize in Mrs. Krekel a true, earnest worker for the elevation of humanity; we know that her life-work will be in the cause of Liberalism; we know that she has done much and will do more to remove from the minds of mankind the cobwebs of ignorance which have been woven by cunning hands, and now it remains for you, Liberal men and women of Oregon, to decide whether you want this noble woman to be far reaching in her influence.

The age in which we live demands such workers, and if the principles of Liberalism are near and dear to you as they should be, put forth a better effort than ever before to organize in your community a Secular Union; arrange for the work of your field secretary. You need her aid, advice, and encouragement in this. You now have a better opportunity than ever before of showing your devotion to the cause; so rally to the aid of Mrs. Krekel and keep her actively engaged in the lecture field, so that our glorious work will be seen and felt in every community.

KATIE KEHM, Ass't Sec'y Oregon State Secular Union.

FROM COLONEL INGERSOLL.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1, 1890.

C. BEAL, Esq., My Dear Sir: It is impossible for me to be with you at the annual congress of the Oregon State Secular Union.

Thanking you for the invitation and with best wishes for the success of the congress, I remain, yours truly, R. G. INGERSOLL.

FROM JUDGE WAITE.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22, 1890.

C. BEAL, Esq., My Dear Friend: Your letter of the 11th of August, inviting me in such flattering terms to attend the second annual congress of your society and deliver an address on that occasion, was duly received, and I have delayed replying until now, thinking that possibly I might so arrange my affairs as to be present. But I find it to be simply impossible.

Nothing would give me more pleasure than to be with you and participate in your discussions, and thus aid in giving additional impetus to a cause in which I have spent the best part of my life, and to which the remainder will be devoted—the release of mankind from intellectual bondage, and dispelling the dark clouds of superstition by bringing to bear upon them the glorious light of reason and science, enlivened by the warmth of a common humanity.

I am expecting to attend the annual congress of the American Secular Union to be held at Portsmouth, O., and hope to meet some of you there. We are a good ways apart, but you are as near to us as we are to you. Come over and help us.

With my warmest regards and best wishes to all those who in the name of truth and justice shall assemble at Portland, I have the honor to be very truly
Your friend, C. B. WAITE.

PRESIDENT BEAL ON THE CONVENTION.

DEAR FREETHOUGHT: The grand men and the grand orators of our convention will be left to other pens. The tidal waves of fate seemed to roll against and bear away my every effort to make it a successful meeting. When I took the chair on Saturday morning just sixteen dollars had come in and not half a dozen encouraging letters. But thanks to our magnificent speakers and generous patriots for the victory which has been won for justice and liberty. At this writing I can only give near estimates and not the names of the donors in full, as some were not given, while others cannot be deciphered. R. H. Scott gave ten dollars, Mr. and Mrs. Blackburn twenty-five, J. H. Schroeder sent thirteen fifty, while John Diamond in one way and another gave about forty. From donations, contributions, and ball we received over three hundred dollars. There was in the treasury before any bills were paid three hundred and twenty-eight dollars, so Mr. Ames informs me. The expenses proper are two hundred and thirty-three dollars, fifty to speakers, making two hundred and eighty-three to be paid. This leaves us at least two hundred and fifty dollars in the treasury to make up the next annual congress—where it shall remain.

Three days after I paid the rent Henry Weinhart, proprietor of New Arien Hall, unsolicited, sent me a check for seventy-five dollars for our grand Secular Union. All praise is due this generous citizen. Let all our Liberal papers note it and every Liberal tell his neighbor the good news. This leaves us about three hundred and thirty-five dollars for future use.

The congress calls for a new fund, to carry on a systematic field work. This work has been assigned to Mattie Parry Kregel, our secretary, of Portland. Hon. Lee Laughlin headed the list with five dollars; S. B. Ives followed with five, and Mrs. Olds, of McMinnville, has pledged ten more. I ask every Liberal in Oregon, as your president and fellow-worker, to send in a donation to that fund. Send it to me as soon as possible and I will put it to work. You will be receipted through FREETHOUGHT immediately. As soon as the secretary enters the field let us concentrate our force, money, and influence on the prescribed work and the sustaining of Freethought. This will be enough for us to do this year. If well done you should not, in justice to yourselves, and will not be asked by me to do any more.

The powerful lecture delivered by Mr. Armstrong is for sale by me for ten cents. His book of 160 pages, "Siberia and the Nihilists," for 25 cents. They can also be had of C. H. Wilcox, newsdealer, Portland. As you will be delighted with this choice classic and Secular literature, it would be well to have your neighbors join with you in the purchase.

As president of the Oregon Secular Union I shall never put onto our platform a half-converted, half-educated Secularist for speaker. The people who make the congress shall have the pure article. I shall never put onto that platform a person who would blush to read from that platform a literature they defend. The English language is copious enough and rich enough to clothe every thought in robes of beauty.

The person who in his work for humanity has genius and statesmanship sufficient to achieve the grand result without bringing on disturbance, conflicts, and martyrdom deserves fame. The person who seeks martyrdom for the sake of notoriety deserves infamy. As soon as I rest I shall call your attention to other matters in which we are all interested.
C. BEAL.

THE OPPORTUNITY IN OREGON.

Liberalism is just now enjoying a good strong revival in Oregon, and the enthusiasm is warm. Now is the proper time for a pull all together by the Freethinkers of that state. The Oregon Secular Union is safely launched. Its second convention surpassed its first. It is well officered by men and women of ability and devotion to the work. They are all active advocates of the idea of eternal separation of church and state. Furthermore, Oregon is favored with a legislature containing more Freethinkers, probably, than have met in legislative council since the meeting of that august body who framed the constitution of the United States. Conditions are therefore favorable to Secular work, and if our Oregon friends are wise they will take advantage of the season to make hay while the sun shines. President Beal tells them what he wants them to do. They have worked hard to elect a good legislature. They have had a splendid convention. Now if they follow up the work as they have begun it, they will reap the harvest of success.

THE RELIGIOUS TEST FOR VOTERS.

The members of the board of registration for the Fourteenth Precinct of the Forty-fifth Assembly District for the city and county of San Francisco have been taught a lesson which it is hoped will be useful to them hereafter. The board met at the corner of Nineteenth and Howard streets to register the names of such voters as had not been recorded at the city hall, and the chairman was instructed to administer the following oath to all applicants:

"You do solemnly swear that you will truly answer all questions touching your qualifications to register as an elector in the city and county of San Francisco. 'SO HELP YOU GOD.'"

The "so help you God" is printed on the card, furnished by the bureau of registration, in heavy black capital letters, and is inclosed in quotation marks.

Mr. F. S. Luce, a painter by occupation, residing at 321 Capp street, applied to the board in the Fourteenth of the Forty-fifth for registration, but when the oath was repeated to him he declined to take it on the ground that it was a religious obligation. He, however, expressed a willingness to affirm. The board thereupon unanimously refused to receive his name. A dialogue something like the following then occurred:

INSPECTOR—Where were you born?

APPLICANT—In Texas.

INSPECTOR—Is there no God in Texas?

APPLICANT—I never saw any during my residence in that state.

CHORUS OF ENTIRE BOARD—No man who does not believe in God can register or vote in this country.

Mr. Luce left the board and applied to the editor of FREETHOUGHT for advice. From the editor he was referred to R. Guy McClellan, Esq., attorney at law, 331 Montgomery street. Mr. McClellan gave him an introduction to the chairman of the Republican Central Committee, who heard Mr. Luce's complaint with a good deal of indignation, and sent him to Registrar Smiley. Mr. Smiley characterized the registration board of the Fourteenth of the Forty-fifth as a board of ignoramuses, and gave an order to Mr. Luce directing them to register his name. Thus after spending a day's time in the vindication of his principles and the rights of conscience, the applicant returned to the precinct board and again presented himself for registration. In a very surly manner the inspector directed him to remove his hat. Mr. Luce declined, and an order to "hold up your hand" met with a similar refusal. The board was in a quandary, but having been once rebuked the members did not care to risk a further stretch of authority, and Mr. Luce was registered with hat on and hands down.

The matter has been passed over in complete silence by the press, and an opportunity has thus been lost to give a little new light to those public officers who are required to administer oaths. The trouble ought not to occur again. It is the plain duty of the registrar's office to instruct its employees that an affirmation is as good as an oath in all cases, and that nothing more than a simple promise to speak the truth can be required of any who object to the religious formula. The removal of the hat is optional, and a matter of comfort or taste; the elevation of the hand is a species of invocation of some higher power than truth and has only a superstitious significance.

Mr. Luce deserves the thanks of all Secularists for claiming his rights as a citizen and for taking the trouble and expense of vindicating them.

AN ABSURD PROPOSITION.

The barbers of Oregon ought to have more sense than they display in the petition for Sunday-closing laws which they are circulating. Some of them desire to close their shops on Sunday, as they have a perfect right to do, and for that reason they ask that those who do not share their wish shall be forced to coincide with them. Here is the petition to the legislature circulated for signatures in Portland, East Portland, Albina, and Astoria, and which is to be presented all over the state:

"We, the undersigned, being engaged in the business of barbering in the state of Oregon, and wishing to have one day of rest each week, most respectfully petition your honorable body to enact a law making it unlawful to keep open any barber shop or to carry on or conduct the business of barbering on Sunday."

The legislature of the state should reply to this petition somewhat as follows:

Gentlemen of the Barbering Business: Your petition asking that a law be passed making it unlawful to keep open any barber shop or to carry on or conduct the business of barbering on Sunday has been received. In reply this honorable body would state that it will do nothing of the sort, for the following reasons:

First, It does not own the barber shops of the state, and therefore has no control over them.

Second, This honorable body has no power to declare any business unlawful on one day of the week that is lawful upon other days of the week.

Third, It is beyond the scope of this honorable body to provide rest-days for barbers or for those engaged in any business or calling; but, on the other hand, this honorable body will not interfere if the barbers choose to rest not only on one day of the week but seven. We would respectfully refer the matter to the gentlemen engaged in the business of barbering.

Fourth, This honorable body would respectfully suggest that there may be persons engaged in the barbering business who would prefer to accommodate their customers by shaving them on the first day of the week commonly called Sunday. This is their right, and we cannot interfere with it.

Fifth, Those of our petitioners who desire to rest on Sunday are cordially invited by us, and not only invited but urged to do so. It is clearly within their right, and we will protect them in it. To this end it would be advisable for proprietors of barber shops to carefully lock the doors of their places of business on Saturday night, and to refrain from unlocking them on Sunday morning or at any time throughout the day. It is already provided by law that any person forcing or breaking his way into a barber shop is liable to arrest and punishment for felony.

Sixth (and lastly), We should regard such a law as you propose as an impertinence and an invasion of individual rights.

As aforesaid, we respectfully decline to pass any such law. It is our function to protect liberty, not to outrage it.

There are quite a number of Freethinkers in the Oregon legislation, and if we are not mistaken these will read not only the barbers but other advocates of Sunday tyranny a lesson they will not soon forget.

MRS. ANDREA LINDAL has left with us copies of her Norwegian poem, "Romerkirkens Soiler Vakle," for sale at five cents each. The first stanza of the poem is as follows:

Romerkirkens Soiler vakle.
Hvad har rystet dens Portal?
Ak, det er dens egne Laster,
Som berede nu dens Fald.

WILLIAM FILLINGER, of Perry, Mich., who recently attended a revival and became religion mad in a mild way, was so much distressed over the unbaptized state of his sick mother that last week he began dashing water in her face, and continued the rite until she died of shock and exhaustion. Mr. Fillinger and wife were placed in jail.

THE Chicago "Evening Post" invites its readers to vote on the question: "Shall the World's Fair be open on Sundays?" At last accounts the vote stood two to one in favor of keeping the fair open.

REMSBURG will be with us November 7, and will give his lecture in San Francisco on "False Claims." Brother Putnam is expected to reach the city at about the same time.

SEND for "A Woman's Journey Around the World Alone." Price 30 cents.

ON A BOARD OF REGISTRATION.

I was favored this year, as I have been on several previous years, with the appointment to a precinct board of registration. There is a good remuneration attached to the place, and I saw a chance to get even with the city and county on the money question. Heretofore the balance of trade has been in favor of the municipality. I agreed somewhat blindly to devote six days to the service of my fellow-citizens, as the saying is. I supposed that, as in New York, the board would sit but one day at a time, until I received a kind note from Registrar Smiley saying that my attention to business would be demanded from the 14th to the 19th of the present month, inclusive, and my failure to materialize on those days would subject me to a fine of five hundred dollars in gold coin. The invitation was so cordial that I accepted at once.

The board met at nine o'clock Tuesday morning in the front room of a one-story cottage located on Filbert street. We were seven. There was, first, the inspector, a naturalized native of Brittany, France; second, two United States supervisors, one a Swede, but both pioneers; third, two United States deputy marshals, one a young gentleman with no visible means of support; the other, a pressman; fourth, two judges, one a German jeweler; the other, the author of these lines. The daily wages of these seven members of the board aggregated $44. One of the deputy marshals served half the time, the other one did not serve at all. There was no possible use for either. The rest of the board attended pretty strictly to business. Every applicant for registration in this city and county must sign an affidavit describing his qualifications as an elector. The labor of filling out these affidavits I divided with the other judge, while the inspector administered the oath to the applicant, or "swore him off," as he chose to call that incantation.

The first day (at an expense of $44) we received the affidavits of thirty-four citizens; the second day (expense $44) we registered twenty-two. In the five days, at an expense of $220 for clerical services and $20 for rent—total, $240—one hundred and twelve electors were registered. All the work done by the seven men in five days, with the exception of "swearing off" the electors, could have been done by one man in one day at a cost of $3. We could all see the injustice and extravagance of the thing, but we had our choice to serve or to pay the penalty of $500 in gold coin. No enterprise but a government that gets its money without rustling for it could stand that sort of business management.

I could not feel that we were always doing even and exact justice to the applicants for registration. For instance, Mr. McMullen came in to "register," swore that he had been naturalized but had lost his papers, and was accepted. He was one of the pope's Irish and just touched the pen while I wrote "John McMullen, his mark." Tomaso Cuneo, one of the pope's Italians, was similarly situated, and could not even make a legible cross. But when a man belonging to a large mercantile house in the city made the mistake of leaving his thirty-year-old naturalization papers at home, and would not swear they were lost, we had to decline to register him. He was justifiably excited over the matter, and I applauded his action when he took down my name in order to report me at headquarters. It was necessary that he should swear to the date of his naturalization. He said he was naturalized on the day Fort Sumter was fired upon. He could not give the exact date, and as the board could not allow anyone to answer for him that it was April 12, 1861, he went away indignant.

There were some queer old relics who presented themselves to be registered. Adolph Eberhardt was one. His naturalization papers were dated at Sonora, Tuolumne county, March 5, 1849, and he is therefore several months older as a citizen than California is as a state. He gave us the information that Know-nothingism was very strong in Tuolumne county at the time he took out his papers, and it cost him twenty-eight dollars to be naturalized. He added that when he gave the money to the clerk of the court, the judge remarked that he was a little short of money himself, and thereupon put the twenty-eight dollars in his judicial vest pocket. Mr. Eberhardt signed his name with the stump of a hand that had been frozen off up in the mountains years ago.

The members of our board were above the suspicion of partisanship, and they never inquired the politics of the candidates who invited them across the street or around the corner to have a cigar. Although I was appointed as a judge to represent the Republican party on the board, I did not hesitate to accept a contract to print fifteen thousand cards for the Democratic nominee for supervisor of the second ward. This particular candidate is named John F. Winter, and he is a German of whom the neighbors speak highly.

The house at 715 Filbert street, in which the board sat, is built above a stable where about a score of Italian fish and fruit merchants lodge their horses. It is in the shadow of a larger building and never feels the warmth of sunshine. It is damp and full of odors and draughts that kept the board sneezing and filled our bones with rheumatic aches. We expressed our opinion of the place in the following communication to the board of health:

Before adjourning from their labors, the members of the board of registration for the Eighth Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District beg leave to report that in their opinion the house at 715 Filbert street is unfit for human habitation, being located above a stable whence arise odors destructive of comfort and dangerous to health. We would respectfully direct the attention of the board of health to the fact as above stated.

I left the place on Saturday night at ten o'clock, bearing with me the first symptoms of malaria I have ever enjoyed.

This election business strikes me as being very much like boys' play, and I am getting too old and stale to feel the enthusiasm over it that many display. I took no pride in guiding the hand of illiteracy that made its mark on an affidavit qualifying it to vote upon my affairs. When John McFadden, leading two goats, appeared to register, and confessed his inability to either sign his name or read a ballot, I could not help offering the suggestion that it was unfair to receive him as a sovereign elector and exclude the intelligent animals he was leading. I once saw at a circus an educated pig that would pick a good hand out of a deck of cards and play it to win. Applying the educational test, the pig would have as good qualifications for voting as the pope's illiterates.

G. E. M.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

Senator Stanford was received by the Union League Club last Saturday night upon his return to San Francisco from abroad. —Politics is excessively lively in this city. The registration is 4000 larger than in 1888. —Members of the Kaweah Colony have issued a circular complaining of the management of the colony's affairs. —Census returns place the population of California at 1,204,002, an increase of 339,308 in ten years. Washington has 349,516. The Oregon census shows 312,419. The population of Los Angeles is placed at 50,394, of Oakland at 48,590, of Sacramento at 26,272, of San Jose at 18,027, of San Diego at 16,133, and of Stockton at 14,376. —The ripening of Eastern fruit has glutted the New York market. Fortunately California got her product in early.

"Original package" saloons are being opened in all parts of Kansas under the recent decision of the court. —The Rev. Albert Vedder, a Presbyterian clergyman, was sentenced at New York, Oct. 17, to five years' imprisonment for abducting Mamie McCann, a fifteen-year-old girl. —A Catholic priest at Elizabethport, N. J., has got his name in the papers by insulting some of his young lady parishioners whose dresses did not suit him. The gowns were slightly hollowed at the throat, and for that reason attracted the priest's lascivious attention. —The Political Alliance at Chicago has presented a petition to President Harrison, requesting him to present the name of Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton to the Senate of the United States as an associate justice in place of Justice Miller, deceased. —A big pile of money goes through the hands of the controller of the city of New York. For the quarter ended June 30 he received over $17,000,000 (including a balance of $1,600,000 from the previous quarter), and spent it all but about $3,000,000.

The Russian painter, Nicole, a follower of Tolstoi, is exhibiting at Berlin a realistic picture which he calls "What is the Truth?" It represents Christ before Pilate at the moment when Pilate asks him that question. It is of the ultra-realistic type, and represents Christ as he is supposed to have appeared at that time. His clothes are dirty and disheveled, and his whole appearance is suggestive of a struggle. Several ladies, it is said, fainted in the gallery after looking at the picture. —The Prussian minister of commerce has before him a plan which has already been approved by the emperor for starting a workingmen's colony at Lichtenberg, a suburb of Berlin. It is proposed to erect there 4000 model houses and to place them at the disposal of the poor people at the monthly rental of $5. The houses are valued at 4000 marks and the cheap rental stands in lieu of payments by installments on the property, so that the tenant or his family enters into ownership of the house after twenty years' occupation without extra payment. —Gladstone is making a tour of Scotland, and talking politics. —Capt. Sir Richard F. Burton, the African explorer, died at Trieste Oct. 20.

JESUS AS A LABOR REFORMER.

There is not to be found in the gospel narratives any statement of Jesus commending any person for doing an honest day's work, or manifesting the least interest in lightening the toilers' burdens, or in having them fairly compensated for their work. His ideal of society, if he had any, was to have it consist of the rich on one hand, and beggars on the other. He never told a rich man to build factories, roads, and bridges, and thus furnish the idle with remunerative employment and supply the mass of people with the comforts of life; but his message to the rich was, Sell all you have and give to the poor. Then, of course, the rich would also be among the beggars and could hold out their withered hands for alms. When they were naked and cold they would be in a condition to appreciate the beatitude, "Blessed be ye poor."

Jesus told the fishermen of Galilee to leave their work and he would make them fishers of men. They did so, but they and their successors have caught only mullet-heads and suckers unto this day.

Jesus was a carpenter by trade, but he neglected to build himself a house and was constrained to declare, pathetically, "The foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the son of man hath not where to lay his head." However, he declared he was going to build some fine houses in his father's mansion in heaven for the houseless tramps who were following him. The old saying is, "Like father like son," and when the son is a carpenter and builds no houses, but is constantly bragging about what a big mansion the old man has got on the home farm, the said mansion is apt to turn out like unto the palace in the following inspired parable.

Some years ago two Irishmen settled in the woods in northern New York and built each of them a log house containing one room. Patrick was continually boasting of his father's magnificent palace in the old country. Dennis listened quietly to Patrick's glowing descriptions of his father's palace, which were sure to come whenever a group of neighbors were collected, until they became tiresome. One day, at a raising, Patrick began his usual description of his father's palace, when Dennis broke out with, "Ach, yer father's palace! I cud run me arm down the chimney and open the front door of it."

Here is Jesus's idea of an equitable transaction between employer and employed: "For the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which went out early in the morning to hire laborers into his vineyard. And when he had agreed with the laborers for a penny a day he sent them into his vineyard. And he went out about the third hour and saw others standing in the market place idle; and to them he said: Go ye also into the vineyard and whatsoever is right I will give you. And they went their way. Again he went out about the sixth and the ninth hours likewise. And about the eleventh hour he went out and found others standing; and he said unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard. And when even was come, the lord of the vineyard said unto the steward, Call the laborers and pay them their hire, beginning from the last even unto the first. And when they came which were hired about the eleventh hour they received every man a penny. And when the first came they supposed that they would receive more, and they likewise received every man a penny" (Matt. xx, 1-9).

The "denarius," here rendered penny, was worth about fifteen cents. Jesus pronounced this a fair compensation for eleven hours' work. He pronounces this not only earthly justice, but heavenly justice. This householder was like unto the kingdom of heaven. Anyone can have my chance in the kingdom of heaven. I'll stay in Oregon. The "lord of the vineyard" told his hands, "Whatever is right I will pay thee," and then turned them off with a cent and a half an hour. There was a howl over the whole country when Beecher intimated that a laboring man could live on a dollar a day, but Beecher's master, Jesus, thought eleven hours' work in the hottest part of summer was worth about fifteen cents. If that was his idea of the value of labor, no wonder he quit work and went to preaching. If he could persuade the rich to sell all they had and give the money to the poor, so long as he was remembered among the poor he was likely to make an easier living than by working at fifteen cents per day; especially if he was not sharp enough to crawl under the shade of an uncursed fig-tree, until the cool of the evening, and come in at the eleventh hour.

Let us, my beloved brethren, consider how happy it makes the angels of God to have a sinner serve the devil ten hours and begin serving the Lord at the eleventh hour. "There is more joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth than over ninety and nine just men that need no repentance." Now if we can find out just how happy God's angels are over one sinner that repenteth we can estimate how happy they are over those just men. Here it is: "What woman having ten pieces of silver, if she lose one of them, doth not light a lamp and sweep the house and seek diligently until she find it? And when she hath found it she calleth together her friends and neighbors, saying, Rejoice with me, for I have found the piece that was lost. Even so, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth" (Luke xv, 8).

The revised version explains that one of these pieces of silver was worth about fifteen cents. So you see that the angels of God have a fifteen-cent jubilee over each sinner that repenteth. That would just about buy one bunch of firecrackers. I tell you the angels of God are an enthusiastic set. They don't spare expense on great occasions. But there is more joy over the one sinner than over ninety and nine just men that need no repentance. Hence the exuberant joy experienced over one of these just men amounts to $0.0015! Fifteen-thousandths of a cent.

Moral 1: When labor is only fifteen cents per day, and they also pay fifteen cents for the last hour, don't over-exert yourself to get at work early.

Moral 2: The same of the kingdom of God. The last shall be first and the first last.

Milwaukee, Or.

D. PRIESTLEY.

THE PACIFIC NATIONALIST CLUB.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Permit me to say a few words regarding your editorial in last week's issue of FREETHOUGHT bearing on the differences existing in the Nationalist movement of this city.

"Mr. Cator's candidacy has split the Pacific Nationalist Club"—not at all. Some members objected to ethical readings, essays on kindergartens, Christian Socialism, etc., at the public meetings of the club and wanted to confine the limit of essays and discussions to purely politico-economic subjects, while others thought all questions of an advanced and reformatory nature were legitimate subjects for discussion in a Nationalist meeting. There existed further some personal differences among the membership of the club which made harmony a much-desired element; and while there was at no time an open rupture between the membership, it was thought best for the interest of the movement and the members to separate. Those who resigned will at once form a new club.

"Mr. C. F. Burgman declares for Cator and Reform." If I were domiciled in Mr. Cator's district I would vote for him. In the advocacy of advanced ideas I think him head and shoulders above his opponents. That is as far as I have gone into politics this election. As for having joined the "Reform Democracy," well, no, not at present; the company is too mixed.

Yours fraternally, CHAS. F. BURGMAN.

HERBERT SPENCER will contribute the opening article for the November number of the Popular Science Monthly. It is on "The Origin of Music," and extends the discussion in his essay on "The Origin and Function of Music," opposing Darwin's view that all music is developed from amatory sounds. A criticism by the late Mr. Gurney is also replied to in this article.

COLONEL INGERSOLL was refused the use of the Academy of Music in Philadelphia to deliver his lecture on "Art and Morality," for the benefit of the veteran poet Walt Whitman. The managers declared that the place could not be used by Infidels or Atheists. The colonel will speak in Horticultural Hall, October 31.

A MONUMENT to Horace Seaver was unveiled at Forest Hills cemetery, Roxbury, Mass., September 30. The structure is of granite, fifteen feet in height, and was erected at a cost of nearly $1,300, contributed by the many friends of the deceased editor.

Remsburg's Lecture Appointments.

J. E. Remsburg left Kansas on his tour to the Pacific coast, September 15. He will reach California about the last of this month. His appointments for this state, as far as arranged, are as follows:

Colusa.....	Oct 30	Snelling.....	Nov 13
Sacramento.....	Oct 31	Hornitos.....	Nov 14
Michigan Bluffs.....	Nov 1, 2	Easton.....	Nov 15
Grass Valley.....	Nov 3	Fresno.....	Nov 16
Stockton.....	Nov 4	Hanford.....	Nov 17, 18
Santa Rosa.....	Nov 5	Tulare.....	Nov 19
Ukiah.....	Nov 6	Los Angeles.....	Nov 20
San Francisco.....	Nov 7	Fallbrook.....	Nov 21
San Miguel.....	Nov 8, 9	Bernardo.....	Nov 22
Monterey.....	Nov 10	San Diego.....	Nov 23
Gilroy.....	Nov 11	San Bernardino.....	Nov 25 26
Merced.....	Nov 12

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION,

R. B. WESTBROOK, PRESIDENT.

F. C. MENDE, TREASURER. IDA C. CRADDOCK, COR. SEC'Y.
BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. Westbrook.....1707 Oxford st., Philadelphia.
E. B. Foote, Jr.....120 Lexington ave., New York.
T. B. Wakeman.....93 Nassau st., New York.
J. E. Remsburg.....Oak Mills, Kansas.
Juliet H. Severance.....Milwaukee, Wisconsin.
F. C. Mende.....1814 Green st., Philadelphia.
Ida C. Craddock, S. E. corner of Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia.

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION CONGRESS.

In response to an invitation which we extended to the editors of the American Sentinel and to the officers of the National Religious Liberty Association, we are happy to announce that we may expect to have the pleasure of an address from Prof. J. O. Corliss, corresponding secretary of the National Religious Liberty Association. We need not remind our friends how persistently the above organizations are protesting against Sunday laws, and, in fact, against the whole scheme of the National Reform party. It is true that the American Sentinel and the National Religious Liberty Association are swayed by different motives from ourselves. They observe Saturday as Sabbath—although they would not enforce its observance upon others. Their impelling motive is to uphold their Christian doctrines, while ours is to uphold the principles of Freethought. But, in the matter of total separation of church and state, we stand shoulder to shoulder. Why should we not therefore join forces? Our Constitution provides for the admission of societies auxiliary to the American Secular Union, where they pledge themselves to uphold the Nine Demands and to co-operate with us; and it leaves them perfectly free otherwise.

Whether the National Religious Liberty Association will see its way clear to becoming such an auxiliary to the American Secular Union, remains to be seen. At all events, we bespeak for Professor Corliss and for what he has to say to us, a cordial welcome from all true Liberals. In union is strength. And, since his association and ours are working toward the same end—religious liberty—it does seem as though we ought to help each other, however our respective isms may differ.

IDA C. CRADDOCK, Cor. Sec'y A. S. U.

Philadelphia, October 13, 1890.

PROGRAMME—FOURTEENTH ANNUAL CONGRESS.

While we are not prepared to give an exact list of the exercises at the coming Congress, we herewith furnish some information that may be of interest to our friends.

The Congress will assemble on Friday evening, October 31, 1890, in the Grand Opera House at Portsmouth, O. President Westbrook will call the meeting to order, and announce certain committees. An address of welcome will be delivered by J. L. Truthart, president of the local Union, and an original poem will be read by Lawyer Searl on the same subject—to both of which President Westbrook will make a reply. The secretary's report will then be read, at the close of which she will deliver an address on organization. This will be the keynote of the Convention; and it is very desirable that our friends be present on this occasion.

On Saturday morning, at nine o'clock, the election of officers and other business will claim the attention of the Congress; and on Saturday afternoon there will be a general discussion of the best methods of promoting the objects of the American Secular Union—a discussion which will consist of short speeches. This, of course, will be open to all. Dr. Henrietta P. Westbrook will read a short paper on "Common Sense." On Saturday evening an address will be delivered by Mrs. M. A. Freeman on "The Battle for Bread;" and another address will be delivered by Judge C. B. Waite, probably on "God in the Constitution." Dr. Paul Carus, editor of the "Open Court," and Lawyer Geeting, of Chicago, will also deliver short addresses.

On Sunday morning, addresses will be delivered by Rabbi David Philipson, of Cincinnati, and by the well-known lecturer,

W. F. Jamieson. On Sunday afternoon President Westbrook will deliver an address on "The Bible in Public Schools," and will be followed by the well-known New York lawyer and philosophical writer, T. B. Wakeman. On Sunday evening addresses will be delivered by L. K. Washburn, of the "Boston Investigator," on "The Sunday Question," and by Charles Watts, of Canada, editor of "Secular Thought," on "The Church and the Throne."

Other addresses will be made by various speakers whom we are not yet prepared to announce; and the above programme will be subject to alterations and emendations, should it be found necessary to transfer any speaker or speakers from one evening to another, etc. We have not yet received answers to the invitations given to Dr. McGlynn and Professor Adler.

Fine musical selections, both vocal and instrumental, will be furnished at each session, through the enterprise and liberality of our Portsmouth friends.

We are sorry to announce that Colonel Ingersoll will not be present. He has not delivered a lecture for nearly five years; and the present state of his health, as well as his business engagements, will not permit him to make the journey to Portsmouth.

Through the efforts of our friends in Portsmouth and Chicago we have succeeded in obtaining reduced rates on railroads running to the Congress; and these reductions are obtainable by all who attend the Congress, whether members or otherwise.

Friends leaving Chicago for the Congress will find it to their advantage to go by the B. & O., as this road charges but $14.75 for the round trip, and does not compel those purchasing tickets at this rate to go all at the same time on one ticket, as other roads do, but will sell separate tickets, so that members who may be delayed to a later train can still have the advantage of the reduced fare. Those who wish to get their tickets at this reduction should consult Mr. A. M. Freeman, 402 West Madison street, Chicago, by mail or in person.

Our Portsmouth friends inform us that the Eastern, Central, and Southern railroad lines (the Western Passenger Association has declined to enter the pool) will grant us a reduction of two-thirds the regular fare on our homeward tickets, provided we comply with the following conditions:

1. Each person desiring the reduction must purchase a first-class ticket Portsmouth, Ohio, for which he will pay the regular fare; and upon request the ticket agent will, at the time he buys the ticket, give him a printed certificate of purchase properly filled up and signed by said ticket agent.
2. If through tickets cannot be procured at the starting-point the traveler must purchase to the most convenient point where through tickets can be obtained, and repurchase through to Portsmouth, requesting a certificate from the ticket agent at the point where the repurchase is made.
3. Tickets for the return journey will be sold by the ticket agent at Portsmouth, O., at one-third the highest limited fare, only to those holding certificates (referred to above) signed by the ticket agent at the point where through ticket to Portsmouth was purchased, and countersigned by Ida C. Craddock, Secretary of the American Secular Union, certifying that the holder has been in regular attendance at the Portsmouth Congress.
4. It is absolutely necessary that such a certificate be procured by each traveler, as it proves that full fare has been paid for the journey to Portsmouth, and that the purchaser is therefore entitled to the excursion fare returning. It will also determine the route via which the ticket for the return journey should be issued.
5. On some of the roads tickets for the return journey will be furnished only on certificates procured not more than three days before the meeting assembles, nor later than three days after the commencement of the meeting, and will be available for continuous passage only; no stop over privileges being allowed on tickets sold at less than full fares. Certificates will not be honored unless presented within three days after the date of the adjournment of the Congress.
6. Ticket agents will be instructed that the excursion fares will not be available unless the holders of certificates are properly identified, as above described, by Ida C. Craddock, Secretary of the American Secular Union, on the certificate.
7. These certificates are not transferable.
8. The reduction on the return journey will apply only to the point at which the traveler's through ticket was purchased to Portsmouth on his way to the Congress.
9. (Very important.) No refund of fare will be made on any account whatever because of failure on your part to obtain a certificate. Should you neglect to obtain a certificate as the above conditions provide, you will be obliged to pay full fare both ways.

10. Last, but not least, it is recommended that those who wish to obtain certificates shall arrange to be at the ticket office a half hour before trains start, in order to receive proper attention from the ticket agent.

Several hotels in Portsmouth have reduced their rates for those attending the American Secular Union Congress. The Briggs House will charge two dollars per day, and several of the other hotels will charge only one dollar per day.

We hope that our friends everywhere will make a special effort to be present at the Portsmouth Congress. This Convention will be a turning-point in our history; and it behooves all good Liberals to strengthen the hands of the A. S. U. Congress, either in person or by representation through delegates. With the more thorough and widespread organization which this Congress, it is hoped, will secure, Liberalism can accomplish wonders this coming year; without better organization than we now have, we may as well resign ourselves, with closed eyes and folded hands, to be pushed to the wall by the encroaching ecclesiastical party.

Which shall it be, dear friends? It all depends on yourselves, whether the cause of intellectual and religious freedom shall be helped or hindered for the coming year. With your aid—financial, personal, or by special delegation—we can make this a red-letter Congress in the annals of the American Secular Union. Will you not one and all help?

R. B. WESTBROOK, President A. S. U.
IDA C. CRADDOCK, Cor. Sec. A. S. U.

Philadelphia, Oct. 6, 1890.

THE CAUSE IN WASHINGTON.

RELIGIOUS EXERCISES IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—While a carefully prepared presentation of the law and the facts, backed by arguments, and appeals to their sense of justice, have resulted in the cessation of religious exercises in most of our public schools; yet there are a number of places in the state where the school boards are wilful, stubborn, defiant, and in some districts the teachers have resorted to every mean, petty persecution of the children of those parents who have made protests against the injustice of forcing their children to daily repeat the Lord's prayer.

To end this, a case must be decided of sufficient moment to be generally commented on by the press throughout the state; failing in this a test case before the courts is an absolute necessity.

The directors of the Washington Secular Union have decided that appeal shall be made to the school board of this city (Seattle), as we have discovered that one of the teachers compels the children to recite the Lord's prayer in concert. We desire to resort to every laudable means to, if possible, avoid litigation. If this city school board refuse our request then we have no resource but the courts. But we are hopeful of their compliance with right, justice, and the law, and that the publicity we can give their decision will induce all the law-defying teachers to reform.

SUNDAY LAWS.—Rev. Wilbur Crafts, the able, fanatical secretary of the National Sabbath Union (with abundance of funds—for the fanatics back up their opinions with their cash), has been in the state making his headquarters in Tacoma. He is very subtle, and sends out instructions to his emissaries in all the cities of the state, how to use underhand schemes to favor their designs, realizing it is contrary alike to the letter and spirit and constitution to make religious laws, they make catspaws of the barbers and store clerks; the cry is, Oh, dear no! it is not a religious movement, religion has nothing to do with it, it is merely to insure to the poor tired workers the needed rest on the Lord's day.

We are now in the midst of a big fight. The barbers, finding they could not obtain the passage of an ordinance by the city council to enforce Sunday closing, fell back (at dictation of Crafts' emissaries) on an old territorial statute. They arrested three barbers for keeping open shop on Sunday. Two of them were scared into paying $25 and costs. Mr. Samuel Christopher, a Liberal and member of the Washington Secular Union, fought the issue, and as in duty bound the Union resolved to defend him in his constitutional rights.

Our president and Mr. McDivitt appeared before Justice Miller, changed venue to Justice Rivers's court, and entered de-murrer and motion to discharge the prisoner; first, because under the complaint he had not committed any offense against the laws; second, that the statute under which the complaint was made was repealed by the adoption of the constitution which guarantees "absolute freedom of religious sentiment, belief, and worship to every individual, and no one shall be disturbed in person or property on account of religion."

On Thursday the case was argued, Mr. Richard Winsor making a most able, eloquent, and convincing speech. On Monday, Judge Rivers, who had reserved his decision, gave judgment in our favor and Mr. Christopher was discharged, it being decided that the wording of the statute did not apply to a person following his trade, craft, or avocation, but only to opening places of business for trade, that is, sale or barter.

Rage filled the hearts of the goody-goody, pious bigots. On Monday the members of three leading clothing firms were arrested. One of them, H. Hershberg, is a member of our Union. All declare intention to fight the case. We have the three most able and eloquent lawyers of the city retained for the defense: Richard Winsor, Jas. H. Lewis, and Gen. J. B. Metcalf. They moved to dismiss the complaints on three grounds: First, Because the Sunday closing law is contrary to the spirit of the constitution. Second, Because it is contrary to a clause of the constitution, which expressly exempts this law from being in force. Third, Because cases of this kind must be founded on an information filed by the prosecuting attorney the same as if they were before a grand jury.

Judge Miller set the trial for next Friday, at 3 p.m. There is very great interest manifest in the case. We have law, reason, right, common sense, justice, all on our side; but we have the bitter prejudice and fanatical zeal of Sunday devotees in opposition. They are united, well-organized, have pledged ample means and generous support to the district attorney in conducting the prosecution (persecution) and have provided, at their own cost, able associate counsel to assist him.

We are repelling the malignant onslaught of the enemy, not in behalf of individuals only, but principle; not alone to secure free exercise of our constitutional rights in this city of Seattle; but of all people throughout the state.

Never was the necessity of earnest co-operation and efficient organization of Liberals made more apparent. What are you going to do about it?

C. B. REYNOLDS,
Secretary Washington Secular Union.

THE RELIGIOUS STATUS OF CANADA.

In a letter to the late Secularist Convention at Toronto, E. M. Macdonald, editor of the "Truth Seeker," wrote:

From the standpoint of an outsider, I should say that, religiously, the dominion is about twenty-five years ahead of its position some four years ago, when you located there, and I congratulate you. Even the Roman Catholics of Quebec are growing in Secular grace, and will soon be "on praying ground and pleading terms," as the Methodists—of whom you have too many with you—are wont to say. A friend of mine who was born near the city of Quebec, and who was educated for the priesthood, but left the church to become an inventor and a business man—a true type of a Secularist—revisited his boyhood's home recently, and when he returned to New York he told me this story. In the parish where live his relatives the people have begun to criticize their priest, and to question whether all his acts are of infinite wisdom. Among other things they wanted to know recently was what became of all their money. The tithes which the law gives him he could have, they said; but he was constantly demanding more, and the expenditure of this surplus it was their right to examine. So they elected two of the boldest of the questioners to the Board of Trustees, which is supposed to supervise the financial affairs of the church. These embryo heretics asked for the account books, and were refused. "The trustees," said the priest, "have always accepted my statements, and so must you." The trustees instituted law proceedings. Then the priest preached a sermon on "ingratitude," and violently denounced the two meddlers. They gave him the alternative of retracting or standing a libel suit. He retracted.

Then he called upon them and told them that unless they ceased their "persecution" he would call down upon them the wrath of God, and hinted at anathemas and curses and excommunication. At this the trustees actually laughed, and told him that he was some years behind the times; that God was not now the servant of the priests, neither was the priest the dispenser of heaven's displeasure. The priest appealed to the bishop, and the bishop wrote little pastoral letters to his recalcitrant children. But the trustees persisted, finally obtained the books, found that the priest had used the parish funds to build stables for his horses and for other private purposes, and made him refund.

This happened in the year of the Lord 1890 in French Canada, near Quebec! What will happen in the next century, when Upper and Lower Canada may be sovereign states in the American Union?

THE NEW "ORDER OF JESUS."

We had occasion to remark, a few weeks ago, that there were Freethinkers who regarded the Salvation Army as a vulgar copy of the Order of Jesus. Allowing for the differences in doctrine, the Booth organization is modeled on that of Ignatius Loyola. Even the "social" successes (real or delusive) of the Salvation Army are more than paralleled by those of the Jesuits, who managed to drill anarchic savages into order and decency in several parts of the world. What "the Army" lacks, and is ever likely to lack, is the learning of the Jesuits. Voltaire himself, to say nothing of other great heretics, was educated in one of their schools; and although he afterwards fought their creed with matchless skill, he never failed to praise the superior education they imparted to their pupils.

For a striking proof of our estimate of the Salvation Army, we refer the reader to the "Orders and Regulations" issued by Booth in the form of a penny pamphlet. This singular publication will convince any one open to conviction that the "general" feels he has his cattle well in hand, and can not only drive them where he pleases, but flick them smartly on any part from ears to hoof with his long-reaching whip. His aim is to subject them absolutely to his personal despotism. Every part of their lives is to be regulated. Not only the public, but the private—not only the religious, but the political, social, and domestic—conduct of his followers is to be rigorously and minutely determined for them. He is to be the head, and they are to be the tail.

First of all, as with the Jesuits, the Army is to be everything to its soldiers. They must court and marry within the ranks. "No soldier," says Booth, "should commence courting with any one who is not already a soldier, or unwilling [he means willing] to become one." He goes to the length of dictating: "Should a soldier become engaged to an officer who afterwards gives up or forfeits his or her commission, the soldier would be justified in breaking off the engagement." Personal honor and plighted troth are to be trampled under foot for the good of the Army. The dearest affections are to be governed, or even killed, by "orders and regulations." It is evidently the purpose of General Booth to breed Salvationists from Salvation fathers and mothers, and he zealously guards against any cross breeding.

According to the Apostle the faithful are to "salute one another with a holy kiss." But Booth is superior to the inspired writer, and the Bib'e, like everything else, must give way to his requirements. No Salvationist is to "kiss anyone of the opposite sex unless it is a relative or some person to whom he is engaged." And perhaps the order is a wise one. The general may know the inflammability of his soldiers, and remember the liveliness of the "all-night meetings" they once indulged in. Religious and sexual excitement are very closely related; and a kiss, which to a sober person may be a mere salutation, is apt with others to be the gate of concupiscence. Given a Salvationist all aflame with love for Jesus, and a kiss may send him God knows where.

Salvationists are to wear "wool or merino next the skin all the year round." This is sensible advice, but the soldiers must be very ignorant if they require it. They are also to eat "brown bread and good vegetables" to keep their blood cool, but this is largely nullified by the recommendation of "eggs."

Cardinal Newman, even in his unregenerate Protestant days, preached that the Christian was only a passenger through the world. Booth inculcates the same idea. "Though still living in the world," he says, the Salvationist "is not of it, and he has, in this respect, no more business with its politics—that is, the public management of affairs—than he has with its pleasures." The Salvationist is not a citizen of this world. He is not to trouble his head about its business. But the general has his own notions, and when he wants them carried out he will issue his manifesto, and every soldier is then expected to "act in harmony with the rules and regulations laid down for him by his superior officers."

This charming aspect of the Salvation Army may partially account for its subvention by wealthy Christians. If half-a-million of working people, who might otherwise be Radicals, are to hold aloof from politics except when Booth orders them to vote solid, their support might be very valuable on particular occasions, and meanwhile they are subtracted from the popular side in the great battle between the "haves" and the "have-nots." Every rich Conservative is a fool if he does not send a yearly check to General Booth.

The Boothites are told to "surrender themselves to the guidance" of their officers, who are all appointed, shifted, and cashiered by the general. They are bidden to "rely on the wisdom and goodness" of these Booth-appointed officers, and to believe that "they have the spirit of God, and will only command what is right." That is, Booth has the spirit of God, and will only command what is right; and as "'tis he himself who says it," who on earth will entertain a doubt?

It appears that the soldiers held meetings for the consideration of business affairs, but this led to "discussions and disputes," and such meetings are henceforth prohibited. "There is no room in the army," Booth says, "for people who want to vote or argue or get their own way." This is on the face of it despotic, but in Booth's eyes it is "compatible with the largest amount of personal freedom." His soldiers have "the fullest liberty to be good," and the judge of what is good is William Booth, who is inspired by "the spirit of God." This spirit also inspires him what to do with all the cash.

Lest the Boothites should take to thinking, the wily general prescribes what they should read. They may "read with profit" the following: "The Bible, the War Cry, and our own publications." These contain all the necessary pabulum for salvationist minds, and as all except the Bible are published by Booth they may be read with "profit" to the general as well as his troops.

Such are the "orders and regulations" of this pious despotism, so far as they interest outsiders. Booth is more than the pope of the Salvation Army. The vicar of Christ at Rome is infallible, but is after all unable to do anything without his holy council of cardinals. The vicar of Christ whose headquarters are at the back of our own office is far more potent within his more limited scope. He is absolute. The elective principle is unknown in his army. He is self-appointed and he appoints everyone else. He holds all the power, all the income, and all the property. Beside him there is none. He is the head of the army in every sense of the word; he thinks for it and wills for it, down to the smallest details of the battle, the bivouac, and the barracks. His followers are his tail. They are all wagged, and by keeping his personal clutch on the property he prevents them from wagging him. The whole thing is a splendid tribute to his power of organization. But after all he does not organize independent men and women, and it is comparatively easy to organize sheep.—G. W. FORTÉ, in the London Freethinker.

THESE are the signs of the times: Rich idlers amusing themselves at Newport and Tuxedo; poor workers burying themselves in coal mines. Young men and women riding across country after a bag that smells like a fox; old men and women picking decayed food out of garbage cans. Lap dogs driving through Central Park to take the air; children stripping tobacco stems in garrets. Clergymen traveling to Europe for pleasure; real preachers of real gospel marching, with lock-step, in the penitentiary. Society women picking up millionaires at watering-places or princes in Europe; street-walkers picking up whomsoever they can along the Bowery. Piety in the White House enjoying the fruits of bribery; Infidelity in the tenement houses enduring the punishment of uprightness.—Hugh O. Pentecost.

JEHOVAH'S POLITICAL PLATFORM.

Whereas, I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage, and am steering thee to the land of Canaan; where there is milk and honey; and every man shall have forty acres and a mule; and

Whereas, I, the Lord thy God, am a jealous God and opposed to competition in the deity business, insisting upon a monopoly of admiration and worship; and

Whereas, I visit the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me, and thus get square with the whole family; and

Whereas, In six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, including sin and sorrow, and loafed the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and made the saloons close up; therefore be it

Resolved, That thou shalt have no other gods before me, inasmuch as I am the great and only original, and all others are base imitations.

Resolved, That Jehovah vieweth with alarm the constant encroachments of stone gods, wooden gods, mud gods, and little tin gods on wheels upon the prerogatives and perquisites of the big boss God, and therefore declareth that thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth; thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them.

Resolved, That the Sabbath day shall be remembered and kept holy and devoted exclusively to the giving of taffy to Jehovah, who is a vain God and pointeth with pride to his record on the labor question, which lieth in the first chapter of Genesis. As the Lord made everything in a six-days go-as-you-please race with nothing, thou shalt do no work on the seventh day.

Resolved, That the time-honored principles of eternal justice which were recognized by men before the Lord thy God was invented be reaffirmed and included in this platform for the sake of appearances and to give countenance to the preceding resolutions, as follows:

Resolved, That thou shalt honor thy father and thy mother.

Resolved, That thou shalt not kill; provided, however, that the Lord may suspend this commandment when he deems it advisable to have Philistines, and people who disbelieve in him as the only original God, slaughtered for his eternal glory.

Resolved, That thou shalt not steal; but, for the sake of harmony, the Lord declareth that plundering the Amalekite is not stealing.

Resolved, That thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.

Resolved, That thou shalt not covet anything that is thy neighbor's.

Resolved, That the foregoing platform and resolutions be lithographed and published by Secretary Moses under the title of "Ten Commandments."—Liberty.

CAPTURING A PRIEST.

To the Editors of Freethought:

I rise to explain the denouement of San Diego's latest sensation, to wit: the priest named Carden, who was recently deposed from his "sacred office" by the Catholic bishop of this diocese for contending for the "faith once delivered to the saints," against the Freethought champion, Dr. J. L. York. Having failed to get employment within the Catholic "fold" in Oregon, the said priest telegraphed to the San Diego Liberal Union to know if his services would be accepted to lecture for that organization. The Liberals in reply agreed to give him the net proceeds of one lecture to be given under their auspices, with promise of other engagements, if mutually agreeable.

You may well imagine, Mr. Editor, that this news created a commotion in our city. The Liberals were jubilant; the Catholics overcome with amazement. Such an unprecedented event as a Catholic priest bursting his prison bars was well calculated to excite alarm among the "faithful." Rumors were current that this "stray sheep" would be captured under a writ of non compos mentis immediately on his arrival. The president of the Liberal Union, a millionaire, offered to back him with one hundred thousand dollars, if necessary. Four delegates were appointed to meet the fugitive from clerical bonds at the steamboat landing, and escort him to one of the best hotels in the city. We went with an elegant turnout and carried the captive triumphantly to the hotel, where others were waiting to give him a cordial greeting. It was an enjoyable occasion.

When the time appointed for the lecture arrived throngs of people blocked the sidewalk in front of the Louis Opera House long before the doors were opened. The house was soon filled to its utmost seating capacity. The best musical talent in the city had been procured, to add charms to the occasion. The floral decorations were beautiful, and San Diego's "capital had gathered there her beauty and her chivalry, and bright the lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men." The awakening came soon. We thought we had captured a priest, and the priest thought he had captured us. He took us for fools, and we had taken him for a gentleman and a scholar, and we were all mistaken. He spoke about fifteen minutes in a stammering school-boy fashion. The burden of his remarks were apologies to his Catholic brethren for being where he was, that the bishops refused to give him employment as a priest, that he was compelled to come to the Liberals or starve; but he had not changed his religion—he was still a Catholic, unappreciated by his bishops. He also said bishops here had too much power over their priests, owing to the nature of our government, the only remedy for which would be the establishment of canon law in America.

As canon law is exactly what we do not want, the Liberals decline to enter into any further engagement with the wily priest. We have learned one lesson, however, that priests, like the festive fleas indigenous to our soil, are not easily corralled. When you think you have got them safe you find they are not there. Educated from childhood in superstition, they know nothing else, and can conceive of nothing else. Truly they are to be pitied.

San Diego, Cal. Yours for liberty, MARY A. WHITE.

THE PUTNAM-JONES DEBATE.

Of the debate at Summerville, Or., between S. P. Putnam and the Rev. Mr. Jones, the Summerville "Annotator" says:

"The controversy on the divinity of the Bible was conducted in a manner creditable to both the participants. The reputation which preceded Mr. S. P. Putnam as an eloquent debater made some feel dubious that Mr. Jones would be able to entertain the Californian to the full extent of the situation. We were agreeably pleased at the ability and earnestness with which Mr. Jones maintained his position. The six nights' debate was attended by a large number of our citizens, with interest and instruction. The contention over the divine origin of the Bible—a theme so sacred and consolatory to so many confiding Christians—could not be investigated and discussed as to its correctness and authenticity, by so keen, able, and aggressive an assailant as S. P. Putnam, without disturbing, perhaps in some instances shocking, the comforting credulity of the Bible-loving people. This religio-mental tremor that those full of faith may have been shaken by, was unavoidable. It was both new and strange to some of them.

"But the affair would have closed without adverse comment had not an injudicious and unwarrantable personal attack been made upon one of the debaters, and had not the indiscreet authors of some ill-advised, and in some instances wholly unauthorized, resolutions, made the closing exercises the opportunity for perpetrating something for which an apology is due both the debaters and the public, whose privileges and rights were invaded, as is conceded by considerate and courteous people who were and are yet opposed to the humanizing of the Bible."

S. P. Putnam's Lecture Appointments.

Fort Bragg, Cal. Nov. 1, 2 Porterville, Cal. . . . Nov. 12, 13, 14
Boulder Creek, Cal. . . . Nov. 9, 10 Tulare, Cal. Nov. 15, 16

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.
PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; 7 ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60, $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50; fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botches, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

MAGIC LANTERNS AND STEREOPTICONS

afford the best and cheapest means of object teaching for Colleges, Schools and Sunday Schools. Our assortment of Views, illustrating art, science, history, religion and travel, is immense. For Home Amusement and Parlor Entertainment, etc., nothing can be found as instructive or amusing, while Church Entertainments, Public Exhibitions and Popular Illustrated Lectures—did Holiday present—We are the largest manufacturers and dealers, and ship to all parts of the world. If you wish to know how to order, how to conduct Parlor Entertainments for pleasure, or Public Exhibitions, etc., for MAKING MONEY, send us your name and address on a postal card (naming this paper), and we will mail you our 208 PAGE BOOK FREE.
McALLISTER, Manufacturer Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y. City.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

HONEST STATEMENT.

"Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N. J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Carrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles M. d.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

ON HAVING DISEASES.

The Disastrous Effect of Reading Medical Works and the Cure Therefor.

It is a most extraordinary thing, but I never read a patent medicine advertisement without being impelled to the conclusion that I am suffering from the particular disease therein dealt with in its most virulent form. The diagnosis seems in every case to correspond exactly with all the sensations that I have ever felt.

I remember going to the British museum one day to read up the treatment for some slight ailment of which I had a touch—hay fever I fancy it was. I got down the book, and read all I came to read; and then, in an unthinking moment, I idly turned the leaves, and began to indolently study diseases generally. I forgot which was the first distemper I plunged into—some fearful, devastating scourge, I know—and, before I had glanced half down the list of premonitory symptoms, it was borne in upon me that I had fairly got it.

I sat for a while, frozen with horror; and then, in the listlessness of despair, I again turned over the pages. I came to typhoid fever—read the symptoms—discovered that I had typhoid fever, must have had it for months without knowing it—wondered what else I had got; turned up St. Vitus' dance—found, as I expected, that I had that, too—began to get interested in my case, and determined to sift it to the bottom, and so started alphabetically—read up ague, and learned that I was sickening for it, and that the acute stage would commence in about another fortnight. Bright's disease, I was relieved to find, I had only in a modified form, and, so far as that was concerned, I might live for years. Cholera I had, with severe complications; and diphtheria I seemed to have been born with. I plodded conscientiously through the twenty-six letters, and the only malady I could conclude I had not got was housemaid's knee.

I felt rather hurt about this at first; it seemed somehow to be a sort of slight. Why hadn't I got housemaid's knee? Why this invidious reservation? After a while, however, less grasping feelings prevailed. I reflected that I had every other known malady in the pharmacology, and I grew less selfish, and determined to do without housemaid's knee. Gout, in its most malignant stage, it would appear, had seized me without my being aware of it; and zymosis I had evidently been suffering with from boyhood. There were no more diseases after zymosis, so I concluded there was nothing else the matter with me.

I sat and pondered. I thought what an interesting case I must be from a medical point of view, what an acquisition I should be to a class! Students would have no need to "walk the hospitals" if they had me. I was a hospital in myself. All they need do would be to walk round me, and, after that, take their diploma.

Then I wondered how long I had to live. I tried to examine myself. I felt my pulse. I could not at first feel any pulse at all. Then all of a sudden it seemed to start off. I pulled out my watch and timed it. I made it a hundred and forty-seven to the minute. I tried to feel my heart. I could not feel my heart. It had stopped beating. I have since been induced to come to the opinion that it must have been there all the time, and must have been beating, but I cannot account for it. I patted myself all over my front, from what I call my waist up to my head, and I went a bit round each side, and a little way up the back. But I could not feel or hear anything. I tried to look at my tongue. I stuck it out as far as ever it would go, and I shut one eye, and tried to examine it with the other. I could only see the tip, and the only thing that I could gain from that was to feel more certain than before that I had scarlet fever.

I had walked into that reading room a happy, healthy man. I crawled out a decrepit wreck.

I went to my medical man. He is an old chum of mine, and feels my pulse, and looks at my tongue, and talks about the weather, all for nothing, when I fancy I'm ill; so I thought I would do him a good turn by going to him now. "What a doctor wants," I said, "is practice. He shall have me. We will get more practice out of me than out of seventeen hundred of your ordinary, commonplace patients, with only one or two diseases each." So I went straight up and saw him, and he said: "Well, what's the matter with you?"

I said: "I will not take up your time, dear boy, with telling you what is the matter with me. Life is brief, and you might pass away before I had finished. But I will tell you what is not the matter with me. I have not got housemaid's knee. Why I have not got housemaid's knee I cannot tell you; but the fact remains that I have not got it. Everything else, however, I have got it."

And I told him how I came to discover it all.

Then he opened me and looked down me, and clutched hold of my wrist, and then he hit me over the chest when I wasn't expecting it—a cowardly thing to do, I call it—and immediately afterward butted me with the side of his head. After that he sat down and wrote out a prescription, and folded it up and gave it me, and I put it in my pocket and went out.

I did not open it. I took it to the nearest chemist's and handed it in. The man read it and then handed it back.

He said he didn't keep it.

I said:

"You are a chemist?"

He said:

"I am a chemist. If I was a co-operative store and family hotel combined I might be able to oblige you. Being only a chemist hampers me."

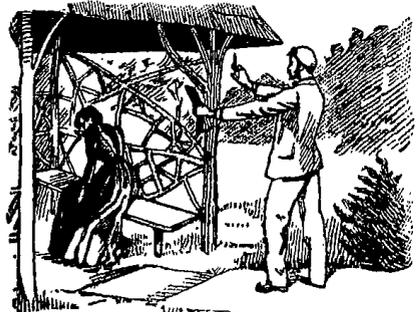

I read the prescription. It ran:

- 1 lb. beefsteak, with
- 1 pt. bitter beer
- every 6 hours.
- 1 ten mile walk every morning.
- 1 bed at 11 sharp every night.

And don't stuff up your head with things you don't understand.

I followed the directions with the happy result—speaking for myself—that my life was preserved and is still going on.—Lawrence K. Jerome's Three Men in a Boat.

She Never Did Forgive Him After That.

Patience Mantelpiece (after drying her eyes)—Well, Jack, I will try to forgive you—

Jack (an artist, who has been utilizing the graceful pose)—Oh, hold on! Not yet; just wait one minute!—Life.

The Humboldt Library

—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forum of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
8. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
7. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry
12. Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
13. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
14. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion
15. Longevity. Prolonging life. John Gardner, M.D.
16. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
18. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
20. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kalley Miller.
21. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
22. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
23. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
24. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
25. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
26. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
27. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
28. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
30. The Study of Words.
31. Richard Chenevix Trench.
32. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R.A. Proctor.
33. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
34. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
35. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
36. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
37. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
38. (Geological Sketches.
39. Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
40. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
41. Current Discussions in Science. W.M. Williams.
42. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
43. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
44. The Dawn of History.
45. C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
46. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
47. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
48. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
49. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
50. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange.
51. Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
52. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
53. Animal Automatism, Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
54. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
55. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
56. Illusions.
57. James Sully.
58. The Origin of Species. Two Double Numbers.
59. Charles Darwin. 30 cents each.
60. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
61. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
62. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
63. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, LL.D.
64. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
65. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
66. Technical Education, Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
67. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
68. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
69. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
70. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencer.
71. Archaeology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
72. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
73. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
74. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
75. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
76. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
77. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
78. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
79. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
80. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
81. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
82. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
83. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
84. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
85. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson.
86. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
87. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
88. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S.S. Laurie.
89. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin)

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T. H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haeckel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen.
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present. Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life. Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Laing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whymper, Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No. 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Ritchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St.
San Francisco.
Watches Cleaned
& Warranted, $1

Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired 401f

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,
Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!
Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.
Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S F.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.
BY HELEN H. GARDENER.
Price, 50 c. Address Freethought,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Crimes Against Criminals.
By R. G. INGERSOLL.
Price, 10 Cents.
Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM
Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.
By W. R. GREG.
Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.
Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

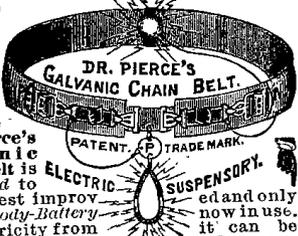

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING, USE THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 828 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

LIFE RENEWER

NONE GENUINE WITHOUT THIS SIGNATURE

Dr. Pierce's Galvanic Chain Belt is guaranteed to be the latest improved perfect Body-Battery. The electricity from it can be instantly felt by the Wearer. This celebrated Instrument will cure, with out medicine; Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Diseases of the Liver or Kidneys, Lame Back, Female Weakness, General Debility, Spinal Disease, Sexual Weakness, Impotency, Etc. Suspensory for men free with every Belt. N. B. The Electricity goes directly to all Weak Parts and restores them to Health and Vigorous Strength. For particulars call or send 4 cts. in stamps for sealed Pamphlet No. 2. Address MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COM'Y, 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal. PILES. If troubled with Hemorrhoids or Piles, send stamp for Pamphlet No. 3.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,

Hygienic Physician.

Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,

Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.

HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m.

25tf

Health AND Hygienic Works.

- Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy, $1.
Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.50.
Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer, $1.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina, Ills. $1.
Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Leu- nox Browne, F.R.C.S., 30 cents

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS AND TRACTS.

- God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.
Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.
Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-com- pelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.
God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.
Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.
Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.
Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.
The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.
Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.
The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.

OLIVER HINCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED

CURES

Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung DISEASES

By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen. Positive cure for Cancer.

26t37

Room 84, Flood B'ldg.

A HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors. The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS", 15 cents.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERY.

Located Eight Miles South of San Jacinto, Cal.

P. A. CLARK, PROPRIETOR.

A full stock of everything in the Nursery line on hand.

APPLES, PEACHES,
 PEARS, PLUMS,
 APRICOTS, NECTARINES,
 PRUNES, ALMONDS,
 WALNUTS, QUINCES, ETC.

IN ALL VARIETIES.

A fine lot of Kelsey's Japan Plums, one and two years old.

Send for price list and buy where you can get trees at living rates.

P. A. CLARK, San Jacinto, Cal.

W. M. HINTON & CO. PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS.

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Franc

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against

LIBERTY,

By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

WRITE TO ELMINA!

Please send stamp for circulars and prices of Books, Blankets, Woolen Goods, and Stocking Yarn.

Snowville is now a Money Order office. Address, E. D. SLENKER, Snowville, Va.

Standard Scientific Works

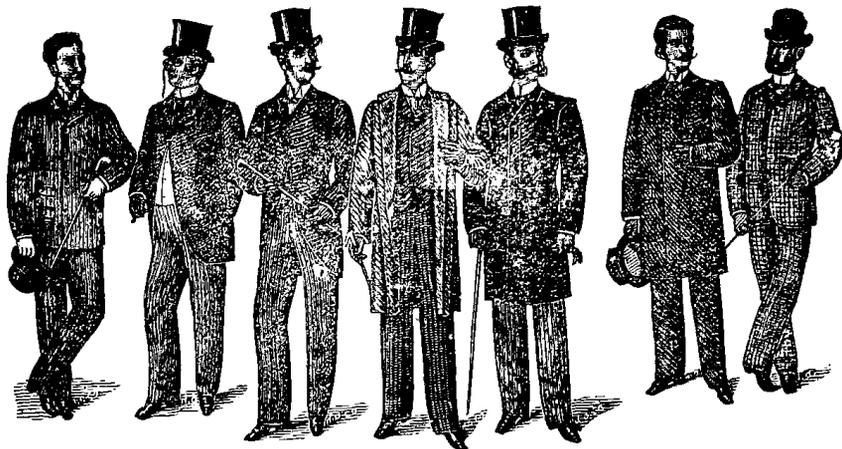

Works by Alexander Bain.
English Composition and Rhetoric.....	$1.75
Education as a Science.....	1.75
Works by Charles Darwin.
Origin of Species, 2 vols.....	$4.00
Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....	2.00
Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....	4.50
Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....	2.00
Works by J. W. Draper.
History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....	$1.75
Works by Ernst Haeckel.
The History of Creation. 2 vols.....	$5.00
Works by Huxley.
Lay Sermons.....	$1.75
The Advance of Science.....	.25
American Addresses.....	1.25
More Criticisms on Darwin.....	.50
The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....	2.00
Works by John Stewart Mill.
Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....	$4.00
On Liberty.....	1.25
Works by Richard A. Proctor.
Other Worlds than Ours.....	$1.75
Our Place among Infinities.....	1.75
Light Science for Leisure Hours.....	1.75
Works by Herbert Spencer.
Studies of Sociology.....	$1.50
First Principles.....	2.00
Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	4.00
Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	4.00
Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....	4.00
Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....	2.00
Universal Progress.....	2.00
Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....	2.00
Education.....	1.25
Organic Evolution.....	.75
Works by Andrew D. White.
Paper-Money Inflation in France.....	$.50
The Warfare of Science.....	1.00
Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
Body and Mind.....	$1.5
Responsibility in Mental Disease.....	1.50
Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
Handbook of Household Science.....	$1.75
Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....	1.75
MISCELLANEOUS.
By Asa Gray.
Darwiniana.....	$2.00
By L. L. McLaughlin.
Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....	$3.50
By C. Marcel.
Study of Languages.....	$1.25
By Lester F. Ward.
Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....	$5.00
By Frederick Overman.
A Treatise on Metallurgy.....	$5.00
B. F. G. Fairfield.
Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....	$1.25
By W. B. Carpenter.
Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....	$1.25
By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
Evolution.....	$1.50
By Sir John Lubbock.
Origin of Civilization.....	$5.00
By Charles A. Abbott.
A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....	$1.50
By Garrett P. Serviss.
Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....	$1.50
By Nathan Sheppard.
Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....	$1.50
English as She is Spoke.....	$.30
English as She is Wrote.....	.30
The Distracted Young Preacher.....	.25
Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

J A. REED.
FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR..... $25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

—BY—

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."
339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1.
Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made referred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

BRAIN AND THE BIBLE.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.
BY EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

We can recommend this as one of the most valuable works in the list of Freethought publications. Printed in large type on fine paper and elegantly bound. Price $1. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....	$ 4 0
10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....	2 0
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....	2 75
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond.....	$5, 6 00
10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....	3 00
14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....	4 00
10 karat Gold, Small Chain (for watch chain).....	3 00
14 karat Gold, Small Chain (for watch chain).....	4 50
10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....	5 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....	6 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond".....	14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....	$1.50
Six Months.....	.75
Three Months.....	.50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth $1 50.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the names of the

How He Resembled Flannel.

There have been a few, a very few, extremely High Church Episcopal clergymen in this country who appeared to think that a studied neglect of the bath was a mark

PROFESSION OF FAITH

OF A SAVOYARD VICAR.

about three hundred tons are taken out daily and shipped to San Francisco. Wm. Campbell, the superintendent, has been here for about twenty years and knows every inch of the soil and the whole lay of the land and coal. I found a hospitable welcome at his house. Both Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are good Liberals, and around their fireside there was a happy refuge from the storm. The storm and the sun had quite a battle, and at one time I was willing to bet on the sun, but about sunset the storm was on top, and at the hour for the lecture it just poured. However, Oregonians are not much scared at a storm, and a pretty good number were present, and I was quite well satisfied with the outcome. I feel as if I must come again and that fairer fortunes will prevail. But I could not find a more genial resting-place than with the Campbells, and if I always find such a splendid shelter I can stand the storm and stress of fate.

Jas. H. Cox, H. P. Styppe, D. H. Campbell, and Wm. Campbell are on the roll of Freethought; and this little camp will keep the fires of progress blazing.

Things looked dubious Saturday night. If the rain kept on there was a poor prospect of getting out either by land or sea, and I might be imprisoned for a month. But Sunday morning it was perfectly brilliant. There was scarcely a cloud in the sky, and the delicious and soul-inspiring weather continued until Tuesday morning. When they do have fine weather in Coos county they have the finest. It can't be beat. The sea and sky and the woods just sparkle with effulgence. The air is like wine. It makes the blood flow like music.

I had a good attendance at the lectures. The Liberal element at Marshfield is still in the lead, although it must be confessed that many are indifferent, and I ought to have had audiences twice as large as I did; but the welcome was cordial, and for sociability and good will Marshfield is on the white list every time. Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Garfield, Mr. and Mrs. L. Marks, W. G. Webster, Judge Hyde, Dr. C. Minnis, Mrs. Fannie M. Bates, Miss Blanche Bates, Willie Bates, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Wirth, Mrs. S. B. Cathcart, Wm. Vincamp, Wm. Barkas, the Hutchesons, J. A. Snively, L. A. Tennery, Phil DeMotte, of Roseburg; Capt. Roberts, Hall, Siglin, and Luse, and others—these make a splendid roll-call for the Secular host, and every moment of my time was pleasantly passed.

W. A. Luse is a Radical of the Radicals, who has the courage of his opinions, be they popular or otherwise, and he is as ready to criticise the Liberals as anybody else. But he is a live man, and like Michael Angelo will eventually criticise by creation and show by actual matter of fact what can be done for reform. Like myself, he is in favor of a new party with the Demands of Liberalism as the fundamental platform.

J. D. Garfield, representative-elect, is likewise pushing ahead the material interests of Marshfield. He is building a big hotel which presents an imposing appearance as one enters the city.

I have to thank W. G. Webster for favors and good fellowship which will not be forgotten.

Mrs. L. Mark still supplies the glitter of fashion to those who purchase, but Freethought does not pale its ineffectual fires. I spent the morning with L. Marks. He has been a wondrous traveler, somewhat after the fashion of Ulysses, over the countries of Europe as well as America, and has studied human nature from many a varied and romantic experience.

Anton Wirth is heart and soul in the cause, generous and ready to put his shoulder to the wheel, and it goes when such stalwart Liberalism is "on the march."

Mr. and Mrs. Hilborn are in San Francisco, and I had not the pleasure of meeting them. Miss Blanche Bates is about to attend college in San Francisco, and the golden state will welcome a Liberal, bright and enthusiastic. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder, of the Central Hotel, give the Pilgrim an entertainment that will not make him an "angel" very soon. The good things of this earth prevail.

I was pleased to meet my friend, Lawyer Bennett, who gave me such a jolly good time on my last trip.

I have to record the death of three of our band, good and true men—R. M. Hutcheson, Wm. Hall, and F. M. Garrison. They have been staunch supporters of Freethought, and to the end were courageous and unflinching. Over the grave shall bloom the flowers of memory, and the heroic life shall not pass into oblivion while the bright sea rolls its requiem.

Marshfield looks to the future. The immense quantities of coal and lumber in this country and other resources make this one of the most important and flourishing sections of Oregon. The railroads are coming in, not one, but two or three; and with the factories that must sometime be in operation, it seems as if Marshfield might be the Pittsburg of the coast.

I have hopes of all but East Marshfield, where the chief advertisement is a lonely church building which has such a tomb-like appearance in the midst of ghostly stumps that only a good old-fashioned Christian would think of settling in such a lugubrious place. It has no attractions for the Liberal.

Otherwise, I like the appearance of Marshfield and vicinity; and those who are wandering the wide earth for a location would find it a profitable journey to visit these wooded shores. But like every other place where the boom has fixed its abode there is need of plenty of cash to make the most of the opportunities.

I leave Marshfield on Tuesday for Coquille, with every indication of fair weather, and over the sparkling waters the Express glides and Marshfield disappears in the gorgeous distance with a promise and memory that will bring me back again where such good comradeship makes the work of reform a pleasure.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

CONGRESS OF THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION.

The Fourteenth Annual Congress of the American Secular Union is held at Portsmouth, Ohio, beginning on Friday evening, October 31, and continuing to the evening of Sunday, November 2. The Liberals at Portsmouth prepared a fine musical programme, and the Secular Union furnishes a good list of speakers, including Judge Westbrook, Miss Ida C. Craddock, Dr. Paul Carus, editor of the "Open Court," Judge C. B. Waite, T. B. Wakeman, Esq., L. K. Washburn, editor of the "Investigator," Rabbi David Philipson, Charles Watts, and other eminent people. That the Congress of the Union is welcomed by the people of Portsmouth seems to be assured by the following announcement in the Portsmouth "Blade:" "The Secular Unionists meet here next week. Noted men and women of letters belong to it. We may not see as they see, we may not be in accord with their views, but we can show them what hospitality is. That belongs to humanity. It is not bounded by beliefs. It is as broad and as endless as space. It is the noblest attribute of the human heart. Where it is not there is no Christianity. Where it is not there is no love. Where it is not there is no soul. Let us make it pleasant for these strangers. If they preach strange gods, go into the temple as did Paul and dispute with them. If they desire to give reason for the faith that is in them, give them respectful audience—hear them for their cause. No faith as we see it is worth the having whose bulwarks cannot withstand the most searching scrutiny. To run away from, to ignore argument from whatever source or in whatever disguise the alleged devil may come, is a confession of weakness not creditable to the faithful.”

THE FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The San Francisco Freethought Society will open its meetings for the season with a sociable and dance at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, Sunday evening, November 2. The committee has prepared an attractive musical and literary programme with which the evening's exercises will begin. Admission to gentlemen 25 cents, ladies free.

OUR friend, W. F. Jamieson, the well-known Liberal lecturer and debater, is in financial trouble. Some four years ago he settled on some government land in the San Luis valley, Colorado, and set to work to improve it. He expended hundreds of dollars for fencing, irrigating, etc., and ran in debt. During his absence on a lecture tour parties who evidently desired to despoil him of his possessions sued him, got judgment, and attached his farm. Notes which he gave to get money to pay his laborers were procured and used against him, so that now he needs $750 at once in order to save his home. He asks for loans for five years, at 7 per cent interest, in sums from ten dollars to one hundred. This will redeem his home from debt and break the grasp of the usurers. He will receipt and send a note to each contributor, and when the debt is lifted he offers to give a first mortgage to secure the notes. Express or money orders should be sent to postoffice box 366, Des Moines, Iowa. Mr. Jamieson has issued a circular setting forth the exact facts of the case, which he will doubtless forward to inquiring friends, so that they may contribute wisely and intelligently. We would be pleased to hear that Brother Jamieson is out of the toils before the close of the present month.

MOSES HARMAN'S case in the O'Neill matter was called at Leavenworth, Kan., on the 16th ult. and laid over until the second week in November. Meanwhile Mr. Harman is at liberty. The postmaster at Topeka refuses to receive "Lucifer" for transmission through the mails as second-class matter on the ground that it is an immoral publication, but charges third-class rates, or four cents per pound, which Mr. Harman is now obliged to pay. Just where the consistency of this thing comes in is not conspicuously apparent. If "Lucifer" is unmailable at one cent per pound, it is difficult to discern how it becomes any more mailable at four times that rate. An unmailable paper should not be admitted at any price according to the law, but a regular publication that is mailable is entitled to transmission at the rate of one dollar per hundred pounds. There is no middle ground under the law, and in establishing one the postmaster at Topeka has made a fool of himself.

THE "Banner of Light" spirit-message department contains what purports to be a communication from one William Stone, who has formed the acquaintance of Horace Seaver in the other world. Stone reports that Mr. Seaver "is in good condition, is studying the laws of the new life, remembers his old acquaintances and associates with love and regard," but declines to attempt any communication with them. "He can't and won't speak for himself," says Mr. Stone. The Boston "Investigator," of which Mr. Seaver was editor up to the time of his death, entirely repudiates Mr. Stone's message, and thinks that if Horace Seaver ever had a chance to speak for himself he would surely take advantage of it.

M. E. BILLINGS, after having a second trial for the murder of Prosecuting Attorney Kingsley and conviction and again appealing to the supreme court of the state of Iowa, has just had the verdict set aside by that tribunal. So he goes free. It was a queer case. Colonel Billings will be remembered as the author of the "Crimes of Preachers."—"Ironclad Age."

We are informed that Billings has renounced Freethought and gone back to the Christian fold. Possibly this had something to do with his acquittal, but any way we are satisfied. A man who has no higher idea of the mission of Liberalism than the publishing of the derelictions of those who do not agree with him on the subject of religion is not a valuable acquisition to either the orthodox or heterodox ranks.

MR. HIRSCH, our minister to Turkey, has worked himself into a state of wild excitement over the arrest of an American citizen at Constantinople, and though the citizen has been released and an apology tendered by the Porte, Mr. Hirsch demands satisfaction and the punishment of the officers making the arrest. In lieu of such satisfaction he threatens to "make it hot" for the Ottoman empire. It is remarkable how much greater outrage the arrest of an American becomes when made in foreign parts than when perpetrated under the stars and stripes at home.

THE charge is made, and pretty well sustained, that the schools of San Francisco are in the hands of politicians, and are used as pasturage for the lambs of Boss Buckley. It is also charged that the Catholic church has the naming of a majority of the teachers. We understand that Mr. John Sweet, one of the candidates for superintendent of schools, is opposed to political or sectarian teachers, and if that is true his election is to be earnestly hoped for. The schools should not be conducted for the benefit of either the politicians or the priests.

THERE is an editor in Mendocino who aspires to a harp. His name is Heeser, and he lights the county every week with a paper called the "Mendocino Beacon." S. P. Putnam will lecture in Fort Bragg November 1 and 2, and when the gentlemen who are arranging for the occasion applied to Mr. Heeser for advertising space in the "Beacon," the righteous editor declined to permit his columns to be used for such a purpose. The "Beacon," it is understood, sheds only a dim, religious light.

THE discussion between S. P. Putnam and the Rev. Mr. Jones at Summerville, Or., ended several weeks ago, but the discussion about the discussion still proceeds in the locality where it was held. The Summerville "Annotator" contributes this item: "In the Jones-Putnam debate, recently closed in this city, there may be a difference of opinion as to who was the victor, but for courtesy and gentlemanly deportment the advantage was certainly in favor of the Agnostic."

THE Liberals of Oregon, as well as those more particularly known as Spiritualists, will do well to engage the services of Moses and Mattie Hull for lectures. And if there are any parsons in the state who are aching for debate, Mr. Hull is the proper man to send out against them. We presume that any communication addressed to these workers, in care of C. Beal, Portland, Or., will reach them.

A MOMENT'S thought will show subscribers the propriety of naming both their old and their new address when ordering the directions on their wrappers changed.

ADVICE to our readers: Get a copy of Lillian Leland's "Traveling Alone" while they are going. It is sent by mail at 30 cents.

OBSERVATIONS.

Somebody has been good enough to Mr. D. Colvin, of Champion, Jefferson county, New York, to send him FREETHOUGHT regularly for a year or so. Mr. Colvin is a pious man; he let the paper come as long as it was paid for, but now discontinues. He writes thus cheerfully:

"I am a Methodist class leader. Wife and I have felt the quickenings of the holy spirit, showing me my very sinful condition out of Christ and helping me to go to him in humility, seeking and finding pardon for past sins, and helping to keep me from sinning any more. Knowing this, you will see how every paper I have permitted to be brought home from the postoffice has cost me heartaches. I have felt your lost and undone condition, also those that support this paper, and hope that you may soon realize your condition and seek forgiveness of your past sins before it is too late. I know there is an infinite God, Christ, and Holy Spirit, three in one, as you have a body, soul, and spirit. God has given you a choice; will you choose to live as you are living? Oh, I beseech of you to remember that you are only a steward; turn to the living God; believe on his name; seek his pardon, and may God grant that we may meet around his throne to praise him forever.

"I am owing you for the paper since May, 1890, but I will inclose some copies of the paper I take, 'The Divine Life and International Expositor; please read them and I will feel that you have the full value for what I owe you."

Mr. Colvin has taken FREETHOUGHT from the office six months and has not paid for it, and therefore owes this company one dollar. He thinks that three copies of a pious Sunday-school magazine printed in 1887 will settle the bill. He says he has felt the quickenings of the spirit showing him his sinful condition, and I am glad of it. No doubt he has been a rascal in his day, but I would like to know what grounds he has for saying that I am in a lost and undone condition, or that I ought to seek forgiveness for past sins. A man living in Champion, Jefferson county, N.Y., is not qualified to prescribe for persons who reside in California. The climate is different and surroundings are diverse. Up in Champion they may have advantages we do not enjoy out here, so that it is easier for a man to be religious there than it is on this coast. An amount of quickening by the holy spirit that would make a Champion, Jefferson county, sinner sit on his bootheels and address the heavens in oral prayer would scarcely phase the impenitent of these parts. Out this way the holy ghost is looked upon as a played-out Eastern product, which our residents do not take kindly to. California is a state of great resources herself, and if we conclude that we want holy spirits we can raise them here. We know there is soil somewhere between Crescent City and San Diego where they will do well, and if we once get the industry started and have the McKinley bill to shut out foreign competition, we shall be sending them East in tanks and on platform cars before the presidential election of 1892.

We are becoming quite accustomed to the commiseration of Eastern people for our want of advantages. They think we ought to have beer on ice, oysters at a cent apiece, and religion on tap. They don't see how we get along without banking up the house every fall, melting snow to drink when the well freezes up, and believing in a good warm hell, as they do in Champion, Jefferson county, N. Y. The want of a competing line that intelligence can travel over at rates the traffic will bear keeps them in the dark about the real facts of the situation, which are otherwise than they think. Californians do not care to incur the mental strain of believing in hell, because it is so much easier to go to Sacramento during a political convention, while it causes less waste of brain force to visit Oakland or go down into the Santa Clara valley than to grasp the Christian conception of paradise.

These things will explain to Mr. Colvin why we lead the life we do and are indifferent to the consolations he thinks so much of. He will also see now, I think, why I do not care to send him FREETHOUGHT any longer in exchange for back numbers of the "Divine Life."

If anything would cause me to vote for both of the candidates for governor at the next election, I think the course taken by the respective opponents of E. B. Pond and H. H. Markham would have that effect. The charge against Mr. Pond is that he has gained possession of large tracts of land in Oregon; but what enemy of Mr. Pond is there who would not do the same if he could? Beyond the ordinary villainy of land grabbing and land speculation, the accused person does not appear to have gone. How he obtained the title to his land is a question which few real estate speculators would care to raise, since the title to nearly all land, except that of squatters or settlers, is clouded. Grabbing all you can and holding all you get, is not opposed to current business morality.

Against Mr. Markham is laid the accusation that some ten years ago he indorsed the discharge of a gang of men whom he characterized as an "Irish crowd" from his mines and mills at Oro Grande, and permitted them to be replaced with Chinese. For this reason Mr. Markham is thought to be undeserving of the suffrages of his fellow-citizens, particularly the Irish; but it does not appear that the persons who make this plea have urged any of their adherents to vote for O'Donnell, who is running for mayor on a conspicuously anti-Chinese platform. Furthermore, it is charged that Mr. Pond is at present employing Mongolians in his Alaskan canneries, which fact is overlooked by those who object to Mr. Markham's employment of the same class. The truth is, whether generally recognized or not, that if every candidate on both tickets is an employer of Chinamen, he is not a greater offender than nine-tenths of the voters of both parties. It is next to impossible for the citizen of California to escape from patronizing, either directly or indirectly, the so-called coolie. If you take your shirt to the laundry office, the chances are in favor of its going through the hands of a Chinaman before it comes back. Your shoes, if you get them made to order, may be constructed by white labor, but who knows? and if the price and goods are satisfactory, how many ever inquire? Most of our fruit is picked by Chinese hands, and any one who rides over a railroad in the state patronizes the Chinaman who laid the rails or shoveled the dirt. It is probable that the Irish, who are expected to boycott the candidate, are direct employers of Chinese; since many of the Irish are poor and are compelled by necessity to accept the cheapest goods, which the Mongolian manufactures. Everybody hates the Chinaman, but everybody uses him just the same.

There is nothing to be said in favor of the employment of Chinese labor from any but a business point of view. The Chinese are a degraded class, many of them positive slaves. By superior skill, superior industry, or smaller demands for the reward of labor, they obtain the work which white workmen rightfully think should be given to them. The Chinese quarter in this city is the home of crime and unspeakable vice. Nevertheless our larger hotels and our wealthier classes employ them as servants; corporations work them in mines; steamship lines use them for coal passers and firemen; in fact, they are everywhere, on farm and in shop, and people who are in a position to know assert that those who do not employ them are under a great disadvantage in competition with those who do. It is, then, the purest hypocrisy to base an objection to a candidate for a public office on the fact that some corporation or company in which the candidate is interested has them in its service; and everybody knows this to be true. Everybody knows, too, that if Markham or Pond had only committed the offense of discharging a "Yankee mob" or an "American gang" instead of an "Irish crowd," the act would not have been brought into the campaign at all. There is but one element to be influenced by this sort of demagoguery, and that element is none the less dangerous because it comes from beyond the Atlantic instead of the Pacific.

For saying all of which, may the pope forgive me.

I ran across a Bible story the other day that seems to be prejudicial to the theory of some modern Christians that interest-taking, speculation, and gambling are opposed to divine teaching. The story is in the twenty-fifth chapter of the gospel according to Matthew, beginning with the fourteenth verse and continuing to the thirtieth. It relates that there is a kingdom of heaven which is like unto a householder about to travel into a far country, who turned his real and personal property into cash, and intrusted the same to his servants according to their several abilities. To one he gave five talents, to another two talents, and to a third one talent. A talent, in those days, was worth pretty near two thousand dollars. The book does not say that he left any instructions about the disposition of the coin, but "straightway took his journey" as soon as he had made the divy.

The man who got the five talents, it seems, took them into the street and played policy, or bought stocks, or bet on the races, or invested in a mine. It is likely that he lost at first, and may have gone so near broke that he was beginning to think about getting across the line into Judea before the old man came back; but later on luck changed, so that he recouped himself and doubled his original investment, and Mr. Householder got back ten talents for his five. We do not know whether the servant won more than five talents, but it is possible that when he gave the householder ten he put twenty in his own pocket.

The second man in ability had two talents, as stated, which he undoubtedly invested in lots with a rising tendency. Possibly he violated the ethics of Mr. Pentecost by holding vacant land out of use, or by taking interest, rent, and profit. At any rate, when the traveler returned, the speculator had made money enough to pay back the two talents and the Dutchman's one per cent interest.

The third man had probably never had so much money before in his life, and his first thought, if he was honest, was: "This talent does not belong to me, and I have no right to use it for speculative purposes. I am no gambler. The man who owns the talent is a hard man to please. If I lose his money he will roast me for embezzlement, and I am not going to run any risks." So he puts the coin in a sack and caches it, and when the old man comes back he presents it to the rightful owner with a clear conscience.

But what does this householder, this type of the kingdom of heaven, do? He takes the principal and one hundred per cent from servant number one, and asks no questions about the way the loan has been doubled. He just makes the gambler his partner in business and says, "Well done." He also takes the speculator into the firm, pockets his gains, and gives him a similar testimonial. But when he comes to the only trustworthy man in the outfit, who gives him back dollar for dollar, he calls him a lazy tramp and makes him donate his one talent to the five-talent man, who is already a capitalist. Says he: "Thou oughtest to have put my money with the exchangers [the Shylocks], and then at my coming, I should have received mine own with usury." "Cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness." No wonder there was wailing and gnashing of teeth.

This story directly enjoins gambling and speculation by men who have money left in their care. It instructs the treasurer of the Sunday-school not to safely guard his trust, but to invest it. If he loses, he will be prosecuted; if he gives back only what he receives, he will be damned; but if by taking usury he doubles the investment, he will enter into the joy of his lord.

Geo. E. Macdonald

J. E. REMSBURG will speak in San Francisco within the coming week. His subject will be "The False Claims of the Church." Up to the time of our going to press the hall has not been decided upon, but subscribers will be notified by postal card.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The cost of San Francisco's new city hall up to the date of the last report is $4,445,460, and the structure is not yet completed. —Twenty-four candidates for offices on one ticket are members of the Young Men's Institute, a Roman Catholic organization in this city. —Two members of a co-operative "white labor" shirt factory were expelled by a council of the Federated Trades in San Francisco last Sunday for employing Chinese laundrymen. —Oakland has 10,894 registered voters. —The Krieger Verein celebrated last Sunday the ninetieth birthday of Von Moltke, the Prussian field marshal, and sent the venerable soldier a congratulatory telegram. The Kriegers differ from the other Germans of the coast in still maintaining a sort of sympathetic allegiance to the empire. —A syndicate of Eastern capitalists has been formed to boom real estate at Port Angeles, Wash. —J. L. Sillman, who shot Fiske at Fresno, has been found guilty of murder in the first degree, and will be imprisoned for life. —The Pacific Coast Laborers' Union has adopted a series of resolutions indorsing Senator Stanford for his action in regard to the land loan measure, and pledging its members to work for his return to the Senate. —The Mechanics' Institute Fair closed last Saturday evening. —Secretary Windom, Attorney-General Miller, and Postmaster-General Wanamaker, who are specially charged by law with the selection of a suitable site for a post-office building at San Francisco, have had another conference on the subject. No conclusion was reached.

In 1833, John Mullanphy, of Ireland, placed a large sum of money in the hands of Bishop Rosetti, of St. Louis, who is now dead. The heirs of one John Walsh were to receive the money, which, it is claimed, amounts to $5,000,000. Mrs. John Powers, of Maryland, claiming to be the sole heir of John Walsh, will sue the present archbishop of the St. Louis diocese for an accounting. —The New York "Herald" has figured it out that nearly five million dollars was contributed to the relief of the Johnstown flood sufferers, and that only about one-half that amount ever reached the intended beneficiaries. The "Herald" charges unwise and corrupt administration of the fund. —At St. Louis last Sunday night a fakir advertised to expose the tricks of modern Spiritualism. He failed so completely that the audience mobbed him and raided the box-office. —Secretary Blaine made an address at Canton, O., the home of Major McKinley, of tariff fame, last Saturday. Mr. Blaine expounded and defended the major's tariff schedule. —The Rev. Martin L. Fritsch, for twenty-five years a respected minister at Redding, Pa., has been sentenced to three months in jail for pilfering small articles in a hardware store. —Twenty-two Capuchin monks registered in one ward in Milwaukee. They will vote against the Bennett law.

The Catholic bishops of Ireland have issued a pastoral letter expressing sympathy for the poor people of that country, and warning them against the "plan of campaign" proposed by the agitators. —An American subject was recently arrested in Constantinople on suspicion of engraving seals for a secret society. Mr. Hirsch, the U. S. ambassador to Turkey, is making a vigorous demand for satisfaction, although the authorities have released the man and apologized. —The Russian police have discovered and raided a Nihilist printing-office at Odessa. —Gladstone says that disestablishment of the Scottish church will be the leading question at the next general election. —Austria is said to be intriguing with Rome for the destruction of Italian unity and the restoration of the pope's temporal power. —A party of three hundred poles, while trying to reach Prussian territory from Warsaw, Russia, October 24, with the intention of emigrating to Brazil, were fired upon by the Russian frontier guard, whose order to return had been disobeyed by the Poles. Six men, two women, and one child were killed.

THE Freethinkers' Magazine for November contains a portrait of Dr. Joseph Rodes Buchanan and a biographical sketch of his life. The leading articles are: "Aristotle's Agreement with Modern Ideas of Virtue," by Sarah A. Underwood; "God in the Constitution," by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll; "The Sorrows of God," by George Jacob Holyoake. The literary and editorial departments are interesting, in which are communications from Parker Pillsbury, Lucy N. Colman, Susan H. Wixon, F. May Holland, and other Liberal writers. For sale at this office. Price 20 cents.

OBITUARY.

KATE PARKER.

Mrs. Kate Parker, wife of Leonard Parker, died at her residence near Anaheim, Orange county, Cal., October 16. She was nearly seventy years of age. Mrs. Parker was one of the most intelligent women on this coast. Her knowledge of botany and all kinds of still life was perhaps unrivalled anywhere. She had always been a Freethinker and her last request was that no orthodox minister be allowed to speak over her remains. Mrs. M. W. Alex, of Santa Ana, was invited to deliver the oration at the house. The longest retinue ever seen in that part of the country followed her remains to their last resting-place. Mr. Smithwick, a gentleman of eighty-four years of age, who has spent a life in the Liberal faith, closed the ceremonies with a few appropriate remarks at the grave.

Mrs. Parker and her life-long consort, Leonard Parker, have been known for years as the leaders of the Liberal movement in Anaheim. Some two years ago they celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. Some months since, Mrs. Parker sustained injuries from an accident from which she never recovered. We shall miss her helpful words and deeds, and her earnest labors in the cause of Freethought.

MRS. H. L. BOYES.

Two weeks ago Mr. H. L. Boyes, of Seward, Neb., gave back to Mother Nature the wife of his youth, manhood, and age. She was 74 years old. The funeral exercises were simple and brief, consisting of music and the reading of poems by Judge Lawley and Mrs. McKillip.

PROGRESS AND POLITICS.

The social condition of a people has been the problem of all time. No matter what the form of government, that was the vital question of the age; all other circumstances yielded to it in importance. Politics certainly afforded a wider and noisier arena for the display of human abilities; but they were always either the offspring or the circumstance dependent on the material conditions of the communities in which they were agitated. Beneath the surface of the manifest existence, there has invariably been forces at work which brought about all the social changes that have occurred in the history of the human race.

As with volcanoes, so it is with the masses—they seem to slumber when actively at work—currents of fire permeate the bowels of earth unseen, gathering volume as they proceed. In the same manner public opinion widens and lengthens its channels, swallowing up everything that impedes its progress. Politics dazzle and confound—they excite the passions of hope, fear, and anger—bringing into play high mental faculties, but they are seldom the power that substantially revolutionizes society. They are merely indices to the actual agent, the material condition of the aggregate people which we moderns have symbolized by the generic phrase—progress. Wars, having for the specific object territorial aggrandizement, may have altered the outward character of a race or people, but the inner remained subject to the slower influence of their mental habits and physical instincts. Violence may destroy, but it can never wear away strong natural peculiarities. War failed to transform the Hun into a Slav, or the Tartar into a Russian. But in this country our unity of interests, of labor, and of rights (if carefully guarded and maintained), is destined to draw all closer together, and promises to ultimately exterminate present distinctions. With this fact patent to our senses, it is astounding that mere political partisanship should be held in esteem. Parties are merely forms or modes of action; the representative of ideas, not creators of them—always very unwilling to learn of a new thought or necessity.

Owing to prevalent stupidity or ignorance on this essential, so many political delusions are current. Political power and material or vital powers are relative opposites. The latter, in this country, is our vast domain, our enormous agricultural products, our railways, our manufactures, our men, or the grand industrial army; the former is a mere system of rules for the regulation of public conduct. It is only the shadow of the substance, and a very delusive one. The political or party structure is not the human temple itself.

It may dazzle the eye, but its beauties are all superficial. All is fair and noble in appearance. The curtain of party glory is unquestionably a gorgeous one, but the scenes played behind it strongly tend to prove it a mere painted rag and that its great master spirit is of different composition from that depicted on its glowing surface. But, let us hope, this party blindness has had its career, and will be annihilated when the true principle of human government is thoroughly studied and appreciated. Man is an adaptive animal, and accommodates himself to existing circumstances after much the same fashion as he submits to the physical laws of acclimatization. With an intelligent study of morals and politics comes a candid appreciation of the law of change—or progress—being the fundamental law of society. From the earliest times to the present, there can be observed a perpetual transition from one rule of conduct to another; and, by an accurate analysis of the whole authenticated series, there is detected a gradual accumulative superiority in the younger over the older, until leaving the mist of mythology, the simplicity of paganism gives place to the more elaborate fable of Christianity, and that, in turn, is being repudiated by the intellectual world, for a system of ethics based on rational principles.

It is the same with material conditions, and no matter what country we take for an illustration, we shall clearly perceive the tendency of every system to improve on the previous one. Politics, in the partisan sense, affected nothing; they shone lustreously for a time in the plane of life, but were eventually swallowed up in the advancing tide of public opinion.

England, from the Norman conquest downward, exemplifies the truth of this doctrine. The condition of the people dictated the form of government. Under Plantagenet rule, the Lancastrians were the radicals of their day, because favoring innovation, and the people in whom a commercial spirit had taken root desired to be relieved from the oppressions of the feudal tenure. The Wars of the Roses gave the death-blow to feudalism, and it may be said that the system in its entirety received its finishing stroke on the bloody field of Bosworth. With a new dynasty came an improvement in the social condition which gradually forced other changes until the reign of James I., when the last vestige of serfdom disappeared from the soil. Not by virtue of an act of parliament, for none was ever passed, but by a process of sheer exhaustion.

As the people increased in power and capacity under larger combinations and greater co-operation of labor and capital, it was discovered that personal vassalage was the mere parchment submission of the many to the few. As the population enlarged, the necessity for restricting men and women to particular localities vanished, and so the institution died a natural death.

Thus we can observe that liberty has owed everything to social prosperity—or a more diffused prosperity—nothing to what is commonly called politics. So we may readily perceive that any system of privilege or combination, or trust, that interferes with this natural diffusion of social wealth or material prosperity is a barrier to progress.

Now it is necessary, to make these combinations effective, that they receive legal sanction, and to accomplish that these social brigands bribe or pay the election expenses of some political party who, while fingering the coin of these corruptionists, loudly proclaims itself the savior of the people and the dear people—the masses—invariably proved themselves asses.

There are signs, however, that the mistakes of the past will be remedied in the future. People are awakening out of the deep slumber of decided party opinions. They realize that too long have party politics disregarded the rules which preside over the national condition of a people. As the very foundation of this prosperity rests on the health of a community, we are no longer willing to leave facts to the care of chance, nor allow party politics to take precedence over the rules of reasoning.

Exposed to the variations of a climate proverbially uncertain, until recently our politicians absolutely refused to acquaint themselves or the public with its influence on the health of the community; while multiplying and extending huge cities, the future workshops of the world, we neglected to investigate the laws by which life and health, death and disease, are distributed with no conjectural average, but with unfailling, intelligible precision.

To our industrial reformers, Illinois owes her beneficent laws on vital statistics and sanitation. We recognize, as a theory at least, that upon the labor of the toilers rests the welfare of society—that we should be informed how they live, how they die, what are their comforts, and what are they denied. These were met by sneers and charges of utopianism, but their operation has silenced the slanderers.

And we look to them more than any other for the permanent welfare of the whole people—the true criterion of power and importance. Vital statistics recognize health as power; sickness as waste. It is a younger science than geology, but many deeply versed in secondary and tertiary strata never give a thought to the social conditions of the present. We know that the duration of life is regulated by definite rules, and that it is within our power to modify these rules by

1. Improving sanitary conditions.
2. Lessening the hours of labor.
3. Raising the standard of living—wages. E. A. STEVENS.

LECTURING.

I read with not a little surprise in a recent issue of FREETHOUGHT an article entitled "Random Notes," by our esteemed friend Will S. Andres, of Portsmouth, O. I will quote but a sentence or two of it. He seeks to persuade the Liberal lecturers to make more moderate demands upon the Liberal public for their services. He pleads with us to travel as the itinerant preachers did in early times, for the sake of the cause. He asks: "Will they tour the country the coming year at lower rates than heretofore? Will they for once travel under the guidance of the American Secular Union and at living and not gilt-edged prices?"

I can answer only for myself, and I will say yes. I shall be only too happy to put myself under the direction of the American Secular Union, to labor at "living" prices. But I should want it understood that if I did so the American Secular Union would hold itself responsible at the end of the year for the "living prices." Will the Union make such a contract? If it does not want to take such responsibility, why should it want me to take all responsibility and it take all the honor?

The material fact that escaped the attention of our good brother Andres is that the lecturers are not getting "gilt-edged" prices for their work. In fact, their pay is not only meagre, but it is very meagre. We make the poorest kind of a living out of it. Speaking for myself, I must say that I make the poorest kind of a living out of lecturing. I have to write pamphlets and books and read proofs, and after all I have at the end of the year no money ahead. I live economically.

It seems strange to me to have anyone talk of "gilt-edged" prices when I have to live more in common with Lazarus than with Dives. And what is still worse is that the lecture business is paying less every succeeding year, while the amount of work is increasing. Like all other work, the demand is more labor and less pay. I have had during the past summer more to do, more expenses to pay, and less remuneration than have fallen to my lot any season during the fifteen years that I have been in the lecture field. Evidently Mr. Andres is not acquainted with the lecture business. He was, however, aware of the fact that he was writing "Random Notes." The painful truth is, they were entirely too "random." Let Mr. Andres change about front and exhort the people to sustain us wherever we go. Let him persuade the rich Freethinkers to do something for Freethought. It is a notorious fact that we have rich Liberals (?) in the country who are doing comparatively nothing for the cause of liberty. Our Liberal papers should all receive generous support from those who have the means to aid. Our wealthy men and women might do a vast amount of good if they would leave something for the papers when they come to die. I should greatly rejoice to know that a handsome bequest was made to FREETHOUGHT. And why should not our Liberal institutions, such as the Freethought and other papers of progressive character, receive aid in this way? See how the Christians dying leave vast sums of money to support after they are gone what they regard as good and desirable. It does seem to me that as Liberals we are away behind in this matter. Our well-to-do Liberals can do more than they have done, and it is an open shame that they do not come to the rescue of so good and so grand a paper as FREETHOUGHT.

W. S. BELL.
Oakland, Cal.

MRS. STANTON VS. MR. SPENCER.

There died recently in England, says Dr. Foote's "Health Monthly," a Miss Naden, a young woman of rare mental powers, and one whose writings had called forth the attention and compliments of England's most profound philosophers, including Herbert Spencer, but it seems this gentleman regards such manifestations of great intellect in a woman of thirty years as abnormal, as he has spoken of her early demise as a warning that the feminine organization cannot safely bear "the higher education," that woman is too delicate to bear the strain of high scholarship. To this Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton retorts (in the "Woman's Tribune" of Beatrice, Neb.) that Professor Clifford was always in delicate health and died young, that Buckle died comparatively early, before completing his history of civilization, and that Mr. Herbert Spencer himself, though still living, has been long on the invalid list, and incapacitated for the work he has planned. She says "it is a question whether his essays have not been too great a strain on his organization. No doubt if he had worked on a farm and contented himself with the rudiments of education, he might have had a simple life of health and happiness."

She then goes on to give a few names of eminently great women, scientists, novelists, and philosophical thinkers, who have, in spite of their high grade mental work, lived long and prospered, and says: "I doubt whether as many women die annually from writing essays on induction and deduction as from production, and yet no flags of danger are raised on the housetops where mothers of a dozen children languish and die, or in workshops where multitudes of feeble women labor from fourteen to sixteen hours a day."

What Mrs. Stanton objects to is the readiness of some men to lay hold on such unfortunate events as Miss Naden's premature death as arguments against the higher education of women. She has well shown that it is not a fair sort of argument, or that if it is to be used it should be equally employed, and needs to be as much for men as women.

ON August 3, 1881, Mr. Bradlaugh, M. P., was put into the Clock Tower for refusing to submit to the regulations of the House of Commons on the oath question. On March 14, 1888, he carried by a majority of one hundred the second reading of a bill to abolish oaths. By his indomitable pluck and perseverance he thus carries out the prophecy which he made when, addressing the electors of Northampton, he said: "If his life was spared he would one day represent them in the House of Commons and carry a bill to abolish oaths."—London Democrat.

Rensburg's Lecture Appointments.

J. E. Rensburg left Kansas on his tour to the Pacific coast, September 15. He reached California about the last of October. His appointments for this state, as far as arranged, are as follows:

Colusa.....	Oct 30	Snelling.....	Nov 13
Sacramento.....	Oct 31	Hornitos.....	Nov 14
Michigan Bluffs.....	Nov 1, 2	Easton.....	Nov 15
Grass Valley.....	Nov 3	Fresno.....	Nov 16
Stockton.....	Nov 4	Hanford.....	Nov 17, 18
Santa Rosa.....	Nov 5	Tulare.....	Nov 19
Ukiah.....	Nov 6	Los Angeles.....	Nov 20
San Francisco.....	Nov 7	Fallbrook.....	Nov 21
San Miguel.....	Nov 8, 9	Bernardo.....	Nov 22
Monterey.....	Nov 10	San Diego.....	Nov 23
Gilroy.....	Nov 11	San Bernardino.....	Nov 25 26
Merced.....	Nov 12

TESTIMONY TO THE MIRACULOUS.

Concerning the subject of miracles in general, we may lay down these propositions:

1. That they have never been attested by trustworthy evidence.
2. That the performance of them would be a violation of those uniform human experiences and observations from which have been deduced all the known laws of nature.
3. That they are opposed to the great doctrine of evolution.

We will take these points one by one.

1. No alleged miracle has been attested by sound or trustworthy evidence. The Old Testament miracles are not recorded by eye-witnesses; and even if they were, unless we knew what sort of persons the writers were—whether they were wise or foolish, credulous or careful in the examination of evidence—we could not determine the exact degree of credibility to be attached to their statements.

That Moses was not the author of the Pentateuch is now regarded, by all who are capable of forming a just judgment on the matter, as beyond all doubt. It is equally certain that two or more writers contributed towards the production of the first five books of the Bible, and from the character of their writings we are entitled to say that they were unable to discriminate between the petty tricks of a conjurer and the majestic phenomena of the universe. Of the other writers we may remark that they were either self-deceived, or so credulous that they believed everything they were told concerning extraordinary events that were said to have happened at the time of which they wrote.

Nor can it be said that the alleged miracles of the New Testament are properly attested. Such evidence as is offered for them would be rejected by any magistrate as altogether inadequate. The question then is, What evidence is required to establish the truth of such extraordinary events? In the first place, we need the evidence of eye-witnesses; in the second place, we require the evidence of individuals who were not likely to be deceived; and, thirdly, we want the evidence of persons who were not interested in telling a falsehood to maintain some theory which they believed to be true. In no case have we got such witnesses. Firstly, the alleged writers of the gospels do not pretend that they witnessed the performance of the miracles; secondly, they do not state their testimony with the judicial precision and orderly marshaling of facts and evidences which would entitle them to be considered as competent witnesses; and, thirdly, living in an age and generation to whom miracles were the commonplaces of belief, they must be regarded as highly prejudiced in favor of the supernatural occurrences they recount.

2. The performance of miracles would be a violation of human experience and the laws of nature. By laws of nature are not meant some divine commands which are rigidly carried out in the operations of natural forces, but merely the observed order of phenomena. Human experience gives the best warrant for the belief that nature's laws are uniform in their mode of operation; that each and every event is preceded by some other event without which it could not happen, and with which it is bound to happen; or, in other words, that the phenomena of nature consist of one long chain of causes and effects, which is practically endless. Now, it must be perfectly obvious to any rational creature that, if this be true, miracles cannot happen, for the happening of a miracle would be the disturbance of the whole order of phenomena; and, since all events are the necessary consequence of previous events through all time, the performance of a miracle would involve the undoing of this endless series of phenomena. Feuerbach well expresses it when he says: "Who suspends one law of nature suspends them all."

The study of astronomy and natural philosophy affords us ample proof that the same laws which govern the earth on which we live also govern the stars and other heavenly bodies. Professor Buchner says: "The laws of gravitation—i.e., the laws of motion and attraction—are, in all space reached by the telescope, invariably the same. The motions of all the most remote bodies take place according to the same laws by which on our earth a stone falls, or the pendulum vibrates, etc. All astronomical calculations regarding the motions of distant bodies, and which are based upon these known laws, have proved perfectly correct. Astronomers have pointed out the existence of stars which were only discovered after being sought for in the spots indicated; they predict solar and lunar eclipses, and calculate the reappearance of comets in centuries to come. The form of Jupiter was deduced from the laws of rotation and was verified by direct observation. We know that the planets have their seasons, days, and nights, like the earth, though they differ in length."

David Hume years ago laid it down that we may accept it as a general maxim "that no testimony is sufficient to establish a miracle unless the testimony be of such a kind that its falsehood would be more miraculous than the fact which it endeavors to establish, and even in that case there is a mutual destruction of arguments, and the superior only gives us an assurance suitable to that degree of force which remains after deducting the inferior. When anyone," he adds, "tells me that he saw a dead man restored to life I immediately consider with myself whether it would be more probable that this person should either deceive or be deceived, or that the fact which he relates should really have happened. I weigh the one miracle against the other, and according to the superiority which I discover I pronounce my decision, and always reject the greater miracle. If the falsehood of his testimony would be more miraculous than the event which he relates, then, and not till then, can he pretend to command my belief or opinion."

Raising dead people to life, feeding thousands on five loaves and two fishes, walking on the surface of the sea, opening the eyes of the blind, ascending into heaven through the clouds—these and like events are occurrences which are not in harmony with nature's every-day performances, which contradict human experience, and which, if we are expected to believe them, would require the most conclusive kind of evidence to substantiate. If a man said that he saw another raised from the dead to-day, who would believe him? No one. If he affirmed that he himself was so raised, we should probably get a strait-waistcoat for him. But if he declared that somebody saw a miracle happen hundreds of years ago, when there was no printing-press, when the masses were ignorant and credulous, when every event that was not understood was regarded as miraculous, Christians would say, "We believe it." But if he went on to allege that the said miracle was performed by Mohammed, they would smile and say, "Mohammed! Oh, he was an impostor!" Each religionist denies the miracles of the other: each affirms the other's to have been "mere jugglery;" and the Rationalist denies them all.

3. With the truth of the doctrine of evolution firmly impressed upon his mind, with a clear understanding of the oneness of nature, in spite of her multifarious manifestations, the Rationalist is fortified against delusions of every kind. He knows that in the realm of the cosmos each event forms a link in an endless chain of cause and effect. Nothing absolutely begins in nature, and nothing ends; all is change—a ceaseless unfolding of events, an endless transformation of the one eternal substance. In the cosmos everything is natural. The word "supernatural" in the past has always been the term by which man has separated the known from the unknown, and with the ever-accumulating force of the human intellect the unknown will more and more give way to the known, until the term "supernatural" will remain only as the veil which language throws over the unknowable and unthinkable origin of the universe.

"Evolution," it has been beautifully said, "is not at variance with religion; in its highest sense it is a religion in itself. The evolutionist is humble in the presence of nature; she represents the last phase of the great first cause. Others may scoff at her, the child of their God; he loves her, for she is his companion, his mother and his nurse; she ministers to his pleasures, yet she works for his advancement; awake, he studies her, for she is the mine of his learning; asleep, he dreams on the unseen working of her wondrous laws; he listens, he sees, and ever he wonders; but he worships not, for he has no fear. . . . He cares but as an antiquarian for the book of the Jews. Nobler inducements has he to act righteously than the most learned and pious divine. If he sins, he knows well that the future will be tainted by the deeds he has done. He it is not that does right lest his soul should forever be lapt in noisome sulphurous flames; he shuns evil that he may leave behind him a purer and a nobler form, that he may hand down to posterity habits that advantage the race as a whole, that he may, however humble his sphere, contribute in some way to the happiness of the future race, and mitigate its inheritance of pain."—From "The Bible and Evolution," by A. B. Moss.

HAS CHRISTIANITY BENEFITED ANYBODY?

Professor Dawes inquires: "Has Christianity benefited woman?" I ask: Has what is styled Christianity ever benefited anybody? The careless one says, "Don't do away with the church or the Christian doctrine. I do not believe any more than you do, but it keeps some from going to the bad through fear." That may be, but where one is restrained through fear ten do wrong hoping through belief in Christianity to be made clean afterwards. This is styled a Christian nation. Legislative halls are opened and closed with prayers that cost about five dollars each, and widows and other over-worked human beings are highly taxed to pay for them. We make our own improvements in cities and towns, and then are taxed to improve church property, said church property paying no share of the burdens. Stop and think, then act. Clergymen in both houses at Washington repeat prayers at opening and closing. Do they do anything to help the over-worked poor? Let's see. Heretofore nearly every luxury was free or low-taxed; then this Congress adds more of the luxuries of the rich to the free list and puts higher taxes on the necessities of the poor. Would that FREETHOUGHT had a mouth of brass and a tongue of iron to reach the hearts and understanding of all the over-taxed and over-worked people. If this is a Christian land, give us a heathen one where they believe in only one God and look upon man as man's brother. Let's stop trying to whittle across the grain. If Christians want fine churches and parsonages, let them bear equal burdens of the state; and if the rich can afford luxuries, let them pay as much per cent certainly as the laborer pays on his coarse clothing and little cottage.

W. A. R.

Puyallup, Wash.

IMPROVING ON CHRISTIANITY.

Some rather curious results attend the attempts of pagans nominally converted by missionaries to improve upon the Christian religion. They sometimes make a strange mess with their admixture of vague Christian notions and pagan ideas.

About twenty-five years ago many of the Maori in New Zealand, who were supposed to be Christians, invented a new religion. Their leaders asserted that most of the Christian religion was false, but that the angel Gabriel and the Virgin Mary were gods who inspired their priests and gave them protection. These personages were about all they retained of the Christian religion. They wanted a medium through which they could communicate with the angel Gabriel, and they therefore cut off the head of an unfortunate white man, and the priests pretended to receive inspiration from Gabriel through this head.

Soon after another sect arose on the northern island of New Zealand. Tewhiti, a chief who had grown weary of Christianity as it was taught to him, set up a religion of his own, called himself a prophet, and declared it to be wicked to read any book but the Bible. He attracted a large party and for considerable time gave the missionaries much trouble with his peculiar teaching of their faith. In the end, however, as he did not regard himself as amenable to law, it was necessary to deal severely with him. He was suppressed by the government, and his religion fell with him.

Another sect arose still later in New Zealand, which was a degradation of every good thing taught by the missionaries. These people pretended to have great reverence for the Bible and spiritual things, but the main purpose of the sect was to indulge in the utmost license under the cloak of religion, and it was necessary for the government to suppress it.

In Burmah to-day is a curious admixture of Christianity and Buddhism among one of the Karen tribes. The religion has little semblance to Christianity, except that the Christian Sabbath is observed and services are held in imitation of those conducted by the missionaries. This form of worship has thousands of adherents, and ignorant people are especially inclined to accept the new teachings.

In India, a while ago, the natives of a district that had embraced Christianity conceived an idea that was identical with that of our Second Adventists. They made up their minds, nobody knows how, that the world was coming to an end on September 29, 1881. It was in vain that their missionaries remonstrated with them. The fanatics declared that the world was surely coming to an end, and a large number of people left their homes and went to the ocean shore, where they awaited the coming of the Lord. They had sold everything they possessed, keeping with them only money enough to buy food and lodging until the fatal day arrived. Most of their time was spent in fasting, prayer, and exhortation, and there was great excitement when the important day at length dawned.

There they were gathered on the beach, and waited all day for the Lord. At nightfall, as he did not appear, they finally decided that they had been deceived, and returned to the missionaries greatly humbled and begging forgiveness.

It is a curious spectacle nowadays to see in Angola, where missionaries nominally converted thousands of the natives to Christianity two or three centuries ago, the poor people telling their beads and kissing their crucifixes without the slightest idea of the significance that Christian people attach to these objects. The meaning of the cross was long ago forgotten by their fathers. All that is left of the old Roman Catholic faith among these natives are the beads and crucifixes, which they regard simply as a sort of fetich that will keep them from bodily injury. Only this remains of the wonderful Christianizing triumphs of the Romish fathers, who two centuries ago were so proud of reclaiming many thousands of African natives from paganism.—New York Sun.

ROMANISM AND CIVIL LIBERTY.

All of Romanism is not inside of the Catholic church.

I am here to-night neither as the representative nor the antagonist of any religious faith, but only as an American to discuss with you principles dear to the genius of our common country. It is a question of intellectual liberty. It is nothing more.

No sooner was religion instituted by man than there entered his brain the monstrous and merciless fallacy that it should fetter every operation of the human intellect and dominate every function of human society.

But its murderous work was not ended yet. It lingered in wars of religious hate; and at the end of two hundred years more, in the face of the sunrise of the twentieth century, its malign and bloody ghost still stalks the highways of the civilized world—in the demand of the church of Rome on enlightened governments to support the propagation of its creeds, in the clamor of Protestant fanatics to convert the free Constitution of this republic into a pack-horse of religious faiths.

Fellow-citizens, let us look into this question. I think we shall reach the conclusion that the government of the United States is not an organization for Sunday-school work. I think we shall reach the conclusion that it is not in disrespect to religion or good morals that it is not such an organization.

There came out from the mists and mountains of Wales into England a man who, lifting up his voice against priests and kings, said:

"The civil power has no jurisdiction over the human conscience. Conscience belongs to the individual, and is not the property of the body politic. All human laws which prescribe or prohibit religious doctrines are damnable and unjust. Magistrates are but the agents of the people; on them no spiritual power whatever can be conferred."

That man was Roger Williams. Down amid the shadows and fogs of his sea-girt land, there had fallen upon this man an inspiration that was to roll back the tide of human hate and fear that had devastated this world for forty centuries.

From that declaration of Roger Williams two hundred and forty years ago was born the American Constitution.

This brave man fled once more from the New England Puritans to the wilderness, and, among the barbarians of the North American forests in the province of Rhode Island, established the first government according religious tolerance ever founded on this earth.

In all the civilized countries of the globe, two centuries ago, there was not enough space for standing room for the man who believed in the liberty of the human conscience. The gratitude of the American people to the North American savages for their aid in establishing religious liberty on this continent should be perennial. Compared with the red men of the woods, the Puritan was the savage. These tolerant gentlemen would occasionally lift the hair of an enemy—provided that he were not baid—or light a little fire or two around the person of an unpleasant neighbor, but they never rose to the supreme Christian elevation of regarding a soul of so much importance that it must be burnt to save it.

One century later than the planting of his colony in the wilderness of Rhode Island that seed of tolerance expanded into the full-blossomed tree of American liberty, throwing its splendor around the world. That century of reflection produced the fathers of this republic. That century, with all the centuries of blood and hate behind it for warning example, gave birth to the Constitution of the United States, "the sole monument of all history embodying the principle established by Christ for earthly government."

Article VI of this Constitution says: "No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States."

Article I of the amendments to this Constitution says: "Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

In a treaty with the state of Tripoli made ten years after the adoption of this Constitution it was declared that the government of the United States is not in any sense founded on the Christian religion.

That treaty was signed by President Washington. It was framed by a Congregational clergyman. That gentleman had evidently studied law before going to a theological school. He had found time to read the Constitution of his country. He knew that the nineteenth century had arrived. He was not a bigot. He probably loved man as well as God and did not believe in burning a human soul to save it. His name should be niched in honor above every Congregational pulpit in the United States.

The fathers of the American Revolution found that the experiment of propagating religious opinions by governments was a failure—that it had produced all crimes. They found that the attempts on the part of a government to descend into a man's conscience and administer to him a religious conviction, as you would administer to him an emulsion from a stomach-pump, was a failure—that it made the man a hypocrite and the government a bloody tyrant. They found that you could not make a man religious by law.

Those wise men believed that opinion should be held sacred. They believed this because they believed by whatever antecedents a man came to hold an opinion, you could not by process of law invade the structure of his brain and exterminate it. They believed this because they believed that there did not anywhere exist between the earth and the heavens on the circle of this planet a power wise enough to authoritatively administer the mysteries of the infinite. They believed this because they believed that that which a man held as a necessary result of the inscrutable processes of his brain, beyond the limits of his will, was not a crime. The Constitution is their work.

It is this august fabric of law, fresh as a revelation, hoary with the wisdom and warning of all the centuries, vindicated now on this continent beyond experiment by six generations of men, that from time to time is being assailed by a foreign power in this nation. I mean the power of Rome in the United States. It is this fabric of law that is being assailed by the hand of Protestant fanaticism in this nation.

Touch not religion with the state. Lay not upon the state the finger of religion. That is the American doctrine—the doctrine of the republic. "The state is the guardian and dispenser of religion." That is the doctrine of Pope Leo XIII—the doctrine of Rome. That was the doctrine of all the predecessors of Leo XIII since popes set up as vicegerents of divinity on earth in the twilight of modern history. That was the doctrine of the Inquisition.

The doctrine of inquisition into human conscience! that was the stone which the founders of this republic rejected.

"Every man who conducts himself as a good citizen is accountable to God alone for his religious faith, and should be protected in worshipping God according to the dictates of his own conscience."

That is what George Washington wrote in reply to an address on the subject of religious legislation.

"All Catholics should do all in their power to cause the constitutions of states and legislatures to be modeled after the principles of the true church." That is what Leo XIII writes to his lieutenants of the papal see. Leo XIII against George Washington! Rome versus the republic! Americans will decide as to the infallibility here.

I speak in no slightest or conceivable bitterness against the Roman Catholic faith. Born under a Protestant roof, I will grasp the hand of my Catholic fellow-citizen more warmly than that of my Protestant neighbor to prove to him my faith that the sermon on the mount and the sentiment of human fellowship are more vital and splendid than all the creeds of history. I make no discrimination of abstract faiths. As affects this question, however, there is a difference. The Protestant churches acknowledge their head as not of this world. The sovereignty of the Roman church is dual—the sovereignty of Rome and the sovereignty of God—a sovereignty of this world as well as a sovereignty not of this world.

With the mysteries of the conscience of the Protestant in his attitude towards the infinite, we, as citizens, have nothing to do. With the mysteries of the conscience of the Catholic in his attitude towards a supreme being, we, as citizens, have nothing to do. Into the greater mysteries of his relations with the temporal head of his church, we do not inquire. But against the intrusion of this temporal sovereignty into the affairs of the American state, this republic, born in civility and clothed in the white garments of religious liberty, has set its face forever and forever!—From the address by William Jackson Armstrong before the Portland Convention.

THE GENEROUS WORD AND DEED.

The list headed with fifty dollars by S. P. Putnam and by him christened the Editorial Salary Fund, is growing promisingly. The object of this fund is to guarantee living expenses to Mr. Macdonald, the office editor of FREETHOUGHT, who, like the rest of us, needs something more to sustain him than kind words and a lofty aim. The proposition is to raise him one thousand dollars per year, or as near it as possible, as we feel sure it will be better to retain his services on this paper than to allow necessity to take him elsewhere. The appended letters, with those previously published, seem to assure the contribution of the amount asked for:

To the Publishers of Freethought:

Inclosed please find a $5 greenback, my donation to the Editorial Salary Fund. I don't give much for promises, but intend to do always the best I can for the cause.

ED. WEGNER.

Sonoma, Cal.

To the Publishers of Freethought:

I have just read FREETHOUGHT of September 20, and I am musing on the situation. I am sorry to learn that Freethinkers on this coast have so little respect for their own opinions as to not maintain the only paper in which they are allowed to express them. I have always believed that Freethinkers in other parts of the state have more self-respect and backbone than those of Eureka, but it seems I am wrong. There are plenty of Liberals here, but only few of them have the moral courage to subscribe to and pay for a Liberal paper; the rest are moral cowards or misers; and it seems the Pacific coast is full of such people. It is hard for a few Liberals, who would sacrifice pecuniary interest to principle, to sustain, or rather maintain, a paper, while other Liberals, perhaps in better circumstances, look on doing nothing, but willing to share the advantages that a free interchange of ideas must necessarily bring to the nation.

I will inclose $10 to help the cause along, and then whatever happens, I will have, at least, the sweet satisfaction of feeling that I have done my share to sustain FREETHOUGHT. Hoping others will follow the example, I am
Fraternally yours,
ROBERT GUNTHER.
Eureka, Cal.

To the Publishers of Freethought:

Recognizing your good work in the destruction of priestly superstition and theological imposition, and recognizing also that FREETHOUGHT is a necessity for the promotion of intellectual and moral progress, as well as "a power in the land" for the benefit of the clergy in general—the pope included—I herewith contribute a ten dollar gold piece of the solid mountains, to help defray expenses. I only wish I could send a million dollars, giving you a giant's power in distributing Freethought doctrines for the overthrow of religious error. The curse of this era and age is the vile counterfeit of truth and morality, known as theology and Christianity. There are a hundred thousand priests and preachers in the land imposing these lies upon humanity. They cannot last forever. Truth is omnipotent. The day approaches when God's agents must go with their dead god.
Yours truly,
CHAS. F. BLACKBURN.
Mountain View, Wash.

To the Publishers of Freethought:

I will give $5 (or more) per year for five years for credit of the Editorial Salary Fund. I hope you will hear from a thousand others that can and will do something.
W. A. CHESS.
Monrovia, Cal.

To the Publishers of Freethought:

Find inclosed $10—$2 for my paper, balance to help the cause in any shape you see fit. I will be one that will answer Putnam's appeal and will pay five dollars each year as long as I am able. Hoping hundreds of well-to-do Liberals will respond, I am,
Yours truly,
ALEX. HARDIE.
Lost Valley, Or.

To the Publishers of Freethought:

You may put me down for five dollars to the Editor's Fund.
R. BUTTERFIELD.
Sacramento, Cal.

To the Publishers of Freethought:

Inclosed find five dollars—three dollars for the Editorial Fund and two dollars for subscription to FREETHOUGHT for one year. May FREETHOUGHT long continue.
G. R. WAGNER.
Wagner, Or.

To the Publishers of Freethought:

I herewith send you, to aid in our cause, ten dollars, to do with it as you deem best. I hope the editor will stick to his post and be properly paid for it.
GEORGE COLLINS.
Olympia, Wash.

FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY: There is no use talking about the necessity or propriety or anything else in connection with letting George go. If he goes, good-bye to FREETHOUGHT. The truth is, he and Samuel must be encouraged to work as they have worked heretofore, and the encouragement must be in something more tangible than wind. Inclosed I send $10 as my part towards this year. I will give $10 each year, and if that is not sufficient, I will give more. Now, boys, let us all put our shoulders to the back part of the wagon.

There are plenty of us, and it won't do to let the Freethought ship sink by being too lazy to do our share at the pump. There are plenty of Freethinkers in the United States to carry the balance of power every time, if we could only be all made to see aright, and the only way that I see to bring us to act together is through the dissemination of light by our lecturers and newspapers. So let us look the matter square in the face. Our work is not only for our own personal good, but also for the good of generations yet unborn. With best wishes for the spread of Freethought,
Clinton, Iowa. I remain fraternally,
JAMES A. GREENHILL.

An Absent Member's Contribution.

To the Editors of Freethought:

I send this day by W., F. & Co., $5, which please hand to Mr. Lemme, of the S. F. F. S., to help along the meetings this winter, and oblige,
Truckee, Cal.,
A. C. Bruhns.

The Church and Progress.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Allow me to advise every reader who wishes to know what the church has really done to help or hinder human progress to read Mark Twain's "Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court." The book also gives so vivid a picture of the low condition of the working class in former times as to form a good answer to all assertions of the failure of modern civilization to benefit the poor.

I wish also to call attention to the very lively and impressive account which Mrs. Lucy N. Colman, in her "Reminiscences," just published by H. L. Green, Buffalo, N. Y., gives of her labors and sufferings as one of the early anti-slavery and woman's rights lecturers. The facts she gives about the hostility of the church to reform are particularly valuable; and so is her experience of Spiritualism, especially as she had to discontinue telling why she ceased to be a believer, because "so much feeling has been expressed by some of the prominent Spiritualists at some things I have published." Every lover of truth ought to encourage and assist her to go on.
F. M. HOLLAND.

Matter, Infinity, Eternity, and the God Idea.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Common sense repudiates the idea of eternity and infinity ever having been created. Though what are infinity and eternity without the thought of matter as prevailing therein? A vacuum is a nonentity, and therefore an impossible condition as suppositiously prevailing before the existence of matter. And a so-called vacuum, as made by natural agency, exemplified through the void of lightning, etc., or otherwise by some contrivance of man, is but a feeble substitute; it is matter still in extreme rarefaction surrounded by some denser matter, in effect far off from the unthinkable condition of a vacuum. Try by your imagination to form a vacuum of universal space and throw all matter away; and, on the other hand, stretch your imagination in the endeavor to eliminate but a small fraction of that universal matter, and you will find, space being not thinkable without matter, that you would have curtailed infinity and deducted a moment from eternity just in proportion to that fraction. Matter, therefore, through its universality and indestructible character, being equal to infinite and eternal existence, appears to be the all-absorbing factor in the universe, and infinity and eternity are seemingly reduced to but incidental conditions as evolving through the existence of that infinite and eternal matter. Such overwhelming grandeur, then, as matter, in virtue commanding infinity and eternity, existing without the fiat of creation, why not some lesser wonders or grandeurs in the universe without a special creator? In fact, the very existence of that indestructible and universal matter, i. e., infinity and eternity, negatives the thought of the possibility of a creator. A being supposed to be infinite and eternal cannot very well exist outside of infinity nor live a shorter time than eternity, and when, therefore—so to say—inside thereof, infinity and eternity being interchangeable in meaning with matter, or, better said, but conditions expressed through matter, such supposed being becomes conditioned to matter for his very existence. Thus, in being subjected or conditioned to matter, he can not very well be the author or master thereof, nor can he be an independent infinite power, deity or creator. Not finding a personal creator, nothing apparently remains but that in the potency of that most wonderful matter we have to seek for the forces of creation of all the phenomena, conditions, or life as existing and as are witnessed in the universe.
Sautauquin, Utah.
ROBERT NAGLER.

If subscribers will send us the names of Liberals they are acquainted with we will forward sample copies of FREETHOUGHT. This is an effective way of increasing the circulation of the paper.

S. P. Putnam's Lecture Appointments.

Fort Bragg, Cal. Nov. 1, 2 Porterville, Cal. Nov. 12, 13, 14
Boulder Creek, Cal. Nov. 9, 10 Tulare, Cal. Nov. 15, 16

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.
PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50 fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botchers, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

MAGIC LANTERNS AND STEREOPTICONS
 afford the best and cheapest means of object teaching for Colleges, Schools and Sunday Schools. Our assortment of Views, illustrating all science, history, religion and travel, is immense. For Home Amusement and Parlor Entertainment, etc., nothing can be found as instructive or amusing, while Church Entertainments, Public Exhibitions and Popular Illustrated Lectures—PAY WELL. We are the largest manufacturers and dealers, and ship to all parts of the world. If you wish to know how to order, how to conduct Parlor Entertainments for pleasure, or Public Exhibitions, etc., for MAKING MONEY, send us your name and address on a postal card (naming this paper), and we will mail you our 208 PAGE BOOK FREE.
McALLISTER, Manufacturer & Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y. City.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently issued and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National Victor.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N. J.

And wherever you see this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

1. Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
2. Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
3. Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
4. Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
5. Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
6. Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
7. The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
8. Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles M. D.
9. Evolution of Society. By James A. Skillon.
10. Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
11. Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. James.
12. Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
13. Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
14. The Philosophy of Evolution; its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
15. The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 20 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

THE BANJO ARTISTE.

'Twas a most delightful vision—
 Yes, she played the banjo there;
 None would tell it with derision
 Had he seen her charming air.
 For her lovely eyes were dancing,
 Till with gazing you were drunk:
 There was melody entrancing
 In that

Plunk!
 Plunk!
 Plunk!

What she played, I think, was "Dixie;"
 Or perhaps 'twas "Auld Lang Syne."
 There were trills exceeding tricksie—
 But the music was divine.
 Though the chords were oft erratic,
 Each one dropping in a chunk,
 There was harmony ecstatic
 In that

Plunk!
 Plunk!
 Plunk!

—Philander Johnson in Washington Post.

Arranging for Exclusive News.

"This is the day of journalistic enterprise, ain't it?" said a man earnestly as he put his head inside the partially opened door.

"Certainly," was the reply. "Come in." He was shabby in attire, and his face showed the marks of vicissitude. "Well," he said, "I've got a scheme. All I want is $150 a week, and I'll get more news into your paper than you ever had in your whole experience."

"How?"

"Just send a reporter around with me and I'll show you. I've only got a week's work mapped out. I've just put a live catfish in the nozzle of the pump around the corner, and I'm going back in a few minutes and swallow it. See? The doctors will pump me out, and you can keep the fish on exhibition in the office for the benefit of anybody who doesn't believe the story. For to-morrow, that's Tuesday, I'll take a parachute and jump off the Washington monument, and nobody but you will know that I'm going to do it. On Wednesday I'll make arrangements to dive off the Free bridge, and get frustrated just at the critical moment by the police; on Thursday I'll tell somebody that I'm Tascott, on Friday I'll throw a bogus bombshell at some cabinet officer, and on Saturday I'll draw my salary."—Washington Post.

Not Superstitious.

Ethel—Do you consider it unlucky to break a mirror?

Maud—Not unless you break it before you finish your make up.—Chatter.

With Great Pleasure.

A paper refused lately to publish eulogiums, but added:

"We will publish the simple announcement of the death of any of our friends with pleasure."—Chatter.

Accommodating.

He—I hope you don't object to my smoking?

She—N—not in the least. That is—if you don't object to my being sick.—Chatter.

'Twas Horrible.

"I understand Dabsley paints?"
 "That's bad enough, but he does worse even. He presents the paintings to his friends."—Philadelphia Times.

Plainer Still.

I know her face is very plain—
 It goes against my will;
 But the fact she's her rich father's child
 To me is plainer still.

—Philadelphia Times.

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

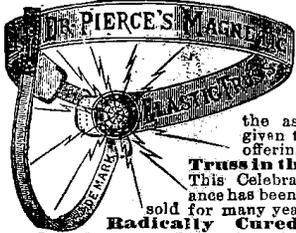

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parson, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

RUPTURE

In advertising Dr. PIERCE'S Patent MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS the assurance is given that we are offering the Best Truss in the World. This Celebrated Appliance has been extensively sold for many years and has Radically Cured thousands of cases of Rupture! This is an Electric Truss (the only successful one ever invented); has no Iron Hoops or Steel Springs about it, and being elastic, can be worn with ease and comfort Night and Day. It's a perfect retainer! For further particulars of Trusses, send 4c. in stamps for Pamphlet No. 1 and REMEMBER that Dr. Pierce's Genuine Electric Trusses contain our Private Signature exactly like that shown at top of this advertisement. Beware of inferior imitations! Address: MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COMPANY, 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,

Hygienic Physician.

Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,

Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.

HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m.

25tf

Health AND Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.

Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy, $1.

Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.50.

Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook, $1.

Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer, $1

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.

Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina, Ills. 50.

Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook, $1.

Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F. R. C. S., 30 cents

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS & TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.

Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.

God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.

Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.

Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.

Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.

The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.

Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.

The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.

OLIVER HINCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED

CURES

Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung

DISEASES

By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen.

Positive cure for Cancer.

26t37

Room 84, Flood B'ldg.

A HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS", 15 cents.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERY.

Located Eight Miles South of San Jacinto, Cal.

P. A. CLARK, PROPRIETOR.

A full stock of everything in the Nursery line on hand.

APPLES,

PEACHES,

PEARS,

PLUMS,

APRICOTS,

NECTARINES,

PRUNES,

ALMONDS,

WALNUTS,

QUINCES, ETC.

IN ALL VARIETIES.

A fine lot of Kelsey's Japan Plums, one and two years old.

Send for price list and buy where you can get trees at living rates.

P. A. CLARK, San Jacinto, Cal.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Franc

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against

LIBERTY,

By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

WRITE TO ELMINAI

Please send stamp for circulars and prices of Books, Blankets, Woolen Goods, and Stocking Yarn.

Snowville is now a Money Order office. Address, E. D. SLENKER, Snowville, Va.

Standard Scientific Works

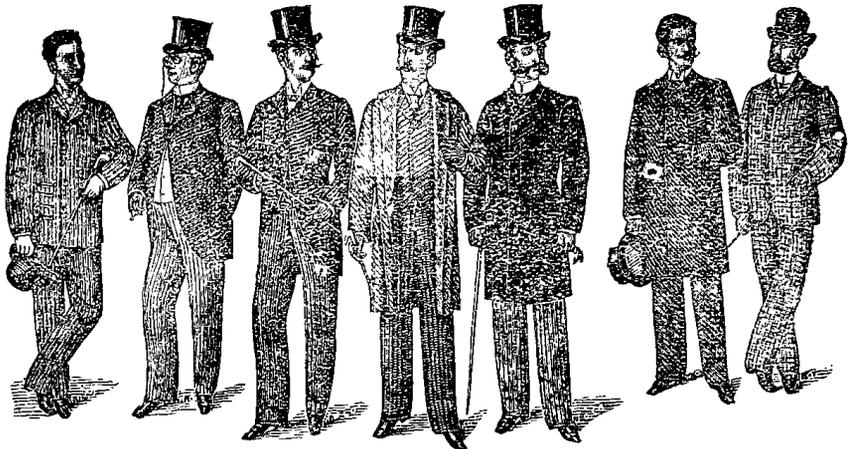

Works by Alexander Bain.
English Composition and Rhetoric.....	$1.75
Education as a Science.....	1.75
Works by Charles Darwin.
Origin of Species, 2 vols.....	$4.00
Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....	2.00
Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....	4.50
Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....	2.00
Works by J. W. Draper.
History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....	$1.75
Works by Ernst Haeckel.
The History of Creation. 2 vols.....	$5.00
Works by Huxley.
Lay Sermons.....	$1.75
The Advance of Science.....	.25
American Addresses.....	1.25
More Criticisms on Darwin.....	.50
The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....	2.00
Works by John Stewart Mill.
Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....	$4.00
On Liberty.....	1.25
Works by Richard A. Proctor.
Other Worlds than Ours.....	$1.75
Our Place among Infinities.....	1.75
Light Science for Leisure Hours.....	1.75
Works by Herbert Spencer.
Studies of Sociology.....	$1.50
First Principles.....	2.00
Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	4.00
Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	4.00
Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....	4.00
Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....	2.00
Universal Progress.....	2.00
Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....	2.00
Education.....	1.25
Organic Evolution.....	.75
Works by Andrew D. White.
Paper-Money Inflation in France.....	$.50
The Warfare of Science.....	1.00
Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
Body and Mind.....	$1.50
Responsibility in Mental Disease.....	1.50
Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
Handbook of Household Science.....	$1.75
Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....	1.75
MISCELLANEOUS.
By Asa Gray.
Darwiniana.....	$2.00
By L. L. McLaughlin.
Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....	$3.50
By C. Marcel.
Study of Languages.....	$1.25
By Lester F. Ward.
Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....	$5.00
By Frederick Overman.
A Treatise on Metallurgy.....	$5.00
B. F. G. Fairfield.
Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....	$1.25
By W. B. Carpenter.
Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....	$1.25
By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
Evolution.....	$1.50
By Sir John Lubbock.
Origin of Civilization.....	$5.00
By Charles A. Abbott.
A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....	$1.50
By Garrett P. Serviss.
Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....	$1.50
By Nathan Sheppard.
Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....	$1.50
English as She is Spoke.....	$.30
English as She is Wrote.....	.30
The Distracted Young Preacher.....	.25
Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

J A. REED.
FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR..... $25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.
TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

—BY—

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."

339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1.
Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
Six Months......75
Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....	$ 4 0
10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....	2 0
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....	2 75
14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....	3 00
14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....	4 00
10 karat Gold, Small Chain (for watch chain).....	3 00
14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....	4 50
10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....	5 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....	6 00
14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond".....	14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy.

Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,

Freethought Pub. Co.,
838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St.
San Francisco.
Watches Cleaned & Warranted, $1

Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 404f

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,
Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

BRAIN AND THE BIBLE.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.
BY EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

We can recommend this as one of the most valuable works in the list of Freethought publications. Printed in large type on fine paper and elegantly bound. Price $1. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoemaker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater.
C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Nurseryman.

R. H. Foster, Babylon, N. Y.

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

r. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.

Rapp & Deberry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st.

Otto Sins, 320 Kearny st.

ORIGINAL

BROWNSVILLE

WOOLEN MILLS

CLOTHING STORE.

164 and 166 Second Street,

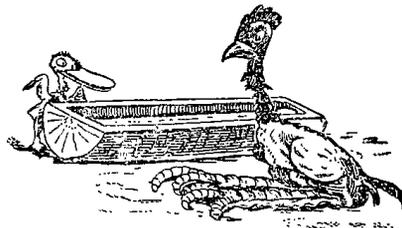

Near corner of Morrison,

The Best Goods in the Country

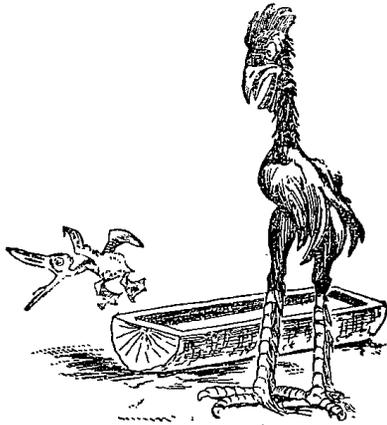

PORTLAND, ORE. W. R. BISHOP, AGT.

Call, or send orders and measure.

Appearances Are Sometimes Deceitful.

Saucy Duckling—Oh, ho! a very old looking head on a very dumpy looking chicken!

Rooster (indignantly)—Did you speak to me, sir?—Texas Sittings.

A Dire Threat.

Angry Householder—How much will you take and leave the neighborhood at once?

Leader of Little German Band—Half a dollar.

Angry Householder—You ask too much. Leader of Little German Band—Ish dot so? Vell, I blays you more tune, un den you see if dot's too mooch.—Chatter.

His Expedient.

Whitely (to small boy)—Here, sonny, if you'll collect me a lot of insects I'll give you a quarter.

Small Boy—Insects! What do yer want 'em fer?

Whitely—I want to put them on my wife's plants. She won't let me smoke in the house except to kill insects on the plants.—West Shore.

A Bad Scare.

"We were held up by train robbers."

"Were you frightened?"

"Awfully. One man who had disgorged $100 found out afterward that he had a hundred more in his fob pocket that had been overlooked, and he was so scared he went back and gave it up."—New York Sun.

His Busy Hour.

Servant Girl (at 1 a. m.)—Get up, Mr. Fellows, there is a burglar below.

Fellows (drawing the cover over his head)—Tell him I'm not in.—New York World.

Spun Out.

"A dispatch says that the strikers are worsted."

"Worsted? That's a yarn."—Lawrence American.

A Scientific Answer.

"Jimmie, do you know why the cows always eat thistles when they can find them?"

"Yes. So's to pick their teeth."—New York Sun.

Not Made for That Purpose.

"That's my motto, sink or swim."

"Bosh! Who ever saw a sinker swim?"—New York Herald.

PROFESSION OF FAITH

OF A SAVOYARD VICAR.

—BY—

J. J. ROUSSEAU.

The above volume includes "A Search for Truth," by Ralph Iron (Olive Schreiner).
Cloth, 50 cents. Paper, 25 cents.

Address The Freethought Pub. Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTIANITY * * *

—AND—

* * * AGNOSTICISM.

A CONTROVERSY

Consisting of papers by

Prof. Thomas Huxley, Rev. Henry Wace,
The Bishop of Peterborough

W. H. Mallock, Mrs. Humphrey Ward.
Price, 30 cents.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.

Address The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Employment!

Any lady desiring to devote a few hours each day to the management of a pleasant and remunerative business, should communicate with Mrs. Browne, 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

No canvassing.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Vol. III—No. 45.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan., 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - NOVEMBER 8, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

The first to meet me as I landed at Coquille, was Judge Low, of Bandon, who does not miss any Freethought lectures if he can help it. He is a genial companion for the frontier, and can tell stories and elucidate philosophy by the hour around the sparkling camp-fire.

The traveler finds a good welcome at the Olive House, and life's journey is punctuated with good things. Cheerful comradeship is here also.

H. H. Nichols leads the "forlorn hope." Coquille is quite orthodox. The evangelist is always on hand, and revivals flourish. As fast as Nichols puts up the notices of my lectures they are torn down with Christian zeal. That is the way they fight for the Lord—keep the people in ignorance.

I was sorry to find our splendid worker T. C. Nichols among the invalids, but the spirit is unbroken, and the look is forward. I hope for health again to this gallant soldier who never shrinks from labor or quits the flag.

I didn't have much of an audience at Coquille, but there are enough here to keep blazing the line, and I don't intend to surrender this place to the black flag of orthodoxy. There is promise still.

I met Jim Laird, always at lightning speed. He runs the mail from Roseburg to Empire City, and puts the traveler through in handsome style.

J. Henry Schroeder was up from Arago, and, after my night's sojourn in company with Judge Law, I go with him over the Coquille river, in the splendid sunshine, to Jack Laird's, where we gather around the hospitable table. Like his brother, our host gives the philosophy of real life in original fashion. He works but doesn't pray.

In the afternoon we all go over to Schroeder's and the Pavilion. The Pavilion is empty, but we "bate no jot of heart or hope" as we pass the genial afternoon at the fireside of the Schroeders.

Thursday we go over to Myrtle Point, a whole team of us. There is a good gathering there. The band discourses music. E. Bender leads the inspiring fellowship. With such support the world must move to Freedom's goal.

I was pleased to meet with Lathrop, formerly of Baker City, where the Thomas Paine Mine and George Haines make the golden stream of progress.

Smith, of Arago joins FREETHOUGHT and gives the Secular Pilgrim a mountain bouquet of "huckleberries" which lasts all the way to Roseburg.

Midnight I start for Roseburg. The moon sails away into a mist, and the glimmering lantern again lights our way through the mighty forests and the winding canyons. Early morning finds us at Teters, where appetite and breakfast coincide with refreshing zest.

The day dawns beautifully, and through the splendor of the morning and afternoon, along the river banks, through the woods, over the plains, amid the hills that roll away in the blue distance the stage coach bears us to the locomotive.

At six o'clock in the evening we arrive at Roseburg. I was pleased to meet G. W. Majory, formerly of Myrtle Point, who is now located here and keeps hotel in a style that commands success. He also takes FREETHOUGHT and purposes to open the way for future work.

At two o'clock in the morning I resume my journey. It is Saturday, but I find it difficult, traveling day and night and sleeping at odd spells, to keep track of the time.

However, I have a good rest on Saturday under the glowing forehead of Wagner Butte. I come to the home of W. J. Dean. No storms this time. It was a fairy-like day. The air was golden, the sky perfectly blue. I couldn't find a better place to pass the Bible Sabbath. I think I was about as tired as God was when he got through creation. I followed his example and blessed and hallowed the seventh day with delicious laziness.

Sunday, I went to work again. I lectured at Talent in the morning and in the evening at Ashland. There was not a great number present at Talent, but it is a pleasure to speak to people here, for they understand things and are responsive. I had a fair audience at Ashland in the new hall which is quite elegant, and I expect sometime that it will be filled with Freethinkers, for Ashland is quite progressive.

Roque River Valley is lovely at this season of the year, and the drive from Talent to Ashland in the day time was exceedingly delightful. Not a cloud was to be seen. At night there was a splendid full moon flooding the valley and the surrounding hills with radiance, and making an entrancing picture as we journeyed home.

And thus ends my Oregon trip, with as happy and as bright a close as I could desire. Good weather, good friends, and good prospects for the future.

The Goddards, the Andersons, the Breeses, the Beasons, the Deans, the Terrels, the Robinsons, and others at Talent make the material for advancement, notwithstanding the strenuous efforts of the orthodox side.

Miss Rosetta Waters is back from the sea shore after a summer's sojourn, and it looks as if she enjoyed the Pacific breezes.

J. S. Miller at Ashland, City Marshall Mayfield, H. S. Evans, secretary of the Secular Union; Mrs. E. DePeatt, L. M. Eagon, J. W. Burriss, J. B. R. Hutchings, and Mrs. Hutchings, A. Bish, and others are on the Freethought roll. H. S. Evans and W. J. Dean have been doing some good newspaper work the past year against orthodoxy. One valuable result has been achieved—the Bible is no longer read in the public schools of Ashland. Monday morning I continue my journey to California, over the Siskiyou by daylight, and through the Sacramento valley in the gorgeous moonlight.

During the months of December and January, I shall be in Texas, returning in time for the state convention and Paine anniversary the last of January.

En route to San Francisco, I met Dr. Burke, of St. Helena, of the Advent Sanitarium. He represents that side of the house which is doing such effectual work for state secularization, and chipped in five dollars to help us in our line of work. That is good fellowship.

A pleasant visit with R. F. Grigsby, of Calistoga, is good greeting for the California work. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

SUNDAY AND THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The New York "Truth Seeker" has prepared a petition asking for the opening on Sunday of the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893. Following is the text of the petition:

To the World's Columbian Exposition Commission:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of separation of church and state may be maintained.
2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.
3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.
4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is a solely humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.
5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.
6. To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to the days of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.
7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

Readers may cut this petition out, paste it at the head of a blank sheet of paper, and secure the signatures of all who are in favor of the movement. The sooner the work is begun, and the sooner these petitions begin to flow toward the commission having in charge the matter of opening the exhibition, the greater will be the effect. The Sabbatarians are active and unscrupulous, and are using every argument, no matter how dishonest, to influence the commission to close the exposition on the only day a majority of the people can attend without loss of valuable time.

Petitions when filled may be sent to this office or to the office of the "Truth Seeker," whence they will be forwarded to the members of the commission.

THE CZAR AS A RELIGIOUS FANATIC.

The action of the czar of Russia in expelling and persecuting the Jews is sometimes attributed by Christians to the commercial prejudice against the Jewish race; but it appears that it is religion, and religion only, that is behind all these outrages.

A St. Petersburg correspondent of the New York Tribune reports that the official crusade against the Jews goes steadily from bad to worse. At first the persecuted people hoped that the ukase of the czar would be only partially enforced, and that after a time matters would settle back in their accustomed channel. But they now find all such hopes a vain delusion, and their worst fears more than realized. The decree of oppression and exile is being enforced to the very letter, without a single touch of mercy. True, the government diligently sends forth denials that any persecution is in progress, and its denials are officially accepted as truth by other European governments. The fact is, however, that the most gloomy and tragic accounts that have been published of the anti-Jewish campaign have failed to express the full measure of its atrocious inhumanity.

Apart from the almost incredible violence and outrage daily practiced upon the Jews, by the soldiery, civil officials, and the populace, a number of most stringent laws are about to be put into execution, the effect of which will be to make every Jew in Russia an outlaw. For example, the law of 1865, granting Jews permission to live and engage in business in the interior of the empire, is to be repealed. It is said that every provincial governor in the empire urges such action, and the formal proclamation of the repeal is daily looked for. The result will be the practical extermination of at least two hundred thousand Jewish families. For then they will be absolutely forbidden to trade in any of the chief commodities of the country, such as grain, provisions, cattle, lumber, and spirits. Moreover, the majority of them who are settled in the villages will be driven from their homes and their property confiscated. This fate will befall at least half a million. Besides these, all the Polish Jews in the provinces of Russian-Poland will be expelled, and the three hundred thousand Jews who in virtue of a ministerial order in 1880 were allowed to settle and trade in the interior of the empire, where they enjoy a degree of municipal protection, will likewise be forced to leave their habitations.

While such deadly blows are struck at the Jews in their homes and business, other discriminations are being made against them. For example, it has long been the law of Russia that an only son, on whom the family is dependent for support, is, whether Jew or Christian, exempt from military service. But it is now proposed to deprive the Jews of this and other military exemptions when occasion arises for the completion of a given number of recruits. The relatives of Jews who escape the conscription are to be fined three hundred rubles, and it is proposed, in every case of Jewish desertion, to levy a fine of six hundred rubles on the community to which he belongs. Thus the Jews are to be forced to defend with their lives the empire that outlaws them.

The question is often asked, says the "Tribune's" correspondent, Why does the present czar, who is personally a good man, so cruelly persecute these people? The answer is easily given. He is a religious monomaniac. He has inherited the sombre fanaticism that characterized his unhappy mother, and added to it by brooding over his perils in the solitary confinement of his bomb-proof palace. Thus he has become convinced that Nihilism is permitted to afflict him to punish him for the empire's laxity of faith. He believes that his father's death and the attempts that have been made on his own life are just so many dispensations of providence, sent as judgments because of Russia's tolerance of heretics. To suppress Nihilism and restore peace and security, therefore, it is only necessary to stamp out heterodoxy. So he has set his face like a flint against all who do not bow the knee to the orthodox Greek church. Upon the Jews his hand falls heavily, but not more so than upon the German Lutherans, and upon the Old Believers. The latter are merely a division of the Greek church, and are distinguished for the purity and piety of their lives. But for years past the government has been sending them to Siberia by thousands for no other reason than their religious belief. In the provinces on the German border there are many Germans, or descendants of Germans, who cling to the faith of Luther. To these the Russian government officials address themselves and attempt their conversion by every means of chicanery and threatening which they have at command. Those of the colonists who cannot resolve to abandon the faith of their fathers are subjected to every conceivable annoyance and debasement, until, driven to distraction, they desert their homes and flee to distant lands. During the first seven months of this year more than fourteen thousand Germans have thus left Southern Russia, where life has become intolerable, and embarked at Odessa and other Russian ports of the Black sea. The emigrants have sold their farms for much below their real value in their eagerness to escape from so inhospitable a country.

There are, of course, many instances of so-called "conversion," but, as a matter of fact, these unfortunates are simply persecuted into submission. There have been hundreds, aye, thousands of cases in which Roman Catholics, Lutherans, and Jews have been seized bodily or dragged by main force to the baptismal font of the Greek church or have been driven there by virtue of bayonet prods administered by Russian soldiers.

It is gratifying to learn that all this pious zeal against the enemies of the church does not seem to bring prosperity to the empire, however. Indeed, there is now an actual financial crisis. Money is scarcer than it has been for twenty years, and prices of grain and other products are frightfully low and still falling. Meanwhile the czar is away amusing himself at hunting on the game preserves from which he has expelled the rightful owners. Perhaps when he finds that his course is affecting the royal income, when commerce is paralyzed, and farming interests ruined, he will ask whether himself and his brutal government, rather than the wrath of any offended spook, are not responsible for the state of affairs. He had better do this ere the people learn that, as Swinburne puts it, "night hath but one red star—Tyrannicide," and conclude to take that star for their guide.

SEND for "Traveling Alone," price 30 cents.

THE NEW ERA LYCEUM.

A Liberal Lyceum has been organized at New Era, Oregon, with the following officers: president, Miss Katie Kehm; vice-president, Mrs. Anna Batchler; secretary, Mr. Henry Hougham; treasurer, Miss Alice Clark; librarian, Mr. W. W. Jesse; conductor, Mr. Carl Batchler; assistant-conductor, Mr. Geo. Johnson.

We have now in the library about one hundred and fifty volumes, besides hundreds of periodicals and papers. A donation in the shape of a Bible will be thankfully received.

Thus the good work goes on; it is upon the establishing of these children's Lyceums that the success of Freethought depends.

KATIE KEHM.

LECTURE BY REMSBURG.

John E. Remsburg, who is so favorably known throughout the country as a lecturer and writer, speaks Friday evening, Nov. 7, at Grand Central Hall, corner Market and Sixth sts., subject: "False Claims." Admission free.

THE proprietor of the Maison Riche, a high-priced restaurant in San Francisco, where wealthy rakes were in the habit of dining with fast women, has just died, and the attorneys for his estate are settling his accounts. Among the names of men who owe the estate for dinners at the Maison Riche is that of the Rev. Charles D. Barrows, against which is set an item of seventy-seven dollars marked "N. G." Dr. Barrows was pastor of the First Congregational church, and when accused of keeping bad company he pleaded that his association with lewd women was for the purpose of reforming them. Some of his friends are now ready to admit that ten-dollar dinners and "sundries" made the succoring of unfortunate females too expensive to be prudently undertaken even by a clergyman with a four thousand dollar salary.

OBSERVATIONS.

A whole hall-full of young people, and a number of older ones, attended the Freethought Society's sociable last Sunday evening. Some of the musicians and speakers who were expected to help out in the entertainment could not come, and the literary and musical part of the programme was seriously shortened; but Miss Lenont gave a piano solo, Miss Palanca recited, Mr. Lenz played the flute, Vice-President Eastman read selections, Miss Arper sang sweetly, little Miss Bailey gave a neat recitation, and the hour passed pleasantly away.

It seems to be a fact which must be recognized, however regrettable, that a sociable and dance attracts more young ladies to the meetings than the most able lectures and discussions have thus far proved competent to do. I sometimes doubt whether the girls really care much for the vital questions that come under the head of religious, scientific, economic, and historical subjects, and the young men are open to the same suspicion of indifference to the solution of great problems. On some occasions, when a lecture has been announced by an able speaker on "Our National Destiny and the Causes Which May Lead to a Resumption of Friendly Relations between General Wanamaker and the Postmaster at Milpitas," or a cognate subject, I have extended invitations to a score of young people without inducing any of them to attend; while last Sunday evening, without extra pressure, I was able to secure the presence of about a dozen, and others whom I have since met are sorry they did not go—a thing that has not happened, to my recollection, when the entertainment consisted of a lecture.

Brother Owen, of the "Golden Gate," has come to the conclusion that Materialists and Freethinkers are so egotistic that if the angels possessed a sense of humor these people would be the subjects of their merriment. Our spiritual contemporary says:

He who ridicules prayer, devotion, and spiritual aspiration, as something unworthy or unbecoming an intelligent being placing himself as first in the scale of intellectual importance in the plan of the universe, eclipses conception with the magnitude of his vanity. If angels were given to deriding the follies of mortals, they might well stand aghast with astonishment at the monumental presumption of such an egotist. A monkey on his hind legs, on one of the least of the millions of worlds that people space; an intelligent bug that buys and sells, that drinks rum and defiles his body with tobacco; the mere prophecy of an immortal soul; a spiritual tramp that lies and steals, and eats the bread of idleness, at the head of the universe! Can it be possible! Such have not been the great thinkers of the world, the geniuses of history, who were modest if not always wise. That presumption was left to the materialist and so-called Freethinkers of modern times.

I have never met a Materialist or Freethinker who professed to be at the head of the universe, though most of them had a higher conception of humanity than is expressed in Brother Owen's description of man as a spiritual tramp, an intelligent bug, or a monkey erected on his hind legs. It strikes me that nothing could be more modest than the attitude of Materialists and Freethinkers toward the unknown. They do not profess to foretell events about whose antecedents they know nothing. They do not claim to be en rapport, as the cant phrase is, with the spirit world. They do not pray to God, because they are not sufficiently egotistic to imagine that a power great enough to govern the universe could be in any way affected by their whims.

Mr. Owen's real grievance against Materialists and Freethinkers is that they decline to agree with him on some minor points such as the existence of God, a future life, and spirit communication. Perhaps he is right and they are wrong on these questions, but in the matter of egotism, I hold it is much more modest for a man to confess ignorance, and even to doubt the knowledge of others than to assume the attitude of the theologian who grasps the umbilical cord of the cosmos in one hand and expounds its philosophy with the other.

TWO CRANKS.

I have just received from London several copies of a monthly journal of mystical interpretation called "Psyche." Leo Michael is the editor of it, and the ex-reverend and ex-irreverent Mr. George Chainey is a valued contributor. An article by Mr. Chainey in the March number entitled "Episodes in a Life of Religious Adventure" is quite entertaining. The writer tells how pious he was when a boy, how he began to preach hell and damnation at the age of seventeen, and how he saw the greatest skeptics of that period tremble before his eloquence. Later on he became a Unitarian and rattled the desiccated bones of orthodoxy with equal success. While occupying the pulpit Mr. Chainey says he wrote many beautiful compositions, but he made the fatal error of trying to fertilize his mind by reading the fallacious works of Huxley, Darwin, and Spencer, which left him at the bottom of the Infidel soup. His advent among the Materialists, he tells us, was creative of great enthusiasm, and he at once assumed a position second only to that occupied by Col. R. G. Ingersoll in the hearts of American Infidels. He soon had a paper with a circulation of three thousand copies, and everything was hilarious. While pursuing this work he had a change of heart, and saw that he was not making the world any better. He therefore determined to go upon the stage and achieve fame as an actor. It was at this important point that the mother of Mr. Chainey's soul produced her offspring, and our writer became a Spiritualist. He says he was more surprised himself than his friends were at the sudden change, and I believe the statement to be true; because those of us who had come to know Mr. Chainey real well were not likely to be surprised at anything he did.

When Chainey got Spiritualism he got it bad. He "saw with other eyes, heard with other ears, was fed from an invisible source, enjoyed exquisite odors, and felt the touch and thrilling presence of unseen forms." These phenomena occurred at a camp-meeting, where there would have been less remark if the form whose presence thrilled him had been unseen by others as well as Mr. Chainey. He also began to see visions, felt a great shaft of light rushing down upon him and was much braced up thereby. Several times when he needed money, he says, this descent came upon him, "and without apparent thought or sense of fatigue," he "wrote that which brought the necessary money." The reader is here left to decide for himself whether Mr. Chainey wrote for the press and received remuneration therefor, or whether when thus inspired he could the more successfully negotiate a loan. Mr. Chainey was finally "caught up into a great joy," and a star came from heaven and located on his forehead, thrilling him through with "undescribable ecstasy." He had a vision in which he was directed to go to the Holy Land and receive clearer inspiration. This vision came to him in Australia, whereupon he returned to America; but he had got no farther toward Palestine than Boston, Mass., when he had a dream in which he was transported to Doremy, France, the birthplace of the lamented Joan of Arc. Forthwith Mr. Chainey packed his valise and went to Doremy, France, whose people undoubtedly set him down for a lunatic, as he wandered about the little settlement "in a state of joy bordering on ecstasy," ending up the first day by kneeling at an altar in the local Catholic church dedicated to the immortal Joan. In this place he tells us, apparently without realizing he will be set down as untruthful, that an angel and a "woman clothed with the sun" appeared to him and shed the light of their countenances upon his favored person. All these experiences convinced Mr. Chainey that Jeanne d'Arc was sent direct from heaven to save France, and that he has a mission, five hundred and fifty years later, to write her biography and show that she was a daughter of God and full sister to Jesus Christ. He has, I understand, written the book, which is published in France.

When Chainey gets money enough he will go to Palestine and work up his ideas of scriptural interpretation. Through his subjective illumination he claims to have discerned the true meaning of the symbolism of the Christian religion and the Holy Land, so that nothing but the incidental expense prevents him from laying the whole truth of the universe before a perishing world. Since I read the history of Don Quixote I have not heard of a more absurd person than Mr. George Chainey has become.

There is another crank to whom attention might be drawn. He was first known to the public as Cyrus Romulus R. Teed, and he lived at Moravia, N. Y. He is now called simply Cyrus. He resides in the city of Chicago, and publishes a paper called the "Flaming Sword," copies of which are scattered about the floor as I write. Teed is a more original lunatic than Chainey, and has larger scientific attainments. If you take his word for it, he is John the Baptist, Jesus Christ, and several other divine incarnations combined. Teed is the fulfillment of a prophecy found in Isaiah, xi:

And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his root, etc.

His father's name was Jesse, therefore Mr. Teed claims to be the rod and the branch aforesaid. But if that were not sufficient, the mention of Cyrus by name in another part of Isaiah settles the question:

Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden, to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings to open before him the two-leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut.

Teed was also foretold by Daniel, and his birthday set. He is therefore a voice crying in the wilderness announcing the millennium, whose advent is only waiting Mr. Teed's recognition as a messiah. While Chainey holds that the Bible is a book of symbolism, Teed maintains that it is a work of remarkable accuracy, containing everything necessary to be known. Thus all history is outlined and recorded in the Bible, whose characters correspond to the various members and organs of the human body. Noah, for instance, is the diaphragm of history, while the twelve apostles are its duodenum.

In the matter of astronomy, too, Teed is original. According to his system, which he calls Koreshan, and which is destined to supplant the erroneous conceptions of Copernicus, we are not living upon the convex surface of a globe but inside a hollow sphere. What we call the sun he disposes of as an electric light; the moon is only a mirage or optical illusion, and the stars, instead of being great worlds, are trifling focuses of light. The astronomers also have been fooling us about the immense distances of the planets. The sun is not farther off than New York from San Francisco, and the moon is a still nearer neighbor.

Teed's religious scheme is complex, though less mythical than Chainey's. The Koreshans are people after Tolstoi's own heart, being not only communists but celibates. Furthermore there is to be a new genus of beings neither male nor female, but with all the advantages of both and without the failings of either. Mr. Teed holds that Jesus was the archetype of this new genus, the "united sex," and that all are capable of attaining the sexless state. Whether Mr. Teed has himself reached this ambiguous condition, which he calls the highest type of manhood, he does not say, but when he last spoke to me on the subject in New York five or six years ago he was confident that he would, and that he should then be immortal in the flesh. He explained that the pineal gland, located at the base of the brain, was the only drawback, and if this gland could be either removed or paralyzed, the distinction of human beings as to sex would be obliterated and death become a thing of the past. The cult of Teed, or Cyrus, as he now calls himself, is very near Materialism. He does not affirm a soul at all as that work is generally understood. Instead of going to heaven and praising God forever, we are going to live here, and the gods will come and settle among us.

Like other religions, Mr. Teed's system goes along smoothly until somebody arises and asks what reliable evidence there is to prove it true; then, like other systems, it falls down. In one respect, however, Teed is more admirable than Chainey. He courts argument and challenges refutation of his claims on biblical grounds, while Chainey declines to discuss at all, claiming that controversy is a fatal error, and that evidence is no test of truth. Both these men are afflicted with what alienists term the prophetic mania. Just for fun I will here quote a passage from one of Chainey's prophecies. It occurs in a vision he enjoyed in France:

As I listened entranced with joy, Lo! a soft light began to glow behind the figure of the angel and of the woman, penetrating their forms, and I saw that they were transparent and presented no resistance, until they glowed with a wondrous brilliancy and intense whiteness, and yet soft and pearl-like. Then, O joy unutterable! the light fell from them upon me, and I felt it glowing in every cell and fibre of my being, filling me with a sense of some mystical relation to the angel and the woman on whom I gazed with all the ardor of which I was capable, when suddenly I knew that they were alive, and cast upon me a living smile, the memory of which remains in my veins like liquid fire, filling me with a sense of almost omnipotence.

From the foregoing it will be seen that Chainey suffers from the same form of mental lesion that afflicted Swedenborg and Mohammed. I have not at hand so good an example of the vaticinations of Teed, but he belongs to a different class of cranks from Chainey, Mohammed, and Swedenborg. Here is the way his mental lesion manifests itself:

The sons of God were begotten spiritually over eighteen hundred years ago. They have been passing through the process of gestation during the past nearly nineteen hundred years. The process has involved the principles of both retrogressive and progressive metamorphosis. They are now to come forth at the end of the age as the natural born of God, the first fruits of the resurrection. The new genus about to spring forth is the product of the direct planting of the God-man or seed-man, Jesus. The modeler of the perfect natural and heavenly kingdom in the earth is the woman, vivified by the fecundating potency of Jehovah God through the overshadowing to be effected in the theocrasis of Cyrus.

No honest man who had all his senses about him would write either of the above extracts, because he would know he was talking about things which are not. These authors would make most interesting subjects for the students of mental peculiarities. The first question to be asked, though, is whether both are not conscious humbugs who take advantage of the superstitions of people in order to effect some object that is unworthy.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The Grand Hotel, at Market and New Montgomery sts., this city, was destroyed by fire last Monday morning at a loss of $500,000. —Registrar Smiley estimates that the cost of the election in San Francisco is $134,000, or somewhat more than $2 for each voter registered. —James A. Herne, the well-known actor, lectured in the Bush-street theatre last Sunday afternoon on the Single Tax, of which he is an advocate.—There were 117 deaths in San Francisco last week, which is exactly the number recorded for the same period in 1889.—Charles J. Hirsch, editor of the "Evening Post," is under arrest charged with libeling a politician.—Mr. and Mrs. Stein gave an exhibition in a San Francisco theatre last Sunday night, purporting to be an exposure of Spiritualism. They succeeded in duplicating the phenomena, but the Spiritualists claim that the Steins are themselves mediums and work their wonders by spirit aid.—The Lick Free Baths were opened to the public on Monday, the 3d. The cost of the building and furnishing was $85,000; lot and street improvements, $37,500; total cost, $122,500. The lot is valued at $32,500. Adjoining it is also a vacant lot, also owned by the baths, valued at $75,000. The unexpended cash amounts to $27,000. The increased value of the investment is placed at $70,000, making $220,000 as the total value of the property, for which $150,000 was expended. It is thought it will cost about $500 a month to run the baths.—Several men who were post-office officials under Cleveland have been indicted by the grand jury of this county for levying assessments on employees for campaign purposes.—The private character of T. V. Cator, nominee for Congress from the fourth district, was vilely attacked by his political opponents just before election. It seems he has been divorced and remarried. His former wife published a card vindicating Mr. Cator's honor.—John Harvey, a native of England, was committed to the Agnews insane asylum the other day. He had twice attempted murder, and asserted that the Lord told him to kill somebody.—A loathsome contemporary calls attention to the fact that M. H. de Young, proprietor of the "Chronicle," owns $1,312,500 worth of real estate in this city and county, but pays taxes on only $522,725.

Dillon and O'Brien, the Irish fugitives from England, have reached New York.—The nurse who takes care of President Harrison's grandson, Baby McKee, is on the pay-roll of the White House as a skilled laborer, and draws $75 a month from the public funds.—About seventy lives were lost in a collision between the schooner Cornelius Hargraves and the Spanish steamer Vizcaya off the coast of Delaware Oct. 30. The steamer was sunk.—The Rev. James Butler, of the Methodist church at Dunlap, Tenn., is in jail. He stole a parishioner's horses and eloped with his young wife.—The postmaster at Leavenworth, Kan., last week threw out the mail edition of the Leavenworth "Times" because the paper printed a list of Catholic fair raffles. The "Times" has sued the postmaster for $10,000, making the claim that no law can forbid an American newspaper printing the news.—The census shows that the United States has a population of 62,480,540.

A dispatch from St. Petersburg says the Czar has been deeply irritated by the advice and interference of the foreign press and preachers in behalf of the Russian Jews, and that his majesty, who is personally in favor of rigorous enforcement of the anti-Jewish decrees, has given directions that no leniency shall be shown, and that officials shown to be remiss shall be reported for reprimand or punishment.—The king of Holland is a lunatic.—Cuban advices report that the McKinley law has already had a baneful effect on Cuba. Forty of the smaller tobacco factories have closed and a large number of operatives are idle.—In Matehuala, Mexico, Oct. 30, a church roof fell, causing the death of three people and wounding four men, including a priest.—It is stated that in a farewell interview with Cardinal Lavigerie the pope said he no longer hoped for anything from Austria. He would place all his trust in France to secure the restoration of his temporal power.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM has told the story of his life, that is, his religious life, in a small volume called "My Religious Experience," Freethought Publishing Company, San Francisco. The son of an orthodox Christian minister, he passed a joyless childhood filled with gloomy thoughts, and believing that "joy was sin, and anything delightful was devilish." The long and dismal Sundays were to him days of trial, and waking at night in terror at the thought of hell-fire caused him untold anguish. His unbelief as a child, his conversion, three years passed in theological studies, after which he graduated and was ordained to the orthodox Congregational ministry, the change from orthodoxy to Unitarianism, and finally his abandonment of all religion, form a very interesting account of his religious experiences. Mr. Putnam says: "I do not know why religion has not been as much of a reality to me as to the most earnest Christian that ever lived;" and again: "I state my honest convictions when I declare that religion is absolutely worthless. I believe that it has done vastly more injury than good to the human race." Mr. Putnam's life is full of interest. He does not rail against religion as too many Freethinkers do, but tells his story with great feeling and dignity, and in a manner that should not shock or pain any one.—Twentieth Century.

MR STEPHEN MAYBELL, author of "Civilization Civilized," has published a new work on the money question which he calls "Land Currency: A Brief Treatise on the Subject of No Tax." Mr. Maybell's central idea is to base a currency upon the real estate of the country instead of upon its metal solely, and he argues the question out in a way that will convince many who do not now agree with him. The book (56 pages octavo) may be ordered from this office; price 25 cents.

A STATUE to Horace Greeley has been unveiled before the Tribune office. The ceremonies were begun with a prayer by Bishop Potter. It's a wonder, if spirits can make their presence manifest, that Horace did not hit the bishop a whack alongside his head. Think of the incongruity of praying for the memory of the first president of the Manhattan Liberal Club.—"Truth Seeker."

W. F. JAMIESON gave lectures in Menominee, Mich., recently. He will make engagements for lectures and debates in Iowa, Missouri, and Kansas. He desires to spend the winter in Kansas, but will accept calls for lectures and debates in Missouri and Iowa. Address him at Des Moines, Iowa.

METHODS OF WORK.

The difficulty of getting Freethought (I prefer the term "Infidel") argument before the people is a serious one. Very few Christians and many of the "unchurched" will not read anything Liberal as soon as they find out what it is. A book, newspaper, pamphlet, or any such thing bearing the name of any prominent Liberal writer or speaker or publishing house will be rejected as soon as that fact is discovered. So if a lecture is announced, all the orthodox keep away and induce others that they can do so. Hence many who could be won over to our side are kept away, and many who would think and study are kept in ignorance. Secularists should work against this everywhere.

A good plan is to encourage lyceums, debating clubs, literary societies, and kindred organizations. Many a time Freethought ideas and teachings may be got in at such places, often without the knowledge of the recipients. Steady work in this manner will tell. Avoid giving offense, but be fearless, good-natured, and persistent.

Take an interest in the public schools. Visit them; see what is taught there. And if your children are being taught what you believe to be error or falsehood, superstition, or immorality you have a right to interfere. You have a right, as a citizen, to require a school-teacher to be impartial and not humbug your little ones whom you intrust to his care. If you are unable to prevent objectionable teaching, you may do very much to disabuse your children's young minds by explaining these matters to them yourself at home: and then protect them from being browbeaten or frightened by their teacher in school. And to do this effectively the parent needs to be well informed.

Many other ways may be used as occasion arises, but the judicious circulation of Freethought literature and encouragement of speakers should not be neglected. The methods of "our friends, the enemy," are often admirable. They are the result of much study and zeal on the part of those who have secured bread and butter, yellow-legged chickens, soft beds, and much petting thereby. I commend them. If Infidels would show half as much zeal, energy, and self-denial in behalf of the truth as religionists do to promulgate superstition and fraud, the battle would soon be won.

Infidels should look forward to the time when we will have schools, colleges, libraries, and institutions of learning, and social and literary organizations in every town and hamlet in the land, where the truths of science shall be taught and civilization advanced, and the minds of men and women relieved from the superstitions and degrading fear of an angry God and a burning hell. This is something worthy to work for. Let us not weary in well doing.

F. S. MATTESON.

Aumsville, Or.

BATTLE FOR CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS IN WASHINGTON.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Mr. Samuel Christopher, a member of the Washington Secular Union, who keeps a barber shop in Seattle, in whose case Judge Rivers (police justice) decided the Sunday closing statute, under which arrests were made for violation of Sunday sacredness, did not apply to trade in the sense of work at mechanical labor or handicraft, but the word trade was used only in the legal sense; that is, trade, barter, sale of goods or merchandise. The brilliant argument of our president, Richard Winsor, so fully sustained by a mass of legal authorities, calling forth the compliments of the court for its learning and research so far as the constitutionality of the statute was concerned was not passed on. But under the ruling of the court, our demurrer was sustained so far, that that statute did not apply to working at lawful handicraft or mechanical work. Prisoner was discharged, and last Sunday nearly all the barber shops were kept open.

The animus of the fanatical bigots, and underhand work of the National Sabbath Union, is manifest in the fact that the wealthy clothing merchants, who were arrested for actually selling goods and merchandise on Sunday, although keeping open and doing a big business were not molested. Since we obtained change of venue, the whole matter has slumbered, no action been taken; but Mr. Christopher, the hard-working, industrious citizen, because a Liberal, has been singled out as the victim of their malicious persecution.

He was arrested again last Wednesday—no other barber was complained of. In the same building, the very next door to Mr. Christopher's bath-house and barber shop, is a store for the sale of notions and gents' furnishing goods, open all day long every Sunday, yet no complaint made.

Mr. Christopher was arrested and taken before Judge Humes, of the Superior court, to answer for an offense for which he had already been arrested, his case argued, and he discharged, the court declaring he had committed no offense against the law. Our counsel was out of the city. Mr. Christopher called attention of the court to his previous arrest and discharge. Nevertheless, he was compelled to furnish cash bail. The case is set down for next Thursday.

We shall fight the old puritanical relic of barbarism they call the Sunday closing statute, by every possible legitimate means to the very end. It is just as well the matter has been (even though unjustly and illegally) brought before the higher courts. We shall now force decision of the question as to the constitutionality of the statute.

We will carry the war into Africa, without fear or favor. If the Superior court, swayed or intimidated by the fanatics, the pagan sun worshipers of the National Sabbath Union decides against us the Washington Secular Union will enforce the law rigidly. We will make no attack on the poor, the weak, or defenceless, but cause arrest and press to conviction every newspaper publisher who sells newspapers on Sunday, and all editors and employees who do necessary work on Sunday to get out Monday morning edition.

If all work and business is prohibited, it shall not be enforced against Liberals of the Washington Secular Union alone. Work in the power houses of cable and electric cars must stop. No more street cars can run on Sunday. All restaurants must close. We will keep sharp lookout for mayor, chief of police, and all other high public officials. The statute reads:

"Sec. 2070. Any public officer who shall refuse or wilfully neglect to inform against and prosecute offenders against this chapter shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than $25, nor more than $100, and the court before which such officer shall be tried shall declare the office or appointment held by such officer vacant for the balance of his term."

By the time the case reaches the supreme court the legislature will have been driven to repeal the obnoxious statute.

A case of a Mr. Boreman, proprietor of the Bee-hive store at Spokane Falls, was tried last week in that city. The jury quickly agreed on a verdict, acquitting the prisoner.

We are delayed in preventing religious exercises in one of the public schools in this city (Seattle) on account of change of the school board. Election will be held Saturday. We must await action of new board before appealing to the courts.

Have another case of compulsory Bible-reading and recitation of the Lord's prayer, at Coupeville, Island county. The school-teacher published a bombastic rejection of the written and oral requests of citizens for its discontinuance. I have just returned from delivering lectures there, and have written the county superintendent and await his reply.

The law of the state is all on the side of right, but the arrogant assumption, the law-breaking proclivities of priests and parsons, renders necessary an appeal to the higher courts to enforce obedience to its just requirements. No other remedy is left us.

Once we obtain a decision of the supreme court, all religious exercises and instruction in public schools in Washington will cease forever. And so with rigid Sunday-observance laws, only the fight may be fiercer.

The necessity of organization is imperative, if we would not become slaves of the church and priestcraft. That Liberal of Washington who fails to give earnest, active sympathy and support in this fierce contest for right and liberty is unworthy of recognition by those who actually defend the grand principles of Liberalism and practice its ennobling teachings.

C. B. REYNOLDS,

Secretary Washington Secular Union, 2104 Sixth street, Seattle.

P.S.—The Knights of Labor (all the assemblies of the city) have, under the secret manipulations of the emissaries of the National Sabbath Union, issued a manifesto proclaiming themselves advocates of the Sunday law. For ways that are dark and schemes of deep craft, commend me to the Reverend Crafts, of the National Sabbath fanatics. But this makes our work harder, the contest fiercer, yet right shall win.

"MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE"—ITS ONE DEFECT.

From a Letter addressed to the author by Miss Ida C. Craddock, Secretary of the American Secular Union.

I received your "Religious Experience," and I have delayed acknowledging its reception, not because I was indifferent to its merits, but because it has swept me off my feet, so that almost the only criticism I could make would be one of praise. It seems to me like an echo of the best thoughts of us all; and, as I read, I became conscious of a curious sensation—a sensation which, I think, always comes with the reading of those works of true genius which touch our hearts. The ideas on the printed page did not seem an extraneous presentation to my eyes; they seemed, instead, to leap forth from the depths of my own living soul.

I have said that almost the only criticism I could make would be one of praise. I have one fault to find with your "Experience"—it does not go far enough. It brings us only to your present standpoint of brave and cheerful resignation; it does not prophecy for us what you will be—or, at least (to my mind) what you ought to be in the future. You have not yet reached your goal—the goal to which you are evidently tending—that preaching of co-operation in industrial and social matters to which most earnest thinkers to-day feel themselves sooner or later "called." When such co-operation shall be finally established (and I think that the signs of the times indicate it to be close at hand) the kingdom of heaven will be right here on earth. You doubtless smile at this enthusiasm; but you will believe in it some day, for you are evidently getting there as fast as you can.

For my own part, I could wish that your great powers for effective work would be thrown on this side. But I recognize the fact that the individualistic work of Anarchy is going to be quite as important in the final adjustment of our economic and social relations. I think I foresee the time when a compromise will have to be effected between the Nationalist centralizers and the Anarchistic individualizers, such as made between the Federalists and the Democratic-Republicans a hundred years ago, at the adoption of the United States Constitution. And it is right that this should be so; it is only imitating nature in her balance of the centripetal and centrifugal forces. Yes, your "Religious Experience" lacks its final chapter—a chapter which shall deal still with your "religion"—your "binding together again" of your old-time hopes, your poetical ideals, your intellectual energies in the atmosphere of a newer and more beautiful enthusiasm than any that you have yet experienced. And the close of that chapter which you are yet to write will not be chanted in the minor notes of resignation; it will ring with the pæan of assured victory. For you will know then, beyond the possibility of doubt, that even death is by no means a dreadful thing, whether followed or not by annihilation; you will see that universal helpfulness, universal happiness, universal tenderness—in short, the kingdom of heaven on earth—are not only possible but probable—and this, not by any radical change of heart, but by using our common selfishness and self-interest as the lever. I await that final chapter of yours. Yours very truly, IDA C. CRADDOCK.

Y

One of Bierce's Stories.

I heard a rather interesting anecdote the other day. Late one night some years ago a prominent Jewish physician, now of this city, was aroused from sleep and beseeched by a wretchedly-clad Irishman to accompany him on a professional visit to his family. There was evidently no fee in it, but the benevolent physician cheerfully complied, and was piloted to the most miserable part of the city, where, in an environment of indescribable squalor, he found his patient, the wife of the man who had summoned him. The poor woman was suffering from a terrible contagious disease, and was about to give birth to her first child. Beside the pile of rags upon which she lay was a priest of the Roman Catholic church bravely administering the consolations of religion. What a spectacle for instruction of the cynic! In that palace of indigence and stronghold of terror, where one might almost feel the presence of anguish and almost hear the footfalls of Death, Man's love of Man had entered to medicine alike the body and the soul. About that couch of misery was no room for race hatreds and the warfare of creeds. The Angel of Mercy stood there invisible, and in the divine compassion of his eyes immemorial animosities melted like barriers of ice. The Jewish physician and the Catholic priest, no longer lightning calculators of their long accounts, were false to the traditions of their fathers and forgot to abhor one another. But that is not what I was going to relate.

When the poor woman had become a mother, when the physician had prescribed and the priest had prayed, and both were about to withdraw, the priest approached the physician, took his hand, lifted his eyes reverently toward heaven for a moment, then, lowering them, said: "My son, I thank you in the name of the Father." "And I, sorr," said the patient's husband, with a sidelong glance at the new babe, "in the name o' the rest o' the family."—Ambrose Bierce, in the "Examiner."

Rensburg's Lecture Appointments.

J. E. Rensburg left Kansas on his tour to the Pacific coast, September 15. He reached California about the last of October. His appointments for this state, as far as arranged, are as follows:

San Francisco.....Nov 7	Fresno.....Nov 16
San Miguel.....Nov 8,9	Hanford.....Nov 17, 18
Monterey.....Nov 10	Tulare.....Nov 19
Gilroy.....Nov 11	Los Angeles.....Nov 20
Merced.....Nov 12	Fallbrook.....Nov 21
Snelling.....Nov 13	Bernardo.....Nov 22
Hornitos.....Nov 14	San Diego.....Nov 23
Easton.....Nov 15	San Bernardino.....Nov 25 26

MODERN SKEPTICISM.

BY WALLACE COBB FENDERSON.

Whoever has had an opportunity of studying the trend of modern thought on the subject of religion, in the course of their investigations must have been profoundly impressed at the widespread secession from the public religious faith.

A few years ago it was dangerous or exceedingly impolitic to refer in any way to this subject. To doubt the so-called "Evidences of Christianity" or to institute any investigation concerning the most vital question, entailed upon the investigator, at one time, the penalty of death, and a few years later the odium of social ostracism. But times have changed. Intellectual advancement is the motto of modern civilization. The tidal wave of unbelief, unimpeded by the barriers placed in its way by superstition and ignorance, has swept with a mighty force over the civilized world, and lashed the structure of Christianity with such terrific fury, as to cause it to tremble to its very foundation. Skepticism, the child of science, has within the past few years attained such alarming proportions, and exerted among thinking people such a potent influence, that the church may well put the question to itself and civilization, Whither are we drifting? Alarmed at the tendency of modern thought, shrinking beneath the touch of meek-eyed science, bitterly realizing that she was fast losing her influence upon the public mind, the church sought to avert the catastrophe which seemed inevitable by reversing creeds, and erecting upon the ruins of the old theology a structure consistent with the spirit of the age.

She clearly perceived the slough of disrepute into which the ancient doctrines had fallen, and, though usually blind, was now forced to the conclusion that intelligent men and women would no longer cling to creeds which forbade all investigation and depended for support upon faith alone. She unwillingly discovered among her former supporters, her most ardent adherents, a strong disinclination to accept many of the Biblical theories, prominent among others, the theory of "verbal inspiration," the story of creation, and the vulgar fable of "immaculate conception." The number of earnest and well-meaning theologians who have earned from the bigoted brethren the title of heretic, for attempting a revision of the creeds of the Christian church until they should no longer be repugnant to intelligence; will attest the bitterness, and stubborn resistance which church reforms have always met, and will always meet, so long as a portion of humanity wear the cankering chains of superstition.

The existence of Christianity can be accounted for in exactly the same manner as the other forms of worship which have preceded it, and which presumably will come after it, and in attempting to direct other religions, Christianity has laid the foundations of its own destruction. It was impossible for them to continue an attack on other and older forms of belief, without proving to the world that their own could be destroyed. They examine the account of the miracles of Buddha, and at once declare it to be without foundation in fact and yet Buddha has more followers than Jesus Christ. Why are we asked to believe that one performed miracles and to scoff at the other, when the claims of both to authenticity rest precisely on the same evidence? Why is not the argument which Christianity uses against Buddhism equally applicable and forcible when used against Christianity? If the question of age is involved in the argument, and is to be used as criterion, then Buddhism should take precedence for it has the superior warrant of many centuries.

All religions have been born of fear. Every honest investigator untrammelled by custom, and seeking truth, illuminated by the cold light of reason alone, will admit it. The intellect and every element in nature combine in a demonstration which cannot be refuted. Man fears the destructive and pain-producing elements of nature, and seeks to defend himself against their cruel ravages. He considers the condition of humanity and realizes that there must come an end to all things; that he himself and every living form must perish and go down to darkness and mystery; that some time he must plunge into that unknown, unfathomable abyss called death. Knowing this he asks himself the question, Shall I live again, or is this the end? His heart, theology, and its dogmas, made sacred by immemorial custom, answer him, No, this is not the end; believe and you shall enjoy a spiritual existence blissful beyond comparison with your life on earth.

Thus does Christianity hold out to susceptible humanity this magnificent scheme of salvation, the splendid dream of immortality. Believe and you shall know, says the Theist; but the Atheist would reverse this, and says, Know and you must believe. After all, it is purely an achievement in morals, and refuses to receive any light from the intellect, for the orthodox would not only exclude every form of analysis, but every faculty capable of investigation.

Believe; do not analyze. Believe blindly and implicitly, and the truth of what has been accepted shall be revealed by an emotional process, by the dictates of the heart, for here alone is to be found the secret of creation and the destiny of the human race. The cruel fact that demonstration cannot yield anything like a clear conception of the question makes no difference to the believer, for he asks no proof, save that afforded by sentiment, on whose shifting and treacherous sands it is unsafe to build; for to assume that sentiment ever discovered a truth or maintained a fact is to place blind emotion on the throne of reason. Submission to such a despotism might soon convert the world, but would act as an insurmountable barrier to intellectual progress. The question of religion, like all other questions of great import, belongs essentially to the head and must be considered by the intellect. It is not safe to trust this matter to the heart, for here it becomes shaded with sentiment and defiled by prejudice, the legitimate inheritance of superstition, and made almost universally sacred by the fear of death.

As religion is emotional, so it is indisputably a selfish emotion, and it is the very epitome of selfishness, and herein it differs from morality, which is social and not individual. Religion considers only self; while morality, broader in its scope, more refined in aspect, and liberal in thought, considers the whole society of humanity. One binds the human mind with cords of selfishness; the other, asking no rewards for self outside the altruistic ends it seeks to attain, sees only the universal good. One appeals to human reason; the other to fear; and on this ground is to be fought the battle of the future between science and religion, for they are at war, and looking back over the record of the church—a record stained and polluted with blood and error—who can doubt the issue of the conflict?

MARY MAGDALENE—WHAT IS THE TRUTH?

Those who worship Jesus as a God present him to us as a model for our imitation. They claim he was perfect in morals, a saint in habits, and God in fact. If these allegations are true, he is worthy our adoration.

According to the biographies of Jesus, those who knew him best, they who met him in the every-day walks of life, charged him with consorting with publicans and sinners. (Matt. ii, 16; Luke v, 30).

"A man is known by the company he keeps," is a maxim as truthful as it is old. But the best of men are frequently slandered. A God ought to be exempt from the revilements of bad men. Was the charge against Jesus false, or does it appear to be truthful? We rely for authority on those who wrote of his adventures. In whose company do we most commonly find the hero of our faith, the exemplar whose doings we are taught to copy?

Is there any name more frequently mentioned among the associates of Jesus than Mary Magdalene? If the occasions are noted where she is mentioned as Mary, without the description of her person—magdalene—and where she is referred to as "the woman who was a sinner," we find this almost constant companion of Jesus, "the first at the cross, and the last at the grave," more frequently mentioned than any other person, not even excepting her whom the Catholics honor with the title, Mother of God!

If the word "magdalene," the Alexandrian Greek term used in the gospels, had been correctly translated into English, as it should have been in every instance where it occurs in the New Testament, there would have been no misunderstanding as to the real character of this almost constant companion of "our Lord." As it is we are compelled to associate her name with other events in the divine narrative to ascertain her true status. Luke vii, 37, 38, says: "A woman in this city which was a sinner . . . kissed his feet and anointed them with ointment." The Pharisee, whose guest Jesus was, said: "She is a sinner." The historian and the Pharisee agreed in designating her by a term of reproach the church well understands. John xii., 3, chronicling the same event, mentions "the sinner" by name, and calls her "Mary," which we take for granted was the magdalene; for we find no intimation that "the other Mary" was a sinner. True, Luke, viii, 2, states "seven devils" went out of Mary Magdalene, but he failed to state how many others were left. It is urged that she was reformed, "born again," we suppose churchmen would say. However pure the magdalene's life in the immediate future may have been, it is believed such an associate in public and private was not a proper companion for one whom churchmen represent as posing for a God, and who was to serve as an example for the countless millions of humanity who were to come after him. Dr. Adam Clarke, in his commentaries on the last event referred to, after a labored effort to make it appear poor Mary was slandered, and that Catholics and Protestants alike had defamed her, by naming a certain class of hospitals and societies after, says:

It would have been contrary to every rule of prudence, and every dictate of wisdom, for Christ and his apostles to have permitted such a person to associate with them, however fully she might have been converted to God, and however exemplary her life at that time might have been.

Now that is exactly the point we make; and we believe common fame has affixed the correct definition to the term "magdalene," hence we insist that her constant companionship reflects prejudicially on him we are taught to designate as "God," and to whom we are asked to bend in worship.

As it is only truth we seek, will not some scholarly Christian satisfy an inquiring mind by stating who the "harlots" were that Jesus said (Matt., xxxi, 32) "believed on him;" and in the preceding verse had said, they will "go into the kingdom of God before you," addressing the chief priests and elders? There were more than one, it seems by the quotation. The commentators consulted have failed to furnish the coveted knowledge, though Scott, in remarking on this identical scripture, says: "Publicans and harlots received his testimony, and as true penitents embraced the gospel." If it was not these women we find almost constantly in the company of Jesus, washing his feet with their tears, and drying them with the hair of their heads; if they were not Mary, the magdalene, the other Mary, and Martha, who were they? The Greek word porne here used by the inspired writer in the plural, signifies "to hire." Wonder if during the next century, perhaps with another translation of the sacred volume, the term will not be capitalized, and a city or country somewhere be found by the name of Porne, doing by it exactly as was done by the word "magdalene" on a former occasion, and thus account for "our Lord's" harlot converts?

Modern clergy have made an important discovery. They locate a city on the western coast of Lake Gennesareth, which they call Magdala, and Mary Magdalene, they say, derived her name of bad odor from this city from which she "probably" came, and they quote Matt. xv, 39, where Jesus "came into the coast of Magdala in support of their probability. To this claim we beg leave to state, that we question if there is a single instance in the "holy scriptures" where a person is described by the town or city from whence he came. We have Jesus, the anointed, as the Greek word christos following his name should have been translated; John, the dipper, in place of the anglicized, but not translated, baptisias; Joseph, the carpenter; John, the son of Zacharias; James, the son of Zebedee, and so on through the book. This, of itself, is almost conclusive evidence that the theologians are at fault in their new rendering of this unsavory name.

Christian geographers "supposed" a city named Magdala formerly existed on the eastern coast of the celebrated lake of Galilee. Though the most thorough search has been made by modern explorers, yet not the slightest trace of an ancient city, village, or hamlet answering the description was found on that coast.

They then "searched the scriptures" the more diligently, and concluded the city must have been on the western coast; so in recent maps of Palestine the reader will find a city marked on the west side of the lake, to accommodate the needs of sacred history.

The Greek term magdala signifies a tower, or castellated rocks. As the bed of Lake Gennesareth is of volcanic origin, with hills and towering cliffs on the west, it is presumable this may have been known as "the coast of towers," just as the Bible writer stated, had the original been correctly rendered. Smith, in his "Dictionary of the Bible," honestly says:

The name Magdala does not really exist in the Bible. It is found in the received Greek text, and in the authorized version of Matt. xxv, 39, only; but the chief manuscripts and versions exhibit the name as Magadan. . . . By the Jews the word megaddela is used to denote a person who platted or twisted hair, a practice much in use among women of loose character."

The writer is well aware of the zeal, vast labor, and great learning which have been employed by theologians to remove the deep-seated prejudice which very generally prevails in regard to at least one of "our Lord's" most constant companions, and on whose statement the resurrection of "our Lord" rests; see John xx, where the details of that event are recited. So generally does the correct meaning of this name prevail in most metropolitan cities, very worthy reformatory organizations have sprung up, known as Magdalene societies and Magdalene hospitals, with a large membership of women, from which both Webster and the Imperial dictionaries have prefixed to the real definition the word "reformed," an addition no way connected with the original meaning.

After the destruction of Jerusalem, in the year 70, it is said, there was a Jewish seat of learning located at Magdala, and it is claimed mention of it is made in the "Jerusalem Talmud," said to have been compiled at Tiberias. Possibly this is true. Now a small Moslem village, located on the lake, bears the name of Mejdal; but even if it bore the name of Magdala it would not prove a city bearing a similar cognomen existed there at the time of the Roman conquest.

And even if a city had existed bearing the name of Magdala, at the time credited to Jesus, where is the evidence that Mary Magdalene derived her descriptio persona from a city in which it is not known she ever resided, and, as already stated, contrary to the uniform custom of the age in which it is claimed she lived? —G. W. BROWN, M.D., in the Investigator.

JESUS AS A LABOR REFORMER.

II.

In consulting the revised version of the New Testament, we find that wherever the word servant is used, without qualification, it means bond-servant, and Webster says that a bond-servant is a slave. Thus we have Jesus continually in the midst of slavery, and drawing his moral lessons and religious instructions from that institution, but never rebuking those who practiced it. On the contrary, like all other forms of tyranny, oppression, and wrong, it was like the kingdom of heaven. Jesus said: "Ye are my slaves if ye do whatsoever I command you." Let us, in the following quotation, substitute the word slave for servant as we are authorized to do by the strict meaning of the words employed.

"But who is there of you, having a slave plowing or keeping sheep, that will say to him when he is come in from the field, Come straightway and sit down to meat; and will not rather say to him, Make ready wherewith I may sup, and gird thyself, and serve me, till I have eaten and drunken, and afterward thou shalt eat and drink? Doth he thank the slave because he did the things that were commanded? Even so ye also, when ye have done all those things that are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable slaves." (Luke xvii, 7, 10).

First we observe the utter want of logic in the inferences which Jesus draws from his premises. That master did not have to thank his slave, not because he did not deserve thanks, but because the slave was in his power and could not help himself. If the slave, thus situated, were to say he was unprofitable he would be telling a syncopantic lie. He was producing his master's food and then cooking it and feeding him, and receiving for himself only the crumbs which were left. And Jesus's idea was that the slave, under such circumstances, should not kick but should get down and crawl and apologize to his tyrannical master.

Of course you are unprofitable slaves when you try to serve God. He don't need your services. You cannot help him. Let that be understood, and the logical inference is that you should not work for God. All the priests and preachers, from Jesus to Sam Jones, have been putting up a job on the people. The gods do not eat or drink or wear clothes or live in houses. Work for someone you can help. Labor for those who will at least thank you for your services. Don't be unprofitable servants. Don't work for a man who wants you to turn grindstone with nothing to grind. The gods, if they exist, are old enough to take care of themselves. If they want anything let them say so. Take no second-hand statements as to the wants or desires of gods. Let them talk English and furnish their autographs before a notary.

D. PRIESTLY.

Milwaukee, Or.

NEW YORK LETTER.

In my last I said, "the political pot is simmering." To-day it is boiling. I termed doubtful a union of forces against Tammany. I did not believe that the cold and cynical Wheeler Peckham, the queer Father Duceg, the elegant Newton, the scholarly Dr. Crosby, could bring together the citizens, the Republicans and Counties, but they have done it, and I am no prophet. The ticket presented is a hybrid, composed of Jews and Gentiles; Republicans, Democrats, Mugwumps, and Socialists, Yankee, Dutch, and Irish, Protestant, Jew, and Catholic, Protectionists, Free Traders, and Single Tax. The Counties are crazy for it, the Republicans, lukewarm; the working men are chattering like magpies for and against it. It looks as if it might win, but Tammany is a well-organized army, and its power for years depends on victory. Defeat means political death to most of its leaders. I hear the very best things of Scott. He is a force wherever he is placed, brainy and honest. New York hung its head when Bill Wickham was mayor, because he was so small intellectually, but he was a giant when compared with Grant. "Hughey" is the most illiterate man ever elected mayor of this town. You might as well compare a tallow candle to an electric light, as to compare Grant to Scott. The candidates for mayor, controller, and district attorney, on the combine ticket are Democrats (Counties) the Republicans get a few crumbs, coroner and sheriff for instance. One of the judges ran on Henry George's ticket four years ago. Here is a chance of men "paying their money and taking their choice." I have no choice, therefore shall not vote. When Mayor Grant removed Coleman, the commissioner of cleaning the streets, I expressed the opinion that it would be impossible not to improve the service. I was wrong. Commissioner Beatte is no improvement. He is spending $1,300,000 a year, and there is not a clean street in New York to-day. The Fassett committee has reached that department, but has unearthed some queer things in the Excise Board, in the sheriff's office, and at this time is looking into the workings of the tax office. It is to be hoped that some things may come out of this investigation, for the benefit of the city. We are a patient people. It costs $35,000,000 a year to govern this town. London, with three times the population, I understand, spends only £5,000,000. Englishmen govern that city; Irishmen rule this. The former may be niggard, of that I know nothing. I think the latter are a trifle extravagant.

The coming and going of Comte de Paris has excited little or no public interest. It has given a coterie of snobs an opportunity to parade themselves before the country. A man, who could conspire with Boulanger to throw France into confusion and bloodshed, ought not to expect a warm greeting in America. He did come here, it is true, at the outbreak of the rebellion and enter our army, so Louis XVI. aided our fathers in the Revolutionary war, not because he wanted to see a republic here, but because he thought he could hurt England more by such aid than in any other way. Emperor Louis Napoleon had thrown all his influence in favor of the South; the Bourbons, from necessity, were obliged to favor the North; hence, the coming of these princes. The dinner given to the comte at the Plaza hotel, was a brilliant affair. The irrepressible Butterfield presided.

The Kendals are at the Fifth Avenue theater, and are packing the house as never before filled. They seem even more popular than last year. They brought along with them J. H. Banner (handsome Jack). He is well-known here, having played with Adelaide Neilson and Mary Anderson. Agnes Huntington is meeting with splendid success at the Broadway. She is a favorite here as she was in London. Her voice wins her way wherever she goes. "Poor Jonathan" is filling the Casino. No manager mounts his plays with more care than Aronson, with the possible exception of Daly. Jonathan is said to be simply gorgeous: I have not seen it, so can only give hearsay talk. The Casino has always been a popular resort, because the tone there has always been good.

Young William W. Astor is tearing down the home of his late father, John Jacob, on the corner of Thirty-third street and Fifth avenue. He is going to erect a large hotel in its place. The character of the avenue is rapidly changing from a street of residence to a shop street. The demands of business are driving the nabobs out. No locality in New York has been selected to take its place. West End avenue (the continuation of Eleventh avenue) is ambitious for the honor. The west side is gaining in popularity, and will in time be the swell part of the city. This is natural, as Broadway is the great natural artery of this island.

New York, Oct. 24, 1890.

EUDORUS.

REMARKS

MADE BY THE HON. A. SCHELL AT THE FUNERAL OF MRS. JERUSHA JENNINGS, AT OAKDALE, CAL., OCT. 24, 1890.

FRIENDS AND RELATIONS: We have come hither to perform the last rites of the dead. Within the deep, still chambers of our hearts we will cherish the individuality, independence, and womanly virtues of our deceased friend. Society is in a transition state, for we behold here to-day a funeral without the presence of a clergyman or priest. The deceased desired none of them to say prayers or mass over her. She had no need of their assistance in the hour of dissolution. There was no spectre, no ghost in the air, or anywhere else, to haunt her in her last moments. She was not afraid to die. Death to her was eternal rest; it was but the philosophy of nature.

Deceased was 72 years of age at the time of her death. She was honest, industrious, and virtuous. She respected the rights of her fellow-men and did unto others as she would have others do unto her, and thus secured the confidence and good will of all who knew her. These were her passports at the portals of death.

"If a man die shall he live again?" is a question asked by Job, but he never answered it. As to the future, who is there to reply? Across the line separating this world from the next no traveler has ever returned.

What we believe cannot affect our future condition. In all cases the believer is influenced by geographical facts over which he has no control, and therefore cannot be held responsible for his belief. But in comparison with what was supposed to be known and believed of God, the important fact has come to the front that we have learned some grand and glorious things that have revolutionized our opinions and beliefs, and that we need not believe any longer in such a God as the clergy have preached to us. No inquisitorial guillotine awaits our want of belief. We can now unhesitatingly believe that God is not what the church says he is. He is not a selfish Egotist planning for our fall and ruin "for his own glory."

Nay, further, we feel confident we are dealing with regular, orderly, universal forces, whose laws we can study and whose movements we can calculate, so that our position and belief, founded on experience, is unspeakably better and more comforting than all the knowledge of the old creeds.

It is said that "death entered the world by sin." This cannot be, for death is inherent in all organized matter. Many species of animals came upon this earth, lived their appointed time, died, and became extinct long before man made his appearance—long before sin began. Death is the result of law. Life is a mystery; death is a mystery. By virtue of natural law life came; by virtue of the same law death followed. Whence did man come? Has he always been man, or is he developed from some lower forms of life? What is life? How long has life been on this planet?

All these are questions men still discuss, and upon them they are divided. Whatever the truth may be in regard to these subjects, one thing is apparent, and needs no argument to prove, that an instantaneous adult or man is a physiological impossibility. Man attains his majority by the slow process of growth or development; and that he primarily descended from lower forms of life is now the paramount belief of the age.

But whatever our ignorance may be, we have wrought out by experience a knowledge of right and wrong, of how to live so as to attain something of good and happiness. After all we can say upon these things, "how blessed!" is this ignorance as compared with what we thought we knew before the light of Liberalism and Freethought illumined our superstitious minds! At least this we know: We are no longer mere subjects for the "fires of perdition" throughout an endless eternity.

It was once believed that our sickness and death were judgments on our sins and punishments for our wickedness—perhaps for loving our children and friends too well—to weaken our attachments to this life and make us willing to die; that this death was the result of original sin committed in the Garden of Eden.

We know now that pain and sickness and afflictions are the result of broken law, and that death is the seed planted in the body at the beginning of life. If we are wise we will not attribute death to any supernatural agency or to the wonderful and mysterious ways of an overruling providence.

We learn to recognize the fact that life, pain, and death are all under natural law. We ought to learn these laws and to regulate our conduct as to make the forces in nature help as much and hurt as little as possible. We know many times the best often suffer the most because of inherited ills, or from circumstances over which they have no control.

Why do the churches have so slight a hold upon the faith and reverence of men and women? Why do so many thousand neglect them? Why do so many of the best men and women feel that they are no longer essential to their highest and noblest life? Why is this funeral here today without the presence of a priest or clergyman? We might as well face the fact—the churches might as well face the fact—it is because free-minded, well-informed people no longer believe in any "fall of man." Our deceased sister did not believe it, for she requested that her funeral should be conducted by Liberals.

It is demonstrated beyond all intelligent question that no such fact as "the fall" ever occurred in the history of man. What follows? Why, this follows as inevitably as day follows night, that if man is not "fallen," then he is not "lost," and, in that case, he does not need to be "saved." Take away the fall of man, and there is no need of the scheme of redemption, no need of a supernaturally-inspired revelation, no need of an incarnation, no need of an infallible church, no need of a trinity, no need of an old-time heaven for the chosen few, no endless hell for the doomed many. All these doctrines found their reason in the supposed fall, and with it they pass away.

In conclusion, let me quote the beautiful language of Colonel Ingersoll:

"There is, after all, something tenderly appropriate in the serene death of the old. Nothing is more touching than the death of the young and beautiful. But when the duties of life have been nobly done, when the sun touches the horizon; when the purple twilight falls upon the present, the past, and the future; when memory with dim eyes can scarcely spell the records of the vanished day, then, surrounded by friends, death comes like a strain of music—it is a welcome relief. The day has been long, the road weary, and we gladly stop at the inn."

The duties of our deceased friend have been nobly done. Her sun on earth touched the horizon at mature age, and although the day may not have been very long, the road has been weary. She stopped at the wayside inn to which we are all traveling.

And now let the remains of our sister—all that is mortal of her on earth—be taken to her last resting-place. Man is taken from the general mass of matter which surrounds him—at death to that general mass of matter he is again restored; therefore matter unto matter and dust unto dust we consign all that is mortal of her on earth to her last resting-place, and there let her have eternal sleep.

Rensburg in Oregon.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Your correspondent attended the lecture of J. E. Rensburg, at Silverton, yesterday. A fair-sized audience was there, many coming from a distance. Few Christians were present. They adopt the tactics of always having something on hand in their churches, at the same hour that the Secular Union does, and thus endeavor to keep the faithful away, so that they may not hear what the Secularists have to say. In the same way, all books and papers on Secular subjects are tabooed, or avoided. Evidently our Christian "friends" (?) are afraid that their dupes will "hear the truth," and hearing, will receive it. Their fears are well-founded. Many a time I have induced a Christian to read something Secular, by concealing from him the nature and authorship of the proffered literature. By being thus "crafty," I have "caught them with guile."

Mr. Rensburg is a pleasant, intelligent, cultured gentleman, of medium size, black hair, brown eyes, brilliant and expressive. He speaks readily, in a pleasant, well-modulated voice, and is a very pleasant speaker to listen to. He rounds out his sentences well, is impressive, but not very forcible. His style is that of the cultured East, and might be improved for audiences here, by a little more of the muscular and masculine vigor of "the wild and woolly west." But he is perfectly at home with his subject, and may the good Lord have mercy upon the Christian preacher who ever tackles him. Freethinkers should welcome him. Such men are of more use in the world than all the expounders of the gospel in existence.

Let no one be discouraged. Freethought is progressing steadily and surely. Superstition retires, fighting as it goes, but retiring all the same, and every man or woman who loves to be mentally, morally, and physically free from priest domination should aid our cause as ability permits. "He, who would be free himself, must strike the blow."

Aumsville, Or.

F. S. MATTESON.

BEEN TO CHURCH.

Yes, I have been "sold" again. A new preacher who was heralded as a publisher, editor, and a know-it-all came to enlighten us Snowville folks. So I thought I would go and get my share of mental food.

Well, I received about as much information as if he had recited the alphabet over and over. Not one new idea or even an old one presented in a new and attractive guise.

There was the paltry story of the "converted Infidel." The Infidel pronounced Christ the greatest imposter the world had ever produced, and the preacher floored him by asking why it was that this greatest imposter had given us the best code of morals the world had ever produced. As if there could possibly be an intelligent Infidel in this enlightened age who does not know that were the code of Christly morals once adopted as a rule of action the world would soon be depopulated and morals be nowhere. Read the "Kreutzer Sonata," and you will learn that no true Christian could become a parent, and therefore the first wholly Christian generation would be the last of human kind:

To sell all you have and give it to the poor would make vagabonds and tramps of every one.

To take no thought of the morrow would have the same result.

To command that your enemies be brought before you and slain is far from moral.

To put out the offending eye or cut off the offending hand is Christian morality.

To give to all who ask and go at the beck and call of anyone, if compelled to go fifty miles to go five hundred, if sued for five hundred dollars to let five thousand go, is a Christian command.

To love those who most hate and persecute and annoy you, no matter how repulsive or intolerable they are, is Christian morals.

To do good to an enemy out of revenge and thus "heap coals of fire on his head" is Christly advice.

We must be able to scold the winds, bring the dead to life, make the blind to see, the deaf to hear, if we live out Christian morality. Also to eat arsenic and play with deadly cobras and rattlesnakes, and receive no harm.

We must make innumerable false promises, solemnly affirming that this generation shall not pass away till they be fulfilled.

Call all who will not accept your pet doctrines "thieves," "robbers," "vipers," "cursed," "Satan," and all manner of other opprobrious epithets.

Help yourself to a horse, or to grain, whenever you wish, and say, "The Lord hath need of them."

Aid people in getting vengeance on their enemies if they "importune" or "trouble" you long enough to make it an object to get rid of their pleadings.

Oh, yes, a truly lovely Infidel! Convincing code of morals, indeed! Isn't it a wonder conversions are not the rule instead of the rara avis they now are?

Here am I waiting for proof of a God and a future, willing to live on a thousand years if life be as pleasant in the "promised land" as it is here, and yet no powerful preacher ever convinces me with knock-down arguments. I see nothing in the vaunted Bible better than I find in other books. Nothing in the lives of Christian believers superior to that found in the lives of unbelievers. Jesus taught some good things, but not nearly so many as our Ingersoll does, nor is his code of morals as good as that of Theodore Parker, Elias Hicks, or lots of other modern thinkers, but doubtless it was the best his age could formulate.

ELMINA D. SLENKER.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled case, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.

PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; 7 ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entered satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50 fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $33. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botches, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

SAN FRANCISCO ARBEITER ZEITUNG.

710 WASHINGTON ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

The only organ in the German language on the Pacific Coast that stands for true Nationalism. Subscription price: 3 mos., 60 cts.; 6 mos., $1; 12 mos., $2.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND N. J.

And see where you can—this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

- Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
- Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
- Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
- Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Jones.
- Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
- Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
- The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph.D.
- Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles M. d.
- Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
- Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
- Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Jones.
- Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
- Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
- The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
- The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

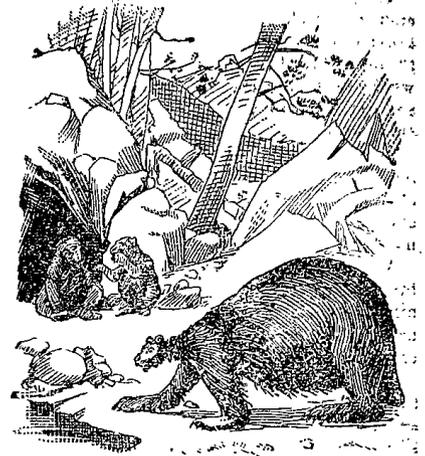

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid. The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, 10 Cents. Address, The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

In the Woods.

Caller—I never met your husband before. What's the matter with—

Mrs. Bruin—S-sh! We never speak of it in his presence. He got his head and shoulders caught in Farmer Russett's cider press when he was a cub, and they've never grown since.—Once a Week.

A MAN OF ENTERPRISE.

He Had Wheelbarrows for Sale, but He Didn't Sell One There.

"Want to buy a wheelbarrow, madam?" demanded the aggressive looking man at the front door of a dwelling near Jackson park the other day.

"What in the world do I want with a wheelbarrow?" said the astonished woman of the house.

"Sold twenty-seven in this neighborhood since yesterday morning," he retorted, "and most of them to people who are among the very best in this part of Chicago."

"I don't see why"

"Pardon me. You are aware that the World's Columbian exposition is to be held within half a mile of this house?"

"Yes, but what has that"

"Pardon me again. You have relatives who will visit you during the exposition: Very good. All of us have. Each of these relatives, or the great majority of them, will bring a trunk. The ordinary charge of an expressman for taking a trunk to or from a railway station is twenty-five cents. Owing to the great increase in business that year, or to the probable formation of an expressmen's trust, the charge will be fifty cents. The exposition will last six months. You will have an average of one relative with a trunk for every week during all that time, and of course you will have to pay for taking that trunk to and from your house. The relative will protest mildly against your looking after the trunk, but you'll do it. You'll pay $1 for drayage on every trunk that comes to your house and goes away from it while the exposition lasts. That will bring your expenses for that item alone up to $26.

"Now mark! The wheelbarrows I am selling will cost only $1.50 each. They are strong, serviceable, light and just the thing for knocking out an extortionate expressmen's trust. All you have to do is to pay a boy ten cents for wheeling the trunk. Cost of wheelbarrow, $1.50. Expense for boy, twenty-six weeks, $2. Total, $4.10. Saving effected by adoption of wheelbarrow plan, $21.90—enough to buy a good hard coal stove. I'm selling by sample, madam, you understand. I take your order now and deliver in the spring of 1893. Expect to sell 10,000 of them before that time. James, bring that wheelbarrow inside the gate so the lady can see it."

"He needn't do it," said the lady. "I don't want it."

The Humboldt Library

—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts.

"I assure you, madam, $1.50 is the very lowest figure at which you can buy the kind of wheelbarrow I am selling, and if I didn't get it at a big discount from manufacturer's price on account of the quantity I expect to order I could not"—

"I don't want it, sir."
"Possibly you see no necessity of paying a boy ten cents for each trip. There are boys, I admit, who will do it for five if promised a regular job. Or you may have a boy of your own. In that case you save the entire ten cents. Total saving effected by wheelbarrow plan"—

"I have several boys, sir. I also have a husband"—

"Ab?"
"Who is in the expressing business himself. Owns three or four wagons. Expects to make a good thing hauling trunks in 1893."

"You ought to have told me this when I began, madam," said the man, as he backed down the steps. "I have wasted enough sound argument and good English on you to have sold three or four of these machines to any ordinary customer. James, come along with that wheelbarrow over to the next house. Step lively, now, confound you!"—Chicago Tribune.

An Important Item.

Ponsonby—Have you seen Silby this morning?

Hayslitt—No.
Ponsonby—Well, you ought to. He's a perfect circus! Says he's got a ten pound baby.

Hayslitt (cautiously)—I wonder if he used the same scales that he does when he goes fishing?—Burlington Free Press.

A Healthful Occupation.

Gazzam (reading)—Jean Jacques Versailles, a noted Frenchman, is dead at the age of 107.

Larkin—He must have been engaged in a very healthful profession to have lived so long.

"He was a duellist."—New York Sun.

An Autumnal Whaup.

The summer hours are going, the days are cooler growing, and over is the agricultural fair, fair, fair; the golden rod is blooming, the dying flowers perfuming in rural lanes the circumambient air, air, air. The Cape Cod maiden merry now picks the ripened berry, and quickly fills her measure 'mong the vines, vines, vines, and, sitting at her labor or chatting with her neighbor, with ease can make a dollar ere she dines, dines, dines. Now the young and ardent lover, when the cares of day are over, who seeks his girl's affections to achieve, 'chieve, 'chieve, tells to her the old, old story, and beneath the stellar glory in osculatory practice spends the eve, eve, eve. The weather now is changing, the mercury often ranging from sixty up to eighty in a day, day, day; but shortly 'twill be steady, and merchants should be ready when shines the sun of trade to make their hay, hay, hay, for people who are wearing summer garments are preparing for the autumn; and the merchant who is wise, wise, wise before the people flock in will lay a splendid stock in and in the local paper advertise, 'tise, 'tise.—Cape Cod Item.

Susan's Papa Talks.

"George," said the railroad magnate, "we all think a great deal of you, and we like to have you visit Susan every night when you can. We like to have you stay as late as convenient, too, but sometimes when it gets to be 2 o'clock, and you still decline to break away, I wish you had been fitted out like my new locomotives—with an improved spark arrester."—New York

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
8. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
7. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
12. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
14. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion.
15. Longevity. Prolonging life. John Gardner, M.D.
16. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
18. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
20. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kalley Miller.
21. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
22. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
23. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
24. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
25. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
26. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
27. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
28. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
30. The Study of Words.
31. Richard Chenevix Trench.
32. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R.A. Proctor.
33. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
34. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
35. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
36. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
37. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
38. (Geological Sketches.
39. Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
40. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
41. Current Discussions in Science. W.M. Williams.
42. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
43. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
44. The Dawn of History.
45. C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
46. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
47. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
48. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
49. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
50. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange.
51. Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
52. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
53. Animal Automatism, Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
54. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
55. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
56. Illusions.
57. James Sully.
58. The Origin of Species. Two Double Numbers.
59. Charles Darwin. 30 cents each.
60. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
61. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
62. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
63. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, L.L.D.
64. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
65. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
66. Technical Education, Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
67. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
68. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
69. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30c.
70. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencer.
71. Archaeology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
72. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
73. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
74. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
75. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
79. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
80. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
81. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
82. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
83. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
84. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
85. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
86. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
87. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
88. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson.
89. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
90. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
91. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S.S. Laurie.
92. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin)

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T.H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haekel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen.
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present. Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life. Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. I. Aing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Wympster Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No. 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Ritchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

TRAVELING ALONE

A WOMAN'S JOURNEY

AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

(Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Price, by mail, 30 cents.

$75.00 to $250.00 MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

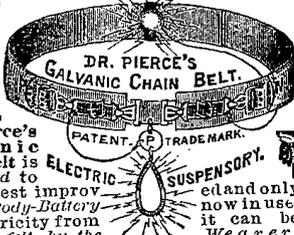

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 HOWARD ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK
In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parson, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 828 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

LIFE RENEWER

NONE GENUINE WITHOUT THIS SIGNATURE.

DR. PIERCE'S GALVANIC CHAIN BELT.

ELECTRIC SUSPENSORY.

Dr. Pierce's Galvanic Chain Belt is guaranteed to be the latest improved perfect Body-Battery. The electricity from it can be instantly felt by the wearer. This celebrated instrument will cure, with out medicine; Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Diseases of the Liver or Kidneys, Lame Back, Female Weakness, General Debility, Spinal Disease, Sexual Weakness, Impotency, Etc. The Suspensory for men free with every Belt. N. D. The Electricity goes directly to all Weak Parts and restores them to Health and Vigorous Strength. For particulars call or send 4 cts. in stamps for sealed Pamphlet No. 2. Address MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COMPANY, 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal. PILES. If troubled with Hemorrhoids or Piles, send stamp for Pamphlet No. 3.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,
Hygienic Physician.
Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,
Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.
HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m. 25tf

Health AND Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.
Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy. $1.
Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.50.
Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook. $1.
Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer. $1.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.
Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina. Ills. 50.
Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook. $1.
Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F.R.C.S. 30 cents

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS & TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.
Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.
Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.
God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.
Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.
Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.
Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.
The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.
Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.
The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.
OLIVER HINCKLEY SUPERINTENDENT
Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.
N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED
CURES
Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung
DISEASES
By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen.
Positive cure for Cancer.
26t37 Room 84, Flood B'ldg.

A HAND-BOOK
OF
FREETHOUGHT.
By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.
The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS", 15 cents.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERY.

Located Eight Miles South of San Jacinto, Cal.
P. A. CLARK, PROPRIETOR.
A full stock of everything in the Nursery line on hand.

APPLES, PEACHES,
PEARS, PLUMS,
APRICOTS, NECTARINES,
PRUNES, ALMONDS,
WALNUTS, QUINCES, ETC.
IN ALL VARIETIES.

A fine lot of Kelsey's Japan Plums, one and two years old.
Send for price list and buy where you can get trees at living rates.
P. A. CLARK, San Jacinto, Cal.

W. M. HINTON & CO.
PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS,
536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San Francisco

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against
LIBERTY,
By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

WRITE TO ELMINAI

Please send stamp for circulars and prices of Books, Blankets, Woolen Goods, and Stocking Yarn.

Snowville is now a Money Order office.
Address, E. D. SLENKER, Snowville, Va.

Standard Scientific Works

- Works by Alexander Bain.
 English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75
- Works by Charles Darwin.
 Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00
- Works by J. W. Draper.
 History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75
- Works by Ernst Haeckel.
 The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00
- Works by Huxley.
 Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00
- Works by John Stewart Mill.
 Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25
- Works by Richard A. Proctor.
 Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
- Works by Herbert Spencer.
 Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75
- Works by Andrew D. White.
 Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00
- Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
 Body and Mind.....$1.5
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50
- Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
 Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

- By Asa Gray.
 Darwiniana.....$2.00
- By L. L. McLaughlin.
 Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50
- By C. Marcel.
 Study of Languages.....$1.25
- By Lester F. Ward.
 Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00
- By Frederick Overman.
 A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00
- B. F. G. Fairfield.
 Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25
- By W. B. Carpenter.
 Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25
- By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
 Evolution.....$1.50
- By Sir John Lubbock.
 Origin of Civilization.....$5.00
- By Charles A. Abbott.
 A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50
- By Garrett P. Serviss.
 Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50
- By Nathan Sheppard.
 Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50
- English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25

Address, the Freethought Publishing Co.

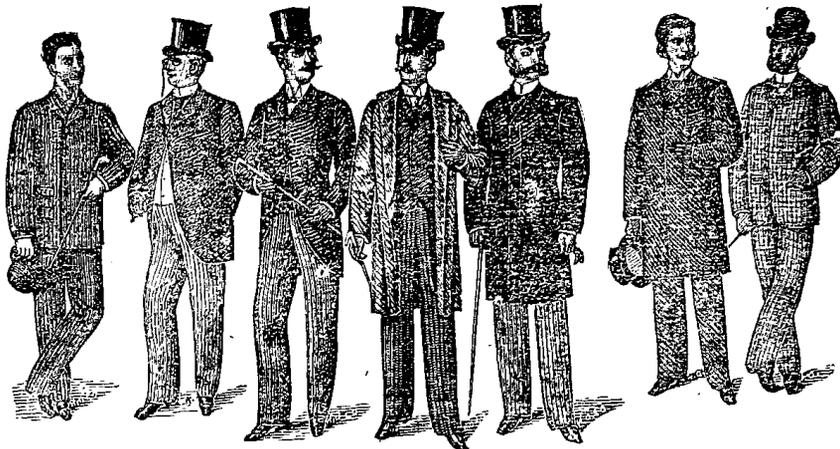

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
 375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

—BY—

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."

339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1.
 Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
 Six Months......75
 Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm Diamond* 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy.
 Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,
Freethought Pub. Co.,

838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St.
 San Francisco.
 Watches Cleaned & Warranted, $1

Witch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. not

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
 414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

BRAIN AND THE BIBLE.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

BY EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

We can recommend this as one of the most valuable works in the list of Freethought publications. Printed in large type on fine paper and elegantly bound. Price $1. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co.
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Boot and Shoemaker.

George Schwab, Fashionable and Practical Shoemaker, 438 Bush street, above California Theater. C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Carpenters and Builders.

A. H. Schou, 677 Twenty-fifth st., OAKLAND

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market St.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Nurseryman.

R. H. Foster, Babylon, N. Y.

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

r. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st. Rapp & DeBarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment, cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st. The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st. Otto Siuz, 320 Kearny st.

ORIGINAL

BROWNSVILLE

WOOLEN MILLS

CLOTHING STORE.

164 and 166 Second Street,

Near corner of Morrison,

The Best Goods in the Country

PORTLAND, OR. W. R. BISHOP, ACT.

Call, or send orders and measure.

A BOSTON HIGHWAYMAN.

He Was Obligated to Steal, But Still Sustained the Honor of His Birthplace.

"Pause!" sternly commanded the footpad, pointing a loaded revolver at the head of the belated pedestrian. "Suspend progress immediately, or with the index member of the digital extremities of my dexter manipulatory organ I communicate motion to the small metallic lever on the nether side of this weapon and release the mechanism it holds in check, thereby permitting the resultant concussion to explode the detonating fulminate contained in the rearward portion of the cartridge, vaporize the combined product of nitrate of potash, sulphur and pulverized carbon with which it is in immediate contact, and impart a sudden propelling impulse to the elongated leaden projectile, to secure the propulsion of which with adequate velocity this mechanical device originally was brought into the sphere of action."

"What do you want?" gasped the astonished victim.

"The immediate transfer and surrender of whatever auriferous or argentiferous disks coined for purposes of exchange, or printed notes exchangeable for such disks, of which you may by any fortuitous concatenation of circumstances be the possessor, together with such other articles of intrinsic value, or capable of being hypothecated for the necessary means of subsistence, as may have found a temporary lodgment in your garments. Nothing of a nutritious or alimentary nature has passed my lips for twenty-four hours," he added, with a smothered sob. "The exigencies of my financial situation leave me no other resource than to take these imperative measures. Extrude the impedimenta or the crepitation will eventuate at once."

"Is it something to eat you want?"

"That is the summum bonum of my ambition—the ne plus ultra of my hopes."

From a basket on his arm the belated traveler took out a cylindrical package. He gave it to the footpad, who held it up where the flickering rays of a dim street lamp fell upon it, gave one glance at the printed label, shrieked deliriously, and fainted for joy.

It was a can of baked beans.—Chicago Tribune.

He Destroyed the Hat.

A Scotch university professor, irritated to find that his students had got into the habit of placing their hats and canes on his desk—cloak rooms being at a premium—announced that the next article of that kind placed there would be destroyed. For some days all went well, until the professor was called for a moment from the class room. A student slipped into his retiring room and emerged with the professorial hat, which he placed conspicuously on the desk, while his fellows grinned and trembled. The professor, on returning, saw the hat, thought some rashly obstinate student had been delivered into his hands, and, taking out his knife, he cut the offending thing to pieces, the while vainly attempting to conceal the smile of triumph that played about his countenance. He was in a very bad temper the next day.—Chatter.

Repairs Needed.

Mistress—Mary, what are you doing with that clock?

Mary (with the servants' bedroom clock under her arm)—Plaze, mum, Oim takin' it to a watchmaker's. It's all out av order, mum. Ivery morning at foive o'clock it goes all to paces, an' makes such a racket Oi can't slape.—New York Weekly.

PROFESSION OF FAITH

OF A SAVOYARD VICAR.

—BY—

J. J. ROUSSEAU.

The above volume includes "A Search for Truth," by Ralph Iron (Olive Schreiner). Cloth, 50 cents. Paper, 25 cents. Address The Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTIANITY * * *

—AND—

* * * AGNOSTICISM.

A CONTROVERSY

Consisting of papers by

Prof. Thomas Huxley, Rev. Henry Wace, The Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. Humphrey Ward. Price, 30 cents.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO. 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

LAST CHANCE

To get a copy of "Buckeye Cookery," one of the best Cook Books ever published.

VALUE $1.75 FOR NOTHING

536 pages over 2,000 recipes. Flexible waterproof cloth cover. Over half a million sold. To any one sending us one dollar, and ten cents for packing and postage, we will send THE HOUSEKEEPER, a semi-monthly, 16 page ladies' paper, for one year, and a copy of this COOK BOOK FREE. Address at once, Buckeye Publishing Co., No. 2 4th Street N. Minneapolis, Minn. Will send sample copy Housekeeper and Premium List free.

ASTHMA DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE CURED never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N. Y. FREE

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 46.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER VL. R.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - NOVEMBER 15, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

On arrival in Ukiah I was surprised to find Alf Burgess & Bros. on hand, having a three weeks' entertainment for the cure of the body and not of the soul. The Burgess company make a lively team, and believe in the morality of a good laugh; and if, as somebody says, religion is indigestion, then they are arrayed against religion as well as theology. A healthful mind in a healthful body is about as near to paradise as one can get in this world or in any other. What is a golden crown worth if one has the headache? Along with the Burgess company, I had the pleasure also of meeting Friend McCowan, who doesn't seem to grow old in the atmosphere of this delightful country. Of course, I always have a warm feeling for Ukiah, since it was in the court house here that the kerosene lamp went flying by my heretical head. However, I escaped the "crown of martyrdom." I don't want the golden harp yet. I like this world better than any other, and am glad that the Christian's modern fagot dashed blazing out of the window.

I had a fine drive from Ukiah to Mendocino City. At this season of the year, with the roads in good condition, it was a luxury. At first, we climb the mighty hills of the Coast Range in the mellow splendor of the afternoon sun. We ascend, slowly winding around vast circles, three thousand five hundred feet. The scenery stretches away in wonderful variety and magnificence of endless forest. It is like an ocean upon ocean of verdant glory. Deep down gulfs appear—dark recesses, shadowy caves, thousands of feet below. As the evening sun grows golden, sending a thousand shafts along the arching trees, and the horses speed swiftly over the inclined plane, it is a most dazzling panorama that, from point to point, unfolds from the picturesque woods. The darkness increases and the brilliant lamps are lighted, one on each side of the rattling coach, and over the four prancing steeds and into the gathering mist and smoke they fling their splendid beams. The forests are on fire. Through the vast spaces flash the advancing flames. Sometimes they glitter right over the road, and we have to fly by to avoid the heat. A giant cedar is burning to its very heart, and is almost toppling upon the highway as the fiery daggers pierce its century of life. It must fall soon, but we don't wait to see it. Perhaps it may fall to-morrow. A bridge is destroyed and in order to pass we must hug the embankment, a precipice of a hundred or more feet above, while it drops hundreds of feet further down to the bottom of the ravine. An inch or two less of space and the coach might roll over; but the skillful driver knows just where to go, and if I didn't trust in the Lord, I had to trust in the driver. If I had been alone, I certainly never should have gone over that precipitous route. All these varied experiences give one a tremendous appetite; at least, they did me, and when I got to the half-way house, I could eat with a relish. There were twenty-three miles yet of travel before me to Mendocino City, which is fifty-two miles from Ukiah. After supper, I have the most magnificent drive of all; in fact, I never had any stage-coach ride quite so inspiring as that. It was six miles down the mountain to the next station. It was dark as pitch, or "seven cats," as the driver said. There was no moonlight, or starlight, even, for the mist was gathering from the mountain top to the valley. The only light was the flame of the lanterns, tossing and heaving over the horses and leaping into the darkness as if so many demons were jumping from the rattling harness. Dark depths, unfathomable, were all about us, and the weird forms of trees were towering and making a roof of wondrous tapestries, a hundred feet above our heads. Those four grand horses, how they did scamper, and wheel, and whirl, and prance. It now seemed as if they would rush right upon the sides of the mountain, but in a twinkling they would turn, almost galloping, and speed around the curve. It was not a straight line we went, but round and round, on one side the mountain, and on the other the impenetrable darkness, and between these two, with the lanterns almost alive with fiery glee as they hurled their splendor into the night, we rushed, and over that six miles swept in just thirty minutes. Fortunately, I was the only passenger and had the front seat, and could enjoy this delicious ride to the utmost. It made the blood tingle. It was almost like a journey through the air. I felt that if the coach did plunge off, wings would sprout at once, and we should sail off through space, with no possible chance of disaster. In fact, there was a feeling of absolute safety, although I could not see beyond the horses' heads, and every moment it looked as if we were tumbling over into immeasurable blackness. But the horses knew every foot of the road, and the driver also, Ackerman by name, and I was really just as safe as if I was in a drawing-room in an easy chair. I wouldn't have missed that drive. There is nothing like it in the world. These California dashes down the mountains with four horses, or six horses, are one of the luxuries of travel that may soon be extinct, as the railroads span the country, but a ride in the best palace car is not to be compared with these magnificent stage coach drives at the rate of twelve miles an hour, circling the mountain side round and round, and down and down.

At ten o'clock p. m. I arrive at Mendocino City. In the morning, about the first one to give me greeting was C. C. Johnson, or Charlie Johnson as they call him, one of the pioneers of the country; and through his activity and the co-operation of Mr. Wilson, proprietor of Tivoli Hall, arrangements were made for lectures at Mendocino City, on Monday and Tuesday evenings. Saturday afternoon, I go up to Ft. Bragg. I find Liberalism still in the front. The Bucholtz brothers, Harry Houston, with all the rest whose names are enrolled upon FREETHOUGHT, are ready with good greetings. Times are a little bit dull at Ft. Bragg now. The woods are not so lively as they were a year ago; the mills are running on about half time. This is only a momentary lull, but some of the comrades of a year ago I do not see.

However, the lectures are well-attended. Saturday evening the house was about full, a good five hundred being present. The orthodox minister thought that only a dozen would attend, but as he peeked into the door he retired with a different impression. After the lecture there was a dance and sociable, in which the young folks enjoyed themselves until midnight. I lectured Sunday afternoon and evening. In the evening, the number was as large as on Saturday. So the churches, although they make many revivals, do not seem to have the vantage ground. Through changes the flag of Freethought still floats, and I thoroughly enjoyed my visit here and the work. The Pavilion outshines the steeples. There is the inspiration of good fellowship of those who believe that this world can be made brighter and better.

One of our noble comrades has gone away into the unknown, where the star of hope shines—Comrade Gallagher, Pat Gallagher, as they call him, a whole-souled man of education and ability, but a worker because he wanted to be an independent man. He was a Freethinker by simple and honest conviction, although born into the church and destined for the priesthood. He could not accept the old creeds. The light of reason was too strong. Bravely and truly he lived, and bravely and grandly he died. He was respected by all, and his loss is deeply felt. Humanity and reform have been deprived of a loyal supporter, a gallant and generous ally. He died without fear, thinking only of those he might help by living. Upon his grave shall the flowers of memory bloom. He shall not be forgotten while truth lives and humanity advances. The sky and the sea mingling their glories, and earth with its promise of spring and summer, and the flowers and harvest gold shall keep the memory of this comrade, whose truth, manhood, and devotion are a precious legacy which death cannot destroy.

So, with the memory of all those who live and work, and those who die but whose spirit breathes, I leave this field of labor, with the music of the sea about it and the sunshine on the broad forests, and hope is in th heart, and the future brightens.

At Mendocino City my generous friends C. C. Johnson and the Kidwell brothers have arranged for the lectures, which are well advertised, and, although the city is quite orthodox and Freethought is something of a stranger, there was a fair attendance. On the first evening there were no ladies present, but on the second evening about a third of the audience were ladies. I think a good start has been made at Mendocino City, and that this will be a good point for future work.

In spite of much conservatism there is a Liberal element here, and now that Freethought is beginning to be understood, it will be a growing power. I am under great obligations to Mr. Wilson for the use of the Tivoli Hall. J. B. Kidwell introduced me on the first evening, and Mr. Harvey, a Paine Freethinker, on the second evening.

I found many other good friends at this place, but nowhere have I struck hands with any more earnest or enthusiastic friend than C. C. Johnson. I expect to lecture at Caspar, Greenwood, and other places on my next tour, and I think that quite a line of Liberal camp-fires can blaze along this coast.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Higgins, as on the last occasion, beautifully decorated the Pavilion with flowers. On the added roll of Freethought are H. M. Foye, H. A. Weller, Ross, Charles Thamer, Copsey, and Gallison, C. J. Wood, J. P. Nelson, and I hope to see the list increased. The hospitality and enthusiasm of the Bucholtz family are long to be remembered on the pathway of the Secular Pilgrim. Through storm and sunshine these are welcome allies.

On Wednesday morning I take the steamer. The wind blows brightly from the north and the sea rolls magnificently beneath the sun. I can hardly keep my seat at times, and when I sit down to dinner the dishes fly in every direction. But I manage to keep hold of the table and eat, without paying any tribute to Neptune. The view over the boundless Pacific is sublime. The immensity of waters seems to be rushing to devour one. How cold and cruel the mighty billows appear, and how little seems the barrier between us and the swelling mountains of foam. The picturesque shores glide by in the glittering atmosphere. Sunset comes upon the vast scenery with wonderful brilliance, clouds of gold in the dark-blue sky reflected in the surging depths. Sea, sky, and land in the advancing gloom, with the great star of the lighthouse burning in the centre, make a scene of infinite loveliness and desolation, and I could not help wondering in these strange moments where I was and whither I was drifting beneath the motionless sky and over the restless sea, whose thunders would not let me sleep. Through the gates of midnight, jeweled with stars, draped with black clouds, we pass over the white-crested, billowing path of the musical waters, and the white dawn flutters its flag over the bay as we anchor by the bustling city. The dream is over and action comes. We are in the world again.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

GROWING IN GRACE.

We watch with interest, not to say solicitude, the advance which our good brother, J. J. Owen, editor of the "Golden Gate," is making toward the kingdom of heaven. The "Golden Gate" is a Spiritualist paper, and Spiritualists, as a rule, do not go much on religion; but therein they differ from Brother Owen, who does. He remarks:

"Our friend Dawbarn is reported as saying, in one of his Summerland lectures, that 'only inferior and cringing minds ever indulge in prayer.' (We sincerely hope that he is not reported correctly.) Was there ever a noble soul that did not pray, at times, and seek for spiritual guidance from some power beyond himself? In the dark days of the rebellion our noble Lincoln prayed, and we have no doubt he received a sustaining strength thereby. Stonewall Jackson was a praying man; so were Washington and Adams. So were nearly all the great men of history who have left their mark upon the world. They had the modesty to believe that there might possibly be some overshadowing influence or intelligence in the universe greater than their own."

It may or may not be true that the men above mentioned performed their incantations before some imagined influence. We know that many eminent heathen have bowed down to wood and stone, but it is not recorded that any valuable scientific results were thereby attained. Some of them doubtless prayed for deliverance from eternal punishment, which sort of nonsense Brother Owen does not believe in. Here is his rebuke to friend Dawbarn:

"So-called spiritual lecturers or teachers who ridicule prayer, and persistently insult the devotional sentiment in human nature, by ribald allusions to the higher spiritual influences that lead the race onward and upward, are not the kind to uplift humanity, or make the world better. Such false teachers should unite themselves with Materialism outright, as in Spiritualism, and in presence of sensitives, they open the way to the ready coming in of those crude and undeveloped spirits which often bring ruin and wretchedness to their mediums. It is in the devotional and aspirational features of mediumship that our sensitives find their strongest protection. A devout medium is generally a good medium, and always protected, by safe and trustworthy guides, from all evil influences."

Of course it would not do to let the Freethinkers escape. Belöw is their dose:

"Ridicule and denounce, as the alleged Freethinker and Materialist may, the religious thought of the world, and the forms and usages of the Christian church, yet all purity of life and conduct, all honor among men, all aspiration for the higher life, all respect for goodness, are held in that thought and embraced within that church (that is, the religious thought and church of to-day). Not that some professed Christians are not whited sepulchres, and some ministers of the gospel wolves in sheep's clothing (for they are but human, and subject to the weaknesses of poor mortality)—and not but that the teachings of Christianity contain many errors and crudities, and may even in past ages have been a serious bar to the advancement of civilization—yet, notwithstanding all this, and more, it is to-day the hope and incentive to a better life for millions of the human race."

We have no especial reply to make to this, except to enter a general denial that the church contains all that is of value to the human race. The Christian church is founded upon supernaturalism, which is a mischievous fallacy, and, being false, can furnish only an unstable basis for human relations. We would be pleased, however, to know what those men and women who, as a distinguished believer once remarked, are Spiritualists without forfeiting their intellect, have to say of Brother Owen's growth in Christian grace.

WHEN TO BE THANKFUL.

Lest our readers should not know when to return thanks or when to assemble for worship, we reproduce a proclamation that has just issued from our most distinguished public servant at Washington, D. C., President Harrison, to wit:

By the grace and favor of almighty God, the people of this nation have been led to the closing days of the passing year which has been full of the blessings of peace and the comforts of plenty. Bountiful compensation has come to us for the work of our minds and our hands, in every department of human industry.

Now, therefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, president of the United States of America, do hereby appoint Thursday, the 27th day of the present month of November, to be observed as a day of prayer and thanksgiving, and I do invite the people, upon that day, to cease from their labors, to meet in their accustomed houses of worship, and to join in rendering gratitude and praise to our creator for the rich blessings he has granted to us as a nation, and invoking the continuance of his protection and grace for the future.

I commend to my fellow-citizens the privilege of remembering the poor, the homeless, and the sorrowful. Let us endeavor to merit the promised recompense of charity and gracious acceptance of our praise.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this eighth day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety, and of the independence of the United States, the one hundred and fiftenth.

JAMES G. BLAINE, Secretary of State. BENJAMIN HARRISON.

All who feel like it are at liberty to follow Mr. Harrison's advice as regards worship, but it would be agreeable to know who gave him the authority to issue invitations for church meetings. He has no such authority, and there are many who know that he is exceeding his functions when he exercises it. In the first place, the most religious body of people in the country, that is to say, the Catholics, do not recognize the president's proclamation of a religious day. The Catholics, it is true, will observe thanksgiving, but they know it is a religious observance, and they will take their instructions from their priests, who will issue a separate document. In the second place, the Freethinkers, who do not care to be prompted by either priests or politicians, will not thank Mr. Harrison for advising them to attend church. They regard his proclamation as to this extent an impertinence, and demand that the appointment by the president of the United States, and by the governors of the various states, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.

EXPENSIVE SOULS.

The Rev. Dr. Rice, of the Presbyterian church, has prepared and turned in a report of the cost of saving the souls of Californians and others. He presented his statistics to the Presbyterian ministers' meeting in San Francisco last Monday. As a preliminary he stated that the conversion of foreign heathens costs on an average $262, and native Americans, the country over, $200. Citizens of this state came higher than elsewhere, and in some localities souls are exceedingly expensive. For instance, according to Dr. Rice's figures, a comparison of the sum spent and the work accomplished in Sacramento demonstrates that conversions there run as high as $300, while in San Jose the figure is still more exorbitant, as a Santa Clara Valley sinner comes to repentance only after an outlay of $328. This is the top notch, and San Francisco exhibits the lowest for the state, as $262 here often suffices to convince the most obdurate that Christ died for him. It may be said with regard to San Francisco, that the large number of heathen citizens, who cost less than native sons, greatly reduces the average expense. A good able-bodied Chinaman, if allowed to retain his queue, would sign any church roll in the world for ten or twelve dollars net.

These figures should cause the Presbyterians to hesitate and inquire whether the results are commensurate with the outlay. It may appear after all that a citizen of California converted at an expense of $250 is not actually any better after regeneration than he was before. Old-time proselyters were warned that they compassed earth and sea for one convert, and that when they had got him he was ten times worse than before.

THE FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

A meeting for lecture and social will be held by the San Francisco Freethought Society at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, Sunday evening, November 16. The lecturer announced is Mrs. Dr. F. Winzell, who will speak on the subject of "Electro-Therapeutics, or Electricity as a Remedial Agent." Free demonstration will be given by Dr. Winzell and assistant.

Admission to the lecture is free. The meeting closes with a social and dance; gentlemen participating in which will be charged 25 cents.

It is rarely that an election is so satisfactory to all concerned as the one held last week. The Republicans are jubilant over California, which went their way, while the Democrats cannot make noise enough to express their feelings over the result in the East. Reform Democrats in San Francisco did not elect anybody, but they defeated several bad men, and therefore find reason to rejoice. Mr. Cator, their candidate for congress, thinks his friends did splendidly by him, and he is glad he went into the fight. The Nationalists have discovered that in some way the result achieved by the Farmers' Alliance in Kansas is a Nationalist victory, and they celebrate accordingly. Major McKinley, of tariff fame, recognizes the superior perspicacity of California in catching on to the beneficence of his bill, and gives it the credit for the Republican sweep on the coast. The Democrats, on the other hand, declare that the clean-up in the East is a condemnation of McKinley. Meanwhile, as a leading factor in all political contests, the "sack" holds first place with no challengers.

At length we are permitted to know the nature of the unpardonable sin, and the information comes from a woman. The unpardonable sin, saith the woman, whose name is Baeyertz, and who is a converted Jewess, is unbelief in the son of God. The above was imparted to a San Francisco audience last Sunday night by its author, whose argument is as follows: All men are by nature sinful, but pardonable through Jesus Christ. The said Christ being the only mediator through whom pardon may be obtained, the rejection of him is necessarily unpardonable. Nothing could be plainer, except the proposition that Mrs. Baeyertz probably does not know the truth of anything she states as a fact. The Hebrews have a pleasant story which they relate about converted Jews. One of the converted ones came to his rabbi and said, "Master, I have experienced a change of heart, and have joined the Christian church." And the good rabbi answered him, saying, "Son, go thy ways; but if you don't make a better man as a Christian than you have been as a Jew, may the Elohim have mercy upon you."

A WRITER in the "North American Review" addresses himself to the task of pointing out the difference between religion and superstition. The former, he explains, relates to faith or belief in the supernatural, while the latter finds its object in things of this earth which are capable of demonstration. Belief in the unlucky nature of the number thirteen he calls a superstition; so are the fear of spilling salt, breaking a mirror, or seeing the new moon over the left shoulder. He is obviously clear thus far, but he is unfortunate in referring to the superstition attaching to Friday as an unlucky day. He evidently believes that the observance of Sunday is a religious act; yet the worst that can happen to an enterprise begun on Friday is temporal disaster, while the violation of rules prescribed for Sunday is supposed to be visited with spiritual pains of prolonged if not eternal duration. From a logical point of view the Sunday superstition is as much greater than the Friday superstition as the pains of eternal fire are worse than ordinary ill luck.

THERE will be no county in Kansas large enough to hold the Vincent family when the extent of their importance strikes them with full force. They led the Farmers' Alliance movement in their state, and having won the fight, they are credited by the Greenbackers, by the Socialists, by the Democrats, by the Nationalists, and by the Labor forces with carrying the state for each. It was indeed a famous victory.

WE want about two thousand of our readers to set themselves at work to get two thousand more readers. There should always be activity in this matter. If you find a man who professes to be a Freethinker, stop him on the spot and make a subscriber to FREETHOUGHT of him before you let him go. Keep before him the truths that every conviction worth holding is worth promulgating and supporting, and that indifference is mental stagnation. Give him a copy of FREETHOUGHT, and ask him if there is any reason why he should not subscribe. One copy one year, $2; two copies one year, $3; three copies, $4; and four copies, $5.

GENERAL BOOTH, of the Salvation Army, has not so elaborate a plan for readjusting human relations as that proposed by Edward Bellamy, but he is eminently practical. He has set himself at work to raise a million pounds sterling, which he proposes to apply to erecting homes for the outcast and poverty-stricken of London. His method is to build small houses to be rented at nominal rates, the occupants to become owners when the cost of the house has been paid in the form of rent. The Salvation Army is the forlorn hope of the Christian world; it is the only branch of the church that really has any excuse for existing.

DR. BROWN-SEQUARD'S "elixir of life" having been accorded a chance to prove itself a failure, Dr. Koch, of Berlin, now comes forward with a "specific" which he claims, or somebody claims, is a cure for consumption, especially tuberculosis. With regard to consumption, it is generally held that if the disease is cured it was not consumption but something else; and this notion will probably prevail against any claims for the virtues of Dr. Koch's specific. Nevertheless if the patient's health is restored, the technical nature of the malady is not of so much account.

MR. THOMAS SMITH, of Cleveland, Ohio, who held that the traitor Judas was necessary to the crucifixion of Christ, and therefore to the salvation of the world, was not so insane on that point as his disappointed heirs would have the court believe. Except for Iscariot's timely treachery, supplemented by the bigotry of the Jews, Christ might have been alive to-day, and the Christians would be compelled to take the consequences of their own acts; something that is undesirable for them to contemplate.

THE strictures of the Freethinkers on the attitude of the church toward woman are taking effect, and the Methodists are voting upon the proposition to admit women as lay members at general conferences. The privilege thus being offered to women is not a valuable one, any more than the right to vote in political elections, but it is a step in the direction of human equality, and as such is worth mentioning.

THE closing of the Catholic Cathedral bazaar contemporaneously with the closing of the polls was to be expected. The fair was organized to bleed the candidates, and now that the candidates are either elected or defeated they are no longer available for blood-sucking purposes.

THE election being over, there is no further interest among American politicians in the poor of Ireland, and the appeal for funds has been withdrawn. Sympathy for the Irish and hatred for the English will now be laid away until another election shall recall them into activity.

S. P. PUTNAM will arrange to lecture in Perris, Cal., Nov. 19; Leon, Nov. 20, and San Jacinto Nov. 22 and 23. Liberal friends please take notice.

OUR New York correspondent, Eudorus, gives Mayor Grant the distinction of being the most illiterate man that ever won the mayoralty contest in the metropolis. Naturally so, since the Catholic church, through its political organization, Tammany Hall, elected him.

WE have the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-book" for sale, price $2. Patrons ordering the work by mail or express will please inclose 25 cents extra for cost of transmission.

SECULAR UNION CONGRESS.

The following press dispatch furnishes all the information we have received concerning the Congress of the American Secular Union, which appears to have been a great success:

PORTSMOUTH, O., Nov. 2.—To-day was culminating day in the American Secular Union Congress. Excursions were run on all the railroads, bringing big crowds from Columbus, Cincinnati, Huntington, Maysville, Ironton, Gallipolis, Jackson, etc. The opera house was packed, and many people were turned away. The morning session was opened with a brilliant address on "Religious Liberty" by Rabbi David Phillipson, of Cincinnati. Judge Waite, of Chicago, followed with a powerful talk on "God in the Constitution." Professor Corliss, secretary of the National Religious Liberty Association, then spoke on "No Union of the Church and State." His talk was masterly and effective.

The afternoon session consisted of music and oratory. Addresses were made by L. K. Washburn, of Boston, on "The Sunday Question;" Thaddeus B. Wakeman, of New York, on "The Natural Sciences," and John Charlesworth on "Secularization."

Charles Watts lectured in the evening on "The Church and the Throne." His effort met with storms of applause. Miss Voltairine de Cleve closed the Congress.

Later.—A card from Miss Ida C. Craddock brings the intelligence that the following officers were elected: President, Dr. R. B. Westbrook; secretary, Ida C. Craddock; treasurer, F. C. Mende; directors, T. B. Wakeman, E. B. Foote, jr., T. Morris Perot, and J. A. Bentley—the first two from New York, the last from Philadelphia.

OBSERVATIONS.

J. E. Remsburg spoke in a hall at 977 Market street, this city, on Friday evening of last week. Notice of the lecture was so short that only a few knew when and where it was to be delivered. I myself took special pains to see that this paper containing an announcement was placed in the mails early Friday morning, so that all city readers would know about the event, but the postoffice foiled my good intentions by delaying delivery until Saturday.

The result was a little parlor gathering of some sixty persons in Temple hall to listen to what was perhaps the best discourse any of those present had ever heard. Remsburg is gifted with ideas rather than oratory, but, although he makes no effort to be rhetorical, he is eloquent enough. He went through the list of claims upon which the Christian church bases its right to exist, and showed that they were unstable. He forgot nothing, and left no point until it had been made perfectly clear. He has a full and pleasing voice, a presence that commands attention, and he satisfies both the ear and the eye.

Remsburg's stay here was brief. He reached the city at six o'clock, spoke at eight, made a call on new-found acquaintances at ten, visited FREETHOUGHT office at eleven, returned to his hotel at twelve, and went away south the next morning at half past seven. If all the good fortune he deserves goes with him he will never know the complexion of ill luck.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To E. M. MACDONALD, Editor of the Truth Seeker, My Dear Brother: You will remember that about a dozen years ago you had the goodness to make an uncle of me, and that I promised you at the time to return the courtesy at the earliest available opportunity. I now take my pen in hand to apprise you that the debt is discharged, the obligation fulfilled, and the promise kept. The subject of these remarks became a resident of California on the eighth day of the present month of November, and, I am informed, favors its father in the matter of sex. He was too late for the election this year, but will vote in 1912, provided he is not himself a candidate for some high office. This Native Son of the Golden West was recognized at once as Eugene Leland Macdonald, although he has so far declined to acknowledge his identity. The mother is happier than she ever was before. She is also in her right mind, and I would that I could say as much for the father, who has been in a state of wild excitement since the eighth. In acquiring a son I fear that I have lost many cherished friends among my male acquaintances on account of my inclination to thrust information upon them about the said son. When they see me coming nowadays they make haste to get upon the opposite side of the street or to conceal themselves where I cannot find them. Even my friend Burgman, the tailor, with whom for many months I have been accustomed to exchange theosophic thought, now turns upon me a cold ear and a deaf shoulder, says good-bye, and skips around the corner at my approach. Putnam hoorayed as I did at first, but he has now departed for Texas, and the time is near at hand when I shall have to howl alone or hire somebody to shout with me. I shall be pleased if you or any of the boys in the Truth Seeker office will kindly make a little noise on my account. When you see Counsellor Sherman and Harry Thomas, convey the tidings to them. We were young together ere wives and families had set their seal upon our brows. When we all have scant white soap-locks above our ears we will meet again, and refer casually to the halcyon days of youth. With a paternal aspect, GEORGE.

If Hugh O. Pentecost does not burn up the police of Newark, N. J., in the forthcoming number of the "Twentieth Century" it will not be because they have given him no reason to do so. On the evening of November 7 a number of persons were announced to meet in a hall in Newark to commemorate the names of five men who died in Chicago three years ago. The proprietor of the hall, when he learned the object of the meeting, refused admission to the persons who had hired the building for the occasion. The crowd submitted, and a woman named Lucy Parsons attempted to speak from the steps of the edifice. Thereupon the police captain informed Mrs. Parsons that she would not be allowed to address the assemblage, and when men in the crowd protested they were "laid senseless upon the ground" from blows dealt them by the officers. Mrs. Parsons, the San Francisco "Chronicle's" account states, was "hustled" into a reserve wagon, while two men named Graham and Horner were "thrown" into another and taken to the police station. The police made a charge on the crowd, "and as a result there were many cut heads and torn coats." Eight of the more "aggressive" were arrested.

The account of the affair is written up for the press in a highly sensational manner. It is called a riot, and the crowd is spoken of as desperate and violent, but the description closes with these suggestive words: "Notwithstanding the free use of clubs and canes, the police escaped with a few slight bruises and soiled uniforms." The use of the word "escaped" in this place is certainly the height of sarcasm, since the police made the attack and were the victors. They might have avoided the bruises and soiled clothes by simply letting the people alone. From the report I infer that Mr. Pentecost was expected to address the meeting, as was also Mr. John Most, two men whose styles of preaching Anarchy are as different as the styles of the cultured clergyman and the Salvation Army howler are different from each other. Pentecost preaches non-resistance; Most advocates exactly the opposite, and each supports his method with argument, it being noticeable that while Pentecost practices what he preaches, Most does not. The authorities are taking exactly the wrong course to break up the influence of these men, and the men are taking the wrong course to placate the police. If the authorities desire that Most should sink into comparative quiet, they have only to let him have his say; and if Most desires to hold his meetings undisturbed, let him apply to the courts for protection, and thus fight the devil of authority with its own fire. The courts are organized to protect the citizen, the police to suppress him. If he suffers from one, there is no reason why he should not avail himself of the benefits of the other.

Perhaps two years hence I shall be ready to offer my services again as a judge of elections in the Eighth Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District, city and county of San Francisco, but for the present I have had enough. On the morning of Tuesday, November 4, at daybreak, I took in hand a register of the precinct aforesaid, and industriously checked off voters until the close of the polls at five o'clock P.M. We had the ballot box on a little stand at the window of the cottage, so that the sovereign electors could come up on the piazza and offer their suffrages. Two hundred and forty-five citizens, of nearly all foreign nationalities, with a sprinkling of Americans, took advantage of the opportunity and threw in a vote. All was serene up to the time the polls closed, and then chaos set in. The disorder inaugurated resulted first from the fact that with the closing of the polls the saloons opened; and second because the populace seemed imbued with the idea that the fate of the universe hung on the result of the vote. The populace was also free with the opinion that the election board was composed of a lot of "skins" who would delight in thwarting the will of the people by a fraudulent count. The drunker the populace got, the more importance it attached to a correct count, and the more thoroughly convinced it became that the board was not right.

Readers of California papers may have heard mentioned a system of recording ballots known as the Story plan, which was adopted by the last legislature. This plan consists, briefly, of crediting each candidate with the full vote of his party, and then debiting him on the total vote to the extent that his name is scratched, and crediting him to the extent that his name is substituted for that of other candidates. Nothing could be more simple in theory. Anybody of ordinary intelligence must admit that he comprehends it at a glance, just as all of us admit the beauty of Bellamy's society as described in "Looking Backward." Trouble begins when the attempt is made to realize the dream. My criticism of the Story plan is that it covers too much space; it spreads over some twenty-four pages, each page as large as four pages of FREETHOUGHT, and the poll clerk must explore all this surface before he can find the name of a candidate in order to credit him with a vote or to deduct one from his score. The broad expanses of intricately-ruled paper are neither paged, indexed, nor numbered. Then the California ballot, which I accord the credit of being the clumsiest in the world, co-operates with the Story plan to fill the asylums with insane clerks. Instead of being divided into state, congressional, city and county, judiciary, and so forth, the ballot consists of a strip of paper six inches wide and eighteen long, and contains this year a string of candidates seventy-one in number. On a presidential year it would be still worse. When these ballots are scratched, as more than two-thirds of them are, the clerk must wander all over his twenty-four big pages in order to tally them, and at least nine-tenths of his time is wasted in looking for the names. If the ballot were divided so that all the names on one ballot could be found on one page of the tally-sheet, the work that consumes an hour could be done in a few minutes. Furthermore, with the divided ballot the result in each division could be announced separately, whereas under the present system the whole of the seventy-one candidates come out of the box together. They have the divided ballot in the East, and we knew how New York had gone twenty-four hours before we found out anything about the local election.

Our clerks were intelligent men and understood arithmetic as far as fractions, but the Story plan overcame them. They tallied and scratched from midnight until morning; and from morning until toward noon they endeavored to strike a balance and count the vote. Then human endurance failed; the clerks laid down their pens and struck. Then the inspectors, the judges, the supervisors, and the marshals gathered up the ballot box, the tally sheets, and all the stationery, and went to the registrar's office at the city hall. Here we put the whole business on the registrar's counter, and told the clerk he would find the returns from our precinct somewhere among the daybree. The registrar spurned our offering, and we appealed to the mayor. The mayor whacked his desk with his fist and inquired what in the name of the immortal gods we had brought all those things to him for. "Go back to your precinct," said he, "and stay there until you can return a correct count to the registrar. The very devil," he added fervently, "is to pay all through this election." The next day's "Chronicle" contained this item:

The clerks of the Eighth Precinct of the Thirty-third District went completely astray, and after puzzling over the law and their instructions for an hour, gave up in despair and consigned the Story system to the districts of Iblis. A police officer was sent to the polling-place to save the ballots from destruction.

The item is not strictly true, as none of us knew what the districts of Iblis were, but if they are a place where things are burnt in everlasting fire, we wished the returns were there.

The mayor called a two-horse hack, and we returned to the precinct in style, accompanied by two expert clerks from Registrar Smiley's office. While we were absent word had got about that we had stolen the ballot box and run away with it, without making any count. Our return quieted the rumor, but it wasn't an hour before we received intelligence that a mob was coming to clean out the board. The inspector telephoned to police headquarters for protection, which appeal was answered by three officers with great silver stars blazing on their breasts. The mob arrived shortly afterwards—one of the hardest gangs I ever saw, composed of pugilists, hoodlums, firemen, and a general assortment of toughs. One conspicuous member carried oysters in his pocket, and cracked and opened them like peanuts. Another was the champion heavy-weight slugger of a local athletic club. The mob was led by a member of one of the county committees, and at his direction they went away until the force of police had got tired of standing around, clubbing nobody, and gone back to headquarters. Then the gang came in again. A recount was in progress, and I had the job of calling off the ballots. The man with oysters in his pockets ousted one of the city hall experts, and said he would attend to "dis tallyin' business" himself. I declined to read names for him to tally, which thwarted his intent while it ruffled his temper. The one police officer left on duty cared more to keep his solidity with the gang than to keep the gang quiet, so that there was more confusion than anything else. Finally it was discovered that both the experts, both the inspectors, both the marshals, and myself were appointees from the same party, which discovery resulted in my being bounced and the other judge put in my place. Then I went out into the night to get a little fresh air, and fell among the Philistines. It cost me eighty cents to make peace with them, the amount mentioned going to enrich a neighboring hostelry.

Time had flown until now it was two o'clock in the morning, and I had been forty-four hours without sleep. The gang were also getting sleepy, and when we returned to the polling-place they lolled their intoxicated forms over the shoulders of the patient counters of votes, and insulted them with coarse jibes. The counters never said a word, but went wearily on, tallying with integrity the votes that their persecutors had cast on election day. The judge who occupied my place nodded over the ballots, calling out "Scratch Bacigalupi" until he ran the words together; and "Scratchigalupi" fell thickly from his tongue. The hoodlums slept at last, and were aroused, to be gently escorted outside the door and pointed toward the lights that glimmered from a saloon across the way, whither they staggered drowsily, stumbling over their own feet.

At five o'clock Thursday morning the count was finished, the returns signed and sealed, and dispatched to the city hall. Such was the election in the Eighth Precinct of the Thirty-third Assembly District, city and county of San Francisco.

Geo. E. Macdonald

If subscribers will send us the names of Liberals they are acquainted with we will forward sample copies of FREETHOUGHT. This is an effective way of increasing the circulation of the paper.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

Thanksgiving day is appointed for Thursday, Nov. 27, by President Harrison.—Whalers are coming in from the north. A good season is reported.—Dr. C. C. O'Donnell, a defeated candidate for mayor of San Francisco, declares that he was counted out and that he will wade through blood to secure his rights. He has already cried havoc, and will let slip the dogs of war as soon as he can find any that are willing to fight.—One citizen of San Francisco jumped into the bay last Sunday, another beat a bass drum for about twenty-five blocks, and a third pushed a wheelbarrow a considerable distance, in payment of election bets.—Sarah Bernhardt, the distinguished French actress, will probably visit San Francisco and play an engagement at the Grand Opera House.—By request of citizens all the Chinese residents of Aberdeen, Wash., left the town Nov. 8. There was no violence.—One hundred and twenty-four persons died in San Francisco last week, 24 more than during the same period last year.—The Methodists at Spokane Falls voted to admit women as lay delegates to the general conference. The question is being voted upon by Methodists throughout the country.—A large portion of Truckee, Cal., was destroyed by a conflagration last week. The loss reaches $100,000.

The New York Society of the Archeological Institute of America proposes to purchase about 35,000 acres of land in Greece covering the site of ancient Delphi. The Greek government wants $80,000 for the land.—Bishop Walker of the diocese of North Dakota has built a church on wheels to be run over the railroads for the alleged benefit of small towns where they have no house of worship.—The American committee for the relief of famine in Ireland has issued a statement announcing the temporary withdrawal of its appeal to the American people. The British government promises to take care of its subjects.—The will of Thomas Smith, of Cleveland, O., is to be contested. He had a large amount of wealth which he bequeathed to his grandson and granddaughter. His other heirs declare that Smith was insane because he spent much of his time reading the book of Revelation and figuring out the value of the golden pavements of the New Jerusalem. Judas Iscariot was his favorite character, as he held that if Judas had not betrayed his master, Christ would not have been crucified, and we should all be damned.—Robert Lincoln, U. S. minister to England, has asked to be relieved of his mission. He desires to return to Chicago and resume his law practice.—The Catholic church claims another victim in the person of Mary Abel, a wealthy woman of Baltimore, Md., who is about to take the veil and turn over her money to the church.—The police broke up a meeting of Anarchists in Newark, N.J., last week, and several attendants were fined $10 each. Four of the speakers, including Mrs. Parsons, were remanded to appear before the grand jury. The authorities declare that the meetings of the Socialists and Anarchists must be prohibited.—Burtzell, the New York Catholic priest who was disciplined for expressing sympathy for Dr. McGlynn, is reported to have made his peace with Rome.—Dillon and O'Brien, the Irish agitators, had a reception in Philadelphia last week. Nearly thirteen thousand dollars was raised for their benefit.

A French surgeon has discovered that men may receive injury from working too near an electric light similar to sunstroke. Workers in mines are the chief sufferers.—Aristocracy and the English church both approve General Booth's scheme to raise a million pounds for the purpose of building houses for London's poor.—The Swiss Federal Council has decided to expel Mormons from the republic. Petitions in favor of the expulsion have been signed by tens of thousands of the working people, who cannot tolerate the Mormon doctrine. In several instances the Mormon missionaries have been subjected to personal violence. They have been making numerous converts.

THE Greeks observe Monday as a day of rest; the Persians, Tuesday; the Assyrians, Wednesday; the Egyptians, Thursday; the Turks, Friday; the Jews, Saturday; the Christians, Sunday.

ACCORDING to the statistics of illiteracy that have been gathered in Louisiana the percentage of colored voters who are unable to read and write is less than that of white.

THE LECTURE FIELD.

I left San Francisco on the steamboat October 29 for Stockton, and thence to Knight's Ferry by rail and stage. Near the latter place I found the home of the Hon. A. Schell, where I was most cordially welcomed and kindly entertained for several days by Mr. A. Schell and wife and Mr. and Mrs. Herrick Schell and family, all residing under the same roof and feasting at the same table. A guest at this house is treated in fine style and everything is done to make one happy. I was sorry when the time came for me to leave. But perhaps it was best, for if I had remained longer and fared sumptuously every day where the land teems with wine, honey, and cream, not to speak of figs, grapes, peaches (November 2), and other good things to satisfy the inner man, I fear that when I returned to Oakland and had to come down to skim milk and water—Oakland water invigorated with sand—I should have been a very badly disgruntled man.

Mr. A. Schell, as many readers of FREETHOUGHT well know, has been a very active man, a Liberal in sentiment, and a patriot in the hour of the nation's peril. Every one who knows anything at all about him knows that he is a Freethinker and a Republican.

A few weeks ago a very estimable woman, a Freethinker, died at Oakdale, twelve miles from Knight's Ferry, and Mr. Schell was invited to deliver the address at the funeral. He cheerfully complied with the invitation, and I was informed by those who heard the discourse that it was very fine and admired even by those not calling themselves Agnostics. It was the first time in their lives that many who gathered around the coffin on that occasion had ever heard such appropriate and thoughtful remarks made at a funeral.

Mine was the first Freethought lecture ever given at Knight's Ferry. To my surprise and to the great satisfaction of all our Liberal friends we had a very good-sized audience for so small a place, and an exceedingly attentive one. On my way home I stopped one night at Oakdale and was invited to lecture by Dr. Endicott, A. J. Mann, and others. I spoke in the Independent church, and so great was the enthusiasm over the first lecture that I was most cordially invited to return and give a course of lectures just as soon as I could make it convenient. Of course that will be very soon.

W. F. JAMIESON'S FINANCIAL TROUBLES.

Our good friend A. Schell read aloud to me the paragraph in FREETHOUGHT relating to Mr. W. F. Jamieson's financial embarrassment. He became interested in the lecturer's troubles and said to me: "Brother Bell, I wish you would say through the Liberal papers to the Freethinkers of the country that I am ready to help Mr. Jamieson and that I will loan him $250 at six per cent interest if several others will loan him the $500. This way of raising it will save time and risks of his losing his property, and also relieve him of a vast deal of worryment."

This offer was made spontaneously, and is so magnanimous, that I have no doubt others of our good Liberal friends will see this case in the same light as Brother Schell does.

Ample security will be given to those who come to the rescue. The address of the Hon. A. Schell is Knight's Ferry, Stanislaus county, Cal. Mr. W. F. Jamieson's address is Box 366, Des Moines, Ia.

W. S. BELL.

Box 109, Oakland, Cal.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS IN TEXAS

A few dates are left vacant along this route. Those who desire lectures for the dates not included in this list will please communicate with S. P. Putnam at El Paso, Texas, where he will be November 30.

El Paso.....	Nov 30	Gainesville.....	Dec 23 24 25
Burnett.....	Dec 3 4 5	Trenton.....	Dec 27 28
Goldthwaite.....	Dec 6 7	Denison.....	Dec 29 30
Norse and Clifton.....	Dec 8 9	Forney.....	Dec 31 and Jan 1 2
Walnut Springs.....	Dec 10 11 12	Reagan and Martin.....	Jan 3 4 5
Stephensville.....	Dec 13 14	Columbus.....	Jan 8 9 10
Alvarado.....	Dec 15 16 17	Flatonia.....	Jan 11 12
Ft. Worth.....	Dec 18 19	San Antonio.....	Jan 13 14 15
Sunset.....	Dec 20 21

TESTIMONIAL TO WALT WHITMAN.*

Let us Put Wreaths on the Brows of the Living.

Of all the placid hours in his peaceful life, those that Walt Whitman spent on the stage of Horticultural Hall last night must have been among the most gratifying, says the Philadelphia "Press" of October 22. To a testimonial, intended to cheer his declining years, not only in a complimentary sense, came a thousand or more people to listen to a tribute to the aged poet by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, such as seldom falls to the lot of living man to hear about himself.

On the stage sat many admirers of the venerable torch-bearer of modern poetic thought, as Colonel Ingersoll described him, young and old, men and women. There were white beards, but none were so white as that of the author of "Leaves of Grass." He sat calm and sedate in his easy wheeled chair, with his usual garb of gray, with his cloudy white hair falling over his white, turned-down collar that must have been three inches wide. No burst of eloquence from the orator's lips disturbed that equanimity; no tribute of applause moved him from his habitual calm.

And when the lecturer, having concluded, said, "We have met to-night to honor ourselves by honoring the author of 'Leaves of Grass,'" and the audience started to leave the hall, the man they had honored reached forward with his cane and attracted Colonel Ingersoll's attention.

"Do not leave yet," said Colonel Ingersoll, "Mr. Whitman has a word to say."

This is what he said, and no more characteristic thing ever fell from the poet's lips or flowed from his pen:

"Only a word, my friends, only a word. After all, the main factor, my friends, is in meeting, being face to face and meeting like this. I thought I would like to come forward with my living voice and thank you for coming and thank Robert Ingersoll for speaking, and that is about all. With such brief thanks to you and him, and showing myself to bear testimony—I think that is the Quaker term—face to face, I bid you all hail and farewell."

THE LECTURE.

In the year 1855 the American people knew but little of books. Their ideals, their models, were English. Young and Pollok, Addison and Watts were regarded as great poets. Some of the more reckless read Thomson's "Seasons" and the poems and novels of Sir Walter Scott. A few, not quite orthodox, delighted in the mechanical monotony of Pope, and the really wicked—those lost to all religious shame—were worshipers of Shakespeare. The really orthodox Protestant, untroubled by doubts, considered Milton the greatest poet of them all. Byron and Shelley were hardly respectable—not to be read by young persons. It was admitted on all hands that Burns was a child of nature of whom his mother was ashamed and proud.

In the blessed year aforesaid, candor, free and sincere speech, were under the ban. Creeds at that time were entrenched behind statutes, prejudice, custom, ignorance, stupidity, Puritanism, and slavery; that is to say, slavery of mind and body.

Of course it always has been, and forever will be, impossible for slavery, or any kind or form of injustice, to produce a great poet. There are hundreds of verse makers and writers on the side of wrong—enemies of progress—but they are not poets, they are not men of genius.

At this time a young man—he to whom this testimonial is given—he upon whose head have fallen the snows of more than seventy winters—this man, born within the sound of the sea, gave to the world a book, "Leaves of Grass." This book was, and is, the true transcript of a soul. The man is unmasked. No drapery of hypocrisy, no pretense, no fear. The book was as original in form as in thought. All customs were forgotten or disregarded, all rules broken—nothing mechanical—no imitation—spontaneous, running and winding like a river, multitudinous in its thoughts as the waves of the sea—nothing mathematical or measured. In everything a touch of chaos—lacking what is called form as clouds lack form, but not lacking the splendor of sunrise or the glory of sunset. It was a marvelous collection and aggregation of fragments, hints, suggestions, memories and prophecies, weeds and flowers, clouds and clods, sights and sounds, emotions and passions, waves, shadows, and constellations.

His book was received by many with disdain, with horror, with indignation and protest—by the few as a marvelous, almost miraculous, message to the world—full of thought, philosophy, poetry, and music.

In the republic of mediocrity genius is dangerous. A great soul appears and fills the world with new and marvelous harmonies. In his words is the old Promethean flame. The heart of nature beats and throbs in his line. The respectable prudes and pedagogues sound the alarm, and cry, or rather screech: "Is this a book for a young person?"

A poem true to life as a Greek statue—candid as nature—fills these barren souls with fear.

Drapery about the perfect was suggested by immodesty.

The provincial prudes, and others of like mold, pretend that love is a duty rather than a passion—a kind of self-denial—not an overmastering joy. They preach the gospel of pretense and pantalettes. In the presence of sincerity, of truth, they cast down their eyes and endeavor to feel immodest. To them, the most beautiful thing is hypocrisy adorned with a blush.

They have no idea of an honest, pure passion, glorying in its strength—intense, intoxicated with the beautiful—giving even to inanimate things pulse and motion, and that transfigures, ennobles, and idealizes the object of its adoration.

They do not walk the streets of the city of life—they explore the sewers; they stand in the gutters and cry, "Unclean!" They pretend that beauty is a snare; that love is a Delilah; that the highway of joy is the broad road, lined with flowers and filled with perfume, leading to the city of eternal sorrow.

Since the year 1855 the American people have developed; they are somewhat acquainted with the literature of the world. They have witnessed the most tremendous of revolutions, not only upon the fields of battle, but in the world of thought. The American citizen has concluded that it is hardly worth while being a sovereign unless he has the right to think for himself.

Men of talent, men of business, touch life upon few sides. They travel but the beaten path. The creative spirit is not in them. They regard with suspicion a poet who touches life on every side. They have little confidence in that divine thing called sympathy, and they do not and cannot understand the man who enters into the hopes, the aims, and the feelings of all others.

In all genius there is a touch of chaos—a little of the vagabond; and the successful tradesman, the man who buys and sells, or manages a bank, does not care to deal with a person who has only poems for collaterals—they have a little fear of such people, and regard them as the awkward country man does a sleight-of-hand performer.

In every age in which books have been produced the governing class, the respectable, have been opposed to the works of real genius. If what are known as the best people could have their way, if the pulpit had been consulted—these provincial moralists—the works of Shakespeare would have been suppressed. Not a line would have reached our time. And the same may be said of every dramatist of his age.

If the Scotch Kirk could have decided, nothing would have been known of Robert Burns. If the good people, the orthodox, could have had their say, not one line of Voltaire would now be known. All the plates of the French Encyclopedia would have been destroyed with the thousands that were destroyed. Nothing would have been known of D'Alembert, Grimm, Diderot, or any of the Titans who warred against the thrones and altars and laid the foundation of modern literature not only, but what is of far greater moment, universal education.

It is not too much to say that every book now held in high esteem would have been destroyed, if those in authority could have had their will. Every book of modern times, that has a real value, that has enlarged the intellectual horizon of mankind, that has developed the brain, that has furnished real food for thought, can be found in the Index Expurgatorius of the papacy, and nearly every one has been commended to the free minds of men by the denunciations of Protestants.

*From an authorized report in the New York Truth Seeker.

If the guardians of society, the protectors of "young persons," could have had their way, we should have known nothing of Byron or Shelley. The voices that thrill the world would now be silent. If authority could have had its way, the world would have been as ignorant now as it was when our ancestors lived in holes or hung from dead limbs by their prehensile tails.

But we are not forced to go very far back. If Shakespeare had been published for the first time now, those divine plays—greater than continents and seas, greater even than the constellations of the midnight sky—would be excluded from the mails by the decision of the present enlightened postmaster-general.

The poets have always lived in an ideal world, and that ideal world has always been far better than the real world. As a consequence, they have forever roused, not simply the imagination, but the energies—the enthusiasm of the human race.

The great poets have been on the side of the oppressed—of the downtrodden. They have suffered with the imprisoned and the enslaved, and whenever and wherever man has suffered for the right, wherever the hero has been stricken down—whether on field or scaffold—some man of genius has walked by his side, and some poet has given form and expression, not simply to his deeds, but to his aspirations.

From the Greek and Roman world we still hear the voices of a few. The poets, the philosophers, the artists, and the orators still speak. Countless millions have been covered by the waves of oblivion, but the few who uttered the elemental truths, who had sympathy for the whole human race, and who were great enough to prophesy a grander day, are as alive to-night as when they roused, by their bodily presence, by their works of art, the enthusiasm of their fellow-men.

Think of the respectable people, of the men of wealth and position, those who dwelt in mansions, children of success, who went down to the grave voiceless, and whose names we do not know. Think of the vast multitudes, the endless processions, that entered the caverns of eternal night—leaving no thought—no truth as a legacy to mankind!

The great poets have sympathized with the people. They have uttered in all ages the human cry. Unbought by gold, unawed by power, they have lifted high the torch that illuminates the world.

As a matter of fact, the questions of origin and destiny are beyond the grasp of the human mind. We can see a certain distance; beyond that everything is only indistinct; and beyond the indistinct is the unseen. In the presence of these mysteries—and everything is a mystery so far as origin, destiny, and nature are concerned—the intelligent, honest man is compelled to say, "I do not know."

In the great midnight a few truths like stars shine on forever, and from the brain of man come a few struggling gleams of light—a few momentary sparks.

Some have contended that everything is spirit; others that everything is matter; and again, others have maintained that a part is matter and a part is spirit; some that spirit was first and matter after; others that matter was first and spirit after; and others that matter and spirit have existed together.

But none of these people can by any possibility tell what matter is, or what spirit is, or what the difference is between spirit and matter.

The Materialists look upon the Spiritualists as substantially crazy; and the Spiritualists regard the Materialists as low and groveling. These Spiritualistic people hold matter in contempt; but, after all, matter is quite a mystery. You take in your hand a little earth—a little dust. Do you know what it is? In this dust you put a seed; the rain falls upon it; the light strikes it; the seed grows; it bursts into blossom; it produces fruit.

What is this dust—this womb? Do you understand it? Is there anything in the wide universe more wonderful than this?

Take a grain of sand, reduce it to powder, take the smallest possible particle, look at it with a microscope, contemplate its every part for days, and it remains the citadel of a secret—an impregnable fortress. Bring all the theologians, philosophers, and scientists in serried ranks against it; let them attack on every side with all the arts and arms of thought and force. The citadel does not fall. Over the battlements floats the flag and the victorious secret smiles at the baffled hosts.

Walt Whitman did not and does not imagine that he has reached the limit—the end of the road traveled by the human race. He knows that every victory over nature is but the preparation for another battle. This truth was in his mind when he said: "Understand me well; it is provided in the essence of things, that from any fruition of success, no matter what, shall come forth something to make a greater struggle necessary."

This is the generalization of all history.

There are two of these poems to which I have time to call special attention. The first is entitled, "A Word Out of the Sea."

The boy, coming out of the rocked cradle, wandering over the sands and fields, up from the mystic play of shadows, out of the patches of briars and blackberries—from the memories of birds—from the thousand responses of his heart—goes back to the sea and his childhood, and sings a reminiscence.

Two guests from Alabama—two birds—build their nest, and there were four light green eggs, spotted with brown, and the two birds sang for joy:

Shine, shine,
Pour down your warmth together, great sun!
While we bask, we two together.
Two together—
Winds blow south, or winds blow north,
Day comes white, or night comes black,
Home, or rivers and mountains from home,
Singing all time, minding no time,
If we two but keep together.

In a little while one of the birds is missed and never appeared again, and all through the summer the mate, the solitary guest, was singing of the lost:

Blow, blow,
Blow up, sea winds, along Paumanok's shore;
I wait and I wait till you blow my mate to me.

And the boy that night, blending himself with the shadows, with bare feet, went down to the sea, where the white arms out in the breakers were tirelessly tossing; listening to the songs and translating the notes.

And the singing bird called loud and high for the mate, wondering what the dusky spot was in the brown and yellow, seeing the mate whichever way he looked, piercing the woods and the earth with his song, hoping that the mate might hear his cry; stopping that he might not lose her answer; waiting and then crying again: "Here I am!" And this gentle call is for you. Do not be deceived by the whistle of the wind; those are the shadows; and at last crying:

O past, O joy!
In the air, in the woods, over fields,
Loved! loved! loved!
Loved—but no more with me—
We two together no more.

And then the boy, understanding the song that had awakened in his breast a thousand songs clearer and louder and more sorrowful than the bird's, knowing that the cry of unsatisfied love would never again be absent from him; thinking then of the destiny of all, and asking of the sea the final word, and the sea answering, delaying not and hurrying not, spoke the low delicious word "Death!" "ever Death!"

The next poem, one that will live as long as our language, entitled: "When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloomed," is on the death of Lincoln.

The sweetest, wisest soul of all my days and lands.

One who reads this will never forget the odor of the lilac, "the lustrous western star" and "the gray-brown bird singing in the pines and cedars."

In this poem the dramatic unities are perfectly preserved, the atmosphere and climate in harmony with every event.

Never will he forget the solemn journey of the coffin through day and night, with the great cloud darkening the land, nor the pomp of inlooped flags, the procession long and winding, the flambeaus of night, the torches' flames, the silent sea of faces, the unbared heads, the thousand voices rising strong and solemn; the dirges, the shuddering organs, the tolling bells—and the sprig of lilac.

And then for a moment they will hear the gray-brown bird singing in the cedars, bashful and tender, while the lustrous star lingers in the West, and they will remember the pictures hung on the chamber walls to adorn the burial house—pictures of spring and farms and homes and the gray smoke, lucid and bright, and the floods of yellow gold—of the gorgeous indolent, sinking sun—the green leaves of the tree prolific—the breast of the river with the wind-dapple here and there, and the varied and ample land—and the most excellent sun so calm and haughty—the violet and purple morn with just-felt breezes. The gentle soft born measureless light—the miracle spreading, bathing all—the fulfilled noon—the coming eve delicious and the welcome night and the stars.

And then again they will hear the song of the gray-brown bird in the limitless dusk amid the cedars and pines. Again they will remember the star and again the odor of the lilac.

Walt Whitman has dreamed great dreams, told great truths and uttered sublime thoughts. He has held aloft the torch and bravely led the way.

As you read the marvelous book, or the person, called "Leaves of Grass," you feel the freedom of the antique world; you hear the voices of the morning, of the first great singers—voices elemental as those of sea and storm. The horizon enlarges, the heavens grow ample, limitations are forgotten—the realization of of the will, the accomplishment of the ideal, seem to be within your power. Obstructions become petty and disappear. The chains and bars are broken, and the distinctions of caste are lost.

The soul is in the open air, under the blue and stars—the flag of Nature. Creeds, theories, and philosophies ask to be examined, contradicted, reconstructed. Prejudices disappear, superstitions vanish, and custom abdicates. The sacred places become highways, duties and desires clasp hands and become comrades and friends. Authority drops the scepter, the priest the miter, and the purple falls from kings. The inanimate becomes articulate, the meanest and humblest things utter speech, and the dumb and voiceless burs into song. A feeling of independence takes possession of the soul, the body expands, the blood flows full and free, superiors vanish, flattery is a lost art, and life becomes rich, royal, and superb. The world becomes a personal possession, and the oceans, the continents and constellations belong to you. You are in the center, everything radiates from you, and in your veins beats and throbs the pulse of all life. You become a rover, careless and free. You wander by the shores of all seas and hear the eternal psalm. You feel the silence of the wide forest, and stand beneath the intertwined and over-arching boughs, entranced with symphonies of winds and woods. You are borne on the tides of eager and swift rivers, hear the rush and roar of cataracts as they fall beneath the seven-hued arch, and watch the eagles as they circling soar. You traverse gorges dark and dim, and climb the scarred and threatening cliffs. You stand in orchards where the blossoms fall like snow, where the birds nest and sing, and painted moths make aimless journeys through the happy air. You live the lives of those who till the earth, and walk amid the perfumed fields, hear the reaper's song, and feel the breath and scope of earth and sky. You are in the great cities, in the midst of multitudes, of the endless processions. You are on the wide plains—the prairies—with hunter and trapper, with savage and pioneer, and you feel the soft grass yield under your feet. You sail in many ships, and breathe the free air of the sea. You travel countless roads, and countless paths. You visit palaces and prisons, hospitals and courts; you pity kings and convicts, and your sympathy goes out to all the suffering and insane, the oppressed and enslaved, and even to the infamous. You hear the din of labor, all sounds of factory, field, and forest, of all tools, instruments, and machines. You become familiar with men and women of all employments, trades, and professions—with birth and burial, with wedding feast and funeral chant. You see the cloud and flame of war, and you enjoy the ineffable perfect days of peace.

In this one book, in these wondrous "Leaves of Grass," you find hints and suggestions, touches and fragments, of all there is of life, that lies between the babe, whose rounded cheeks dimple beneath his mother's laughing, loving eyes, and the old man, snow-crowned, who, with a smile, extends his hand to death.

PREMONITIONS AND WARNINGS.

The intimacy of my friends C. and L. was of the closest kind. Associated in business, sharing the same bachelor apartments, and having much in common, they were like brothers. When L. died, his death affected C. deeply, its suddenness adding greatly to the shock. About two years after it occurred C. married. Mrs. C. had known L. The honeymoon was to be spent in a trip to Niagara. The wedding took place on Thursday, and the newly-married couple were to start on the 10:30 A.M. train on Friday. They drove to the station and, as C. opened the carriage door, he saw, or thought he saw, L.'s figure standing in the station entrance. Mrs. C., following the gaze of her husband, saw it too. As C. alighted from the carriage the figure disappeared into the station, and though he searched among the throng of passengers, he could discover no trace of the apparition, if apparition it were. Now, C. is not a particularly superstitious man, but Mrs. C. has a certain amount of superstition in her nature; indeed, she had objected somewhat strongly to starting on Friday. So when C. returned from his search in the station, his wife could not be induced to take the 10:30 train for Niagara. They returned to the hotel at which they had been stopping, Mrs. C. fully convinced that the train would be wrecked or that something awful would occur. Saturday's papers were eagerly scanned for an account of the accident to the 10:30 train. Nothing was found. No accident had happened.

An analysis of this case leads to a solution of those numerous cases of premonitions and warnings that constantly mystify mankind. Of course C. and his wife did not see L., but they undoubtedly saw some one who closely resembled him. The Friday start and the discussion upon it probably aided in the deception. If an accident had occurred to the 10:30 train—and the chances of it some statisticians could figure to a decimal—C. would have been firmly convinced all his future life that he had seen L.'s ghost. The warning that Mrs. C. would have claimed to have had against starting on their honeymoon on a Friday would have been recorded as genuine; Friday would have received another black eye, and another supernatural, ghostly warning would have been added to the many "well-authenticated" ones already extant.

Now, this case of C. and his wife is not a unique one. It is as natural an occurrence as happens in every-day life. The human mind is so constituted as to fear injury and death. Fear is one of the most powerful of the mental emotions. It is because of our intuitive recognition of this fact that courage is the human virtue most admired, for courage in man is the result of the will conquering fear.

Fear is the parent of superstition.

It may be taken as an axiom that no man enters upon any undertaking involving known danger without a premonition of disaster. The reaction of the free-born premonition upon its parent fear exaggerates the latter, and tends to distort mental impressions, not infrequently to such an extent as to produce an hallucination or a delusion.

This mental operation is, I believe, a very common one. Few men exist who have not at some time in their lives experienced it. The following rather remarkable example occurred to an acquaintance of mine, a reporter connected with a well-known news agency and a man of more than average intelligence: Late one night while returning to his home he was startled at seeing the cupola of a neighbor's house in flames. The fire appeared to have just broken out, and was curling out of a window, licking the cornice and roof. He listened for the alarm bell in a neighboring engine-house, and distinctly heard it ring and the noise caused by the engine horses as they rushed to their places. Some smoke borne on the wind from the fire entered his nostrils. All this took place in a few seconds of time. He hastened into his own house, found his wife awake, told her of the fire, exhorted her not to be afraid, and went to the window. The neighbor's house was in full view. No fire was there.

Here was a brave man, apparently in perfect health, deceived by three of his senses. The train of thought that led to the deception was started in this way: The reporter had been recently engaged in reportorial work connected with several large fires, and had feared that a fire in his own neighborhood would seriously affect his wife, who was in delicate health.

I have frequently seen medical students suffering from delusive symptoms of a disease that they were studying:

How often are we startled by a coincidence? The coincidence is as common as it seems remarkable; in fact, the words remarkable and coincidence are almost inseparable. A coincidence may be defined to be a concurrence of related events. When we recollect that a man's life is composed of an infinite number of events, and that all these events are caused by factors taking different periods of time to effect their results, it does not seem strange that related events should frequently occur coincidentally.

Now, join one of these ordinary, "every-day" occurrences to a premonition or to an hallucination, and, presto! the result is as astonishing as the conjurer's production of ink from the combination of two white liquids.

The coincidence reveals the premonition and the warning. Unless the former happens, the latter is never told.

The genuine, authenticated cases of premonitions and warnings are fathered by fear and mothered by coincidence.—Cyrus Edson, M.D., in the North American Review.

THE RED MAN'S MESSIAH.

The Indians of the interior of the country have evidently come to the conclusion that belief in a messiah is in some way responsible for the supremacy of the white race, and they have therefore adopted the delusion of the dominant peoples.

General Miles, commander of the division of Missouri, stopped at St. Paul on his way East from a Western tour. Regarding the causes and nature of the religious craze existing among the Indian tribes, he said:

"I have been in Utah, Montana, and the Cheyenne reservation investigating this craze. You have doubtless heard that the Indian tribes believe that the messiah has come who is to restore them to their former glory, bring back the buffalo, and drive the whites from the land. I have learned that this belief exists among the various tribes of Sioux, Cheyennes, Blackfeet, Shoshones, and other tribes. In all, the craze extended to sixteen tribes, the Snake Indians being the only ones to repudiate it.

"There is no doubt that many Indians holding this belief in the Indian messiah are sincere, and a few have certainly seen some person whom they took to be the messiah. Several small parties of Indians have gone westward from their tribes to some point, which, as near as I can locate, is in Nevada. There they have been shown somebody disguised as a messiah and spoken with him.

"I am inclined to believe that there is more than one person impersonating the messiah, as when the Sioux have spoken with him he replied in the Sioux language, to the Blackfeet he has spoken their tongue, and so on with the representatives from each nation or tribe, speaking their own language to each."

"Who do you think is responsible for this imposition upon the Indians?"

"I cannot state positively, but it is my belief the Mormons are the prime movers in it. This is not a hard statement to believe, for there are 200,000 Mormons, and they themselves believe in prophets and spiritual manifestations. They even now claim to hold intercourse with the spirit of Joe Smith. Besides, they have had missionaries at work among the Indians for many years and have made many converts."

"Do you think this new belief of the Indians will lead to an outbreak and bloodshed?"

"I do not think so; but when an ignorant race become religiously fanatical it is hard to tell just what they will do.

"It is noteworthy, however, that this so-called messiah tells the Indians that when he comes to rule over them, firearms will no longer be used or necessary. He tells them also that with his coming the dead Indians will all be raised to life, the buffalo return, and he will then draw a line, behind which he will gather all the Indians. Then he will roll the earth back upon the whites. This has naturally excited the Indians, and large numbers have accepted the new belief. Among those who have done so none are more ardent than Sitting Bull, who is intensely an Indian in all his ideas."

"Do you think the person who is impersonating the messiah is a white man or an Indian?"

"Those who have seen him say he was muffled up and disguised so they did not see his face, but I believe he is a full-blooded white. The argument the Indians use in discussing the matter is: The whites have had their messiah and the Indians will now have theirs. The situation now is not alarming in any way, and I do not know whether any action will be taken by the government regarding the matter until after I have made my report."

Bell in Stanislaus County.

To the Editors of Freethought:

We have had Prof. W. S. Bell with us. He came like a ray of light from darkness. Hon. A. Schell, of Knight's Ferry, a short time ago informed us that he was expecting a visit from the professor, and thought it possible for us to secure him for a lecture here. Acting upon the suggestion, we made the effort and succeeded in securing the lecture and audience of one hundred and fifty-three persons, quite a number of whom were church people. All seemed well pleased and pronounced the lecture good and the effort a success.

Inclosed find introductory remarks made by Dr. J. M. Endicott.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: We respectfully invite your attention to the remarks to be made by Prof. W. S. Bell, formerly of Chicago, now of Oakland, this state, on the subject of "Liberty and Morality."

His remarks will in many respects differ from those that you are accustomed to hear upon the subject. They will doubtless appeal to your reason and intelligence and to lessons found in scientific truth.

The great cataclysms of earth will be viewed as the results of natural causes incidental to the ever-changing conditions of matter, and not as the products or results of supernatural agencies. The grand, but awful, upheavings of earth occasioned by volcanic eruptions and earthquakes and the life-destroying cyclones will have behind them no spectre, no angry ghost of frightful mien, with death-dealing shafts in his mighty grasp, as a beneficent reward for man's supposed disobedience in the Garden of Eden and the fruit of the forbidden tree.

It is written by the orthodox teachers that "whatsoever ye seek ye shall surely find." Let us make a practical application of this teaching. Seek truth through science and intelligent reason, and whatsoever you find will be worthy of preservation.

Truth born of science is as much a fact in darkest America as in darkest Africa. No convert of truth and justice born of science ever thought it necessary to put to death a witch or a wizard with the fagot or a silver bullet, or burned at the stake a Servetus or a Bruno.

The doctrines offered on the present occasion are not compulsory. You can accept or reject them, as may appear best, according to your own sense of reason, and, too, without fear of damnation.

Belief not born of knowledge and reason is but the offspring of mental slavery. Liberals reject slavery of the mind as well as slavery of the body. They prefer the noonday sun of "liberty for man, woman, and child."

Belief having its foundation in Rationalism requires not the deafening roar of the cannon, nor the pitiless crash of the musket or cruel thrust of the sword, to establish its propaganda. Seated on the throne of reason, with intelligence for its guide, the broad light of science for its creed, it would find no place for eternal punishment of the many, or flowery beds of ease for a chosen few. All could worship at its shrine without fear and without credulity.

We invite you to lay aside all prejudices of the past and go with us into this new field of thought, and to examine with the critical aid of science and modern scholarship that which is known before accepting or rejecting it.

Oakdale, Cal.

J. M. E.

Rensburg's Lecturo Appointments.

J. E. Rensburg left Kansas on his tour to the Pacific coast, September 15. He reached California about the last of October. His appointments for this state, as far as arranged, are as follows:

Hornitos	Nov 14	Los Angeles.....	Nov 20
Easton.....	Nov 15	Fallbrook.....	Nov 21
Fresno.....	Nov 16	Bernardo.....	Nov 22
Hanford.....	Nov 17, 18	San Diego.....	Nov 23
Tulare.....	Nov 19	San Bernardino.....	Nov 25 26

SEND for "Traveling Alone," price 30 cents.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.

PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; 7 ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic, engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50 fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 kt. filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Hardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botches, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

SAN FRANCISCO ARBEITER ZEITUNG.

710 WASHINGTON ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

The only organ in the German language on the Pacific Coast that stands for true Nationalism. Subscription price: 3 mos., 60 cts.; 6 mos., $1; 12 mos., $2.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

- Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
- Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
- Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
- Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
- Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
- Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
- The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph. D.
- Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles M. D.
- Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
- Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
- Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
- Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
- Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
- The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
- The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

WIFE WANTED, Unincumbered, not over 40, healthy, fond of music (pianist), sympathetic, and anti-religious, for lone widower of 60, with means. To insure answers address AMERICAN, Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal., giving full description of self.

More Than Even a Mummy Could Stand.

Mr. Doodle (the caricaturist)—Ha, ha! I have it; I'll draw a man with an ax cutting up a boarding house pie.

—Life.

A Clear Case.

Jagers—What ever became of Peabright's dog? You know it used to give you so much trouble.

Wiggler—Oh! It's dead.

Jagers—Did you kill it?

Wiggler—No. It committed suicide.

Jagers—Suicide! How?

Wiggler—It came over into my yard while I was sitting here with a loaded pistol.—Munsey's Weekly.

But What Was On It.

"What do you think of the table?" asked the landlady of the new boarder, who is of a vivacious nature, and at the same time hates to hurt anybody's feelings.

"Really," said he, after some hesitation. "I can conscientiously indorse your table as a masterpiece of cabinet making."—Washington Post.

A Great Advantage.

Funniman—Yes, I know I'm neither rich nor famous, and don't amount to much; but I tell you, in one thing I have the advantage over the president of the United States.

Bronson—What is that?

Funniman—Why, I can make money writing jokes on him, but he couldn't make a cent writing jokes on me.—Light.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE.—The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unscrupulous practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address, Dr. R. P. FELLOWS, VINELAND, N. J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

Ensnared.
 He held her hand quite tenderly,
 And pressed it now and then;
 She blushed, and let him have his way,
 As girls do with young men.

The Humboldt Library

—OF—

LIBERAL SCIENCE

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
 94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
 95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
 96. A Half-Century of Science. T.H. Huxley, G. Allen.
 97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.

persistently insult the devotional sentiment in human nature, by ribald allusions to the higher spiritual influences that lead the race onward and upward, are not the kind to uplift humanity, or make the world better. Such false teachers should unite themselves with Materialism outright, as in Spiritualism, and in presence of sensitives, they open the way to the ready coming in of those crude and undeveloped spirits which often bring ruin and wretchedness to their mediums. It is in the devotional and aspirational features of mediumship that our sensitives find their strongest protection. A devout medium is generally a good medium, and always protected, by safe and trustworthy guides, from all evil influences."

"Of course it would not do to let the Freethinkers escape. Below is their dose:

"Ridicule and denounce, as the alleged Freethinker and Materialist may, the religious thought of the world, and the forms and usages of the Christian church, yet all purity of life and conduct, all honor among men, all aspiration for the higher life, all respect for goodness, are held in that thought and embraced within that church (that is, the religious thought and church of to-day). Not that some professed Christians are not whited sepulchres, and some ministers of the gospel wolves in sheep's clothing (for they are but human, and subject to the weaknesses of poor mortality)—and not but that the teachings of Christianity contain many errors and crudities, and may even in past ages have been a serious bar to the advancement of civilization—yet, notwithstanding all this, and more, it is to-day the hope and incentive to a better life for millions of the human race."

We have no especial reply to make to this, except to enter a general denial that the church contains all that is of value to the human race. The Christian church is founded upon supernaturalism, which is a mischievous fallacy, and, being false, can furnish only an unstable basis for human relations. We would be pleased, however, to know what those men and women who, as a distinguished believer once remarked, are Spiritualists without forfeiting their intellect, have to say of Brother Owen's growth he is exceeding his functions when he exercises it. In the first place, the most religious body of people in the country, that is to say, the Catholics, do not recognize the president's proclamation of a religious day. The Catholics, it is true, will observe thanksgiving, but they know it is a religious observance, and they will take their instructions from their priests, who will issue a separate document. In the second place, the Freethinkers, who do not care to be prompted by either priests or politicians, will not thank Mr. Harrison for advising them to attend church. They regard his proclamation as to this extent an impertinence, and demand that the appointment by the president of the United States, and by the governors of the various states, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.

EXPENSIVE SOULS.

The Rev. Dr. Rice, of the Presbyterian church, has prepared and turned in a report of the cost of saving the souls of Californians and others. He presented his statistics to the Presbyterian ministers' meeting in San Francisco last Monday. As a preliminary he stated that the conversion of foreign heathens costs on an average $262, and native Americans, the country over, $200. Citizens of this state came higher than elsewhere, and in some localities souls are exceedingly expensive. For instance, according to Dr. Rice's figures, a comparison of the sum spent and the work accomplished in Sacramento demonstrates that conversions there run as high as $300, while in San Jose the figure is still more exorbitant, as a Santa Clara Valley sinner comes to repentance only after an outlay of $328. This is the top notch, and San Francisco exhibits the lowest for the state, as $262 here often suffices to convince the most obdurate that Christ died for him. It may be said with regard to San Francisco, that the large num-

Standard Scientific Works

- Works by Alexander Bain.
 English Composition and Rhetoric.....$1.75
 Education as a Science.....1.75
- Works by Charles Darwin.
 Origin of Species, 2 vols.....$4.00
 Effects of Cross- and Self-Fertilization.....2.00
 Life and Letters of Charles Darwin. By Francis Darwin. 2 vols.....4.50
 Different Forms of Flowers on Plants of the same Species.....2.00
- Works by J. W. Draper.
 History of the Conflict between Religion and Science.....$1.75
- Works by Ernst Haeckel.
 The History of Creation. 2 vols.....$5.00
- Works by Huxley.
 Lay Sermons.....$1.75
 The Advance of Science......25
 American Addresses.....1.25
 More Criticisms on Darwin......50
 The Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....2.00
- Works by John Stewart Mill.
 Principles of Political Economy. 2 vols.....$4.00
 On Liberty.....1.25
- Works by Richard A. Proctor.
 Other Worlds than Ours.....$1.75
 Our Place among Infinities.....1.75
 Light Science for Leisure Hours.....1.75
- Works by Herbert Spencer.
 Studies of Sociology.....$1.50
 First Principles.....2.00
 Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Principles of Sociology. 2 vols.....4.00
 Discussions in Science, Philosophy, etc.....2.00
 Universal Progress.....2.00
 Essays, Moral, Political and Esthetic.....2.00
 Education.....1.25
 Organic Evolution......75
- Works by Andrew D. White.
 Paper-Money Inflation in France.....$.50
 The Warfare of Science.....1.00
- Works by Sir Henry Maudsley.
 Body and Mind.....$1.5
 Responsibility in Mental Disease.....1.50
- Works by Prof. E. L. Youmans.
 Handbook of Household Science.....$1.75
 Culture Demanded by Modern Life.....1.75

MISCELLANEOUS.

- By Asa Gray.
 Darwiniana.....$2.00
- By L. L. McLaughlin.
 Mill's Principles of Political Economy.....$3.50
- By C. Marcel.
 Study of Languages.....$1.25
- By Lester F. Ward.
 Dynamic Sociology. 2 vols.....$5.00
- By Frederick Overman.
 A Treatise on Metallurgy.....$5.00
- B. F. G. Fairfield.
 Ten Years with Spiritual Mediums.....$1.25
- By W. B. Carpenter.
 Mesmerism, Spiritualism, etc.....$1.25
- By Prof. Jos. Le Conte.
 Evolution.....$1.50
- By Sir John Lubbock.
 Origin of Civilization.....$5.00
- By Charles A. Abbott.
 A Naturalist's Rambles about Home.....$1.50
- By Garrett P. Serviss.
 Astronomy with an Opera Glass.....$1.50
- By Nathan Sheppard.
 Darwinism States by Darwin Himself.....$1.50
- English as She is Spoke.....$.30
 English as She is Wrote......30
 The Distracted Young Preacher......25

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

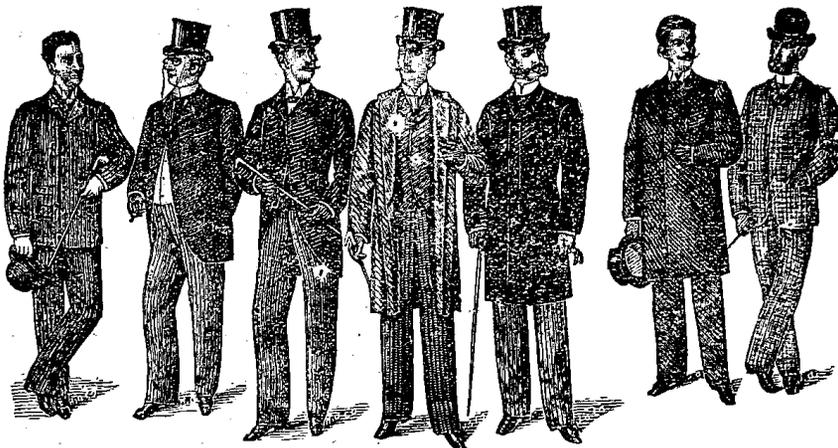

J. A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED, 375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.
 TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

—BY—

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE." 339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1. Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
 Six Months......75
 Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin.....2 5
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 0
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....3 0
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin.....4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain).....4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain).....6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond".....14 00

"This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, Freethought Pnb. Co., 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

Don't write to me when taking the first bottle of my Medical Discovery. I know how it makes you feel, but it's all right. There are certain cases where the Discovery takes hold sharp, but it is the diseased spot in you it has taken hold of, and that's what you want. The Discovery has a search warrant for every humor, from backache to scrofula, inside and outside, and of course it makes a disturbance in your poor body, but the fight is short, you are better by the second bottle; if not, then tell me about it, and I will advise. I will, however, in the future, as in the past, answer any letter from a nursing mother.

Sincerely yours,

DONALD KENNEDY,

ROXBURY, MASS.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of our subscribers to this

A Careful Countryman.

A countryman stops an omnibus, and wishes to mount to the interior.
Conductor—All full inside, but there is plenty of room on top of the omnibus.

PROFESSION OF FAITH

OF A SAVOYARD VICAR.

in Christian grace.

WHEN TO BE THANKFUL.

Lest our readers should not know when to return thanks or when to assemble for worship, we reproduce a proclamation that has just issued from our most distinguished public servant at Washington, D. C., President Harrison, to wit:

By the grace and favor of almighty God, the people of this nation have been led to the closing days of the passing year which has been full of the blessings of peace and the comforts of plenty. Bountiful compensation has come to us for the work of our minds and our hands, in every department of human industry.

Now, therefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, president of the United States of America, do hereby appoint Thursday, the 27th day of the present month of November, to be observed as a day of prayer and thanksgiving, and I do invite the people, upon that day, to cease from their labors, to meet in their accustomed houses of worship, and to join in rendering gratitude and praise to our creator for the rich blessings he has granted to us as a nation, and invoking the continuance of his protection and grace for the future.

I commend to my fellow-citizens the privilege of remembering the poor, the homeless, and the sorrowful. Let us endeavor to merit the promised recompense of charity and gracious acceptance of our praise.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

ber of heathen citizens, who cost less than native sons, greatly reduces the average expense. A good able-bodied Chinaman, if allowed to retain his queue, would sign any church roll in the world for ten or twelve dollars net.

These figures should cause the Presbyterians to hesitate and inquire whether the results are commensurate with the outlay. It may appear after all that a citizen of California converted at an expense of $250 is not actually any better after regeneration than he was before. Old-time proselyters were warned that they compassed earth and sea for one convert, and that when they had got him he was ten times worse than before.

THE FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

A meeting for lecture and social will be held by the San Francisco Freethought Society at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, Sunday evening, November 16. The lecturer announced is Mrs. Dr. F. Winzell, who will speak on the subject of "Electro-Therapeutics, or Electricity as a Remedial Agent." Free demonstration will be given by Dr. Winzell and assistant.

Admission to the lecture is free. The meeting closes with a social and dance; gentlemen participating in which will be charged 25 cents.

THE CONGRESS.

The editor of the "Truth Seeker" reports a rather unpleasant incident at one session of the Congress of the American Secular Union recently held at Portsmouth, Ohio. Mr. John R. Charlesworth, of New Jersey, who had been unanimously recommended as a field lecturer and organizer for the Union, was introduced by the president and proceeded to speak upon the subject of "Secularization." He pointed out that the present is an age of theological decay, when old beliefs are no longer satisfying to the enlightened mind; that people are now more interested in human happiness than in supernatural problems; that man's responsibility to man is of greater importance than is man's responsibility to God, and that prayer is coming to be looked upon as a useless abasement of the intellect. Mr. Charlesworth had not spoken more than five minutes before he was interrupted by the president, who inquired, "Is that the Nine Demands? What has that to do with them?" The speaker replied: "I am sorry if my remarks are not pleasing to the president, and I think I should retire," and forthwith left the stand, to the evident dissatisfaction of the audience, who at once rose to leave the hall. Mr. T. B. Wakeman, who was on the program as the next speaker, checked the departure of the audience, and moved that Mr. Charlesworth be recalled. "The burst of applause which greeted this motion from both stage and house," says the Truth Seeker, "showed that the audience was with Mr. Charlesworth, and the president at once invited him to go on with his address, which he did.

Mr. Charlesworth then explained that his purpose had been to point out the objections to the popular creed, in order that the people might be warned against accepting it as a portion of the law of the land.

President Westbrook defended his course in calling the speaker to order by saying that distinguished members of religious sects were present, referring to Rabbi Phillipson, of the Jews, and Professor Corliss, of the Seventh Day Adventists, who were likely to be offended by attacks upon their creeds. The matter was then dropped and the regular proceedings resumed.

Dr. Westbrook seems to us to have been right, under the circumstances, although the circumstances were greatly to be regretted. Rabbi Phillipson and Professor Corliss were invited guests, and notwithstanding one took advantage of the occasion to defend Judaism, and the other to defend the Bible, neither of which was under discussion, it was proper that their opinions should be respected. On the other side, it was hardly fair to the Liberal speakers in attendance to handicap them in this way. The American Secular Union is composed entirely of men and women to whom the secularization of the state is a political issue and nothing more. Besides being Secularists they are Freethinkers, and they believe in destroying the Christian superstition as heartily as they believe in keeping its hands off the state. They are the ones who support the Union, they pay the expenses of its Congresses and the salaries of its officers, and are entitled to at least as much consideration as the members of religious sects who may after all be tolerant because they are weak rather than because they sincerely believe in religious liberty. It is well for a Jew or Christian to be a Secularist, but better if he can become a Freethinker. One who is merely a Secularist in politics rather than a sectarian may go over to the other party as a Democrat may become a Republican, but a Freethinker is fairly on the safe side and will stay there.

The old Liberal League began to hedge when it changed its name to the American Secular Union, and inserted the words "as such" in the demand for the abrogation of all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality. The total excision of this eighth demand marked a further surrender to respectability. Then "simple" gave way to "solemn" as descriptive of the affirmation demanded in place of the oath; and the rigid demand for the repeal of all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath is so softened that a Sunday may, by implication, be enforced upon physiological grounds, which is giving the day over to the doctors and prohibitionists instead of the ministers. It now looks as though things were entirely out of joint when at a congress of the Union a speaker may be called to order for introducing a little heresy into the exordium of an address on "Secularization."

The Freethinkers will continue to stand by the Secular Union and to support the organization, because it is doing a work that they believe in, but there is an undisguised sentiment that its method should be just a trifle more radical.

A BELLAMY COLONY.

The latest experiment in Bellamism is that inaugurated by Mrs. Olive T. Washburn in Santa Clara county, this state. Mrs. Washburn, who is a convert to Nationalism and a believer in Spiritualism, has established a community on her farm, to be run on the lines laid down in "Looking Backward." It costs one hundred dollars to join the colony, and four persons are reported to be already permanent members. Mrs. Washburn stated to a reporter the other day that everything looks forward to success. Said she: "The few deserters who accused me of misleading them have quieted down and are causing no more trouble. We are erecting a number of buildings and have completed a handsome cottage, which is occupied by Mrs. Lawrence and her daughter, Charles Johnson, and Mr. Tillson, four persons who have become colonists. They are working the ranch and express themselves entirely satisfied with the arrangements. I intend to conduct this affair my own way and by the advice of departed spirits. I am a Spiritualist and have my plan, which I have not made known to the world as yet. I will not permit the organization of any stock company, nor do I intend to deed the property to a board of trustees. It shall remain in my own name. If any person joins the colony and wishes to withdraw I will return the $100 initiation fee, upon a notice of three months. My hope is to place twenty-five or thirty families on the ranch, allow them to manage it themselves and have a world of their own, as it were."

The name of the new enterprise is the "Justice Home Co-operative Colony." Applicants for membership must answer favorably the following questions:

- Have you maintained yourself in a creditable way for the last year?
- Are you industrious, frugal, and saving when you work for yourself?
- Are you wasteful of anything that is useful to man, such as food, clothing, time?
- If so, do you pledge yourself to commence this day to be parsimonious of time, saving of food, and careful of your clothing?
- Do you use tobacco in any form as a habit, or intoxicating drink of any kind as a beverage?
- If so, will you promise to discontinue their use by the aid of medical treatment [for these vile habits have their seat in disease]?
- Will you faithfully attend to your own particular business and in no case attempt to interfere with the business of others?

Do you know that $10 must accompany this application for membership?

Do you know that any valuables that you may bring to the colony, such as horses, cows, sheep, Angora goats, pigs, chickens, furniture, books, etc., you will be allowed full value for, and be credited on your Life Membership with their appraised value?

Do you know that you will receive thirty cents an hour in time checks for labor performed?

Will you always conscientiously strive to make harmony, preserve order, keep the peace, avoid tattling, news-carrying, eaves-dropping, and do all else and whatever can be done to promote the love, harmony, peace, and prosperity of our commonwealth?

If you see in others what you sincerely believe to be wrong, and to the detriment of the colony, will you present the same in writing before the court of arbitration, and abide by the decision of that court?

Finally, do you think that you understand integral co-operation sufficiently well to espouse in a practicable way that cause?

The reference to "integral co-operation" in the last question of the foregoing catechism gives the scheme a sort of Topolobampo flavor, as that is the kind of co-operation advocated by A. K. Owens, founder of the Credit Foncier of Sinaloa. Mrs. Washburn is a lady of considerable wealth, and she has had the good sense to start her colony inside the limits of civilization instead of going out of the world for land. Her expressed determination to seek the guidance of spirits in the conduct of the colony's affairs will probably have the effect to draw Spiritualists into the company, but, judging from the experiment at Summerland, the ghostly believers are very practical people, so that this will be no drawback to the success of that enterprise.

At this time when the Topolobampo colony is a demonstrated failure, and while the Kaweah concern is broken with internal dissensions that threaten its existence, some experiment like that being made by Mrs. Washburn is necessary to keep strong the faith of those who believe in practical Nationalism. And if Nationalism is all that is claimed for it, no one can help hoping that a thousand colonies may be established and carried to success.

ABOUT THIS TIME.

About this time the friends of FREETHOUGHT should be looking for new subscribers to send in when they renew their own subscriptions. We want to largely increase our subscription list for the coming year, and to do that the co-operation of our present readers is necessary. It is a fact demonstrated by the experience of all who have tested it, that no paper which advocates unpopular ideas can exist without the active support of those who are in sympathy with its cause. There must be more than a commercial interest. If FREETHOUGHT were an orthodox paper, if it tried to be popular and confirm people in their errors, political and theological, it might be perfectly independent financially. If it cultivated every popular craze and turned this way and that like a weather vane, the shekels would roll in. But it is not that kind of a paper. It does not offer its columns for sale to every man with an ax to grind. It swerves neither to the right nor to the left for the sake of patronage, but keeps straight on the undeviating line of opposition to theology and superstition, and it asks for encouragement from all who believe it is on the right track.

Almost any present reader could, we think, with a little exertion find at least one new subscriber. Many can find more, and we ask each to make the endeavor. Try everybody; subscribers may be obtained where least expected.

We send FREETHOUGHT to any address in the United States one year for $2; we will take two new subscribers for $3; three for $4, or four for $5. Sample copies will be sent free to any address. Now let there be a grand pull all together.

THE Rev. D. L. Munro of the First Presbyterian church of Stockton is reported to be showing symptoms of insanity. If the newspaper reports are true he is either insane or an idiot, or possibly he has been reading Tolstoi's "Kreutzer Sonata." Last Sunday he confessed from his pulpit, in the presence of his congregation, that prior to his marriage, ten years ago, he had improper relations with women. Since his marriage he had lived an upright life in the eyes of the world, but he had been sinful and debased at heart. He had lusted after various women, whose names he proceeded to give, and he illustrated, with details, his unholy yearnings. He told how on one occasion he had attempted to detain a young lady in his study, and on another occasion he had squeezed a young lady's hand on a boat. His impious thoughts came to him frequently while escorting lady members of his congregation home from prayer meeting. He added that God had instructed him to speak as he did. Such a confession as this is neither useful nor startling, except for its novelty. Had the Rev. Mr. Munro denied these things instead of confessing them, it is likely that the majority of his congregation would have felt that he was lying to them. Sensible men and women know the way of the world, and that clergymen are not exempt from it, and confession is totally unnecessary. Of course Dr. Munro's declaration that God inspired him to tell his faults is a delusion, but if there were no worse men in the pulpit than he proclaims himself to be the pulpit would be a great deal better than it is. Before condemning himself let him await the confession of the Rev. Dr. Barrows, formerly of the First Congregational church of San Francisco.

A NEW Christian Alliance has just been organized at Chicago with Professor Swing as president. The constitution sets forth that, believing that better and more spiritual interpretation of Christianity is everywhere needed, and that there ought to be more-fellowship and union in spiritual work among liberal Christians, the association is formed for the purpose of promoting those ends. It is to be undenominational. Its basis is to be undogmatic Christianity, or the right of private judgment in the interpretation and right of private conscience in action and religion. It shall in no way disturb either the independent or existing denominational relations and the affiliating denominations of the churches. The association invites the fellowship of all in sympathy with its ends.

THERE is in Naples, Italy, a Catholic convent known as the "Convent of the Buried Alive," which has just been investigated by the authorities. It seems to have been used as a prison-house for young women whom it was desirable for anybody to get rid of. The Naples police have obtained an important witness against the directors of the convent in the person of Sister Mary, a young girl who says that her father, a wealthy man, put her in the place against her will because she intended to be married to a poor artist. The girl will be called upon to testify for the prosecution in the proceedings pending against the institution.

"Too much Christian Science" is the laconic verdict of Coroner Tucker in the case of a man who died at Olean, N. Y., last week under the ministrations of a faith healer. Perhaps there was not quite enough science and too much Christian.

GOVERNOR WATERMAN of California is probably too busy to find time for a long Thanksgiving proclamation, and the people of the State will have to be satisfied with this short one:

In accordance with custom I hereby appoint Thursday, November 27, 1890, as a day for thanksgiving and prayer for all the blessings enjoyed during the past year.

R. W. WATERMAN, Governor.

Our respected governor was never cut out for a literary man, and he never says what he means. He did not intend to instruct his fellow citizens to pray for the blessings of the past year, because there is no sense in praying for what they have already enjoyed. But one Thanksgiving proclamation is as good as another. They are all senseless.

R. M. KING, a Seventh-day Adventist in Obion county, Tenn. some time ago was convicted of violating the "Sabbath" by plowing on Sunday. The State Supreme Court sustained the decision, and an appeal was taken to the Federal Circuit Court. Judge Grant has granted a writ of habeas corpus returnable on the 24th inst. The National Society of Adventists has retained ex-Postmaster General Dickinson as counsel to test the right of Adventists to work or amuse themselves on the Christian Sabbath as they choose.

THE Farmers' Alliance in Kansas elected to the bench of the district court a man named McKay, who has never been admitted to the bar, and who has never attempted to practice law. If people who have cases in his court will co-operate with him by acting as their own counsel or engaging laymen to conduct their cases, there is a fair chance that justice will be administered.

REVEREND, Doctor, or Professor Joseph Cook was announced to lecture in Metropolitan Temple last Tuesday evening, and a few people went to hear him. Before it was time for proceedings to begin he had quarreled with his agent and declined to appear. The audience were not losers, as, in lieu of a lecture on "Ultimate America," they got their money back at the door.

PARSON RAINES, the Texas mail-robber, should have remained in the church. From reports received from Boston it is learned that under the name of W. R. Colby, Raines is now practicing as a medium in Boston and bringing the cause of Spiritualism into disrepute.

If anybody wants the "Kreutzer Sonata" by Tolstoi, we will mail it for 25 cents. The principal merit of the the book is that it has got the better of Wanamaker.

"How to Make Marriage a Success" is an instructive work, edited by a physician, which may be obtained at this office, post paid, for 80 cents.

Nature.

As a fond mother, when the day is o'er,
 Leads by the hand her little child to bed,
 Half-willing, half-reluctant to be led,
 And leaves his broken playthings on the floor,
 Still gazing at them through the open door,
 Nor wholly reassured and comforted
 By promises of others in their stead,
 Which, though more splendid, may not please him more;
 So nature deals with us, and takes away
 Our playthings, one by one, and by the hand
 Leads us to rest so gently that we go,
 Scarce knowing if we wish to go or stay,
 Being too full of sleep to understand
 How far the unknown transcends the what we know

—Longfellow.

OBSERVATIONS.

There was never any doubt in my mind that Helen Gardener would sometime produce a good and useful novel, though I have held privately, up to the present time, that she had failed to do herself justice. She is a girl—I believe I have a right to speak of her as such, since she is not as old as myself—with a head full of all sorts of bright and unexpected ideas, and I have thought her more entertaining as a talker than as a writer. Her "Men, Women, and Gods" struck me as a reflection to some extent from the pages of Ingersoll, and much else she has written seems to get more or less of its light from the same luminous orb. I do not think that Miss Gardener ever realized this, and it may be an optical illusion on my part.

In the present work, "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" the light and brilliancy are all Helen's own. The plot is new, the characters are unique, the motive has not been touched by any novelist that I know of, and the style is so original that the personality of Helen shows through it as plainly as her face looks out from the full-page frontispiece. The book, as I view it, is all the better on this account.

The publishers display a knowledge of human nature in their circular announcement, which contains the statement that the work is shocking to conservative people. Evidently the writer of the circular knew that conservative people like to be shocked. Having read it myself without a shudder, I conclude that I am not conservative. The lesson of the novel is that the man who degrades a woman degrades himself equally, and that she is as fit to move in good society after the fact as he is.

Somebody might do valuable work by searching out and revealing the reason why at present men are forgiven offenses that condemn a woman to lasting disgrace. And such a person would have to apply to women for the explanation, for it is woman and not man who puts up the social fence against women. I have never yet known a man, except it was a minister, who would cross the street to avoid meeting a divorced person. Several years ago the fact that a candidate for the presidency, though unmarried, was not a celibate, was used against him as a campaign argument. It was then that Henry Ward Beecher made the assertion, which all recognized as true, that if every man in New York who had broken the seventh commandment should vote for Cleveland he would carry the state by two hundred thousand majority. Men, as a matter of fact, are not particular about the virtue of anybody except their own wives and daughters. It was a man, according to the story, who said to the woman, "Go, and sin no more." It was another man who said to the outcast female, "Not till the sun excludes you do I exclude you." If the women could contemplate their mistaken sisters without being doubled up by spasms of holy horror, I do not believe that men—that is, men with brain and backbone—would draw the line so close as it is now cinched in high society. Of course there are some men, continent because too mean or ill-favored to be otherwise, who make a specialty of detecting and advertising the independence of others, but these should properly be counted with the opposite sex. If we will for a moment take off the mask of hypocrisy, so that we can look squarely into one another's eyes, none of us will have the face to deny that the man or woman guilty of an indiscretion in hot blood, and regretting and repairing it afterwards, is a more admirable person than the man or woman who uses that indiscretion to the injury of the one who commits it. Women can put woman on an equality with man in this regard whenever they choose to raise the boycott against her. The men are so culpable themselves that they cannot consistently object. Supposing that the pastor of some fashionable church should say to the male members of his congregation: "Brethren, as an experiment to see how we all stand on the question of morality, let each of you next Sunday bring to this tabernacle all the women with whom you have been guilty." And supposing the male members should accede to the proposition on condition that the pastor should seat all of his Delilahs in the pulpit. Who can doubt that pulpit and pews would be crowded?

The facts to be learned from observations of current morality and immorality are not instructive or suggestive as touching other departments of human life. We know that many men and women who violate the canons of morality are good people, and that many against whose virtue nothing can be said are otherwise very undesirable people to associate or do business with. Sentimental morality is as far below par in the market as is emotional religion, and no one will take it as collateral security for the fulfilment of any obligation. Still there are some features of current morals that have an actual economic basis. For instance, it best for a young fellow to keep the society of virtuous females and to be like them, because vice is expensive and ruinous; and it is best for young women to be virtuous, because the other course leads to unpleasant results. It is economical for a man to have but one wife, for the reason that wifely devotion has a sustaining influence in time of trouble, and two women will rarely devote themselves to one man. Marriage in early life, with fidelity and faithfulness, leads to the happiest results, because the man or woman who does not marry early is seldom able to marry at all, desirably. A young man, if not of repulsive aspect, may at the age of twenty-five or thirty capture a nice girl, who will stay by him for good or ill through life; but if he waits until he is fifty, the chances are against him; and it is the same with a woman. It is said that when a man and a woman travel the path of life together, neither sees the effects of age upon the other any more than they recognize it themselves in their own persons, while those with whom they are not so intimately associated show painfully to them the marks of time. This, I think, is true; and being true, should be provided for. The sentiments are poor guides in these matters, but a line of conduct pointed out by experience is likely to be a safe one to follow.

In discussing the question whether a certain so-called offense is greater in a woman than in a man, Miss Gardener and those who think she is right should take under consideration the question whether woman can, with the same impunity that men enjoy, break the moral law. If the consequences are no worse, if they can afford it as well as men, and if they can come out of the trial equally unscathed, they are justified in demanding equal opportunities. If they find, however, as they probably will, that what is sport for the man is a very serious matter for the woman, then, as I look at it, they will have to admit that men possess certain advantages that women can not hope for.

Society seems to apprehend this, if it does not comprehend it; and because the result of woman's immorality is so much more disastrous to herself than man's, society makes the discrimination of which Miss Gardener complains.

I recognize that much here said is irrelevant to the book under notice. I hate to get drawn into a discussion on morals, because it is so difficult to say what is true without losing subscribers; but I hope not to have given offense in the foregoing. I would invite those who are so inclined to contribute to this journal in a short succinct way their ideas of what is the actual basis of morals, and to say whether in their opinion we have at present a system of morality that should be practiced regardless of consequences.

Miss Gardener's new book has two hundred and fifty-seven pages, and in paper cover sells for fifty cents.

I have received from my old acquaintance, Herr Moses Oppenheimer, the following note:

New York, Nov. 11, 1890.

DEAR MR. MACDONALD: From the Atlantic coast a cry for help goes out to the Pacific. Vera Sassulitsh, for more than twenty years one of the bravest of the brave, is now in poverty, stricken and suffering from consumption. Our committee thinks that some money might be raised out your way if you could and would open a subscription in your bright little paper—or ought I to say immense paper? But if you cannot do that, please give this matter one of your best paragraphs, and write it as warmhearted and wholesouled as you can.

Hoping that you will do your best, I remain your quondam target of Manhattan Liberal Club memory. Fraternaly,

MOSES OPPENHEIMER.

Vera Sassulitsh is the "Russia heroine of liberty," and lives in enforced exile. With her history I am not acquainted, but I find upon the committee organized for her relief the names of Mrs. Marguerite Moore, Mrs. Hugh O. Pentecost, Mrs. James Redpath, Miss Lebuscher, T. B. Wakeman, and Augustus Levey, which names are a guarantee that the cause is a worthy one. It is hoped that Vera Sassulitsh may be reclaimed from her poverty and exile and placed at the seashore in some sunny clime. Donations to this end should be sent to Moses Oppenheimer, in care of the Radical Club, 9 St. Mark's place, New York city.

I presume that Vera Sassulitsh is a Nihilist—no one who possesses heart or brain should be anything else in Russia. It is probable that her protest against the tyranny of the czar has sent her into exile, and American friends could do no worthier act than to recall her to some genial place like California, for instance, where she could have the benefit of a less rigorous climate than that which she now suffers from.

A discourse on "Electro-Therapeutics" did not draw a large crowd to the meeting of the Freethought Society last Sunday evening, but those who attended report that the lecture was a valuable one as regards matter, though delivered by an inexperienced talker. The sociable was an enjoyable little dance, as usual. I was not present. Instead of going out to enjoy myself I sat at home, in a darkened room, surrounded by glasses with teaspoons in them, and held converse with the youngest scion of my race. He is not a bright talker now, and he is small and absurd. But, says the poet,

What am I?—
An infant crying in the night,
An infant crying for the light,
And with no language but a cry.

So I did not get to go, as we sometimes say in the West. Next Sunday evening Professor Bell speaks on the evolution of religion, and I shall shirk other duties in order to hear what he has to say.

I extract the hereunto appended matter from the "Golden Gate," which is a Spiritualist paper:

A QUEER HANDLE TO THE COSMOS.—Brother Macdonald, of FREETHOUGHT, criticizing our comments on the egotism of the Materialist who regards himself as the highest intelligence in the universe, says: "Mr. Owen's real grievance against Materialists and Freethinkers is that they decline to agree with him on some minor points, such as the existence of a God, a future life, and spirit communion. Perhaps he is right and they are wrong on these questions, but in the matter of egotism, I hold it is much more modest for a man to confess ignorance, and even doubt the knowledge of others, than to assume the attitude of the theologian who grasps the umbilical cord of the cosmos in one hand and expounds its philosophy with the other." It is not the modesty of the confession of his own ignorance to which we object, but rather the assumption that other people are as ignorant as himself.

And what follows is from the "Reconstructor," another Spiritualist paper:

Save me from those who know. When one only believes, he is likely to have a reason for the faith that is in him; but if he knows, his assurance cuts off investigation, though his assumptions are without a sustaining fact or argument. But there are those who believe a positive man without a reason rather than a modest one whose reasons are demonstrations. The dogmatist has followers, and the Mormon prophet builds up a church while the philosopher has only here and there a listener.

The glory of literature and the power to say severe things have not departed from this coast. Up in Umatilla county, Oregon, is a paper called the "Freewater Herald." Also present in Umatilla county is a clergyman named Spencer; and thus does the "Herald" pay its respects to that man of God: "Spencer says he is going to quit. After diving to the remotest depths of all the cesspools in Milton and floundering in the gutters and wallowing—as a swine wallows in the mire—in all the mud and filth which a keen instinct—trained to dirty work—fitted him to ferret out; after insinuating himself into the good graces of all the lowest dregs of sinful humanity residing in these parts; associating himself with and contaminating them by his evil example, teachings, and contact with his foul personality; and becoming a co-partner with them in the—to them—delectable pastime of mud slinging at people who at least try to do right, this hooting, lying hoodlum, under the guise of a follower of the 'lamb of God,' takes his reeking carcass into the pulpit, dedicated and consecrated to the most holy God, and there with brazen audacity which should strike his hearers with dumb amazement, he covers the ghastly hideousness of his putrid soul with the garb of innocence, and presumes to point out to the wandering sheep the way to him who invoked divine love upon all human kind except the Pharisee and blasphemer, whom he cursed." It is now in order for the Rev. Mr. Spencer to either quit under fire, or go to the office of the "Herald" and lick the editor.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

It is intimated that the ground occupied by the Grand Hotel on Market and New Montgomery streets may be chosen for the site of San Francisco's new post office building.—The baseball season at the Haight street grounds ends next Sunday.—The election returns in this city are so muddled that a total recount may be had. It is not thought that the general result will be changed.—Nine officers and 150 men to man the new cruiser San Francisco arrived here from New York last Saturday.—Collector Max Pracht, at Sitka, reports through the "Alaskan" that the Indians of Alaska are being supplied with liquor from Honolulu by the captains of whaling vessels.—Scarcely one of the 140 passengers on the train that was wrecked by the fall of a trestle near Lake Labish, Or., on the Southern Pacific road, escaped injury. No mails have as yet come over the road from Coos county.—The retail clerks of this city are making a strong fight for early closing. Firms that refuse their demand are boycotted vigorously.—J. Jordan, the Boston dry goods man, has purchased fifty acres of land on Point Lobos avenue, in this city. The price paid was $430,000.—About 1500 wealthy Chinamen have left San Francisco for China in order to celebrate the Chinese new year in their native land.—At a meeting of the regents of the State University last week, Chairman Phelps read extracts from a number of letters from distinguished European astronomers, complimenting the work of the Lick Observatory in high terms and predicting great things from it in the future.—Last week, at Eugene, Or., the Rev. I. D. Driver, who is quite a noted infidel smasher, was tried before a justice for beating a nine-year-old boy who had been stealing apples in his orchard. On this charge he was acquitted. He then complained against the boy, who was tried and acquitted. During the trial Driver and the attorneys engaged in an altercation and the justice called the sheriff to restore order.

The "messiah" craze continues to spread among the Sioux Indians in North Dakota. A virgin Mary is the latest accession to the heavenly outfit.—The bank of Weitzel Bros. at Athlon, Kan., was entered by burglars last Friday night, the safe blown open and $10,000 cash and some valuable papers stolen. Some time during the night the wife of John Weitzel, the leading member of the firm, eloped with R. T. Hanlon, leader of the Methodist church choir. Mrs. Weitzel was also a member of the congregation. Hanlon is supposed to have been in league with the burglars.—P. T. Barnum, the famous showman, is sick with pneumonia and likely to die.—Twenty-five or thirty converts to Mormonism, who lately left Pennsylvania for Utah, have got sick of their new home and returned to the East.—Dr. Harcourt, the clergyman who got two heretical for his congregation in San Francisco, is now preaching for the Park Avenue Methodist church in New York.—O'Donovan Rossa's paper, the "United Irishmen," published in New York, has gone into the hands of a receiver.

The Italian Clerical party is making the most earnest preparations at home for the municipal elections, which occur on December 14. The policy of the Vatican is said to be to obtain control as far as possible, of the municipalities, with a view of using the advantage thus acquired in strengthening the clerical faction in the national election, with a view to restoring the temporal power of the pope.—Parnell, the Irish leader, is not making any defense in the divorce case in which he is co respondent. The testimony introduced by Captain O'Shea's counsel, if allowed to stand undisputed, leaves no doubt of the truth of the main charges against Parnell. The London "Times," publishes the case verbatim.—Professor Koch's specific for consumption promises to rank with Jenner's vaccine as a medical discovery.—The next Parliament will be asked to pass an act to incorporate a body styled "The Trustees and Guardians of Shakespeare's Birthplace." The intention is to transfer to this body the property now vested in the corporation of Stratford-on-Avon, including the Shakesperian library, museum, and funds held by its trustees.—Prince Bismarck has written a book, the proof-sheets of which he declines to submit to the emperor. His work will probably be denied circulation in the German empire.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

"What Shall we Do with the Dago?"—a question that seems likely to take rank with the Chinese problem—will be discussed in the December "Popular Science Monthly" by Mr. Appleton Morgan.

A name familiar to the literature of reform for the past half century, and more lately to Spiritualistic literature, is that of Giles B. Stebbins now of Detroit, Mich. Mr. Stebbins was born in Massachusetts, and lived there many years ago. He was acquainted with the reformers in religion, with the anti-slavery agitators, the originators of the temperance movement, and with the experimenters in new economic enterprises. He was on hand, too, at the birth of modern Spiritualism, and accepted the phenomena as of supermundane origin. Mr. Stebbins has now, at the age of seventy-three, written a book, which is published by the United States Book Company, successors to John W. Lovell Company, entitled, "Upward Steps of Seventy Years." The work is "autobiographic, biographic, and historic," and this far is valuable and interesting, but the author's conclusions as to spirit communion, slate-writing, and other "psychic" feats are not likely to commend him to the Freethinker. Spiritualists, however, will be pleased with the book. The author's remark that "sooner than we imagine the time is coming when a godless science will be an unscientific absurdity" will attract the attention and claim the conviction of many simply because of its vague unmeaningness. The fact that science can never recognize God, because God is unknowable, is too plain a proposition to deserve attention, while an assertion of the opposite is quite attractive to those who care more for misty ideas than for the cold, unvarnished truth. Mr. Stebbins says: "Affirm Deity, Duty, Immortality as primal truths of the soul, and the liberal faith grows stronger, its great work still greater, its firm pathway free from quicksands and fogs." And yet deity, duty, and immortality are all enveloped in fog and founded upon the shifting sands of credulity and caprice. The first does not exist to our knowledge; the second may lead us right or astray, and the third is a question that cannot be settled between time and eternity. Nevertheless Mr. Stebbins has given us an interesting book. If his opinions are not sound, his facts are beyond dispute, and his reminiscences are valuable. As an earnest sympathizer with progress and a worker for it, his "Upward Steps of Seventy Years" should be encouraged by a wide sale at the price, $1.50 per copy, which his publishers have put upon it.

THOMAS PAINE.

The Freethought Publishing Company has just issued a good-sized pamphlet entitled, "Thomas Paine: Was He Junius?" by Col. W. H. Burr, of Washington, D. C. Besides dealing with Paine as Junius, the writer also discusses the authorship of the Declaration of Independence, and cites such evidence as exists that Paine had a hand in the drawing up of that immortal document. The price of the work is ten cents; three copies for twenty-five cents.

Rensburg's Lecture Appointments.

J. E. Rensburg left Kansas on his tour to the Pacific coast, September 15. He reached California about the last of October. His appointments for this state, as far as arranged, are as follows:

Hornitos	Nov 14	Los Angeles.....	Nov 20
Easton.....	Nov 15	Fallbrook.....	Nov 21
Fresno.....	Nov 16	Bernardo.....	Nov 22
Hanford.....	Nov 17, 18	San Diego.....	Nov 23
Tulare.....	Nov 19	San Bernardino.....	Nov 25 26.

MORALITY AND RELIGION.

BY WALLACE COBB FENDERSON.

There needeth not the hell that bigots frame
 To punish those who err; earth in itself
 Contains at once the evil and the cure.
 All suffering nature can chastise
 Those who transgress her law; she only knows
 How justly to proportion to the fault
 The punishment it merits.

—SHELLEY.

Morality in the theological and scriptural sense, and in the most common acceptance of the word, is used to indicate a doctrine or system of moral duties, in conformity to a divine law, which necessarily implies that the motive for such acts or duties is drawn from a desire of obedience to a divine will. The orthodox finds no beauty or consolation in a morality which does not emanate from such a desire, and turns with horror from a code of ethics not founded on a belief in a supernatural being, and largely from this fact springs the wide-spread confusion of the two words—morality and religion. Such a confusion leads many an honest soul to the conviction that the words may be used synonymously. So far from such a use, it would seem that one is the very antithesis of the other, for the former considers immutable humanity, and the other an immutable deity. One is founded on the fear of vengeance from a supreme being, the other upon the needs, relations, and duties of the whole society of humanity here below, and draws its vital force from the principle of the brotherhood of man.

It has always been the aim of religion, as elucidated by her devotees, to inculcate in the human mind the principle of right doing solely from the fear of eternal damnation. The proclamation of the church to erring mortals, upholding the appeasing of the wrath of their God by presents, prayers, and sacrifices, is clearly a subversion of the true principles of morality, for the fact that a pardon can always be readily obtained for the asking is surely a license to revel in sinfulness. The ties which unite men, and on which the structure of human society is founded, are weakened in proportion as ideas associating God's forgiveness of human errors are extended. Is there anything more liable to encourage meanness and embolden crime than to teach humanity that there exists a king of kings with full power to pardon all the injustice and perfidy which they may inflict upon society? Is it reasonable to suppose that the fear of an invisible being holds humanity to the post of virtue, when for each deviation a pardon is readily granted? This fear, the very warp and woof of theology, converts in many minds the base tone of this dismal science into lucid and harmonious principles, and envelops in a halo of love its glaring and damnable inconsistencies. Love God and keep his commandments or he will burn you. From the dust of the earth he made you in his own image. He made you weak and liable to err, and expects you to improve upon his work by making yourself invulnerable to sin. He watches over you with infinite love and mercy, but allow the passions which he has implanted to assert themselves and he will torture you in a fiery furnace.

In this system of palpable contradictions and culpable absurdities, another modus operandi is discovered by the heaven seeker, the boon of forgiveness and conversion, which grants to the skillful operator the greatest freedom here below, permits him to give free rein to his base passions and evil propensities, allows him to revel in perfidy, cruelty, and injustice, incites him to deeds of destruction and murder, and yet in the end insures him a happy home in paradise with this infinite being whose laws he has so grossly violated. Of all the paths to glory made clear to humanity by theology, this is the one most easily trod; for on this road superstition has placed no barriers, and entailed upon the traveler no restraint. He may be a criminal of the deepest dye, he may have sought and taken human life, and steeped his little world in blood and tears. He may have heaped upon the Christian's God the foulest imprecations, and tortured in his wild revolt the followers of truth and reason. He may have been the embodiment of iniquity, the foe of every virtue, the friend of every vice. His course at last is run, and humanity's enemy stands upon a platform, erected by justice to avenge a cruel wrong. This craven murderer fears death. Thoughts of "the breathless darkness and the narrow house" thrill his mean soul with terror and despair. He grows sick at heart, not at the thought of his evil deeds, but rather at the mysterious depth of the yawning gulf into which he is about to leap.

Beside him stands a black-robed priest, a pupil of the Roman pontiff, vicerent of God, chanting superstition's lie. He tells the criminal that he has but to utter a few words and an invisible being will forgive all his transgressions; that he will be received in heaven by a troop of angels and be happy forevermore. The condemned is at once convinced of the "reality of religion." His soul is "bathed in a flood of light." He is "washed clean in the blood of the Lamb." The trap falls and he stands in the presence of his maker. If he is a Catholic his soul undergoes a certain cleansing process in purgatory before it reaches the throne. If a Protestant, it reaches heaven by the most direct route, but in either case it eventually reaches paradise. Our murderer here gets a crown and a harp and is assigned to a place in the celestial choir.

Thus does the church dispose of a taker of human life, whose whole existence was an example of moral depravity, and thus have nearly all criminals been provided for. The question naturally arises, When is this man punished? To convince a theist that he has been punished all through his miserable life, that all who deviate from the course of right are whipped by nature, that everything in this great universe is arranged for virtuous deeds, moral action, and that it contains no crack or crevice wherein the traitor can safely hide, would be to convince him that all punishment is here below, a conviction hardly consistent with the idea of an after life. The believer will accept no such argument, and here again theology conflicts with all human experience, for they tell us with great gravity that the wicked are successful here below, but are punished hereafter, while the good are reconciled to a life of misfortune and persecution here in consideration of the happiness to be found above.

The fallacy of such a doctrine is apparent and needs no demonstration. It lies in the great concession that the bad are successful, and that justice is not meted out here below.

Our murderer has been given a place with the angels by the church. Now let us see what disposition they will make of his victim. If the person who lost his life to satisfy the animal propensities of "our angel" happened to be a "child of God" at the time of his death, it is of course evident that he preceded his slayer in the celestial kingdom, and perhaps acted on the reception committee which welcomed the latter to the "home of the blest." But let us suppose that he had been unable to accept the dogmas of theology; that in his search for truth he had carefully and consistently examined the tenets of Christianity and found them to be a mass of contradiction and absurdities. Let us suppose that though an unbeliever he was still a moralist; that he had lived a pure life, been a true friend to humanity, and to society a great moral example, a credit to himself and his country. How will any of the various and warring creeds of the Christian church dispose of this man's soul? Will they give him a crown and a harp, and the angelic society of his murderer? No. They will consign his soul to eternal torment, and hiss as he staggers beneath their burden of fear and superstition: "Morality never saved a soul, and never will."

THE "Political Correspondence" publishes the following from Rome: The recent pastoral letter of the Irish bishops, condemning boycotting and the plan of campaign, was issued in compliance with peremptory orders from the pope himself, who desired proof of the absolute submission of the Irish episcopate to the decisions of the curia. This is practically a contradiction of the report that the Irish bishops are determined to support the league.

A METHODIST church at Lowell, Mass., has decided to use water instead of wine in the communion service. One of the members who has been a drunkard, according to his own statement, and had twice returned to his old habits through the temptation placed in his way at the communion service, was the cause of the change. The minister said he could never pass the wine to him again, and the church unanimously consented to use water instead.

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION.

CONTRIBUTIONS DURING OCTOBER, 1890.

W. H. Pepper, Petaluma, Cal., $10; Chas. de la Baume, Uintah, Utah, $1.30; Rousseau Hess, Ft. Custer, Montana, $5; Converse Close and wife, Grattan, Mich., $2; James H. Handy, Cotuit, Mass. (new member) $1; Capt. Horace M. Bearse, Centreville, Mass., through James M. Handy (new member) $1; James Wardwell, Emmett, Idaho, $5; Otto Wettstein, Rochelle, Ill., $10; C. M. Buck, E. Milton, Mass., $1; W. B. Clark, Worcester, Mass., $1; S. L. Hogan, Ben Hur, Cal., $1.60; R. R. Gurley, M. D., Washington, D. C., $1; Newark Branch of the American Secular Union, through John R. Charlesworth (charter fee) $5; C. K. Hardy, Worcester, Mass., through W. B. Clark (new member) $1; Albion Secular Union, Idaho (charter fee) through A. Burstrom, $5; Theodore W. Stauffer, Phila., $1; Andy Derming, Oakland, Cal., through FREETHOUGHT, $1; Channing Burnz, New York City, $5; John L. Moore, Quincy, Ill., $2; Wm. Fray, Verona, Pa., $1; Mrs. Lizzie Fray, Verona, Pa., $1; James A. Greenhill, Clinton, Iowa, $10; John Simmons, Philadelphia, $1; Charles B. Hobbie, Hudson, N. Y. (new member) through J. A. Smith, $1; W. F. Freeman, Stockton, Cal. $1; E. A. Stevens, Chicago (for life membership) $25; John Turner, Philadelphia, $5; Jos. Rhody, Coalport, Pa., $1; T. Morris Perot, Philadelphia, $5; C. M. Powers, Greenwich Village, Mass., through Truth Seeker, $2; B. Sugenhimer, Winnsboro, N. C., through Truth Seeker, $1; P. F. Spencer Evansville, Wis., through Truth Seeker, $1; L. Wolfes, Martinsburg, W. Va., through Truth Seeker, $3; Mrs. H. Bobda, Martinsburg, W. Va., through Truth Seeker, $5; John D. Power, Woodstock, Vt., through Truth Seeker, $20; Wm. Wilcox, Warrensburg, N. Y., through Truth Seeker, $1; W. B. Orchard, N. Boothbay, Maine, through Truth Seeker, $.75; W. S. Wood, Shawano, Wis., $1; John A. Jost, Ogden, Utah, $2; Phoebe A. Cook, Greenwood, Wis., $1; Mrs. P. W. Farmer, Cureall, Mo., $.16; Charles Lownd, Minneapolis, $5; Joseph Wenzell, Wayland, Mich., $1; Almond Owen, Milwaukee, $10; W. B. Young, Mackinac Island, Mich., $5; N. F. Griswold, Meriden, Conn., $25; John Winn, Nantucket, Mass, through Investigator, $2; Contributions previously acknowledged through Investigator, $2; Joseph Lee, Fresno, Cal., $3; J. V. Stafford, Canyon Ferry, Montana, through Truth Seeker, $1; Bruno Monument Fund Subscriptions through J. B. Elliot, Philadelphia, received after subscriptions closed, and voted by subscribers to American Secular Union, through Truth Seeker, $5.50; Charles Dunn, Owen Sound, Ontario, $1. Total. $209.31. F. C. MENDE, Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890. Treas. American Secular Union.

SPECIAL CALL FOR GUARANTEE FUND.

The Congress of the American Secular Union, recently held at Portsmouth, Ohio, directed the officers to make, through the Liberal papers, a call upon the friends for the pledge of five thousand dollars ($5000) to enlarge and carry forward the work of the society. This money is needed to sustain the business of the general office in Philadelphia, and to pay the salaries and traveling expenses of at least two field secretaries, who shall go out to organize auxiliary societies and otherwise labor to promote the cause.

That this is an important movement in the right direction must be obvious to all. Never was there a time when the work of our society was so much in demand; and our one need is the money to carry on that work. Will our friends respond to this call liberally and at once, that we may know what to depend upon?

The president, besides his gratuitous daily work in behalf of the society, offers to be one of twenty to contribute one hundred dollars ($100) each for this object. Will nineteen others respond to this proposition at once?

How many can pledge $50, $25, $10, $5, $1? Let every friend of the cause inform us as soon as possible what he or she is willing to pledge.

Let all Liberal societies, whether auxiliary or not, take up this matter promptly, and inform us what they are willing to do.

The pledges will be published in the "Truthseeker," "Investigator," FREETHOUGHT, and "Secular Thought" each month. It is understood that the subscriptions may be paid during the coming year at the convenience of the subscriber, and, if desired, in instalments. All responses to this call should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

We see no reason why the sum named should not be secured by pledges within thirty days.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President,
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer,
IDA C. CRADDOCK, Cor. Sec.

Office S. E. Cor. Broad and Columbia avenues, Philadelphia, November 11, 1890.

THE SECULAR UNION CONGRESS.

Compiled from a report in the New York Truth Seeker.

The Freethinkers of Portsmouth, Ohio, deserve a great deal of credit for their efforts for the fourteenth annual congress of the American Secular Union. The Portsmouth Secular Union is young, but its energy has been fully demonstrated. Its secretary, W. S. Andres, is what the Westerners call a rustler, and, aided by the president, Mr. J. L. Treuthart, he gave the speakers the largest audiences that ever attended a Secular Union congress, except the audiences that greeted Colonel Ingersoll whenever he was able to be present. The Opera House in which the sessions were held is a large building and a thousand people barely fill it. At the evening sessions, when speeches were on the programme, it was crowded, as it was all day Sunday. The stage was prettily decorated with flags and bannerns and portraits of prominent men—Grant, Garfield, and others—a portrait of Colonel Ingersoll occupying the central position. The music was excellent, and the local press was respectfully friendly, the "Blade" was only and the "Times" discreetly so. With the exception of the ministers, and the proprietor of the Biggs House, where the visitors made their headquarters, who gave the delegates more spiritual than material food, the citizens of Portsmouth greeted the Secularists very cordially, though they didn't quite understand what the heretics were driving at. However, they found that out before the Congress closed.

When the Congress opened on Friday evening, besides the life members and delegates present there were visiting Liberals from many points. S. W. Devenbaugh, of Brimfield, Ind., and John Downs, of Steubenville, Ohio, were on hand, as they have been for many consecutive congresses. Valtairine de Cleyre and Paul Carus, editor of the "Open Court," came from Chicago. D. H. Smith and R. G. Smith, of Alliance, Ohio, were present to take L. K. Washburn in tow and keep him busy lecturing for a week when the Congress closed. G. B. Van Ess dropped in from Mechanicsburg, Ohio. S. M. Bower came down from North Baltimore, and there were also Mrs. Ames, of Chicago, W. W. Wilson and daughter, of Spiceland, Ind., J. M. Shank, of Hurricane, W. Va., S. S. Dean, Mrs. F. D. Dean, and Miss A. M. Dean, Ralph Taylor, Geo. E. Light, president of the Eureka Heating and Ventilating Company, with a friend who looks at Heston's pictures every week; S. D. Moore, of Adrian, Mich., Mrs. Lyndall, and a great many others.

The first thing on the programme Friday evening was music by Miss Sarah Stevens, a young lady of beauty and skill, and Messrs. White and Miller, who possessed the same attributes with variations. Throughout the Congress they made harmony for the delegates, and sometimes it was badly needed.

The hall was well filled to hear their townsman, J. L. Treuthart, welcome his fellow-Freethinkers. He began by paying compliments to the president of the Union, and the president's home city, and referred to the secretary in a graceful way, as became both parties. The Portsmouth Union, he said, welcomed the Congress as the child receives a visit of a parent. There was also a large public sentiment favoring the objects of the Union, foremost in promoting which were the newspaper men. This sentiment was an indication of the progress of the age when newspapers can afford to tell the truth. The business men of the town also realized that Portsmouth was outgrowing the narrowness that might have been once charged to it. He also welcomed the Union on behalf of the school children, who were entitled to know that facts never contradict truth. For two thousand years the astronomers had been making almanacs, and calculating eclipses and other movements of the heavenly bodies. What would become of astronomy, he asked, if some Joshua could take hold of the spokes of the wheel of time and stop the revolution of the earth?

At the conclusion of Mr. Treuthart's address, Judge F. C. Searl, of Portsmouth, read a poem. The judge is a pantheistical Deist. When he had finished, President Westbrook thanked the Portsmouth Union for its splendid welcome. When he reflected that the local Union was only six months old he was astonished at its energy. In Methodism, new converts were placed on probation, but he thought the Portsmouth Secular Union could be taken at once into full connection. In response to the compliments paid his city he referred to Girard College, and said the case against the Christians who are now perverting that magnificent charity is under way. The sixteen hundred orphans there were not getting the kind of education Girard intended they should. They were to be taught the principles of the purest morality, but instead were indoctrinated by lay Christians who went there to preach. The Secular Union was engaged in preparing a manual of morals, and the thousand dollar prize for the best book on the subject would probably be awarded about Christmas.

The Congress had not met to discuss theology, but to protest against the union of church and state. The Union had a great variety of membership—Spiritualists, Materialists, Agnostics, Deists, Atheists, but all united in opposing the connection between the government and the church. He thanked the Secular Union, the press, and the people of Portsmouth for their hospitality.

President Westbrook was followed by Miss Ida C. Craddock, corresponding secretary of the Union, who said:

At this time the American Secular Union is confronted with two distinct lines of policy from which to choose. One is the policy which it has steadily maintained during the past year, of strict non-partisanship in religious matters, and open-handed hospitality to all who believe in total separation of church and state, whether the applicant for membership be Deist or Atheist, Freethinker or churchman.

The other policy looks further than the mere separation of church and state. It demands perpetual and unflinching hostility to the Christian religion, and an aggressive warfare whose aim is finally to cripple the church, if not to kill it entirely.

One important means of extending our work has been agitated considerably in the Liberal papers of late—the formation of a lecture bureau.

Another matter which I hope to hear discussed to-morrow, and to which I can spare but a brief passing notice, is the idea of a mutual aid society among Liberals, under the auspices and fostering care of the American Secular Union, and pledged in turn to spread our principles everywhere, to circulate our literature, and to win fresh recruits to our ranks. Such a society, if properly managed, could be made a powerful engine for the good cause.

Another method of extending our work is by securing alliances with organizations which are striving for religious liberty; and this is something in which all Liberals should help, no matter how those other organizations may differ from us in the matter of greater conservatism or greater radicalism. Our constitution provides a welcome for all auxiliaries who will accept the Nine Demands, no matter what principles they may hold in addition. Among others, there occur to me two societies whom I should like to see our allies, the Woman's National Liberal Union and the National Religious Liberty Association of the Seventh Day Adventists.

But my great concern is: How shall we reach the young? How shall we save them from falling into that religious superstition which puts the cross higher than their moral duty as good citizens, and which teaches them to consider what the church sneeringly calls "mere morality" as of little account in the sight of the deity whom they worship? How shall we fire them with the desire to make a heroic stand against the iniquitous union of church and state? How shall we fit them to take the vacant places in the Liberal ranks—places left vacant almost monthly by the death of our gray-haired veterans?

One means of reaching the young, it seems to me, is through our Liberal papers. The Truth Seeker has already made a move in this direction, with its bright and pleasant "Children's Corner," so ably conducted by Miss Susan Wixon. I have noticed in this department more than one crude, childish letter, evidently written in an outburst of youthful Liberalism, which has received, in a footnote by Miss Wixon, a few judicious and kindly comments which cannot fail to strengthen the chain between the child's heart and the Liberal cause. The Investigator, too, has a warm spot in its heart for the children, and never fails to remember them with well-chosen and effective selections. But even these, with some scattered efforts by other papers, are not sufficient. They are a beginning; but we need more.

Another means—which at first may seem insignificant—is the adoption of a universal badge by all Liberals, old and young—a badge which shall be simple, inexpensive, easily obtained, and which can be made as conspicuous or as modest as the taste of the wearer may dictate. The Freethinkers of France have already adopted the pansy as a symbol of Freethought, and they propose to recommend this at a coming international conference of Freethinkers. The word "pansy," as you are doubtless aware, comes from the French word pensee, which means thought, and there thus seems a fitness in its adoption as a symbol of Freethought. It is a flower which is easily raised in pots or window-boxes; it occurs in a variety of colors; it is effective as a decoration on ribbons or banners; and last, but not least, it has been duplicated in all sorts of tiny and inexpensive pins, suitable for gentlemen's badge-pins—some of them retailing as low as three cents in the trimming stores. Were the pansy adopted by Freethinkers as a universal badge, there is no reason why the poorest of us might not display the Freethought symbol at all times in a suitable and modest way. Think what it would mean to our ecclesiastical opponents to meet the pansy at every turn, as they certainly would, for the people in the United States who do really believe in freedom of thought, vastly outnumber the church people.

When Liberals can present something like an organized, united body to the world, we shall be surprised to see how the influential men of business will hasten to ally themselves with us. And, as one means to a common open testimony of our principles, I recommend the adoption of this badge which I am wearing to-night, the pansy. I hope the time when the seal of the American Secular Union, which is now stamped on a gilt paper cut to resemble that old Christianized pagan symbol, the sun, shall be stamped, instead, upon the background of a huge golden pansy, and affixed to all charters issued to our auxiliaries. The great seal of a corporation which upholds total separation of church and state, backed by the symbol of Freethought—that would indeed be something to be proud of!

To recapitulate: As means of reaching the young, I have suggested the establishment of Freethought Sunday-schools, supplemented by plenty of stirring music and by a series of international lessons; and, as another means of reaching the young, attractive stories and essays inculcating the principles of Freethought, to be published in a special department in our Liberal newspapers; and last, and most important of all, the Freethought Lyceum for girls and boys in their teens. So much for the work among the young. A second means for extending our work would be a mutual aid society for Liberals which shall at the same time be a missionary society for Freethought and a recruiting ground for the American Secular Union. Fourth, overtures to secure alliances with other organizations who are working along the same line as ourselves, i.e., total separation of church and state, even though they may be more radical or more conservative than ourselves. Fifth, and finally, the adoption of the symbol recommended by the Freethinkers of France, the pansy, as the universal symbol of Freethought and of the American Secular Union as well.

The following committee on credentials was appointed: Leonard Geiger, Lucy N. Colman, E. M. Macdonald.

Miss Craddock then read her report as corresponding secretary, the principle parts of which were these:

The first of the points intended to be emphasized this year—the taxation of church property—has been met by the publication of a pamphlet on "Church Taxation" by Dr. R. B. Westbrook. This pamphlet is now in its third thousand; but this represents but a small part of its circulation, as several newspapers have published it entire (among them, one of the Philadelphia law magazines), so that its readers have reached up into the tens of thousands. It has been well received everywhere, not only by Liberals but by many orthodox Protestants; and in many cases within the secretary's personal knowledge it has proved to be an entering wedge for the promulgation of our principles. Through the generosity of William Smith, of Geneva, N. Y., we were enabled to print the third edition; but this edition is nearly exhausted, and we shall soon need more. We hope that some other friend will be equally generous in providing for the fourth edition of this most valuable missionary pamphlet.

The second point—the secularization of the public school—will be probably met by the publication of a pamphlet, also by Dr. Westbrook. We have not attempted to deal with the question of Sabbatarian laws this year, owing to lack of funds.

The manuscripts for the prize manual are all in, and are being examined by a committee consisting of Dr. R. B. Westbrook, chairman, Dr. D. G. Brinton, Prof. Felix Adler, Dr. Frances Emily White, and Ida C. Craddock. Owing to the scattered condition of the committee during the summer, and the fact that one of them is not expected back from Europe until this week, we shall be unable to make the award until about Christmas at the earliest. Among the many excellent manuscripts sent in, we have already found several of an exceptionally high order; and we feel that the American Secular Union may congratulate itself upon being able to lay before the public a book which shall show beyond a doubt how morality can be taught in the public schools without religious dogma, and without the slightest irritation of either Christian or Agnostic sensitiveness.

The policy of strict non-sectarianism in religion, which we have zealously striven to maintain during the past year, is already bearing good fruit, notwithstanding the gloomy prophecies of some few of our more radical friends throughout the country. By adopting a moderate and persuasive tone, we have succeeded in getting our principles advertised prominently in several of the leading Christian papers of the country, thus bringing our ideas before thousands of church people who would not otherwise have known how very reasonable are the demands we make; and we have some more work of the same sort in hand now, of which we are not at liberty to speak.

The lack of funds has hampered us seriously during the past year. Three separate months have seen a deficit in the treasury. My brethren, these things ought not so to be. There should be a guarantee fund of $2,000 raised at the beginning of each fiscal year, to meet expenses of office rent, secretary's salary, publication of missionary pamphlets, and the principal outlay of the next Congress, so that we may not be compelled to trespass unduly on the generosity of the city which invites us as delighted as they may be to do everything in their power for us. With uch a guaranty fund, the American Secular Union could move forward along something like a definite line of work; and the stray dimes and dollars that come in during the year would do twice as much good as they do by the present skimping, hand-to-mouth way of providing for our current expenses.

We feel that we cannot close this report without a passing tribute to the generous hospitality of the city within whose gates we are now gathered, and especially to the untiring zeal of the local auxiliary here which has made this Congress possible. And so I close this report by saying, "All hail to the banner auxiliary of the United States, the Portsmouth Secular Union!"

The treasurer's report for the fiscal year, ending Nov. 1, 1890, showed that the total receipts were $1,777.26, and the expenditures $1,735.32; balance, $41.94.

Dr. Westbrook said that wishing to give the Liberals of the country due credit for their generosity, he had made inquiries of the various Liberal editors and others, and had received replies from all but the Washington Union. Besides the money sent the Union he found that the Freethinkers had given over seven thousand dollars to various public enterprises. Referring to the Prize Manual, Dr. Westbrook said that though some might think him slow, he had got it well along. The money was on deposit, drawing two and a half per cent interest, and the award would be made shortly. It was too great a work to be done in a few weeks. He had over a hundred manuscripts by college professors and presidents, superintendents of schools, and others. It was hard to get a competent committee of examination. Himself and Miss Craddock had read all the manuscripts, and he was astonished at the ability shown by the writers. They have exhausted the subject, and the problem is finally solved of how to teach the purest principles of morality with no reference to religion. The former secretary, Mr. E. A. Stevens, had rendered very important service to the project by collecting the funds.

President Westbrook further reported that he had obtained a charter for the American Secular Union, so that donations could be legally held and used. Concerning the Girard College contest, he had the campaign blocked out; his failure to move was largely because of the enforced delay in the matter of the Prize Manual. When that was out he could show the officers of the college how to do what Girard wanted done. He would then draw the papers in the case and engage able counsel to prosecute.

An election of officers, which was the next thing on the programme, resulted as follows:

R. B. WESTBROOK, PRESIDENT,
BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. Westbrook, President, 305 2d ave., Ashbury Park, N. J.
E. B. Foote, Jr., Vice President, 120 Lexington ave., New York
T. B. Wakeman, Vice-President, 93 Nassau st., New York
T. Morris Parot, Vice-President Philadelphia, Pa.
J. O. Bentley, Vice-President Philadelphia, Pa.
Corresponding Secretary, Ida C. Craddock, S. E. corner of Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
Treasurer, F. C. Mende 1814 Green st., Philadelphia Pa.

Among the papers read and addresses given at the Congress were: "Common Sense," by Dr. Henrietta P. Westbrook; "Shall the Bible be Read in Public Schools?" by R. B. Westbrook; "The Battle for Bread," by Mrs. M. A. Freeman; "The Sunday Question," by L. K. Washburn; "Secularization," by J. R. Charlesworth; "Freethought Principles," by Charles Watts; "The Standards of Morality," by Voltairine de Cleyre, and "The Natural Sciences," by T. B. Wakeman. Other addresses were by Rabbi Phillipson, of Cincinnati; Judge Waite, of Chicago, and Professor Corliss, secretary of the National Religious Liberty Association. The discussions were participated in by the officers of the Union, and by Mrs. Lucy N. Colman, Dr. G. A. F. de Lespinasse, Samuel D. Moore, Dr. Paul Carus, E. A. Stevens, W. S. Andres, and others. Dr. Westbrook's address on "The Bible in the Schools" is especially valuable, and we shall endeavor soon to find room for it in FREETHOUGHT. The editor of the "Truth Seeker," in closing his report, says: "The last session of the Congress was marked by some unpleasant occurrences, but in the main the delegates and visitors thought it was good to be there, taking leave of each other regretfully and expressing hopes to meet again next year."

SAVING JAMIESON'S HOME.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Permit me to thank you for so promptly calling attention to our endangered home. I have not yet seen the other Liberal papers, to know whether or not they have given notice of the dilemma in which the money sharks have placed me, or, rather, in which I foolishly placed myself. I do not mean to say that all money lenders are sharks. Some of them are, as I have reason to know from bitter experience; and from the money lenders, as a class, I expect no help, and of them ask no favor.

One omission in your generous notice might mislead: $750 is the amount I need forthwith. The $700 mortgage, which I mention in my circular, gives me no trouble as long as I pay the interest, 10 per cent, which I have thus far paid promptly every six months. My offer is to secure friends by note and second mortgage. The 160 acres, with four shares of canal stock (value $500 for the water) is worth $3000. Unless I raise $750, it will all go to the greedy holder of claims against me, and representing a total loss to me of $1500. The bulk of the money I borrowed went to pay day laborers to whom I pledged my word for payment. By paying them I involved myself. If I can shake off this viper by raising $750, I have chances to derive income from the cultivation of the farm that will enable me to easily pay interest and a portion of the principal each year. By my own three-years' hard toil I put the value into this land, aside from the rapid settlement of the country.

On Monday I received a letter from the man who is trying to wrest our property from us, with this ominous sentence in it: "Send me $150 or $200 by return mail, or I will advertise your place for sale."

If I cannot obtain the amount at seven per cent, will some brother Freethinker loan me $500 at ten per cent per annum for three years? I would, of course, prefer $100 each from five persons at a lower rate of interest; but my preference is of minor importance in a case like this. I will pay ten per cent for the use of the money, rather than fail. I hate to lose that farm. It is the fruit of my pioneer toil. The investment is perfectly safe. The value of the land and water is over two dollars for every one dollar against it. Send bank draft to me at Des Moines, Iowa, and I will send note, signed by self and wife, and secure by second mortgage as soon as I pay off the claim, this $750.

I will pay for insertion of this letter cheerfully in some satisfactory way when I am extricated. Already two friends have shown their good will. Mr. Shepard is eighty years old, and writes me that if he had known it a few days earlier he would have helped me. Mrs. Portia Gize, Vineland, N. J., sends one hundred dollars at six per cent; J. S. Shepard, same place, five dollars. If I cannot obtain the whole amount I will return these friends their money.

W. F. JAMIESON.

Des Moines, Iowa.

"SIDNEY," BY MARGARET DELAND.

This is a remarkable book. "John Ward, Preacher" was remarkable, but this goes even deeper. That dealt with the problem of orthodoxy, with the creed of Christianity; this with the problem of life, with the secret behind the universe. It is the tentative working out of that power in a young girl's life. She is educated by her father as an Agnostic. She is an Agnostic; she remains an Agnostic; yet she has found a solution—not a perfect one; perhaps wrong; not altogether new; yet a solution—an answer to the problem of life. It is love that brings it—love that finds a meaning in the world. She only makes a change of a word in a great thinker's definition of God as "the Infinite and Eternal Energy from which all things proceed." She calls it the Infinite and Eternal Purpose. She puts in what the philosopher excludes: intelligence, perhaps heart. It may be unphilosophical to do this, or it may not; that is a matter of reasoning; but there is no question that Sidney's solution makes life easier to those who can accept it. Pain and misery have a meaning not understood but acknowledged.

The chapter that describes Sidney's awakening is one of the most beautiful in all literature. The thoughts that "lie too deep for tears," and yet stir tears; the perfect sympathy with nature and with life; the perfect expression of that sympathy in language delicate, bold, and passionate; the exquisite description of the awakening day and an awakened soul, is an artistic and an intellectual triumph.

Send for "A Woman's Journey Around the World." 30 cts.

We Agnostics are often blamed for the hardness and coldness of our no-creed. Beauty, tenderness, and affection, we are told, have no place with us. Our after-world is a void, and our present one is only law and force. The heart—the heart that loves—is repelled and horrified, and would rather accept the unreason of Catholicism than the terrors of an unconscious future that knows nothing, not even love.

In the reaction of reason and knowledge against Christianity there has been, no doubt, a certain bitterness of denunciation by those who have been imposed upon and hurt by the cruelties of orthodoxy. That has been but natural, the expression of an unappeased indignation. That wrath still cries out, and will for years to come. Calmer souls—the same souls when calmed—look with opened eyes upon the world and life; weigh its pleasures and its pains; look beyond death, not through the rose-colored glasses of a deceiving faith, but with naked and clear eyes, and say, We do not know. We do not know the reason of the pleasure and the pain—so much, so much of pain—nor whether we shall have aught of pleasure or of pain hereafter; we think, from all we can discover, there will be none of either. This, in simple words, is the Agnostic attitude, the no-creed which seems to many so bare and harsh, but to him simply true—sometimes bitter, sometimes comforting, but always true.

And now it can no longer be said that the Agnostic's no-creed is unfeeling. A woman of rare intellectual power and insight has given it an expression at once tender, sympathizing, and true. An Agnostic woman seems to some unwomanly, but to the lover of his kind, as here described, she is far greater and better than a Christian woman.

Every page of this book is warm with life. The people walk as in the flesh. To the literary artist they are a perpetual delight. Mrs. Paul's brilliant selfishness; Major Lee's stately courtesy and stern thinking; Aunt Sally, intellectually limited, gentle and unselfish; Robert Steele, the man of over-sensitive conscience (one of the most interesting studies in the book); Sidney, trained to selfishness, but the heart of the woman conquering—all these are admirably etched, and we keenly enjoy the artistic and sympathetic development of each character.

This is a book that goes beyond "Robert Elsmere" in intellectual thoroughness, and will take its place by the side of "An African Farm."
H. M.

Rensburg at Ukiah.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Notwithstanding my precaution in writing to Mr. Rensburg at Tacoma, Wash., as well as to yourself, stating the impossibility of obtaining a hall for his lecture per announcement on the 6th inst., we were taken by surprise—after becoming reconciled to our fate—to find Mr. Rensburg in our midst, ready for work. As you are aware, Freethinkers are prohibited the use of our court house for lecturing purposes. As a last resort Mr. John McGlashan, Mr. Noble Hamilton and myself, in company with Mr. Rensburg, visited the hall in which the Burgess Brothers were holding their exercises evenings and dispensing their medicines during the daytime. After making our case known, the brothers unhesitatingly granted us the use of the hall on the forenoon of the 7th, when, in spite of all unpropitious providences, we succeeded in getting one of the grandest and most exhaustive lectures ever given in Ukiah, on the subject of "False Claims of the Church."

Owing to the excitement of election season and the unfavorable time of day, we had a rather small but appreciative audience, most of whom, I presume, were not in need of very great argument to satisfy their minds on this subject. Less than two years ago I heard a Catholic priest proclaim from the altar that persecution is necessary for the purification of the church, and the same evening heard a Presbyterian minister proclaim from the pulpit: "While 'Black Bart' [the noted highwayman] robbed men of their money, those who reject the Christian religion rob God." Who needs any additional argument on this proposition to demonstrate the status of the church at the present day?

In 1841 the first public temperance lecture I ever heard was replied to by a Baptist minister in severe criticisms and denunciatory terms, and to-day he and three sons, all ministers, are flaming Prohibitionists. This is one sample among thousands showing the duplicity and hypocrisy of the church. After "crossing the last ditch" in fighting every reform until, in spite of her opposition, it becomes popular, the church claims the credit of originating the reform and having brought it about through her instrumentality.

Being an octogenarian, in my eighty-third year, I have had ample opportunity of seeing this verified to the letter—in fact, on up until 1840, ministers in some parts at least, were proprietors of large whisky distilleries; and less than ten years ago, the use of the Christian church of Ukiah was refused by the officiating pastor, for a temperance meeting and lecture. This same minister is now a strenuous advocate for temperance, holding revival temperance meetings in the same church. So we see there is no hesitancy in the church getting on all sides of a question when either money, power, or popularity is at stake, and the denunciation of all those occupying their former position is brought into play with a relenting vigor.
THOS. McCOWEN.

Ukiah, Cal.

ARMAGEDDON.

A WAR SONG OF THE FUTURE.

Marching down to Armageddon—brothers, stout and strong!
Let us cheer the way we tread on with a soldier's song!
Faint we by the weary road, or fall we in the rout,
Dirge or Pæon, Death or Triumph! let the song ring out!

We are they who scorn the scorners—love the lovers—hate
None within the world's four corners—all must share one fate;
We are they whose common banner bears no badge or sign,
Save the light which dyes it white—the hope that makes it shine.

We are they whose bugle rings that all wars may cease:
We are they will pay the kings the cruel price of peace;
We are they whose steadfast watchword is what Christ did teach—
Each man for his brother first, and heaven then for each.

We are they who will not falter—many swords or few—
Till we make this earth the altar of a worship new:
We are they who will not take from palace, priest, or code,
A meaner law than "Brotherhood"—a lower lord than god.

Shall we even curse the madness which for "ends of state"
Dooms us to the long, long sadness of this human hate?
Let us slay in perfect pity those that must not live;
Vanquish and forgive our foes—or fall—and still forgive;

We are those whose unpaid legions, in free ranks arrayed,
Massacred in many regions—never once were stayed;
We are they whose torn battalions, trained to bleed, not fly,
Make our agonies a triumph—conquer, while we die.

Therefore down to Armageddon—brothers, bold and strong;
Cheer the glorious way we tread on with a soldier's song!
Let the armies of the old flags march in silent dread;
Death and life are one to us who fight for quick and dead!

—EDWIN ARNOLD.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS IN TEXAS

A few dates are left vacant along this route. Those who desire lectures for the dates not included in this list will please communicate with S. P. Putnam at El Paso, Texas, where he will be November 30.

El Paso.....	Nov 30	Gainesville.....	Dec 23 24 25
Burnett.....	Dec 3 4 5	Trenton.....	Dec 27 28
Goldthwaite.....	Dec 6 7	Denison.....	Dec 29 30
Norse and Clifton.....	Dec 8 9	Forney.....	Dec 31 and Jan 1 2
Walnut Springs.....	Dec 10 11 12	Reagan and Martin.....	Jan 3 4 5
Stephensville.....	Dec 13 14	Columbus.....	Jan 8 9 10
Alvarado.....	Dec 15 16 17	Flatonia.....	Jan 11 12
Ft. Worth.....	Dec 18 19	San Antonio.....	Jan 13 14 15
Sunset.....	Dec 20 21

SEND for "Traveling Alone," price 30 cents.

Bound to Be Natural.

"Hello, Plumley, last time I saw you you had only one eye. Now you've got two!" exclaimed Bulger.

"Yes, Bulger, I've just bought a celluloid eye."

"What did you do that for? Don't you know they're said to be dangerous?"

"Perhaps they are, but they are more natural than glass ones."

"In what respect?"

"Why, they'll snap occasionally, just like real ones, you know."—Chicago Times.

Her Reason.

Mr. Blossom—I don't think you are doing right in forbidding Nelly to receive gentlemen callers. Why did you do it?

Mrs. Blossom—I do not desire the child to ever marry.

Mr. Blossom—You seem to forget that you were young once, that you received gentleman callers and that you married.

Mrs. Blossom—Indeed, I don't, Mr. Blossom, and what is more, I don't intend to have Nelly make a fool of herself because her mother did.—Epoch.

In a Light Vein.

An Iowa woman has named her twin daughters Gasoline and Kerosene.—Exchange.

The old man's name is probably Pete Roleum.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

The man who marries into that family will strike oil.—Cape Cod Item.

Bunco.

"You ought to change the name of your new cake company. Your incorporated title does not look well on the sign."

"I don't see why not."

"Well, it seems to me 'The New York Bun Co.' is rather suggestive."—New York Sun.

Far Fetched Consolation.

Jack Marigold (as Miss Million passes without recognizing him)—She cuts me dead! That's a crusher to my hopes! But after all, it might have been worse. Supposing I had married her, and her father failed the next day!—Muncey's Weekly.

Don't Blame Him.

"Oh, dear! dear!"
 "What's the matter?"
 "Why, just as I looked at that man a gnat flew in my eye, and I had to wink."
 "Well?"
 "Well, he winked, too."—West Shore.

Wasting a Word.

Editor (to reporter)—Mr. Pennibs, I must caution you to avoid tautology.
 Reporter—Have I used a tautological expression, sir?
 "Yes. In this article you speak of 'female shoppers.'"—Life.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of catarrh that cannot be cured by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.
 We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions, and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.
 WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
 WARDEN, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all druggists. 46t4

The Humboldt Library
 —OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts.

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
8. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
7. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry
12. Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
13. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
14. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion.
15. Longevity. Prolonging Life. John Gardner, M.D.
16. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
18. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
20. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kailley Miller.
21. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
22. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
23. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
24. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
25. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
26. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
27. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
28. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
30. The Study of Words.
31. Richard Chenevix Trench.
32. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R. A. Proctor.
33. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
34. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
35. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
36. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
37. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
38. Geographical Sketches.
39. Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
40. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
41. Current Discussions in Science. W. M. Williams.
42. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
43. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
44. The Dawn of History.
45. C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
46. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
47. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
48. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
49. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
50. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange.
51. Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
52. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
53. Animal Automatism, Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
54. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
55. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
56. Illusions.
57. James Sully.
58. The Origin of Species. Two Double Numbers.
59. Charles Darwin. 30 cents each.
60. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
61. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
62. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number. 30 cents.
63. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, LL.D.
64. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
65. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
66. Technical Education, Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
67. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
68. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
69. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
70. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencer.
71. Archæology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
72. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
73. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
74. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
77. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Laud in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
79. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
80. Charles Darwin, His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
81. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
82. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
83. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
84. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
85. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
86. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
87. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
88. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson.
89. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
90. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
91. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S. S. Lauric.
92. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin)

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T. H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haeckel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen.
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present. Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life. Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Jaing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whymper Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No. 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Ritchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

TRAVELING ALONE
 A WOMAN'S JOURNEY
AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

(Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Price, by mail, 30 cents.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1008 Main St., Richmond, Va.

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

LIFE RENEWER

NONE
GENUINE WITHOUT THIS SIG-
NATURE.

Dr. Pierce's Galvanic Chain Belt is guaranteed to be the latest improved and only perfect Body-Battery now in use. The electricity from it can be instantly felt by the Wearer. This celebrated instrument will cure, with out medicine, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Diseases of the Liver or Kidneys, Lame Back, Female Weakness, General Debility, Spinal Disease, Sexual Weakness, Impotency, Etc. A Suspensory for men free with every Belt. N. B. The Electricity goes directly to all Weak Parts and restores them to Health and Vigorous Strength. For particulars call or send 4 cts. in stamps for sealed Pamphlet No. 2. Address MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COMPANY, 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal. If troubled with Hemorrhoids or Piles, send stamp for Pamphlet No. 3.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,

Hygienic Physician.

Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,

Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.

HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m. 25tf

Health AND Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy, $1.
Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.50.
Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer $1.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook $1.
Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina. Ills. 50.
Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F. R. C. S. 30 cents

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS & TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.
Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.
Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.
God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.
Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.
Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.
Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.
The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.
Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.
The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.

OLIVER HUNCK V SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED

CURES

Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung
DISEASES

By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen.
Positive cure for Cancer.

26137

410 Eddy St., S. F.

A HAND-BOOK
OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.
The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS", 15 cents.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERY.

Located Eight Miles South of San Jacinto, Cal.

P. A. CLARK, PROPRIETOR.

A full stock of everything in the Nursery line on hand.

APPLES, PEACHES,
PEARS, PLUMS,
APRICOTS, NECTARINES,
PRUNES, ALMONDS,
WALNUTS, QUINCES, ETC.

IN ALL VARIETIES.

A fine lot of Kelsey's Japan Plums, one and two years old.

Send for price list and buy where you can get trees at living rates.

P. A. CLARK, San Jacinto, Cal.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS.

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Franc

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against

LIBERTY,

By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourth tenth street, New York.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

Freethought Publishing Co.,

838 Howard St., San Francisco Cal.

PRINTING!

The Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

- Letter-heads,
- Bill-heads,
- Programmes,
- Envelopes,
- Business Cards,
- Postal Cards,
- Tickets,
- Placards,
- Receipts,
- Posters,
- Dodgers,
- Circulars,
- Etc. etc

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

COUNTRY ORDERS SOLICITED.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

J. A. REED.
FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

Price, 50 c. Address Freethought,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Crimes Against Criminals.

By E. G. INGERSOLL.

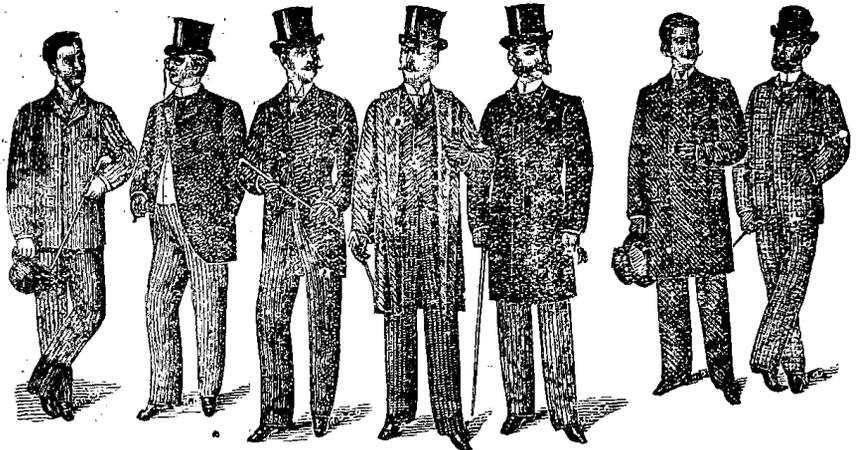

Price, 10 Cents.
Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,
Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR $25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR 35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.
TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

—BY—

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abandoned religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."

339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1.
Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR.

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year $1.50
Six Months75
Three Months50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

- 4 karat Gold Seal Pin $ 4 00
- 10 karat Gold small size Badge Pin 2 00
- 1 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin 3 00
- 4 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin 4 00
- 0 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain) 3 00
- 14 karat Gold Small Charm (for watch chain) 4 50
- 10 karat Gold Large Charm (for watch chain) 5 00
- 4 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain) 6 00
- 1 karat Gold, Large Charm Diamond 14 00

This is a full-bodied diamond, so that it may be turned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,
Freethought Pub. Co.,
838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

Don't write to me when taking the first bottle of my Medical Discovery. I know how it makes you feel, but it's all right. There are certain cases where the Discovery takes hold sharp, but it is the diseased spot in you it has taken hold of, and that's what you want. The Discovery has a search warrant for every humor, from backache to scrofula, inside and outside, and of course it makes a disturbance in your poor body, but the fight is short, you are better by the second bottle; if not, then tell me about it, and I will advise. I will, however, in the future, as in the past, answer any letter from a nursing mother.

Sincerely yours,

DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Apothecary.

Geo. H. Fowler, drugs, medicines, chemicals, toilet articles, etc. 13th ave and East 14th street, East Oakland, Cal.

Boot and Shoemaker.

C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas. F. Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgin, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Nurseryman.

R. H. Foster, Babylon, N. Y.

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonsteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Real Estate.

Geo. H. Gale, Port Angeles, Wash.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st. Rapp & DeBarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st

ORIGINAL

BROWNSVILLE

WOOLEN MILLS

CLOTHING STORE.

164 and 166 Second Street,

Near corner of Morrison,

The Best Goods in the Country

PORTLAND, OR. W. R. BISHOP, AGT.

Call, or send orders and measure.

Local Pride.

"Where are all the prominent citizens this morning?" asked a tourist of the landlord of the Oklahoma house.

"I dunno, prezizely," was the reply. "You see, last night the boys took a hoss thief out to the tree where they allus hang 'em, an' lo an' behold! they found a new-comer had cut it down. The hoss thief happened to know who done it. They're after him now, the hoss thief leadin' the pursuit. He's got a heap uv local pride, even if he does steal. If they ketch the feller they'll be apt to string him up an' turn the hoss thief loose. We air a people who like to encourage public spirit."—Puck.

After Three o'Clock.

He—May I come again soon?
She (looking at the clock)—Yes; but don't come this evening.—Once a Week.

It Reacted.

His Honor—Prisoner, you have been found guilty of atrociously murdering your aged aunt. What have you to say?
The Prisoner—Your honor, I ask the clemency of the court. The means I took to remove my relative have shattered me mentally forever.

His Honor—What were those means?

The Prisoner—I read to her the Burton-Johnson debates.

His Honor—You have suffered enough. Discharged.—Sun and Voice.

Time Works Wonders.

Miss Eligible (whose mother is a she dragon)—You've no idea, Mr. Desirable, how mischievous I was when I was small. Why, mamma, you remember how people used to fight shy of you because I was always sure to be with you and make things disagreeable?

Mr. Desirable—The deuce! Why, the situation is just reversed now, isn't it? That is—I mean—that—a—West Shore.

A Queer Condition.

Somebody challenged Jones to fight a duel.

"Well, it's a go," replied that cheerful lunatic; "but only on one condition. You know how near sighted I am. Well, to make things equal I insist that I shall be placed ten paces nearer my opponent than he is to me, for the fellow's got an eye like a hawk."—Judge.

Very True.

"Mr. McAllister's book is not always grammatical," said Penelope.

"Oh, well, as long as it is interesting," returned Chappie, "nobody cares. We can't expect everybody to speak as we do, particularly a man such as him, whom devotes all his time to pleasure."—New York Sun.

PROFESSION OF FAITH

OF A SAVOYARD VICAR.

—BY—

J. J. ROUSSEAU.

The above volume includes "A Search for Truth," by Ralph Iron (Olive Schreiner). Cloth, 50 cents. Paper, 25 cents. Address The Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTIANITY * * *

—AND—

* * * AGNOSTICISM.

A CONTROVERSY

Consisting of papers by

Prof. Thomas Huxley, Rev. Henry Wace,

The Bishop of Peterborough

W. H. Mallock, Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

Price, 30 cents.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St.

San Francisco.

Watches Cleaned

& Warranted, $1

Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Count, try patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 40tf

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping

PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills

414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 48.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan., 1885

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - NOVEMBER 29, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Porterville lies calmly along the hillsides, and Rocky Ridge greets the sunshine. This is an enormous mass of rocks, something of a curiosity as it rises from the green expanses in barren grandeur, while beyond it nestle fruitful valleys where the sun kisses the grapes and the golden orange mellows in the verdant grove.

Liberalism is about the same as when I was here before, and the churches are not ahead either, although several revivals have been put upon the boards with some scenic effects and a few infant converts. There is a good solid element of Liberalism, but the forces are not organic, and there is a large floating element. The audiences were larger than before, and on the whole we can still hope for better things. A thorough organization would accomplish much. One of the great difficulties on the Pacific coast is the changing population, and I scarcely ever meet the same friends again in the same place. Some have pulled up stakes to seek fortunes elsewhere. But while old companions pass, new ones fill up the ranks. I was surprised to meet A. D. Cridge, Jr., whom I met last in Paterson, New Jersey, where I addressed a small audience several years ago. Since then, Cridge has been over the plains with varied experiences, and is a radical reformer still. He and his father are well known in the pioneer corps. He is with E. M. Dewey, of the Monache Tidings and Farm View, a Liberal and independent journal. E. M. Dewey I met when I first came to California, a sailor once, master of a ship, and from the rough experiences of the ocean plunged into the still more rough experiences of frontier journalism, where the bludgeon and the ball play a somewhat prominent part, and muscle is as necessary as brain to a successful career. I think friend Dewey likes the smoke of battle, and he is an ardent believer in the "good time coming," but coming through a tremendous struggle. He is from "old" New England—the Connecticut Valley, where he first learned the art of printing. As I have lived in the Connecticut Valley myself I felt as if we were old-time neighbors. I happened to come across a Springfield Republican in his office, and as I perused its solid columns it seemed as if I were getting tidings from the other side of Jordan. Massachusetts does seem a good ways off from California, more than the leagues of land that stretch between. I enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. Dewey, and also of Mrs. Upham, who provides the good things for the table. Mrs. Upham is a Massachusetts lady. I had thus quite pleasant reminiscences of the land of my birth, with these genial comrades who keep the best spirit of the Pilgrims and the Mayflower on this Western shore.

Mrs. and Mrs. R. W. Riggs I always find ready to assist and to cheer the way with cultivated intercourse. They always have a pile of books around where the worlds of thought and romance expand, and I take delight in getting hold of new books which these friends have evolved from a multitude of trash, which really give a fresh outlook to the universe of things.

I went out to the ranch of R. A. Maddox, whose little cottage under the spreading oaks makes one dream of rural felicity as the sunshine and shadows mingle, and the children laugh and play. Mr. and Mrs. Maddox are Liberals both of nature and humanity, and a delightful hour I passed in this congenial home.

I lectured two nights, and both nights the hall was crowded—every seat was occupied. I was particularly fortunate to have the aid of Mr. and Mrs. Goeppher, who give us excellent music, and this, of course, helps to attract the people, while it gives inspiration to the speaker. If we always have such supporters for our cause as Mr. and Mrs. Emil Goeppher, we shall never be discouraged no matter how many difficulties confront us. In this case we had to extemporize a hall, as the old hall had been abandoned, and a large empty store was secured and Emil and myself had to sweep it out, provide seats, lights, etc. A fine audience room was thus prepared, but it will be seen that the Pilgrim has to go in on his muscle occasionally, and even wield the broomstick. But this doesn't matter so long as we get there, and have a chance to talk to a couple of hundred people, including a few ministers who never get a chance to talk to more than a fourth of that number. So, along with hard work, there's promise. After the lecture of the second evening, there was a sociable and dance, which closed the labors with agreeable entertainment.

J. W. Main, A. Traeger, W. W. Brown, Grey Oliver, Captain Greer, C. McCabe, G. Burns, C. L. Penhallow, these with others are among the generous friends who are willing to stand up and be counted. Comrade Wheeler I was pleased to meet with again. I leave this camp feeling that something has been done, that the fires won't go out, and that we will rally again.

On Saturday, I have the pleasure of going over to Tulare with friend Dewey in his own rig, and we take it easy over the broad highway in the gorgeous sunshine. It is indeed a lovely day, a cloudless sky bending over wide expanses, with soft blue hills rolling away into grand heights and snowy peaks—the first sentinels of the magnificent Sierra Nevadas. About noon, Tulare, a pretty city of the plains, dawns upon our view, with a country of abundant harvests around. In time for dinner, we land at the Cosmopolitan hotel where there is good cheer for the traveler. Here I bid good-bye to my veteran friend, E. M. Dewey, who is so constituted that he will always keep up the fight for reform and say what he thinks.

B. G. Parker gives me "all hail" at Tulare, and with him there is exhilarating companionship. The breath of the plains, the wide desert, the vast rivers, the toiling cattle, the rushing Indians, the wild adventurous journey from Arkansas through Texas and Arizona to California, these Parker gives me from his own experience, for twice he has gone over this vast extent of country with wife and children, and surely there is nothing more interesting than the story of "crossing the plains" before the marvelous genius of man had sent the iron horse plunging through the snows of the Sierras, twenty feet deep. Once our friend said he "weakened" when a wide desert spread about him, and he could not see the trail, which the winds had covered up with clouds of sand, and the white bones of cattle and horses were to be seen, but no other sign that man had ever traveled this desolate road. Behind was a waste he could not re-pass, before was the same immense and barren outlook. Water was almost gone; if they were on the wrong track, in a few days all must perish, himself, wife, children, and cattle. With a kind of despair, he turned to his wife and said: "I am afraid we have lost the trail." His wife quietly answered, as if she were at home in her own kitchen: "Oh, I guess not. Let us stop and rest, and I will make a little boiled milk." Boiled milk—milk with a little flour—was the supreme luxury of the emigrants of those days. This was all the little woman said, but in these few simple words there was splendid heroism. They took dinner, and Parker had a good sleep, and then an hour or two after came the welcome intelligence that water was a few miles ahead. It seems that woman can confront fate with a calmness and patience that man does not always possess. In this case the woman kept up the spirits of the whole party, though it appeared for the time as if nothing but death was behind and before amidst these wild and awful scenes. Since that experience, Parker has been a thorough believer in woman's rights.

A little baby has been born in the household of Mr. Parker since I was here, a great-grandchild, and of course it is the prettiest baby that ever was born. I was glad to greet this new comer, who looks so bright and handsome, and if it didn't come from paradise I am sure it is worthy of a paradise here and now. May no shadow of orthodoxy ever rest upon its happy path.

I again enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Parker and their family. In this home there is the genial fireside companionship.

I had a pretty good audience at the lecture Sunday evening. But Tulare is a peculiar place, a most peculiar place. I hardly know how to describe it. It is in a sort of a transition state. It has had a boom, and now it has no boom and is almost at a standstill. Yet it has about it the elements of solid growth. One of the finest fruit sections in California is right here. Mr. Parker gave me a drive over the country on Monday morning, and all about are evidences of splendid promise. We visited Page and Morton's ranch. They dry several tons of raisins here every day. Nearly a million dollars' worth of fruit of all kinds has been sold this year from this one ranche. It contains about thirty thousand acres in all. The average this year has been from three to five hundred dollars an acre. One farm, sold last spring, in this vicinity, for $22,500, produced $11,000 worth of fruit this season. This is an extraordinary year, no doubt, but I believe that California, take it all in all, is the garden of the world, and with proper facilities for transportation can supply its markets. I hope that with its material prosperity Tulare and vicinity will advance in Liberalism. But the trouble with California Liberals is that there is too much sunshine. If they had a nipping frost once in a while perhaps they would be up and doing, and realize that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," even in a land of gold.

A. G. Woodward, C. W. Maples, J. L. Batchelder, J. H. Ham, of the Cosmopolitan Hotel, and others are among the Liberals of this place, whom I was pleased to meet. Some of our friends here are Spiritualists, but that does not make them any the less Liberal, as I understand that word, which stands for no creed, but simply for the spirit of freedom and progress.

I hardly know where to place Tulare in the line of Freethought, but Remsburg will lecture here next Wednesday, and friend Parker doesn't mean to give it up, and so I will put it on the list of places where orthodoxy will not have full sweep, although there are nine churches here to three thousand people, and Joseph Cook is to lecture in the near future. I think I will try it again some day.

I leave Tulare on Monday evening and travel all night long, and in the morning arrive at Los Angeles. I go the first thing to see J. E. Clark, who is still keeping up the everlasting fight with orthodoxy. Its adherents boycott him, but he is not dead yet, or silenced. He is not one of the kind who surrender. He has had too much experience of frontier life to haul down the colors. His "roughing it" from St. Louis to San Francisco is as full of varied incident as Mark Twain's. A short sketch has been published in the records of the Historic Society of Southern California, and is of romantic interest.

I called upon our venerable and noble supporter of Freethought, Mr. John Riffin, now over eighty years old. The infirmities of age are upon him, and perhaps he will not be with us a great while. But his spirit is as bright as ever. His courage is unswerving. He is absolutely resigned to the inevitable doom, but the glory of his life-long thought is above it all. His own mind is grander than death. It is unconquerable. I may not see my friend again, but his beautiful cheerfulness, his tender devotion to his family, his magnanimous support of Freethought and reform, his staunch and fearless truthfulness to his intellectual convictions, these will make his memory to me like a sweet garden of flowers and sunshine over which is the blue sky in its beauty, and the infinite joy of life.

His last gift, with trembling hands, was for FREETHOUGHT, for the editorial fund. It cannot be possible, with such devoted service on the part of its friends, that this Liberal journal will ever cease to be. It gives me new hope, when our dear friend, passing the boundary of four score years, with still youthful enthusiasm offers this parting gift to the cause he loves so well. Never did I feel more sure of the triumph of glorious truth, immortal and free, than when I said good-bye to this man upon whose brow age hath set its glittering crown.

I had the pleasure also of meeting Col. J. M. Voss and W. J. Foley, founders, with other Los Angeles Liberals, of the Assembly of Progress, an institution for Liberal and beneficiary purposes, which commends itself to many of the Freethinkers. This method of combination may not be unanimously adopted, as Freethinkers have a boundless variety of opinions and ways of working, but it strikes me that there is a large element of advanced thought that desires a Liberal institution, that at the same time shall be sociable and benevolent. Mr. Voss, Mr. Foley, and other Liberals engaged in this undertaking are earnest workers, and they see much promise of success. Liberalism cannot advance by one way of working, but by many.

I didn't have a chance to see Severance, but I guess he keeps things moving as usual.

Remsburg will be at Los Angeles next Thursday, and will, no doubt, give a splendid impulse to Freethought. I shall lecture on my return from Texas. This brilliant city has not yet got over the hard times, but it is bound to survive, and still be one of the gems of the Pacific coast.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

ANOTHER ABRAHAM.

The sad effects of the messianic craze are not by any means confined to the Sioux Indians in Dakota. They break out wherever the delusion is held. The latest example in this state is the case of Ralph Avery, who lived near Delzura, a place not far from San Diego. He was an industrious man, fifty years of age, highly esteemed, and possessed of more than ordinary intelligence. Not long ago he became a convert to the Seventh-day Advent faith, and talked religion until everybody was bored. Then, his hallucination increasing, he began to fast, and imagined that the mantle of the prophets was about to fall upon him from heaven. On Thursday of last week he came to the house where his wife and child were, shouting frantically that he was the second Christ. The wife rightly judged that he was insane and, taking her child in her arms, started to run for a neighbor's. The fanatic overtook her, and demanded his son, declaring that he was commanded by heaven to spill the boy's blood as a sacrifice. The child was rescued and placed in other hands, and the neighbors took Avery in charge. Upon his person was found a knife which he had sharpened agreeably to the supposed divine command to cut his son's heart out and burn it as an offering to God. Except for the interference of others he would doubtless have followed directions and killed the child. Another hallucination of Avery's was the belief that a ray of light had entered him, giving him a subjective illumination, together with unbounded wisdom.

Avery's case is not a unique one. From the beginning of biblical history down to date there have been thousands of such. Ever since Abraham imposed upon his superstitious tribe the story that God demanded the sacrifice of Isaac, people of weak mind have believed in sacrifices and many have made them. The crucifixion of Christ, with the doctrine of vicarious sacrifice attached to it, increased the evil, until such acts as Avery's now demand only a brief newspaper notice. It is said the man is insane, which is true, all religious belief being a species of insanity intensified by ignorance. But why were Freeman of Poccasset or Avery of Delzura any more insane than Abraham of Judea? If they were insane, why is not Jehovah, who is alleged to have sacrificed his son, open to the same charge? Why should we revere Abraham and worship Jehovah, but imprison Avery?

In disposing of these cases we must treat them as nearly alike as circumstances will permit. The story of Abraham is doubtless a myth. The crucifixion of Christ as an atoning sacrifice was not in pursuance of any divine plan, but was due to the bigotry of the Jews, who believed themselves commanded by God to put to death any who came to them preaching a new religion. When the clergy learn to state the facts as they are and to repudiate and condemn all sacrifice, past and present, whether under the alleged command of God or not, there will be no more Freemans and Averys. While they continue to preach their barbarous system of religion called Christianity, these bloody deeds will multiply, and the clerical impostors will be responsible for them.

SUNDAY MAILS.

A Western Pennsylvania clergyman has been criticising Wanamaker as an ungodly public servant for allowing the mails over which he has supervision to be carried on Sunday. To this charge Wanamaker has made a reply, in which he repudiates responsibility for the offense and refers the clergyman to Congress as the body with whom authority in the matter resides. He also takes occasion to say that in his opinion Sunday rest for mails in transit is impracticable. To stop the handling of Sunday mails, he says, means to stop the wheels of the railroads throughout the country at twelve o'clock on Saturday. In that event there would be no protection for mails in transit. Hundreds of thousands of dollars pass through the mails every day, and the custody of the mail in a car standing on a track, while crossing the prairie, or even at a small village, would be a serious matter. It would be a great accomplishment for Sunday rest if the mail dispatched from Omaha or San Francisco could lay up at twelve o'clock Saturday night, but what would become of the postal clerks, engineers, and train hands is not clear.

We have not seen the full text of Wanamaker's reply to the clergyman; but he is abridged as saying that if any community, by the petition of a considerable majority of its population, asked for the absolute closing of its office on Sunday the request would receive favorable consideration. Still, he adds, it must be remembered that the postoffice is not a private office, and that it is the duty of its servants to serve according to law; and he admits—which is something surprising, seeing that Mr. Wanamaker is a Christian—that “those who have different views of Sunday-keeping have a right to consideration.”

Mr. Wanamaker's recognition of the truth that the postoffice is not a private office, to be open or closed on Sunday according to the religious prejudices of the postmaster and his fellow church members, marks quite a long step in the direction of sense. Evidently when he ruled out the “Kreutzer Sonata” he had not learned what he now admits, but believed that the office was so near a private one that his personal condemnation of the book was sufficient to exclude it from the mails. He might now go farther, and declare that the postoffice is not a religious office, and that therefore religious reverence for Sunday cannot be regarded as a good excuse for stopping mail trains on that day. People who do not want their mail carried on Sunday should deposit it on Monday morning. It is not practicable for ships to lay-to over the holy day, but mails will go anywhere from the Atlantic to the Pacific between one Sunday and the next.

AN ECLECTIC PLATFORM.

The Farmers' Alliance, which the recent political revolution in Kansas brought into public notice, has a branch at San Jose, where an organization was completed last week. All persons of good moral character may join it. The object of the Alliance besides being educational and moral, is also political, and its platform is a composite structure made from the good features of many different schools of reform. We give the platform below, with an initial word or two before each plank to show what a large variety of reformers may find in it something that is familiar:

GREENBACKISM.—The entire abolition of national banks and the substitution of legal-tender treasury notes, issued in sufficient quantity to enable the business of the country to be transacted on a cash system; that such notes be made to rest upon any good security, and be a full legal tender for all debts, both public and private, and bear a rate of interest not to exceed 2 per cent per annum.

NATIONALISM.—Government ownership of all the agencies of public transportation and communication, and that they be operated in the interest of the people at actual cost.

LAND REFORM.—The restoration of all unearned land grants to the public domain, and legal provisions made to prevent the securing or holding of large tracts of land by either corporations or aliens for speculative purposes.

SINGLE-TAX BALLOT REFORM.—The adoption of our next legislature of what is generally known as "the Australian ballot system" of voting to the end that intimidation may cease and the purity and secrecy of the freeman's ballot may be secured.

PROHIBITION.—We hereby approve of the declaration of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union held in the city of St. Louis on December 6, 1889, when it said: "We are opposed to saloons and liquor business in all its forms."

DEMOCRACY.—The election of president, vice-president and United States Senators by a direct vote of the people.

BIMETALLISM.—That while we continue the coinage of gold and silver as money, they shall sustain a perfect equality as to coinage and tender.

EDUCATIONAL TEST—WOMAN SUFFRAGE.—That proper and safe educational qualification for the exercise of the elective franchise should be adopted, but no discrimination on account of sex, and that they shall forever remain non-sectarian.

SOCIALISM.—That our present public school system shall be maintained and its efficiency increased more and more as the exigencies of the county may demand, and that the books used in the public schools be furnished by the state at cost.

MISCELLANEOUS.—That we would recommend such changes in state law that in the event of death the husband and wife has the same right to conduct and carry on the business as the partner has, without the long and tedious course of law usual in such cases.

DITTO.—That we favor a change in the law making taxes payable semi-annually.

Nearly everybody who believes that an affirmative political platform is worth anything will be able to find some plank in this one that he can trust his feet upon. Even the Freethinker may grasp a straw—namely, non-sectarian educational qualifications for voters. The prohibition plank "opposed to saloons and liquor business in all its forms" may not mean legal prohibition exactly; it may mean high license; or the opposition expressed may be merely moral and sentimental.

The election of president by a direct vote of the people, instead of by electors chosen by the people, is not a material change from the present method, since the effect would be precisely the same as now; but to elect senators by popular vote will largely decrease the campaign expenses of the senatorial candidate, for whereas a man with aspirations toward the senate must now buy votes enough to elect the right kind of a legislature, and then buy the same afterwards, under the system proposed by the Farmers' Alliance he will need only to purchase the popular suffrage. There are many who believe that the senate is a superfluous body, much after the fashion of the English House of Lords, and that we have almost as little need for a president in these dull times as we have for a king, but the idea of abolishing both is not now popular enough to materially strengthen a political platform, though it may be some time.

Secularists must not look to the Farmers' Alliance to abolish chaplaincies; it could not consistently do so, having elected a chaplain of its own—Mrs. James Kinnear, of Stanislaus county, who may perhaps be a member of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

It will be noticed that in this platform, as in most others of a political character, laws are recommended for the correction of evils that would not exist if the present laws which sustain them were abolished.

EXTEND THE CIRCULATION OF FREETHOUGHT.

It is of urgent necessity that those who believe in the principles of this paper, and who wish to see it maintained and its circulation extended, should do all they can to keep their own subscriptions paid up and to secure new subscribers. Indifference in this matter is sure to bring defeat and disaster, as no reform paper can exist unless its friends and sympathizers are active to maintain it.

Therefore renew; therefore get new subscribers; at least send us the names of all the Liberal minded people you know who do not now take FREETHOUGHT, and we will send them sample copies; but send bona fide subscribers if possible. A single subscription is $2 per year; two, with one remittance, $3; three at once, $4; four at a time, $5.

THE CASE OF JUDAS.

The Rev. J. Q. A. Henry preached last Sunday a sermon on "Judas and Jesus," in which he took the usual clerical view that Judas was an unrepentent sinner, a traitor, an agent of the devil, and beyond doubt was cast into outer darkness, where there are "weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth."

It seems that the Christian world will never learn to look upon Judas for what he was—an instrument necessary to the working out of the "plan of salvation." Christ, they say, came upon earth to die as a sacrifice, and save the children of Israel. It was foreordained that the said children should offer him up according to the programme. It is strange to think of, but they were not sufficiently acquainted with his personal appearance to enable them to take him into custody without identification. Jesus knew beforehand that Judas would give him away, for he said that the man who put his finger in the dish with him would betray him. Judas was the man, and he did not propose to make the chairman of the board of apostles out to be a false prophet. He sacrificed himself to save the world, the same as Jesus did; and more, since he died voluntarily, while the other prayed that the cup might pass from him. The man who dies by his own hand may be said to be fully as sincere in making the sacrifice as is the one who dies unwillingly from violence inflicted by others.

Judas, too, had heard Christ say that if any one denied him before men, Christ would repudiate him before the Father in heaven. Judas was not a coward, like Peter, to deny his master three times before sunrise, and when the authorities asked him to point Jesus out, he did so. If he believed that Jesus was God, it is fair to infer that he did not believe the priests and elders could hurt him. He was simply a victim of circumstances over which he had no control.

The clergy are plainly without warrant in affirming that Judas was unrepentant, in face of the fact that on the following day he sought to return the money he had received, and when his tempters would not accept it, he threw it on the ground, and went away and hanged himself. When a man throws away the price of a job, and commits suicide through remorse, we are justified in concluding he has repented his course.

But whether there was any good in Judas or not, he was a necessity for the consummation of the scheme of redemption, and must be regarded more in sorrow than in anger. The clergy would do well to let up for awhile on this character, and turn their attention to Peter, who, to save his own neck, repudiated the man who gave him the best appointment held by any of the apostles.

THE FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The meeting of the San Francisco Freethought Society at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, Sunday evening, Nov. 23, will be addressed by MR. THOMAS CURTIS; subject, "A World without a God." Admission is free and a general invitation is extended to the public.

HON. A. SCHELL, of Knight's Ferry, cut from FREETHOUGHT the petition for Sunday opening of the World's Fair at Chicago, and obtained 117 signatures thereto. This is a question which, as Mr. Schell suggests, should be pushed upon the attention of the people. In order that others may do as he has done, we herewith reproduce the petition, as prepared by the New York "Truth Seeker":

To the World's Columbian Exposition Committee:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the Fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of the separation of church and state may be maintained.
2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.
3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago, who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.
4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is solely a humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.
5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.
6. To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to a day of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.
7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

Cut the petition out, place it at the head of a sheet of paper, and ask your neighbors to sign it. When filled, forward it to the FREETHOUGHT office.

SAYS the "American Sentinel:"

"Our Liberal exchanges don't seem to like our 'Lesson from Paine.' FREETHOUGHT and the 'Truth Seeker' both protest that Paine didn't know what he was talking about. The 'Truth Seeker' says: 'Paine made his point as a Deist, and made a mistake.' We are aware that Paine was a Deist, and that he made many and grievous mistakes, but his estimate of the benign nature of the Christian religion, and of the origin of church and state, was not one of them. An important difference between Paine and many of his modern disciples, is, that, whereas he conceded to others the same freedom of opinion that he claimed for himself, the average 'Freethinker' of the present day is about as intolerant as a Jesuit."

The editor of the "American Sentinel" is hereby apprised that he states that which is untrue. Moreover he is ungrateful, for he must know that the tolerance which permits him to be a Seventh-day Adventist, and in some states to work upon the first day of the week, is not due to the "benign nature of the Christian religion," but to the influence and work of the "average Freethinker," who is in all respects the exact opposite of the Jesuit, with whom the editor of the "Sentinel" is fair enough to compare him. We will, however, absolve the editor of the "Sentinel" from the charge of untruthfulness if he will instance some act of intolerance on the part of an average Freethinker to justify the comparison. As to the benign nature of the Christian religion, we still hold that Paine gave away his case too readily. It was the nature of the Christian religion, benign or otherwise, and of Seventh-day Adventism in particular, that caused Mr. Ralph Avery, of Delzura, to attempt last week the bloody sacrifice of his own child.

ONE McPherson, a notorious ward politician of San Francisco, has been arrested for extorting money from a woman under promise of getting her a position as school teacher. But McPherson has a "pull," and, having got bail, is not in the slightest danger of punishment. His method is the one charged upon the school directors, only the price that girls pay for the job of teaching is not always in money. Some new system for providing teachers, such as the co-operation of parents and guardians in each district, would be better than that the patronage of the public schools should be in the hands of politicians ready to be debauched either by coin or concupiscence.

ONE of the blessings of wealth, according to the belief of Albert W. Fleming, of St. Louis, is that it bridges over the gulf between the living and the dead. Fleming is a wealthy man, and two years ago, when his only daughter died, he engaged a boy medium, at one hundred dollars per month, to keep him in constant communication with her. Somehow or other the presence of the boy raised a scandal, and Mrs. Fleming has got a divorce with alimony, but Fleming has formally adopted the lad and made him his heir. Only the rich can afford the luxury of a private spiritual postmaster.

IN last week's FREETHOUGHT Prof. Herbert Miller drew attention to a new work by Margaret Deland entitled "Sidney." It is a novel, one that sensible people may read without insult to their sense. We have procured the book and have it on sale, bound in cloth, at $1.25 per copy. And, by the way, we have several copies of "John Ward Preacher," by the same author; cloth, $1.25; paper, 50.

LIBERALS in the vicinity of San Francisco who desire to have a good lecture in their locality should remember that W. S. Bell is among us and prepared to fill engagements. For terms address W. S. Bell, box 109, Oakland, Cal.

IF anybody wants the "Kreutzer Sonata" by Tolstoi, we will mail it for 25 cents. The principal merit of the the book is that it has got the better of Wanamaker.

OBSERVATIONS.

It would be to the advantage of the Liberals of San Francisco to take notice of the fact that meetings are held every Sunday evening at 421 Post street, and addressed by able speakers. Last Sunday evening, Mr. W. S. Bell, of Oakland, gave one of the best lectures I have ever listened to, and there were less than a hundred persons present to hear it, although it was worthy to be delivered before a thousand.

I was not very early at the meeting. Just as I started out I met a man who desired to convince me that the McKinley bill is a beneficent institution, and that protection is worth all it costs if it ruins the country. It took him so long to do this that I was late, and did not hear the excellent recitation with which Miss Lillie Arper prefaced the evening's exercise, and Mr. Bell had got well under way before I reached the hall. I enjoyed the lecture greatly. Bell has a convincing method of presenting an argument, and a neat way of clinching it with an illustration and a good story. He melts his audience with good humor, and they become as clay in the hands of the potter. The lecture dealt with the absurdities we are expected to regard as religious truths in order to be orthodox Christians, and the speaker detailed the phenomena once ascribed to supernatural origin but which are now relegated to the ordinary workings of natural forces.

Treasurer Schou, who is now on a trip to Copenhagen, was missed, but Secretary Lemme passed the hat in a competent manner and received a generous offering from the people. Miss Arper sang a song in a rippling, mellifluous tone that recalled the music of the brook and birds, Professor Bell turning the leaves with accuracy, and Mr. Thomas Arper made some running remarks on the religious teachings of his childhood which he had since abandoned. Vice-President Eastman occupied the chair during the evening, and, by his appropriate suggestions, added to his previous popularity as a presiding officer. At the conclusion of Mr. Arper's comments, there being nothing left to be said, and Mr. Healy not being present to supply the deficiency, as he usually does on such occasions, the meeting was closed.

Next Sunday evening Mr. Thomas Curtis, a very facile and brilliant speaker, will deliver the address. All are invited to take advantage of the free admission and listen to him.

A petition is in circulation for the pardon of Ezra H. Heywood, now serving a two years' sentence in Charleston prison, Massachusetts, for printing what he chose to in his paper, the "Word," and mailing it to his subscribers. The petition sets forth that Mr. Heywood is active if not always judicious in his efforts to promote human improvement; that he has not thrust his paper upon any one; that he is a gentleman of education, a graduate of Brown University, and respected in the town where he lives; and that his intentions are good.

By way of recommending Mr. Heywood to society, the certificate of honesty and character are good, but they are not and cannot be of any effect in law. I am free to say that I have not inquired what Mr. Heywood's record is. There are scavengers enough—he being a poor man, not a politician nor a member of the church—to rake up his record and hold it under the nose of the community, provided it is unsavory, so that if his record is bad I should surely have heard of it.

It makes very little difference, as touching the question of human rights, whether Mr. Heywood's intentions were good or bad. The intentions of many mistaken men are probably good when they commit assaults upon human rights. Mr. Heywood may have been judicious or injudicious; whether he was the one or the other is not my business. In fact, all these explanations and apologies are useless so far as I am concerned. It is enough for me to know that because Mr. Heywood conducted his paper as he saw fit, because he printed what he wanted to and mailed his paper to subscribers who wanted to read it, he has been taken from his business by brute force and detained in prison against his will. Nothing more is needed. He has done exactly what I have done, and I know that if I wish to retain for myself the liberty to think, to write, and to print, I must defend to the extent of my power the right of others to do the same. Leaving sentiment, and patriotism, and spread-eagerness out of the question, mere policy or self-interest ought to guide everybody right in this matter. I protest against Heywood's imprisonment on any such charge as that made against him. I am willing and anxious to do all I can afford to do to effect his release. I will sign one petition or a dozen, if that will do any good—petitions to the president, to John Wanamaker, or to the warden of Charleston prison. I will address each of them or all of them as your excellency, your worship, or your royal highness, knowing that the salutation will be as appropriate in one case as in another.

Copies of the petition have been sent to this office, and I shall be glad to mail them to any who will sign or obtain the signatures of others.

Mr. Charles Parnell, leader of the Home-rule party in the British Parliament, presents the disheveled appearance of a shattered idol. The report of a trial recently held in England shows that the wife of one Captain O'Shea divided her affections between her husband and the said Mr. Parnell in such an ostentatious manner that the former discovered the fact; and having made so important a discovery, he generously imparted it to the world. As a consequence the world, which is virtuous or nothing, hastens to express its sympathy for Captain O'Shea and to hold Mr. Parnell up where it can hit him with its scorn. As for Mrs. O'Shea, she is given the distinction of having her picture published in the daily papers on both sides of the Atlantic, and is accredited with a beauty and attractiveness not previously considered sufficiently remarkable to entitle her to public admiration. Regarded from one point of view, Mrs. O'Shea, in cultivating Parnell, has performed the most popular act of her life, but the notoriety she has acquired cannot be such as a modest woman would desire to achieve. So far as the O'Sheas are concerned, they have probably lost nothing. He gets rid of a woman who prefers another, and she secures the man of her choice so soon as the law will sanction her marriage with Parnell. The worst sufferer in the affair, as perhaps is just, is the leader of the Home rulers; for those who have applauded him during the past half-dozen years now refuse to let his long service condone his one fault, and totally fail to differentiate his public from his private life. Hence they clamor for his resignation as their leader; Mr. Gladstone, his colleague, says he would prefer an Irish parliamentarian who is not the subject of unfavorable gossip; and the Catholic priests demand a standard bearer who is morally clean, though they have not shown the confidence to recommend one of their own number for the position. In fact, it would be using mild language to say that the devil is to pay and no pitch hot in the Irish camp; added to which a scandal whose details are unsavory has gone, through the press, into every family of English speaking people, to the manifest injury of public morals—all arising from the indiscretion of Parnell, and the inability of Captain O'Shea to control his mouth.

Now, right here in California, a new state, where morality is as yet in its infancy, and where people have something else to discuss besides their neighbors' business, a somewhat similar complication arose not long since, but terminated with a result vastly different, and also more satisfactory, not only to the parties concerned, but likewise to the public weal. Down in Los Angeles county were a capitalist and a literary man, both of whom were interested in the new movement called Nationalism, and both leaders of the same. The literary man started a paper, and the capitalist entered politics, running for Congress on a "let-the-producer-have-all-his-product" platform. During the campaign the wife of the literary man asked her husband if it would pain him to know that she preferred the candidate to the editor—not that she loved him less, but the other more. He replied that it would not, but he had no time to bother with such matters until the campaign was over and the candidate elected. To be brief, the candidate, on so unpopular a platform, was defeated; then the editor laid down his pen for awhile, and remarked that he was now at leisure to attend to that other matter of which his wife had spoken. The lady in the case thereupon went through the formality of procuring a divorce, to which he offered no objection. She was then married to the ex-candidate, the ex-husband acting as a witness. The happy couple went away on a wedding tour, and the editor resumed his pen and completed an article which he had begun before the proceedings above described had diverted his attention. There were no recriminations, no unnecessary publicity, no reputations ruined by slander, no newspaper reports over which the gossips might gloat.

I hold, of course—and I challenge anyone to show he has a stronger grip on the conviction than myself—that causes of divorce should be avoided at almost any sacrifice; and men and women with employment for their hands and minds are not apt to furnish them; but if those causes exist, and the divorce is inevitable, it is a great deal better for public health that it should be obtained in the California style than after the fashion prevailing in the effete monarchy across the Atlantic. However, my opinion on morality is worth nothing, as I have often been told, or I should have competed for Dr. Westbrook's prize manual; but I have presented the two cases, and would ask the public to look on this picture, and then on that, and see which least offends the moral eye.

When, three weeks ago, I called attention to the Rev. Cyrus Romulus Remus R. Teed as one of two cranks worthy of conspicuous notice (George Chainey being the second), I did not know that he would so soon rise above the horizon of San Francisco. But he is here. The "Golden Gate" of last Saturday brought the intelligence that Cyrus, the founder of the World's College of Life, and of the Church Triumphant, both located in Chicago; the editor of the "Flaming Sword," and the promulgator of great doctrines of Koreshan science, would give a discourse on Sunday, November 23, at Metaphysical College, 106 McAllister street, on the "Personality of God," or words to that effect. Admission 10 cents. Metaphysical College is a vacant store just across the street from the new city hall. I was there Sunday morning, and Mr. W. N. Slocum, who is a Spiritualist, a Nationalist, and a Topolobampo sufferer, went with me. One hundred persons, three-fourths of them of the opposite sex, made up the congregation. The services opened by a young man with combed hair jarring the keys of a piano in whose interior were located a great number of tin pans of assorted sizes, having communicated with all of which the young man retired and took the beatific vision of his hair away from us.

The chairman introduced Dr. Teed as the renowned founder of Koreshanity. Teed, who looks like a clergyman, or a commercial traveler, or a horse trader, or some other professional person, salaamed and read a chapter from the gospel of John, wherein it is set forth that in the beginning was the word—or logos, as every preacher is in duty bound to learnedly explain—the said word being with God, and God in fact. Following this reading came a prayer, which was more than Slocum could stand, so he grabbed his hat and went out, and shortly thereafter I was wishing he had insisted upon my going with him, for the sermon that came next was the most inconsequent agitation of the atmosphere I ever observed. Teed's hobby is that in some way men and women absorb the deity into their own persons and in that way become little two-legged gods themselves. "Did you ever consider," said he, "what it is to be conceived, gestated, and born of the deity?" Nobody answered in the affirmative, and Mr. Teed, who professes to have been originated in the way described, paused and posed impressively in order that the audience might consider him. Resuming, he said, "Either Atheism is right or it is false. I pronounce it false. Let the church take God by the hand and sweep Atheism from the earth." He dismissed Agnosticism with the comment that taking advantage of ignorance it confessed that it did not know. Thereby Agnosticism got the better of the argument, and was welcome to it. Teed believes firmly in the immaculate conception, which he explains by the theory that he calls "parthogenesis," or virginal propagation. Mary was gifted with both sexes, or a union of the two; so was Christ, so was Adam, and so must the perfect human being become—the man-woman, man-god, self-fertilizing, the amalgamation of Hermes and Aphrodite. Added to these conveniences the accomplished Koreshan will be immortal.

The hundred people, many of whom had intelligent faces, accepted this swash from the platform with evident appreciation. As for myself, I prefer the Salvation Army to Teed, but I should choose a deep and solemn silence, broken only by the hee-honk of a discontented jack-ass, before either.

How long Teed is to be with us is not stated. San Francisco is quite a paradise for religious freaks, but Oakland, where the inhabitants go insane over the ravings of a functionally deranged woman like Mrs. Woodworth, is a more appropriate place for him.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The Rev. Dr. Barrows is to return and resume the pulpit of the First Congregational church of San Francisco. He was indiscreet, and loved wine and women not wisely but too frequently, but his friends think he will not do it again and so will give him another trial.—Statistics recently prepared at the registrar's office give information regarding the nationality of electors who cast their ballots in this city Nov. 4. Of a total vote of 59,714, over 43 per cent, or 26,041 of the voters were foreigners. Ireland was represented by 9,824 voters, Germany by 7,454, England by 2,118, Canada by 1,113, Italy by 955, and Russia by 436. Natives of almost every country on the globe exercised the right of suffrage. There were 7 native Africans, 64 Belgians, 18 Central Americans, 3 East Indians, 27 Greeks, 79 Dutchmen, 21 New Zealanders, 3 Newfoundlanders, 29 New Brunswickers, 39 Nova Scotians, 13 Sandwich Islanders, 4 Turks, and 34 West Indians. All the European countries were well represented. Of the native born Americans, 12,373 were Californians, 5,565 New Yorkers, 2,776 from the old Bay State, 1,227 from Maine, 1,588 Pennsylvanians, and 1,270 from Ohio.—There were 202 deaths in this city last week, as against 127 for the corresponding week of last year.—Mrs. Sarah Althea Hill Terry got Lawyer Coldwell of Fresno convicted of disturbing her peace and he was fined $20. He appealed the case.—The San Francisco club of baseball players wins the League pennant.

The Sioux Indians of Dakota are wild over the messiah delusion with which they have become indoctrinated. They are reported to be indulging in the worst excesses, discarding all their civilized ways and burning their Bibles and school books. According to their expressed belief there is to be a resurrection of the dead Indians, obliteration of the whites, and the restoration of the virgin prairies to the possession of the aborigines.—Postmaster-General Wanamaker reports a deficit of $6,000,000 in the accounts of the postal department for the fiscal year. He says the service is burdened by tons of paper-covered books which are carried at newspaper rates, or much less than the cost of transportation. Railroad companies, he thinks, should be forced by law to reduce their charges for carrying the mails.—Jay Gould realized about $3,000,000 profits from the recent financial panic in the East.—Edward Warden realized $15,000 this year from a peach farm of thirty acres in Hunterton county, N. J. His farm is not worth more than $2,000 as land is held in his county.—The new lottery law has decreased the business of the postoffice at New Orleans some $11,000 per month and caused the discharge of nine employees.—Dillon and O'Brien are already quarreling with the other Irish agitators in New York.—Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, has sued an author for dedicating a book on McGlynn's case to him (the cardinal) without his consent.—Mrs. Alonzo Armstrong, of Keyport, N. J., charges the Rev. Robert Chew, the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Clifwood and Jacksonville, N. J., with attempting to assault her. Chew attempted to preach at the church on Sunday, but the trustees shut the door in his face and dismissed the congregation. Chew is a married man.

William, king of Holland, died on Sunday, the 23d. He was 73 years old. He was not what is called a moral man, but he was a good king, as kings go.—Parnell, the Irish leader, has been found guilty of illicit conduct. His withdrawal from politics is demanded by many of his previous admirers. It is said that he will marry the divorced wife of Captain O'Shea.—General Salvation Army Booth's scheme to raise a million pounds with which to build homes for the outcast poor of London promises to be successful, as large amounts are being subscribed to the fund.—The loss by the October fire in Sidney, Australia, amounts to nearly $3,000,000.

THE Canadian government officials of Napanee, says the Truth Seeker, have seized a copy of "The Freethinkers' Pictorial Text Book" sent to a Liberal of that town.

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION,

R. B. WESTBROOK, PRESIDENT.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. Westbrook, President, 305 2d ave., Ashbury Park, N. J.
 E. B. Foote, Jr., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York.
 T. B. Wakeman, Vice-President, 93 Nassau st., New York.
 T. Morris Parot, Vice-President Philadelphia, Pa.
 J. O. Bentley, Vice-President Philadelphia, Pa.
 Corresponding Secretary, Ida C. Craddock, S. E. corner of Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
 Treasurer, F. C. Mende 1814 Green st., Philadelphia Pa.

WHERE SHALL WE HAVE THE NEXT CONGRESS ?

The Portsmouth Congress of the American Secular Union was a success in every sense of the word. Prominent Liberal speakers, first-class music and plenty of it, furnished without cost to us by the local auxiliary, and a large attendance, both of Liberals and outsiders, not only from Portsmouth, but also from the surrounding country, and from the cities of Columbus, Cincinnati, Chicago, etc., made this assemblage of our people one long to be remembered.

The excellent music rendered at all our meetings, through the kindly foresight of the Portsmouth Secular Union, deserves our special thanks. Official "thrones might totter," Secular discussions wax wrathful or wane to a peaceful sunset, but the talented pianist, Miss Sarah Stevens, was sure to be on hand to soothe with her harmonies. Then there were the welcome trio of guitarists, Messrs. Adams, Rice, and Kennedy, with the mandolinist, Charles Miller, and the violinist, Abe White, who were certain of an encore; and the well-trained colored jubilee singers, Messrs. Shumake, Haley, Woods, and Robinson. But the field-day of the Congress (a "field day" in more senses than one) was Sunday, when Al G. Field, with his minstrel troupe, entertained us with music in the intervals of the speaking. During the afternoon and evening the house was packed, not only with the Portsmouth people, but also with visitors brought thither by excursion trains, so that our Secularist friends were glad to avail themselves of the invitation to occupy seats on the stage, while listening to the speakers and to the splendid music given us by Al G. Field's $10,000 Challenge Brass Band, led by Todd Hamilton, his Orchestra, led by Ernest Magnani, and his Sextette, composed of Orland Lemon (leader), and Messrs. Diamond, Casey, Gray, Hassel, and Kennedy.

We can congratulate ourselves on having made so good an impression upon the people of Portsmouth, that the local auxiliary have already applied to have us next year. But, when we reflect upon the noble work which this little band of Secularists have already done in raising the five hundred dollars ($500.) which they pledged toward the expenses, and upon their many kindnesses to us in other directions, it seems unfair to trespass upon the hospitality of these generous people two years in succession. We think it is time for some other city to invite us.

What auxiliary will step forward and pledge an equal amount ($500.) for the expenses of next year's Congress in their city? If this young, six-month's old auxiliary of Portsmouth can do as splendidly as it has done, surely some of our older auxiliaries ought to do at least as well, if not better. Come, friends, what do you say? Auxiliaries to the front, and let us hear from you promptly!

IDA C. CRADDOCK, Cor. Sec'y A. S. U.

Philadelphia, Nov. 17. 1890.

SPECIAL CALL FOR GUARANTEE FUND.

The Congress of the American Secular Union, recently held at Portsmouth, Ohio, directed the officers to make, through the Liberal papers, a call upon the friends for the pledge of five thousand dollars ($5000) to enlarge and carry forward the work of the society. This money is needed to sustain the business of the general office in Philadelphia, and to pay the salaries and traveling expenses of at least two field secretaries, who shall go out to organize auxiliary societies and otherwise labor to promote the cause.

That this is an important movement in the right direction must be obvious to all. Never was there a time when the work of our society was so much in demand; and our one need is the money to carry on that work. Will our friends respond to this call liberally and at once, that we may know what to depend upon?

The president, besides his gratuitous daily work in behalf of the society, offers to be one of twenty to contribute one hundred dollars ($100) each for this object. Will nineteen others respond to this proposition at once?

How many can pledge $50, $25, $10, $5, $1? Let every friend of the cause inform us as soon as possible what he or she is willing to pledge.

Let all Liberal societies, whether auxiliary or not, take up this matter promptly, and inform us what they are willing to do.

The pledges will be published in the "Truth Seeker," "Investigator," FREETHOUGHT, and "Secular Thought" each month. It is understood that the subscriptions may be paid during the coming year at the convenience of the subscriber, and, if desired, in instalments. All responses to this call should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

We see no reason why the sum named should not be secured by pledges within thirty days.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President,

F. C. MENDE, Treasurer,

IDA C. CRADDOCK, Cor. Sec.

Office S. E. Cor. Broad and Columbia avenues, Philadelphia,
 November 11, 1890.

THE BIBLE:

SHALL IT BE READ IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS?*

The reading of the Bible as a religious exercise in our common schools is exciting universal interest, and has become one of the live questions of the day. Multitudes of earnest religious people are deeply concerned at the thought of excluding the Bible from the state schools, as a religious authority, to be read every day to the pupils, and deem such a proposition as little less than religious treason. Other multitudes are equally strong in the conviction that such reading of the Bible is highly improper, and they insist in the most determined manner that the state schools shall be conducted on strictly secular principles, without any religious exercises whatever.

Now let us formulate our objections to the reading of these sixty-six little tracts, known as the Christian Bible, in our state schools.

We object:

I. Because there is no common agreement as to what constitutes the Bible.

The Jews come along with their thirty-nine little leaflets, mostly written by nobody knows whom and nobody knows when or where, and say that these, bound together into one book, are the Bible. Orthodox Christians respond in chorus: "Not so; these little pamphlets are only part of the Bible, and while they contain the substance and promise of sacred things, we have the fulfillment and realization in the New Testament. You must accept our twenty-seven little leaflets [mostly anonymous and without date] before you claim to have the whole Bible."

Then come the Catholics, and with a tone of authority exclaim, "You are both wrong. You have omitted fourteen other little books, and have dubbed them 'apocryphal,' and we insist that the Bible is not complete without these. Moreover, the Bible was never intended to be read by the common people, as it cannot be understood without an authorized interpreter, and the church is such an interpreter, we [priests] are the church, and you, the people, only belong to the church. You must bring in the writings of the fathers of the church, and also tradition. We do not want even the Douay Bible read in our schools without giving the church a chance to interpret it."

Modern critics make sad havoc with the canon (which means list) of both the Old and New Testament books. Only four of the fourteen epistles ascribed to Paul are now admitted to have been certainly written by him, and several of the epistles, the Acts, Revelation, and all of the gospels, are regarded as anonymous. Now, we respectfully submit that, until we certainly know what constitutes the Bible, we should cease to clamor for its reading in the public schools. The canon (list) of neither the Old nor the New Testament books was generally accepted, according to Dr. Lardner, until about 556 years after the Christian era. The epistle to the Hebrews, the Acts, the epistle of James, the second epistle of Peter, the second and third epistles of John, the epistle of Jude, and Revelation, have all been doubted as canonical scripture, and by many eminent Christian scholars have been entirely rejected.

* From an address by President WESTBROOK before the Congress of the American Secular Union.

The canon of the New Testament is equally defective. The councils that accepted four gospels and seventeen epistles as canonical, rejected more than fifty other gospels and nearly one hundred other epistles that claimed to be inspired. Besides the canonical and apocryphal books now extant there are sixty-eight New Testament books mentioned or quoted by the Christian fathers of the first four centuries, which are now not known to be in existence. More than fifty other books, written by twenty different authors in the second century, have mysteriously disappeared. Now, we respectfully submit that if only one inspired book is lost, or only one is added without authority, suspicion is thrown upon the whole. What shall we say, then, of the scores, and even hundreds, that are not now extant?

We object further to the reading of the Bible in our state schools:

II. Because there is no common agreement as to what parts are historical and what parts are allegorical.

Plato said that he would not have the poems of Homer read in the schools of his republic, because the children could not properly judge between history and allegory. Then, it should be remembered, the Bible is to be read in our state schools "without note or comment." Suppose that the teacher reads the first and second chapters of Genesis. Here we have two distinct accounts of creation, contradicting each other in six particulars, and each of these accounts is absolutely inconsistent with what science teaches in our school-books. Suppose we read of the fall of Adam and Eve, and inquire, Is this a fact or a fiction? Philo and Maimonides, celebrated Jewish writers, say fiction—while the early Christian fathers say the same.

But we object to the reading of the Bible in our state schools:

III. Because there is no common agreement as to what doctrines are taught in the Bible.

For about fourteen hundred years we have had these little tracts called the Bible, and men are to-day more uncertain as to what to believe than ever. We have about two hundred different sects, each declaring that its particular doctrines are drawn from the Bible, and each quotes pages of proof-texts in support of its dogmas. At the same time Calvinists denounce Arminians as holding doctrines that are "delusive, dangerous, and destructive" of human souls. Arminians retort that the Calvinists' God is worse than the devil, and say that they would rather be Atheists than Calvinists.

Now, we submit that a book which produces such a medley of opinions should not be read as a religious authority in our state schools.

But we object to reading the Bible in our state schools:

IV. Because it contains so much that is cruel and obscene.

The Bible begins with a cruel murder and a bitter curse—Cain and Abel. The flood of Noah, involving multitudes of innocent children, was a most cruel and desperate device. The raining of fire and brimstone on Sodom was a most despotic act, involving the innocent with the guilty, and no wonder that the patriarch expostulated with Jehovah against it. The fate of Lot's wife, when she cast a last lingering look at her home, was cruel in the extreme. Achan and his sons and daughters (and all his dumb animals) were commanded by Jehovah to be stoned because Achan had stolen the wedge of gold. Jehovah is made to sanction the hanging of Saul's seven sons and grandsons because Saul, a long time before, had done wrong to the Gibeonites, after which Jehovah stopped the pestilence! God approved of the cutting off the heads (by Jehu) of the seventy sons of Ahab. He destroyed 70,000 by pestilence because David did what Jehovah told him to do. He directed Moses to exterminate the Midianites, men, women and children—except the 32,000 virgins kept for the purpose of gratifying their lusts. He slew 20,000 Israelites for flirting with the daughters of Moab, and mercilessly killed 50,000 men because they peeped in a little wooden box called the ark of the covenant. But time would fail us to tell of all the cruel and barbarous acts ascribed to Jehovah in the Old Testament. We have not time to speak of the savage wars, and the merciless murder of thousands upon thousands of men by their brothers. It is enough to say that the Bible contains the most disgustingly detailed accounts of cruel and atrocious crimes of any book extant, and it is not fit to be read in the hearing of children.

It is difficult to speak to ears polite in a promiscuous audience of the obscenity of the Bible. There are more than one hundred passages of the most coarse and vulgar description. To print these in a book and send it through the United States mails would put a man in the penitentiary. There are entire chapters that reek with obscenity from beginning to end. I will not specify them, lest I assist the young and vicious in finding them. "Leaves of Grass," by Walt Whitman, and the "Kreutzer Sonata" of Tolstoi, are immaculate purity by the side of these passages! Early editions of Shakespeare have been revised and purified, but, though Noah Webster undertook to expurgate the Bible, Christians were so prejudiced in favor of the old book that they could not give up its nastiness. I cannot tell you about Onan, and Tamar, and Lot and his two daughters, and scores of other obscene matters. There are passages even in the New Testament, such as are found in 1 Cor. vii, that cannot be mentioned in the presence of a virtuous woman. If these indecent tales should not be perused by mature persons, should innocent children—mere boys and girls in our state schools—be polluted by them? When I enter a lady's parlor, and see the richly gilded Bible upon the center table, I shudder when I remember the obscenity that is contained between its costly lids. When I see maiden purity tripping along our streets, Bible in hand, I wonder if she knows that she carries more obscenity than Byron ever wrote, than Shelley ever dreamed of, than the vilest French novelist ever dared to print. Shall the children in our state schools be made familiar with all forms of licentiousness and uncleanness?

But it is said teachers will skip these passages. Yet children will be sure to find them, and will laugh at their guides when they blunder on them by mistake. This matter of skipping offensive parts calls to view the fact that only extracts are, in fact, read from the Bible in our schools. If it is infallible inspiration, why not read it all right out? What right has a teacher to suppress God's word? Are not Solomon's Song, and Ruth, and Esther just as sacred as the Psalms or epistles? If only extracts are to be read to children, let us have an expurgated Bible, and let not the extracts be made only from the Jewish and Christian Bibles, but let them be made also from pagan sacred books, in which many things are found as good and pure as anything found in the Hebrew and Christian Bible, and let us have a Sacred Anthology, which shall be pure, chaste and beautiful.

We should not read the Bible in our state schools:

V. Because the moral is so mixed up with the immoral that there is great danger of contamination by contact.

Some portions of the Old Testament contain beautiful stories and sound moral maxims, but right in the same connection we often have (without condemnation) stories of uncleanness, fornications, adulteries, and incests that the Police Gazette would not dare publish. Jael meanly murders Sisera, and is praised for it, while the deceit and treachery of Rahab are commended in the New Testament. The story of Boaz and Ruth is fit only for a dime novel. Solomon's Song is full of lasciviousness. Abram lies. Moses gets mad. David commits adultery, and murders Uriah. Jacob is deceitful, and a trickster—and so on to the end. Polygamy is shown to have been the rule, and not the exception, among Jehovah's favorites. War is everywhere tacitly justified, and slavery is practiced, and not an abolitionist opens his mouth. We go to the New Testament, and he who is called the "perfect one" curses a fig-tree for not bearing fruit out of season; drives out with small cords men engaged in legitimate business, upsets their tables, and uses the most violent and reproachful language toward them. He shows want of respect for his mother, and is ambiguous and evasive in conversation with the woman of Canaan; says he does not know whether he is going to the feast at Jerusalem or not, and then straightway sets out for the holy city and makes believe by his actions that he is going to one place when he is actually going to another.

We might just as well go one step further, and say:

VI. We object to the reading of the Bible in our state schools because of its defective morality.

We are asked, Is there anything defective in the morality of the Sermon on the Mount?

The Sermon on the Mount, in its composition and construction, shows that it is not a connected discourse, but that it is a compilation of well-known and familiar maxims in common use in that day. In many of those sayings we see nothing wise or moral. "Lay not up for yourself treasures on earth," is not good advice, and has never been practiced. "Take no thought for to-morrow," is improvident, even with the unauthorized interpolation of the word "anxious." Turning the other cheek to the smiter, the lending to every borrower, and absolute non-resistance is about as foolish as indiscriminate alms-giving, and could only be uttered by one who believed that the end of the world was at hand and would surely come with that generation. Only a partial keeping of the commands of the Sermon on the Mount would upset every industry, and turn the people into a crowd of tramps and vagabonds.

We want something for our state schools that is more practical, and better adapted to this commercial age. We want a higher morality than is taught in the New Testament. We want higher and more noble conceptions than are given in the parable of the "Unjust Judge," and more just and equitable principles than are taught in the parable of the "Unjust Steward," or the "Laborers in the Vineyard," or the "Ten Talents." We want a morality that relates to this life rather than to the next. We do not want the possession of property held up as a crime, and poverty represented as a virtue entitling one to a seat in the future kingdom. We want good homes to live in now, rather than "mansions in the skies." We do not want a morality that appeals to selfishness only, that discriminates in favor of celibacy, and that only tolerates marriage as a remedy for lust, as taught in the seventh chapter of 1 Corinthians. I repeat that we want a higher morality than the morality of the New Testament.

The Bible should not be read in our public schools:

VII. Because the teachers can so manipulate it in reading as to favor their own particular views.

Now suppose we submit to the reading of the Hebrew and Christian Bibles in state schools, "without note or comment." Catholic teachers will read those chapters which speak of Peter as the rock upon which the church is founded, and of priests of whom it is said, "Whoever shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven," and many similar passages which seem to favor the Romish hierarchy. Calvinistic teachers will give prominence to the eighth and ninth chapters of the epistle to the Romans, and many other passages which teach election and reprobation, and eternal damnation for a majority of mankind. Orthodox teachers generally will have no trouble in finding chapters which teach total depravity and vicarious atonement. Methodists will have no trouble in finding "free grace and undying love" chapters. Universalists can fairly revel in universal salvation selections, while the Unitarians and Hicksite Quakers will have no difficulty in finding passages going to show that Jesus was a mere man, and not a God. The Bible is very accommodating. You can find authority for anything in it! I knew a very conscientious Trinitarian teacher who told me that she read to her pupils a certain chapter in which occur the words, "There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one." This passage she read over twice every day with emphasis, that her pupils might have no doubt about the trinity. She afterward found out that orthodox scholars admit that that passage is an interpolation, and for this and other reasons she has become a first-class Unitarian, with a strong leaning toward Freethought.

The Bible should not be read in the public schools:

VIII. Because it would not secure the object contemplated.

The difficulty is that the mere reading of the Bible in promiscuous selections teaches neither morality nor religion; it amounts to nothing; it is a "sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal," and this is why the Catholics very wisely object to it, and propose to have parochial schools where they can teach religion. They have a perfect right to do this, so long as they pay for them out of their own pockets, and do not ask the state to furnish the money, not even by asking exemption from just taxation. Let all the sects who want to teach religion do the same thing.

The Bible should not be read in our state schools:

IX. Because it is a violation of the secular principle of the Constitution of the United States, and of the constitutions of the several states, which forbids the teaching of sectarianism at the public expense.

The United States government is a purely secular institution. Everybody knows that, and nobody knows it better than the people who want to put God and Christ and the Bible into the Constitution—which would be absurd if they are already there. Several state courts have decided that sectarianism cannot be taught in our public schools, and that no religious exercises should be held, and that the reading of the Bible is a religious exercise, and that even "without note or comment" the Bible is a sectarian book. The danger is not that holy water and the counting of beads will be introduced into our state schools, or that the Westminster Catechism will become a text-book, but that Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and other sectarians will unite in the hue and cry against "godless schools," and go on organizing parochial or church schools, and ultimately demand a per capita division of the state school funds, and thus cripple, if not entirely destroy, our common school system. This is the main point we should consider; and we have no time to lose. The question is now upon us, and the promise of votes for demagogues already threatens success. Our only safety is in a general amendment of the federal Constitution, so as to make a division of money raised by taxation for educational purposes in the several states impossible.

MR. BENJAMIN R. TUCKER, of Boston, publishes on Saturday, November 20, the first English translation of Claude Tillier's humorous novel, "My Uncle Benjamin," which has won its author, by its realistic satire, the title of "the modern Rabelais." Of this romance it was said by Charles Monselet that "it has no equivalent in the literature of this century," and by Ludwig Pfau that "it combines the spiritual freshness of Gallic presentation with that German humor that laughs through tears, and is in this respect unique in French literature."

"How to Make Marriage a Success" is an instructive work edited by a physician, which may be obtained at this office, post paid, for 80 cents.

On the Trail.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Before leaving Willapa I rode up on the stage eight miles to the home of Jacob Drissler, one of the stockholders in FREETHOUGHT. I found "Shake" in his cosy "old bach" home, one of the finest locations in Pacific county. Mr. Drissler came here many years ago, and, though still a young man, is head and shoulders above want—unless it is want of a wife. He owns many hundred acres of fine farm and timber lands, horses and cattle, town and city property, stocks, cash, etc. I had a most enjoyable time. As I returned I stopped at the house of his brother Philip, four miles further down the river. Philip also is a square-toed freethinker, with a large and splendid ranch; but, like Jake, is dwelling alone, with no kind and loving heart to beat in unison with his own; no gentle fingers to pull his hair; no tongue to lance him through and through. He must fry his own flapjacks or go without. Philip, like Jacob, is only waiting to be asked, when he will come under the yoke, be a true Benedict, and obey the mandate of nature, to "multiply and replenish the earth."

This Willapa Valley contains the finest farms that I have seen in the state. The land is worth eighty to one hundred dollars to the acre, and even more. A railroad is in course of construction: the "Northern Pacific Short Line to the Sea." There is really no winter here—grass is green the year round; the summers are cool, and fruit grows on forever. Timber, coal, and iron are in inexhaustible quantities. Land is high in this valley; but back in the yet impenetrable jungles of the virgin forest

FREETHOUGHT.

"Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm." A "farm" here is no small gift either, for many quarter sections contain from five to ten million feet of the finest timber in the world, pine, fir, spruce, hemlock, etc. These giant woods are full of old bachelors, for there are no roads, and but few women are out in these "wild and woolly" woods.

At Willapa City I met my old friend John, another one of the Drissler family, who completes this radical trinity, for he, like the others, has for his motto, "One world at a time; give us universal mental liberty." John is postmaster and leading merchant of the wide-awake young town, and is on the highway to fortune. This branch of the Drisslers from over the sea, tired of life's lonesomeness, went and committed matrimony, and has an excellent wife and fine boy; so life goes more merry with him.

Bidding all these folks a tramp's farewell—"I will come again"—I boarded the elegant steamer down the river to South Bend. This new town has been laid out only a year, but it extends up and down the river seven or eight miles. The bluffs are high and bold here, and much cutting and grading have to be done. Everything here is being done with a rush, and lots are away up, up, up. Listening to the real estate men here (and every other man is one), you would think South Bend must soon go ahead of San Francisco and Chicago. Fortunes have been made here the last year in buying claims and ranches and cutting them up into city lots. Some of the lots contain timber enough, if sawed into lumber, to fence the ground, build a big house and barn or store, and furnish wood enough to last you for fuel the rest of your life, if you do not live too long. Hundreds of houses are going up in every direction. Boom, boom, boom! is the password, and hammer and saw make the music while the insane dance. These booms, like cyclones, travel all over the country. I was "in 'em" when they were red-hot in Kansas four or five years ago; again I was caught in the same tempest in Southern California three years ago, and staid in each case to see the desolation they left behind them—the mortgaged and then deserted homes, left by thousands who had flirted with the fickle goddess of fortune and lost the hard earnings and economic savings of a lifetime.

I hired Bell's Hall, paid for having it seated, borrowed chandeliers, billed the town, and gave six lectures to good audiences, although it rained hard nearly all the time. No sidewalks or street lamps are here, and mud and slush are without bottom, yet I had good success, and shall long remember the crazy, booming town of South Bend, the supposed-to-be end of the mighty Northern Pacific Railroad, already graded to this city. Two hundred thousand dollars worth of fresh oysters have been spooned up in this harbor the present season, and sold for cash, East and South, and yet millions more are lying on the bottoms of this shallow bay, waiting to be spooned up by oyster farmers now in embryo. There is big money in staking out your claim on the tide mud flats, planting your germs, and then, while you lie around and speculate in "city lots," the little oysters you have sown become big, phat phellows that will bring you two dollars a sack in the city market. Now, man of the "badge pin," if you do throw up your seat in the sanctum sanctorum of FREETHOUGHT, here is the place for you to rear your lonely cabin, stake out your claim for an oyster ranch, and become a bloated capitalist. Oyster "live stock" need no herding—they wont run off; they need no feeding or grooming, not even cultivating; they simply "vegetate" into a good fat pocketbook while you smoke your pipe and dicker in the dirt of these future great trade centers. See your wife about it, and get a move on your corporosity, and you will soon be in the swim.

On to Oysterville by steamer; then on to North Cove, again by steamer; then by stage up the coast to Peterson's Point, twenty miles, riding all the way in the edge of the tremendous breakers that were pounding on the beach as the result of a severe storm at sea. The scene was one never to be forgotten. As far as the eye could reach the usually calm Pacific was a mass of foam caused by the mountain waves that appeared each to outvie the other in its mad leap upon the sandy shore. The earth seemed to tremble in this conflict with the giants hurled up from old Neptune's depths as if to devour the land. Our driver kept along in the water to have hard sand for the team, and often, when a monster wave leaped around us far beyond the others and then rushed back to the arms of the wide-stretched sea, it seemed that we too were afloat, and that nothing could save us from a watery grave. The mighty forests on one side and these foam-capped mountain billows on the other, with the music and roar produced by both, led me to exclaim, "One world at a time! is grand and sublime enough for me." So I never thought to make the old, old prayer, "O Lord, if thou canst but take care of me, let the devil have the rest."

We soon arrived at the steamer landing on Gray's Harbor, and boarded the "Typhoon" for Hoquiam, where we arrived after a tranquil ride over the silvery waters of this most lovely arm of the sea. Hoquiam is another boom town, only the boom is off, and many empty houses and stores are to be seen. Most of the streets are planked a mile long; the rest are filled up with sawdust, for the city is built on tide lands that are sometimes swept by high tides, so the streets, houses and mills are all on stilts, or rather piles driven deep into the soft mud. Electric lights, water-works, three or four immense mills, a $30,000 hotel, and a thousand people make up the warp and woof of the future great Hoquiam. No mud or dirt is ever here; the climate is very mild; there are billions of feet of timber in sight in the dark, over-hanging forests; there is a fine harbor, only ten miles from the ocean; the Hunt railroad "is coming sure" with a splendid class of Eastern people, and ocean steamers will run direct to Portland and San Francisco. Surely the prospects are good.

I rented Chase & Ogden's hall, in which I gave six lectures with good success, although there were Democratic and Republican political meetings addressed by the usual whangdoodle orators, candidates for Senators, and all the way down to county committeemen. Political excitement ran very high here in Washington, for this is the state's first vote as a state, and both parties left nothing undone to win the goal of office. So I found it hard to get the popular ear at all; nobly seemed to care for the science or radical thought of ye "little Altitudinarian," yet the "side show" always gets there some way; so, by patience, success crowned my efforts, and I think I drove at least one nail in the coffin of Orthodoxy, and wish it were the last in both the caskets in which might be buried forever both bodies of corrupt church and state, religion and politics. It is disgusting, this fight over the loaves and fishes, glitter and pelf, crosses and offices of our grand commonwealth.

While at Hoquiam I put up at the Gamage House, which is splendidly kept by Mr. and Mrs. Gardner. It is one of the best hotels on the coast, and always full. It is centrally located, more so than any of the others; is lighted by electricity; very clean and orderly—no bar and no drunken loafers around—and the table is par excellence. Mr. Gardner is a whole-souled Liberal, very progressive, and knows a good thing when he sees it. His wife is a model of neatness and industry, and makes everybody feel at home. All readers of FREETHOUGHT, when on Gray's Harbor, should make their home at the Hotel Gamage.

I find very few towns of less than 2000 people that are so beautifully laid out and well kept; so orderly, and with streets and sidewalks all perfect; no mud, no dust; and the people supplied with electric lights, water-works, telephones, parks, theatres, hotels, lines of steamers, etc. The town is only ten miles from the ocean, and is backed by an almost inexhaustible forest, with the white peaks of the Olympics and Mount Ranier in the not far off distance. Hoquiam is to be the end of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and will, no doubt, grow to be a great city, for the climate, salubrity, soil, scenery, timber, water-privileges, etc., are unexcelled. One can live here a lifetime, and never know what it is to suffer from heat or cold, dust or malaria, and can dream away life's declining years, watching the god of day at its rising over the snow-crested Olympics and its descent into the briny couch of the old Pacific, while the master hand of Nature reflects the golden shades from a sunset-painted sky, where heaven and ocean seem to meet to kiss time and space away.

D. C. SEYMOUR.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS IN TEXAS

A few dates are left vacant along this route. Those who desire lectures for the dates not included in this list will please communicate with S. P. Putnam at El Paso, Texas, where he will be November 30.

El Paso.....	Nov 30	Gainesville.....	Dec 23 24 25
Burnett.....	Dec 3 4 5	Trenton.....	Dec 27 28
Goldthwaite.....	Dec 6 7	Denison.....	Dec 29 30
Norse and Clifton.....	Dec 8 9	Forney.....	Dec 31 and Jan 1 2
Walnut Springs.....	Dec 10 11 12	Reagan and Martin.....	Jan 3 4 5
Stephensville.....	Dec 13 14	Columbus.....	Jan 8 9 10
Alvarado.....	Dec 15 16 17	Flatonia.....	Jan 11 12
Ft. Worth.....	Dec 18 19	San Antonio.....	Jan 13 14 15
Sunset.....	Dec 20 21

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk-paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.

PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; ounce. Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50 fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 1/2 ct. solid gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botches, and don't know as much about "handing" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

SAN FRANCISCO ARBEITER ZEITUNG.

710 WASHINGTON ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

The only organ in the German language on the Pacific Coast that stands for true Nationalism. Subscription price: 3 mos., 60 cts.; 6 mos., $1; 12 mos., $2.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Practical Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, intemperations and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N.J.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

THE MODERN SCIENCE ESSAYIST.

- Herbert Spencer: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. Daniel Greenleaf Thompson.
- Charles Robert Darwin: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. John W. Chadwick.
- Solar and Planetary Evolution: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. Garrett P. Serviss.
- Evolution of the Earth: The story of geology. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
- Evolution of Vegetable Life: How life begins. By Mr. William Potts.
- Evolution of Animal Life: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond.
- The Descent of Man: His origin, antiquity, and growth. By E. D. Cope, Ph.D.
- Evolution of the Mind. By Robert G. Eccles M. D.
- Evolution of Society. By James A. Skilton.
- Evolution of Theology. By Z. Sidney Sampson.
- Evolution of Morals. By Dr. Lewis G. Janes.
- Proofs of Evolution. By Nelson C. Parshall.
- Evolution as Related to Religious Thought. By John W. Chadwick.
- The Philosophy of Evolution; Its relation to prevailing systems. By Starr Hoyt Nichols.
- The Effects of Evolution on the Coming Civilization. By Minot J. Savage.

ANY SIX OF THE ABOVE FOR 50 CENTS.

ALL FOR $1.40.

SINGLE NUMBERS 10 CENTS EACH.

One volume, fine cloth, 408 pages. Illustrated. Complete Index. $2 post-paid.

The whole Evolution Theory clearly set forth in simple popular language by famous writers. Some of the numbers are illustrated. Address FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY.

WIFE WANTED, Unincumbered, not over 40, healthy, fond of music (pianist), sympathetic, and anti-religious, for lone widower of 60, with means. To insure answers address AMERICAN, Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal., giving full description of self.

VOICES OF THE NIGHT.

Do you ever lie awake at night
And think—and think—and think
Of a hundred thousand foolish things
Which "gong" round" midnight's brink?
And do you at the same time hear
The hollow, gurgling—gurg—
Of your stationary washstand,
Like a bungling burglar's burg—
While the latticed window shutters flap
The sashes (full of pane):
And the myriad voices of the night
Talk nonsense at your brain?
You don't? I do

And the ghostly, grewsome, groaning
And the melancholy strain,
Of that measly, mourning, moaning,
Gurgling, guzzling water main,
Wrap an eerie, iree, ickery, filiacy,
Follacy sort of sound
In the meshes of the midnight,
Which entwine me round and round
My flesh creeps all in heaps,
Finally sleeps;
While the melancholy moaning,
And the hungry, hollow groaning
Of the stand,
Keep my slumbrous soul a-soaring
Up and down a raging, roaring
Nightmare land.
—"Joe" Kerr in Chicago Mail.

Violent Exercise.

Athletic Girl—Do you know, I think an hour in a rowboat before breakfast is delightful. It gives you such an appetite.
Mr. Slimly—Yes, indeed, and it makes one so stwong.
Athletic Girl—Oh, you row then, Mr. Slimly?
Mr. Slimly—N-No, I steer.—Exchange.

Very Unfeeling.

Dashley—Miss Tarpon is the most unfeeling girl I ever met with.
Wigler—How so?
Dashley—Why, last night she refused me, and I said I'd cut my throat.
Wigler—Yes.
Dashley—And she offered to lend me her father's razor.—Sun and Voice.

What City Girls Miss.

Modern Miss (wearily)—Life doesn't seem worth living, aunty.
Aunty—I don't wonder, stuck up here in a stuffy flat. What a girl of your age ought to have is a nice little flower garden and a good, strong, old fashioned front gate.—Street & Smith's Good News.

A Shrewd Woman.

Mrs. Wicketts—Don't you object to your husband betting on the races?
Mrs. Picketts—Oh, no, I have an agent on the field who takes up all my husband's bets. I have almost made my fortune out of him.—Munsey's Weekly.

A Theory on Rain.

"Where does the rain come from, papa?" asked Willie.
"I judge, my son," replied the old man, "that if things celestial are like things mundane, it comes from the milky way."
—New York Herald.

The Worm Will Turn.

Badgering Attorney—Insanity runs in your family, I believe.
Long Suffering Witness—Well, my grandfather quit gathering rags to become a lawyer.—New York Sun.

A Base Slander.

Teacher—Now, can any one of the pupils tell me what is meant by the nave of the church?
Bright Boy—The man who takes up the collection.—America.

Probably Not.

Johnson—Did you know that John L. Sullivan is only 32 years old? I am surprised.

Jackson—I don't doubt it. I wouldn't doubt it if he were to tell me so himself.—Lowell Citizen.

Something of a Lie.

She—Isn't Dr. Anderson very absent minded?

He—Yes. That's why he never married. He went to kiss his sweetheart's hand once and vaccinated her instead.—Judge.

Supplying a Demand.

Customer—I want to get a three dollar shirt for $1.50.

Proprietor—Yes, sir. (Aside to clerk) James, show this man some of our $1.50 shirts for $3.—Clothier and Furnisher.

Comfort.

Gus (reflectively)—So poor Will is gone! Well, the good die young!

Harry—Cheer up, old fellow! Never mind about that. You're destined to live a long while yet.—Lowell Citizen.

A Truth Uttered.

Son—But accidents will happen, father, in the best regulated families.

Father—That's all right, but I want you to understand that mine is not one of the best regulated families.—Judge.

An Impertinent Question.

"That's as true as I live," said the stock broker to a customer.

"Yes, but how true do you live?" the customer suspiciously inquired. —Somerville Journal.

An Affectionate Spouse.

She—I say, pet, what calamity would give you the most pain?

He—As I idolize my wife, I should most of all regret her being left a widow.—Yenowine's News.

Oscar's Judgment.

"Oscar Wilde intimated in his last novel that women were fools."

"I guess Oscar's right. I understand one of them married him."—Munsey's Weekly.

The Limit.

Daughter—Why is it, ma, that a honeymoon is supposed to last only three months?

Ma—At the end of three months the quarterly bills come in.—New York Weekly.

This Is an Optical Joke Only.

"Miss Henderson laughs just like a man."

"Too bad. I hate a woman who is guilty of manslaughter."—New York Sun.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of catarrh that cannot be cured by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions, and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo O.

WALDEN, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all druggists, 4614

The Humboldt Library

—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts.

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
8. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
7. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry
12. Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
13. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
14. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion
15. Longevity. Prolonging life. John Gardner, M.D.
16. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
18. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
20. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kalley Miller.
21. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
22. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
23. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
24. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
25. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
26. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
27. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
28. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
30. The Study of Words.
31. Richard Chenevix Trench.
32. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R. A. Proctor.
33. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
34. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
35. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
36. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
37. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
38. Geological Sketches.
39. Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
40. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
41. Current Discussions in Science. W. M. Williams.
42. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
43. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
44. The Dawn of History.
45. C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
46. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
47. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
48. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
49. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
50. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange.
51. Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
52. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
53. Animal Automatism. Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
54. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
55. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
56. Illusions.
57. James Sully.
58. The Origin of Species. Two Double Numbers.
59. Charles Darwin. 30 cts each.
60. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
61. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
62. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number. 30 cts.
63. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, I.L.D.
64. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
65. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
66. Technical Education, Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
67. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
68. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
69. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
70. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencer.
71. Archæology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
72. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
73. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
74. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
77. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
79. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
80. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
81. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
82. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
83. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
84. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
85. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
86. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
87. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
88. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson.
89. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
90. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
91. The Rise of Universities, (double No.) S.S. Laurie.
92. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms, (db) No. Chas. Darwin

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T. H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haeckel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cts.)
109. English, Past and Present, Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life, Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism: A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Laing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whymper Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No. 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Ritchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

TRAVELING ALONE
A WOMAN'S JOURNEY
AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

(Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Price, by mail, 30 cents.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Sparcements may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

RUPTURE

In advertising Dr. PIERCE'S Patent MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS, the assurance is given that we are offering the Best Truss in the World. This Celebrated Appliance has been extensively sold for many years and has

Radically Cured thousands of cases of Rupture! This is an Electric Truss (the only successful one ever invented); has no Iron Hoops or Steel Springs about it, and being elastic, can be worn with ease and comfort Night and Day. It's a perfect retainer! For further particulars of Truss, send 4c. in stamps for Pamphlet No. 1 and REMEMBER that Dr. Pierce's Genuine Electric Trusses contain our Private Signature exactly like that shown at top of this advertisement. Beware of inferior imitations!

Address: MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COMPANY, 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,

Hygienic Physician.

Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,

Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.

HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m.

25tf

Health AND Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M.L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M.L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy. $1.

Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.50.

Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook. $1.

Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer. $1

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook. $1.

Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M.A. Ciccolina. Ills. 50.

Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook. $1.

Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F.R.C.S. 50 cents

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS & TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.

Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.

God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.

Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.

Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.

Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.

The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.

Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.

The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.

OLIVER HINCKLEY - SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED

CURES

Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung

DISEASES

By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen.

Positive cure for Cancer.

26t37 410 Eddy st., S. F.

A HAND-BOOK

OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS, 15 cents.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERY.

Located Eight Miles South of San Jacinto, Cal.

P. A. CLARK, PROPRIETOR.

A full stock of everything in the Nursery line on hand.

APPLES, PEACHES,
PEARS, PLUMS,
APRICOTS, NECTARINES,
PRUNES, ALMONDS,
WALNUTS, QUINCES, ETC.

IN ALL VARIETIES.

A fine lot of Kelsey's Japan Plums, one and two years old.

Send for price list and buy where you can get trees at living rates.

P. A. CLARK, San Jacinto, Cal.

W. M. HINTON & CO. PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS, 536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Franc

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against

LIBERTY,

By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo. 399pp., $1.50.

Freethought Publishing Co.,

838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

PRINTING!

The Freethought Publishing Company is prepared to do first-class

JOB PRINTING,

Especially such work as

Letter-heads,

Bill-heads,

Programmes,

Envelopes,

Business Cards,

Postal Cards,

Tickets,

Placards,

Receipts,

Posters,

Dodgers,

Circulars,

Etc. etc

Orders taken for any kind of printing, from a one-line card to a newspaper, and estimates made on book work.

COUNTRY ORDERS SOLICITED.

THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

J A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

Price, 50 c. Address Freethought,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, 10 Cents.

Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

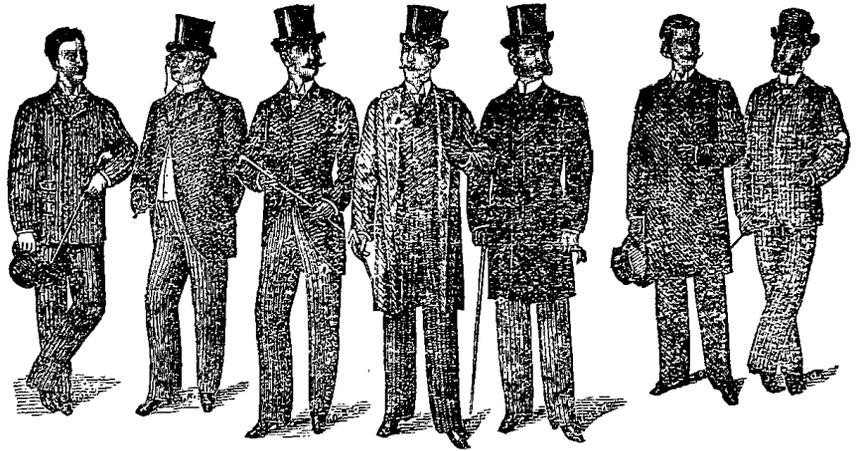

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR.....$25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR.....35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR.....6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.
TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."

339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1.
Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR.

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
Six Months......75
Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin.....$ 4 0
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 0
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 75
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 00
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond" 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address, Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

Don't write to me when taking the first bottle of my Medical Discovery. I know how it makes you feel, but it's all right. There are certain cases where the Discovery takes hold sharp, but it is the diseased spot in you it has taken hold of, and that's what you want. The Discovery has a search warrant for every humor, from backache to scrofula, inside and outside, and of course it makes a disturbance in your poor body, but the fight is short, you are better by the second bottle; if not, then tell me about it, and I will advise. I will, however, in the future, as in the past, answer any letter from a nursing mother.

Sincerely yours,

DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Apothecary.

Geo. H. Fowler, drugs, medicines, chemicals, toilet articles, etc. 13th ave and East 14th street, East Oakland, Cal.

Boot and Shoemaker.

C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Masou st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Nurseryman.

R. H. Foster, Babylon, N. Y.

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1236 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Real Estate.

Geo. H. Gale, Port Angeles, Wash.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st. Rapp & DeBarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st. The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny s

ORIGINAL

BROWNSVILLE

WOOLEN MILLS

CLOTHING STORE.

164 and 166 Second Street,

Near corner of Morrison,

The Best Goods in the Country

PORTLAND, OR. W. R. BISHOP, AGT.

Call, or send orders and measure.

A Use for Everything.

Mrs. Slimpurse—What do you think of that? Real Axminster carpet; got it for most nothing at a big fire sale; damaged by smoke and water and burned a little, but awfully cheap.

Miss Slimpurse—Why, ma, this is so badly damaged it can't be used at all. Even the good parts are moth eaten and would soon go to pieces.

Mrs. Slimpurse—It isn't to be used, my dear. It's to hang outside at housecleaning time.—Street & Smith's Good News.

Forgot Himself.

Father—My son, I don't wish you to be out so late nights. Why, when I was a boy my father made me go to bed at 9 o'clock.

Harry—Humph! He was a nice kind of a father, wasn't he?

Father (irately)—You rascal! He was a good deal better than yours, anyway.—Journal of Education.

Badly Out of It.

Reporter—Can I see Mrs. B.?

Servant—She's out, sir.

Reporter—One of the family, then?

Servant—All out, sir.

Reporter—Well, wasn't there a fire here last night?

Servant—Yes; but that's out, too.—New York Herald.

Overheard.

Absent Minded Party—Hullo, Barkins! How's Mrs. Barkins?

Barkins—Not very well. She's been ill all summer.

A. M. P.—I'm very sorry to hear that. And how is Mrs. Barkins?—New York Sun.

New Burglar Alarm.

Wife (suddenly awakening)—Hark! Horrors! What's the matter? Fido is 'way down stairs, yelping as if he were hurt. What's happened to the little dear?

Husband—I threw him at a burglar.—New York Weekly.

The Distinction.

"Papa, is a chef a cook?"

"Oh no, my boy."

"What's the difference?"

"About forty dollars a month."—Munsey's Weekly.

At the Factory—A Paradox.

Customer—Is the manager in? I want to buy some doors.

Boy—Yes, he's in, but he's out of doors.—New York Herald.

Read the Newspapers.

Guest—Is that thunder I hear?

Waiter—No; I guess not, boss. It's one of dem weather reports.—Judge.

What They Have to Bear in a Flat.

Mrs. Redding (laughingly ill at ease)—Why, Butler, dearest, this is an intrusion. Little But—Mamma, mayn't I take a bath? You know I need it.—Once a Week.

PROFESSION OF FAITH

OF A SAVOYARD VICAR.

—BY—

J. J. ROUSSEAU.

The above volume includes "A Search for Truth," by Ralph Iron (Olive Schreiner).

Cloth, 50 cents. Paper, 25 cents.

Address The Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTIANITY * * *

—AND—

* * * AGNOSTICISM.

A CONTROVERSY

Consisting of papers by

Prof. Thomas Huxley, Rev. Henry Wace, The Bishop of Peterborough

W. H. Mallock, Mrs. Humphrey Ward. Price, 30 cents.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co. 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—

EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women—causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St.
San Francisco.
Watches Cleaned
& Warranted, $1

Watch Glasses 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 401F

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills.
414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Vol. III—No. 49.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 188

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - DECEMBER 6, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Perris has an improved look since I was here last. A new school house has been built, and in the school house the lecture was given. A larger audience was present than before. Evidently Freethought is in the air. Perris, in the midst of a beautiful valley, has a bright look ahead. There are gold mines near by, and these have quite a promise for the future. The harvests this year have been plentiful and show what the land can do. The soil is pretty near thirty feet deep and, with irrigation, can produce almost all kinds of fruit.

I found my veteran friend, R. A. Reed. He is a rustler for Freethought. He arranged for the lecture, and advertised it all over the valley. He was struck with paralysis a few years ago, and has had a hard fight with fortune, but he doesn't give up doing his level best.

J. A. Perou, G. F. Hook, J. B. Doran, J. Herbert, H. Pound, and others, are on the roll of Freethought here. I enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Reynolds, who bring two and three generations into the ranks of Freethought, and are not so very old either. Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Reynolds furnished music for the occasion. J. M. Hartley, of San Diego, came ten miles out of his way to put in an appearance. He acted as chairman of the meeting. It was a pleasant gathering all round. There is manifest advancement.

Reed left me his little horse, Topsy, for a drive out, Thursday morning, to the ranch of A. L. Reynolds. Topsy is a nice animal, and has not the slightest inclination to an orthodox trot. She goes right along in gay fashion, and seems to enjoy getting over the ground. The day was simply splendid. California weather never put on a more lovely aspect. It was an entrancing picture that glittered on every side—the encircling mountains blue and gorgeous, the foothills, in every variety of undulating and rugged forms, softened in the shining atmosphere, the valley whose surface was like a carpet as it outspread in the dazzling splendor.

A. L. Reynolds has quite a mansion out on the plains, with a veranda all around it so that one can sit in the shade and gaze in every direction upon the vast sceneries. Mrs. Reynolds is one of the workers of this planet, and can do a man's chores, and a woman's too, with equal vivacity. I found a comfortable sojourn here, and the afternoon was gaily spent. In the mellow evening the double team was harnessed and away we went, in the mingling sunset and moonlight, around the glimmering hills to Leon. Leon consists of a postoffice and the school house, a mile away. E. L. Plath is the postmaster. The little school house was pretty well filled, and about all who were present listened for the first time to a Freethought lecture, and, so far as I can judge, it was unanimously decided that the ideas presented were not only new but true. I was pleased to meet with Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Gill, of Elsinore, who are on the roll of Freethought. After the lecture most of the audience adjourned to the house of E. L. Plath, and there was a dance, until about twelve o'clock, to the merry strains furnished by the nimble fingers of Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds. Old folks, young folks, and the babies all enjoyed the entertainment. Leon is an out-of-the-way place, off the railroad, but the shadows of orthodoxy don't linger much in the minds of the dwellers. There are one or two "holiness" people here, and one family who claim that God comes to see them every day, and they "talk" with him, but seeing that the coyotes still devour their substance, and the rabbits and gophers destroy the crops, I guess they will dispense with this "visiting God" after a while, and depend upon something more tangible. At least, the rising generation doesn't put any trust in this deity.

At midnight we get into the wagon again and take a ten mile ride, through the moonbeams on the mountain's brow, to Reynolds's, where a good supper is prepared, and then we sleep until long after the sun is up and on his way to the mid heavens.

Another splendid day, and little Topsy takes Reed and myself over to Winchester and Diamond valley. At Winchester it is suggested that arrangements be made for a lecture there, and the thing is done. Winchester is quite an orthodox place, but there is some curiosity to know what Freethought is. Hence the venture.

Along in the afternoon we strike Diamond Valley, and the home of P. A. Clark, around whose handsome dwelling, built since I was here, trees of every description do flourish. These are the Diamond Valley Nurseries whose advertisement ornaments the pages of FREETHOUGHT. A little baby, Mabel, has been born into the sunshine of this Liberal home since I was here. Another has gone into the shadow. So the waves of life come and go, now "lending splendor, now reflecting gloom."

There is always a generous welcome for the Pilgrim here. On Saturday morning, in the still brilliant sunshine, we go to San Jacinto. Old Baldy greets us, and the San Bernardino mountains, and the San Jacinto range, in whose bosom are stored millions of gallons of water that will one day make these valleys bloom with wondrous harvests and glittering fruits.

D. W. Perkins is found at his post as usual, and all things are arranged for lectures on Saturday and Sunday evenings, at Henry's hall. This is quite a pretty and convenient hall, quite an improvement on what we have had to use before, and it was well filled on both evenings: Some of our former Liberals, I am sorry to say, have joined the church, and this is one of those things that I cannot understand; but fashion, popularity, and the way of the world are very powerful motives even with those who are not in conviction with the orthodox faith. However, there is growth as well as reaction. Advance in Liberal thought is apparent.

The San Jacinto and neighboring valleys have not yet been developed, but there is no reason why this should not be one of the wealthiest portions of California. It has great advantages, plenty of wood and water: Along the San Jacinto range immense reservoirs are being built, which will irrigate vast tracts of land. There is wood and lumber enough to supply Southern California for years.

Sunday morning, with D. W. Perkins, I went over to Florida, which is a little town started by the Florida Improvement Company, and has a fine outlook. Its site is about two hundred feet above that of San Jacinto. Oranges, lemons, figs, and all the fruits of Southern California can be produced here. There is an unlimited supply of water from the mountains. I was pleased to meet with Mr. M. G. Stone and Mr. Prince, of the Florida Hotel, who are Liberal-minded gentlemen. It looks as if Florida would compete with Riverside one of these days. Although there is a church here I guess Liberalism will flourish. I did not find much of an orthodox atmosphere amidst the fruits and flowers. It is expected that a colony of three hundred Dunkards will locate near. The Dunkards are good workers, even if they do stick to the Bible, and will probably help to make a paradise here much superior to Adam's.

Sunday afternoon I passed with Dr. and Mrs. B. A. Wright. The doctor is an old-time Freethinker of varied experience. About fifty years ago he was a student in Oberlin College under the ministrations of the famous Dr. Finney, who was one of the smartest and most bigoted men in the orthodox church. He could wield the horrors of hell-fire with the skill of a practiced attorney. A more cruel man never lived, but it was the cruelty of his creed—an awful creed enough to make any man a savage. It was deeply interesting to go back to these old times, and see what a wonderful advance has been made. In the light of today we can scarcely conceive of the stern barbarism of half a century ago. Finney was simply an educated savage. My friend, Dr. Wright, is full of reminiscences, and the afternoon and evening hours, until the lecture, were intermingled with the sombre imaginations of the past, which seem so remote to modern life. Dr. Wright is a thorough student of hypnotism and has had some marvelous experiences, but he thinks that all the phenomena are purely material, to be explained by material laws and forces.

I was pleased to meet again with the Demings, who are "true blue." Miss Martha Deming favored us with music at the lectures. Mr. Deming, the father, has died since I was here. No man was ever more ready to help those who needed help, or was more generous in the support of Freethought. He was one of the representative men of the community, and his noble deeds will not soon be forgotten.

John Vernon and W. D. Clarke don't change any more than the mountains that front the morning sky. They are always ready to do their part. Judge Wm. M. Vawter is a Freethinker on the square, and was unanimously elected to his position by all parties. McCarroll is about the best posted Infidel in the scriptures that I ever met. He knocks the Christians out with his learned and unique interpretations.

G. W. Thurston, Jr., I guess is a chip of the old block—Freethought to the backbone. Mrs. Thurston and the little baby are also on the broad path to heaven here and now. They send greetings to the original G. W. And Miss Artie Thurston, too, the daughter, who was present.

E. J. Scott and B. J. Inwall are staunch supporters of the cause. James Ryan, John Ryan, and others are ready to be counted. So I find that Freethought is not in the background at San Jacinto, although there has been a big revival the last season.

On Monday I go over to Diamond Valley and give a lecture at the house of P. A. Clark. We are shut out of the schoolhouse now; but the churches are in the same boat. The Christians were scandalized because there was a dance in the schoolhouse. They proposed to forbid such desecration; but the boomerang which they started for this purpose hit them square on the head. The district, after some discussion, voted to exclude everything outside of school affairs. This threw out the Sunday-school and the religious meetings of the churches. The Christians wanted to compromise, and let the dance go on, when they saw the drift of affairs; but it was too late—they had cut off their own heads in attacking the heels of the heretics.

Miss Bonnie Reed and Cal Reed, from Myrtle Point, Oregon, furnished music for our fireside meeting. Chris Lehnerr, their grandfather, was the first one to greet me when I entered Myrtle Point on horseback, about four years ago. He was always a staunch Freethinker, and it was a pleasure to greet his descendants in this valley, and to receive their aid in the Liberal cause. They were assisted by Henry Stewart, who is about to become a resident of Coos county. After the lecture one or two of our orthodox friends and Mr. Pickering put in a few questions upon the subject of the lecture, namely, the Bible. Mr. Pickering is of the Latter Day Saints, of the Joe Smith order, and is pretty near as great a heretic as myself; for he doesn't believe in total depravity, vicarious atonement, or eternal hell. He simply believes in the Bible. I think, however, he is drifting out. He isn't far from the republic of Liberalism. On the whole, the conference was quite interesting, and pretty near an hour was spent in making points pro and con. This parlor meeting was quite a cheerful affair, and the rays of Reason's torch will still flash in Diamond Valley.

On Tuesday I had the pleasure of taking dinner with Mr. Amos Reeves and family in honor of his birthday. Although he was my staunch opponent on the previous evening in behalf of orthodoxy, we met in the most amicable spirit around the festive board, and I hope that our friend will have many a return of the happy occasion. I shall not wish for him a harp or wings, but a long life.

So, with bright memories, I leave Diamond Valley, which is destined to be one of the garden spots of the world. Cal Reed took me over to Winchester, and a good crowd was present at the lecture, mainly through the efforts of my comrade, who had stirred up even the Christians to come and see the Infidel and hear both sides. I am under great obligation to him for this service. It was thought impossible for any Freethought lecture to be given at this place; but the venture was a success, and I shall try it again.

After the lecture, in the moonlight—all the valley flooded with splendor—behind little Topsy, R. A. Reed and myself pursue our way to the Reynolds mansion. Our little mare goes like a streak of lightning, especially when anybody tries to pass. Topsy don't allow it. She won't take anybody's dust. We wake the Reynolds out of a sound sleep, and soon the fire is blazing, and the teapot is on the stove. We take a midnight lunch.

In the morning, the hills still shining in the blue distance, we take our way to Perris. Our week's work was delightful. The weather was cloudless and beautiful. We had our own steed, Topsy, and traveled at our leisure. We found plenty of friends, good audiences, and promise for the days to come. Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Crane, E. H. Eddy, A. E. Colby, Arthur Beardsley, Geo. McDaniel, G. W. Brown, Charles G. Darby are among the friends of this week's campaign.

Orthodoxy has some queer streaks at Perris. A young lady, respected by all the community, recently died, and the funeral services were held at the church, which was crowded. After the sermon the officiating clergyman took up a collection! I must confess that is the first time I ever heard of a collection being taken up at a funeral. The cheek of that minister is too much even for death itself. Not only do the orthodox make money out of funerals, but out of dances also. Extremes meet. The preacher wanted money. The boys said, "Get up a dance, and you shall have the proceeds." The offer was accepted, and what is more, our Infidel friends, the Reynolds, were asked to give the music free. California piety is a good deal like a "Methodist hammer." (A two-faced hammer in the old country, is called a Methodist hammer.) California piety looks both ways for money—to a funeral and to a dance. They are bound to take the "whole hog," and coin money out of laughter and tears.

But the bright waves of Freethought mingle with the dark tides of orthodoxy. The sunlight and moonlight, the brilliant hills and vales, and hundreds of good friends make these gleaming scenes the gateways of hope.

From Perris, Wednesday, I come on to San Bernardino and shake hands with Remsburg, who closes his brilliant campaign in California, and together we go to Texas. San Bernardino, however, is about the most unlucky place in the world for Freethought. It would take an angel's trumpet to arouse the indifferent Liberals. Still we hope for progress. At San Diego there was a royal welcome. Nearly a thousand were present at Remsburg's lecture, and that shows that the heart of California still beats true.

On Thursday, Remsburg and I have a "red-letter" day, a day of sunshine and glory, with paradise on every hand. Wm. McDonald, of San Bernardino, a staunch Freethinker who would stand all alone if need be for the colors, a pioneer of the coast, takes us with his swift span of horses over to Riverside, through the orange groves, resplendent in the glorious morning. At Riverside, we meet with another staunch Liberal, C. N. Ross, and he has his team ready and gives us a thirty-mile ride over the magnificent country, through Palm avenue, and Magnolia avenue, and other beautiful and shady highways that stretch into the distance like the long colonnades of some immense palace. It is wonderful what these lands produce under the magic touch of water. A few years ago, McDonald says he wouldn't have given five cents an acre for it, and I guess that was the universal opinion, but to-day they are worth from fifteen hundred to two thousand and twenty-five hundred dollars an acre. There are 6000 acres under cultivation about Riverside, and these have produced to the value of a million and a half dollars this year. One grove of twenty-six acres sold ten thousand dollars' worth of oranges. One tree produced twenty-six boxes; boxes sell for $2 each. This makes nearly $50 from one tree, more than an acre of grain can give. As Remsburg says, this is paradise, a heaven on earth. Ten acres of oranges make a nice fortune and a delightful home, as prices now are, and that is better than all the harps in the universe. Of course there are drawbacks; the scale-bug will come, and the "norther" will blow, and the rains will come and spoil things. Ross lost $4500, just by a few showers when his raisin grapes were drying. To-day, however, was as beautiful as summer's glory. The green trees, thousands of them gemmed with millions of oranges, stretched away to the gray and rocky hills, and in their midst were elegant homes—splendid residences. It was a picture of prosperity. This delightful day spent with our generous friends will not soon be forgotten. All the disappointments of the work leave no trace after such an experience. McDonald in the afternoon brings us back to Colton, and from here I go on to Phoenix, Arizona, and Remsburg to Albuquerque, New Mexico.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

"AROUND THE WORLD" AS A PREMIUM.

We are offering as a premium to subscribers to FREETHOUGHT for 1891 "A Woman's Journey Around the World," by Lillian Leland. The book is handsomely bound in cloth, and in that form has heretofore sold at one dollar per copy. We have considered it advisable to furnish no more copies in paper covers at 30 cents—first, because the form is not durable, and second, because there is not a legitimate profit in handling it at that price. Hereafter it will be furnished in cloth covers at 75 cents.

The book makes a splendid premium with FREETHOUGHT, and we invite all to take advantage of the offer. "A Woman's Journey" contains upwards of 350 pages, and, as the Boston "Herald" observes, "it is little short of disgraceful that the condition of the book trade in the United States should necessitate its appearance in paper covers."

On another page will be found a few out of the many well-deserved notices the book has received from the leading journals of the country. As above stated, we offer "A Woman's Journey" as a premium to new subscribers; but any of our present subscribers who desire it may obtain a copy as a premium by renewing between the present time and January 15, 1891. We make this proposition because we need the money to square our accounts at the beginning of the New Year, and because those who stay with us year after year are as deserving of recognition in this way as are new and untried friends.

Please renew at once and receive this valuable premium.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT IN ARIZONA.

Arizona journalism must not be judged by the few extracts from the "Arizona Kicker" that find their way out of the wilderness through the Detroit "Free Press." The real thing is vastly different, as will be seen from the appended editorial published in the "Arizona Gazette."

"We believe that it is a privilege that is given to all, to think as they wish, but we have always noticed that when those Freethinkers are stretched upon the bed of death, when nearing that other shore, the thoughts of God and a hereafter comes vividly before their fading vision—it is no use neighbor, as long as cultivations' winsome glow casts its shadow across this world of ours, as long as love kisses the lips of death and with throbbing heart and tear-dimmed eyes lay their loved ones to rest, just so long will the human heart turn with love and hope to that home beyond the tomb."

Aside from its deep religious breathing, the foregoing extract unfolds many poetical and grammatical beauties. The assertion that "thoughts comes" must strike the reader at once as a rare specimen. "Cultivations' winsome glow" is too full of pathos to be lightly reprinted, while the shadow of the glow could be equalled only by the glow of the shadow. Love laying "their" loved ones to rest, while the cardiac muscle swells with love, etc., would "melt the heart of a stone," as Anthony Comstock once tearfully expressed himself.

In a country like Arizona, where the petulant pop of the pistol is so frequent in the sanctum, editors are perhaps excusable for turning their hearts toward the home beyond Tombstone before turning their toes toward the daisies.

AUTHORSHIP OF THE GOLDEN RULE.

An Oregon correspondent desires to know who it was that enunciated the Golden Rule hundreds of years before the beginning of the Christian era. According to history, there were many such. Among them Confucius is the most conspicuous, and our correspondent's reverend friend is quite in error when he declares that Confucius gave the precept altogether in a negative form. Tindal, in his "Christianity as Old as the Creation," gives the rule in this form and credits it to the Chinese philosopher:

"Love your neighbor as yourself. Do to another what you would that he should do unto you; and do not unto another what you would should not be done unto you: thou only needest this law alone, it is the foundation and principle of all the rest."

Tindal called himself a "Christian Deist," and he sought to prove from the antiquity of Christian doctrine, that the religion of Jesus Christ began at the beginning of the world, and he succeeded in showing that Christianity was a borrowed system. The Oregon clergyman is respectfully referred to Matthew Tindal, B. A. (1657-1733).

Another author of the Golden Rule was Man (see Williams' "Indian Wisdom," p. 215), who wrote in the sixth century before Christ, and who put it thus:

"Treat others as thou wouldst be treated; Do nothing to thy neighbor which hereafter thou wouldst not have thy neighbor do to thee."

The Rule is likewise credited to Aristotle, 385 B.C.; to Pittacus, 650 B.C.; to Thales, 464 B.C.; to Isocrates, 338 B.C.; to Aristippus, 365 B.C.; to Sextus, 406 B.C.; and to Hillel, 50 B.C. In fact Moses, who the Oregon clergyman thinks taught the Golden Rule to Confucius, appears to be about the only ancient writer of any distinction who did not employ it as a moral guide. The doctrine of Moses was an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth; blood for blood. The Golden Rule was too much like Sunday-school literature to suit a man of his judicial nature.

The distinction between the negative and positive forms of the Golden Rule is favorable to the former, which sets forth the doctrine of minding one's own business. It is not always good sense or good manners to do unto another what you might like to have him do to you, because tastes differ, and what would be pleasing to you might be distasteful to him; but all trouble may be avoided by refraining from doing, without invitation or consent, anything that may be disagreeable to yourself or to the object of your attentions. Nine times out of ten a let-alone policy is productive of the happiest results.

There should be no difficulty experienced in proving to any clergyman that the Golden Rule is older than Christ or even Moses. It is the doctrine of fair play, and must have suggested itself to the first man who discovered that order was promoted by forbearing to invade other men's rights. The Oregon parson is, we believe, the only distinguished scholar who holds that Christ was the originator of the Golden Rule.

THE TRUTH OF HISTORY.

Colonel Ingersoll publishes the following card in the Chicago "Inter-Ocean:"

"A clipping was shown me to-day from your paper, in which it is stated:

"1. That ten years ago I made a prediction that ten years from that time two theatres would be built for one church; and

"2. That Chaplain McCabe had written me a letter calling my attention to the prediction, and stating that the Methodists were building four churches a day.

"There are two mistakes in this article: First, I never made the prediction; and second, I never received any letter from Chaplain McCabe on the subject. With these exceptions the article is correct.

"R. G. INGERSOLL."

AN ILLUSTRATED LECTURE.

A lecture on "Egypt," by Herbert Miller, M.A., with stereopticon illustrations by Partridge, is announced for Tuesday evening, December 9, at Pioneer Hall. Admission 50 cents.

Professor Miller is well known to San Francisco Liberals. He is one of the lecturers that we take pride in, and there is no doubt that those who go to hear him next Tuesday evening will do themselves a favor as well as encourage the speaker. Tickets are for sale at Sherman, Clay & Co.'s music store, 137-139 Kearny street.

THE FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

A sociable and dance will be given by the Freethought Society at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, on the evening of Sunday, December 7. Admission for gentlemen, 25 cents; ladies free.

C. R. BENNETT, Anthony Comstock's Pacific Coast agent, is worthy of his chief. In a case before Police Department No. 2 the other day, in which Bennett appeared to be interested, Prosecuting Attorney Mott declared that he would not serve as prosecutor if Bennett was to be allowed in court while other witnesses were excluded. Mr. Mott said to the judge: "I would not believe him under oath. I believe that your Honor, as well as another judge, has expressed similar opinions concerning this person. I do not think he should be allowed to remain in court during the investigation." The prosecutor remained firm in his determination not to conduct a case for Bennett, and the case was continued until other counsel could be appointed. Mr. Mott afterwards said: "I objected to Mr. Bennett because he has been proven to be a man who cannot be believed under oath. Several years ago he arrested a Chinaman and had his case assigned to Department 1. The bail was fixed at $100. Then he appeared in Department 2 and asked that the bail be fixed at $50. Judge Lawler fined him $100 for contempt of court. I think that should be enough to convince any one as to his character."

This item has appeared in several of the papers:

"Colonel Ingersoll," says one of his friends, "keenly realizes the fact that he can never have a career in politics, legislature, statesmanship, and can never hold any important office under the government for which he fought. There is no party that would dare to put up the speech-making Infidel for office, or that would vote for him in any office, and he knows it. Do you suppose he could be nominated or elected as governor, or congressman, or alderman? All the powers of society would be turned against him if he were put up, as he knows. There are other Infidels in office, but no one who has made his Infidelity conspicuous. Ingersoll could not get a thousand votes in New York, and he knows it."

We do not suppose that Ingersoll really wants any office. The place he has won by his genius is higher than any within the gift of the suffrage, but it is nonsense to say he could not get a thousand votes in New York. If nominated by the party to which he belongs, the Republican, he would doubtless run behind his ticket on account of his known opposition to religious jobbery; nevertheless he would poll a large vote. Freethinkers would like a man in the national legislature, and were congressmen chosen to represent the people instead of a state or district, Colonel Ingersoll could be elected as a representative of Freethinkers the country over by more votes than are now required to place a man in that office. While people vote for candidates to represent their locality instead of their sentiments there will be small chance for Colonel Ingersoll or any other Freethinker to be elected.

SOME of our acquaintances in San Francisco have been drawn into a land swindle in Oregon in a way that would be amusing if it were not so expensive. A few sharpers having an office in this city and an agency at Roseburg, Or., advertised quietly that there were some valuable timber claims in Douglas county which could be taken up at an expense of about $2.50 per acre, and that the timber would be bought by a syndicate at a figure highly profitable to the settler. People who took the bait went to Roseburg and were shown claims covered thickly with magnificent trees that must scale from ten thousand to twenty thousand feet of lumber each, and were told that these were the claims upon which they would be permitted to file. They therefore returned elated with the prospect, but upon investigation and a comparison of notes it transpires that dozens of people were shown the same beautiful piece of timber, while the land they actually filed upon is in a burnt district covered with stumps. One or two parties discovered the fraud in time to reclaim their money, but the majority are total losers. The swindlers, who operated under a high-sounding title, have left for distant parts.

ONE of the students in a theological seminary in Pennsylvania writes FREETHOUGHT as follows under date of November 27:

"This being Thanksgiving day I hereby render my sincere thanks for your kindness in having sent me FREETHOUGHT. It has had its regular place in our reading-room, so I am not the only one who has been benefited. We are at present over thirty students, and you would be surprised if you should learn that quite a number are regular outspoken Radicals. I do what I can to hasten the steps of progress, but we need FREETHOUGHT here if you can afford to send it. It will be good for the cause and will make us see the justice of the Nine Demands."

We cannot really afford to send this paper free, even to a theological student, as we make no special rates to the clergy; but if the students are unable to pay for it, perhaps some subscriber with a missionary spirit will advance the $2. All theological students should read FREETHOUGHT.

PRESIDENT HARRISON'S message to Congress appeared in print last Monday. After perusing it the reader can only wonder how any man could write so much and say so little. It is throughout a plea for an extension of the Socialistic features of our government; which, as everybody knows, multiply fast enough without encouragement. The president mentions without adverse comment, the "increasing business of our government," so it appears that with us as with the governments condemned by Thomas Paine, "the expenses of them increase in the proportion they ought to diminish." The money drawn from the people by the government during the past year, says Mr. Harrison, amounts to $450,000,000—which is about $7 for every man, woman, and child in the country, or $35 for every voter. It is too much, and yet Mr. Harrison proposes nothing but more legislation and increased expenditure, which means increased taxation. We do not observe that he recommends reform in any direction, or the repeal of any law that invades human liberty. There is nothing to be expected from President Harrison, and probably not from any other president likely to be elected.

SOME of the public philanthropists of San Francisco, who are always suggesting eleemosynary measures for other people to carry out by the process of taxation, want a "hall of worship" to be built at a cost of five thousand dollars for the use of paupers in the almshouse. The movers in this scheme are Messrs. Ira P. Rankin and F. A. Gibbs, who, it has been said, "figure quite conspicuously in leading, if not subscribing to, foreign missionary enterprises. Both these gentlemen are wealthy, and it is proper to suggest that if they really want a "hall of worship" for the paupers, they can best show their sincerity by proceeding to erect such an edifice.

THE wages of candor in the Presbyterian church is dismissal from the pulpit. The Rev. D. L. Munro, who recently startled his Stockton congregation with the confession that he had indulged toward women those inclinations common to all ministers, has been removed by the presbytery and must preach as an independent or not at all. Mr. Munro is slightly recusant in the matter, and says if God commands him to preach in the Presbyterian church he will do so whether the congregation likes it or not.

MISSOURI has come into line with Tennessee, Georgia, Arkansas, and other states of distinguished enlightenment on the Sunday question. According to a letter quoted from the "American Sentinel" William Fritz and Robert Gibb, members of a Seventh-day Adventist church in Howard county, near Armstrong, Missouri, have been indicted and arrested for performing common labor, on their farms, on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday.

A SAN FRANCISCO jury, so strongly opposed to woman's rights that they will not even permit her to be hanged for murder, have just acquitted one Millie Panhorst for killing Samuel Goldberg because he would not marry her before a priest. The woman's attorney made a strong plea for her as a Christian girl victimized by a Hebrew, and it took the jury less than twenty minutes to find that she was justified in taking human life.

IT has been the rule that unless one member of a Jewish family in Russia belong to the state church, none of the family may either do business or work for pay. Now a new ukase has been issued ordering that the whole family must join the church or all starve together. As might be expected, under this pressure many Jewish converts to Christianity are reported.

THE pope, says a Roman correspondent, has been induced to "permit the formation of a Catholic party in the Italian parliament." After the party is formed the pope will no doubt be induced to permit its members to vote as he instructs them.

DR. J. H. GREER sends us from Chicago a glowing account of Mrs. M. A. Freeman's recent lecture before the Secular Union in that city. Mrs. Freeman is reported by the Chicago press to have attracted the largest audience that ever attended the Union's meetings. She is a very eloquent speaker.

DR. E. B. FOOTE, SR., of New York, sent Mr. Jamieson $25 as a home redeemer loan. Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., also sent $25 toward the home loan fund. Mr. Jamieson sends thanks to FREETHOUGHT for setting the ball of redemption rolling toward his home in Colorado.

It is understood that Moncure D. Conway, the eminent English Rationalist, has written a life of Thomas Paine, to be published early in 1891.

OBSERVATIONS.

Mr. Thomas Curtis spoke at the Freethought meeting last Sunday night before an audience not large but made up of the good and solid Freethinkers of the city. Mr. Curtis's health appears better than it has been for some time, and with a bright bouquet in his buttonhole he looked about thirty years younger than he really is. His subject was "A World without God." He took issue with Pope, who said that all discord was harmony not understood, all partial evil universal good. Evil must remain evil, differentiated from that which we call good. Many cats are killed for their intestines, which make violin strings and produce harmony, but that does not mitigate the misfortune of the sacrificed cats, or make less discord among the survivors. We see more evidence of a devil than of a God in the world. Justice, morality, and truth have no relation to God, but to man. The best thing in the Bible, the Golden Rule, says nothing about God, but recommends us to do to other men, not to God, as we would be done by. We get our ideas of good from ourselves and our own experience. Practically there is no God in the world. We must look to nature for all things; and Mr. Curtis declared that his last word should attest his confidence in this source of good.

The lecture was received with hearty appreciation and applause, and at its close the speaker was presented with a fine bouquet by a lady member.

Mr. Eastman, the chairman, when he arose to announce a collection, spoke also of the necessity of all present subscribing for FREETHOUGHT as a means of grace, and recommended likewise the purchase of Professor Bell's "Handbook of Freethought," copies of which were for sale by the author.

Mr. Marshal Wheeler offered some remarks upon the lecture. The great delusion of mankind, said Mr. Wheeler, is the belief in a creator; which delusion the speaker would shortly dispel by the promulgation of his theory of the third motion of the earth, a discovery calculated to revolutionize the scientific thought of the world. Mr. Wheeler, I understand, will take one of the largest halls in the city, and place his discoveries before the people under the auspices of the Freethought Society.

Mr. Robert Nagler corrected some of Mr. Wheeler's statements, and himself and Mr. Wheeler conducted a short debate from the floor. The chair invited the disputants to defer the discussion to some other time and place, in which both acquiesced, and Mr. Curtis closed the literary exercises with a few supplementary observations.

Then there was a business meeting. The resignation of Mr. Schou was accepted, and Mr. Lemme, upon motion of the writer, became secretary-treasurer amid applause.

The chairman announced that the proposition to hold the meetings fortnightly instead of weekly was under discussion. The man with a badge-pin opposed the proposition in a speech of great eloquence, considering its source, and the question was not put to a vote.

Macdonald suggested the leasing of a hall on Market street, where the meetings could be advertised to the passengers on that populous thoroughfare by means of bulletins at the door, after the fashion of the Nationalists, Spiritualists, Single-taxers, and other people holding absurd notions like ourselves. Messrs. Eastman and Lemme were appointed a committee to take the matter in charge.

Mr. Thomas Curtis moved to expend more money in advertising in the daily papers. Mr. Lemme said that such advertising had never done any good that he could recognize. Macdonald said the only advertising that appeared productive of results was that done through FREETHOUGHT and by communication through the mails, and was opposed to spending money to draw in a public which had no sympathy with the society and fled before the collection hat. Endeavor, he thought, should be centered on the acquisition of new members from among known Freethinkers, so that a strong and self-supporting organization might be built up. Organization and resulting strength would make the society a healthier body than the acquisition of a few uninterested listeners.

Mr. Marshal Wheeler proposed that FREETHOUGHT should be paid for advertising the meetings. Macdonald declined to accept any pay until the society had a surplus. Meanwhile he would contribute something himself. Mr. Wheeler was surprised at Mr. Macdonald's remarks. Mr. Curtis convinced Mr. Macdonald that the latter was talking too much. He insisted on advertising in the daily press, and procured the passage of a motion to spend a dollar a week for a notice in the "Chronicle." Macdonald urged that as good a notice could be had for four bits as for a dollar. It would require considerable diffuseness of style to make the announcement of the meeting cover a dollar's worth of space. Fifty cents could be better employed in printing small dodgers. Mr. Curtis thought himself capable of writing an announcement of the required length, and was made advertising secretary.

Others participated in the debate. Weekly subscriptions to pay for advertising were pledged by Messrs. Giles, Curtis, and Wheeler, and the meeting adjourned.

This business meeting was a most interesting and profitable event. I am in favor of having one every month. The discussion of ways and means arouses the attention of members, and when the debate gets warm enough to bring them to the point of subscribing something to the running expenses, a consummation for which I am devoutly thankful has been reached.

The meeting next Sunday evening will be of a literary, musical, and social character, including a dance.

Let me return sincere acknowledgments to many valued friends who send their congratulations to me on the event which has recently occurred in my family. Particularly would I thank Mrs. Sarah C. Todd, of Forest Grove, Or., for the bundle of knitted and crocheted things, whose recipient has not as yet sufficient command of language to express his gratitude. All these congratulatory letters are carefully preserved by the mother, and make the most improving sort of reading for the sterner parent when, amid the chill watches of the night, as well as the warm precincts of the cheerful day, he turns a powerful-toned infant over and over and end for end, and waits for sleep to come around and do its soothing work. Thus: "I felicitate you," saith a letter in a feminine hand. "W-o-w!" saith the infant in a loud masculine voice. "May he prove a comfort to you," writes another well-meaning friend. "Burr, wang, waup!" saith the comforter. "I congratulate you now," says the editor of the "Truth Seeker," guardedly; "later on, when he wears trousers, I will commiserate you." I thus live in hope.

The heights by great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight,
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night.

A book of poetry entitled "Chips" has been left at this office for review. The author, if it be proper to call her an author who claims to be only an amanuensis, is Mrs. Jennie Rennell. In her preface Mrs. Rennell says that the poems have been written through her hand by unseen forces, and that she herself has no knowledge of what constitutes good poetry. She has often written, she says, what at the time she considered senseless and ridiculous, but found out afterwards that it contained valuable thoughts. Through the advice of her spirit friends she now puts forth the present volume

My first impression of the poems is much like Mrs. Rennell's, but her subsequent discovery is one that I have yet to make. No doubt Mrs. Rennell is perfectly sincere in saying that she has no knowledge of what constitutes good poetry: If she possessed such knowledge she would have hesitated, I think, to publish her "Chips," which are very bad poetry. Anyone who doubts it, read:

We do not write for critics,
But to give a thought or two
To the general public—do you see
What 'tis we wish to do?
So, after this, don't dignify
Our poor attempts in rhyme
By the high-flown title "poetry;"
We wish no name so fine.

The force that wrote the foregoing and caused it to be printed was discreet in remaining unseen in a country where people carry firearms.

Another poem, filling about one hundred and sixty lines, was written, the medium says, between 11:30 and 12 o'clock at night. "If anyone," observes Mrs. Rennell, "doubts the fact that it was written through immortal agency, let he or she try to copy." I would add that if anyone doubts that there are writers who don't know the difference between the nominative and objective cases, let I call him's or her's attention to "he or she."

More unseen force:

The morning breaks, the day wears on,
Night falls on land and sea,
And yet, me hears, "take up the cross
And follow after me."

The impersonal verb "me hears" must have been backed by a good deal of force, seen or unseen, to get by the proof-reader.

Inspired epitaph; supposed to be in rhyme:

Write on her tombstone when she is gone,
Here lies a body whose heart was warm.

Close as follows:

Let us but follow heaven's laws
Us shall be blessed like she was.

"Chips" is a book of one hundred pages, containing about seventy poems, all as good as those I have quoted from, and is marvelously cheap at a dollar per copy.

I am much interested in a "special notice" published by the "Commonwealth," the journal of Kaweah Colony. The notice says that the colony is "neither an Anarchist nor a Free Love colony, and persons of that turn of thought are not desired, nor will they be received as members. Kaweah," the notice goes on to say, "is essentially a collectivist enterprise, and distinguishes clearly between democracy and mob-ocracy. The former, our principle, is properly defined as 'administration by the competent;' the latter means a rule by the mere counting of heads."

The Kaweah notion of democracy is original enough to entitle it to be called a discovery. Heretofore people have been so ignorant as to think that the counting of heads, or polls, which is the same word differently spelled, when a vote is to be taken, is a democratic process. We now learn that it is mobocratic, or of the vulgar mob, from which sort of people Kaweah was thought to be free. "Administration by the competent" sounds well, but it involves the prior existence of the competent; and how to distinguish the competent and place them in power without counting heads must make the colony a good deal of trouble. It has been suggested, however, that there is one "head" at Kaweah which considers itself fully competent to decide as to the value of all other heads; and it is an old saying that "one, with God, is a majority."

But this is not a proper time to criticise Kaweah, for I notice that several of the "competent," namely, Burnette G. Haskell, J. J. Martin, H. T. Taylor, and William Christie, are under arrest for cutting timber on government land. Hereby dependeth a narrative, for the investigation now to follow will doubtless disclose, what many people have long known, that the Kaweah colony, as such, has never possessed a clear title to the land on which it is located, and that many who have invested in the enterprise have been kept in the dark with regard to that important particular. The land commissioners have lately called attention to the fact that a few "misguided enthusiasts," without warrant in doing so, were spoiling the scenery along the Kaweah river in Tulare county. So far as I can see, the Kaweah gentlemen have as much right to the land as anybody else, but so long as their right was not legally recognized it was sinful for them to claim that the title was clear.

The policy of the "competent" who have managed the enterprise since I first heard of it was to advertise the colony as "Bellamy's Dream Realized, and Poverty Abolished," when, in fact, the dwellers on the grounds were the worst poverty-stricken martyrs in the state, according to all reports. Then on the basis of the Dream Realized, they organized branches East and West, at New York, Denver, and San Francisco. The membership fee was placed at five hundred dollars—one hundred in cash and four hundred in work. You paid your cash, but you couldn't work out the balance until the "competent" got ready to let you into the Tulare county paradise. This special notice is kept standing in the "Commonwealth."

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Members are cautioned that they must not go to the Colony expecting employment, unless distinctly called there in writing by the Secretary. No one else is authorized to say "come," and those who take it upon themselves to come without authority will not be received.

It is noticeable that very few except Mr. Haskell and his friends have been "distinctly called" to Kaweah recently, though membership is still solicited. The "competent" take your hundred dollars, but they are not anxious to see you personally, or to let you realize the Dream with them, or have your poverty abolished. One of my acquaintances in this city saved up a hundred dollars a while ago, and went to Kaweah. He has since returned. He reports that the natural advantages are good, and would make the colony wealthy if it owned the land it claims, and that the society would be all right if there were not so many of the "competent" to boss things. I infer that he was frozen out, and that he mourns the loss of one hundred hard-earned dollars, besides some months of wasted labor.

It appears that others of the residents have found it either too hot or too chilly for them in the colony, and that the land they are on is not colony property, as ten of them have taken up land in their own names and avow intention to look out for themselves hereafter. Still other disaffected persons whom Mr. Haskell calls Anarchists have impeded the publication of the "Commonwealth" by loading the check valve of the press with rubbish, removing cogwheels, and otherwise disarranging the running gear.

Kaweah, therefore, has all the trouble it wants. Its land is under dispute, its competent under arrest, its members kicking, Anarchy in its press-room, Free Love in its tents, and winter coming on. Worst of all, it has an "administration by the competent."

I have received from the publisher of Cyrus Romulus Remus R. Teed's paper, the "Flaming Sword," an invitation to exchange advertisements with him. I do not think that an advertisement of FREETHOUGHT in the "Flaming Sword" would do any good, and I do not see how the publisher of that paper could ask me to advertise him any more than I have been doing lately, except to add that the "Sword" emanates from 3619 Cottage Grove avenue, Chicago, Ill.; sample copies free. It contains some good matter, correctly reprinted from other papers.

The present pharisaical outcry against Parnell is sickening enough to rupture the diaphragm of a horse. Parnell is a politician, and has been conducting a campaign against one sort of landlordism and in favor of another sort that may or may not be worse; but his career has been as honorable as it is possible for a politician's career to be. Just now, because he has had the sand to keep silent when his private affairs were being poked into by the public nose, his professed friends and colleagues are demanding that he shall retire from the leadership of his party. His only reply is a silence that greatly offends those who like to discuss such offenses as he has been charged with.

Parnell might take a lesson from a soldier the Great Universal Preacher was wont to tell of. The said soldier was a brave man, who never deserted his post or slept on it; always answered the roll-call, and did his duty in such a way as to excite the admiration of everybody who knew him. But it fell out that one day he got drunk, and was yanked before his superior officer for the offense. The officer went on to enumerate all the soldier's merits, and credited him with being a good fellow generally. He then inquired: "Why is it that a man of your character will persist in getting full?" The soldier replied: "Colonel, you don't intend to tell me, do you, that Uncle Sam is mean enough to want all the domestic and military virtues illustrated by one man for thirteen dollars a month?" The Irish party is guilty of the meanness which the good soldier repudiated on behalf of the American republic.

An eminent and able lady of this city, Mrs. Addie Ballou, has applied to Governor Waterman to be appointed a notary public, but Mr. Waterman, being advised by his attorney-general, declines to make the appointment, on the ground that the applicant is not a voter. This objection does not to me appear tenable, as Mrs. Ballou can at once reply that she is ready to become an elector whenever that privilege is extended to her. Governor Waterman should plainly have based his refusal on the sex of the applicant, an objection that I can see no way for her to overcome.

Geo. E. Macdonald

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The "Chronicle" states that 300 persons recently left Dickson county, Kan., for the Topolobampo colony in Sinaloa, Mexico. —The revenue cutter Bear has arrived at this port from the north. The officers say there has been nothing for them to do in the way of protecting seals, which they declare are in no danger whatever. —A mesmerist named Brown has been trying the effect of hypnotism on an opium-eater at the House of Correction in this city with promising success. The victim has recovered his healthy look, together with a good appetite. —The recount of the vote in San Francisco shows that Pond had 211 more votes than Markham in the city, and that the vote for assemblymen was nearly 10,000 heavier than for governor. —Frederick Marriott, proprietor of the "News Letter," is on trial charged with libeling Superior Judge Murphy. He has pleaded not guilty. —St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital in this city is under criticism, and charges of gross cruelty and neglect of patients are made against the managers of the institution. —R. McKittrick, a Roman Catholic priest living near Seattle, committed suicide by taking morphine November 27. He left his congregation in the East on account of a love affair. —Corrected census returns give the United States a population of 62,622,250. —A report was circulated that Mrs. Stanford had joined the Catholic church. The report is untrue.

The Irish envoys now in America have cabled to Justice McCarthy their condemnation of Parnell. —About a year ago a New York lawyer discovered that the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad had overcharged him fourteen cents for a ticket from New York to Morris Park. In conjunction with thousands of others who had paid the same fare he sued the railroad company, which must now pay an aggregate of $275,000 in fines for the overcharge. —George Francis Train wants to associate with the Italian Succi and fast for one hundred days at the World's Fair in 1893. —Dr. Mary Walker, the dress reformer, is said to be dying of heart failure near Oswego, N. Y. Her disease is due to privations incurred while an inmate of Libby Prison during the war. —August Belmont, the New York banker, is dead. —In his report Postmaster-General Wanamaker says that during the past year mail routes have been extended over 2,000,000 miles of railway, steamboat and stage lines; almost 5,000 new postoffices have been established upon petitions of communities; the star route mileage has been increased over 5,000,000 miles and the railroad mileage over 11,000,000; and the sub-station and stamp agency service, the free delivery and other matters have also been greatly extended during the year. Mr. Wanamaker recommends the establishment of a postal telegraph system with cheap rates, opposes the reduction of letter postage, and recommends the raising of rates on sample copies of so-called newspapers. He would also have paper covered books, now mailed at pound rates, made to pay proper postage. —The national Congress convened at Washington last Monday. —The Rev. Simon P. Anderson, pastor of a church at St. Louis, Mo., has been convicted of forgery and sentenced to five years' imprisonment. —Powderly will call a general convention of Labor leaders in February next. Where the convention will be held is not stated. —Byron Devereux was baptized and joined the Christian church at Boone, Iowa, the first of last week. On the following day he eloped with a female member of the congregation, and the authorities are looking for him. —One day last week the Rev. Mr. Brown, Episcopalian minister at Middletown, N. S., broke the nose and blackened the eyes of a divinity student named King who had accidentally sat down on the reverend gentleman's hat.

A steamer is being built at Glasgow, Scotland, to be taken in sections to Africa, carried overland and floated on Lake Victoria Nyanza. It is said that 5,000 Africans will pack the pieces through the jungle. The vessel is eighty feet long, with sixteen feet beam. —The snowstorm which has been raging in England is the heaviest for many years. In many places traffic is almost suspended. Sheep are dying by thousands from starvation and exposure. The snow is so deep that it is impossible to give them food or shelter. —The German government has invited Surgeon-General Hamilton of the United States Army to send over one of his staff to learn Dr. Koch's treatment for consumption. Dr. Hamilton will send one of his men over next week. He thinks that no lymph will be sent to this country, as it will lose its efficacy in transportation, but the formula will soon be given out and it can be made here. —At last accounts more than $300,000 had been contributed to Gen. Salvation Army Booth's philanthropic scheme to provide homes for London's outcast poor. —The "Volks Zeitung" reports an outrage by Russian soldiers on the frontier, near Alexandrovo. A party of them raided the house of a land-owner, assaulted the proprietor's wife, terribly beating the man, and carried off everything of value.

TO BETTER THE LABORER'S CONDITION.

Our friend Stevens sums up his admirable article on "Progress and Politics," in a late issue of FREETHOUGHT, as follows: "We know that the duration of life is regulated by definite rules, and that it is within our power to modify these rules by, first, improving sanitary conditions; second, by lessening the hours of labor; and third, by raising the standard of living—wages." It seems to me he is wrong in thinking that any improvement in sanitary conditions would benefit laborers as a body, for it appears obvious that the result of such sanitary betterment must be to defeat both his other conditions; that is, it would inevitably increase the hours of labor, and would lower wages and degrade the standard of living. I do not mean to say that all three of the conditions which our friend mentions may not exist simultaneously, nor that the result of the concatenation would not be to increase the span of life and place the laborer on a much improved footing. What I do mean to say is, that under existing conditions any improved method of sanitation must redound to the pecuniary benefit of employers, as a class, at the expense of the whole body of laborers; and that our whole industrial system must be changed before any considerable betterment in the condition of the laborer can be brought about. Any improvement which tends to prolong life would have the effect I have stated, because it would increase the already redundant number of healthy laborers, and would inevitably reduce wages by increasing the competition for employment.

His second proposition—that of lessening the hours of labor—could not be brought about in conjunction with improved sanitary conditions, because it has been found impossible, by reason of intense competition among workers for employment, to decrease them under present sanitary conditions; and as it is, obvious that any lessening of the death rate must mean the increase of this competition, it follows that the hours of labor can never be lessened by a system which does not increase opportunities, but does increase competition therefor.

Mr. Stevens's third proposition—the increase of wages—would also fail for the same reason; for it is certain that wages must decline as competition among workers becomes more intense. Therefore, if our friend insists upon having all three of his conditions fulfilled, he should turn his attention to the subject, and, by investigation, ascertain which of existing conditions it is that prevents the consummation of his desires, and what change would probably be beneficial. He may continue to write able metaphysical essays until no man can be found who ever saw or heard of a church, or who has ever been aware that Christ, Mohammed, Schweinfurth, or any other religious impostor was ever seriously believed in, and the hours of labor will not be shortened by anything but decreased (and decreasing) physical ability to withstand the present long hours of labor; nor will the worker be benefited by increased pay to the extent of a dollar a century as a consequence of his literary labors. Men must be physically free before they can be anything better than moral slaves; and men can never be physically free until opportunities are opened to such an extent as will abolish compulsory idleness.

Our system of taxation throws the great bulk of tax burdens on production, and by exempting land values from all but slight taxation, superinduces the forestalling of land, which it is certain can have no other effect than that of rendering the indispensable factor to all production artificially dear, to the consequent diminution of opportunities, and therefore to the decrease of wages and the degradation of the worker. This system must be abolished, and some other substituted which will not tax labor, and which consequently will not decrease opportunities. Labor must be relieved from the necessity of finding an employer, by any system which can be efficacious, and such a system lies at hand in the proposed taxation of ground values to the utter and entire exclusion of all other taxes. When men are rendered free to work, their independence will soon increase to that extent that they will not be afraid to think; and when they are all free workers and free thinkers the occupation of the theological Othellos will be gone, never to return until taxation is again allowed to fall on labor production to the exclusion of land value taxation; at which time the embruting and impoverishment of the people will recommence, and the theological mountebank will again arise from the ashes of intelligence, at which time some other triplex—or perhaps multiplex—divinity may arise and flourish.

Will Mr. Stevens, and Freethinkers (on all but the most necessary subject) generally, turn their attention to this momentous subject before it is too late? From down-trodden Labor goes up the Macedonian cry for help. Shall we, who pride ourselves upon being thinkers, turn deaf ears to the supplications of those who are being trodden into the mire of misery and poverty by unjust and oppressive laws, while we are wasting our energies and efforts in the attempt to abolish religious superstition? Let us make this world fit to live in, and the desirability of the New Jerusalem as a place of residence will become infinitely less desirable in contrast, to the not small augmentation of the chances that victory will crown the efforts of those who, like Jacob of old, think it worth while to try collar and elbow conclusions with Jehovah.

E. O. ROSCOE.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

SLANDERED BY A PRIEST.

A Catholic who, being a physician, obtained a divorce from his wife and married again, was denounced from the pulpit by a Catholic priest, who declared the second marriage contrary to the laws of the church, and also declared the physician to be excommunicated from the church, and further intimated to his congregation that he would not minister to any one in sickness who was attended by the excommunicated physician. The physician sued the priest for malicious slander in the injury of his business, and obtained a judgment against him for damages. The case was carried by appeal to the supreme court of Massachusetts. The court sustained the verdict. Judge Allen, in delivering the opinion of the court, said:

"These words did not merely instruct the congregation that the effect of a second marriage under the circumstances which existed was to excommunicate the plaintiff from the Catholic Church, but they proceeded to impute against the plaintiff that such marriage or such excommunication should debar him from being employed as a physician in the parish, and that patients who employed the plaintiff as a physician could not in their sickness have the ministrations of the defendant as their priest. But the jury might well find that the plaintiff was a suitable person to be employed there as a physician, notwithstanding his marriage and its ecclesiastical consequences."

This is the first time we have seen any supreme court that has had the courage to decide the plain principle of law as applied to the malicious slanders of the Roman pulpit. Continually we hear of "the last consolations of religion" being withheld from the dying Catholic parent who has sent its child to the public schools, or who has performed some act in opposition to the direction of his priest. Roman priests are very much given to the boycotting of souls in extremis, and denying them the consolation of religion upon the death-bed. In our opinion, there is no great harm done in refusing "extreme unction" and "last offices" for the dying Romanist, and we do not believe there is any real value received for the payment of masses for the repose of the soul, but when a doctor, blacksmith, butcher, baker, or candlestick maker is boycotted in his trade by a Romish priest, we are convinced that an action will lie at law for damages. The advancing progress of the times indicates that the law is disposing of the absurdities that have grown up within the ecclesiastical phenomenon that has so long been posing in the guise of the Roman church.—The Argonaut.

A DOUBTFUL PROP OF MORALITY.

Very persistent are the attacks of the supporters of an effete philosophy upon those intellectual views which are renewing the life of the world and enabling the human mind to shake off the burden of spiritual tyranny. Some of our readers may remember an article which we devoted a couple of years ago to a novel by a celebrated member of the French Academy, M. Octave Feuillet, the leading character in which was a young woman who had been brought up by a philosophical uncle in complete emancipation from theological beliefs, and who took, in the most natural way in the world—as the direct result, we are given to understand, of her acceptance of modern thought, and particularly of the Darwinian theory—to a career of monstrous and cold-blooded villainy. Her uncle was a benevolent old gentleman; but the evolution philosophy showed its perfect result in the niece, who had imbibed it in her very earliest years. This fine example of a "novel with a purpose" appeared first in the columns of the Revue des Deux Mondes; and to-day we find in the same periodical no less striking an example of a drama with a purpose, the author this time being M. George Duruy, and the title of his production Ni Dieu ni Maitre. In this work the philosophical and philanthropical uncle of M. Feuillet's creation is replaced by a father—an eminent medical man—of similar views and similar character, who has brought up his own two children in complete independence of priestly control, and who, in return for all the affection he has lavished upon them, reaps a harvest of selfishness and ingratitude. Without being as utterly depraved as the delightful heroine of M. Feuillet's romance, they are mere creatures of pleasure and vanity, and when their poor father falls into ill-health and comparative poverty, instead of sympathizing with and aiding him, they have nothing for him but complaints and reproaches. The uncle in M. Feuillet's story and the father in M. Duruy's, it is noticeable, are both physicians, these authors paying the medical profession the compliment of thinking that the study and practice of medicine are particularly favorable to a philosophic cast of mind. M. Duruy throws in an interesting minor character in the person of a smart young physician, who had studied under the elder one, and who, in the days of the latter's prosperity, had become engaged to his daughter, but who, having got possession of the lucrative practice which the elder physician, through failing health, had been compelled to hand over to him, throws the daughter overboard without the slightest compunction. This young man, too, is offered to us as a shining example of what Freethought means when reduced to practice. Tricked out as these fictitious narratives are in all the graces of style that literary art can command, they are doubtless adapted to have an effect on a certain class of minds. Rich devotees of luxurious superstition will be greatly edified by the demonstration that not common sense but ecclesiastical authority is to determine all questions of education and conduct; and timorous souls in general will be glad to find that they are justified in refraining from any independent exercise of their minds upon moral questions. Others, among whom we count ourselves, find more of "purpose" than of honesty in these representations: to us they do not show the true working out either of the ancient or of the modern principles of morality, and we propose once more to show why.

One fact is incontrovertible, let literary or other reactionists say what they will, and that is, that in a moral point of view the world is vastly better to-day than it was centuries ago. The world has had its ages of faith; the world has now its age of comparative reason. If we want poisoners who could outdo the performances of M. Feuillet's young woman in La Morte, we go to the ages of faith, we seek them in papal courts amid cardinals and their relatives. If we want filial ingratitude in far more hideous forms than M. Duruy has undertaken to paint, the same society, in the same age, will furnish it. The true middle age is shown in the works it has produced, in the Decameron of Boccaccio, and the Canterbury Tales of Chaucer, in which lust and superstition walk hand in hand. Charles Reade has also given a powerful picture of it in his acknowledged masterpiece, "The Cloister and the Hearth." Let any one compare the condition of Europe at that time with its condition to-day, and then say whether the material, moral, and intellectual interests of mankind have not gained immensely by the emancipation of thought and the weakening of authority.

But if we look at the case presented to us by M. Duruy in Ni Dieu ni Maître, we shall see how very ill he conceives the duties of a really enlightened father toward his children. His Pierre Nogaret, a physician in the very front rank of his profession, with an annual income of over a hundred thousand francs, has two children, Maurice and Adrienne, whose mother is dead. Instead of interesting himself in their education, he turns them over to hired teachers, and never asks what progress they are making or how their characters are developing. In a conversation between the brother and sister, the former is made to say: "I have grown up I don't know how; no one has ever told me what is right or what is wrong, and I can't find it out entirely by myself. Papa made me take up the study of the sciences, but he never took the trouble to see whether I learned anything, and now there are moments when I feel that I am not worth a rush." The sister has very much the same account to give of her education; and both brother and sister were brought up, as the story shows, in very extravagant habits. Both were launched into the world of fashion without any effort being made to guard them against the temptations to which they were thus exposed.

Now why, we ask, should this be offered to us as an example of education upon modern principles? Why should a man, because he has embraced, let us say, evolutionary views, allow the education of his children to proceed at hap-hazard? Why should such a man leave his children unprotected against the seductions of a vitiated society? Why should he allow their home affections to be weakened and stunted by a senseless immersion in social gayeties? If a clever writer wishes to do justice to the great question which MM. Feuillet and Duruy approach in so partisan a spirit, let him draw a picture of a man who has discarded superstition because of its demonstrated falsity, who has embraced the principles and results of science because of their demonstrated truth, and whose aim it is to do in his lifetime the utmost amount of good that circumstances permit. Then let this man have in conjunction with these elevated views a certain amount of common sense. If he has children whom he sincerely loves—and such love is not an unreasonable postulate in a father—let him recognize that, if they are to dispense with the conventional aids to right conduct, they must have others in their place, and let him duly cultivate their moral and emotional nature. Let him refrain from placing them, or allowing them to be placed, in circumstances of too great temptation. Let him carefully guard against their becoming the slaves of luxury and idleness. Let him not give them as associates persons whose principles of action are the very reverse of his own. Let him not betroth his daughter to an intriguing jackanapes who avows himself destitute of every principle save selfish ambition. Let his love for his children be manifested otherwise than by keeping up an expensive establishment. If these conditions be observed, we shall have a man who, point for point, shall do what Pierre Nogaret did not do, and refrain from doing what Pierre Nogaret did do. And then let it be shown, if it can, in consonance with recognized principles of human nature, how such methods of training and discipline lead directly to ill-regulated and frivolous lives on the part of the philosopher's children. Let us see just how it comes about that natural affection dies out in the atmosphere of such a philosopher's household. Let us be made to feel in a powerful manner the chasm that is left in the philosopher's family life by the absence of the priestly element. It is easy to make men of straw and then knock them over or treat them with any other indignity; but the task is not one that is worthy of a literary artist of any ability. In M. Feuillet's romance there was some attempt made to show how the doctrine of the survival of the fittest naturally inspired thoughts of murder in the female mind. We did not think much of the proffered demonstration, but it made at least a decent show of respect for the requirements of logic. In M. Duruy's drama such show of respect is wholly lacking. His philosopher entirely neglects his children's moral education, brings them up in expensive, luxurious, and idle habits, exposes them to all the temptations of a morally worthless society, and then, when they have been—not wholly, but largely—perverted by the evil influences around them, we are asked to lay the whole blame of their perversion upon their father's heterodox views, and to draw a sweeping conclusion as to the ruinous effects on morality of modern philosophy in general.

The unprejudiced reader will not draw any such conclusion. The conclusion that may be drawn is that no set of merely speculative opinions offers any guarantee for satisfactory moral development apart from a careful observance of the conditions on which the formation of sound moral character depends. It is one thing to adopt the Darwinian theory; it is quite another to know how to bring up children; and some Darwinians, or alleged Darwinians, make nearly as poor a business of it as some clergymen. It is not the mold in which a man's opinions have run that makes him a competent moral educator; it is the amount of earnestness he throws into moral questions and the amount of practical good sense that he brings to bear in order to insure that the children committed to his charge shall be well-grounded in sound moral principles and habits. The son of M. Duruy's philosopher tells his sister that if ever he succeeds in capturing a woman with a big fortune and has children, she will see how he will "stuff them with religion." Alas! the recipe is not a new one. How many children have been "stuffed with religion," only to grow up exceptionally bad! The children who do best are the children of parents whose lives bear still more powerful testimony than their words to right principles, and who are not too busy to take a constant interest in their children's education, moral as well as intellectual. To ask the world to go back to mediævalism in order to save morals from destruction is asking too much. That system has been tried and found wanting, and the world is now seeking another and a better foundation for morals. Doubtless many rush forward and grasp at the new opinions without realizing all that they involve and demand. The age is one of unsettlement; but it is one, unmistakably, of progress; and when our methods of education have been adapted to the new truths now in course of formulation, there will be no reason to regret the props and stays and leading-strings that helped to steady the morality of the past.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Golden Rule.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Your correspondent has taken to attending "Sunday-school," and some proceedings are had a little out of the common. Among others your correspondent denied that the Golden Rule was of Christian origin, asserting that the idea was borrowed. Wide opened eyes! The superintendent took issue, and wrote to a preacher somewhere, and got a reply citing him to some cyclopædia where it is stated that Confucius used the same idea negatively, "What ye would not have others do to you do ye not unto them," or words to that effect, five hundred years before Christ, and the "reverend" claims that "Confucius undoubtedly received it from Moses;" also that the morality of Confucius' command is negative, while that of Christ's is positive. I replied that the reverend gentleman's letter established my position, namely, that the idea was borrowed; that Moses was neither a statesman nor a philosopher, but simply a fighting man, the leader of an uneducated and semi-barbarous people; that Confucius was both a statesman and a philosopher, and his people civilized, and therefore that it was much more probable that the idea in question originated with him than with Moses.

I also asserted that the Golden Rule was used in a positive sense by some one five hundred or six hundred years before Christ. (Paine says a thousand.) My authority is called for. I have not the book, and no cyclopædia. Can the editor or any FREETHOUGHT reader enlighten me?

The question of the corporeal existence of Christ is now sprung in our "Sunday school," and lively times are anticipated. I appear to be running a home missionary society; wonder if any of the wealthy will donate funds for its support! There appears to be a large field for Free-thinkers to do missionary work in the Sunday-schools. Brethren should embrace the opportunity.

Aumsville, Or.

F. S. M.

Liberal Lectures in Tulare County.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Not seeing any report from these parts relating to Liberalism, I thought it necessary that notice of Mr. Remsburg's coming should be given to our Freethought journal. A man of such eloquence and graceful deportment should have the firm support of every Freethinker in the land, each striving to bring the superficial Christian within the sphere of his logical instruction, as no earthly power in argument can refute his just sayings in appeal for true reform. With what manliness he meets the churchmen upon their own ground—not in denial of Christ as an example, but clearly showing that the "Christians" are not the followers of him they so constantly claim as their pattern and guide.

Mr. Remsburg delivered two lectures here to quite large and attentive audiences. The morning service included a masterly arraignment of the church on the Sabbath question. In the evening the lecture was a vindication of Thomas Paine, and though Mrs. Mary Krekel had favored our people with an eloquent address on the same subject, yet Mr. Remsburg's able defense was listened to with great attention and interest.

On Monday, the 17th, Mr. Remsburg addressed the people of Hanford; subject, "False Claims of the Church." Our sons, Julius H. and Frank B. Fox, Mrs. J. H. Fox, and other ladies and friends, attended his wonderful lecture there, and reported themselves as greatly edified. Some prominent Christians were present in Hanford, but in Lemoore (with the exception of the Adventists, who themselves are persecuted) they drew within cover of their shells more closely than before, beginning greatly to fear that harm will come to their "blessed institution." Those "who will not reason"—how may such hope to learn? How can they attain to a knowledge of wholesome truth?

SARAH G. FOX.

Lemoore, Cal.

SUBSCRIBERS may do us a great favor by sending us the names of known Freethinkers who are not at present subscribers to FREETHOUGHT. We wish to send to such, sample copies of the paper with invitations to subscribe.

"Is This Your Son, My Lord?" by Helen H. Gardener. Price 50 cents.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS IN TEXAS.

A few dates are left vacant along this route. Those who desire lectures for the dates not included in this list will please communicate with S. P. Putnam at El Paso, Texas, where he will be November 30.

El Paso.....	Nov 30	Gainesville.....	Dec 23 24 25
Burnett.....	Dec 3 4 5	Trenton.....	Dec 27 28
Goldthwaite.....	Dec 6 7	Denison.....	Dec 29 30
Norse and Clifton.....	Dec 8 9	Forney.....	Dec 31 and Jan 1 2
Walnut Springs.....	Dec 10 11 12	Reagan and Martin.....	Jan 3 4 5
Stephensville.....	Dec 13 14	Columbus.....	Jan 8 9 10
Alvarado.....	Dec 15 16 17	Flatonia.....	Jan 11 12
Ft. Worth.....	Dec 18 19	San Antonio.....	Jan 13 14 15
Sunset.....	Dec 20 21

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION,

R. B. WESTBROOK, PRESIDENT.
BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

- R. B. Westbrook, President,..... 305 2d ave., Ashbury Park, N. J.
- E. B. Foote, Jr., Vice-President,..... 120 Lexington ave., New York.
- T. B. Wakeman, Vice-President,..... 93 Nassau st., New York.
- T. Morris Parot, Vice-President..... Philadelphia. Pa.
- J. O. Bentley, Vice-President..... Philadelphia. Pa.
- Corresponding Secretary, Ida C. Craddock, S. E. corner of Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
- Treasurer, F. C. Mende..... 1814 Green st., Philadelphia Pa.

SPECIAL CALL FOR GUARANTEE FUND.

The Congress of the American Secular Union, recently held at Portsmouth, Ohio, directed the officers to make, through the Liberal papers, a call upon the friends for the pledge of five thousand dollars ($5000) to enlarge and carry forward the work of the society. This money is needed to sustain the business of the general office in Philadelphia, and to pay the salaries and traveling expenses of at least two field secretaries, who shall go out to organize auxiliary societies and otherwise labor to promote the cause.

That this is an important movement in the right direction must be obvious to all. Never was there a time when the work of our society was so much in demand; and our one need is the money to carry on that work. Will our friends respond to this call liberally and at once, that we may know what to depend upon?

The president, besides his gratuitous daily work in behalf of the society, offers to be one of twenty to contribute one hundred dollars ($100) each for this object. Will nineteen others respond to this proposition at once?

How many can pledge $50, $25, $10, $5, $1? Let every friend of the cause inform us as soon as possible what he or she is willing to pledge.

Let all Liberal societies, whether auxiliary or not, take up this matter promptly, and inform us what they are willing to do.

The pledges will be published in the "Truth Seeker," "Investigator," FREETHOUGHT, and "Secular Thought" each month. It is understood that the subscriptions may be paid during the coming year at the convenience of the subscriber, and, if desired, in instalments. All responses to this call should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

We see no reason why the sum named should not be secured by pledges within thirty days.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President,
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer,
IDA C. CRADDOCK, Cor. Sec.

Office S. E. Cor. Broad and Columbia avenues, Philadelphia, November 11, 1890.

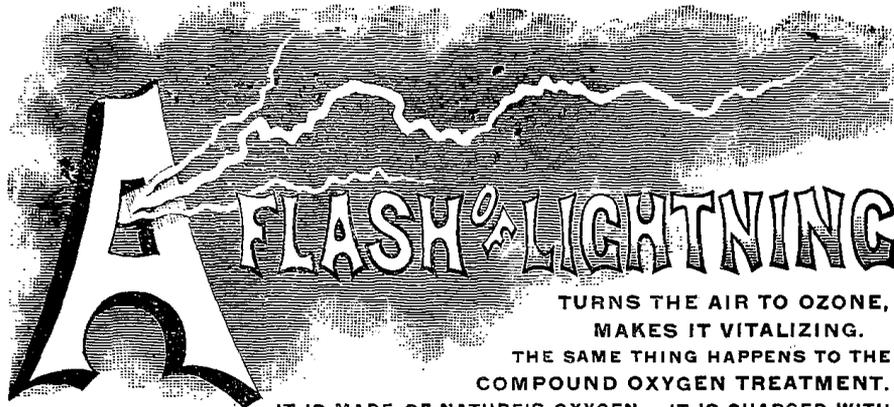

Statistics of Questionable Value.

"Science" for October, 1889, thus discusses the effects of alcohol upon longevity: The British Medical Association appointed a commission to inquire and ascertain the average age of three classes of drinkers, to wit: Total abstainers from alcoholic beverages, moderate drinkers, and sots. The commission reported its observations upon 4,234 deaths, divided into five categories:

1. Total abstainers.
2. Habitual temperate drinkers—those who consume a moderate amount of alcoholic liquors.
3. Careless drinkers—those who do not mean to get drunk, but are simply imprudent drinkers.
4. Free and habitual drinkers.
5. Decidedly intemperate drinkers—sots.

According to this classification, the average age reached by each of these categories is as follows: First class, 51 years 22 days; second, 63 years 13 days; third, 59 years 67 days; fourth, 57 years 59 days; fifth, 53 years 3 days. From this the curious fact is brought out that the teetotalers are the shortest-lived, sots having but a slight advantage over them in the duration of life. The moderate drinkers reach the most advanced age.

EXTEND the circulation of FREETHOUGHT. To new subscribers we offer as a premium "A Woman's Journey Around the World," by Lillian Leland; a valuable work of 358 pages, finely bound in cloth.

FLASH OF LIGHTNING
 TURNS THE AIR TO OZONE,
 MAKES IT VITALIZING.
 THE SAME THING HAPPENS TO THE
 COMPOUND OXYGEN TREATMENT.
 IT IS MADE OF NATURE'S OXYGEN. IT IS CHARGED WITH NATURE'S ELECTRICITY. YOU INHALE IT: AT ONCE A WARMING, GENIAL GLOW
 PERVADES THE SYSTEM. DISUSED AIR CELLS OPEN UP TO RECEIVE AND RETAIN THIS NOURISHMENT. THE CHEST EXPANDS. THE HEAD GETS CLEAR. YOU CAN THINK. BETTER STILL YOU CAN TURN YOUR THOUGHT TO ACTION. THIS IS GETTING WELL IN NATURE'S WAY. YOUR VIGOR BECOMES YOUR REMEDY.

A BOOK OF 200 PAGES WILL TELL YOU WHO HAVE BEEN RESTORED TO HEALTH AND STRENGTH IN THIS WAY. IT IS FILLED FROM COVER TO COVER WITH SIGNED ENDORSEMENTS.

THIS BOOK WILL BE SENT ENTIRELY FREE OF CHARGE TO ANY ONE WHO WILL WRITE TO

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, No. 1529 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

120 SUTTER ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

58 CHURCH ST., TORONTO, CANADA.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.
PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; 7 ounce, $28.50; 8 ounce, $30. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60, $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so good and elegant a watch for the price.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50; fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 1/2 14 kt. gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botchers, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
 Address The Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

No Use Spending More Money on It.

"There is one thing that we ought to do," said Mrs. Slapson, "and that is to make Bridget stop lighting the fire with kerosene."

"Yes, I guess we may as well. If it was going to blow her up it would have done it long ago, and kerosene costs money."—Washington Post.

Honesty the Best Policy.

It was one of those situations where three are a crowd.

She (blushing)—Why, you took my breath away!

He—Allow me to return it immediately, my dear. I do not wish to be found with stolen goods in my possession.—Boston Times.

Encouraging.

Fwedly (shivering)—Cholly, this is beastly weathah. It makes me feel like blowing my brains out.

Cholly (dodging the fumes of Fwedly's cigarette)—I hope this kind of weather—whew!—will hang on a little longer, old chappie.—Chicago Tribune.

Another View of It

"He is an ungentlemanly fellow. When he rescued me from drowning last summer he hugged me, and I'd never met him before."

"You wrong him, Ethel. He wasn't hugging you. He was only wringing you out."—New York Sun.

Give It Up.

"In cases of wreck, when clothes are 'washed' ashore, who pays for the mangling?"

"You have heard of the 'cradle of the deep.' Is that where the 'squalls' are supposed to come from?"—New York World.

A Dangerous Exploit.

Teacher—Now, Thomas, if Johnnie had ten marbles, and you took four of them, what remains?

Johnny (a particularly hard looking youth, grimly)—You're right—remains!—New York Herald.

At the Club.

Young Cadshore—I say, old fel', saw you at Barnum's circus on Tuesday, but you didn't see me.

Young Van Gawk—Ah! indeed; which cage were you in?—Yenowine's News.

In the Winter.

Father—Why don't you work?

Son—Why, I am as busy as a bee.

Father—You do nothing but eat.

Son—Well, that is all the bees are doing just now.—New York Herald.

No Prospect of It.

"No," said the man, "I can't give nuthin'. Charity begins to hum, you know."

"It will be a long time before your charity is lively enough to hum," replied the collector.—West Shore.

He Was Her Goose.

"Well, your goose is cooked!" exclaimed Snodgrass as he entered his parlor.

"Who has been roasting you this time, love?" asked Mrs. Snodgrass anxiously.—Munsey's Weekly.

Like Other Majorities.

"You ought to go to work now; you have attained your majority," said Mr. G. O'Party to his lazy son.

"Ya-as; but mine isn't a working majority."—Puck.

NOT CONSUMMATED.

A Tale from Arkansaw of True but Timid Love.

During several seasons young Parks had been a constant visitor at the house of Abemleich Morrison. Sunday after Sunday the young fellow would come, and after sitting nearly all day stealing glances at Sookey, old Abemleich's daughter, he would glide out the door, jump over the fence and run like a jack rabbit. Last Sunday he took his place as usual.

"Sam," said old Abemleich, "whut's your daddy doin'?"

"Makin' uv a steer yoke, uh, huh, huh."

"Whut's Lige doin'?"

"Ain't doin' nothin'. Dun gone to meet-in' with a gal, uh, huh, huh."

"Whut's your mother doin'?"

"Got sorter behind on her quilt an' is a cardin' uv her bats today."

"Made your plant bed yit?"

"We've made one uv them, but we ain't made the big one whut we 'lowed to make."

"Sam?"

"Yes, sar."

"What's the usen actin' sich a blame fool. You love Sook?"

"No, I don't, uh, huh, huh."

"Yes, you do."

"I don't nuther."

"Yes, you do, an' you wantter marry her."

"I don't now, no such uv a thing, uh, huh, huh."

"Yes, you do."

"Would you give her to me if I was ter wantter marry her?"

"Yes, you may have her. Come here, Sook," calling the girl.

"What do you want, dad?" she said, entering the room.

"Hold on, Sam, come back, you blamed fool!"

Sam had jumped over the fence and was running like a jack rabbit. Old Abemleich says that the marriage may take place as soon as Sam "ken be hemmed up an' fotch to the house."—Arkansaw Traveler.

High Art in the Kitchen.

The genius of fashion is evidently penetrating into the culinary regions. An up town domestic recently informed her mistress of a new wrinkle in her department. She had been reminded that the range needed polishing, and the reminder was the cause of her saying:

"Did you know, Mrs. Blank, that it isn't fashionable now to polish stoves? The correct style is to smear on the polish and leave a dull black. Highly polished stoves are now considered quite lacking in refined taste."—Sun and Voice.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of catarrh that cannot be cured by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions, and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo O.

WALDEN, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all druggists. 46t4

The Humboldt Library
—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts.

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
8. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
7. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
12. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
13. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion.
14. Longevity. Prolonging life. John Gardner, M.D.
15. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
16. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
17. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
18. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
20. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kailley Miller.
21. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
22. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
23. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
24. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
25. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
26. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
27. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
28. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
30. The Study of Words. Richard Chenevix Trench.
31. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R.A. Proctor.
32. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
33. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
34. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
35. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
36. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
37. Geographical Sketches. Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
38. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
39. Current Discussions in Science. W.M. Williams.
40. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
41. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
42. The Dawn of History. C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
43. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
44. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
45. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
46. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
47. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange. Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
48. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
49. Animal Automatism. Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
50. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
51. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
52. Illusions. James Sully.
53. The Origin of Species. Two Double Numbers. Charles Darwin. 30 cents each.
54. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
55. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
56. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
57. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, LL.D.
58. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
59. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
60. Technical Education, Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
61. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
62. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
63. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
64. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencer.
65. Archaeology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
66. The Daucing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
67. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
68. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
69. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
70. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
71. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
72. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
73. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
74. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
75. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
76. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
77. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
78. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
79. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson.
80. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
81. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
82. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S.S. Laurie.
83. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin)

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T.H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haeckel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen.
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present. Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life. Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Taing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whymper, Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No. 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Ritchie. Administra- tive Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTMAS PLAYS.
By Rev. CLARENCE SATTERLEE.
RECITATIONS FOR CHRISTMAS.
Price 25 Cents.
Dialogues for Christmas, by Margaret Holmes. Price 25 cents. Send for our full descriptive Catalogue of Christmas Books—Plays, Dialogues, Readings, Recitations, Speeches, Chantres, Tabernacle, Pantomimes, Books of Games, Sports and Amusements, Athletics, Gymnastics, Magic, Ventriloquism, etc., etc. Address mentioning this magazine.
The DeWitt Publishing House, 33 Rose Street, N. Y.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities.
B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St. San Francisco. Watches Cleaned & Warranted, $1
Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 46t4

S. P. TAYLOR & CO., Manufacturers and Dealers in PAPERS!
Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping PAPER BAGS, TWINE.
Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S F.

SAN FRANCISCO ARBEITER ZEITUNG.
710 WASHINGTON ST., SAN FRANCISCO.
The only organ in the German language on the Pacific Coast that stands for true Nationalism. Subscription price: 3 mos., 60 cts.; 6 mos., $1; 12 mos., $2. 45t4

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 HOWARD ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,

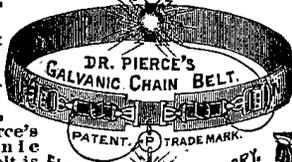

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

USE THE
In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

LIFE RENEWER

Wm. S. S. Oliver & Co.

NONE GENUINE WITHOUT THIS SIGNATURE.

DR. PIERCE'S GALVANIC CHAIN BELT. PATENT TRADE MARK.

Dr. Pierce's Galvanic Chain Belt is guaranteed to be the latest improved perfect Body-Battery. The electricity from it can be instantly felt by the Wearer.

This celebrated Instrument will cure, without medicine, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Discharges of the Liver or Kidneys, Lame Back, Female Weakness, General Debility, Spinal Disease, Sexual Weakness, Impotency, Etc. The Suspensory for men free with every Belt. N. B. The Electricity goes directly to all Weak Parts and restores them to Health and Vigorous Strength. For particulars call or send 4 cts. in stamps for sealed Pamphlet No. 2. Address MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COMPANY, 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal.

PILES. If troubled with Hemorrhoids or Piles, send stamp for Pamphlet No. 3.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,

Hygienic Physician.

Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,

Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.

HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m.

251f

Health AND Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.

Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy, $1.

Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.50.

Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook, $1.

Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer, $1.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.

Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina, Ills. 50.

Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook, $1.

Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, W R C S. 30 cents

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS AND TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.

Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.

God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.

Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.

Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.

Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.

The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.

Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.

The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.

OLIVER HINCKLEY SUPERINTENDENT

Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.

N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.

Telephone 1950.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED

CURES

Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung DISEASES

By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen.
Positive cure for Cancer.

26t37

410 A Eddy st., S. F.

A HAND-BOOK OF

FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.

The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS, 15 cents.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERY.

Located Eight Miles South of San Jacinto, Cal.

P. A. CLARK, PROPRIETOR.

A full stock of everything in the Nursery line on hand.

APPLES, PEACHES,
PEARS, PLUMS,
APRICOTS, NECTARINES,
PRUNES, ALMONDS,
WALNUTS, QUINCES, ETC.

IN ALL VARIETIES.

A fine lot of Kelsey's Japan Plums, one and two years old.

Send for price list and buy where you can get trees at living rates.

P. A. CLARK, San Jacinto, Cal.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS.

536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery.

San Francisco

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against

LIBERTY,

By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

Freethought Publishing Co.,

838 Howard st., San Francisco Cal

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—
EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,
ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

WIFE WANTED, Unincumbered, not over 40, healthy, fond of music (pianist), sympathetic, and anti-religious, for lone widower of 60, with means. To insure answers address AMERICAN, Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal., giving full description of self.

J. A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

Price, 50 c. Address Freethought
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, 10 Cents

Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unscrupulous practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

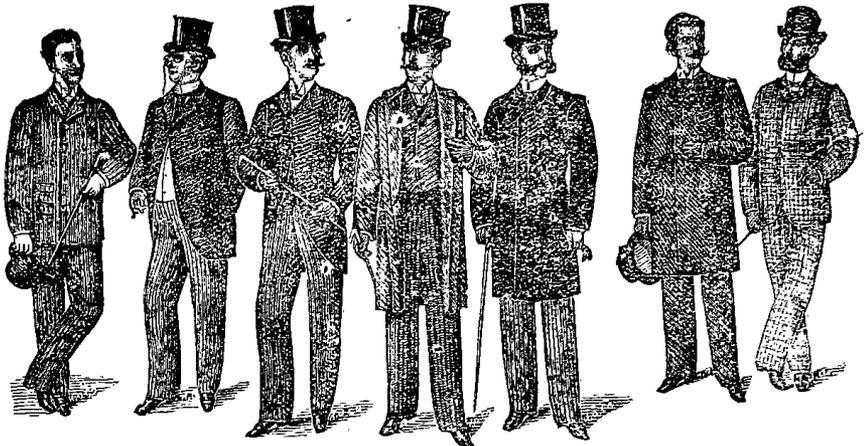

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N. J.

And see where my name is advertised.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR..... $25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

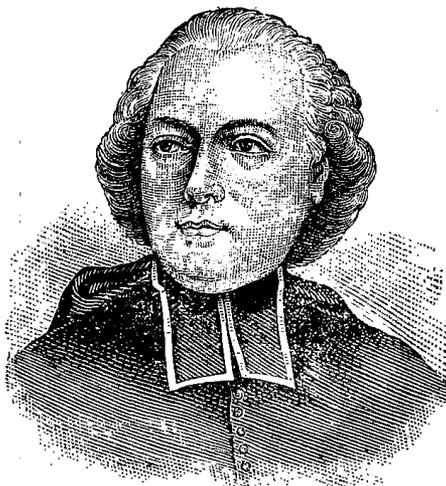

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."

339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1, German, cloth, $1.
Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year..... $1.50
Six Months..... .75
Three Months..... .50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

- 14 karat Gold Scarf Pin..... $ 4
- 10 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin..... 2 7
- 14 karat Gold, small size Badge Pin with Diamond, $5, 6 0
- 10 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 3 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Badge Pin..... 4 00
- 10 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 3 50
- 14 karat Gold, Small Charm (for watch chain)..... 4 50
- 10 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 5 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm (for watch chain)..... 6 00
- 14 karat Gold, Large Charm "Diamond" 14 00

*This is a full-bodied diamond, set so that it may be cleaned from the reverse side and never lose its brilliancy. Sent to any address, prepaid, and guaranteed as represented or money refunded, address,
Freethought Pub. Co.,
838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

Don't write to me when taking the first bottle of my Medical Discovery. I know how it makes you feel, but it's all right. There are certain cases where the Discovery takes hold sharp, but it is the diseased spot in you it has taken hold of, and that's what you want. The Discovery has a search warrant for every humor, from backache to scrofula, inside and outside, and of course it makes a disturbance in your poor body, but the fight is short, you are better by the second bottle; if not, then tell me about it, and I will advise. I will, however, in the future, as in the past, answer any letter from a nursing mother.

Sincerely yours,

DONALD KENNEDY,

ROXBURY, MASS.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Apothecary.

Geo. H. Fowler, drugs, medicines, chemicals, toilet articles, etc. 13th ave and East 14th street, East Oakland, Cal.

Boot and Shoemaker.

C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Nurseryman.

R. H. Foster, Babylon, N. Y.

Physicians and Surgeons.

G. W. Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy Building, 1235 Market st.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Real Estate.

Geo. H. Gale, Port Angeles, Wash.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st. Rapp & DeBarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st. The Social, 1037 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny st

ORIGINAL

BROWNSVILLE

WOOLEN MILLS

CLOTHING STORE.

164 and 166 Second Street,

Near corner of Morrison,

The Best Goods in the Country

PORTLAND, OR. W. R. BISHOP, AGT.

Call, or send orders and measure.

Salvation Army Song.

I've reached the land of wine and corn,
And all its riches—in a horn.
I never saw since I was born,
Its like for whisky, wine, and corn.

O Julia Ann, sweet Julia Ann,
Come pound your tamborine again;
Come get some free lunch, bread and ham,
Of beer or whisky take a dram,
And join this whooping, howling band,
Shout glory hallerlugeram.

I've found a savior truly mine,
He turns the water into wine;
We'll drink until we're nearly blind,
And snakes shall follow on behind.

My savior takes me by the hand,
We stagger o'er the golden strand;
We fall and tumble on the sand—
Sure this is heaven's border land.

I look away across the sea,
My savior waves his hat to me,
I see him climbing up a tree—
He turns from one ghost into three.

Then ere the holy show was done,
While Moody fires his gospel gun,
The holy ghost, the dad and son,
All change from three ghosts into one.

Port Angeles, Wash. FRANK MORSE.

Ought to Be Used to It.

He had just kissed her for the first time. According to the census they had already taken of each other's love they had mutually broken ground in that respect for the first time.

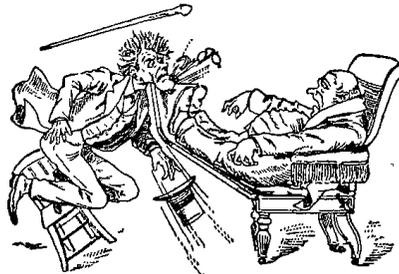

"See how Fido closed his eyes when I kissed you, darling?"

"Yes, I've noticed him doing it before. I thought, however, by this time he'd be used to it."—Philadelphia Times.

A Great Invention.

"Yes; most comfortable chair in the world. Now, if I wish to recline at ease all I have to do is to press this little button, and up she——COMES! —Life.

Handicapped by Nature.

Experienced Burglar (to new recruit)—Great Jupiter! Don't make so much noise!

New Recruit—I can't help it. My toe joints always crack when I walk in my stocking feet.

Experienced Burglar (much disgusted)—Then you'd better turn honest. You'll never succeed in this line of business. You're cut out for a family man with twin babies that need lullin' to sleep.—Chicago Tribune.

TRAVELING ALONE

A WOMAN'S JOURNEY

AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

(Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Finely Bound in Cloth. Price, 75 Cents.

Press Notices.

They are pleasing stories of travel.—Toledo Bee.
A book to hold the interest of all.—Boston Times, Feb. 23, 1890.

A remarkably entertaining record.—Buffalo Express, Feb. 16, 1890.

A remarkably original and piquant narrative.—Cincinnati Times Star.

It is a very clever, readable book.—New York Journal of Commerce, Feb. 7, 1890.

A bright, unconventional narrative of unusual interest.—Washington Republic, March 8, 1890.

It is an entertaining record of a remarkable case of "globe trotting."—Cleveland Plain Dealer, Feb. 26, '90.

She had eyes for everything of interest, and tells her story in a "chipper" style.—Norwich, Conn., Bulletin, Feb. 11, 1890.

The young traveler's comments upon men and cities and works of art are decidedly entertaining.—New York Tribune, Feb. 14, 1890.

The notes of her journey are presented in a style that is very acceptable, and form interesting reading.—San Francisco Call, Feb. 16, 1890.

She is evidently a born writer, having a light, chatty style, although her observations are very shrewd.—St. Louis Republic, March 11, 1890.

It is as readable as the observations and thoughts of such resolute persons, especially if they are women, are wont to be.—Brooklyn Daily Eagle, Feb. 16, 1890.

The story is brightly and tersely written, and is given with conversational ease and minuteness of detail.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, Feb. 22, 1890.

The author's style is gay, and her airy contempt for tradition in art, religion, and social life is one of her most prominent characteristics.—Newark, N. J., Advertiser, Feb. 15, 1890.

There is a way to make a record of travels popularly entertaining, and this way has been followed by the author of "A Woman's Journey Around the World Alone."—New York Sun, Feb. 15, 1890.

The story of her wanderings is very pleasantly told. It is charmingly truthful in manner and free from exaggeration. In England three volumes and cloth binding, with a second edition in library style, would certainly be awarded it.—Boston Herald, Feb. 10, 1890.

Her descriptions are entertaining, while they sparkle with unique phrases and quaint ideas. The story of her travels is told in that chatty manner peculiar to women, which is particularly pleasing from the tongue or pen of a charmingly pretty woman, such as Miss Leland's portrait shows her to be.—Newark Evening News, March 28, '90.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

VOL. III—No. 50.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan., 1888

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - DECEMBER 13, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Reinsburg and myself left Colton, Thursday evening, November 27, traveled all night long beyond Yuma, and the next morning were speeding over the wide sage-covered plains of Arizona, where the cactus grows sometimes a hundred feet high with singular and branching columns; while far along the horizon the desolate peaks with not a shred of green, but brown and gray, surging in a thousand shapes, glitter intensely in the blue radiance that clothes the whole barren scene with surpassing loveliness. It seemed as if there were no place for man or beast to live, and these impressions are confirmed when we sit down to the breakfast table, which presented about as melancholy an aspect as the level sage-brush itself. We waited five minutes for one lonely chicken to present itself to a dozen of us. In less time it disappeared, and it required another five minutes and several calls for the beefsteak to follow, and this was the total menu. It was the smallest breakfast I ever found at a railroad eating-house, and the less the spread, the more time was given to eat it, for the train stopped forty minutes instead of the usual twenty. I suppose that if we had had nothing to eat, the train would have stopped all day in order that we might get plenty of it. The less the food the more amplitude of time. This was at Gila Springs, where the G is pronounced like H. In a country of such pronunciation almost anything might be expected. However, the price of the breakfast was truly Delmonican, and made amends for whatever was lacking in the cuisine. The price convinced me that we must have had a good meal without knowing it.

We survived and pushed on to Maricopa, and here John and I shake hands for good-bye, hoping it won't be four years until we see each other again. I go up Salt River Valley, while he flies eastward. Not being a politician, I have no fears of Salt River; but as I look upon its placid and winding stream, I wonder if this is the original Salt River where so many are wont to congregate. At any rate, for this country, it is a fountain of wealth. It makes these seemingly arid lands wonderfully productive.

Arizona conveys the impression of vast desert lands. Here is Death Valley, and Yuma, the hottest place on the continent, of whose inhabitant, who went to hades, it is reported that he sent back for his winter overcoat. Arizona is hot and desolate, lurid, without doubt, and yet in the bosom of these desert is uncounted wealth. Right here there will sometime be a brilliant world of fruits and flowers.

Arizona not only looks to the future with glittering hope, antiquity confronts one here with relics of by-gone splendor. Ancient canals and forts appear that must have been constructed by a most civilized people, different from any of the ancient now known. Arizona is a land of wondrous curiosities. Something of the mystery of Egypt, of the vast unknown of man life. There must have sometime been a mighty race and these wildernesses were a garden, and in the luminous atmosphere cities towered. Perhaps here was Bellamy's Eden in the far past. Who knows what might have been ere the floods swept to the mountains, and the winds blew the clouds of sands? Perhaps the garden of Eden was here, and in Arizona the first man walked and woman plucked the apple. It is affirmed by Cushing that this Salt River Valley once contained a population of 300,000. There are remains of dwellings, ten extensive buildings of adobe or sun dried brick. There are charred human bones, pottery, stone implements, tools of a tisan and husbandman, earthenware pots of fine clay, many colors and which resemble the jars of Guadalajara. One of the canals, of which traces remain, is supposed to have been sixty miles in length.

What Arizona was once in these dim ages it will be again with a thousand fold improvements. One can live easy in Arizona, in fact, too easy. Hard work is not necessary. There are three hundred and forty days of brilliant sunshine every year, and a day passes but some blue sky is seen. For three months in the year the heat is extreme, but sun-strokes are unknown. The air is dry and pure. From October to May, Arizona can boast the finest climate in the world. Neither fever nor malaria is common. There are no fogs. Through an area of 100,000 square miles, there are no bodies of standing water, no swamps, and no marshes. The streams all flow to the sea—there are "sinks." The drainage is rapid and complete.

The soil of the Salt River Valley is an alluvial deposit varying from six to twenty feet in depth. The amount of desert land reclaimed to cultivation when the canals now in process of construction are complete will aggregate millions of acres. Millions more can be reclaimed when the flood-water is stored in immense reservoirs in the mountain canyons.

The soil produces every variety of vegetation of the semi-tropical zone, cereals and grasses, textile plants, oranges, lemons, grapes, bananas, figs, peaches, strawberries, olives, etc. The cottonwood and mesquite are the native trees, but the elm and palm and magnolia, with others, have been introduced and grow strong and thrifty.

Phoenix, the capital of the territory, has a population of seven thousand. It is a lively, handsome place. J st-railways and water works, a fine opera house, city court-house. The main buildings are of brick and ne; the brick is manufactured here, and the stone is r Tempe. There are elegant residences and beautiful The Territorial Insane Asylum is located near. The fine trade from the surrounding agricultural region and of Cave Creek, Vulture, etc. It is the most populous Arizona.

FREETHOUGHT.

x has a noble Liberal element; in fact, the majority of e are in favor of Freethought, although many are not declare openly. Those who do stand by the flag are verous and devoted. It was a great pleasure to meet -hearted and live Western men. Phoenix is a typical It is cosmopolitan in its elements. There is a concen- of life which makes the pulse beat. The people are ntelligent, quick on the move, and equal to any occasion, vel fortune by their undaunted spirit.

W. Jensen, our Freethought comrade, works steadily on, solid citizen. J. D. Martin is an "old timer" and Lib- m head to foot. J. H. Burger is on the same list. He what Arizona can do in oranges, pears, and other fruits of st delicious flavor. He was here from the beginning and in the pioneer line wherever civilization conquers the ess. Judy Woods, R. H. Upton, J. B. Lacy, W. C. Col- the committee of arrangements, and many others gave liberal entertainment. I shook hands with so many that I record all their names, business and professional men, s in society and politics, representatives of a cultivated and ed community.

era House was nearly full on both nights, Friday and

I was advertised for Sunday, but could not remain. se would have been crowded that night. I shall be back ry. The legislature meets then, and an effort will be pass a Sabbath law. One was passed last year, but evi- so unconstitutional that it won't be enforced. It received et veto and its value is undetermined. The contest will ewed. The Liberals must combine and work. The ggs were a success and will undoubtedly exert a great influ- The campaign opens fire triumphantly.

mpé is situated on the south bank of Salt River, nine miles

Phoenix. It is a flourishing place in the heart of a rich ultural and horticultural country. The territorial normal ol is located near. There are fine brick blocks and resi- es. And who should I find first of all at Tempe but Colonel ow Judge—L. H. Hawkins. I was surprised and delighted. had campaigned together at Los Angeles. He lives at ppe, practicing law. He was going to Phoenix to "lend a d" at the Freethought meeting. He was chairman, and made fine opening addresses. Besides, he took me around to about e hundred people," I guess—among them, Ex-Governor Zu- s, Governor Murphy, judges, lawyers, doctors, bankers, mer- ants; and at the end of two hours I was quite well acquainted, id felt at home. I was no longer a stranger. I was pleased meet the editors of the "Republican" and the "Gazette," who n wield the quill effectively, and who possess genuine Western uck. I should judge they are good on the muscle if need be, it with plenty of intellectual force.

The orthodox adopted some very peculiar tactics. Not con- t with preaching against the Infidel, they passed around a hch the signers bound themselves not to go to the ppears that the Christians have very little confidence in themselves. It seems that Infidelity, in their eyes, is something—like sparkling champagne—so attractive that they must take a solemn pledge to abstain from the fascinating danger. Little girls were also sent around to pick up the handbills as fast as distributed. An opportunity was given for discussion at the lectures, but it was not accepted. We are under obligations to our Caristian friends for their unique method of advertising our work.

Saturday Judge Hawkins drove me from Phoenix to Tempe, to see the country and enjoy the wonderful weather, which was simply exhilarating. Then also there was the "barbecued pig," left from the feast of Thanksgiving night. They did "trip the light fantastic toe" at Tempe until dawn, but I missed that good time. Hawkins insisted, however, that I must have a piece of that pig, and I did. But I went to Tempe above all to see Mrs. Hawkins, now upon a bed of sickness, but always at the front in Freethought with pen and heart. I was pleased also to meet Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Hayden, who are enthusiastic Liberals with plenty of faith in every good thing, and the bright side of life both now and hereafter. Mr. Hayden is proprietor of the flour mill, store, etc., and is one of the pioneers of the territory. I have accepted an invitation to visit their ranch on my return. This is better than a trip beyond Jordan. I found many good Liberals in Tempe, and shall lecture there in January.

Prof. S. V. Schlesinger, with the band, furnished excellent music for the lectures, and I am under great obligations to him for the delightful strains. I hope he will be ready to give the same again in the near future. I find that the brightness and intelligence of the women of Arizona are in favor of Freethought, and this gives a splendid impulse to the work. The poet can sing of our gathering ranks, "There are fair women and brave men."

Phoenix does remind me of that brilliant bird of ancient fable. It rises from the ashy plain—where once was life—now dead forever. But a new life comes. The bird springs into the air and spreads its glittering plumage. Around it throng the stars of glory, the gemmed flag of liberty and progress. A newer, brighter world flows in shining splendor over those barren sands. Once there were the waters beaming in a thousand channels; and making green fields and vineyards and embowering forests where fruits glisten. The flame and flood of death succeed. The gentle, prosperous people disappear. The homes vanish. The wind-swept desert follows. But the Phoenix was in the luminous air. The wealth of its plumage was in the bosom of the earth, the flash of its eye and the music of its sweeping wing; and that glorious bird will wheel its lofty flight. Beautiful bird, symbol of hope and courage, greeting the western sun, in whose golden beams are the splendid pictures of man's happier destiny.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

THE FARMERS AND THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The members of the Farmers' Alliance have shown what kind of a body of citizens they are by passing at their Ocala convention a resolution asking that the World's Fair be closed on Sunday. They have thus struck hands with the American Sabbath Union, a body whose only work is agitation for a law to close everything except churches and preachers' mouths one day in seven.

If the Farmers' Alliance knew enough to work for the objects, it was organized to attain, it might do some good.

To "develop a better state mentally, morally, socially, and financially," which its Declaration of Purposes sets forth as its aim, is one of the best things any organization could do. A "better understanding for sustaining civil officers in maintaining law and order" is doubtless necessary in the South as elsewhere. It is well to "constantly strive to secure entire harmony and good will among all mankind;" and no one will object to any attempt to repress "personal, local, sectional, and national prejudices, all unhealthy rivalry, and all selfish ambition."

But how are these objects, or any of them, to be reached by closing the World's Fair on Sunday? Prejudice cannot be repressed by yielding to the prejudice of those who think Sunday amusement a crime. Harmony is not promoted by enforcing religious regulations regarded as oppressive by a large body of citizens. Law and order are not subserved by a course of action which brings them into contempt.

If the agriculturists who compose the Farmers' Alliance think, as many others do, that national banks work injustice to all but bankers, and that Senator Stanford's Land Loan bureau would be a good thing, let them urge the proper legislation looking to that end, and the repeal of such laws as are opposed to it. If they want the government to run the railroads, let them by argument bring to their way of thinking a sufficient number of voters to put the measure through. These are political questions, and find their proper place in a political platform. But Sunday closing of the World's Fair will not give us treasury notes at two per cent. It will not build government railroads, restore land grants to the public domain, bring about the Australian ballot, elect the president by a direct vote of the people, nor place silver on an equality with gold. Even if the World's Fair were closed on Sunday the "liquor business in all its forms" might still flourish, women would continue to be deprived of the ballot, the public school system would be unaffected, relations between the wife and the partner of a deceased husband would remain unchanged, and taxes would be collected but once a year. In fact, none of these things which are mentioned by the Declaration of Purposes of the Farmers' Alliance would be affected either directly or indirectly by the closing of the World's Fair on Sunday.

The case seems to be that this new political party is impressed with a belief in its mission to run the country as a majority of its members may deem correct, regardless of the rights and liberties of others. According to the "Southern Alliance Farmer," the organ of the party, "every Allianceman believes in the existence of God," and the God-in-the-Constitution party may therefore look for the farmers' active co-operation.

The accomplishment of the new party's specified objects will revolutionize the financial system of the country, as well as the system of transportation, communication, and distribution by rail. If the Alliance does this, the people will give it all the credit the achievement merits, even though it should have neglected to protest against opening the World's Fair on Sunday.

VISITATIONS.

With such various headings as "Punished for His Sin," "Stricken by the Hand of God," etc., the following item comes from Paris under recent date:

"A curious incident illustrating with what rapidity sin is sometimes punished has just occurred at Monte Carlo. A middle-aged Russian, with twinkling eyes and dark mustache, was playing heavily, when he suddenly fell dead at the roulette table. The man had one hundred louis staked. The body was removed by the attendants."

If sudden deaths like the above occurred only to people engaged in sinful occupations, the theory that they are the result of divine vengeance would have more to support it than it now has. But how will those who hold that sudden death is a punishment sent direct from heaven explain the following incident which happened nearer home?—

"NEW YORK, December 7.—The services held in Warren-street Methodist-Episcopal church, Brooklyn, this evening were of a sad nature, for every member of the congregation realized with greater force than ever the Biblical warning that 'in the midst of life we are in death.' The cause of sorrow and sadness in the little church was that William Perry, a member of the Board of Trustees and a member of the congregation for over twenty years, had died suddenly in church during the exercises preceding the regular services. He was giving a history of his conversion at what is called the 'testimony meeting.' He had about finished, when he stopped short, and placing one hand over his breast, said, 'I cannot say more,' and then whirling around fell upon the floor. His friends at first believed he had fainted, and they went to resuscitate him, but he was dead."

Or how is this explainable upon the same hypothesis?—

"NEW YORK, December 7.—The Rev. L. M. Dorman, for many years assistant rector of the Protestant Episcopal church of the Ascension at Fifth avenue and Tenth street, this city, died at the Church of the Holy Trinity on Montague street, Brooklyn, shortly before the commencement of the service last night. At the time Rev. Mr. Dorman was seated in the gallery, and was reading the musical programme. Mrs. Dorman, who sat at his side, noticed that her husband's face wore a pained expression, and when she asked him if anything was wrong he simply groaned and fell forward. The rector of the church, who was in the vestry preparing for the service, was notified, and he was soon by the dying clergyman's side. Dr. Spier was summoned, but on his arrival said that the minister was dead. The body of the dead clergyman was removed to the vestry, and only a few persons knew that the angel of death had visited the church, and consequently there was no excitement. The rector of the church, on returning to the main floor, proceeded at once to the chancel, where he delivered a prayer for those dying suddenly."

When these instances have been disposed of satisfactorily, this additional one is still left to be cleared up:

"NEW BRUNSWICK (N. J.), December 8.—While preaching to a large congregation at the East Millstone Reformed church last night the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. P. Strong, said: 'A man might fall as easy as a star from heaven.' The next instant his face turned ashy pale, he clutched wildly at the pulpit for support and then dropped on the floor in a fit of apoplexy. The horrified congregation was spell-bound for a moment. Then the cooler ones rushed to the prostrate pastor and raised him from the floor. He was taken home and died this morning. He was sixty years of age."

Any kind of heavenly visitation that would infallibly punish violations of law and morals would undoubtedly act as a strong deterrent to crime and sin, but when three men are struck dead in a church, to one visited with divine wrath in a gambling-house, the lesson taught is not favorable to church attendance as a safe practice compared with playing roulette. By and by, perhaps, even religious people will come to their senses, and admit that any providence we know of is too erratic to be relied upon to either punish offenses or reward well-meant actions.

THE FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The meeting of the San Francisco Freethought Society at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, Sunday evening, Dec. 14, will be addressed by MR. ALFRED CRIDGE; subject, "Are Men Better or Worse than Institutions?" Admission is free and all are invited.

If a Freethinker, through a series of years, should carry on forgeries to the extent of thousands of dollars, ruining his partners and those who trusted him; and if after his arrest, trial, and conviction, a Freethought Society, to which he had for years belonged, should pass resolutions of sympathy and still retain his name upon its list of members, the Christian world would say that as individuals and as a body, Freethinkers were condoners of crime. Yet a Christian of Brooklyn, N. Y., one Albert H. Smith, has been found guilty of the offense named, and while in jail, under sentence, his brethren of Plymouth church vote to "retain his name upon the rolls." This may be Christian charity and Christian morality, but from a wordly point of view it looks like bad policy. For years Smith has been forging and praying, and knew himself to be a rascal and a hypocrite. His repentance should have taken the form of restitution, for his contrition now cannot help those he has robbed. But Plymouth church is wealthy. Why do not its members make good the defalcation of the erring brother and prove their faith in him by their works?

MR. S. PALMER, of Livermore, Cal., procured and left at this office nearly one hundred signatures to the petition against closing the World's Fair on Sunday. D. Cook, Esq., of Greenwood, Wis., sends a list of twenty-five. Following is the memorial, which may be pasted at the top of a sheet of paper for signatures:

To the World's Columbian Exposition Committee:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the Fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of the separation of church and state may be maintained.
2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.
3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago, who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.
4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is solely a humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.
5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.
6. To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to a day of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.
7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

THE experiments of a mesmerist named Brown with victims of the opium habit in San Francisco's House of Correction are interesting in more ways than one. The psychologic influence under which patients reach a state where opium becomes repulsive to them may explain why some men have reformed their drinking habits through the efficacy of prayer. The controlling influence is about the same in both cases, though mesmerism is generally, by religious people, assigned to the domain of the devil, while the effects of prayer are attributed to God.

THE pope does not have everything his own way in Rome. The "Monitor" says:

"Under the direction and influence of the Masonic body, the warfare against Christianity is being carried on with unrelenting bitterness in Rome. A society has just been established in that city which proposes to erect a statue to our Lord bearing the inscription, 'To the Man Christ.' It is quite possible that the satanic project will be realized, for there are persons high in authority there who are ready to subscribe freely for any undertaking calculated to annoy and irritate their Catholic fellow-citizens."

Perhaps it is just as annoying to a Catholic to hear Christ called a man as it is to a reasonable person to hear him called a god, but why has the one any more reason to complain than the other?

NEWS comes from Chicago that a number of leading Germans have protested against paying their subscriptions to the World's Fair, until such time as they are given positive information as to whether the exposition is to be closed on Sundays or not. They are decidedly opposed to Sunday closing. The Commission should give this matter attention and let the country know what they propose to do about it.

KING KALAKAUA of Hawaii attended an Episcopal church in San Francisco last Sunday, and by partaking of the "holy communion" helped to consume what Episcopalians are pleased to term the body and blood of their redeemer. It is a more refined and religious sort of cannibalism than that prevailing in the islands of the South sea.

AMERICAN missionaries are accused of causing a war between the natives and foreigners in Japan, and the captain of an American vessel has been forced to remove the missionaries from a place called Ponapi to the island of Oulan. In the name of the Prince of Peace, religion carries dissension wherever it goes.

THE Parnellites and the anti-Parnellites will fight out their differences in the coming election in Kilkenny; so says a dispatch. The scene of the fray is appropriate, being the historical battleground of two cats, each of which thought there was one cat too many.

A GOOD Catholic is bound to be an enemy of the public schools. The "Church Progress" says: "When you hear a Catholic say that the public school is good enough for him, you may rest assured that he is on the ragged edge of his faith."

PATRONS ordering the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-book" from this office should inclose 25 cents for postage. After paying express charges on the book from New York to San Francisco we have no margin left for the expense of remailing it.

A WRITER in the "Examiner" classes works on religion with fictitious literature. He may possibly have received the hint from Edgar Saltus, the novelist, who when asked what, in his opinion, was the greatest character in fiction replied, "God."

OBSERVE that we offer "A Woman's Journey Around the World," cloth bound, as a premium to new subscribers to FREETHOUGHT, and to all old subscribers who renew before Jan. 15.

THE latest encyclical of the pope condemns slavery in Africa. Times have changed with the infallible one since the successor of St. Peter indorsed slavery in America by expressing his sympathy with the Southern Confederacy.

WE want hundreds of names of Freethinkers who are not taking FREETHOUGHT. To such we will send sample copies with an invitation to subscribe.

OBSERVATIONS.

A correspondent of the Boston "Investigator" asks if church property is taxed anywhere in the United States, and the editor replies that he knows of no such place. I am informed that church property in California is subject to taxation. The churches announce "special collections to pay taxes;" the colored Baptist church on Powell street gave a Thanksgiving dinner for the benefit of the tax fund, and this office has several times been visited by Sisters from the Convent of Unsatisfied Yearnings, who were taking contributions to meet the state's demand on Catholic church property. I do not know where the money they collected went to. As I gave them nothing I had no right to inquire, but it is generally understood that the city hall clerks got it. The assessors in San Francisco are to a certain extent Single-Taxers when church property is under consideration; that is, they assess the land, though usually at about half what it would sell for, and exempt the buildings on account of their moral and religious worth to the community. It may yet become necessary to abolish taxes altogether in order to get secular property on anything like an equal footing with that owned by ecclesiastical organizations. This method would be in a line with my scheme for doing away with corruption in office, namely, abolish the office and let the corrupt incumbent earn a living in the sweat of such relatives and friends as are willing to voluntarily contribute to his maintenance.

A good time was had at the Freethought Society's sociable and dance last Sunday evening. The brief literary and musical exercises consisted of remarks by Chairman Eastman, piano music by Miss Annie Lenont, songs by Miss Lillie Arper, a reading by Lilian Leland, and short addresses by Thomas Curtis and W. S. Bell. Professor Bell, in his remarks, spoke of the problem of life and how to make the best of existence. He had reached the conclusion that no one would get more from the sum total of pleasure than he worked out for himself by following the course likely to give him the greatest amount of happiness. The doctrine of the beneficent results of self-sacrifice was being questioned, for we are finding that in the end it does not pay. Mr. Bell said a kind word to the many young ladies present, and hoped that hereafter they would be as numerous at the lectures as at the sociables.

Mr. Thomas Curtis made some observations on the correct rearing of children, which were quite interesting to me. He closed by exhibiting a phase of his mediumship, causing a cane to stand erect between his knees, and to fall to the right or left in obedience to his directions. A piece of thread passing from one knee to the other, with a turn around the stick, may have had something to do with producing the phenomenon, though it is not my business to go behind appearances.

About forty people enjoyed the dance, and I noticed that whenever a male person desired a partner he was obliged to decoy her from a group in the corner, of which Professor Bell was the effulgent and coruscating center. Mr. Curtis, though no longer young, polkaed briskly with Miss Lilian Andrews, aged 13, whose stories in this paper have attracted attention in the past. Since Lilian won the first prize for a story in a juvenile paper she has fixed a price upon her work which places it beyond the reach of reform journals.

It was quite late when the strains of "Home, Sweet Home" came from the corner where the piano is located. As our rural press is in the habit of saying, the occasion was one long to be remembered, and the guests dispersed wishing many returns of the same.

Next Sunday evening lecturing will be resumed, and Mr. Alfred Cridge will discuss the question whether men are as bad as their institutions.

Some publishing house whose managers are not unwilling to deceive the public has recently issued an edition of Rousseau's "Confessions" in a flashy cover, on which is the picture of a lawless looking woman with a serpent and an apple at her side. These emblems are supposed to typify the forbidden fruit, the devil, and the seduction of Eve. The publishers seem to be ashamed of their trick, for they do not put their imprint on the work. I had always thought of Rousseau as more of a philosopher than pander, though I confess not to have read much of what he wrote, and when I saw the present volume I purchased a copy and looked it through. It is the story of his life, and although his confessions are too much like those of the Rev. Dr. Munro of Stockton to make them wholly of value, they contain nothing to justify the libelous cut on the cover page. His adventures with this and that woman, from the street walker to the titled lady, he tells in his straightforward style, without stopping to apologize, though that he should have regarded them as of any interest to posterity is a matter of surprise in view of his reputation for good sense. Perhaps he may have been triflingly afflicted with self-conceit, for he was the most popular man in France, being much sought after at one period by those who wished to honor him, and again by those who wanted his scalp.

The flashy edition of Rousseau's "Confessions" being the only kind procurable in San Francisco, except at an exorbitant price, led me to send East for the work in a more presentable and reasonable shape. I got a supply in cloth binding at $1.25 per copy, and those who want to get Rousseau minus the objectionable cover mentioned can find him at this office. I write in the interest of justice to Rousseau, and not in a commercial spirit.

My good and venerable friend, the Hon. A. Schell, delivered a lecture last Sunday afternoon in the schoolhouse at Knight's Ferry to an audience that filled the temple of learning until the sides of it bulged outward. He had procured the permission of the Union church trustees to speak in the tabernacle, but the Methodists preferred that the trustees should break their agreement rather than keep it with a man who has more faith in honesty than in hellfire as a means of grace, and the permission was revoked. That is the reason why Mr. Schell spoke in the schoolhouse.

The subject of the lecture was announced as "The Conflict of Law," and Mr. Schell added a Nota Bene to his circular, saying that no reflections would be cast on any church or religion; but the shabby deal the Methodists had given him made it necessary that the "N. B." should be overlooked, and it is said that Mr. Schell gave fanaticism and bigotry such a prodding as it had never before received in Stanislaus county. Mr. Schell, as those who heard him speak in San Francisco last winter are aware, places greater stress upon education than upon direct assault on error, and his method is to undermine superstition without saying much about religion, which is the same thing. However, on this occasion he was the injured party, and he is not the kind of person to turn the other cheek. It is not unreasonable to believe the Methodists are now willing to admit that perhaps it would have been just as well, all things considered, to let Mr. Schell deliver his original discourse in the Union church.

At last accounts the smoke of battle had not entirely cleared away. The refusal of the church offended the Knight's Ferry people's sense of justice, so that public feeling is against the bigots. Added to this, some copies of FREETHOUGHT will be handed about town, and several citizens have gone on the list as yearly subscribers. There is a way for fanaticism to overreach itself, as the Methodists may now have discovered. I would mildly suggest some subdued but earnest cheering for this stern old hero of Knight's Ferry, who, though first in peace, is not last in war when Methodist gentlemen think they want it.

In another place in this paper Mr. Frederick May Holland accepts my invitation to discuss the question whether we have a system of morality that should be practiced regardless of consequences. What he has said is a valuable contribution to the subject. The matter of morality has been largely placed in the hands of ministers and priests, who tell us that God has laid down certain rules for our guidance. These ministers and priests of course do not practice the rules themselves, and induce but few of their followers to do so; but clergymen are only human, and like a majority of us they shine much brighter in precept than in example. I think it is safe to say that the clergymen are mistaken in their claim that Christian morality is founded on a revelation from God. It is safe, in fact, to leave them out of the discussion, and to inquire whether the field of morality, as well as that of religion, is not still open for free investigation and further discovery. To say that any line of conduct is forbidden by God is about the poorest excuse any one can give for not following it. To say that it is contrary to the laws of man does not always settle the question, because, taken as a whole, there have been more bad laws than good ones. In breaking a law nowadays a man stands ten chances to one of doing a deed for which future ages will applaud him. Laws are the codified ignorance and prejudice, as well as wisdom, of the persons who frame them. They express what the majority are supposed to think right, but I decline to see how a vote can alter a fact. If a theory is false its nature cannot be changed simply by inducing a large number to believe it true. Therefore, letting the alleged laws of God go as spurious, and realizing that the laws of man are often superfluous and unreliable literary performances, what authority is there left for saying that a certain act is good and another one not so? This is a question to which attention is now being paid by many persons of great thinking capacity. Perchance the preface of Dr. Westbrook's Prize Manual will deal with it and give us a solution. Meanwhile, with suspended judgments, we should endeavor to do what we think is right, renew our subscriptions, and be as good as we are beautiful.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

King Kalakaua of the Sandwich Islands, now in San Francisco, professes to be an Episcopalian. Last Sunday he attended Trinity church and partook of the communion.—The Sunday closing ordinance went into effect at Los Angeles last Sunday and all the saloons were shut up.—Nearly all the trades unions of San Francisco have indorsed the Hon. John M. Days for labor commissioner. Mr. Days has always been active in the labor cause, and is a man of Liberal views. He spoke before the Freethought Society last season.—The Lick Free Baths in this city were opened November 3, and during the following month 11,152 people bathed in the establishment, and there were nearly a thousand other visitors.—Mrs. John F. Miller, widow of Senator Miller of California, died in Washington December 6.—Senator Stanford will make another plea before the Senate for the passage of his bill authorizing the issue of $100,000,000 in treasury notes to be loaned at 2 per cent to owners of agricultural lands. Senator Stanford denies that he is a candidate for the presidency.—A reporter named Rappley has just reached San Francisco after journeying from New York hither in a canoe. He brought a bottle filled with water from the Atlantic and emptied it into the Pacific.—The iron molders' strike, after continuing for ten months, is still unsettled. The foundries are losing many contracts on account of inability to fill them.—O'Donnell, the defeated candidate for mayor of San Francisco, demands a new count, which he will probably get. He claims to have been defrauded of 6,000 votes.

An English monk calling himself Ignatius is doing a revival business at Chickering Hall in New York. He is a ranter and nothing more.—Joe Coburn, the pugilist, died in the odor of Catholic sanctity at New York last Saturday, aged fifty-five.—In a speech before the Farmers' Alliance at Ocala, Fla., December 6, Master Workman Powderly condemned labor-saving machinery as a fraud which cheated the laboring man out of his right to work.—The secretary of the treasury has issued a circular inviting proposals for sale to the government of $5,000,000 4 per cent bonds; the funds deposited by the Navy Department to the credit of disbursing officers for quarterly payments, and during the week of December 11 $21,000,000 will be paid out on account of pensions. This, together with the $5,000,000 to be paid for bonds under the above call, will make $26,000,000 to be put into circulation within the next week or ten days.—The bondsmen of the celebrated painting, "The Angelus," lately imported, must pay $16,500 duty on the picture.—There is a chance that a copyright law will be passed whereby the works of foreign authors may be copyrighted in this country provided the mechanical work is done here.—A Kansas City preacher named Boaz has been fined $11 for carrying concealed weapons. The same clergyman was recently acquitted by a church commission of the charge of immoral conduct with a woman.—Louis D. Sanborn, of Saginaw, Mich., a member of the Methodist church, and always considered a most exemplary young man, has left the city, having realized on forged paper during the last ninety days to the extent of over $30,000. Previous to departure he made an assignment to his mother. His liabilities are estimated at over $100,000.

The Parnell trouble has split the Irish party, one faction having Justin McCarthy for leader, and the other retaining Parnell.—The lord mayor of London has called a meeting to see if England will not interfere on behalf of the Jews who are so inhumanly treated by Russia.—It is stated that during the forty-nine years of his life the Prince of Wales has drawn $16,500,000 from the public treasury of Great Britain, and his debts now amount to $3,000,000.—Emperor William of Germany has been talking on the school question. He says the German schools tend to an overproduction of highly educated people, from whom the ranks of journalism are recruited in the shape of "hunger candidates" most dangerous to society. The emperor declares he will not license any more high schools until their method is changed.

VICTORY FOR CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS IN WASHINGTON.

In the case of Mr. Samuel Christopher, of Seattle, re-arrested for keeping open barber shop, shaving, and cutting hair on Sunday, and taken before the Superior Court, the Sunday fanatics retained the most able counsel they could procure; no expense was spared; every effort being put forth to secure conviction. After argument on demurrer entered by our counsel, Mr. Richard Winsor, the court sustained the demurrer, which was that the Superior Court has no original jurisdiction in such cases—they must be brought before a justice of the peace. The prisoner was discharged.

In the cases of the clothing merchants, that of our member, Mr. Hershburgh, was, after long delay, made a test case before a jury in a justice's court, Col. Jas. H. Lewis and General Metcalf for the defense. The jury rendered a verdict of acquittal, and all the prisoners were discharged. The victory for the Washington Secular Union was complete, as was the defeat of the Sunday fanatics in their endeavor to enforce rigid Sunday observance by the revival of a territorial Sunday law that is in direct conflict with the state constitution in letter and spirit.

As the matter now stands, the police judge has decided that the word "trade" in the Sunday law does not apply to handicraft, mechanical labor, or ordinary lawful work or occupation, but to the sale or barter of goods or merchandise. The superior court has decided it has no jurisdiction in such cases except on appeal from a justice's court, where proceedings must be commenced, and in the justice's courts here, as at Spokane Falls, the jury promptly acquitted the accused. Thus our victory is so far complete, and the fanatics are utterly routed. We would have preferred that a case should be carried to the supreme court, and be decided, but we can well afford to rest content. Fanatics in some parts of the state may annoy by causing arrests for work or business done on Sunday, but as all such arrests will inevitably result in acquittal, not many prosecutions will be attempted. Thus justice will triumph.

Those who think it wrong to keep places of business open on Sunday can carefully keep their places closed; and those who think it wrong to buy and sell on Sunday only need to keep away from open stores. As an answer to the pretense that Christians are disturbed, and cannot enjoy their religious worship on Sunday because some are quietly following business or amusement, we call attention to the fact that Jews, Seventh-day Adventists, and Seventh-day Baptists always worship on Saturday, "the only true sabbath of God, Christ and the Bible," yet they find no difficulty in enjoying their worship, though Saturday is the very busiest day of all the week.

mark this

The W. S. U. can now give undivided attention to the question of "Religious exercises in our public schools." There have been many vexatious delays in getting a test case before the courts. No mandamus can be obtained until proof is furnished that the applicant for relief has made appeal to the school board, and has been refused. Our president, Mr. Richard Winsor, and myself, have attended school boards only to find no quorum or a rush of business so we could not be heard. In this city, after several vain efforts, we thought we had a sure hearing, when the term of some members expired, and an election had to be held and a new board organized. We are hopeful of securing a hearing before the school board of this city on next Monday evening.

The Annual Congress of the Washington Secular Union, at which officers will be elected for the ensuing year, is appointed for February 22, 1891—Washington's Birthday—changed from January 29 on account of the very disagreeable weather usual at that time. All members will please take notice, and govern themselves accordingly.

C. B. REYNOLDS,

2104 Sixth st., Seattle, Wash.

Sec'y W. S. U.

MORAL PURITY.

The editor of FREETHOUGHT invites contributors to discuss this subject briefly; and I wish to have it understood that I write in sincere respect for the people with whose opinions I must differ.

Morality means to me simply conformity to the conditions of social existence and progress. Conduct which promotes civilization is morally right; and actions which retard it are morally wrong. Conscience has been created by the efforts of fathers of families, priests, kings, legislators, and others in authority, to encourage actions thought beneficial to civilization, and check those considered injurious. Conscience has always laid great stress on matrimonial fidelity; and this is largely because children need so many years of parental care as to make permanence of family relations absolutely necessary, not only for progress in civilization, but even for the continued existence of mankind. This fact makes matrimonial fidelity a duty which becomes more and more important as the progress of civilization lengthens the period during which children need to be educated and otherwise cared for. To have marriage contracts generally of brief duration would be bad for the children and therefore for the next generation.

I fully admit that divorce ought to be easy enough to enable women to protect themselves against cruelty and tyranny, and that the power given by the writer of 1 Corinthians vii, 4, is shamefully despotic, but I do not wish to have it made any more easy than at present for husbands to desert their wives. It should also be remembered that a divorced woman is subjected to much opprobrium by the existing state of public opinion, and that public opinion on this subject is to a great extent justified by the importance of keeping together the family. It may be added that one reason why the standard of fidelity is made higher for the wife than for the husband, is that her transgression is more likely than his to make continuance of the family impossible, for a man has a right to object to the burden of other men's offspring.

Illicit relations between unmarried men and women may be justly censured, because those who indulge in them are apt to form similar relations with married people also. The woman who has improper relations with men finds her conscience, if she has any, condemns her so severely as to destroy her self-respect; and in actual fact, lewd women are generally immoral in other ways also. A man's conscience is usually made less sensitive than a woman's by the greater strength of his passions; but the very fact that his passions are so strong makes the habit of indulging them freely incompatible with the highest intellectual and moral excellence. Excessive growth of any part of our nature must be at the expense of other parts; and it is peculiarly the duty of those who hold advanced views to encourage the supremacy of intellect and conscience by keeping the animal passions in check.

F. M. HOLLAND.

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN CANADA.

In the November Forum, W. Blackburn Harte, a newspaper writer of Canada, has an article on "French Canada and the Dominion" in which some surprising, not to say startling, statements are made relative to the attitude of the French Catholics toward the Dominion government. Other Canadian writers have hinted at the strained relations existing between the French and the English speaking classes in the lower provinces of the Dominion, but none of these has pictured so clearly the situation. The avowed purpose of the French Catholic leaders including the clergy, says the article, is to establish a Catholic French state within the Dominion boundaries that will be independent of the civil government. To such an extent has this sentiment developed that a race war is impending in the province of Quebec.

The Roman Catholic church in Canada, says Mr. Harte, is only nominally a religious institution. Its chief function appears to be political, and while the English speaking Canadians have no quarrel with the Catholic church as a religious body, they demand that it shall not become a militant system of politics. It is the determination of the people of the English-speaking provinces to prevent the further usurpation of the functions of government by the church that has precipitated the trouble. If the French Catholics were loyal to the government, and worked in harmony with the inhabitants of the other provinces for the general good, the existing bad feeling between the races would not have been engendered. But, says Mr. Harte, the French Canadians are entirely ignorant of their duty to the commonwealth. In this respect, he says, they have no principle whatever. The church dictates in what direction they shall vote, and they vote with the Liberals in the provincial elections, and with the Conservatives in the Dominion elections. The extent to which clerical influence is exercised was shown in 1889, when the question of granting $400,000 to the Jesuits was before Parliament. M. Mercier, the premier, publicly threatened the Roman Catholic members of the legislature with the pains and penalties of the church if they should refuse to vote for the measure.

In the province of Quebec, Mr. Harte states, there are a few thousands more than a million of Catholics, yet there are 7,500 persons, not including bishops, engaged in the service of the church, and the church property of the province has a value of $120,000,000. Thus there is one clergyman to every 130 Catholics, and the church holds untaxed property to the amount of $120 for each Catholic. "The state collects the church's tithes and assessments," says Mr. Harte, "allows her to handle directly and indirectly about one-fifth of the provincial revenue, and gives her the absolute control of public education, but is not permitted to inquire into her financial concerns, or to interfere in the conduct of the schools."

With such political power it would seem that the ambition of the church might be satisfied, but instead of being so the church is openly fostering a sentiment of disloyalty in order to secure absolute control of the government; or, in other words, to establish a Catholic state. If the facts stated by Mr. Harte were not matters of record, and his conclusions supported by the facts, he might be considered an alarmist when he predicts a race war as a consequence of the aggressive policy of the French Catholics. An insurrection, he declares, must come sooner or later, and, if necessary, Canada will cease to be British in order to release herself from church control. The most alarming feature of the situation to the people of the English-speaking provinces is the disposition of the Dominion government to grant every demand made by the church. The church looks upon every legislative measure as having a bearing upon its interests, and therefore does not confine its interference to measures affecting directly church interests. Every bill that comes up must meet the approval of the clerical party or it goes down.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

SEE the advertisement of C. F. Burgman, the tailor, and go to him for a holiday suit.

MIRACLES DEFENDED.

Agnostics declare a miracle to be a transgression of the unalterable laws of nature, and therefore not possible under any circumstances. But no one can prove that natural laws are so inflexible that the creator would not, for a special purpose, violate them. Their violation is not to remedy any defect in nature, as some objectors assert, but to serve as an attestation that certain persons have been entrusted with a message from God to men. A divine revelation must come well attested. Unless a person, professing to have such, perform miracles as proof that God has sent him, no one would be able to judge as to the truth or falsity of his assertion.

It has been assumed by many theologians that a miracle is no more a violation or suspension of natural laws than is the lifting of a book or the throwing of a stone. As we lift a book without disturbing the laws of nature, so also may God uplift a mountain or give life to the dead. On this point, F. W. Guest, F. G. S., in "A Young Man's Perils," uses the following language: "There are no laws of the universe except the direct agency of God. If, then, he interposes to arrest a subject-law, there is no suspension of the laws of nature; it is still the supreme law in operation. For example: By the law of gravitation, a ball dropped from the top of a tower falls to the earth. But suppose a man catches it in his hand, is the law of gravitation suspended? Not at all. A controlling law is brought into operation to which this law is obedient. Thus you have the agency of God in miracles."

The evidence on which the historic reality of the gospel miracles rests is perfect, as every honest student of history must admit. Even Rousseau, the great skeptic, once acknowledged that if the miracles did not occur, then the existence of the vast amount of evidence in their favor is more miraculous than the miracles themselves.

Let us examine, briefly, the evidence in support of that great miracle on which Christianity is founded—the resurrection of Jesus Christ. First, we have the testimony of four independent witnesses who sacrificed home, reputation, and even life itself, as proof that they sincerely believed in that event. It is asserted by skeptics that the four accounts of the resurrection are irreconcilable, but a careful investigation will convince the honest inquirer that they are "various but not contradictory. They are capable of perfectly easy and perfectly natural reconciliation, and are a valuable proof of independence" (Cambridge Bible).

We have also the evidence of Paul to the resurrection. In fact, we have the testimony of every member of the early Christian church. For that the early Christians believed that Christ rose from the dead is proved from the fact that they accepted the gospels and epistles as inspired books. No matter what may be said concerning the authenticity of some of the books of the New Testament, it is admitted by the Freethinkers themselves that four of Paul's epistles are genuine, so strong is the evidence in support of that fact. Why, then, were these epistles received by the early Christians unless Paul's testimony to the resurrection, which appears on every page of that great apostle's writings, were fully believed? There was no chance to deceive these people, for they themselves were able to perform miracles as proof that Christ had risen. T. DARLEY ALLEN.

Kingston, Ont.

THE GOD OF THE FAITHFUL.

To imagine a man born with all the possibilities of his nature fully developed, would be considered irrational. It requires growth and time and knowledge derived from experience and constant diligence and application to produce a specimen answering faintly to the above description.

Infinitely more irrational appears to be, to the reflecting mind, the conception of an eternal and uncreated being existing of his own volition, omniprevaling in space, and supposed to be endowed by his own might with the powers of omniscience and omnipotence and all the wisdom and virtue incarnate, attained incipiently and without any experience whatsoever; a being, in fact, instantaneously possessed of the above enumerated attributes, perfection throughout. A human being imagined as having acquired all the knowledge his nature is capable of, and so having made the utmost use thereof, and probably by being satiated with all the pleasures of this world, or if you will, with all the misery thereof, would naturally wish to die, not finding any further use to retain his life. Perchance in hopes of future bliss, he may, with some delight, embrace the thought of death; whichever way, he had an object for living, and equally so an object for dying, with or without any future expectations.

The being called God, as contemplated by the faithful of the human race, the supposed creator of the universe, in view of his eternal life and his perfection, can never cherish any satisfaction or hopes. Another world he cannot conquer or create, for want of more material and for the lack of space, for his creations, as conceived, compass all matter and infinity, and, by being the possessor and the genius of creation, he cannot crave for greater power or greater ingenuity; for the totality of present, past, and future, with all the infinitude of wonderful creations and their changes, are by right his own handiwork from and for all eternity, and by his omnipotence, at will and instantaneously, before his vision or otherwise created, and nothing new is left to him, which naturally included the varying ingenuity as displayed by all the sentient beings of his own make. Domestic felicity he does not enjoy, for the one-god idea would be destroyed, and endless other gods, and probably some aspiring goddesses, might fight for superiority, a too disastrous calamity to be admitted as pertaining to the eternal harmony of all creation, and one which never can be entertained; and otherwise the story of his own begotten son, the Jesus Christ of Nazareth, or any other pagan notion regarding the family affairs of that supposed deity, is too preposterous a fiction, aside from lacking sense in application to his might and powers. Friendless, then, and unappreciated for want of a befitting equal in the universe, alone in his inconceivable grandeur, his life portrays the utmost isolation, for the thought that such tremendous deity should ever find his satisfaction or happiness in the constant praise and adoration of puny beings of his own make, or silently behold with satisfaction the wonders of his great creation, is too ridiculous to entertain; it is contradictory in its nature to his supposed attributes, it would be but self-glorification extended to eternity, prolonged by infinity. How listless, then, and cheerless and probably annoyed must be his feeling and his attitude towards his own accomplished work, not mentioning the stereotyped pleadings and everlasting supplications or prayers for all eternity. No change for him, in spite of all the changes; it is constant looking in the looking-glass to see his own self portrayed. What horror of existence, what monstrous life for a divinity, baffling all description, more than any god should suffer. Though happily his absolute perfection is the redeemer of his doleful life; he did not make a thing short of this great perfection, for otherwise he would not be a god, but simply one like any other erring, faltering being, who has to remodel his work, his fiat spoken, which is but one of meaning or power with that deity; the universe, his work, sprang into life, perfect throughout and with all the wonders and the beauties and all the horrors in existence, and all their predestined changes infinite, including all the sentient beings and their changes for all eternity.

Its whirling on with that perfection that everlasting universe, away along for all eternity, away along in wondrous infinity: The powers changed the mastership, the workings of the universe attained an automatic action. Jehovah rests! robbed of further usefulness by his own perfect creation. ROBERT NAGLER.

PUTNAM IN ARIZONA.

From the Phoenix (A. T.) Republican, Nov. 30.

The opera house was filled last night to hear S. P. Putnam lecture on "Freethought and Morality," the subject announced the evening before.

L. H. Hawkings made some remarks introductory of the subject and the speaker, after which he presented Mr. Putnam, who said, in part: "Self-respect is the grand sentiment of Freethought. We should teach self-respect. From self-respect emanates dignity, and dignity is the quality of man. Orthodoxy teaches us that man is a miserable sinner; that he was born into this world sinful from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet, and that man must cringe before the majesty of God. Freethought teaches sympathy; sympathy is the brotherhood of mankind—a universal good-will unprejudiced by sectarian bounds.”

The speaker expatiated upon the church practice of sending money to convert the heathen, and advised the application of the money at home for the upbuilding of morals and the proper education of men. “The heathen, by the teaching, gets but one theological notion in his head in the place of another. What we want is proper education, the education of the physical; we are to recognize the supremacy of the world; that is, to become perfect in the world; to reach to perfection and glory in the world. The education of humanity is, first, to teach the laws of physical health; secondly, to train the young to act, to do something, an industrial education. The grandest glory of a man or woman is to be a working man or woman. A college graduate who could calculate an eclipse and could not calculate a good dinner was one of the inconsistencies.

“The teaching of Freethought is the advancement of civilization, and civilization is the effect of man’s will. While orthodoxy teaches that the crown of glory and immeasurable happiness are in heaven, none of the believers want to go there. They prefer to remain here.”

Illustrating, the speaker told of the clergyman on the sinking ship, who asked the captain if they must sink, and when told by the captain that he would be an angel in another minute, said “God forbid.”

The speaker, in closing, explained the organization of Freethought societies, national, state, and municipal, and urged the formation of a county society at Phoenix. He was compelled to leave to-morrow, but expected to return in January next.

Chairman Hawkins followed Mr. Putnam with a few further remarks, in which he offered the courtesy of the rostrum and the audience to any one desiring to answer Mr. Putnam or to discuss the questions involved in the Liberal theory, and offered himself to meet any speaker in joint discussion at any future time. Dr. Hughes was called, and arose in the audience. He regretted that the lateness of the hour prevented any discussion, and said the Freethinkers generally think but one way. He, however, would be glad to shake hands with any man who advances the theory of human sympathy and advancement of civilization.

THE POETRY OF NATURE.

Far away, in a land unknown, in Nature’s most secluded spot, in a vale which no man hath ever trod, is the home of Poesy. From this mysterious spot are the fairy elves sent out on a grand mission—to create, without the aid of man, the glorious poetry of Nature. Their little poems lie round about us, but their intense beauty is veiled to many. It is only the rare, exceedingly sensitive minds that can fully appreciate what is written in the rosebud or the violet, in the murmuring rivulet, in the ocean’s roar, or on the towering mountain.

And it may be better so, for once under its fairy-like spell, the mind is wafted into the dreamy dimness of a temporary Elysium. Perhaps, however, the bees and the birds and the butterflies, and all the myriad colored insects that skim across our horizon, some so bright and so dainty that ofttimes we think we have seen the poet fays themselves; perhaps this poetry is for them.

Nature through all her depths is full of it—varied but ever suggestive to the imagination. We feel it in the early morning when the sky is just touched with roses, and the stars sparkle and fade away in the brilliancy of the advancing sun; when the dew glitters on every twig and blade of grass, and the flowers give forth their sweetest odors. We feel it in the heat of mid-day; we feel it in the hush of quiet night, when the cricket sings his merry, chirping song, and the night winds moan and sob. Who has not heard these “wild and mighty and mysterious singers,” these voices of the night?

Then in the pleasant spring time, when little feathery birds charm us with their impromptu songs, their little poems, when the trees hang out their white or pink spangles, too many of us miss the glow of emotion which hovers in the air. And as the season advances and wild flowers adorn each meadow, do we all catch the low music into which the sounds of the earth blend? But autumn is most truly the poet’s season; when the leaves begin to turn bright yellow, red, and brown, and are falling, falling, falling, the atmosphere becomes full of mellow beauty and subdued melodies, the sweeter for the sad farewell they convey.

As the winter time approaches, these wailing sounds are echoed and re-echoed everywhere. Everything is being prepared for the reception of the Winter King. It is seldom that he tarries long on the way, and only in a favored spot, like our own Garden City, is he unattended by Jack Frost, snow fairies, and ice gnomes. The frozen poetry—if we may so call it—of Master Frost’s elves is very pleasing, for they, like all poets, try to reproduce the beautiful.

Aye, poetry is truly a celestial gift, yet it is not difficult for those who love it to find it everywhere. In wandering through the woods, one is often attracted by the low, faint sounds which the wind seems to shake from the trees. In the words of the poet:

“The soft winds wake
Till every sound in Nature’s solemn lyre
Is touched to answer; its most secret tone
Drawn from each tree, for each hath Whispers all its own.”

These whispers are so soothing that, for the time being, all thoughts of the outside world, its petty worries, its strifes, are forgotten. The spell which seems to have been laid on the Greenwood is still more enhanced by the sounds of a rippling stream, at the foot of a rocky ravine. The frail violets and ferns on its banks seem ever to bend forward to hear the verses it murmurs, as it tells of the wonderland it hath seen, since it left its home on the mountains, and of the shady nooks and tiny cells whose secrets it knows.

Quite different from the thoughts this rivulet awakens is the emotion we feel on the ocean, when the cold mists rise, and hollow mutterings, like the wail of strange sea-beings, reach us. These sounds, and the stillness around, recall to mind Keat’s “Endymion,” and we can easily imagine the Grecian lad wandering in ocean’s coral halls, seeing strange beings, sylphs and sea-nymphs, and strange lights so weird and unearthly. In the meanwhile, a low sound floats to our ear, and visions of mermaids rise before us. The more we listen to the poetry around us, the more beauties do we see. Perhaps we compare some out-of-the-way cave with the curious chamber carpeted with sea-shells, and tapestried with moss, to which Shelley’s old hermit bears the liberated youth. Truly those who live by the sea should read nothing but those grand poems which are in harmony with the world around them.

Naturally, poets have ever been the best interpreters of Nature, and there are many, no doubt, who will agree with us that the finest written verses are those which give to her language, and present the thoughts and feelings she awakens. Indeed, it is one of the duties of the maker of verse, to serve as a medium between the Nature he understands and the mankind who have no access to her. We all can recall certain poems which so truly accord with the natural world that their beauties are enhanced when read in the open air. There is Chaucer, with his frank, child-like affection for flowers and birds, green lanes, and May days; Burns, whom we associate in our minds with mountain daisies; Keats, who displays his almost passionate love for the universe in every one of his works. Then there is the one whose genius and whole being are associated with external nature. If others have surpassed Wordsworth in description, none has entered into her thoughts, and communed so deeply, so tenderly with her.

“His daily teachings had been woods and rills,
The silence that is in the starry sky,
The sleep that is among the lonely hills.”

There, too, is the bewitching grace of Shelley’s descriptions; Shelley, who was so sensitive to beauty who saw the fleeting things in Nature, which are too delicate for our eyes. He heard her poetry if any one did, and from it he learned that marvelous melody of his verse; from it, his poems caught their unparalleled shades of light and color. Almost as unconscious as Nature’s verse creators, he stands high above all others, as a pure, true poet.

But many, while full of admiration for these men of genius, yet, having never themselves communed with the external world, consider their works a few frail dreams and fancies. They acknowledge that there is such a thing as beautiful scenery; but as to letting it speak to them, they have no time for such spendthrift thoughts. No time! Yet they have time to enfeeble their health, to grow ill-tempered in their ceaseless striving after gold. No time? No time to feel the joy that arises, the happiness that pervades the whole being in the soul's contact with nature. No time, alas, to live the happiest, the purest of lives!

"Nature never did betray
The heart that loved her; 'tis her privilege
Through all the years of this, our life, to lead
From joy to joy; for she can so inform
The mind that is within us, so impress
With quietness and beauty; and so feed,
With lofty thoughts, that neither evil tongues,
Rash judgments, nor the sneers of selfish men,
Nor greetings where no kindness is, nor all
The dreary intercourse of daily life,
Shall e'er prevail against us or disturb
Our cheerful faith, that all which we behold
Is full of blessing"—and poetry.

CLARA VOSTROVSKY.

The Washington County Secular Union.

To the Editors of Freethought:

We have a live organization here, of fifty-three members, and we expect to do some good work the coming year. We had three fine lectures from Mr. Remsburg, October 21, 22, and 23, which were listened to by appreciative audiences. We liked him very much and hope to have the pleasure of greeting him again in the near future. We have heard such eloquent speakers here that a lecturer has to be very good indeed to meet with hearty appreciation. When speakers are obliged to follow such orators as Mr. Putnam and Mrs. Krekel they have to do their best, and we have heard their best here. As Mrs. Krekel has been elected field secretary, we shall devote the most of our lecture fund to her support the coming year, and shall hope to have some splendid work done. She has no superior on this coast, either on the platform, in organizing local Unions, or in missionary work in new fields.

Taxing church property, the Bible in the schools, and the Sunday law are three questions that are agitating our community just now, not a little.

I shall send you a list of subscribers, which I know will be more welcome than gossip. I wish every subscriber would do as well as I have for you this year; there would then be no question, "Will FREETHOUGHT live?" It would be on such a solid financial basis that success would be certain.

I think a good plan to be adopted by the secretaries of our local Unions in Oregon, Washington, and also California, would be to write once a month to FREETHOUGHT "short articles" stating progress, reporting new members, lectures, or whatever they are doing to help on the Liberal work; in this way the interest in each locality would be kept up and a noble ambition to excel in the good cause would stimulate the members to better work. Let us hear from others in regard to this.

Forest Grove, Or.

SARAH C. TODD,

Secretary Washington County Secular Union.

An Acknowledgment.

To the Editors of Freethought:

DEAR FRIENDS: In looking over your estimable paper of last week we noted the kindly word you offered for the part taken in the late campaign through the humble agency of our paper. It is a compliment which we hope is justly earned. Religiously, you need no introduction to our creed, and while our paper has left the discussion of religion entirely alone, I believe there has grown up in our state, in the past two or three years, a little more terror of hell as the result of legal enactments than the kind the preachers talk about, a little more concern in looking after their temporal welfare and running a risk as to the future. In fact, speculation in futures in Kansas is not near the craze it was at one time. You people are doing a grand work along that line, and our old senior publishing "Christna" is also doing a good work in his chosen line, and it remains for the Non-Con. to take in a little wider scope and temper the public mind for the more Radical ideas advanced by yourself and co-workers. The landslide in Kansas is a paralyzer whichever way you look at it, and the fact that nearly every church in the state was preaching and praying the day before election for the success of the Republican ticket, demonstrates, as we remarked last week, which side of the political house stands best with the court. You hit it about right when you said no county in Kansas would be large enough to hold us; you might have said state. We shall stay with the forthcoming legislature till it completes its work, which, if well done, will very likely be the signal for our changing to a larger city. It is surprising to ourselves, the growth of our house in the twelve years; we receive more subscribers in a single week now than we did the first year; our book-sales are more every month than they were the whole time we were in Tabor. We hope the time will come when it will not be quite so unpopular to handle a wider range of Radical works; we believe it is in the near future.

Again thanking you for your kindly notice and wishing you every prosperity, we are yours for emancipation,
H. AND L. VINCENT.
Winfield, Kansas.

Clerical Mendacity.

To the Editors of Freethought:

The law in California, as I understand it, authorizes judicial officers and regularly ordained ministers of the gospel, and no others, to celebrate marriages, or perform the marriage ceremony, and fixes the fee for the same at $5, which applies to ministers as well as judicial officers. No judicial officer can accept more than this amount without incurring the penalty of the law. Ministers, however, take no fee, but accept any amount from one to five hundred dollars "as a present," thus evading the law and practicing a fraud upon innocent and unsuspecting people. But this is one of the tricks of the "craft," it is plainly a false pretense and might properly be called, "whipping the devil round the stump." I have not heard that any judicial officer has ever yet adopted this shabby trick. Truly, "mendacity and mendacity go hand in hand."

If I am wrong in any of the above statements, I shall be thankful to have them corrected. If FREETHOUGHT will publish a list of all the special privileges, prerogatives, exemptions, etc., claimed by the clergy, it will confer a favor upon many of its readers.

Turlock, Cal., Nov. 30, 1890.

Kaweah Again!

To the Editors of Freethought:

I am considerably amused and a little interested by the way friend Macdonald comments on the Kaweah Colony "competent," and his magnanimity in observing that this was not a proper time to criticise Kaweah. Then follows a statement that four of the five trustees are under arrest for cutting timber on government land. "Misguided enthusiasts, without warrant for so-doing, were spoiling the scenery along the Kaweah river in Tulare county," . . . "but so long as their right was not legally recognized it was sinful for them to claim the title was clear." "The 'competent' advertise the colony as Bellamy's Dream Realized, and Poverty Abolished, when, in fact, the dwellers on the grounds were the worst poverty-stricken martyrs in the state, according to all reports." And more—but I will not follow all through.

Well, Mr. Editor, did you really mean it when you said this was not a proper time to criticise Kaweah? If you did, why did you; if not, why not? Did you criticise the "competent?" Perhaps you did not, but I have not learned to read you, these long years, if you did not; and pretty caustically, too. But I am not going to find fault with you if you did. Yet I think the "competent" referred to in your "Observations" are more sinned against than sinning.

As I understand, only a part of their lands are in dispute. And only a part, and much the smaller part, of their members are kicking. And, as I mentioned at the beginning of this article, one of the five trustees has not been arrested (at least you do not mention him), but the four you mentioned are loyal to the principles laid down in their Constitution and By-laws, and have done all they could to keep the enterprise developing on those lines.

It is admitted that if they had a clear title to their lands they would have a good business enterprise. Here is the kernel to the nut that others want to crack; or perhaps want to keep the colony from cracking.

It is easy to call them "misguided enthusiasts," and to talk of destroying the scenery along the Kaweah River, etc. The colonists were not doing that. On the contrary, it has been their stated policy not to do so.

They were cutting some lumber, it is true, and intended to cut more, I suppose, but it may turn out yet that they had some right at least to do so.

In the first place, those lands were regularly opened for settlement; the colonists filed on them in good faith—settled on those lands—and went to work to secure a good title to them; they did all they could do to secure legal titles, but other interested parties afterward induced the land commissioner at Washington to withdraw said lands from the market, including the lands filed on and settled by the colonists, or at least to hold the titles in abeyance so the colonists could not perfect titles. Now whose fault is it that they do not as yet have good titles? The colonists have done their duty. They have complied with the laws under which they entered their claims, and if justice is done them they will have titles as clear as Uncle Sam ever gave to any citizen of his domain. Besides, these "poverty-stricken martyrs" have built a very good road up to the "scenery," so that the clear-headed public can comfortably ride up to it and dictate to them what to do, etc.

Now if Mr. Leland Stanford or some large lumber monopoly had done what the colonists have done, they would have been eulogized as energetic, enterprising, and public-spirited citizens; and the poor deluded colonists would never have been heard of. But, since they have been wise enough to organize an enterprise that, if left alone by outside selfishness, would pay handsomely in a short time, they are beset on every side by monopoly and news-gatherers, as though they had done some great wrong. They did not expect all who joined them would be able to enter into the spirit of their enterprise or fully comprehend the entire practical workings of such a co-operation, hence the necessity of rules to govern them. Their theory and method being very radical brings them into contempt with older and different reforms, as well as the competitive principle, which they wish to abandon as much as possible. And, since they conceived the plan, formulated the rules, organized the colony, and have made an honest, practical effort to put their principles on a paying and a demonstrated basis, it is unfair to interfere with them by withdrawing their lands from the market and refusing to confirm titles to their land. Arresting these people for cutting timber to improve their homes and claims which they are justly entitled to is wrong. If they had not complied with the law and also over-waited the time in which they should have titles perfected, since it is not their fault that titles are not perfected, where is the justice of withholding titles, or arresting them because they wish to use the timber that is theirs by right if not, as yet, by legal title?

These people are pioneering a movement of great importance to humanity, and it is to the interest of all fair-minded people to sustain them in their effort to prove the truth and value of their principles.

I feel the thrusts, the sneers, the wrongs and falsehoods piled upon the practical reformers in the world, not forgetting our noble FREETHOUGHT, yet it seems to me that it is the irony of fate, or the fate of irony, that tickles the critics of progress and poverty.

Why cannot noble-minded men and women make some allowance for conditions, and bear with their fellows in reform? I do not think the colonists have been kept ignorant of the true condition of affairs at Kaweah. But I do think there are some mistakes made there by others than the "competent."

The very objects Mr. Roscoe desires to secure by his method of single tax, the Kaweahs have organized to secure by theirs. The latter started out to rustle in the wilds of the mountains, while their comrades contribute to their efforts to secure the peaceful homes they picture; these are honest, noble, heroic efforts of men and women to better the condition of humanity; and yet we find our excellent friend Macdonald making fun of them while they are in trouble. Why not turn over the leaf now and read off their virtues, to even up things?

It would seem to me that the ten or a dozen who have gone out to secure claims on this same government land are just as likely to spoil the scenery along the Kaweah River as anybody else. They seem to have gone out on their own "hook." But the chances are that if they read their titles clear to claims among the big trees, it will be no offense to the public-spirited people who want to make a park of the colony claims. You see they can sell their claims to Mr. Monopoly, and the dear people can still pay a high tariff on necessary lumber.

I have said, somewhere in this article, that I did not intend to find fault with your criticism, if such it be, yet it looks a little that way; but what I had in mind was that fair criticism often does good even to the criticised, while it opens the eyes, so to speak, of other people. I would not have taken up the pen to write a word in favor of the trustees of the colony if my knowledge and experience in dealing with them was such as seems indicated in your article. On the contrary, I have been fairly and honestly and honorably treated by them in all my business and correspondence. Nor have I been "called." J. C. WEYBRIGHT.

A Home Mission Dissolved.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Your correspondent's "Home Mission" at the Campbellite Sunday-school at this place was suddenly terminated last Sunday by circumstances beyond his immediate control. He was shown a copy of the "Christian Leader" of November 11, 1890, published at 178 Elm street, Cincinnati, Ohio, wherein J. T. Moore and J. A. Cowan, pastors Baptist church, relate how Elder Jones got away with Mr. Putnam at Summerville. No doubt, a very common specimen of pious lying. Some questions are represented to have been asked Mr. Putnam, by Elder Jones, which Putnam confessed he could not answer; and I was asked if I could answer them. After some hesitation I was allowed to take the paper with me, and I promised to return the next Sunday and reply to them, and also to make good my assertion that the Golden Rule was of heathen origin.

I went last Sunday as per agreement, and instead of seeing there some big-gun preacher to smash me into smithereens as I anticipated, all was unusually quiet, and when my time came and I offered to "answer," I was told they had concluded that the Sunday-school was not a place for such discussions, and it would not be allowed. And so, instead of letting my little light shine, they tried to snuff it out or put it under a bushel.

I don't blame them. They were green to let the matter go as far as they did. The only earthly show the Christian has to keep his religion alive is to teach it to children whose minds are as yet undeveloped and who naturally confide in older people; or the weak-minded who are unable to comprehend its ridiculous absurdities; and to keep these from hearing the truth as long as possible. It is a most miserable, mean trick, of course, to take advantage of confiding innocence and teach this fraud to children, but it is the only show they have. And the preacher can get behind his "coward's castle," the pulpit, and throw mud at everyone who tries to tell the truth to these children and give them a show to think for themselves, yet such is Christianity.

But it is doomed. Infidel civilization is driving it from point to point; it has accepted Copernican astronomy; it has accepted evolution; and it is now vainly trying to torture its Genesis to make it conform to geology. It has thrown aside its Apocalypse, and the Old Testament will soon follow. The idea of a local hell is abandoned; and that of a local heaven must go tumbling after. The personal God doctrine is weakening, the Holy Ghost is becoming more and more nebulous year by year, and the personality of Christ will ere many years be a thing of the past. Be of good cheer, fellow-Infidels, light is breaking. Superstition is retiring before it. All we need to do is to stand together. Then we need not fear church persecution. Christianity persecutes most the fearful and the helpless. If Infidels in a community stand together, bid it defiance and give it blow for blow, they have little to fear from this Dragon of seven heads and ten horns. On the other hand, if Christianity finds that you are divided and afraid, it is pretty sure to persecute if it cannot control you.

F. S. M.

Aumsville, Or.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS IN TEXAS.

Walnut Springs.....	Dec 10 11 12	Forney.....	Dec 31 and Jan 1 2
Stephensville.....	Dec 13 14	Reagan and Martin.....	Jan 3 4 5
Alvarado.....	Dec 15 16 17	Flatonia.....	Jan 11 12
Ft. Worth.....	Dec 18 19	San Antonio.....	Jan 13 14 15
Sunset.....	Dec 20 21	El Paso.....	Jan 17 18
Gainesville.....	Dec 22 23	Tempe, Arizona.....	Jan 21 22
Trenton.....	Dec 27 28	Phoenix.....	Jan 13 24 25
Denison.....	Dec 29 30	State Convention of Cal.....	Jan 29

GIVE C. F. Burgman, the tailor, a call if you desire a new suit for the holidays.

NEXT Sunday, December 14, Moses Hull will speak in Washington Hall, at 2.30 P.M., on the "Conflict between Superstition and Science." Admission 10 cents.

UP AND DOWN.

THAT'S THE WHOLE STORY. UP IN HEALTH YESTERDAY—DOWN IN SICKNESS TO-DAY. THE POINT IS: KEEP UP! YOU CAN. OXYGEN WILL HELP YOU HERE. NOT THE AMOUNT OF IT WHICH YOU SHARE IN COMMON WITH EVERYBODY ELSE; BUT A SALUTARY EXCESS. THIS IS FOUND IN THE COMPOUND OXYGEN TREATMENT.

THIS POWERFUL REMEDIAL AGENT IS CHARGED WITH ELECTRICITY. WHEN IT IS INHALED TO THE LUNGS IT SENDS A WARMING, REVITALIZING GLOW OVER THE SYSTEM. COLLAPSED AIR CELLS GRADUALLY OPEN TO RECEIVE IT, AND YOU BREATHE WITH BOTH LUNGS AS NATURE INTENDED. THE COMPOUND OXYGEN TREATMENT FILLS THE SYSTEM WITH ROBUST VIGOR. WHAT CHANCE HAS DISEASE IF THAT IS TRUE?

A BOOK OF 200 PAGES WILL TELL YOU WHO HAVE BEEN RESTORED TO HEALTH AND STRENGTH BY THE USE OF THE COMPOUND OXYGEN TREATMENT.

THIS BOOK WILL BE SENT ENTIRELY FREE OF CHARGE TO ANY ONE WHO WILL ADDRESS

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, NO. 1529 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

120 SUTTER ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

58 CHURCH ST., TORONTO, CANADA.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.

PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; ounce. Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic, engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50 fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botches, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.
Address The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

A Miss and a Mile.

The hour was late as we stood by the gate, and the last 'bus was coming in sight. If I lingered to talk, she knew I must walk a mile when I bade her good night. As the 'bus jingled by I saw in her eye a sweet little twinkle and smile, and she said with a wink, "You are foolish to think 'a miss is as good as a mile.'"—Chatter.

That Depends.

"Papa, is it correct to say 'the noes has it,' or 'the noes have it?'"

"Depends, my son, on whether you are talking about a vote or a cold in the head."—Light.

Her Notions of Grammar.

Miss de Hub—And those dear little squirrels that sported under the hedge last summer, where are they now?

Miss Rustic—Oh, they're holed up for the winter.

Miss de Hub—Ugh! My dear, your notions of grammar make me shiver; I presume you mean held up.—West Shore.

Same Cause.

Little Roger—What makes you walk lame, Uncle John?

Uncle John—There was an accident on the bridge today, and I got caught in the jam.

Little Roger—I got caught in the jam once, and walked lame for a week.—Puck.

Pat on Optics.

Patrick—I want the strongest spectacles yez be afther havin' in the store. They're for me owld mither in Ireland.

Optician—Are you not afraid that the strongest glasses may injure her eyes?

Patrick—Sure, I am not. It's bloind intirely she is.—Jeweler's Weekly.

On a Cyclone's Wings.

Kaw—He traveled a hundred miles in ten minutes.

Hooks—It must have taken his breath away.

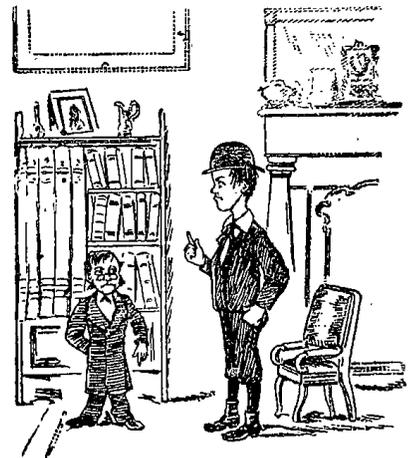

Kaw—Well, he was pretty well blown.—Munsey's Weekly.

The Sad Poet.

"It seems to me I never can get any credit for what I do."

"I should think you would prefer cash."—New York Sun.

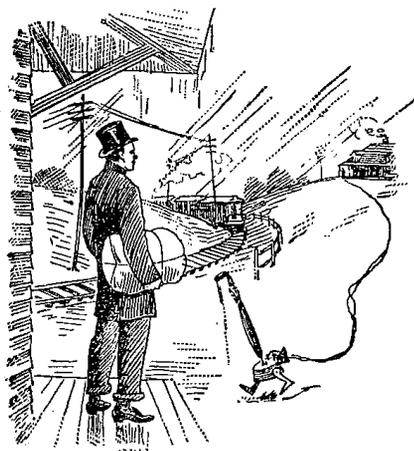

How Sharper Than a Serpent's Tooth, Etc.

Maj. Doublethumb (a museum freak, to his eldest born)—Horatio, you're to stay at home to-night. Do you hear?

Horatio—Look here, dad, I don't want to hurt your feelings at all, but if you attempt to interfere with my leaving the house, I'm blown if I won't put you in a cuspidore and stand you on the mantel-piece!—Life.

The Edison Electric Umbrella Walker.

Mr. Paterson—Pauline never forgets me on rainy days.—Life.

An Unexpected Admission.

Mrs. Hubby (a Harvard bride)—It would be useless for me to disguise the fact, Bridget, that your ignorance of grammar is very marked. Let me try to correct you. For instance, does it sound right for me to say, "Bridget, you've been a-settin' in the drawin' room!"

Bridget (frankly)—No, ma'am, it don't sound right; but I were only a-settin' there the mather of a half hour or so wid my cousin Terence, who is just over. I s'pose that runt of a second girl tattled on me.—Sun and Voice.

Tit for Tat.

Judge—You are accused of ill treating your family doctor.

Prisoner—Well, he did the same thing for me first.—Texas Siftings.

Great Truths.

An empty pocketbook contains "mighty pore readin'."—Washington Star.

We feel sure that if a lady were to offer a gentleman her seat in a crowded car he would say "Thank you" and continue to stand. Now is it not a poor rule that doesn't work both ways?—Judge.

It is pleasant to hear the truth—about other people.—Peck's Sun.

It is true that fine words butter no parsnips, but who wants to butter parsnips?—Judge.

The czar will celebrate his silver wedding Nov. 9, D. P.—Dynamite Permitting.—Washington Post.

A dried apple gets very swell when it gets into the swim.—Washington Star.

'Tis noticed in church this is bound to occur, she looks for the hymn and he looks for the her.—Berkshire News.

How to get ahead of your own shadow—Face the light.—Puck.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of catarrh that cannot be cured by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions, and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo O.

WALDEN, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all druggists. 4614

The Humboldt Library
—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts.

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
8. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
7. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry Trench. (Not sold separately).
12. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
13. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion.
14. Longevity. Prolonging life. John Gardner, M.D.
15. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
16. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
17. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
18. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
19. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kalley Miller.
20. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
21. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
22. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
23. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
24. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
25. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
26. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
27. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
28. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
29. The Study of Words. Richard Chenevix Trench.
30. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R. A. Proctor.
31. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
32. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
33. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
34. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
35. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
36. Geological Sketches. Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
37. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
38. Current Discussions in Science. W. M. Williams.
39. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
40. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
41. The Dawn of History. C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
42. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
43. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
44. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
45. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
46. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange. Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
47. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
48. Animal Automatism. Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
49. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
50. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
51. Illusions. James Sully.
52. The Origin of Species. } Two Double Numbers.
53. Charles Darwin. } 30 cents each.
54. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
55. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
56. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
57. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, LL.D.
58. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
59. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
60. Technical Education, Other Essays. T. H. Huxley.
61. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
62. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
63. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
64. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencer.
65. Archæology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
66. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
67. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
68. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
69. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William I. Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
70. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
71. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
72. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
73. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
74. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
75. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
76. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
77. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
78. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
79. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson.
80. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
81. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
82. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S.S. Laurie.
83. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No.) Chas. Darwin.

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T. H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haeckel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen.
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present. Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life, Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications, Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Laing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whymper, Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No., 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Ritchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTMAS PLAYS.

By Rev. CLARENCE SATTERLEE.

Price 25 Cents.

RECITATIONS FOR CHRISTMAS.

Price 25 Cents.

Dialogues for Christmas, by Margaret Holmes. Price 25 cents. Send for our full descriptive Catalogue of Christmas Books—Plays, Dialogues, Readings, Recitations, Speeches, Chanties, Tableaux, Fancies, Books of Games, Sports and Amusements, Athletics, Gymnastics, Magic, Ventriloquism, etc., etc. Address mentioning this magazine.

The DeWitt Publishing House, 33 Rose Street, N. Y.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St. San Francisco. Watches Cleaned & Warranted, $1

Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 40tf

S. P. TAYLOR & CO., Manufacturers and Dealers in PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping PAPER BAGS, TWINE. Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills 414 and 416 Clay st., S. F.

SAN FRANCISCO ARBEITER ZEITUNG.

710 WASHINGTON ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

The only organ in the German language on the Pacific Coast that stands for true Nationalism. Subscription price: 3 mos., 60 cts.; 6 mos., $1; 12 mos., $2. 45tf

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

BY SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

RUPTURE

In advertising Dr. PIERCE'S Patent MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS, the assurance is given that we are offering the Best Truss in the World.

This Celebrated Appliance has been extensively sold for many years and has Radically Cured thousands of cases of Rupture! This is an Electric Truss (the only successful one ever invented); has no Iron Hoops or Steel Springs about it, and being elastic, can be worn with ease and comfort Night and Day. It's a perfect retainer! For further particulars of Truss, send 4c. in stamps for Pamphlet No. 1 and REMEMBER that Dr. Pierce's Genuine Electric Trusses contain our Private Signature exactly like that shown at top of this advertisement. Beware of inferior imitations! Address: MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS COMPANY, 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal.

DROPSY

Treated free. Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases pronounced hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. TEN DAYS TREATMENT FURNISHED FREE by mail to E. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, Atlanta, Ga.

Health AND Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy, $1.
Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.50.
Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer, $1.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina, Ills. 50.
Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F.R.C.S., 30 cents

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS AND TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.
Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.
Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.
God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.
Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.
Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.
Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.
The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.
Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.
The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.
OLIVER HINCKLEY - - SUPERINTENDENT
Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.
N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED

CURES
Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung
DISEASES
By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen.
Positive cure for Cancer.
26t37 410 A Eddy st., S. F.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT. By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors. The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS", 15 cents.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERY.

Located Eight Miles South of San Jacinto, Cal.
P. A. CLARK, PROPRIETOR.

A full stock of everything in the Nursery line on hand.

APPLES, PEACHES,
PEARS, PLUMS,
APRICOTS, NECTARINES,
PRUNES, ALMONDS,
WALNUTS, QUINCES, ETC.

IN ALL VARIETIES.

A fine lot of Kelsey's Japan Plums, one and two years old.

Send for price list and buy where you can get trees at living rates.

P. A. CLARK, San Jacinto, Cal.

W. M. HINTON & CO. PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS. 536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San Franc

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against LIBERTY, By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.
By W. R. GREG.

Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.
Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco Cal

NESS DIRECTORY.

to make our friends better acquainted and hem to patronize one another in trade, blish in this column the name, calling, of business of any subscriber to FREE- it the rate of One Dollar a year. eed not be confined to San Francisco and It is open to any reader, anywhere in the y.

Architects and Builders.
 Subauer, 1955 Market st.
Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.
 Schroeder, 39 1/2 Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.
 ker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, cor- ngton and Montgomery streets.

Apothecary.
 wler, drugs, medicines, chemicals, toilet les, etc. 13th ave and East 14th street, Oakland, Cal.

Boot and Shoemaker.
 Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.
 es & Son, 213 Mission st.

Contracting Painters.
 n, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.
 owen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.
 alfant, N E. cor. Market and Mason sts. ance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.
 ackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seat- ash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.
 s, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.
 c Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden ave.

Laundries.
 zer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.
 Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.
 rse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.
 Burgman, 101 Fifth st.
 Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.
 nson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.
 Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 e st., (OAKLAND.)

Nurseryman.
 Foster, Babylon, N. Y.

Physicians and Surgeons.
 Daywalt, M.D., rooms 14 and 15, Murphy lding, 1236 Market st.
 Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms rvous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. o, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Fran- co, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.
 h, 1063 Howard st.

Real Estate.
 Gale, Port Angeles, Wash.

Stoves (Gasoline).
 s Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.
 st Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.
 cksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.
 DeBarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment
 McAllister and Franklin sts.
 ott, 655 Sacramento st.
 cial, 1057 Polson street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.
 man & Schweitzer, 303 Keamy s

ORIGINAL
 BROWNSVILLE
 WOOLEN MILLS
 CLOTHING STORE.

164 and 166 Second Street,
 Near corner of Morrison,

Best Goods in the Country

TLAND, Ok. W. R. BISHOP, AGT.
 Call, or send orders and measure.

MR. M'SWAT AS A PROTECTOR.

Life Is Nothing to Him When There Are Burglars in the House.

"Billiger! Hark!"
 Mrs. McSwat sat straight up in bed and listened to a noise she seemed to hear down stairs.

"What is it, Lobelia?" inquired Mr. McSwat drowsily.

"It sounds like somebody talking. Listen!"

Mr. McSwat listened. He, too, thought he heard something.

"I will see what it is," he said, speaking very loudly and moving very leisurely. "Don't be alarmed, Lobelia. We are well armed. Beside these two revolvers," he continued, in a high pitched voice intended to terrify any unauthorized persons that might be in the house, "I have a heavy cane and a large glass paper weight. Be calm, Lobelia!"

He crawled out of bed, collected his arsenal, and the procession moved down stairs in the following order:

Mr. McSwat, with revolver in each hand, heavy cane under his arm, and paper weight in pocket of his embroidered robe de nuit.

Mrs. McSwat, ready to scream, with front hair in curl papers, lamp in one hand, and bottle of camphor in the other.

At the landing half way down Mr. McSwat stopped.

"Lobelia," he observed, sternly, "it will be necessary for you to go in front. You have the lamp. I'll protect you."

Mrs. McSwat took her place in front as directed, and the procession moved on again. At the foot of the stairs Billiger stopped and took up a commanding position near the hall rack.

"Now, Lobelia, go ahead with the lamp into this room on the left. I will remain here to see if anybody rushes out. If anybody does rush out," he exclaimed, grinding his teeth in a manner horrible to hear, "I will put fourteen bullets through him, knock him down with this paper weight and break every bone in his body with this cane!"

Mrs. McSwat went into the room on the left and looked around.

"Do you see anything, Lobelia?" asked her husband in a voice of thunder.

"No, Billiger."
 "Go through the other rooms!" he roared, bracing himself firmly against the wall.

While Billiger remained in the hall, armed to the teeth, pale with iron resolution and trembling with ungovernable ferocity, Lobelia explored all the rooms and came back.

"Did you see anything?" he demanded.

"Not a thing, Billiger."
 "Give me the lamp!"

He handed his weapons to Lobelia, took the lamp, and with dauntless bravery went through the rooms himself.

"It wasn't anything, Lobelia," he said, with extreme disgust. "You didn't hear anything or anybody!"

The procession moved up the stairway on the return trip.

"You must try to overcome this timidity of yours, Lobelia," said Mr. McSwat, as he put down the lamp and relieved his wife of her load of deadly weapons. "If I hadn't been here to protect you," he grumbled, crawling back into bed, "you would have frightened yourself to death."—Chicago Tribune.

TRAVELING ALONE

A WOMAN'S JOURNEY

AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,
 (Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Finely Bound in Cloth. Price, 75 Cents.

Press Notices.

They are pleasing stories of travel.—Toledo Bee
 A book to hold the interest of all.—Boston Times, Feb. 23, 1890.
 A remarkably entertaining record.—Buffalo Express, Feb. 16, 1890.
 A remarkably original and piquant narrative.—Cincinnati Times Star.
 It is a very clever, readable book.—New York Journal of Commerce, Feb. 7, 1890.
 A bright, unconventional narrative of unusual interest.—Washington Republic, March 8, 1890.
 It is an entertaining record of a remarkable case of "globe trotting."—Cleveland Plain Dealer, Feb. 26, '90.
 She had eyes for everything of interest, and tells her story in a "chipper" style.—Norwich, Conn., Bulletin, Feb. 11, 1890.
 The young traveler's comments upon men and cities and works of art are decidedly entertaining.—New York Tribune, Feb. 14, 1890.
 The notes of her journey are presented in a style that is very acceptable, and form interesting reading.—San Francisco Call, Feb. 16, 1890.
 The letters are full of humor and witticisms, and written with all the freedom and informality of style permissible and enjoyable in private letters.—Boston Herald, Feb. 23, '90.
 She is evidently a born writer, having a light, chatty style, although her observations are very shrewd.—St. Louis Republic, March 11, 1890.
 It is as readable as the observations and thoughts of such resolute persons, especially if they are women, are wont to be.—Brookly Daily Eagle, Feb. 16, 1890.
 The story is brightly and tersely written, and is given with conversational ease and minuteness of detail.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, Feb. 22, 1890.
 The author's style is gay, and her airy contempt for tradition in art, religion, and social life is one of her most prominent characteristics.—Newark, N. J., Advertiser, Feb., 15, 1890.
 There is a way to make a record of travels popularly entertaining, and this way has been followed by the author of "A Woman's Journey Around the World Alone."—New York Sun, Feb. 15, 1890.
 The story of her wanderings is very pleasantly told. It is charmingly truthful in manner and free from exaggeration. In England three volumes and cloth binding, with a second edition in library style, would certainly be awarded it.—Boston Herald, Feb. 10, 1890.
 Her descriptions are entertaining, while they sparkle with unique phrases and quaint ideas. The story of her travels is told in that chatty manner peculiar to women, which is particularly pleasing from the tongue or pen of a charmingly pretty woman, such as Miss Leland's portrait shows her to be.—Newark Evening News, March 28, '90.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Vol. III—No. 51.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan. 188

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER YEAR.

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - DECEMBER 20, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

I leave Phoenix, Arizona, at four o'clock on Sunday, November 30. It is twenty-four hours' ride to El Paso, and I am compelled to postpone my lecture there until January 17 and 18. I have the pleasure of meeting Samuel Flint, one of the best workers in the state, for a few minutes, and he is the first Liberal to give me the hand-shake in this great state of Texas. I could not have a more cordial welcome to this new field. From El Paso to San Antonio it is another twenty-four hours' ride, and through a country for the most part uncultivated. San Antonio is the metropolis of this advancing South. It has nearly fifty thousand inhabitants and is rapidly growing. It has a large and fruitful country upon which to depend. I found it one of the busiest marts along the route. The streets are crowded, and there is every indication of prosperity and advancement. It has a curious display of the old and the new. There is more of the Mexican and Spanish fashion in the streets and buildings than in any place I have yet visited, but right in the midst of this is the magnificence of modern life. San Antonio is the largest city in Texas and will undoubtedly continue to be so. Railroads and manufactories will be the source of its wealth and magnitude. There is a fine Liberal element in San Antonio. Dr. York has held a series of successful meetings under the auspices of the Secular Union, and will continue his work through January. Chas. L. Sauer, formerly president of the Union, has been a most active supporter of the cause. J. H. Aycok, now president, is a most energetic officer, a journalist well-known throughout the state, and one who has no such word as failure in his dictionary. I was pleased to meet him; also Charles J. Langholz, treasurer of the Union, an active business man, and Otto Praeger. The Union has just started a movement for the repeal of the Sunday laws of Texas. In spite of many difficulties, the Liberals of San Antonio have accomplished much.

I leave San Antonio Tuesday afternoon and come on to Austin, Texas, where also a Liberal association is formed, with Judge J. P. Richardson, president. As I arrived in the evening and left early the next morning, I had no opportunity to meet the Liberals of this place. I hope that the opportunity will come later.

On Wednesday morning, I come by rail to Burnet, a distance of about fifty miles from Austin. The country through which I pass is somewhat rolling, like that of Kansas and Illinois, although more covered with trees and brushwood. There are no mountains or hills to be seen in any direction until I reach Burnet. The scenery is absolutely different from that of California and Arizona. I begin to feel the cold a bit, and afar off is the breath of the blizzard.

Burnet is a pretty town of fifteen hundred inhabitants, the county seat of Burnet county. The court house is a large building made of stone found in the vicinity. It is erected in the public square, and round about this square are the business blocks of the city. Quite an extensive trade is done in cotton at this point. Some sugar cane is also raised; corn, but not much wheat. There are large mineral resources in the country, and these will eventually make the wealth of this portion of Texas. It is a good stock country. Ten years ago scarcely a fence was to be seen here, now most of the farms are in an improved condition. More miles of railroad have been built in Texas the last decade than in any other state.

There is a staunch Liberal element in Burnet, but there is need of education. Only three or four women attend the first lectures. Evidently Freethought is not understood.

I enjoyed the hospitality of Judge J. T. Woodard and Mrs. Woodard around the sparkling firelight. Thos. Sheppard, 76 years old, is full of Freethought and spiritual philosophy. Samuel E. Holland, of Marble Falls, is the oldest settler in the county, having come here in 1846. Judge D. H. Long, E. T. Thomas, H. Burns, J. E. Babcock, of Strickland, R. H. Flippin, Frank Braezeale and Jeff. Braezeale, Dr. J. L. Hansford, B. T. Timberlake, H. Saunders, and others whom I met, representative men, are Liberals. Gen. A. R. Johnson, blind since the war from a bullet wound, is a remarkable citizen. He is one of the most enterprising men in the community in business and educational matters. His lack of physical vision seems to intensify his intellectual acumen, and no one has a sharper look ahead than he. C. Nauwald, of the Burnet House, is a genial Liberal and gives the best care and attention to his guests.

I have had a delightful time at Burnet. The audience on the last evening—Friday—was double that of the previous evenings, and quite a number of ladies were present. Steps are being taken to form a county organization to work with the state association. Arrangements will also be made for lectures by Mr. Shaw and Mr. Remsburg. The outlook is promising.

On Saturday, I take the stage across the country to Lampasas. It had been fine weather so far, but the clouds were beginning to blow, and it looked as if a "norther" would come down upon me. For a while it was quite threatening, and the rain poured, and I was glad to get behind the canvas of the stage. But the storm ceased in an hour or so, and there was sunlight around the jagged edges of the clouds. The real "norther" did not come; and I was quite willing to be passed by. I have no desire to encounter this demon of the plains. It does not come so often as it used to, and perhaps it may disappear altogether. It is a curious phenomenon and of deadly peril to the traveler. The only place of safety is a good warm house. If one is unsheltered, destruction is certain. It comes on top of a warm spell. Especially fine weather at this season is called a "weather breeder." One wants to take off his coat and vest. But in the very midst of the heat a vast low cloud is seen along the horizon, dark-blue, with a lurid, brassy appearance, intermixed like fire. It seems to roll along the ground. It is a freezing mist. It envelopes one like a horrible canopy of ice. It cannot be resisted. When emigrants on the plains are caught by these northers they burn wagons, goods, everything to save life. But it is useless. It is like being at the North Pole.

Saturday night, I arrive at Goldthwaite, but not in time for a lecture. The train is due at eight o'clock, but is generally from a half hour to three hours behind time. I give two lectures at the new court house on Sunday. Only one lady is present in the afternoon. There were no ladies in the evening. A fair number of gentlemen attended. A sprinkling of Christians appear, who come, no doubt, from curiosity. Most of my hearers are staunch Liberals. I had a good time with these pioneers. They are determined to push matters, and a meeting will be held a week from next Sunday, Dec. 21, to organize. Goldthwaite was only built about six years ago, but it has a fine appearance, a beautiful court house and school-house. It is the county seat of Mills county. There is a strong element of Liberalism in the vicinity.

A. Lewis, Theo. Bowen, R. B. Hart, Judge H. S. Thomas, and H. K. McLeod are the old guard here and faithful service they have done, and it was a pleasure to meet those brave and generous supporters. The cold weather of Saturday, and the rain, and the threatening aspect Sunday morning, no doubt, prevented the attendance of many from the country. I believe that Goldthwaite is a good point, and with such veterans in the cause as I here find the future will show a great improvement.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

THE DEVIL AND THE MILLENNIUM COMING.

Still another prophet has arisen. Mrs. Harriet Van Hoesen, who lives near Syracuse, N. Y., and who is a master or mistress of the otherwise lost art of astrology, has just read the world's horoscope and announced the result. She says that from Adam to the flood was 1800 years; that it was 1800 years from the flood to the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah; 1800 years from that time to the last ten years of the first century A. D., when three cities were destroyed, and that the next period, now coming to a close, will witness the destruction of the wicked. In February, 1891, the Mormons will rise up against the gentiles and a plague will cut off the wicked, except such as may flee to the house of refuge which she is building for those who will flee to the hills in the time of danger. She says that all ministers and leaders of labor organizations are Mormons secretly. She predicts that there will be only one more presidential election and that Harrison will be elected. The millennium now about to begin will be followed by 800 years during which the devil will have his innings.

This prophecy does not exactly correspond with the programme prepared by Johnson Sides, the Indian messiah; with Dr. Teed's predictions, nor with Prof. Joseph Rodes Buchanan's "Coming Cataclysm," but it is as deserving of confidence as any of them.

How suddenly all nonsense might be stopped if ministers, editors, and writers would get in the habit of telling the exact truth. There is no such thing as prophecy, no way of foretelling the future except by reasoning scientifically from cause to effect. There are no messiahs, no devils, no such a thing possible as a millennium. There are no cataclysms in human affairs. Prophets have been prophesying for thousands of years, and Christ thought the world was as near to its end in his day as Mrs. Van Hoesen thinks it is now. If the human mind would grasp more firmly at facts and let humbug alone, there would be no trouble about messiahs, about millenniums, and about cataclysms. Moreover, there would be no Christian religion.

REVERENT AGNOSTICISM.

The Marquis of Queensberry, who, we understand, is something of a sport—if not, may we be forgiven for alluding to it—has sent to General Salvation Army Booth his check for five hundred dollars, or thereabouts, to be used as Booth sees fit. The noble marquis accompanied his gift with the following letter:

"GLENLEE, NEW GALLOWAY, N. B., Nov. 21.

"MY DEAR GENERAL BOOTH: I have read your book, 'In Darkest England,' with the greatest interest, also with thrills of horror that things should be as bad as they are. I send you a check for £100, and shall feel compelled if your scheme is carried out to give you a yearly subscription. You say you want recruits. When I come to town I should very much like to see you to talk this matter over, for I see no cause in which a man could more put his heart and soul into than this one of endeavoring to alleviate this fearful misery of our fellow creatures. I see you quote Carlyle in your book, but is it possible for anyone like myself, who is even more bitterly opposed than he was against what to me is the Christian falsehood, to work with you? We have two things to do as things are at present—first, to endeavor to alleviate the present awful suffering that exists to the best of our abilities, and surely this ought to be a state affair; and, secondly, to get at the roots of the evils, and by changing public opinion gradually develop a different state of things for future generations, when this help will not be so necessary. I do not wish to get into a religious controversy with you on how this is to be brought about, but I tell you I am no Christian and am bitterly opposed to it. A tree, I believe, is to be judged by its fruits. Christianity has been with us many hundreds of years. What can we think of it when its results are as they are at present with the poor, whom Christ, I believe you say, informed us we should always have with us? I know nothing about other worlds, beyond that I see thousands upon thousands around me who I presume look after their own affairs. It appears to me our common and plainest duty to help and to try and change the lot of our suffering fellow creatures here on this earth. You can publish this if you please, but without suppressing any of it. If not, and any notice is given of subscriptions, as I see you are doing, I beg it may be notified that I send this mite as a reverent Agnostic to our common cause of humanity.

Yours faithfully, QUEENSBERRY."

It is not at all likely that the marquis's strictures on the Christian religion will have the slightest effect on the mind of General Booth. The general is not a man who knows or cares whether Christianity is true or false. He is in it for revenue only, and while he might object to hearing the benefits of religion questioned, he certainly has the best of the argument so long as the questioner incloses him a check for half a thousand dollars.

We have heard of "reverent Agnosticism" before. Mr. Samuel Laing, M.P., is afflicted with it, and he has likewise sent General Booth a hundred pounds. It seems to take that shape. The reverent Agnostic gives unbelief his intellectual sympathy and superstition his money. A recently deceased American gentleman, of great wealth, who might have been called a reverent Positivist, was accustomed to pay a large sum annually for a pew in a fashionable church, and to give a few dollars now and then to the cause of Liberalism. The church took his large offerings, and slandered him after he was dead; the Freethinkers thanked him for his mite, and canonized him and defended his memory. So it will be with these English Freethinkers who pay tribute to popular superstition. There will be no church so poor to do them reverence when they are no longer able to give money. It will be left to the Freethinkers they neglected to do them justice.

An Agnostic can as consistently support foreign missions as the Salvation Army. General Booth is to the Army what the pope is to the Catholic church—the supreme dictator, and likewise the treasurer. His present scheme, if carried out, would give him a temporal power that Rome might look upon with envy. When professed Freethinkers help to maintain religious organizations they make almost as great a mistake as they do when they imagine themselves Freethinkers. Very few intelligent men really believe in the doctrines of the church; the majority of members are hypocrites. They are distinguished from outspoken unbelievers by their dishonesty, and when Agnostics contribute to support doctrines they disbelieve, the line of demarcation is obscured.

THE FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The meeting of the San Francisco Freethought Society at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, Sunday evening, Dec. 21, will be addressed by PROF. W. S. BELL; subject, "Government." Admission is free and all are invited.

AS HE WAS AND AS HE IS.

An Oregon reader asks us to answer the following questions:

1. Is there any proof that men lived to the age of nine hundred years, as recorded in the Bible? If not, what was the age of men living anterior to the Christian era, according to history?

2. Were men in those days bigger and stronger than they are now? I have read somewhere that the armor of the crusaders is too small for the soldiers of this day.

We know of no authority outside of the Bible, Rider Haggard's novel "She," and other works of fiction, for believing that human longevity is on the decline. David the psalmist apparently never heard of the long lives of his ancestors, for he wrote:

"The days of our years are three-score years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be four-score years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow."

David did not remark that the days of our years were nine hundred and sixty-nine years. He was arguing the more years the more sorrow, and if he could have held out the possibility of a thousand years of trouble it would have just suited his frame of mind to do so. What induced the early Bible writers to lie so about the age of the patriarchs is not readily understood in our time, when a certain regard for truth is professed. The commentators call it "oriental exaggeration," but it is now known by a shorter name.

Men may have been larger a few thousands years ago than they are now, though it is doubtful. The mummied remains of Egypt's former citizen's are inferior in height to men of the present day, but ancient history, sacred or profane, says nothing about their being under-sized. The old Roman gladiators could not have been stronger than modern pugilists, or they would have killed one another at the first blow with their iron-gloved hands. No nineteenth century pugilist is glutton enough to face an opponent wearing the cestus. It is true that in the Bible we read of a race of giants, but our confidence in the writer's truthfulness is shaken by the further declaration that they were sons of God. If the narrator lied about their parentage, he could not consistently tell the truth about their size. These stories were written for men in the child-age of the world, and naturally they resemble the stories, like Jack the Giant-killer, now employed for the amusement of children. The grown people who still believe them are examples of mental reversion to a primitive type.

THE CALIFORNIA STATE CONVENTION.

The California State Liberal Union will hold its annual Convention at Union Square Hall, San Francisco, on Thursday, January 29, 1891, beginning at 10 o'clock A.M. with a business meeting and an opening address by Samuel P. Putnam, president, on "The Dangers Ahead." Particular attention will be paid to the Sabbath legislation now threatened in this state and in Congress. In the afternoon and evening addresses will be made by the best speakers, and the Convention will close with a musical and sociable festival in honor of Thomas Paine's birthday.

Liberals from all parts of the state are invited and expected to be present at this reunion; and the co-operation of those of other states is desired.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, President.

EMIL S. LEMME, Secretary.

IN REPLY TO A CLERGYMAN.

The following letter written to the Portland "Oregonian" by Mr. C. Beal, president of the Oregon Secular Union, explains itself:

At the grand lecture delivered at the tabernacle by William Jackson Armstrong, Tuesday evening, the speaker was introduced by the Rev. Ross C. Houghton, who took advantage of the occasion to say to the audience, including several Liberals and myself, that he "had always understood that the Nihilists stood for Infidelity and many other things which we abhor."

If the honor had fallen on me to introduce this distinguished speaker, it would have been very ungentlemanly for me to have said that I understood the Czar of Russia stood for Christianity. And yet, as a matter of fact, he is literally the absolute head of Greek Christianity with probably a hundred million members. But I will ask my reverend friend why I should not disbelieve when I find that every ceremony and ordinance of his religion were known and practiced by other people and religions long before Christ was born.

Why should I not disbelieve, when 550 years before Christ, Confucius looked into the "Great Book of Learning," and read us the Golden Rule in its negative form?

Why should I not disbelieve when I find that the birth, death, and resurrection of Christ, and the whole plan of salvation was played on the boards of the theatres for a thousand years before Christ was born?

Why should I not disbelieve when I find that out of a hundred thousand ministers in this country, not a score of intelligent ones can be found who will hold a fair and equitable discussion with an intelligent Liberal on the fundamental principles of orthodox Christianity?

Permit me to say that there are as many disbelievers in this country in proportion to the population as there are Nihilists in Russia in proportion to the people there.

Banquo's ghost will not down at your bidding.

C. BEAL.

One of the last acts of the recent convention of the Farmers' Alliance in Florida was the adoption of a resolution that the policy of the Alliance will be to withhold all support from newspapers which do not conduct Alliance departments or at least publish Alliance news regularly. This arrangement, says the report, does not compel the support of Alliance measures or the advocacy of Alliance demands on the part of these newspapers in their editorial columns, but does compel a certain degree of friendliness on their part, and amounts to an absolute boycott of all newspapers which do not come up to the terms of the resolution. This act will not increase public confidence in opinions put forth by the press, for every paper that favors the Alliance will be accused of doing so because it does not dare to do otherwise. The farmers have found an admirable method to encourage journalistic hypocrisy.

THE "Weekly Star" has dropped the word "weekly" from its name and now appears with twelve pages about the size of FREETHOUGHT, and a cover. It is still published at 429 Montgomery street by James H. Barry, and makes a specialty of throwing its light into the dark caverns of this municipality where the corrupt troglodytes of politics do live and thrive. The "Weekly Nationalist" also takes on a new form—four large pages instead of eight smaller ones. Mr. W. C. Owen, editor and manager, holds that labor should have all it produces, a proposition so reasonable that we do not see how anyone can dispute it. How labor is to get all it produces is a graver question which the Nationalists seek to solve. The paper is published at 628 Clay street at five cents per copy.

THE newspapers print the appended dispatch:

"CHAMBERSBURG, PA., December 10.—Polk Wilson, a well-known character about town, was to-day sent to jail by Justice Hautman, for eighty days for swearing eighty profane oaths. Under the Pennsylvania 'Blue Laws' act of 1794, the penalty for profane swearing is 67 cents for each oath, or in default of payment thereof one day in jail for each oath. Wilson would not pay the $57.30 for the oaths indulged in, so he went to jail for eighty days."

It is worth while to ask who counted the oaths uttered by Wilson, and whether there is not a possibility of the witness having made a mistake in a "cuss word" or two. Another pertinent question is: Why does a civilized state allow such a law as that under which Wilson is imprisoned to stay on its statute books? Has Pennsylvania made no progress since 1794?

At the beginning of the coming year a new anti-Jewish law will be promulgated in Russia. One of the most important clauses forbids selling, leasing, or mortgaging to Jews any real estate in any part of the empire. Another clause provides that Jews shall be dispossessed of any real estate they may hold. Jewish artisans are also to be deprived of certain rights, and are to be kept strictly within the limits assigned to the Jewish population. Repressive measures will be taken against Jews infringing the new law, as well as against Christians who may be found abetting them. There is no chance that foreign influence can have an effect to mitigate the injustice of the law.

THE Pittsburg, Pa., Presbytery finds five young members guilty of heresy, the accused having followed diverse courses in advocating the admission of members to their congregations and committed other heinous offenses against Calvinism. The young men appeal to the synod, which is much like appealing from the block to the meat-axe. It is a serious matter for a clergyman to be found guilty of heresy. He has been educated for the ministry, and nine times out of ten is fit for nothing else. When he loses his church he loses his bread and butter, which accounts for a great deal of hypocrisy in the pulpit.

It is less than six weeks to January 29, the date of the State Liberal Convention and Paine Celebration, and Liberals throughout California and adjoining states should begin laying their plans to be present. The Convention will be short and sweet this year, and the day and night will be crowded full of business, addresses, and festivities. The date falls on Thursday, Paine's birthday, and the memory of that great man will be as fittingly honored by a convention of people who meet to vindicate the principles for which he labored, as by the eulogies passed upon him by the orators of the evening.

In the list of Washington's relics now being disposed of at public auction we note "six tickets of the Delaware lottery purchased by Washington." The spectacle of the Father of his country buying lottery tickets is one that has been largely eliminated from our Sunday-school literature. There is a fearful possibility that when discovered on his knees in the snow at Valley Forge, Washington was petitioning the throne of grace for information about the winning number.

JOSEPH COOK has been lecturing on the Mormon church and the Woodruff manifesto. He asserts that the Mormons are still bound by polygamy, of the revelations concerning which there has been no revocation or annulment in any part. As a Christian clergyman Cook should know that the Bible is the Mormons' authority for the practice of polygamy, and that they cannot forbid the practice without going back on the book.

THE question "Why are there not more native priests?" is troubling the Catholics of this country. It is a fact worthy of remark that nearly all priests are foreigners, mostly Irish. The Irish native of America takes more kindly to politics than to holy orders, as he thereby gets a position of equal perquisites with less study, and he can do more for his church than by mouthing its mummeries.

THE "Reconstructor" is to be known hereafter as "The Summerland," a name, says the editor, "typical of its spiritual aspirations, and of its nativity in one of the sunniest and most healthy localities," etc. Albert Morton, instead of Dr. Loveland, is now the editor of the paper, which will miss no opportunity to judiciously boom the Ortega ranch as a desirable piece of real estate.

KING HUMBERT of Italy maintains an attitude of defiance toward the Catholic church, and vows that while he will respect the religion of his ancestors he will not allow it to interfere with the state or to establish a temporal sovereignty. It is always gratifying to see two powers like the church and state at odds with each other. The danger comes when they join hands.

HENRY GEORGE announces his withdrawal from the editorship of the "Standard." His successor is Mr. William T. Croasdale, who will issue the paper in a changed form and probably reduced in size. The rewards of journalism are small, for the "Standard," although the leading Single-tax paper of the world, does not pay the expenses of its publication.

PARNELL'S friends account for his strange behavior by pleading that the Irish leader is insane; and they clinch the question of his insanity with the statement that his mother believes in Spiritualism. If the intellectual poverty of his friends could make a man an imbecile, Parnell would be a fool.

THE government has so far failed to prove its claim to the Kaweah Colony lands, which will probably remain in the hands of the individuals who filed on them. Whether these individuals will transfer their claims to the colony remains to be seen.

KING KALAKAUA sampled another of our churches last Sunday, and went on a yachting excursion in the afternoon. We trust that his majesty will not depart from this coast without attending a meeting of the San Francisco Freethought Society.

T. L. GRIGSBY, of Napa City, Cal., has procured in the neighborhood of five hundred signatures to the petition to open the World's Fair on Sunday. Nearly everybody signs it. Let others be encouraged to go and do likewise.

A BILL is likely to pass the national legislature putting a tax of one dollar per head upon immigrants, and to exclude "polygamous persons." The law is favored mainly by foreign residents of the country.

OBSERVATIONS.

There was no void in the hall where the Freethought Society met last Sunday evening. Every chair was competently filled by an intelligent person before 8 o'clock, and when Vice-President Eastman called the meeting to order his face wore a gratified expression which even his newly-acquired but handsome whiskers could not wholly conceal.

Mr. Alfred Cridge was the speaker of the evening; his subject, "Are Men Better or Worse than Institutions?" Mr. Cridge pointed out that the growth of institutions was often an evil much worse than any designed by the men who supported them. For instance, the Christian religion at its start did not contemplate an institution, and was practically harmless; but in the fifth or sixth century the church was organized, with priests and monks, and religious power was embodied in material form. Persecution set in. Hypatia was murdered by an institution of monks. The institution of the Inquisition resulted in the death of thousands. Then followed the martyrdom of Giordano Bruno; and the church to-day by protesting against the erection of a statue to Bruno in Rome, indorses and defends the deep damnation of his taking off. The pope, as the head of this institution, gave Ireland over to English misrule. The church and the English government are in league, and England by providing for the education of Irish priests keeps them in sympathy with her, and they control the Irish masses. But, despite bad institutions, it is a human tendency to improve. Our governmental institutions are worse than the people for the reason that they do not represent them. Our system of voting is a mathematical absurdity. One half of the people—the female half—cannot vote, and less than a half of the male half run the country. Indeed a few hundred politicians may be pointed out who are the government in fact. Officials are not as good as the people. We know that three-fourths of the voters of San Francisco are not thieves, but we know that three-fourths of the men they elect are such. The first government was a military institution; afterwards was added the function of repressing crime, and government became punitive. Next it began to control the affairs of the people in their relations with one another; it established postoffices, courts, and so forth, and became administrative. This was civilized government; but beyond civilization there is a further step—namely, harmonization; and this will be reached when, under some reasonable system of representation, our institutions become a reflex of the people. Then the question whether men are better or worse than institutions will not be asked, for people and government will be one.

Mr. Cridge's address was not half as dry as I have made this synopsis of it. It was touched up occasionally with humor, and portions of it were delivered with an earnestness that amounted to eloquence. At the close the applause was universal, hearty, and prolonged.

After Mr. Lemme and myself had passed our hats among the people, the floor was declared open for speeches of ten minutes each. The Chair suggested that speakers should address themselves to the subject under discussion.

Mr. P. Healy, looking like a Christmas toy, was the first to respond, and received a flattering reception from the young things who are pleased with gewgaws. Disclaiming any title to applause, Mr. Healy proceeded to deny the speaker's statements about Ireland, and to deprecate Home-rule. In discouraging the movement he believed the church acted wisely, for it was the duty of Irishmen to await the result of time, when the English people would become as enlightened as themselves and would grant them Home-rule in the same generous spirit that Ireland now concedes self-government to England.

Mr. Curtis said that whether Pope Adrian actually ceded Ireland to England or not could never be determined to the satisfaction of those who do not desire to believe that he did, but it was the sort of act the popes were in the habit of performing, and there was no reason to doubt that Adrian did that or something worse. Mr. Curtis pointed out that all institutions should not be condemned because some of them are bad. On the one side are religious institutions; and on the other are scientific institutions. The former persecute, the latter do not; the former practice deception, teach falsehood, and shun investigation; the latter cultivate knowledge, discover and teach facts, and challenge refutation; the former enforce upon others what they believe; the latter invite those who would be wise to examine and accept what they know, or reject it if it appears unreasonable. One scientific institution verifies the discoveries of another, while the tenets of one religious institution are denied by all the rest. Mr. Curtis concluded that an institution founded on knowledge and liberty was a good thing, while one founded on belief was promotive of evil.

Mr. Marshal Wheeler followed, and condemned political parties. The man who sported the badge of a party wore the collar of a master. If he swore allegiance to a political institution, he forswore allegiance to himself. Both the great parties were organized for a good end: each had achieved its purpose, and existed only to squabble for the spoils of office. Wherein the audience agreed with Mr. Wheeler.

George Cumming desired to run the word government, and government itself, out of existence, because no self-respecting man wanted to be governed. He would employ another man to attend to affairs which he had not the time to look after, but an employee should not be a ruler. Mr. Cumming expressed other Anarchistic sentiments.

Mr. Cridge briefly reviewed his critics, and one of the most interesting meetings ever held came to a happy close.

Next Sunday Prof. W. S. Bell will give a new lecture on "Government." Mr. Bell is a student of this question; and what is better he is a learner. He holds to ideas only so long as they sustain him, and then replaces them with better ones. He will not permit his audience to slumber. Admission is free and all are invited.

Mr. William W. Wheeler has placed me under a debt of ingratitude by sending to this office, for review, a book entitled "Life: A Novel." The book belongs to that class of works now in fashion, known as novels with a purpose. I classify it as such because I do not know where else to place it. The author drives along for awhile on the road opened up by Edward Bellamy; that is, he has a young man die, apparently, and then resuscitates him; but instead of going to Boston in the year 2000, the hero visits the spirit world. The whole story, so far as it is a narrative, could be told in fifty pages, but the book covers nearly three hundred. I read it resignedly, as in duty bound, until I reached the question which one character is made to ask another: "What is life? What is the nature of it? What is the philosophy and the science of it? Why and what is life?" This aroused my suspicions, but when the interrogated party answered oracularly in italics: "The life of a human being is an identity of force," and a discussion of that proposition began, I put the book away.

The subject is one that I am under compact with myself not to discuss or study. So far as I am concerned it is a closed volume. Years ago I dismissed it. Counsellor Sherman, of New York, who is a consistently religious young man, was in my room, and we were cogitating and remarking upon the beginning of things. I proposed that we should settle the matter before leaving it. He consented, and offered this resolution: "In the beginning was a jigger." I accepted his hypothesis without question, but added, "And the jigger was with God, and the jigger was God." He acknowledged that it was, and after that we talked of other things. Since then volumes have been written, long columns have been printed, large bottles of ink and great think tanks have been exhausted; but who has put forth a better explanation of the universe than this, that in the beginning was a jigger? None, as I view it; and I am content to let the matter rest. Jigger is shorter than "identity or force," and means more or less according to race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

I have experienced great benefit from dismissing the question thus summarily, because I am not now obliged to waste time trying to penetrate millstones with my eye. But a word about novels with a purpose. They are largely humbugs. I prefer those deceptive compositions in the newspapers which begin with philosophical disquisitions and close with an advertisement.

Judge Stephen Brewer, of Ithaca, N. Y., was one of the first subscribers to this paper, and always has the subscription price and a good word ready for the beginning of each year. He now writes:

Ithaca, N. Y., Dec. 18, 1890.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Inclosed please find two dollars in currency for renewal of subscription to FREETHOUGHT. I see by your statement that, being thus early, I am entitled to Miss Leland's book, which please send me.

I have watched with admiring interest your untiring efforts to establish your excellent journal upon an enduring basis. I sincerely hope you will be triumphant, and make FREETHOUGHT a permanent power for Liberalism on the Pacific coast.

I hope your patrons appreciate your self-sacrificing labors in the common cause, for it is quite evident that the industry and ability displayed in FREETHOUGHT, if turned in the direction of fame and accumulation, would be abundantly rewarded. "Observations" alone ought to be sufficient to swell your subscription list very materially.

Very sincerely, your friend and (not very industrious) co-worker,
S. BREWER.

The third paragraph of Judge Brewer's letter reminds me of something I ought not to conceal if divulging it will do any good. "Observations" is a department of this paper which I started more for diversion than anything else, and I have continued it as a privilege which I take of inflicting myself upon the reader. I have been kindly borne with, and have even been invited to reappear when I have left myself out for a week or two. I find that people who are not interested in the cause of Freethought discover something to arrest their attention in these "Observations." To an extent—a very slight one—newspaper readers and newspaper men see in this department a more popular vein than I have elsewhere struck; hence has arisen the fact of which I thought to speak when I read Judge Brewer's letter. To cut it short, I a few days since received an invitation to transfer my person and my "Observations" from this office to that of a daily newspaper, where readers and remuneration would be several times multiplied. It is pointed out to me by disinterested persons of good judgment that I may work here until my eyebrows are white, and still have neither money nor reputation, while popular journalism offers both. Other considerations are mentioned, even the old, old fallacy of duty to one and another. I so far remain unconvinced. I recognize as clearly as anybody does that the present work holds out no assured rewards, but I hope it will sometime. I take it that Freethinkers are a trifle more exacting than other readers; which is right, for we should demand that our writers do good work. I also entertain the hope that I may improve to such an extent that my work in this field may be thought worthy of the remuneration it has received or might now receive elsewhere. It was agreeable to me to have the occasional contributions I sent, in former years, to papers of some literary pretensions, accepted and paid for. It is gratifying now to meet with an offer such as I have spoken of; and perhaps some well-wisher may not be displeased at my mentioning it. Our Freethought writers must be judged by the general standard. I hold that they do not suffer by comparison with others outside our ranks, and gladly furnish such testimony as I can to that effect. There is a chance for the introduction of some sentiment in this place. There is opportunity to remark that it is a beautiful sight when devotion to a cause is more powerful than the desire for personal emoluments; but if such is the case it is no more remarkable or worthy of note than the opposite fact. I follow my strongest, and therefore most selfish, inclination, and stick to the text. Be the consequences on my own head.

Moses Hull did not deliver his lecture last Sunday on the "Conflict between Superstition and Science," as he authorized me to announce, but he gave one on the "Past and Present," which answered every purpose. I suffered a tax of ten cents at the door of Washington Hall, and went in just as Moses and Mattie were singing the opening hymn. Mrs. Hull is a girlish-looking lady with a musical little voice. Mr. Hull's voice is also set to music, and with organ accompaniment the two make a joyful noise. Mrs. Hull is likewise a rhymer, and can improvise very good verse without fatigue. She gave a poem of perhaps a hundred lines, which was understood to be inspirational, but to my mind the quality of it attested its mundane origin. I have heard and read a great deal of inspirational poetry turned out by Mrs. Brigham, Mr. Colville, Mrs. Rennell, and others, and it is rather inferior stuff. It never lights anywhere, never applies to anything we care about, and is as unmeaning as the babbling of a brook. It also goes on forever.

Moses is a wonderful talker. He can discuss a subject endlessly. To sit and hear him is like riding in a merry-go-round. You don't have to run to keep up, and you don't have to work to produce the motion. There is no tax on the intellectual faculties. He says everything that the subject suggests, and illustrates with soothing and satisfactory comparisons that leave nothing to be desired. I remember little that he said. He might repeat the discourse to me next Sunday under another name, and I would not detect the repetition. I believe he has discovered the secret of oratorical continuity, and will never talk himself out. I recommend the readers of this journal to go and hear him next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. They will hear some good singing, and escape the cares and troubles and thoughts of the world for an hour.

I wrote the appended thinglet on one blushing morn. It is a sonnet. I might call it an infant son-(net), but do not see how the joke could be conveyed to the reader without taking up too much of his time. To be read with Swinburne's "Love and Sleep" laid away where the young folks cannot get hold of it:

Lying asleep between the sheets of night,
I hear a sound arise beside my bed,
Faint first, but swelling as I lift my head;
And growing fiercer till I strike a light.
It issues from a mouth not made to bite
Nor yet articulate, but small and red,
With voice imperative, which spoke and said
I wist not what, save something to incite
Me to a livelier motion, and I haste,
Without formality of donning shoes
Or coat or vest, or any other clothes,
To warm a quart of milk, in toilet chaste,
Which in a bottle quickly I infuse,
And thrust the same beneath that infant's nose.

The retracy of Henry George from the "Standard" is a severe blow to Single-tax journalism, but it is a benefaction compared with the loss Spiritualism suffers by J. J. Owen's letting go of the "Golden Gate." It is true that Mr. Owen gains something that the cause loses, for he gets the editorial management of a San Jose daily paper, with a good salary understood; but who will write "Editorial Fragments" for the now-to-be-monthly "Golden Gate?" Who will watch my infantile efforts with a father's care and set me on my feet when I stumble over spiritual subjects? I have never met Mr. Owen, but I have read so much of his ill'uminated writing that I didn't think I wanted to. It is not the medium but the manifestations that attest the great truth of immortality, and what need to enter the editorial cabinet where the veiled prophet sits, when the manifestation comes every week through the mail? It is because of my deep regard for Mr. Owen that I am pained and surprised that he should forsake the sanctum sanctorum to sit in the councils of the ungodly politicians who subsidize worldly newspapers. How often, when a great coarse candidate with cigars in his vest pocket comes into the office of the San Jose daily and inquires "Be you wid us, or be you agin us?" will Mr. Owen wish himself back in the Flood building, on a quiet Sabbath morning, en rapport with that angel world whence come all pure thoughts and noble aspirations!

Here is the last "Fragment" from the regretted weekly G. G.:

The flower that blushes purple and golden in my pathway, the rays of sunshine that fill my room with warmth and glory, the melody and beauty of nature, and the sweet voices of friendship, that thrill my being with the rapture of living, all remind me that there is over and around me that Eternal Something known by many names, but which we call God, Spirit, Eternal, without beginning or ending, the essence of all causation, the source of all life—Thou art in the tempest and in the calm, in gladness and in sorrow, in the sweet sleep of innocence and in the fierce throes of madness, in the cry of the new-born babe and in the unconscious grasp of death. I will abide in Thee and trust Thee forever!

We shall not see its like again. Blushes will not be purple or yellow when he is gone. They will, alas! be red, as when the dictionaries were made. When we blush purple or yellow we shall mistake it for apoplexy or biliousness, and call in the doctor. The Eternal Something, capitalized, will not march through the columns of any San Francisco paper like a drum major going up Market street with a bearskin hat on. None other than he can give us a sentence of a hundred and twenty-five words, and delight us by throwing a dash into the middle of it and walking across the bridge thus formed, from the third person to the second. We may forget, when he is away, that we are coarse Materialists, with no reverence, or respect as he says, "for anything in the universe higher than the intelligence that manifests through mortal brains." We shall see only, as he says we do, "with the eyes of the mole burrowing in the dull earth." The Eternal Something will be hidden from our gaze; and people who do not recognize the Eternal Something, or the Infinite Gi-ascutus, were unnecessarily born.

Geo. E. Macdonald

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

The messiah craze is reported to have broken out among the Piutes of Inyo county, Cal. There are 1600 Indians in the county.—Rich deposits of coal are found in Shasta county a few miles from Millville. It is probable that Pennsylvania capital will be brought hither to develop the mines.—A member of Kaweah colony caused the arrest of Burnette G. Haskell last week, charging him with embezzlement.—At the Spanish church in this city last Friday was celebrated the 350th anniversary of the apparition of the Blessed Virgin to Juan Diego, a native Indian of Quatitlan, near the city of Mexico.—There were 126 deaths in San Francisco last week—17 more than during the same period of 1889.—The supervisors of Humboldt county have accepted the bridge built over Eel river at Alder Point by the San Francisco Bridge Company. It cost $32,000, and is said to be the longest truss span bridge on the Pacific coast. The total length of the bridge and approaches is 600 feet, including a single span of 360 feet, the floor of which is 70 feet above low water. It is built of iron and wood, and is on the overland road leading to San Francisco.—The finding of the petrified body of a man is reported from Cantua Canyon, 60 miles from Fresno. The man was 6 feet 10 inches in height, and measured 48½ inches around the chest.—Salvationists were arrested at Santa Cruz last Sunday for disturbing the peace.—The California State Woman Suffrage Society met at Washington Hall last Friday afternoon and adopted the report of the committee appointed to revise the Constitution and By-Laws. Mrs. Laura DeForce Gordon was authorized to telegraph the American Federation of Labor, in session at Detroit, and urge the adoption of a resolution favoring woman suffrage. She was also empowered to go before the state legislature and advance the cause the society is working for.—The Rev. George W. Sloan, a clergyman well-known on the coast, was sent to the asylum from Tacoma December 12, violently insane.—A recount of ballots demanded by Dr. C. C. O'Donnell, candidate for Mayor of San Francisco, began on Monday.—A site for a pesthouse has been purchased by the board of supervisors for $15,000. It is a part of the tide lands called Shag rock, and was assessed last March at $275.—Frank M. Pixley and others, candidates on the United Labor ticket at the last general election for members of the first board of supervisors, have filed a petition in the supreme court for a writ of mandamus to compel the board of election commissioners to count the ballots cast for them at the late election and declare them members of the first board of supervisors. Accompanying the petition is a notice that issuance of the mandamus will be asked for on December 23, 1890.—While on his way from North Branch to San Andreas to attend church last Sunday, the Rev. E. Swinford, a Methodist preacher, suffered a stroke of apoplexy, and was found dead two days later.—The preliminary examination of the Kaweah Colony timber cases before Commissioner Van Dyke occurred at Los Angeles on the 16th. The government failed to prove United States title. The colony lands were proved to be sixteen miles distant from Sequoia park. Dillon, the defendants' counsel, moved a dismissal on the government's showing. The commissioner took the motion under advisement.

Mrs. Woodworth, the revivalist, is making lunatics and cataleptics at Muncie, Ind.—Postmaster-General Wanamaker says that the country's ocean postage has netted a profit of over $2,000,000.—The president will shortly issue a proclamation inviting all nations to participate in the World's Fair at Chicago.—Scores of business failures are announced from eastern cities, and the finance tinkers are trying to devise ways to relieve the stringency.—A movement is in progress among the members-elect of the South Dakota legislature to abolish many of the state offices in the interest of economy. The finances of South Dakota are in bad shape. It is proposed to abolish the offices of commissioner of immigration, railroad commissioners, state veterinary surgeon, and to cut off the militia appropriation, and reduce the legislative expenses from $125,000 to $75,000 for the session.—The sale of the valuable collection of effects of George Washington and his executor and nephew, Lawrence Lewis, and grand nephew, Lorenzo Lewis, was begun at Philadelphia Dec. 13. The effects consisted of Washington's private account books, letters, documents, and personal effects kept by relatives as mementoes. A letter from Washington to Lewis brought $310. The same purchaser paid $760 for the last memorandum book of Washington, which the general wrote in up to a few days before his death. A letter from Washington advocating the abolition of slavery brought $380. A smaller memorandum book brought $400. Six tickets of the Delaware lottery, purchased by Washington, and a memorandum bearing their numbers in Washington's handwriting, brought $200.—War with the Indians in Dakota and Nebraska is thought to be unavoidable. Gen. Miles is at the scene of hostilities.—The total population of the United States, including the Indians and Alaskans, will reach 64,000,000. The census office has already returned, in round numbers, 315,000 Indians and whites in the Indian Territory. This, with the population of Alaska, which Special Agent Petroff estimates at 38,000, will bring up the total population to 64,000,000, a gain of 13,000,000 for the decade since 1880.—Dr. Koch's lymph was experimented with in New York last week with apparently beneficial effect.—Sitting Bull, the famous Indian warrior, was killed by United States soldiers Dec. 15. His death will probably end the fight.

Parnell has the clergy and bishops of the Catholic church in Ireland against him. The clergy denounced him from the pulpit last Sunday.—Russian journals say that Russia will tolerate no foreign interference with regard to her treatment of the Jews.—While conducting his campaign at Ballinakill last Monday Parnell was struck in the face and his eyesight injured by a bag of lime thrown by a political opponent.

GIVE C. F. Burgman, the tailor, a call if you desire a new suit for the holidays.

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION,

R. B. WESTBROOK, PRESIDENT.
BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. Westbrook, President, 1707 Oxford st., Philadelphia
 E. B. Foote, Jr., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York.
 T. B. Wakeman, Vice-President, 93 Nassau st., New York.
 T. Morris Parot, Vice-President Philadelphia, Pa.
 J. O. Bentley, Vice-President Philadelphia, Pa.
 Corresponding Secretary, Ida C. Craddock, S. E. corner of Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
 Treasurer, F. C. Mende 1814 Green st., Philadelphia Pa

CONTRIBUTIONS DURING NOVEMBER, 1890.

Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., New York City	$30
Golden Ethical Society, Golden, Iowa, through R. N. Howe	5
T. A. Willson, Reading, Pa.	5
Ingersoll Secular Society, Boston, through G. H. Hill, (charter fee)	5
W. D. Fisher, Attleboro Falls, Mass.	10
Portsmouth, Ohio, Secular Union	500
James Lafferty, Banner, Idaho	2
Charles Seekins, "	2
W. Barnard, "	1
Ulysses Tanner, Cannon Falls, Minn.	1
Carl Edelman, Philadelphia	10
John Downes, Steubenville, Ohio	1
M. H. Lyndall, Columbus, Ohio	1
M. H. Woodbury, Lakewood, Ohio	6
S. W. Davenbaugh, Brimfield, Ind.	11
E. P. Wright, Columbus, Ohio (new member)	1
T. M. Shank, Hurricane, W. Va., "	1
V. D. Manson, Jr., Shreve, Ohio, "	1
W. W. Wilson, Spiceland, Ind. "	20
G. B. Van Ness, Mechanicsburg, Ohio "	1
J. W. Crozier, Pittsburgh "	1
S. G. Sharpless, Chicago "	1
L. Taylor, Rarden, Ohio "	1
B. E. Taylor, Rarden, Ohio "	1
Joseph Simpson, Columbus, Ohio "	1
E. C. Wharton, Philadelphia "	1
Wm. Lorey, Portsmouth, Ohio "	1
J. L. Treuthart, Portsmouth, Ohio "	1
L. K. Washburn, Boston	1
Elizur Wright Secular Society of Alliance, Ohio, by R. G. Smith ..	5
W. J. Dutton, Kilmer, Ohio	1
Massillon, Ohio, Secular Union (charter fee) through F. M. Hopkins	5
Alex Risk, Aurora, Iowa	5
G. A. F. de Lespinasse, M.D., Orange City, Iowa, Guarantee Fund	10
W. F. Lerich, Houtzdale, Pa., Guarantee Fund	21
George P. Dreisbach, Glenn City, Pa.	5

Total $655
 Philadelphia, Dec. 1, 1890. F. C. MENDE, Treas. A. S. U.

SPECIAL CALL FOR GUARANTEE FUND.

The Congress of the American Secular Union, recently held at Portsmouth, Ohio, directed the officers to make, through the Liberal papers, a call upon the friends for the pledge of five thousand dollars ($5000) to enlarge and carry forward the work of the society. This money is needed to sustain the business of the general office in Philadelphia, and to pay the salaries and traveling expenses of at least two field secretaries, who shall go out to organize auxiliary societies and otherwise labor to promote the cause.

That this is an important movement in the right direction must be obvious to all. Never was there a time when the work of our society was so much in demand; and our one need is the money to carry on that work. Will our friends respond to this call liberally and at once, that we may know what to depend upon?

The president, besides his gratuitous daily work in behalf of the society, offers to be one of twenty to contribute one hundred dollars ($100) each for this object. Will nineteen others respond to this proposition at once?

How many can pledge $50, $25, $10, $5, $1? Let every friend of the cause inform us as soon as possible what he or she is willing to pledge.

Let all Liberal societies, whether auxiliary or not, take up this matter promptly, and inform us what they are willing to do.

The pledges will be published in the "Truth Seeker," "Investigator," FREETHOUGHT, and "Secular Thought" each month. It is understood that the subscriptions may be paid during the coming year at the convenience of the subscriber, and, if desired, in instalments. All responses to this call should be addressed to the corresponding secretary.

We see no reason why the sum named should not be secured by pledges within thirty days.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President,
 F. C. MENDE, Treasurer,
 IDA C. CRADDOCK, Cor. Sec.

Office S. E. cor. Broad and Columbia avenues, Philadelphia,
 November 11, 1890.

The following pledges for this fund have been received (Where already paid, they will be found counted in with the regular contributions for this month as per above list):

R. B. Westbrook, on condition of nineteen others pledging an equal amount with himself	$100
Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr., New York City	100
G. A. F. de Lespinasse, M.D., Orange City, Iowa [Paid]	10
W. F. Lerich, Houtzdale, Penn. [Paid]	5
W. F. Lerich, Houtzdale, Penn., additional, [Paid]	10
Anton J. Kraft, Grantfork, Ill., [Paid]	5
S. E. Price, Clinton, Mo.	10
Rousseau Hess, Port Custer, Montana	10
George Larson, Levan, Utah	5
Samos Parsons, San Jose, Cal.	10
A. K. and M. J. Olds, McMinnville, Oregon	100
John F. Welin, Spokane Falls, Wash.	3
G. P. Brene, Canon City, Colo.	5
A. I. Rosenberg, Canon City, Col.	5
A Friend in Virginia	25
T. S. Frisbie, Chicago	5

Total pledged to December 8, $408
 F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, Am. Secular Union.

Philadelphia December 8, 1890.

THE KORESHANITY OF CYRUS R. R. TEED.

The front parlors of a boarding-house at 416 Post street, says a recent issue of the San Francisco "Chronicle," are occupied by a man named R. O. Spear. Mr. Spear is a "professor," and alleges to hail from Chicago. On the front of the building he has posted a large tin sign, which reads as follows: "Chicago World's College of Life, founded in 1886, by Cyrus R. R. Teed, Promulgator of the Doctrines of Koresh. Prof. R. O. Spear, Instructor."

A little more to the background, nailed to the door, appears a second announcement, which details more minutely the business followed by "Professor" Spear. He advertises himself as a practical phranologist, tells how to select a partner or profession; heals the sick by magnetism, and announces for sale a book on "The Plain Road to Health," or how to cure oneself without the use of medicine. He also explains that he applies the finer forces of nature, having made a lifelong study of metaphysics.

"Professor" Spear gives instructions in the new doctrines of Koresh twice a week, on Wednesday and Friday evenings. Last night when a "Chronicle" reporter called at 416 Post street a motley crowd of converts had assembled in the stuffy double parlors. There were thirty or forty women in the audience, three old men and a couple of young fellows. For two hours "Professor" Spear proceeded to lecture, or rather to preach to his congregation. He is not a handsome man, and has a voice like a baseball umpire. He is tall, well-built, and of middle age, and wears black chin whiskers, tinged with gray. His sermon or lecture last night was a combination of theosophy, hypnotism, and the religion of the new Indian messiah, Johnson Sides. None of his hearers could exactly place his new religion on the shelf where it belonged.

Among other things, "Professor" Spear said that he believed in a personal God, but had never been a child of God to his knowledge. Church and state and science and religion had been divorced, and the old heaven and the old earth had passed, or were about to pass away. Christ would appear on earth a second time, and that very soon, and there would be a new heaven and a new earth. He announced that an important ceremony, none other than the marriage of God and man, would soon take place. The people of the world were soon to enter up on a new life in the new heaven and earth.

Strange to say, "Professor" Spear did not offer to take up a collection, but was particular to announce his office hours for private consultation.

"AROUND THE WORLD" AS A PREMIUM.

We are offering as a premium to subscribers to FREETHOUGHT for 1891 "A Woman's Journey Around the World," by Lilian Leland. The book is handsomely bound in cloth, and in that form has heretofore sold at one dollar per copy. We have considered it advisable to furnish no more copies in paper covers at 30 cents—first, because the form is not durable, and second, because there is not a legitimate profit in handling it at that price. Hereafter it will be furnished in cloth covers at 75 cents.

The book makes a splendid premium with FREETHOUGHT, and we invite all to take advantage of the offer. "A Woman's Journey" contains upwards of 350 pages, and, as the Boston "Herald" observes, "it is little short of disgraceful that the condition of the book trade in the United States should necessitate its appearance in paper covers."

On another page will be found a few out of the many well-deserved notices the book has received from the leading journals of the country. As above stated, we offer "A Woman's Journey" as a premium to new subscribers; but any of our present subscribers who desire it may obtain a copy as a premium by renewing between the present time and January 15, 1891. We make this proposition because we need the money to square our accounts at the beginning of the New Year, and because those who stay with us year after year are as deserving of recognition in this way as are new and untried friends.

Please renew at once and receive this valuable premium.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT RUSSIA.

With a territory exceeding that of all other European countries put together, Russia in Europe can only boast of a population of a little under ninety millions.

That population is very unevenly distributed, ranging from 30 to 6,000 a square mile—I mean a Russian square mile, which is equal to sixteen American miles. This varying average of population in different sections of the country is due to the different qualities of the soil, more or less favorable climatic conditions, and to the antiquity of settlement.

Thus the Western Provinces of German origin and those of Poland are most thickly populated, while of course those around the White sea and even all north of the Volga can claim but a very scanty population.

However distributed, ninety millions of human souls are a vast number and must consequently deserve some attention. Although not as definitely divided into castes as the tribes of Hindostan, the Russians are subject to a very determined division into classes. The lowest is that of moujiks or peasants. Once in a while an individual may pass its limits and enter a higher class, either by a great display of valor on the battlefield or by great economy and good husbandry, or at last by becoming a priest with the permission of the government. To understand the change implied in that casual advancement one must be acquainted with the conditions of life of a Russian peasant.

If tolerably lucky, he will by dint of hardest labor possess, if not a house all to himself and family, at least a part of it. And what a house! Its floor will be of clay, its walls of wood, and its roof of straw. It will have but one room, with a loft over it, with one door and one or two windows. It will have a stove to cook on during day and to sleep on at night. And what cooking and what sleeping! The coarsest rye bread is the greatest delicacy, especially when with salt and onions. Then come potatoes, occasionally with bits of bacon, and then follows shtchi, a product of cabbage in a liquid state.

As to sleep, its a unique operation, performed without undressing, sometimes in feather beds, the only luxury, necessitated by the severity of the climate, or else on top of the stove, with its latent warmth and with piles of multiform clothing over all as consolation.

It is a life of toil and privations diversified by the traditional bath on Saturday and attending church on Sunday. Further diversified by execution for unpaid taxes and by systematic conscription to the army. And when oppressed and trodden down, the Russian peasant has the consolation to appeal to St. Elias or to St. Nicholas or even to Jesus Christ for help and mercy.

Such is the condition of the peasant. No wonder, then, that distinction in the army, which, by earning him the cross of some Russian saint, will make him a drorianin, or gentleman, and sometimes even endow him with an estate, is something to strive after. No wonder that he will labor to take possession of land in a distant part of the empire to reap the benefits of cultivation of a virgin soil. No wonder that his parents will undergo all sorts of privations to give him a clerical education, which will enable him to become a priest and enjoy the great salary of two hundred roubles a year and all other appurtenances of the priestly calling.

Let us look now at the working classes in towns. These earn better wages and enjoy greater comforts. A Russian mechanic is not so far behind a German, French, or English as the Russian peasant is behind his brother of those countries.

They even form unions, called artels, which, however, have the fault of making men at work support the idle members. Between the peasant and the city laborer there is what the French call tiers etat, which in reality comprises a great many separate classes of society. There are artisans, tradesmen (from the smallest to the richest merchant), the white clergy (that is, all the priesthood outside the monasteries), then officials up to a certain class. Those of the highest, the gentry and nobility of the empire, and all the monks, constitute the Russian aristocracy.

The narrow limits of this article do not allow us to treat the conditions of life of the tiers etat (middle classes), but, having treated at some length the subject of peasants' life, we shall say a few words about the aristocracy to show the striking contrast, which unhappily exists, more or less glaringly all over the civilized world. From his nursery, where he has every wish gratified, the young Russian noble passes into the hands of French and German governesses. Thus he learns those languages when a small boy. When older he is under care of a tutor (seldom being sent to public schools) until he is of the age to enter the School of Pages—an aristocratic establishment which turns out candidates for officers at court—or else the School of Jurisprudence, which trains future dignitaries of the law. Both those schools are very exclusive, admitting only the scions of the old nobility. The fees there are rather high. There is a stress laid on the irreproachableness of dress and companionship. For instance, the inmates, if attending a theatrical representation, are not permitted to occupy any other than private boxes; and a glove which is not immaculate would be cause for a severe reprimand. Acquaintance with anybody below their station would not be tolerated under any circumstances.

Once through their schooling, they enter a life of pleasure and dissipation, hardly burdened by any duties except those imposed by individual ambition. They travel, "do" Paris, London, and Italy; spend a summer at Trouville, and another at Biarritz. They patronize the arts, ballet girls, and horse races; lose or win fortunes on the turn of a card, and returning blase to their hereditary estates for a week's rest, they sometimes try to brace up their nerves by flogging some poor devil of a peasant. And they do own big estates, some of them. Why, the Polish Count Branicki travels a few days behind his trotters through his own domains, if he takes a fancy to shun the railroad. And they enjoy privileges too, some serving only to gratify their vanity; for instance, when the head of the princely family of Golitzyns enters Moscow all the church bells ring to do him honor.

Two classes have existed in the history of almost every nation, their characteristics undergoing a more or less gradual obliteration. Imperial Rome consisted of only two elements: the proletariat and the imperial power; and such is really the condition of the modern Russian empire—masses of down-trodden peasants at the bottom of the structure, and on top the Tzar. And if the surging waves of that living sea of human beings now lift some lucky one to the surface, and then again swallow some disgraced grandee, it matters no more than the rising and falling of the ocean waves. The property and life of every Russian being entirely and constantly subject to the whim of his despot, they all tremble before him alike—metropolitans, senators, generals, no less than the poorest peasant. To criticise that power is more dangerous than dancing on a box of dynamite. Still the spirit of the times, undaunted by fetters, continues to assert itself in individual or united action, and the world gives its exponents in Russia the much abused and misunderstood name of Nihilists.

PIERRE SIEMIONOFF.

A MINISTER'S DREAM.*

BY NELLIE BOOTH SIMMONS.

It was nearly eight o'clock in the morning, and the chimes were sending down their sweet tones from the church spires in various parts of the city and telling the people that another week of toil had rolled around and brought Sunday in its train. The rhythmic sounds penetrated even to the luxurious chamber where the Rev. Mr. Pompous lay asleep. At first he couldn't hear them because he was snoring, but presently they began to make an impression on his brain.

He stirred and breathed a bit more lightly, and then, after yawning, and winking, and stretching a good many times, he actually gained courage to crawl out of bed and put on dressing gown and slippers and take his night cap off.

"Ugh!" he murmured with a regretful shiver as he looked about for his shaving apparatus, "vacation is over and I must get into the harness and go to work again. And why, of course," he added, as a thought occurred to him that brightened up his lethargic faculties, "to-day I am to preach my great sermon upon the advisability of closing the Columbian fair on the Sabbath. That is truly an effort of which I may feel proud. I hope that none of the papers will neglect to assign a reporter to the church, and they all should print my words in full. No doubt I shall be criticised by the ungodly, the Infidels and blasphemers, but I can meet opposition, I fancy," and the clerical gentleman lathered his cheeks quite fiercely and smiled in a sanguinary way.

Cheered with these thoughts he went on with his toilet very briskly. He was somewhat vexed, though, to find that his boots, which he had placed outside the door to be cleaned, were untouched and smeared with the traces of yesterday's mud. He threw them in a corner and put on another pair, meditating as he did so a severe reproof to the careless servant whose duty it was to attend to all these matters. Then he dismissed his saintly anger and returned to the reflections which had absorbed his mind.

"It is horrible," he mused as he gave a final shake to his dignified coat tails and slowly descended the stairs; "such lawless and sinful desecration of what should be most sacred. Were I to go out upon the streets now I would doubtless see crowds of people going to the parks, and would hear the unholy jingle of the cable cars. The Sunday paper is already, I suppose, exerting its baleful influence, and in the evening a dozen theaters will present wicked, alluring dramas to corrupt the minds of the young. And now it is proposed, in the summer of ninety-two—but ah, we must prevent that. For it will never do—humph! Well, and what, I wonder, in the name of goodness can the matter be here?"

This exclamation was brought out rather suddenly as the Rev. Mr. Pompous opened the dining-room door. And perhaps it was excusable under the circumstances. For instead of a neat, well-ordered table, with his pretty wife at the head, and a jocund fire crackling on the hearth, and the children daintily dressed and waiting for his appearance—in the place of this pleasant sight, which had met his eyes every morning for the last ten years—he found only a comfortless and deserted apartment. The chairs were dusty and the curtains hung awry, the grate was cold and dark, and a few dishes were huddled disconsolately together on the table, which looked as if it had been dancing a jig.

For a moment the Rev. Mr. Pompous remained petrified with amazement; then he recovered his senses and hurried into the kitchen to demand an explanation of the servants. And lo, not one of them was to be seen, but the mistress, her front hair in papers and her wrapper half unbuttoned, was fluttering distractedly around the hot stove. Her two little daughters were there, beating an ecstatic chorus upon some pans and pots, and the baby was sifting flour in the water pail and getting itself gloriously wet and sticky.

"My dear," cried the minister, rushing forward, "what are you trying—has anything happened? Where is the cook and why isn't breakfast prepared?"

"Oh, Gustavus," said the lady, lifting her flushed face from the rueful contemplation of the omelet which had accidentally fallen in the coal hod, "are you down already? Why, surely, it can't be over seven o'clock now."

"It is nearly time to start for church," answered he, "but tell me, pray, what does all this mean?"

"Well," began Mrs. Pompous, sinking wearily upon the meal chest and pushing back her tangled hair, "the fact is, the servants refuse to work Sundays. They insist that it's wrong and wicked to cook on this day and think we ought to be satisfied, you know, with cold food. And really I couldn't contradict them, but I was afraid your head would ache, dear, if you didn't have some coffee, and so, as Bridget declined to make it, I came and—"

"Where is she now, and what's she doing?" thundered the master.

"Bridget—oh, she's in her room reading prayers, and Nora has just been there, too, singing pious hymns, and Minnie, the nurse, brought the children down, I can't tell how long ago, and went off to early mass," replied Mrs. Pompous, with a little sigh of resignation.

"I will speak to them," said the indignant divine. "Call them in here, if you please," and he took a seat on the edge of the stationary tub, and tried to assume a calm and judicial aspect.

"No—you mustn't," exclaimed his wife, hastily springing up. "At least," she added, in a hesitating voice, "I don't see what in the world you'd say—for it was you, love, who put this idea in their heads. It seems Nora has overheard you talking about Sabbath desecration, and she told Minnie and the others, and they agreed that if it was wrong, as you asserted, for waiters in restaurants to be kept on duty Sundays—why—it wouldn't be right—"

Mrs. Pompous stopped suddenly, but her husband seemed to understand, for he stood quite still, and the faintest possible blush appeared in his face. And then he shrugged his shoulders and turned impatiently aside.

"Ah, well," he remarked, "if they are so stupid as to misinterpret my words in that way I won't try to reason them out of the mistake. There is not the slightest use. Bring on whatever you have to eat, and we'll make the best of it. Hurry up, my dear."

So poor Mrs. Pompous fell to work, and after various ineffectual struggles, in which she and the cooking utensils collided a good many times without any particular result, the meal was put on the table at last. It couldn't be called really a success, though, for the steak was badly burned, the muffins seemed nearly raw, and the coffee tried the patience of the fastidious clergyman to such an extent he certainly would have forgotten to lead in the family prayers only his wife reminded him of the omission.

"By the way," he said, as he pushed back his chair and arose, "where's the paper this morning? I want to see whether my sermon is announced."

"Why, the journals aren't printed on Sunday any more," answered Mrs. Pompous. "The government has just prohibited them, you know, dear; or hadn't you heard about the new law?"

"An't you glad, papa?" little Flossie piped up. "Now perhaps more folks'll go to church. Lottie Benton said her mamma asked her papa why he didn't want to hear you of'ner, an' he told her he'd ravver stay at home an' read 'bout politics, an' base ball, an' the—"

But a warning look from Mrs. Pompous checked further disclosures and then the good lady remarked:

"I'm so sorry, Gustavus, that I can't hear your sermon, but as Minnie refuses to take care of the children to-day I must remain with them."

"Ah, well," said her husband, absently, "did you order Michael to bring around the carriage for me?"

"He won't do it, dear," said Mrs. Pompous, hastily, "and I'm afraid you'll have to ride in a street car, for he, too, has scruples against working—"

* From the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

"What can have got into these provoking servants—are they mad or simply lazy?" interrupted the divine, testily. "Really, I hope you won't lose any time in getting rid of them, and finding some better, more easily managed ones in their places—for such insubordination and intolerable impertinence can't be endured," and, with a wrathful snort, the Rev. Mr. Pompous bounced into his study to look up the manuscript of the discourse he was to deliver.

A few minutes later he stood upon the corner of the next block waiting for a car, but to his great astonishment none appeared. The familiar jingle and the rattling of the wheels couldn't be detected, and up and down the street, far as he saw, the tracks were vacant and empty. At length a young gentleman approached him with a bow and inquired:

"Are you watching for the grip, my dear sir? They don't run to-day. Perhaps you are not aware that the new law forbidding all traffic on Sunday has just gone into effect." Then he added: "Pardon me, but I believe you are the Rev. Mr. Pompous: You certainly have done much to bring about this happy change. Allow me to congratulate you upon the fact that your untiring labors have borne such fruit, and to hope that you may long be spared to aid in fighting the forces of the wrong."

"Ah, yes," replied the bewildered minister, furtively pinching himself as he spoke to make sure that he was in his senses. "I have been deeply engaged of late, and could not keep informed; however, I thank you. But I am hurried this morning, and must really beg you to excuse me," and with these incoherent words he turned away and went back home at the top of his speed.

"I'll harness the horses and drive to church myself," he thought, as he sneaked around the barn in the rear of the premises; and once and again, as he bungled over refractory traces, and buckles, and straps, he murmured softly:

"What has happened—did the world take a somersault while I was asleep last night, I wonder?"

The immaculate costume he wore was sadly disarranged and soiled by the time the carriage was ready, but he couldn't stop to brush, for it was growing very late. So he hastily clambered in, caught up the ribbons, and started off. But he had driven barely half a mile when suddenly a brawny, red-faced policeman stepped forward and laid a heavy hand upon the bits of his spirited, prancing steeds.

"Now, fellow, what do you want?" demanded the exasperated divine, with an impatient twitch.

"Hit's agin th' rules to ride hon the day o' th' Lord, don't you know, sor?" stupidly responded the blue-coated guardian of the peace. "Th' law say that w'en hit's wrong to work men 'tan't right to use th' osses nor hanimals of hany sort. Them's th' new regilations, as you hought to 'ave heerd on long before now, sor?"

The Rev. Mr. Pompous didn't attempt at all to argue the matter; he just sank back on the cushioned seat and permitted his champing steeds to be led ignominiously to their stables by the officer, who kindly helped him to unhitch. Then, with a sigh of resignation and a furtive look at the house to make sure that his wife wasn't peeking, he set bravely out to walk, since there could be no other available mode of reaching his destination.

Concluded Next Week.

THE WHIPPING POST.

The first person publicly whipped in America was a Quakeress named Mary Clark, who was given twenty stripes for preaching in Boston, in 1657. The next to suffer in this manner were Christopher Holden and John Copeland, both flogged on account of their religious belief by the Puritans in Boston, and within the next year twelve persons were publicly whipped because they were Quakers.

After the whipping of Copeland many left Massachusetts and settled on Long Island and in the Dutch colonies, but they were treated there in the same way. One Robert Hodshone was accused of holding a meeting at Hempstead. He was brought over to New Amsterdam, dragged through the town at the tail of a cart, and then taken before the town council. He was whipped inside the fort and fined 600 guilders, and because he could not pay the fine he was unmercifully flogged a second time. The following warrant was issued at Dover, Mass., in 1662:

To the constables of Dover, Hampton, Newberry, Lynn, Boston, Roxbury, and Dedham: Until the vagabond Quakers are carried out of this jurisdiction you are to give them sound whippings; you and every one of you are required in the King's Majesty's name to take these vagabond Quakers, Anne Coleman, Mary Tompkins and Alice Ambrose, and make them fast to the cart's tail, and to whip them upon their naked backs. Convey them from constable to constable until they are out of this jurisdiction, as you will answer at your peril; and this shall be your warrant. At Dover, December 22, 1662. Per me, RICHARD WALDEN.

The warrant is still preserved at Boston. A similar commission was issued by John Endicott in 1664 for the flogging of Edward Wharton. Flogging of a similar nature occurred frequently until the Quakers were safely settled in Pennsylvania. The following account of a whipping which took place at Boston in 1734 is taken from an old newspaper published in 1774:

"Capt. St. Leo, commander of a warship then in Boston Harbor, being apprehended for walking on the Lord's Day, was sentenced by a justice of the peace to pay a fine, and on refusing to pay had to sit in the stocks an hour during the day. While in the stocks the good people supplied him with much good advice as to his future conduct on the Sabbath day. After his release the captain expressed great regret for his past transgressions, and declared to them that he was in future resolved to lead a new life. The saints of Boston were, of course, delighted at his sudden reformation, and in order that the captain might still further profit by their good counsel, many of them invited him to dinner. The captain proved to be a most zealous convert. He attended prayer-meeting, and showed every outward mark of grace. At length he was obliged to put to sea, and before the day of departure invited many of the spiritual advisers to dinner aboard the vessel, which lay ready in Nantaket Roads. A capital dinner was provided, at which many bottles were drained to the captain's health. When the after-dinner harmony was at its height a body of sailors burst into the cabin and seized the guests. They were dragged on deck, tied to a grating, and the boatswain and his assistants administered the law of Moses in a most energetic manner, the captain meantime assuring them that the mortification of the flesh tended to the saving of the soul. They were bundled into their boat and the captain immediately set sail."

The only place in the United States where the old idea that whipping is a means of edification is still clung to is in Delaware. In that state there are whipping-posts—one at Dover, one at Georgetown, and another at New Castle.—New York Times.

THE ballot in regard to closing the World's Fair on Sunday, which was carried on in the Chicago "Evening Post" for about six weeks, closed November 18, with the result standing thus: For opening on Sunday, 10,316; against opening on Sunday, 5,192.

EXTEND the circulation of FREETHOUGHT. To new subscribers we offer as a premium "A Woman's Journey Around the World," by Lilian Leland; a valuable work of 358 pages, finely bound in cloth.

SUBSCRIBERS may do us a great favor by sending us the names of known Freethinkers who are not at present subscribers to FREETHOUGHT. We wish to send to such, sample copies of the paper with invitations to subscribe.

"Is This Your Son, My Lord?" by Helen H. Gardener. Price 50 cents.

S. P. PUTNAM'S LECTURE APPOINTMENTS IN TEXAS.

Walnut Springs	Dec 10 11 12	Forney	Dec 31 and Jan 1 2
Stephensville	Dec 13 14	Reagan and Martin	Jan 3 4 5
Alvarado	Dec 15 16 17	Flatonina	Jan 11 12
Ft. Worth	Dec 18 19	San Antonio	Jan 13 14 15
Sunset	Dec 20 21	El Paso	Jan 17 18
Gainesville	Dec 22 23	Tempe, Arizona	Jan 21 22
Trenton	Dec 27 28	Phoenix, "	Jan 13 24 25
Denison	Dec 29 30	State Convention of Cal.	Jan 29

IT TAKES VIGOR AND BACK BONE TO GO AGAINST THE TIDE.
THE SICK MAN IS SELDOM THE SUCCESSFUL MAN. THE POINT IS: GET WELL AND KEEP WELL THIS CAN BE DONE; HERE'S A NATURAL WAY: INHALE NATURE'S VITALIZER—OXYGEN. NOT THE AMOUNT WHICH YOU GET IN ORDINARY BREATHING BUT A CONDENSATION OF IT. THIS IS FOUND IN COMPOUND OXYGEN. THIS POWERFUL REMEDIAL AGENT IS NOT ONLY AN INCREASE OVER THE NORMAL SUPPLY, BUT IT IS VITALIZED BY CHARGES OF ELECTRICITY. IT MAKES STRENGTH AND MAINTAINS IT. THE BEST FEATURE OF VITALITY GAINED IN THIS WAY IS THAT IT REMAINS AFTER THE USE OF COMPOUND OXYGEN IS DISCONTINUED.

A BOOK OF 200 PAGES WILL TELL YOU WHO HAVE BEEN RESTORED TO HEALTH AND STRENGTH BY THE USE OF COMPOUND OXYGEN.

THIS BOOK WILL BE SENT ENTIRELY FREE OF CHARGE TO ANY ONE WHO WILL WRITE TO

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, NO. 1529 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

120 SUTTER ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

58 CHURCH ST., TORONTO, CANADA.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper. PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; ounce. Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entirely satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic, engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50; fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botches, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler.

Price, $1.

Address The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address The Freethought Publishing Co.

THE TRAMP WITH CONSUMPTION.

A Strange Tale of His Thrilling Encounter with the Old Ram.

I was at my uncle's, near Niagara Falls, in Canada, and had hardly arrived when he said:

"Now, neevy, you'll be wandering around more or less, and I want to caution you about an old ram I took up as an estray the other week. He's down in the lot where the gravel pit is, and just as sure as you give him a show he'll be the death of you. I saw him knock a cow off her feet at one bang, and I wouldn't go into the lot for $50."

Next day I skirted the fences and found the old chap anxious for business. I didn't give him an opening, however, but somebody else did. I was standing in the barn with uncle when he suddenly exclaimed:

"Great Joseph! but there's a tramp in the gravel pit lot! That ram will smash him to pulp in two minutes!"

He shouted, waved his hat and shouted again, but the tramp was a quarter of a mile away, and walking with his head down. The ram was lying down in the pit, and the yelling brought him out. We saw him scramble up the bank, and my uncle gasped out:

"Git a hoss hitched up to go for the undertaker, for that tramp won't be alive two minutes later!"

He was, though. The ram came at him on an angle, and he caught sight of the animal when about ten rods off. He wheeled to the right, stood still, and the ram got within ten feet, and then sailed through the air on a straight line to strike him. Next instant the tramp had him by the horns, and with a twist and a jerk he broke his neck with a snap. He tarried to be sure that the ram was dead, and then came on, climbed the fence and said to us:

"Gentlemen, you see before you a man who has been unfortunate. I have consumption, and am hardly able to stand. I want to get to a milder climate as soon as possible."—New York Sun.

And She Was Right.

They hadn't been a year married, and while he used to dress up in his best and go out, he never saw that his wife's garments were getting unfashionable, or that she might like to go out, too. Naturally this excited her suspicions.

"James," she sobbed one evening, "do not deny it. You have grown tired. There is one, I am sure, you love better than me."

"Why, Mary, you talk foolish. Who can I love better than you?"

"Yourself, James dear."—Philadelphia Times.

An Accommodating Boy.

City Dame (in the country)—Boy, can't you get me some cat tails?

Country Boy—Yes'm. Long ones?

City Dame—Oh, long or short; whichever are the prettier.

Boy—Well, mum, I guess I'd better just bring you th' cats an' let you cut the tails off to suit y'rself.—Street & Smith's Good News.

Those Terrible Russian Words.

Bronson—Did you hear of the sad fate of poor Offaloffski, the Russian?

Johnson—No; what was it?

Bronson—He got into an altercation with a fellow countryman, and the other fellow pulled out a revolver and made Offaloffski eat his words. It killed him.—Light.

A Giveaway.

Young Wife (Vassar girl, putting hands over her husband's eyes)—You can't guess whom I am.

Husband—My little wify.
 Young Wife—You guessed by my voice.
 Husband—No; by your grammar.—New York Evening Sun.

Domestic Needs.

Husband—Anything you want down town today, my dear? Shall I order some more of that self raising flour?
 Wife—We have plenty left; but I wish you would stop at an intelligence office and order me a self raising servant girl.—New York Weekly.

Plays in Street Parades.

Quizz—What is your friend Jack driving at now?
 Fizz—Oh, he's playing the bass drum in a brass band!
 Quizz—Ah! A professional musician, eh?
 Fizz—No; a professional musician.—Lowell Citizen.

A Wise Bird.

First Bird—See that dog looking at us? He's a pointer, and a city sportsman is back there with a gun.
 Second Bird (of several seasons' experience)—My! my! that dog is in a dangerous position.—Street & Smith's Good News.

Modern Conveniences.

Little Girl (in church)—Why does so many people put those little envelopes on th' contribution plate?
 Little Boy—Them's to keep the pennies from makin' so much noise.—New York Weekly.

His Peril.

Professor Bumptious—It has been truthfully remarked that "a little learning is a dangerous thing."
 Sophomore (sotto voce)—Wonder if professor realizes the peril he's in!—Boston Courier.

At Midnight.

Staylate—My favorite flower, Miss Amy, is the night blooming cereus.
 Miss Amy—Indeed, Mr. Staylate! I thought it would probably be the morning glory.—West Shore.

Very True.

Cumso—Does it pay a man to be an inventor?
 Banks—Oh, yes; but the man it pays is not the inventor.—Judge.

Answered.

Sophomore—I heard one of the girl undergraduates make a truly womanly answer the other day.
 Junior—Indeed.
 Sophomore—Yes. The professor in astronomy asked her why the earth goes around the sun.
 Junior—What answer did she make?
 Sophomore—Because.—New York Sun.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of catarrh that cannot be cured by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.
 F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.
 We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions, and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.
 WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
 WALDEN, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
 Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all druggists.

The Humboldt Library
 —OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts.

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forns of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
8. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
7. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
12. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
14. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion.
15. Longevity. Prolonging life. John Gardner, M.D.
16. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
18. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
20. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kalley Miller.
21. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
22. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
23. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
24. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholz.
25. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
26. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
27. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
28. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
30. The Study of Words. Richard Chenevix Trench.
31. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R.A. Proctor. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
32. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
33. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
34. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
35. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
36. Geological Sketches. Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
37. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
38. Current Discussions in Science. W.M. Williams.
39. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
40. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
41. The Dawn of History. C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
42. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
43. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
44. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
45. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
46. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange. Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
47. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
48. Animal Automatism, Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
49. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
50. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
51. Illusions. James Sully.
52. The Origin of Species. Two Double Numbers. Charles Darwin. 30 cents each.
53. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
54. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
55. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
56. Progressive Morality. Thomas. Fowler, LL.D.
57. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
58. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
59. Technical Education, Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
60. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
61. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
62. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
63. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencer.
64. Archaeology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
65. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
66. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
67. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
68. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
69. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
70. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
71. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
72. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
73. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley-Taylor, M.A.
74. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
75. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
76. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
77. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
78. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson.
79. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
80. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
81. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S.S. Laurie.
82. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin)

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T.H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haekel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen.
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present. Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life. Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Laing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whymper, Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No., 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Ritchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTIANITY * * *
 —AND—
 * * AGNOSTICISM.
 A CONTROVERSY
 Consisting of papers by
 Prof. Thomas Huxley, Rev. Henry Wace,
 The Bishop of Peterborough
 W. H. Mallock, Mrs. Humphrey Ward.
 Price, 30 cents.
 Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St.
 San Francisco.
 Watches Cleaned
 & Warranted, $1
 Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry,
 Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired.

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,
 Manufacturers and Dealers in
PAPERS!
 Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
 PAPER BAGS, TWINE.
 Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
 414 and 416 Clay st., S F.

SAN FRANCISCO
ARBEITER ZEITUNG.
 710 WASHINGTON ST., SAN FRANCISCO.
 The only organ in the German language on the Pacific Coast that stands for true Nationalism.
 Subscription price: 3 mos., 60 cts.; 6 mos., $1;
 12 mos., $2. 45tf

SECOND EDITION

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

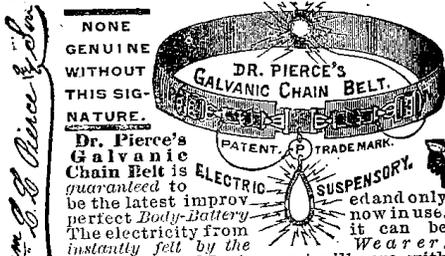

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

Address, THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 HOWARD ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SING, BROTHERS, SING,
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parson, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who have examined it. Price 25 cents. Address Freethought Publishing Co., 828 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

LIFE RENEWER

NONE GENUINE WITHOUT THIS SIGNATURE.
Dr. Pierce's Galvanic Chain Belt is guaranteed to be the latest improved Body-Battery. The electricity from it can be instantly felt by the Wearer. This celebrated Instrument will cure, without medicine; Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Diseases of the Liver or Kidneys, Lame Back, Female Weakness, General Debility, Spinal Disease, Sexual Weakness, Impotency, Etc. Suspensory for men free with every Belt. N. B. The Electricity goes directly to all Weak Parts and restores them to Health and Vigorous Strength. For particulars call or send 4 cts. in stamps for sealed Pamphlet No. 2. Address MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS CO., 704 Sacramento St., San Francisco, Cal. PILES. If troubled with Hemorrhoids or Piles, send stamp for Pamphlet No. 3.

$75.00 to $250.00 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St., Richmond, Va.

ASTHMA CURED DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE
THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Health AND Hygienic Works.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., $1.
Relation of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffy, $1.
Hygiene of the Brain. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.50.
Parturition Without Pain. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Aids to Family Government. By Bertha Meyer and Herbert Spencer, $1.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Headache. By M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Deep Breathing, as a Means of Promoting the Art of Song, etc. By Sophia M. A. Ciccolina, Ills. 50.
Marriage and Parentage. M. L. Holbrook, $1.
Medical Hints on the Singing Voice. By Lennox Browne, F. R. C. S., 30 cents.

FREETHOUGHT PAMPHLETS & TRACTS.

God in the State. By E. A. Stevens. Best and most concise argument for State Secularization ever written. Price, 10 cents; six for 50 cents.
Brains, Science, and Civilization. By Hon. A. Schell. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.
Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government. By Prof. W. S. Bell. A thought-compelling tract. Price, two for 5 cents.
God and Religion. By G. W. Thurston. Hard knocks at kingcraft and priestcraft. Price, 10 cents per dozen.
Roman Rule and Ruin. By Z. Shed. A condensed history of the Catholic church. Price, 10 cents; one dozen, 50 cents.
Nameless. By Voltairine de Cleyre. A touching poem. Ten cents per dozen.
Sabbath Imposture. By Harry Hoover. Price, 10 cents; a half-dozen for 50 cents.
The Glory of Infidelity. By Samuel P. Putnam. Price, 10 cents.
Two Creeds—The Catholic and the Cathartic. A travesty. Ten cents per dozen.
The Girard College Theft. From FREETHOUGHT. Ten cents per dozen.

PACIFIC CARRIAGE CO.

BUSINESS OFFICE, 48 EIGHTH STREET.
OLIVER HINCKLEY - SUPERINTENDENT
Central Stands, 200 and 207 Sutter St.
N W and S W Corners Kearny and Sutter Sts.
Telephone 1950.

MRS. DR. FRANCES T. OLMSTED

CURES
Catarrh, Throat, AND Lung DISEASES
By Medicated Inhalation and Compound Oxygen.
Positive cure for Cancer.
26t37 410 A Eddy st., S. F.

A HAND-BOOK OF FREETHOUGHT.

By W. S. BELL.

Containing in condensed and systematized form a vast amount of evidence against the superstitious doctrines of Christianity, selected from the writings of the most distinguished authors.
The work consists of 381 pages and an index. Bound handsomely in cloth. Price, $1.25. For sale by the Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

"BIBLE CONTRADICTIONS", 15 cents.

DIAMOND VALLEY NURSERY.

Located Eight Miles South of San Jacinto, Cal.
P. A. CLARK, PROPRIETOR.
A full stock of everything in the Nursery line on hand.

APPLES, PEACHES,
PEARS, PLUMS,
APRICOTS, NECTARINES,
PRUNES, ALMONDS,
WALNUTS, QUINCES, ETC.

IN ALL VARIETIES.

A fine lot of Kelsey's Japan Plums, one and two years old.
Send for price list and buy where you can get trees at living rates.
P. A. CLARK, San Jacinto, Cal.

W. M. HINTON & CO.

PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS.
536 CLAY STREET,

Below Montgomery. San Francisco

Ireland and the Pope.

A History of Papal Intrigues Against LIBERTY,
By JUDGE J. G. MAGUIRE.

Condemned by the Catholic hierarchy. Price 50 cents. Address this office.

"SHORTHAND" is a pamphlet of information by the editor of BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC WEEKLY, that tells how to learn the art in the shortest time; sent free, by addressing D. L. Scott-Browne, 251 West Fourteenth street, New York.

CREED OF CHRISTENDOM

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.
By W. R. GREG.
Complete in one volume, 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.
Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard St., San Francisco Cal

PLAIN HOME TALK

—BY—
EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

WIFE WANTED, Unincumbered, not over 40, healthy, fond of music (pianist), sympathetic, and anti-religious, for lone widower of 60, with means. To insure answers address AMERICAN, Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal., giving full description of self.

J. A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

Price, 50 c. Address Freethought,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, 10 Cents.
Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Private Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excesses. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT. "Similar advertisements from unrollible practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address,

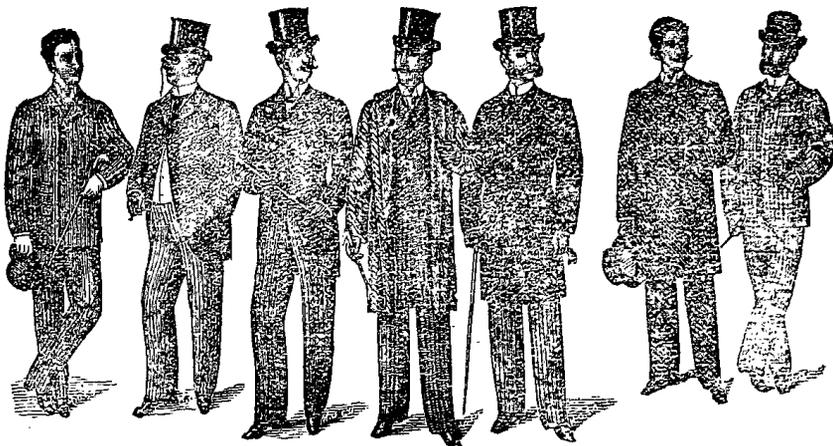

Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

VINELAND, N. J.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR..... $25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR..... 35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR..... 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.
TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

—BY—

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."

339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1.
Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year.....$1.50
Six Months......75
Three Months......50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth $1 50.

NATHANIEL VAUGHN

A Splendid Radical Novel.
BY FREDERIKA MACDONALD.

404 pages. Price reduced to $1. The Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BRAIN AND THE BIBLE.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

BY EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

We can recommend this as one of the most valuable works in the list of Freethought publications. Printed in large type on fine paper and elegantly bound. Price $1. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

I have kept a Scrap Book for a good many years of letters received from patients; some are long, too long to publish, some are short, short and good. Rainy days I sit down and read them, and have learned a good deal about the human body from some poor, sickly woman or overstrained man. Here is one of them. I call it a good letter:

TRENTON, TEXAS, Sept. 28, 1886.

"To Kennedy of the Medical Discovery, Roxbury, Mass. I am so proud of my recovery as to express my feelings in thanks to you. The RHEUMATISM has made me four legged for six years. At last I have traded off two of them to Bell—Druggist—for four bottles Kennedy's Discovery. I am yours, gratefully and unsolicited,
J. B. IVY."

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Apothecary.

Geo. H. Fowler, drugs, medicines, chemicals, toilet articles, etc. 13th ave and East 14th street, East Oakland, Cal.

Boot and Shoemaker.

C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N. E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

S. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Nurseryman.

R. H. Foster, Babylon, N. Y.

Physicians and Surgeons.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Real Estate.

Geo. H. Gale, Port Angeles, Wash.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st.

Rapp & Debarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glandeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny s

ORIGINAL

BROWNSVILLE

WOOLEN MILLS

CLOTHING STORE.

164 and 166 Second Street,

Near corner of Morrison,

The Best Goods in the Country

PORTLAND, OR. W. R. BISHOP, AGT.

Call, or send orders and measure.

EPH GOT THE CHICKENS.

He Won the Colonel's Bet and Supplied Himself Simultaneously.

"You northern folks don't begin to know the southern nigger as he is," observed the colonel as he lighted a fresh cigar and leaned back in his chair.

"No?"

"They are not vicious, but they are without moral obligation. Confound him, he's a thief from head to heel; I never saw an honest nigger yet."

"That's very sweeping, colonel."

"But it's truth. I'll defy you to find me an honest nigger in all Georgia."

"I should say that gray haired darky over on the cotton bales could be trusted to watch a gold mine."

"You would, eh? Heah, boy, come heah!"

"What's wanted, Kurnel Peabody?" asked the old man as he came over with his hat in his hand.

"Say, Eph, I want you to do me a little favor this evening."

"Sartin."

"I'll pay you for doing it."

"Bress you soul, sah."

"I want you to steal me a couple of young chickens and bring 'em to the store at 7 o'clock."

"Steal 'em fur suah?"

"Yes; I'll give you a dollar."

"All right, Mars Peabody, I'll have 'em dare by seben o'clock if I'm alive."

"What do you think of the nigger now?" asked the colonel as the old man moved away.

"I'm astonished."

"Well, you be on hand at 7 o'clock to see the chickens. He'll have 'em here."

So he did. He came to the back door of the store with a couple of pullets in a bag, and as he handed them over he said:

"Ize got 'em fur you, kurnel, an' dey is as fat as butter. Don't reckon you'll neber say nuffin' 'bout it, eh?"

"Not a word, Eph. Here's your dollar."

I had no argument to make that evening. There were the nigger, the chickens and the dollar. What could I say? Next morning I went down to the colonel's office, and I had scarcely stepped inside when he called out:

"What do you think of the nigger now?"

"Anything new happened?"

"I should say so! Where do you think old Eph stole those chickens?"

"I have no idea."

"But I have. The infernal rascal stole 'em from my own coop, and three or four more with 'em!"—New York Sun.

Meant What He Said.

Jack Harduppe—So you won't lend me any money! Don't you remember that when we graduated from college you promised to share your last cent with me if I needed it?

Tom Inluck—Yes, and I'll stick to my word.

"Then why don't you let me have ten dollars?"

"Because I am not reduced to my last cent yet. Wait until then."—Munsev's

TRAVELING ALONE

A WOMAN'S JOURNEY

AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

(Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Finely Bound in Cloth. Price, 75 Cents.

Press Notices.

They are pleasing stories of travel.—Toledo Bee
A book to hold the interest of all.—Boston Times, Feb. 23, 1890.

A remarkably entertaining record.—Buffalo Express, Feb. 16, 1890.

A remarkably original and piquant narrative.—Cincinnati Times Star.

It is a very clever, readable book.—New York Journal of Commerce, Feb. 7, 1890.

A bright, unconventional narrative of unusual interest.—Washington Republic, March 8, 1890.

It is an entertaining record of a remarkable case of "globe trotting."—Cleveland Plain Dealer, Feb. 26, '90.

She had eyes for everything of interest, and tells her story in a "chipper" style.—Norwich, Conn., Bulletin, Feb. 11, 1890.

The young traveler's comments upon men and cities and works of art are decidedly entertaining.—New York Tribune, Feb. 14, 1890.

The notes of her journey are presented in a style that is very acceptable, and form interesting reading.—San Francisco Call, Feb. 16, 1890.

The letters are full of humor and witticisms, and written with all the freedom and informality of style permissible and enjoyable in private letters.—Boston Herald, Feb. 23, '90.

She is evidently a born writer, having a light, chatty style, although her observations are very shrewd.—St. Louis Republic, March 11, 1890.

It is as readable as the observations and thoughts of such resolute persons, especially if they are women, are wont to be.—Brooklyn Daily Eagle, Feb. 16, 1890.

The story is brightly and tersely written, and is given with conversational ease and minuteness of detail.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, Feb. 22, 1890.

The author's style is gay, and her airy contempt for tradition in art, religion, and social life is one of her most prominent characteristics.—Newark, N. J., Advertiser, Feb. 15, 1890.

There is a way to make a record of travels popularly entertaining, and this way has been followed by the author of "A Woman's Journey Around the World Alone."—New York Sun, Feb. 15, 1890.

The story of her wanderings is very pleasantly told. It is charmingly truthful in manner and free from exaggeration. In England three volumes and cloth binding, with a second edition in library style, would certainly be awarded it.—Boston Herald, Feb. 10, 1890.

Her descriptions are entertaining, while they sparkle with unique phrases and quaint ideas. The story of her travels is told in that chatty manner peculiar to women, which is particularly pleasing from the tongue or pen of a charmingly pretty woman, such as Miss Leland's portrait shows her to be.—Newark Evening News, March 28, '90.

Freethought.

A LIBERAL JOURNAL.

Vol. III—No. 52.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1890.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Entered at the Postoffice at San Francisco, Cal., as Second-class Mail Matter Jan., 188

FREETHOUGHT.

GEO. E. MACDONALD, | EDITORS. | SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT TWO DOLLARS PER. YL. &

Address all communications, and make all Drafts, Checks, and Money Orders payable to The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard Street, San Francisco, Cal. FREETHOUGHT will be supplied to the trade by the San Francisco News Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, - - - DECEMBER 27, 1890

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Norse is a quiet settlement. There is no village; only the store, the post-office, and the school house. The school house is a new and pretty building. I gave two lectures in it—one in the school room Tuesday evening and one in the hall above on Wednesday evening. The hall was not fully completed, and we had to provide seats, put in a stove, etc. Our orthodox friends thought that one Infidel lecture in the school room was all that it could stand, and desiring not to press matters we occupied the hall, which was built over the school room for any public purpose whatsoever. However, as fortune willed it, I gave the first discourse both in the school room and the hall, and therefore had the pleasure of saying that I was dedicating the whole structure to Freethought, top and bottom. Our orthodox friends were astounded at this declaration, for it dawned upon their minds that I had come all the way from San Francisco to Norse to dedicate that building. There was a flutter of excitement, and gathering groups in the "gloaming." I do not know yet whether they have pierced the profundity of that joke. It seemed to be entirely beyond their comprehension, and I rather guess they will go down to their graves with the idea that I did really dedicate that building to Freethought, and that it is "cursed" beyond recovery. It will be haunted hereafter with the awful presence of Infidelity. Even the preacher will tremble in his boots when he undertakes to pray in that building. He will feel that the devil is tugging at his coat-tails. Our orthodox friends of Norse will mournfully sing,

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these, It mightn't have been."

Well, it is a cheering experience once in a while, in this pioneer work, to get the start of "this majestic world" of orthodoxy and capture a school house and "immerse" it in Freethought.

If all the Liberals would speak out, I think Norse would be about equally divided—there would be as many Freethinkers as Christians. The Christians mostly belong to the Lutheran church, as this is a Norwegian settlement. The Colwicks and the Olsons are outspoken and are among the leading citizens of this place. I had the pleasure of staying at the home of O. Olson, where the big fireside blazes. Mr. Olson has been for many years a staunch supporter of Freethought, in the very citadel of the church itself. Dr. O. M. Olson, his son, is also equally courageous in expressing his convictions. There are four brothers of the Colwicks, and they are a host in themselves. H. W. Ericson is also a fearless ally. The campaign at Norse was favorable. I enjoyed the Liberal spirit of the place, and the cheer of its generous people.

On Wednesday morning, in the bright sunlight, Theo. Colwick and myself take our way across the mountains to Walnut. It took some little time for me to comprehend what was meant by a mountain in this section. What I would call a bluff in California is called a mountain here, although it may not be more than a hundred feet above the valley. The slightest elevation is called a mountain. Before you know it you are on the top of a mountain. The views are extensive, however, from these little elevations. Beautiful valleys appear, pasture lands, fields of corn and cotton, and the green alfalfa. There are wandering herds in every direction. Texas is a comfortable country. The people don't have to work hard. They make a fair living on about six and eight hours a day, where in the East they have to work twelve and fourteen hours. Those who come here like to stay. They very seldom emigrate.

I think the word "rocky" must have originated in Texas, for its roads are the rockiest I ever went over. I never did realize what the term "rocky" meant until I came to Texas and traveled "across country." The rocks are numerous and overwhelming in spots. Fortunately most of these spots are on the "mountains," and as the mountains are not very big, and wide valleys intervene, travel is not very arduous.

Walnut Springs dawns upon the sight as pretty as a picture. The round-house, the college, and the homes of about a thousand people are seen at a glance from the mountain's brow.

Our Liberal friends were not expecting me at this hour. They were looking for me on the next train, and we had to hunt them up. But it did not take long to strike hands. F. H. Dehn is foreman of the railroad shops, and when we met him there was a cordial welcome, not only to Walnut itself but to his own fireside, and here, with his family, Mrs. Dehn and the children, we passed a delightful time. Mr. Dehn is a man of great energy, a skillful mechanic, a public-spirited citizen, and a Freethinker by nature's own heritage. In the afternoon R. H. Kimbrough comes in from his ranch, ten miles away. For many a year he has been in this country, an outspoken Liberal while orthodoxy was rampant and it was not always safe to resist its command.

There is no hall for a lecture in Walnut Springs at present and Mr. Aubrey granted us the use of his machinery room, which makes a very good hall. We have to provide lumber seats, and candles for lights. It was well filled both evenings that I lectured, although the last evening was quite threatening and it looked as if a "norther" was on hand. There is a fine-Liberal element in Walnut Springs. The college is unsectarian. There have been some revivals here, but those who get revived don't stay so long. They discuss theology vigorously for about a fortnight, and then resume the even tenor of their way.

My friend Wm. Grieve gave me a drive over the country on Thursday, and from the gentle declivities surrounding the town there are fair prospects, in the midst of which the village shines. It is generally called Walnut Springs, for near by are clear springs which furnish excellent water. Around the springs a pavilion has been built, and there are trees, and the streams which have been dammed up make good fishing ponds. The people are wont to gather here for picnics, public celebrations, etc. Walnut Springs is one of the handsomest places in Texas, and has a bright future before it.

Kimbrough took me out to S. H. Moore's where I had the pleasure of meeting his mother, a Liberal in the sunshine of old age. All the Moores are Liberal, I believe.

L. P. Merrill furnished lumber for the hall, which we call Aubrey's hall. I rather hope the Liberals will take hold of this and make a hall of their own. It would be a very convenient place.

Among our other friends at Walnut Springs are George Schubert, J. M. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. M. Harish, Jesse Thomas, Ed. Bartley, P. M. Farrell, Col. J. B. Barry, Wm. Cureton, Kos Barry, John Taylor—of Glen Rose—Doc Walling, etc. I feel that our cause is advancing, and I bid good-bye to comrades hoping that I shall see them again. I am sure they will keep the colors flying.

On Friday, in the somewhat darkening day, with white flakes in the air, my stalwart campaigner, Theo. Colwick, and myself take our way to Clifton, where I am to lecture in the evening. We pass through Meridian, the county-seat. There is a Freethought element here, but not sufficient to guarantee a lecture. We take dinner, and make some acquaintance, and another time the work will be extended to this point.

Leaving Meridian about the middle of the afternoon, there is quite a flutter of snow and it looks as if we were to have a stormy night. But fortune is on our side at length. In the west the clouds brighten up and the glowing sunset flings a cheering ray over the scene. The Liberals of Clifton are quite active. They rig up a hall, put in a stove, seats, etc. The room is well filled, and the only drawback is that I couldn't stop and give two or three more lectures, for the interest is gaining and the Liberals are in earnest now. After the lecture there was a business meeting to take steps for county organization. A committee was appointed to confer with committees from Norse, Meridian, Morgan, and Walnut Springs and call a meeting. I think county organization to co-operate with the State Association is what is needed in Texas. Much more effective work could be done; for the counties could thus work together in arranging for a series of lectures, which could not be done if the towns acted separately. In the place of three or four lectures, a dozen lectures could be given. More money could be raised and a greater number interested, and the work of the State Association be much more effective. The Liberals of Bosque county will make a splendid showing if they thus combine, and I am sure that the movement started in Clifton will not fail of its object.

The Liberals at this point are not afraid to work, and are ready for storm or sunshine. T. A. DeHart generously gave the use of his building, G. J. Gibbs introduced me, Thos. M. Pool was chairman of the business meeting, and W. P. Burch secretary.

O. E. Schow and Albert Kistner are splendid workers, and it was through their efforts, mainly, that the lecture was given. C. O. Nelson and others join the ranks. The outlook is quite favorable.

Saturday morning I say good-bye to these genial and earnest supporters. Theo. Colwick has been with me almost a week in this Bosque county campaign. We have climbed the mountains together, and rode through the valleys, and bunked together, and gathered around the festive board, and it has been a bright and varied journey, and we hope to join forces again.

By way of Morgan and Walnut Springs I come to Alexander, and here take the hack for Stephanville. The day is beautiful, the roads are in fine condition, the horses are sprightly, our good darkey driver is happy and talkative, and it takes only an hour and a half to reach the county-seat of Erath county. It is a bustling place of about 1,200 people. The square about the court-house is crowded with teams and horses from the neighboring country. It looks like a Fair day.

The court is in session and I cannot lecture in the court-house Saturday evening. This somewhat disarranges our plans, but another hall is procured and we make a start with a pretty good number present. I lecture Sunday afternoon and evening in the court-house. In the evening nearly every seat is occupied, and I find that Stephanville has quite a progressive Liberal element.

E. J. Hewlett arranged for the lectures at this place, and he is not afraid to have his opinions known, and to work for them. Judge W. H. Devine, J. T. McMorris, of the veterans; W. A. Dawson, J. B. Barnes, J. B. Walker, G. E. Toliver, J. H. Gage, etc., are among those that can be depended upon for the work here. I was pleased to meet with Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Bush, of Granbury, who came to Stephanville on purpose to hear the lecture. These are on the Freethought roll, and also S. O. Berry.

I have thus had quite a week's work, lecturing every night and twice on Sunday, traveling by team and railroad, and meeting many friends and seeing a good deal of the country. I must say that I like Texas and the people. They are progressing. Villages and cities are springing up and advancing with wonderful rapidity. Railroads are putting their iron arms in every direction. Lands are cheap, from $2 to $14 an acre. The average production of cotton is about half a bale an acre, which is worth, at present, $20. Some lands produce a bale an acre; and a bale has been sold as high as $300 in extraordinary seasons. Cotton has been 60 cents a pound. It is now worth from 8 to 10 cents a pound. Corn is abundant, and in Erath county forty bushels of wheat to the acre have been raised. The farms in Texas are not mortgaged. After a three years' drouth the people come up smiling and out of debt.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

DEFECTIVE PSYCHICAL RESEARCH.

Prof. William James, of Harvard, has reported to the Boston Society for Psychical Research a case that belongs to the Sunday-school more than to an organization of men calling themselves scientific. It is that of a man who was struck senseless for blasphemy. Professor James does not tell the man's name; only that he was a carpenter residing near Pawtucket, R. I., in the year 1857. He was an Atheist, but one day, while walking in the open country, he heard the voice of God, as he supposed, directing him to go to the Christian chapel. The man was on unfriendly terms with the Christian minister, so, instead of obeying the command, he said: "Before I go to that place I hope God will strike me deaf, dumb, and blind." An Atheist hoping a God whose existence he denied would strike him dead must impress the researcher as a difficult point to explain; but nevertheless he fell to the earth, says the account, "enveloped in darkness and silence, and without the power of speech." On his restoration to consciousness, he embraced religion, forsook his trade, and became a preacher of the gospel, widely known throughout New York state and Western New England, bringing many souls to repentance, and so on.

To the truth of this narrative, we have the testimony of the nameless carpenter and preacher, and nothing more. The yarn of itself is unreasonable and improbable, and has not even the merit of originality, being a copy of the story of Saul of Tarsus. It is related of this carpenter that later he sustained an attack of mental aberration, left his home, went to Norristown, and, under the name of Brown, kept a candy store for six weeks, at the end of which time he suddenly became a carpenter again, with no recollection of his experience as Brown. Now Professor James has hypnotized the carpenter, and when under the mesmeric influence he becomes Brown again, and recalls his experience at Norristown. He is described as a "matter-of-fact, hard-headed Yankee."

The two experiences, that of being rendered unconscious by the power of God, and that of suffering mental aberration, are both given by Professor James with equal solemnity. What the carpenter did while wandering in his mind the mesmerist's influence is capable of drawing from him; but it would be a still more interesting experiment if the subject could be again hypnotized and made to reveal what happened to him while deaf, dumb, and blind. He must assuredly have heard or seen something during that period that he could remember, or he would have been the same Atheist when restored that he was when the power overtook him.

BRUTAL POLICE AND UNJUST COURTS.

W. S. Bell, in his lecture before the Freethought Society last Sunday evening, made some statements with regard to our police and courts which were considered too severe to be accurate by one or two critics; but a case has just come to light in San Francisco that would have justified Mr. Bell in saying much more than he did. The facts are as follows: William Noble, aged twenty-five years, a relative of our friend Noble of Stockton street, is a plumber and conducts the business of plumbing in Oakland. He had recently purchased four brass faucets ordered by a customer, but which for some reason were not used, and Mr. Noble brought them to San Francisco for the purpose of disposing of them. While carrying these faucets through the streets Mr. Noble was stopped by a policeman named McGreavy, who accused him of having stolen the property, called him a liar and a thief when he denied the charge, and then arrested and lodged him in the city prison, where he was booked for petty larceny. The young man's father hastened to appear with bail, which was placed a $150, but it was twelve hours before the prisoner could be released.

Subsequently the arresting officer withdrew the charge, and the case was dismissed, against the wishes of the prisoner, who desired that the issue should come to trial and that he might be given an honorable acquittal. He had been arrested and published as a petty larcenist, and he believed that the least the court could do would be to vindicate him before the public. This, however, the judge, whose name is Joachimsen, refused to do. From the firm where he had bought the faucets Noble brought a receipt showing beyond question that the property was his and that it was paid for. The court would not consider the case at all, and the court officers even threatened the elder Noble with arrest if he made further protest.

It seems that outrage could hardly go further. An honest man is assaulted by one of the pope's Irish, charged with theft for having his own property in his possession; hauled through the streets; booked, locked up, and published as a thief; himself put to the expense of employing counsel, and his father to the trouble of furnishing bail; kept in prison twelve hours, and then thrown out upon the street without restitution, vindication, or even an apology. He did not have so much as the negative satisfaction of knowing that the brute who arrested him had received a reprimand.

Probably Mr. Noble will bring a suit against the city for false imprisonment, as the municipality, like other employers, is liable for offenses committed by its employees. His chance of recovering anything, however, is weakened by the fact that the police and the courts imagine that they, instead of the people, constitute the municipality, and that they are responsible to no one but themselves and the politicians.

THE MESSIAH CRAZE IN SAN FRANCISCO.

While a great deal of attention is being paid to the messiah craze among the Sioux Indians, the Piutes, the Mexicans, and the colored people of several localities, the craze that exists close at home appears to have escaped the notice of the chroniclers of contemporary events. Nevertheless the delusion is among us, and is nowhere stronger than in San Francisco.

The root of this folly, according to those who believe in it, was planted several thousand years ago. At that time a character called Jehovah, so the disciples of the craze tell us, created the earth upon which we live, out of his omnipotence. Of the same material he made a pair of perfect human beings plentifully endowed with ignorance, which they were forbidden to replace with knowledge. This first pair, being perfect, were disobedient, and acquired information in a surreptitious way, whereupon their creator cursed them and their descendants forever. But the creator, being unchangeable, shortly changed his mind, and here is where the messiah craze began; for, so the delusion has it, he took it upon himself to beget, out of wedlock, an only son, whom he delivered over to the descendants of the disobedient first pair, to be offered up by them as a sacrifice to himself. The offense committed by the human race in the act of acquiring knowledge was one which the creator could in no wise forgive; but he promised them a show for their lives provided they would, in the goodness of their hearts, put his only begotten son to death in the most ignominious manner then in vogue. The race accepted the proposition, and the son, the messiah, who is called Christ, was crucified; whereupon the creator was so pleased that he offered free grace and pardon to all who should profess a belief in the beneficence of the sacrifice and admit that the murder was necessary to their redemption from sins which they had never committed. As a consequence many believed. But it appeared later that the creator had, after all, been merely playing a trick upon the race. His son, though crucified, did not die. He was not a human being in fact, but the creator himself disguised as a man, and when he had gone through the formality of being crucified and buried, he arose from the grave between two days, startled his acquaintances by appearing among them as a ghost, and then went back to his previous abode, threw off his disguise, and still lives to witness the damnation of the world he died to save. He is like the conjurer's assistant who is apparently carved to pieces inside a basket, but who appears in the audience while a committee, chosen by the spectators, are removing the basket in order to view his remains.

Belief in this messiah is the craze now prevalent in San Francisco. In spite of his death, the deluded ones hold that he still lives. They have built vast structures in his name, wherein week after week they partake of his body and his blood; and though a thousand times devoured and digested, he remains so far unconsumed that he is expected to revisit the earth and to take as his disciples all those who have eaten him.

Many of those afflicted with the craze regard it as unlawful to be reasonable on the subject, and they would visit with dire penalties all who differ with them in point of sanity. Being deluded themselves, they insist that no one else may rightly be otherwise. A most dangerous phase of the matter is that they desire to crown their messiah as the king of nations in advance of his reappearance, and force every knee to bow before his throne. For this purpose they have organized strongly and seek by legal enactments to suppress all objectors. They have dedicated a day to him, on which they demand that all worldly affairs shall be neglected. They build him temples which the world's people must protect without charge. They engage men to preach about him, and these must be accorded privileges that other men may not enjoy. In fact, wherever a victim of this craze is found, will be found a man or woman who thinks himself or herself superior to the unaffected classes, and in possession of virtues that can be acquired only through belief in the messiah.

The epidemic among the untutored savages and negroes is of little importance, but the delusion that afflicts so large a portion of the people of this city is widespread and powerful for evil. It is filling the world with bigots, impostors, fanatics, and a mischievous superstition against which the march of progress and enlightenment is slow and painful.

THE CALIFORNIA STATE CONVENTION.

The California State Liberal Union will hold its annual Convention at San Francisco, on Thursday, January 29, 1891, beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning with a business meeting and an opening address by Samuel P. Putnam, president, on "The Dangers Ahead." Particular attention will be paid to the Sabbath legislation now threatened in this state and in Congress. In the afternoon and evening addresses will be made by the best speakers, and the Convention will close with a musical and sociable festival in honor of Thomas Paine's birthday.

Liberals from all parts of the state are invited and expected to be present at this reunion; and the co-operation of those of other states is desired.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, President.

EMIL S. LEMME, Secretary.

MATERIALISM QUESTIONED.

Our attention has been directed to an article in a Chicago religio-philosophical journal, in which Materialists are called upon to explain how matter could pass from an unconscious to a conscious condition. Following is the portion of the article marked for examination:

"One kind of molecular motion can be replaced by another kind of molecular motion, when the motion known as heat is replaced by the motion known as electricity; but how can these changes in the motions of material particles generate a new quality, namely, awareness that these changes are taking place?

"What has Materialism to say as to the passage from molecular physics to consciousness? Is there any such passage conceivable? Is such passage provable? Is such passage possible?"

"If material motion is not convertible into mental action, Materialism as a philosophy has no valid basis. If such conversion is a fact of science or is susceptible of any kind of proof, or is conceivable even as a hypothesis, why do not Materialists attempt to show this either by a priori or by a posteriori reasoning? The fact is, the leading doctrine of Materialism is a mere dogma, as much so as that of the trinity or the incarnation. It is no more provable, no more conceivable, than the doctrine of the creation of something out of nothing."

The writer then proceeds to say that if consciousness cannot be produced by the motions of atoms, then it must have some basis deeper than atomic or molecular motion, and inquires, "What is the basis?" Concluding, we have this:

"Independently of any special manifestations of spirit existence, it is evident that matter is but a manifestation, under the limitations of the organs of sense, of a deeper reality which is clearly identifiable with mind. Spiritualism is therefore justified, apart from merely special manifestations, on strictly scientific and philosophical grounds. Materialism, as a philosophy, is obsolete among thinkers."

The Materialist tells us that consciousness is the phenomenal activity of certain parts or tissues of the brain. This consciousness, according to the theories of some, is latent in all matter; while according to the theories of others, it is the result of atomic union taking place under certain conditions and circumstances. We do not see why the theory that it is latent in matter should not be satisfactory for ordinary working uses to both Spiritualists and Materialists. For if that motion is the true one there would not be any passage from molecular physics to consciousness to account for. It is true that such passage is not conceivable; neither is the passage from consciousness back to unconsciousness conceivable: it is the mystery we call death; yet the passage both ways appears to be made while we wait. For the purposes of this world it is sufficient to know of things as they are. We would not really be any better off if we could prove either by a priori or a posteriori reasoning, whether life is latent or resultant. There are unclosable gaps all along from dirt to thought. There is a gap between the inorganic soil and the organic plant; between the unconscious plant and the conscious brute; between the conscious brute and the reflective human being—just as wide a gap between these last two as there is between motion and "awareness" that motion is taking place. The fact that the soil produces the plant cannot be proved a priori or a posteriori, yet agriculture is not thereby robbed of a "valid basis." Observation, in many cases, is more conclusive than philosophizing.

The writer quoted becomes vague when he says that "independently of any special manifestations of spirit existence, it is evident that matter is but a manifestation of a deeper reality identifiable with mind," but the apparent meaning is that our minds, or some mind, can exist apart from our bodies, and are not the result of our physical organizations. On philosophical grounds such a theory might be maintained, because philosophy, like religion, is often independent of facts; but, with special spirit manifestations excluded, where are the strictly scientific grounds on which it is based?

Materialism, as a philosophy, may be obsolete among thinkers. We are not aware that ordinary Materialists regard Materialism as a philosophy at all, nor as a religion: a "theory" is about as attenuated a name as circumstances will justify. The probability is that Materialism will always remain a theory, as we are drifting every day farther and farther from the date when facts to prove its truth were obtainable; and Spiritualism will doubtless remain a philosophy, for the reason that the facts which would raise it to the dignity of a science are not accessible in this life.

THE FREETHOUGHT SOCIETY.

The meeting of the San Francisco Freethought Society at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, Sunday evening, Dec. 21, will be addressed by MR. C. F. BURGMAN; subject, "Our Common Aim." Admission is free and all are invited.

A CLERGYMAN at Phoenix, Arizona, on the Sunday following S. P. Putnam's lecture at that place, used the following language in his sermon:

"I did not attend the lecture, but I read the report of it in this newspaper here, and I wish to say right here that I do not wish to offend any one, but a paper that will print reports of such lectures should not be taken into your houses."

Mr. Edwin S. Gill, editor of the "Arizona Republican," gives the clergyman a very severe castigation for his exhibition of bigotry, and wants to know if he has so little confidence in his own preaching that he is afraid his parishioners will accept the arguments of the Freethinker, instead of the gospel as he delivers it to them. "It is a sad commentary on one claimed to be ordained of Christ to preach his gospel unto all the world," says Editor Gill, "to virtually say that he is so weak and he considers his hearers so weak in the faith that they cannot 'by sound doctrine both exhort and convince the gainsayers.'"

If the Society for the Suppression of Vice expect to do anything in San Francisco they must get an agent in whom the public and courts have more confidence than they have in C. R. Bennett. This man Bennett lately caused the arrest of a photographer for taking pictures of women; but when the case was brought to trial Prosecuting Attorney Mott, in Department 2 of the police court, declined to conduct it for the people on behalf of Bennett, whom he would not believe under oath. H. A. Egbert, a newspaper man called as a witness in the same matter, shared Attorney Mott's opinion. Another prosecuting attorney was called to take the place of Mr. Mott, and he declared that he would not attempt the defense of Bennett's character, as he knew nothing in its favor. The case was tried and the jury disagreed.

THE sight of a clergyman appearing in court and attempting to secure the release of a criminal by exercising undue influence over a judge would not be an edifying one if the criminal were guilty of injuring anybody; but Rabbi Vivader, of San Francisco, who asked Judge Rix to dismiss the case against Moris Tobin, found with a lottery ticket in his possession, has our sympathy and admiration. Any person who wishes to have, to hold, and to keep a lottery ticket in his possession ought to be allowed that privilege without let or hindrance. Yet such is the wisdom of our courts, that the offense is punished with about twenty-five times the penalty inflicted for carrying deadly weapons concealed about the person.

A CORRESPONDENT of an eastern paper calls attention to this strange state of affairs: "One of the most curious facts so far developed by the returns from South Dakota is that a larger proportion of votes were cast for Indian suffrage than for woman suffrage. The votes, so far as received, show that of 100 men voting on woman suffrage, 37 voted for, and 63 against the women; while of 100 men voting on Indian suffrage, 45 voted for, and 55 against the Indians. And now, within a month, these very voters are appealing to the United States government for troops to defend them from these very Indians, crazed by fanaticism, who are spending their nights in whetting their tomahawks and in naked ghost-dances on the prairie, and their days in plotting devastation and massacre against their terrified white neighbors."

If the police are organized to protect citizens, why do they not protect the members of the Salvation Army from the assaults of hoodlums? A few evenings ago a band of these religionists at the Mission were made targets for mud and stones thrown by young toughs in the neighborhood of Capp and Sixteenth streets. The police made no attempt to stop the outrageous conduct or to arrest the offenders, and the Army has appealed from the "guardians of the peace" to an enlightened public sentiment, which assuredly ought to respond.

THE Rev. Mr. Yates, of Bonham, Texas, will doubtless have less faith hereafter in the literal validity of scriptural promises than he had a few weeks ago. He read in Mark xiv, 18, that if a believer drank any deadly thing it should not hurt him, and to prove that the Bible meant what it said, and that he was a true believer, he took ten grains of strychnine. A physician, assisted by a stomach pump, saved his life, but he is now willing to concede that the last part of the gospel of Mark is a wicked and fraudulent interpolation, whose author he would be pleased to interview.

WE received too late for publication last week a communication from C. B. Reynolds, of Seattle, which we trust has by this time become outdated. Mr. Reynolds informed us that Mr. George M. Boman, treasurer of the Washington Secular Union, was dangerously sick, and that his recovery was a matter for grave doubt. Mr. Reynolds has been a devoted attendant of Mr. Boman during his illness, and states that his seeming neglect of correspondents is due to that cause. May the next report from the sick man's bedside be more encouraging.

AT Omaha, the other day, a young man named Warbington saw some young ladies looking at a celebrated eighteen-thousand-dollar painting by Bougereau, and believing that their innocence would be corrupted thereby, he struck the offensive painting with a chair, ruining it. He explained that he thought Christ would have done the same if Bougereau had made pictures in his day. He is under arrest and will probably get severely punished for his imitation of Christ.

JUDGE BALDERSON, of Wichita, Kan., has discovered a new method of torturing jurors into agreement. One morning last week, at 3 o'clock, after a jury had been out fifty-two hours, the judge took the Rev. N. E. Harmon into the jury room, where the clergyman, after singing a hymn, delivered an hour's discourse upon the immortality of the soul. The jury at once polled a vote on the case and returned a verdict of guilty. The defense will appeal.

THE "determined effort" to be made to stop the sale of a certain class of novels called "erotic" bodes no good to the liberty of printing. Wanamaker, Anthony Comstock, the White Cross Society of New York, and a lot of clergymen are behind the effort. These gentlemen seem to think that people don't know what they ought to read, and that it is the duty of the government to instruct them.

News from Santa Barbara under recent date: "There was an animated election to-day to decide whether or not the saloons of this city should be closed Sundays and at 12 o'clock at night on every other day. The result was 465 majority for closing. There was quite an exciting time when one of the saloon-keepers knocked down and punched one of the ministers."

WHEN the banking firm of S. A. Kean & Co., at Chicago, took Mrs. E. M. Culyer in as a partner, the articles of agreement contained the provision that "the business of the firm is to be conducted on strictly Christian principles and according to the teachings of the Bible." Kean & Co. have just failed for a large amount.

MESSRS. CLARK & SPENGLER, publishers of Helen Gardener's book, "A Thoughtless Yes," inform us that they are "entirely out" of the work. We are therefore unable to furnish it, and patrons who have ordered "A Thoughtless Yes" will please advise us what disposition to make of the sum forwarded.

THE Rev. Cephas C. Bateman, of Oregon, has been named by President Harrison for post chaplain. "We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in state legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money shall be discontinued."

CARDINAL Gibbons is receiving a good deal of undeserved credit for protesting against the persecutions of Jews in Russia. He is late with his objections. Freethinkers were condemning the oppression of the Jews years ago when Cardinal Gibbons's church was persecuting them.

THE Beethoven Choral Society sang the principal choruses from the oratorio of the Messiah at Metropolitan Hall last Sunday evening. As elsewhere remarked, the messiah craze has a strong hold on San Francisco.

S. P. PUTNAM has a new work under way, to be published early next season. It is a novel and will be entitled, "To Thine Own Self Be True."

OBSERVATIONS.

In his published notice of the Freethought Society's meeting last Sunday evening, Advertising Secretary Curtis announced that Professor Bell would speak on "Government," and that orthodox ministers of good moral character were invited to be present and criticise the lecture. The invitation did not seem to be accepted, for no orthodox ministers attended. There was, however, a hall full of listeners, who were soothed to a receptive state by a piano solo which they owed to Miss Lenont.

Professor Bell had just returned from a tempestuous voyage to Fort Bragg. His address, he said, would be read, and to make it like a sermon he would take a text. This was his text:

We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal, and are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.

The speaker proceeded to show that the foregoing is not a candid statement of fact. Its truths were not self-evident for the reason that they were not truths at all. Men are not created equal, for the reason, first, that they are not created, and second, they are unequal intellectually, physically, and socially. They are not endowed by their creator with inalienable rights, because they have no creator and no natural rights. If they were born with some rights, government has alienated them all. Governments do not derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, as governments have no just powers, and the governed have not consented. Otherwise, it might be remarked, the Declaration quoted was accurate.

Mr. Bell's object was to show that governments, as a rule, do not protect, but invade. Public officers are not servants of the people; on the contrary they are our masters and we are theirs obediently. They can send us to jail or to the cannon's mouth as they see fit. The speaker dealt at length with the Sunday law absurdity, and with the police outrages that we are expected to accept as protection from the government. In conclusion he said: "Government is something we think we need, but when man advances to the point of individualism where he is willing to take the responsibility of his own life, the need of government will fade away. That day is distant, but that should not excuse us from assuming our own personal responsibility."

When the floor was opened for discussion a gentleman wearing a Grand Army button arose to object. He had no fault to find with policemen; they had never clubbed him. As for Sunday laws, though he called himself as firm a Freethinker as anything, he thought Sunday laws a good thing and would have more of them. There ought to be two days in every week instead of one when work should be prohibited. The churches were all right. Had not Cardinal Gibbons just written a letter against Russian persecution of the Jews? When the speaker had filled ten minutes' time with this improving sort of criticism, the chair gave him a furlough.

Mr. Thomas Curtis referred to Cardinal Gibbons and the Jews. He doubted the cardinal's sincerity in objecting to persecution. Mr. Curtis could remember that when Rome was under papal rule no Jews were allowed upon the streets during certain hours under pain of personal violence, and no cardinal protested. By order of a cardinal, not many years ago, a priest who enlisted under Garibaldi was partially skinned alive and then shot to death; but when the same cardinal came to this country to present Gibbons with a picture of the winking virgin, the latter received him with honors.

Mr. Phillips defended government against the criticisms of the speaker of the evening. Admitting that it had some defects, he held that our government was a necessity, and not open to wholesale condemnation.

Mr. Bell, when invited to answer such objections as had been made, replied that the respectful attention his hearers had given his lecture convinced him that they understood it much better than the critics, and that therefore no answer was called for.

Next Sunday evening Mr. C. F. Burgman will open proceedings with a short address on "Our Common Aim." Everybody with a cause to plead is invited to be present and point out its object.

An arrest made in this city last week has raised the question whether or not vegetables in a state of nature are indecent. Daniel Sewell, a school director and a photographer, was taken into custody by C. R. Bennett, of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, for photographing a nude potato and exhibiting the "lewd, lascivious, and indecent" pictures thereof. A minister in Oakland, whose spine had collapsed at sight of this specimen of the nude in art, made the first complaint. The source of the potato is unknown, but if the agriculturist who dug it up and sold it could be identified he would at once be apprehended by Bennett. Furthermore, as Ambrose Bierce has pointed out, the creator who made the potato should likewise be arrested and his career of crime brought to a speedy close. I confess to having witnessed a copy of the photograph. There is no denying that the potato was undressed when it sat for its picture. It wore a certain form, which may have aroused this Oakland clergyman's envy, but it was otherwise plainly, unblushingly, and glaringly nude. It is perfectly clear to me that this country needs new legislation on the potato problem. If potatoes are allowed to grow in lewd, lascivious, and indecent form, and then come to the centers of population to be photographed in their skins, with the seed end exposed, what guarantee have we for the preservation of our institutions? None at all. Secretary Bennett must be sustained; nay more, he must be lifted; and may the elevating power necessary to that end be vested in a court officer's boot.

Col. H. L. Knight, one of the best men we had in the Freethought ranks of this city, state, and country, is dead. He died last Sunday at his home. All of Colonel Knight's friends who have met him upon the street or elsewhere since they last saw him upon the platform of the Freethought society, have been shocked by his changed appearance. Then he was hearty and robust, and above the average weight of men. Some insidious disease attacked his blood; his flesh fell away, and he became in a few months a pale yellow shadow of the soldierly figure he had formerly been. Only his bright wit, his clear thought, and his genial nature remained. Colonel Knight was a native of England, a pioneer of California, and a veteran of the Mexican war. He knew more law than most judges, and more theology than the majority of clergymen. The Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence were his law and gospel. He would not go back of the Fathers of the Republic and the Constitutional Convention for example or precept. He believed in the existence of a God, whom he hoped to meet on equal terms, but he declined to worship. The first overture must come from the other direction. He was a prolific writer, a fair poet, and made his living with his pen. In life he was temperate, modest, and gentle, and he often declared that though mental independence had kept him poor, he could not do differently were it given him to relive his whole career. There is no stain upon his integrity; he harbored no enmity against any man. He was a character never to be forgotten by those who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. His death is one of the inevitable misfortunes, softened only by the memory of his good and useful life. Even in his grave he will be thought of as he was seen among us, manly and soldierly, taking his rest with his martial cloak around him.

The publisher of the "Twentieth Century" sends the publisher of FREETHOUGHT copy for an advertisement which he desires to have inserted in this paper. The party of the first part stipulates that the advertisement is to be printed "some half a dozen" times, well displayed, and "in such position as will insure results." In return for which the party aforesaid will put this journal on its exchange list for another year.

The offer appears flattering at first, because the "Twentieth Century" is one of the most valuable papers printed, but after due consideration I find that the best interests of all concerned will not allow of its acceptance. The advertisement, well displayed, would occupy two inches of space at least, and could not be put in type for less than fifty cents. Its continued insertion for six weeks would be worth several dollars. It will therefore be seen that if I found the "Twentieth Century" absolutely indispensable to the publication of this paper it would be much cheaper for me to become a subscriber at the regular rates. The Twentieth Century Publishing Company returns thanks for the favor in advance, which recalls to my mind the anticipative Irishman who laughed so heartily that he rolled on the ground in contemplation of the fun he would have catching a bull by the horns and rubbing the animal's nose in the dust. After he had tried the experiment and been projected over the fence into a deep ditch, he collected himself and observed that it was lucky he had his laugh first. So I am glad to get the thanks now.

The amount of literature this journal could collect by giving away its advertising space would furnish a library; but it is found more judicious to sell the space to those who want it, and to obtain by other methods such literature as is desired.

The advertisement in question is much more attractive to the public than to the printer. It offers a six pound volume on the natural history of Mammalia, with five hundred illustrations, interesting alike to old and young, and worth $6; together with a picture in oil of Rosa Bonheur's great fifty thousand dollar painting, size 132x20 inches, worth $4; and also a year's subscription to the "Twentieth Century," the weekly magazine devoted to human rights and worth $2—total, $12—all for $380, delivered free of charge. Address the Twentieth Century Pub. Co., 4 Warren street, New York.

The "Twentieth Century" may, if it pleases Mr. Pentecost to do so, announce that FREETHOUGHT gives as a premium to new and old subscribers alike a copy of "A Woman's Journey Around the World," not purchasable otherwise for less than 75 cents. It contains a likeness of the author, inspiring to the young and rejuvenating to the old, and which is worth more to the esthetic of the race than all the "Lions at Home" ever painted by a woman in trousers. This offer gives the reader FREETHOUGHT for a whole year for the humiliatingly low price of one dollar and two bits.

Mrs. Gertie de Force-Cluff, of the Lodi "Valley Review," was among the callers at this office last week. She is a talented conversationalist, besides being a journalist, and adds to her gifts the merit of being an inventor. Few women can invent mechanical things, but Mrs. de Force-Cluff has produced a little device that promises to revolutionize the world's thought and materially advance civilization. It is a simple garment fastener, and takes the place of pins, strings, and shingle nails as substitutes for buttons. It is merely a piece of plated spring brass, with a slot in each end, into which a bight of cloth can be so inserted that it will never come out without design and malice aforethought. If your shirt sleeve is too long, clap one of those things on, and it is shortened and held. When it is desired to lengthen the sleeve again take the fastener off. If a female acquaintance loses a garter, draw the top of the stocking tightly around the limb, or allow her to do so, insert the slack in the garment fastener, and you have placed her under a debt of gratitude that no agent will ever be able to collect. It will loop dresses and lambrequins; festoon flags, secure the most frequently-changed garment of an infant so that it will not fall off, or hold the buttonless undershirt across your manly chest. It will grab a horseblanket or a curtain, and can be used with good effect as a clothespin. It will extend a helping hand anywhere, so I am told and believe, among the mysterious recesses of female apparel. It does not rust, break, or cut in the eye. It has all the virtues mentioned in the Ten Commandments, the Moral Code, and the Institutes of Menu. It can be addressed in care of Mrs. de Force-Cluff, Lodi, San Walkin county, California.

THE TEXAS SUNDAY LAW.

This item of news from the San Antonio, Tex., "Daily Express" of December 2, shows that the Liberals of that locality are active:

The committee appointed by the San Antonio Society to prepare a petition to the next legislature asking the repeal of all laws relating to the observance of Sunday as a legal requirement, held a meeting at Turner Hall last night and adopted the following document:

Realizing the pernicious evils that have blemished the history of the nations of the old world by the combining of church and state, and fully appreciating the sublime wisdom of the founders of the country in their unmistakable condemnation and inhibition of such an evil.

Therefore we, the undersigned, citizens of Texas, would most respectfully represent that nothing is more obvious than that all Sunday laws contained in our statute books are infringements upon our liberties and natural rights as defined by our fathers and clearly set forth in the Declaration of Independence and Constitution of the United States, and we most respectfully petition your honorable body to repeal all laws requiring the observance of Sunday as a religious institution, or tending to that end.

[Signed.]

CHAS. RUNGE, Chairman,
T. A. HARRISON,
T. A. KITTRIDGE,
CHAS. J. LANGHOLTZ,
A. CHAPMAN,
J. H. AYCOCK,
W. J. LOCKE,
Committee.

Several thousand copies of these documents will be printed and circulated for signatures throughout the state, to be returned to this society on or before February 1, 1891.

THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION,

R. B. WESTBROOK, PRESIDENT.
BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. Westbrook, President, 1707 Oxford st., Philadelphia
E. B. Foote, Jr., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York.
T. B. Wakeman, Vice-President, 93 Nassau st., New York.
T. Morris Parot, Vice-President, Philadelphia. Pa.
J. O. Bentley, Vice-President, Philadelphia. Pa.
Corresponding Secretary, Ida C. Craddock, S. E. corner of Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
Treasurer, F. C. Mende, 1814 Green st., Philadelphia Pa

THE "NINE DEMANDS," WHAT DO THEY IMPLY?

To the Editors of Freethought:

The rapid progress within the last few years of Secular principles on the continent makes it more than ever necessary that those engaged in the public advocacy of our views should have a clear and intelligent conception of the policy to be adopted in their work. The question requiring serious consideration now is, how far is an aggressive policy desirable? While not in any way disapproving of destructive efforts, the early exponents of Secularism did not make that their primary aim. Of course, every new truth taught must destroy the error which it seeks to supplant; but it is one thing to replace error with truth, and quite another to crush the error and leave the spot which it occupied a blank. Many persons think that the time has arrived when the conditions are more favorable for the existence of an organization more positive and more practical in its operations than was possible in the past.

In Canada the question of propagandist policy has been settled for the present by the acceptance of six Secular principles as the basis of and guide in our advocacy. In the United States, however, such a settlement appears not to have been reached. In connection with the American Secular Union there are two principal lines of policy advocated by its members. The one is that the work of the Union shall be confined to the effort of securing the entire separation of church and state, or in more explicit language, the Secularization of the state. The other policy suggested is, that, allied with the above effort, an aggressive warfare should be carried on against theology in general. Now, the question is, which of the two policies is the better? And further, is it not possible to blend the two so as to realize the advantage of each without having the drawbacks which are alleged to be associated with both? Frankly, I do not personally regard the two as being necessarily antagonistic, so far as the operations of the Union are concerned. The idea that they are so has doubtless arisen through a misconception as to their mutual relations.

The basis of the Union's operations is acknowledged to be the "Nine Demands." Let us, therefore, ascertain what these logically imply. Consistent adherence to the teaching of these "Demands" requires that it should be shown: (1) That the church has exceeded its legitimate function, made itself an unjust burden to the state, and an incubus upon the people. (2) That public education is fettered with theological teachings and marred in its nature through the false idea that the Bible is a necessity in our schools. (3) That Sunday is not a divine institution and that its observance should not be enforced by law. (4) That it is wrong for the public funds to be used for religious purposes. (5) That fast days and religious festivals should have no official sanction from the government. (6) That affirmation should be substituted for judicial oaths, and that a person's belief or disbelief should be no impediment to his or her liberty in the exercise of political and social rights.

Such, briefly, in my opinion, is what the "Nine Demands" fairly imply, and the work provided for those who undertake their promulgation. Now, I am forced to admit that I fail to see how such work can be properly and efficiently done without dealing in some way with the claims of theology. For instance, to justify the "Demands" from a reasonable standpoint, it must be demonstrated that the church is not a necessity to the state; that the Bible is not a suitable book to be taught in the public schools; that Sunday has no other than an ecclesiastical sanction; that morality is possible without theology; and that the obligation to do right is not confined to a supernatural religion.

Will it not be apparent even to the ordinary mind that to take the course here indicated makes a resort to the anti-theological policy a logical necessity?

But, then, it should be remembered that to condemn theological encroachments need not mean a reckless onslaught on the truth of religion in general, which is a question that the Union has nothing to do with. To expound the "Nine Demands" does not render it necessary to allege that all religion is false, or that Materialism is superior to Supernaturalism, and that Christian doctrines are absurd. It may or may not be so, but to decide whether or not it is, does not, at least in my opinion, come within the province of the exponent of the "Nine Demands." The common ground for the advocates of the Union to take is to protest against the church interfering in Secular matters and the enforcement of religious forms upon any member of the community. Mental liberty is our watchword and to demand that it should be faithfully carried out in all sections—religious and non-religious—of society is the duty of the Union.

Of course it is right to welcome the co-operation of "advanced believers." They constitute a very numerous class, and, if we do not utilize their efforts, we shall prove ourselves guilty of a great want of wisdom. For, so far as all positive work is concerned in resisting the authority of the church, most of them are at one with us, having similar aims, and differing but slightly, if at all, as to the methods by which the results sought for should be attained. With these we desire to find a common basis of action, and our united efforts will certainly do more to oust the general foe from his position than either they or we could accomplish single-handed. The churches are honeycombed with men who have long ceased to believe in the traditions of their faith. They remain in the fold, not because the menial atmosphere is congenial to their taste, but because they are the victims either of custom, or of fashion, or of necessity, or of the three combined. Let the principles of the American Secular Union become more thoroughly understood, and its exchequer be well filled, and then an exodus from the churches will in all probability be witnessed the equal of which has not been seen during the present generation. It is necessary, however, to distinguish between these "advanced believers" and the old orthodox theologians, with whom we can have no part; they are our avowed enemies, and to coquette with them would be worse than a mistake—it would be a crime against the ancestral glories of our cause. My experience, however, forbids me to expect much assistance from any Christian organization as a body, let it proclaim itself ever so liberal. The aid gained from such a source will be more individually than collectively, and this I think can be secured by a judicious and dignified advocacy upon the part of the exponents of the "Nine Demands." It can be proved that the attitude of the church in relation to the state and the people is wrong without indulging in extravagant invectives against all religious teachings. To plead for a free Sunday does not require that all Sunday observers should be denounced as either fools or knaves, and to contend for Secular education does not mean that the Bible should be destroyed. To understand the correct method of conducting a conflict is an important element in securing a victory. No one can question the usefulness of destructive labor; but, serviceable as it has been, it could only prepare the way for something better. Each worker who thought of future results must have foreseen that the time would arrive, sooner or later, when the conductors of those scattered forces would feel the necessity of uniting together, taking as a basis for their operations some point or points upon which they were all agreed, and thus presenting a bold front to the common enemy.

Thus, in response to an invitation to give my opinion upon the two methods of advocacy contended for by the Liberals of the United States, I have stated how I think it possible for both parties to work together. The most persistent opponent of theology can help the Union because it seeks to resist extravagant and unjust theological claims, while all who deserve the name of Liberals can support an organization whose object is to secure a just and equally-balanced national taxation; to insist that those who require religious instruction shall be alone responsible for the expense of its teaching; to abolish all government patronage of any and all religious forms; to substitute affirmation in our legal practice for the present absurd custom of swearing; to obtain the repeal of all laws that interfere with the free and intellectual use of Sunday; to show that high-toned morality is not confined to the church or to any faith, but that it is allied with the humanity of man; and finally to protest against advantages being shown to a professor of religion that are denied to a Secularist. This is a platform sufficiently broad for all who are willing to do good practical work.

CHARLES WATTS.

"THE BEAK AND CLAW."

Reference has been made in FREETHOUGHT to a lecture delivered at Knight's Ferry by the Hon. A. Schell. Following is a portion of the address:

In my peregrinations o'er earth, like Childe Harold, the wandering child of destiny, I have seen several curious and mysterious things. I was sitting near the shores of a placid sheet of water in the sunshine of a beautiful morning, when I observed a flamingo alight on its banks and stealthily wade into the lake in quest of his prey. Presently it struck the water with its beak, with great force, and brought to the surface a fish which it devoured. I shot the bird, and in its craw I found the fish; and in the stomach of the fish I found a small fish, which apparently the big fish had just swallowed. I sat down, meditated, reflected, soliloquized. Why was this bird furnished with two long legs, that it might walk into the water; and with strong beak, that it might capture the fish upon which it fed? And why was this big fish permitted to swallow the little one? Was it through the guidance and manipulation of an All-wise Providence that the bird should eat the fish and the fish his fellow? If so, will some one of my hearers, at the close of my lecture, point out where the goodness of God comes in?

I passed on, and while my mind was yet occupied with the scene just described, I saw numbers of turtle doves feeding upon the seeds of wild flowers and berries that grew in the neighborhood, unconscious of remote or proximate danger, when suddenly a great disturbance and commotion occurred in their midst, some flying hither, some thither, in wild confusion. The next instant a hawk swooped down from the sky, struck one of their number, and in his claws bore off his victim to a short distance, where he alighted on the ground and with claw and beak tore away skin and feathers, and devoured the quivering flesh of his victim.

Again I was puzzled in thought; my mind could not solve the problem. Why was this ravenous bird furnished with claw and beak? Why was it that the carnivora among the bird family was so superior in its physical structure to the graminivora against which the innocent, harmless, and amiable dove had been provided with no means of defense except in flight? Who will answer? Again, where does the goodness of God come in?

I strolled into the land of the shepherd; I saw the grazing of his flock on the hillside; witnessed the gambols of the sportive little lambs and heard the bleating mothers call to their truant offspring, that had rambled away from their maternal care, to come back; when from a little clump of bushes where he had been concealed a cougar suddenly sprang and seizing a sheep by the throat drank its life blood, and then as suddenly skipped away and disappeared in the jungle.

Here, again, the sharp tooth and claw of the carnivora had slain the hoof and blunted tooth of the helpless herbivora.

Is there any one in this audience so rash, so inconsiderate, so benighted, as to tell us that this is the arrangement made by an all-wise, kind, and benevolent God? If so, will he or they be so kind as to tell us where the benevolence and goodness of God come in?

I concluded to stroll no farther and brought my peregrinations to a close.

Although my wanderings have been made in imagination, you all know that the pen pictures just made by me are the stern realities of truth—that the flamingo eats the fish, the big fish swallows the little one, the hawk kills the dove, and the cougar drinks the blood of his victim—you are all reasoning and intelligent beings, and I leave you to make your own application, and to reconcile, if you can, the existence of things as you find them here on earth, with intelligent design coupled with infinite goodness. Reconcile intelligent design in creating the flamingo with two long legs and strong beak, with infinite goodness in creating the fish to be devoured by the bird; the hawk with claw and beak to kill the dove; the cougar, armed with claw and tooth, to drink the blood of the helpless, inoffensive sheep. A. SCHELL.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF MORALISTS.

SECRETARY'S REPORT FOR NOVEMBER.

During the month, forty membership certificates were issued, making a total of 1238 members. The new members are from Kansas, Washington, Port of Spain, Trinidad, Washington, D. C., Ohio, California, Missouri, Texas, Michigan, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, Idaho, and New York. F. H. RAU, Sec'y.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Balance from October, $105.80; G. P. Dreisbach, Pa., $1; Charles Lambert, Mo., $1; W. D. Mackenzie, D. C., 25 cents; S. A. Roach, Trinidad Island, 25 cents; C. A. Meltz, Trinidad Island, 25 cents; J. A. Crichlow, 25 cents; L. R. T. and E. M., 10 cents each. Total, $109. Mailing constitution, etc., $4.05; appropriated to aid Ella E. Gibson in her effort to start a Brotherhood paper, $35. Total, $39.05—balance, $69.95.

A. R. AYRES, Treas.

A MINISTER'S DREAM.*

BY NELLIE BOOTH SIMMONS.

Concluded.

It was a long and weary tramp, for instead of preaching at his own church, near which he lived, he had exchanged that morning with a minister whose charge lay in a distant part of the city. He was tired and warm and so preoccupied that he could not even stop to enjoy the unusual air of stillness that seemed to brood over the deserted streets. Once, growing thirsty, he decided to ask for a drink of soda water at the drug store he was passing, but the door was tightly locked and a bystander informed the divine that nothing of any sort could be purchased there on Sunday.

And, strange to say, the announcement which certainly should have filled him with delight and gratification had the astounding effect of increasing his vexation. Indeed he actually was guilty of muttering a mild imprecation deep in the farthest recesses of his saintly heart.

Presently, as he strode along, he found himself in a dingy, squalid alley, lined and overhung with rickety tenements. These were not quiet. Ah, no! They fairly swarmed with loud-voiced men, and quarreling children, and mothers with haggard faces and torn and dirty clothes. One group attracted the attention of the Rev. Mr. Pompous. It was a woman—a pale, disconsolate creature—sitting upon some broken steps with a baby in her lap and several little tots clustered around her. They all seemed so fretful that involuntarily he bent down and asked the mother what it was that ailed them.

"They do be cryin' 'cause we can't go to the park, sir," she answered, patiently. "Generally we spends Sunday under the trees, and we takes our bit o' dinner and eats it on the grass. But now the cars don't run, and it's so far we can't walk, and we just has to keep at home all day."

"H'm. Why don't you attend divine service, then? Wouldn't that solace you and be better than picnicking to-day?" the Rev. Mr. Pompous inquired, clearing his throat in rather a doubtful way.

"Well," the woman answered, "there is a mission church on the next street, built for the likes of us, but it don't rest me, sir, to go there, for the preacher he sort o' talks in a style I can't understand. So me an' th' children, we'd rather go to the park, after being cooped up the whole week."

"An' I'm hungry," sobbed the tattered urchin at her side, "an' I saved my pennies to get suthin' to eat to-day, an' now th' shops won't sell a bite—not one o' them."

* From the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

"Is that true?" asked the Rev. Mr. Pompous, turning to the mother.

"Yes, sir," she said, "it's the law, an' I can't buy so much as a drop o' milk for th' baby this morning, or meat, or bread, or anything at all. I would ha' got some yesterday," she added quickly, "but we don't have ice, like the rich folks, an' such things they won't hardly keep over night, sir."

The Rev. Mr. Pompous didn't say one more word; he just turned away, and despite the hurry he was in he walked slowly, and was evidently wrapped in thought. When he finally reached the church it was long after the hour set for service, but the members of the congregation had found great difficulty in getting there, and he was not much behind them. So he climbed into the pulpit and delivered his sermon about the World's Fair and the importance and necessity of closing it on the day of the Lord. Somehow, though, he couldn't speak with the fervor and eloquence that usually possessed him, and the hearers, he noticed, were singularly inattentive and restless and preoccupied.

As he was just leaving for home at the end he saw among the friends who had waited to greet him a certain prominent and influential editor, and as he shook hands with the latter he made haste to propound a query which had been troubling him very much the past two hours.

"Mr. dear Mr. Quilpen," he said, "is it possible my discourse won't be printed? I've looked in vain for the reporters here to-day and I began to fear—"

"Would you have the poor fellows labor on the holy Sabbath?" broke in the other reproachfully. "Besides, there won't be any paper to-morrow. The government has forbidden it, don't you know?"

"Why—but I thought—I heard it was the Sunday issue that was prohibited," stammered the Rev. Mr. Pompous, getting more bewildered and perplexed.

"Yes, that is, too," said Mr. Quilpen in a cheerful way, "but I believe it has been decided that the publication of the Monday paper involves more flagrant desecration altogether. You see every bit of work done on it—the picking up news, the writing, and even the setting of type—had to be done the day before, and so if the employees cherished any religious scruples it was pretty hard on them, of course. The Sunday journal prepared on Saturday wasn't half so mischievous or bad. Don't you agree with me?"

But the Rev. Mr. Pompous didn't answer, he just opened his mouth, stared about vacantly, and then plunged silently down the steps and hurried away, sorely puzzled to account for this odd and unexpected change in the condition of affairs. He was soon shaken out of his thoughtful mood, though, for all at once he noticed that a policeman was shadowing him, creeping along behind him in a very mysterious way. He quickened his pace, but the officer walked more rapidly, too, and by degrees approached his side and laid a firm grasp upon his arm.

"You have made a mistake; let me go directly, fellow," cried the Rev. Mr. Pompous, as he drew himself up haughtily and struggled to get free. "What do you mean by assaulting me, a minister of the gospel? I have committed no crime—leave me alone."

"Ah, didn't you, though," rejoined his captor, sarcastically. "Perhaps you never heard of the law agin performin' labor on th' Sabbath day, eh? Then you'll have some information 'f you come up f'r trial."

"Well, at least," said the Rev. Mr. Pompous, seeing that remonstrance was useless, "allow me to telephone to my wife—"

"You couldn't send a message to-day through any wire, an' you ought to be ashamed f'r wantin' to," interrupted the officer. "Now, be you a-comin' along?"

The Rev. Mr. Pompous pulled himself together, feeling thankful that none of his friends was likely to meet them, and so he was hauled to the stationhouse and incarcerated, in due time, in one of the cells. It was a long and dreary night he spent there, a prey to countless, torturing doubts and perplexities and fears, and the next morning, just out of pure loneliness, he fell to conversing with another prisoner, a shabby fellow, arrested for some petty misdemeanor. He told the sad tale of his grievances, expecting to get lots of sympathy, but to his great surprise, the listener only waited till he was through and then said quietly:

"Ah, well, you have secured just what you wanted—the ideal Sabbath—and now I hope you feel satisfied. And next you will try to close the Columbian exposition each and every Sunday. Why, have you considered what a wonderful thing that stupendous, immense show will be—a means of education and culture for the masses, who cannot afford to go to Europe when they wish—and do you know that many thousands of people labor all the week and have but the one day they can devote to relaxation? And upon that day you would shut the gates of the Fair, and what can you offer in its place?"

"They should attend divine service, of course. We have plenty of churches here," muttered the Rev. Mr. Pompous. "It would be better than jaunting and junketing, I'm inclined to think, on such a day."

"Yes, now we reach the bottom of the matter, the root of the thing," said the mysterious stranger, in rather a mocking satirical tone. "You are a clergyman, and you desire plenty of hearers, for it is out of the congregation that your salary is got. And the church, like any other concern, is apt to flourish most finely when there is no competition, and so you want all places of innocent amusement closed Sunday, that you, the preacher, may have full sway. Perhaps I'm unjust, but really, since you affirm that you'd not open such a thing as the World's Fair on the Sabbath, I can but conclude that ministers, like other people, are sometimes influenced by motives of personal gain and selfish greed."

The Rev. Mr. Pompous felt very uncomfortable at the end of these curt and stinging remarks, and he was heartily glad when, in the course of twenty minutes or so, the summons came for for him to appear in court. The dignified old justice looked at him sharply as he marched inside the railing, and turned a questioning glance at the policeman—for it was the one who, the day before, had arrested the unfortunate divine and now stood up to testify against him.

"Accused of desecrating the holy Sabbath, your honor," said that officer, "and I found him workin' precious hard—perched in th' pulpit, a-sawin' the air with his hands and yellin' and hol-lerin' till he was just red in the face."

"Really, this is the most shocking outrage, an insult, not only to me but the sacred cause I represent," cried the Rev. Mr. Pompous, angrily.

"Do you claim that you are not guilty of laboring on Sunday?" inquired the justice. "What were you doing then?"

"I was preaching, of course," returned the Rev. Mr. Pompous, in a tone of wrath, mingled with both pity and contempt for the evident stupidity of the questioner.

"And what is the amount of the salary you get?" pursued the justice, in a very methodical way.

"I receive about—" here the nonplused divine stopped, and made as if he intended to swallow the answer, but then he thought better of it, and went on, "I have $12,000 a year."

"And they give you that for preaching, of course," queried the justice.

"I—that is—why, certainly," returned the Rev. Mr. Pompous, wondering what in the world this would lead to.

"But you say that preaching isn't labor; that you don't work when you deliver a sermon," continued the justice. "What do you call it—play? Is it possible the church allows you so much money every year for doing nothing at all?"

"Dear me," snapped the Rev. Mr. Pompous, finding himself caught in a net, "if this is a practical joke it has gone far enough. I beg that you will release me directly, for really I'm growing tired—"

"Thirty days and the usual fine," cut in the impatient justice. "These evaders of the law need a lesson. Bring on the next case; there, at once."

At this the Rev. Mr. Pompous became perfectly frantic, and, leaping over the railing, he rushed madly down the aisle. But at the door he was stopped by two brawny policemen who stood guard there, and, after struggling furiously with them for a time, he managed to break loose and dashed into the street, and then— Well, the Rev. Mr. Pompous waked up and found himself in bed, with his wife bending over him and shaking his arm in the most violently perturbed and frightened fashion.

"Gustavus," she cried, "what unearthly, horrible sounds you have been giving vent to in your sleep; you must have dreamed something dreadful. But, now, get up, for it is late, and this morning, you know, you are to preach about the World's Fair, and the importance of closing it on the Sabbath."

The Rev. Mr. Pompous sighed, and, resting his elbow on the pillow, looked steadily at the floor, a long time in silence. Then at last he said, slowly:

"Yes, it was a bad dream, but now I am all right. And, my dear, I wish you'd just go down to my study and hunt up that old sermon of mine about the trinity, I believe I'll use that to-day."

"Why what has made you change so suddenly?" exclaimed his wife.

"I have some new ideas on the question of Sunday closing—that is," added the Rev. Mr. Pompous, hastily, "the discourse I wrote for delivery to-day is imperfect, and must be revised before I can use it at all."

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

After recounting 18,000 votes, Dr. O'Donnell, the defeated candidate for mayor of San Francisco, gives up the contest. He gained 83 votes, but found no indication that he was intentionally defrauded.—But little more than one-half of the taxes in this city, have been paid, although they were due months ago and become delinquent the 29th of November.—The king of the Sandwich Islands attended a Methodist church on Howard street last Sunday morning. The services were described as divine.—There were 118 deaths in this city last week as against ninety-eight for the corresponding week of last year.—Mrs. Stanford will build a museum at Palo Alto. The structure is to be two stories high, with a frontage of 312 feet.—Governor-elect Markham has not enjoyed very good health since his election, but is reported on the mend.—While working on his house at Fairmount, one day last week, the Rev. C. A. Wooley fell from a scaffold to the ground and had two ribs fractured. The incident is believed not to have escaped his father's notice, but the force of the parson's fall was not broken by divine interference.

A grand jury at Hernando, Miss., with more sentiment than sense, refused last Saturday to indict a man named Foster, who shot C. R. Rice because of trouble about Foster's wife. The jury claimed that Foster "acted the part of a sensible and sane man, who vindicated the law and acted in accordance with the sentiments of every honorable, brave, true, noble, and virtuous man"—Dr. Koch admits that in the hands of inexperienced persons his lymph is a dangerous preparation, and warns all but physicians against experimenting with it.—Many failures of banks and business firms are daily reported from the East.—Senator Stanford, on the 19th inst., re-argued his Land Loan bill before the Senate. The measure was referred to the committee on finance.—An important expedition was sent out by Professor Pickering from the Harvard Astronomical Observatory, Dec. 20. The party will go to Peru to observe and photograph the stars and determine their relative brightness. A new station will be founded near Arequipas, Peru, about 8,000 feet above the level of the sea.—The negroes of Kansas City, Mo., are going crazy over a black messiah, who prophesies the extinction of the white race, and that the colored people shall inherit the earth.—The American cardinal, Gibbons, is the choice of the French Catholics for the next pope.—Lincoln Gossett, the son of a clergyman, is under arrest at Anderson, Ind., for attempting to murder his grandparents.—Kate Drexel will establish a new religious order to be called Sisters of the Holy Sacrament, and endow it with her seven or eight millions of wealth. The institution will be located at Arundel, near Washington, D. C.—Mormons have bought 3,000,000 acres of land in old Mexico, and will, it is said, colonize the same with 10,000 of the faithful from Utah.

The great strike among Australian workmen and miners has ended in failure, and the men have gone back to work.—Director Illinsky, of the czar of Russia's Holy Synod, is under investigation, being suspected of sympathy for Nihilism. His niece, Olga Ivanovsky, known as the beautiful Nihilist, held a meeting of the fraternity in his house and plotted to overturn the government.—Emperor William of Germany this year employs 5,000 workmen to do extra work in the post-office during the holidays instead of using soldiers as clerks as has heretofore been the custom. The soldiers meanwhile continue to be useless.—Seigius Stepniak, the Russian author and Nihilist, will shortly lecture in New York on the wrongs of the czar's subjects.—The different churches of Canada are preparing to send out over 30,000 petitions to be signed and presented to Parliament asking for a prohibitory law.

"AROUND THE WORLD" AS A PREMIUM.

We are offering as a premium to subscribers to FREETHOUGHT for 1891 "A Woman's Journey Around the World," by Lilian Leland. The book is handsomely bound in cloth, and in that form has heretofore sold at one dollar per copy. We have considered it advisable to furnish no more copies in paper covers a 30 cents—first, because the form is not durable, and second, because there is not a legitimate profit in handling it at that price. Hereafter it will be furnished in cloth covers at 75 cents.

The book makes a splendid premium with FREETHOUGHT, and we invite all to take advantage of the offer. "A Woman's Journey" contains upwards of 350 pages, and, as the Boston "Herald" observes, "it is little short of disgraceful that the condition of the book trade in the United States should necessitate its appearance in paper covers."

On another page will be found a few out of the many well-deserved notices the book has received from the leading journals of the country. As above stated, we offer "A Woman's Journey" as a premium to new subscribers; but any of our present subscribers who desire it may obtain a copy as a premium by renewing between the present time and January 15, 1891. We make this proposition because we need the money to square our accounts at the beginning of the New Year, and because those who stay with us year after year are as deserving of recognition in this way as are new and untried friends.

Please renew at once and receive this valuable premium.

For Oregon Liberals.

To the Editors of Freethought:

Through the columns of your paper, let me ask those who have received Mrs. Krekel's circular to take immediate action thereon, so that upon the return of the field secretary from the East arrangements shall have been made to open the campaign. Hundreds of circulars, petitions, and constitutions have now been sent out; you have part of the ammunition, so gather in your forces and rally to the aid of those who will step boldly out amid the shot and shell of the enemy.

Mrs. Krekel must be sustained—she must be encouraged in the noble efforts she is making to advance the cause of Freethought.

We recognize in her one of the finest orators in the country, and one whose work has always reflected credit on the cause.

The Oregon State Secular Union has chosen her as its representative, and now, Liberals of Oregon, give her an opportunity to unfurl the flag in every city, town, and village in the state. Again, do not neglect obtaining as many signatures as possible to the petition demanding the taxation of church property throughout the state, and forwarding them to our president, C. Beal, Portland.

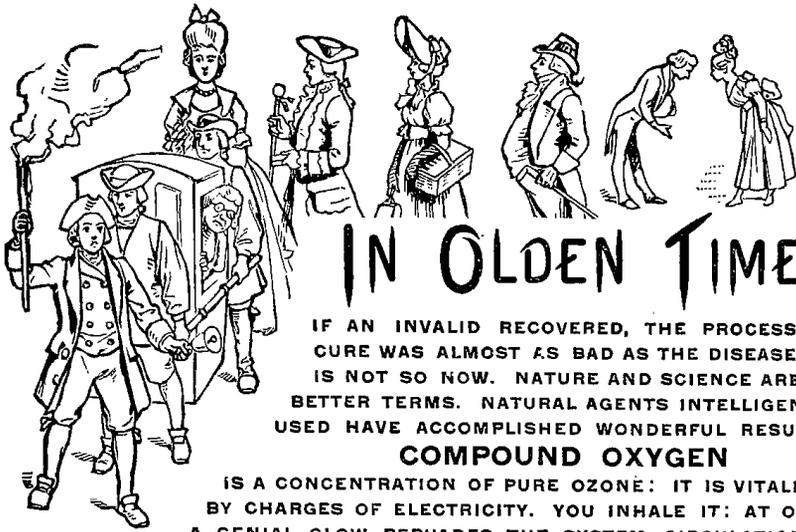

We must attend to this. At the next session of our legislature we want to do some effective work. We want to roll up thousands of names so that our representatives may feel and know that the people of Oregon have awakened to the truth that the exemption of church property from taxation is in violation of every principle of justice. Flood your representatives with letters to this effect until they will stand out boldly for the right.

I wish those of you to whom I have sent no petitions would kindly address me at New Era, that I can forward you copies.

In looking over the roll of members in the Oregon State Secular Union I find the ladies' names are decidedly in the minority. Now, sisters in the cause, this ought not to be so; send in your names, that I can place them on the Roll of Honor.

KATIE KEHM.

New Era, Oregon.

IN OLDEN TIMES

IF AN INVALID RECOVERED, THE PROCESS OF CURE WAS ALMOST AS BAD AS THE DISEASE. IT IS NOT SO NOW. NATURE AND SCIENCE ARE ON BETTER TERMS. NATURAL AGENTS INTELLIGENTLY USED HAVE ACCOMPLISHED WONDERFUL RESULTS.

COMPOUND OXYGEN

IS A CONCENTRATION OF PURE OZONE: IT IS VITALIZED BY CHARGES OF ELECTRICITY. YOU INHALE IT: AT ONCE A GENIAL GLOW PERVADES THE SYSTEM, CIRCULATION IS QUICKENED, OBSTRUCTIONS DISAPPEAR FROM THE LUNGS, AND, BEST OF ALL, YOUR STRENGTH RETURNS. IN THIS SIMPLE AND NATURAL WAY DISEASE IS REMOVED. YOUR VIGOR BECOMES YOUR REMEDY, AND VIGOR IS NATURE'S BEST SPECIFIC.

A BOOK OF 200 PAGES WILL TELL YOU WHO HAVE BEEN RESTORED TO HEALTH AND STRENGTH BY THE USE OF COMPOUND OXYGEN.

THE BOOK WILL BE SENT ENTIRELY FREE OF CHARGE TO ANY ONE WHO WILL ADDRESS

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, No. 1529 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

120 SUTTER ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

58 CHURCH ST., TORONTO, CANADA.

THE NEW MODEL "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH!

World Renowned, Magnificent, Perfect. Again Improved.

Has 16 Jewels, Patent Regulator, Breguet Hair Spring (non-catchable), Beautiful double-sunk paneled dial, and all modern improvements. Is finely adjusted to heat, cold, and position; Stem wind and set, and new model. Made both for hunting and open-face cases and guaranteed a Perfect Time-Keeper.

PRICES: In Silverine Cases, $19; 3 ounce pure Silver, $22.50; 4 ounce, $23.50; 5 ounce, $25; 6 ounce, $27; ounce, Best dust-proof cases, $24—no better sold elsewhere for $35. In Best Filled Gold Cases, guaranteed 20 years, Patent Open-face, Screw Dust-proof, $27; Hinged Back, $30; Hunting, $33; Louis XIV. style, either kind, $2 extra. All elegantly engraved or plain. In cases guaranteed 25 years, special artistic chasing, $5 and $10 more.

In 14 kt. Solid Gold Open-face Cases, $45 to $80; Hunting, $50, $60 $70, $90 to $100. Sent prepaid with written guarantee, and cash refunded if not entered satisfactory. No one else in the world sends out or sells so GOOD AND ELEGANT A WATCH FOR THE PRICE.

Regular Grades American Watches. All Stem-Wind.

Three ounce Silverine case, seven jewels, $7.50; eleven jewels, $9; fifteen jewels, $10; do., adjusted, $16. In three ounce Coin Silver case, $11, $12.50, $13.50, and $19.50. In four ounce case $1 extra, and in four ounce dust-proof case $1.50 extra. In best open-faced, dust-proof, filled Gold case, seven jewels, $16; eleven jewels, $17.50; fifteen jewels, $18.50; do., adjusted, $24.50; do., hinged back, gold cap, $3 extra. Extra fine engraved $1 and $2 additional. Hunting cases, gold cap, seven jewels, $23; eleven jewels, $24.50; fifteen jewels, $27.50; do., adjusted, $31.50. In special, artistic, engraved cases, $5 to $10 more. The latter are rarely seen even in best stores. All filled cases guaranteed twenty to twenty-five years. Beware of others!

Ladies' Gold Hunting American Watches.

Best filled, seven jewels, $17; eleven jewels, $18.50 fifteen jewels, $25. 14 kt. solid Gold, $27; eleven jewels, $28.50; fifteen jewels, $35. More elaborate and heavier cases, $2, $5 to $10 extra. Diamond, Ruby, Emerald, embossed and enameled cases, $10 to $100 extra. ALL WATCHES ARE STEM-WIND AND SET. All guaranteed one year, after the expiration of which time they will be cleaned for $1 and returned free. 10 1/2 filled gold cases $2 less

Diamonds.

I am an expert in this line and guarantee my goods at least 20 per cent below lowest market prices. Rings, Pins, Eardrops, Studs, etc., worth $35 for $25; do. worth $70 for $50; do. worth $100 for $75; do. worth $200 for $150; do. worth $500 for $375. Sent subject to approval, and cash refunded if not strictly as represented.

Watch-work.

Nine-tenths of the "jewelers" of America are botches, and don't know as much about "handling" a fine watch as an elephant does about a Beethoven symphony. A noted phrenologist once told Wettstein, "If you are not a first-class mechanic the Lord Almighty never made one." Send me your work. Cleaning, $1; jewels, $1; springs, $1. Best work guaranteed and returned free. LIBERAL EDITORS' AND LECTURERS' WATCHES REPAIRED FREE.

Rings and Emblems

A specialty. A full line of solid Gold and best Plated Jewelry of latest designs. Select from any catalogue and I will fill orders at lower prices or send better goods.

Sundries.

Best Spectacles or Eye-Glasses, $1; Gold, $5 and $6. (Send line of finest print you can read 14 inches from the eyes, and I can fit you.) Best razor, $2—a luxury; a good one, $1. Rogers Bros.' best triple-plated Knives, $1.75; Forks, $1.75; Teaspoons, $1.70; Tablespoons, $3.40 for six. Solid Coin Silver Spoons, $1.60 per ounce, marked. Silver Thimbles, 35 cents. An elegant 8-day Alarm Clock, $4.50, worth $6. Four best Violin strings, 50 cents; six Guitar strings, 75 cents. Fountain pens, $2. All prepaid, except cutlery and clocks.

Established in 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

Freethought Poems & Lectures

DR. J. L. YORK,

Author and Compiler. Price, $1.

Address The Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

W. S. BELL'S "Popular Delusions Concerning Popular Government," has been issued in tract form—two for five cents. Address the Freethought Publishing Co.

Lending a Hand.

A Sensible Man.

Road Agent (to pedestrian)—Money or your life!

Pedestrian (calmly)—Which do you prefer, sir?

Road Agent (gruffly)—Your money, of course!

Pedestrian (handing it over)—Isn't it a good thing that we can both be suited? Now I had much rather have my life.—Puck.

A Rude Awakening.

"Where did you get that hat?"

"Don't you criticise that hat," retorted Duddy; "I got it in London. It was made for the Prince of Wales."

"Did it ever occur to you that the only way you got it was because the prince didn't like it?"

"Baw Jove!" cried Duddy. "I nevah thought of that."—Munsey's Weekly.

An Expensive Age.

Father (looking over the paper)—More bad news! A hitherto unknown frog poud has been discovered in central Africa.

Mother—What is that to us?

Father—What is that to us? It means that every one of our eight children will have to have a new and revised edition of Highprice's geography.—New York Weekly.

Two of a Kind.

Tramp—Parding, but I heard ye say ye lived in Dugout City, Kan., and it had the makin' of a great town.

Kansas Man—Yes, siree. All we want is capital.

Tramp (sadly)—Same way with me.—Street & Smith's Good News.

The Luck of the Ugly Man.

"I have a beautiful wife."

"You have indeed."

"What! Have you seen her?"

"No; but I never saw an ugly man married yet who didn't get the pick of the flock."—New York Sun.

ONE ON WALL STREET.

"Old Shoestrings" Had Its Peculiarities Down Very Fine.

"Shoestrings! shoestrings!" he shouted as he lingered in front of the Stock Exchange in New York. "Only a nickel a pair, gents! warranted all linen! Lace up your shoes, gents; only a nickel a pair!" He is a familiar figure on the street, and many a millionaire gets this cheap but important article of dress from Old Shoestrings and exchanges jokes with him at the same time. It had been dull and hard work to get outsiders to bite on the golden bait for a few days, and in consequence the regular workers had been preying upon each other as much as possible, and Old Shoestrings knew by their faces that times were not easy on the street.

"Shoestrings!" he cried, and a knot of brokers gathered about him and commenced to chaff him.

"Well, how is business?" said one as he winked to the rest.

"It puts me in mind of something that happened on the Central railroad during the strike," said Old Shoestrings.

"How was it?" asked the broker.

"Why, you see, a carload of hogs was side tracked at De Witt and forgotten."

"Well, what has that got to do with Wall street in this pinch?" asked the broker as he winked to the crowd.

"Why, you see," said Old Shoestrings, "after the strike was over they went and looked into that car and discovered that those hogs when they were abandoned by the public turned in and ate each other up and there was nothing left but a basketful of tails. Now, Wall street!"

But a roar of laughter spoiled the explanation, and as the crowd dispersed they heard again, "Shoestrings, gents! all linen; only a nickel a pair!"—A. T. Worden in Judge.

Reasons for Correction.

"I desire to deny the statement in your paper," he said politely to the editor, "that I eloped with Miss Richascream night before last, sir."

"Why?" asked the editor suspiciously.

"Because, sir, I did not elope with her."

"Oh, you didn't?" said the editor, with scornful doubt. "I presume she eloped all by herself."

"No, sir, she did not," and his manner was humbler than ever. "She eloped with the other fellow one hour before my arrival on the spot."—Washington Star.

The Snub Direct.

Jane—Belle, why is it I haven't seen you oftener this season?

Belle—Well, I spend all my time in society, you know.—Munsey's Weekly.

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen;—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure if they would take it according to directions. Yours truly,

L. I. GORSUCH, M. D.,
Office, 215 Summit st.

We will give $100 for any case of catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, 75c. 524

The Humboldt Library

—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

Price 15 cts a number. Double numbers 30 cts.

1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. R. A. Proctor.
2. Forms of Water (19 illustrations). John Tyndall.
3. Physics and Politics. By Walter Bagehot.
4. Man's Place in Nature. Illustrated. T. H. Huxley.
5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.
6. Town Geology. (With Appendix). Chas. Kingsley.
8. The Conservation of Energy. Ills. Balfour Stewart.
7. The Study of Languages. C. Marcel.
9. The Data of Ethics. Herbert Spencer.
10. Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music. Illustrated. Professor Pietro Blaserna.
11. The Naturalist on the River Amazon. Henry Walter Bates. (Not sold separately).
13. Mind and Body. Alexander Bain.
14. The Wonders of the Heavens. Ills. C. Flammarion.
15. Longevity. Prolonging life. John Gardner, M.D.
16. The Origin of Species. Thomas Huxley.
17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. Herbert Spencer.
18. Lessons in Electricity. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. Richard A. Proctor.
20. The Romance of Astronomy. R. Kaley Miller.
21. The Physical Basis of Life. Etc. T. H. Huxley.
22. Seeing and Thinking. William K. Clifford, F.R.S.
23. Scientific Sophisms. Review of theories concerning Atoms, Apes, and Men. Sam'l Wainwright.
24. Popular Scientific Lectures. Ills. Prof. Helmholtz.
25. The Origin of Nations. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson.
26. The Evolutionist at Large. Grant Allen.
27. History of Landholding in England. Jos. Fisher.
28. Fashion in Deformity. Ills. Wm. Henry Flower.
29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology. Andrew Wilson.
30. The Study of Words.
Richard Chenevix Trench.
32. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. R.A. Proctor.
33. Vignettes from Nature. Grant Allen.
34. The Philosophy of Style. Herbert Spencer.
35. Oriental Religions. John Caird and others.
36. Lectures on Evolution. Ills. Thomas H. Huxley.
37. Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. John Tyndall.
38. Geological Sketches.
Archibald Geikie, F.R.S.
40. Evidence of Organic Evolution. G. J. Romanes.
41. Current Discussions in Science. W.M. Williams.
42. History of the Science of Politics. F. Pollock.
43. Darwin and Humboldt. Huxley, Agassiz, others.
44. The Dawn of History.
C. F. Keary, of the British Museum.
46. The Diseases of Memory. Th. Ribot.
47. The Childhood of Religion. Edward Clodd.
48. Life in Nature. Illustrated. James Hinton.
49. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.
50. Money and the Mechanism of Exchange.
Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
52. The Diseases of the Will. Th. Ribot.
53. Animal Automatism, Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
54. The Birth and Growth of Myth. Edward Clodd.
55. The Scientific Basis of Morals. Wm. K. Clifford.
56. Illusions.
James Sully.
57. The Origin of Species. Two Double Numbers.
Charles Darwin. 30 cents each.
59. The Childhood of the World. Edward Clodd.
60. Miscellaneous Essays. Richard A. Proctor.
62. The Religions of the Ancient World. Prof. Geo. Rawlinson. Double Number, 30 cents.
63. Progressive Morality. Thomas Fowler, LL.D.
64. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russel Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.
65. Conditions of Mental Development. Wm. Clifford.
66. Technical Education, Other Essays. T.H. Huxley.
67. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. J. F. C. Hecker.
68. Three Essays. Herbert Spencer. Special No. 10c.
69. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. Fritz Schultze. 30 c.
70. Essays Speculative and Practical. Herbt. Spencer.
71. Archaeology. (with an appendix). Daniel Wilson.
72. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.
73. Evolution in History, Language, and Science.
74. The Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. Illustrated. Charles Darwin. The first three are single numbers, the last a double number. Price of the entire work, 75 cents.
77. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.
79. Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. W. M. Williams.
80. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work. Grant Allen.
81. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two essays by J. Allanson Picton.
82. The Illusions of the Senses. Richard A. Proctor.
83. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six essays by Sedley Taylor, M.A.
84. Studies of Animated Nature. W. S. Dallas.
85. The Essential Nature of Religion. J. A. Picton.
86. The Unseen Universe. Wm. K. Clifford, F.R.S.
87. The Morphine Habit. Dr. B. Ball.
88. Science and Crime. Other essays. Andrew Wilson.
89. The Genesis of Science. Herbert Spencer.
90. Notes on Earthquakes. Richard A. Proctor.
91. The Rise of Universities. (double No.) S.S. Laurie.
92. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the action of Earthworms. (dbl No. Chas. Darwin

93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. Special number 10 cents. J. Mount Bleyer, M.D.
94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. H. Spencer.
95. The Diseases of Personality. Th. Ribot.
96. A Half-Century of Science. T. H. Huxley, G. Allen.
97. The Pleasures of Life. Part I. Sir John Lubbock.
98. Cosmic Emotion. Special No. 10 c. Wm. Clifford.
99. Nature—Studies. Prof. Eaton Lowe and others.
100. Science and Poetry. Other essays. And'w Wilson.
101. Aesthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. James Sully and George Croom Robertson.
102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. William Nelson Black.
103. The Coming Slavery. Other essays. H. Spencer.
104. Tropical Africa. Henry Drummond, F.R.S.
105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. Ernst Haekel.
106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. Allen.
107. Ultimate Finance. A Theory of Wealth. Black.
108. English, Past and Present. Part I. Richard C. Trench. (Double Number 30 cents.)
109. English, Past and Present. Part II. Trench.
110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. (Illustrated.) Clodd. (Double No., 30c.)
111. The Pleasures of Life, Part II. Lubbock.
112. The Psychology of Attention. Th. Ribot.
113. Hypnotism. Fredrik Bjornstrom. 30c.
114. Christianity and Agnosticism. A controversy. Consisting of papers contributed to the "Nineteenth Century" by Henry Wace, D.D., Prof. T. H. Huxley, the Bishop of Peterborough, W. H. Mallock, Mrs. H. Ward. (Double No., 30c.)
115. Darwinism. An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its applications. A. R. Wallace. Part I. Ill. (Double No.)
116. Darwinism: An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection, with some of its Applications. Part II. A. R. Wallace. Ill. Double No.
117. Modern Science and Modern Thought. S. Jaing. Illustrated. (Double Number.)
118. Modern Science and Modern Thought, Part II.
119. The Electric Light and the Storing of Electrical Energy. Illustrated. Gerald Molloy.
120. The Modern Theory of Heat and the Sun as a Storehouse of Energy. Ill. Gerald Molloy.
121. Utilitarianism. John Stuart Mill.
122. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Maps and Illustrations. Ramsey, Ball, Murchison, Studer, Whymper, Favre, and Spencer. Part I. (Double No. 30c.)
123. Upon the Origin of Alpine and Italian Lakes and upon Glacial Erosion. Part II.
124. The Quintessence of Socialism. A. Schaffle.
125. Darwinism in Politics. Ritchie. Administrative Nihilism. Huxley.

Address the Freethought Publishing Co.,
838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

CHRISTIANITY * * *

—AND—

* * * AGNOSTICISM.

A CONTROVERSY

Consisting of papers by

Prof. Thomas Huxley, Rev. Henry Wace,
The Bishop of Peterborough
W. H. Mallock, Mrs. Humphrey Ward.
Price, 30 cents.

Address, FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO.
838 Howard st., San Francisco.

J. BALL, 3 Sixth St.
San Francisco.
Watches Cleaned
& Warranted, $1

Watch Glasses, 10 cents. Watches, Clocks, Jewelry,
Spectacles, Eye-Glasses, Opera Glasses, etc. Country patronage Solicited. Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 401f

S. P. TAYLOR & CO.,

Manufacturers and Dealers in

PAPERS!

Manila, Book, News, Hardware, Wrapping
PAPER BAGS, TWINE.

Pioneer So. Coast and San Geronimo Paper Mills
414 and 416 Clay st., S F.

SAN FRANCISCO
ARBEITER ZEITUNG.

710 WASHINGTON ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

The only organ in the German language on
the Pacific Coast that stands for true Nationalism.
Subscription price: 3 mos., 60 cts; 6 mos.; $1;
12 mos., $2. 451f

PLAIN HOME TALK

BY EDWARD B. FOOTE, M. D.,

ABOUT THE

Human system—the habits of men and women causes and prevention of disease—sexual relations and social natures, embracing

MEDICAL COMMON SENSE

APPLIED TO

Men, women, society, love, marriage, parentage, etc.

Two hundred illustrations. Price $1.50
 FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING COMPANY,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco.

The Same in German.

OFFENE VOLKS-SPRACHE.

PRICE, $1.50.

WIFE WANTED, Unincumbered, not over 40, healthy, fond of music (pianist) sympathetic, and anti-religious, for lone widower of 60, with means. To insure answers address AMERICAN, Freethought Pub. Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal., giving full description of self.

J. A. REED.

FIRST-CLASS

BOOTS & SHOES

Made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. Repairing neatly done. I invite the readers of this paper to give me a trial. JAS. A. REED,
 375 Natoma, cor. 5th, S. F.

Dr. ELLEN D. MOORE,

Hygienic Physician.

Office and Residence: 1169 Brush Street,

Corner Brush and 14th sts., Oakland.

HOURS: 10 to 12 a.m.

25tf

Crimes Against Criminals.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

Price, 10 Cents

Address, The Freethought Publishing Co.,
 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

DR. FELLOWS

Is a regularly educated and legally qualified Physician, and the most successful in his specialty as his practice will prove. Send 10 cts. for his "Physician's Counselor," a book for young and middle aged men, suffering from that Life-Wasting Weakness as the result of youthful follies, indiscretions and excess. It sets forth an External Application.—A POSITIVE CURE. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those afflicted.

AN HONEST STATEMENT.

"Similar advertisements from unreliable practitioners have been frequently assailed and exposed by the press, but Dr. FELLOWS stands foremost in his profession, and it is safe to trust him."—The National View.

Address, Dr. R. P. FELLOWS,

MINELAND N.

And say where you saw this advertisement.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.

THE LATEST FASHIONS

BUSINESS SUITS FOR $25.00
DRESS SUITS FOR 35.00
PANTS TO ORDER FOR 6.00

Samples forwarded on Application,

CHAS F. BURGMAN.

TAILOR,

—101 FIFTH STREET 101—

Superstition in all Ages.

—BY—

JEAN MESLIER,

A Roman Catholic priest, who, after a pastoral service of thirty years in France, wholly abjured religious dogmas, and left as his last will and testament to his parishioners, and to the world, to be published after his death, the above work, which he entitled "COMMON SENSE."

339 pages. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents; in cloth, $1. German, cloth, $1.
 Address orders to THE FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING Co., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

THE WEEKLY STAR,

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER!

Per Year $1.50
 Six Months75
 Three Months50

EDITED BY

F. B. PERKINS, JAS. H. BARRY.

OFFICE:

429 1/2 Montgomery st., San Francisco.

VOLTAIRE'S ROMANCES.

A new edition, with numerous illustrations. "I choose that a story should be founded on probability, and not always resemble a dream. I desire to find in it nothing trivial or extravagant; and I desire above all that under the appearance of fable there may appear some latent truth obvious to the discerning eye, though it escape the observations of the vulgar."—Voltaire.

12 mo., 448 pp., laid paper, with 67 engravings. Price, paper, $1 00; cloth $1 50.

NATHANIEL VAUGHN

A Splendid Radical Novel.

BY FREDERIKA MACDONALD.

404 pages. Price reduced to $1. The Freethought Publishing Company, 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

BRAIN AND THE BIBLE.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

BY EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

We can recommend this as one of the most valuable works in the list of Freethought publications printed in large type on fine paper and elegantly bound. Price $1. FREETHOUGHT PUBLISHING CO., 838 Howard st., San Francisco, Cal.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

I have kept a Scrap Book for a good many years of letters received from patients; some are long, too long to publish, some are short, short and good. Rainy days I sit down and read them, and have learned a good deal about the human body from some poor, sickly woman or overstrained man. Here is one of them. I call it a good letter:

TRENTON, TEXAS, Sept. 28, 1886.

"To Kennedy of the Medical Discovery, Roxbury, Mass. I am so proud of my recovery as to express my feelings in thanks to you. The RHEUMATISM has made me four legged for six years. At last I have traded off two of them to Bell-Druggist—for four bottles, Kennedy's Discovery. I am yours, gratefully and unsolicited,
 J. B. IVY."

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

In order to make our friends better acquainted and to enable them to patronize one another in trade, we will publish in this column the name, calling, and place of business of any subscriber to FREETHOUGHT at the rate of One Dollar a year.

The list need not be confined to San Francisco and Oakland. It is open to any reader, anywhere in the the country.

Architects and Builders.

F. Emil Neubauer, 1955 Market st.

Art-Glass, Bending and Cutting Works.

Hopper & Schroeder, 39½ Fremont st., cor. Mission.

Assayers.

H. W. Walker, Teacher of Assaying, and Practical Worker of ores. Office 109, Montgomery Block, corner Washington and Montgomery streets.

Apothecary.

Geo. H. Fowler, drugs, medicines, chemicals, toilet articles, etc. 13th ave and East 14th street, East Oakland, Cal.

Boot and Shoemaker.

C. Heick, Boot and Shoe Store, 119 Fourth street.

Cabinet-makers.

A. J. Forbes & Son, 213 Mission st.

Contracting Painters.

Jos. Larsen, 240 Montgomery st., rooms 25 and

Crockery, Glassware, Etc.

Davis & Cowen, 929 Market st.

Dentists.

S. P. Chalfant, N E. cor. Market and Mason sts. (Entrance, No. 8 Mason st.)

Geologist.

Chas F Blackburn, Practical Mining Geologist, Seattle, Wash.

Hides, Pelts, and Furs.

C. Rogers, dealer, Prineville, Oregon.

Independent German Congregation.

Frederick Schuenemann-Pott, speaker, 845 Golden Gate ave.

Laundries.

J. W. Selzer, People's Laundry, Office 221 Grant ave.

Lawyers.

Geo. W. Schell, 320 California st.

Lodging Houses.

F. H. Morse, Inglewood House, 126 Fifth st.

Merchant Tailors.

Chas. F. Burgman, 101 Fifth st.

Wm. W. Noble, 1222 Stockton st.

Magnesia Sectional Covering.

C. B. Johnson & Co., 59 Clay st.

Music Teachers.

Henry Krause, teacher of Piano and Zither, 1467 Grove st., (OAKLAND.)

Nurseryman.

R. H. Foster, Babylon, N. Y.

Physicians and Surgeons.

Dr. C. A. Bonesteel, Consulting Physician in all forms of Nervous and Mental Diseases for MEN ONLY. Office, 105 Stockton st., Rooms 4 and 5, San Francisco, Cal.

Stoves and Plumbing.

F. Koch, 1063 Howard st.

Real Estate.

Geo. H. Gale, Port Angeles, Wash.

Stoves (Gasoline).

Thomas Curtis, 24 Hayes st.

Upholstering and Furniture.

August Lutge, 1144 Howard street.

Wine, Beer, and Liquor.

Fredericksburg Brewing Co., 529 California st. Rapp & Debarry, U. S. Beer Bottling Establishment cor. McAllister and Franklin sts.

J. O. Scott, 655 Sacramento st.

The Social, 1057 Folsom street, A. G. Wood & Co.

Watchmakers and Jewelers.

Glindeman & Schweitzer, 303 Kearny s

ORIGINAL

BROWNSVILLE

WOOLEN MILLS

CLOTHING STORE.

164 and 166 Second Street,

Near corner of Morrison,

The Best Goods in the Country

PORTLAND, OR. W. R. BISHOP, AGT.

Call, or send orders and measure.

A Logical Conclusion.

Uncle Jake—I stick on to it, cunnel, 'at dere's nothin' 'at hasn't a reason fer it ef you'll only studdy it out. Fact is, 'at nigh on to any question kin be answered afo' it's axed, perwidin' you set yo' mine on to it.

Col. Ipton—Uncle Jacob, I'll test that right off. Now why is that bell ringing?

Uncle J. (after a moment's deep thought)—Well, sab, ef 'my intellectshules ain't adrift on de ocean of onbelief, an' seein' as it are not dinnah time by a houah yit, it's 'cause some fool is ashakin' of de handle of it.—Lowell Citizen.

The Shakes.

"Got anything for the shakes, young man?"

"That bottle I sold you last night was for that purpose."

"Yes, but the directions said shake well before taking. If I could shake the old man well I wouldn't want the medicine. I want something that'll make him well without shaking."—Harper's Bazar.

An American Clara Vere de Vere.

Miss Van Wirt—No, Lord Northbury, I could never marry you. You are not my equal.

Lord Northbury—Not your equal! Why, the blood of the Plantagenets courses in my veins! When your great-grandfather was a petty Dutch trader mine was sitting in the house of lords.

Miss Van Wirt—Yes, but when your great-grandfather was sitting in the house of lords mine was buying up town lots on Broadway.—Life.

A Growing Friendship.

Agent—The week before last, sir, I called and left you a circular of our new patent suspenders. Last week I called again and filled your order for a dozen pairs. This week I have called again to collect the money.

Travers—Thank you, thank you! Now that we are acquainted I hope you will call next week and the week after next, and so on. Bring your friends.—Clothier and Furnisher.

An Incompetent Valet.

"That suit doesn't fit you very well, Chollie."

"I know it," returned Chollie, "but I can't help it. I sent my valet to be measured for me, and the beastly fellah's larger than I. I must weally get anothah man."—New York Evening Sun.

Made Light of It.

"I am afraid this poem may be a little heavy," said the timid bard, handing in an epic on "The Fall of Man."

"Well, we will try to make it light," replied the joke and obituary editor, touching it first to the gas jet and then to his pipe.—Boston Courier

TRAVELING ALONE

A WOMAN'S JOURNEY

AROUND THE WORLD.

—BY—

LILIAN LELAND,

(Daughter of the late T. C. Leland, Secretary of the National Liberal League.)

THE BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST OF BOOKS.

Finely Bound in Cloth. Price, 75 Cents.

Press Notices.

They are pleasing stories of travel.—Toledo Bee
A book to hold the interest of all.—Boston Times, Feb. 23, 1890.

A remarkably entertaining record.—Buffalo Express, Feb. 16, 1890.

A remarkably original and piquant narrative.—Cincinnati Times Star.

It is a very clever, readable book.—New York Journal of Commerce, Feb. 7, 1890.

A bright, unconventional narrative of unusual interest.—Washington Republic, March 8, 1890.

It is an entertaining record of a remarkable case of "globe trotting."—Cleveland Plain Dealer, Feb. 26, '90.

She had eyes for everything of interest, and tells her story in a "chipper" style.—Norwich, Conn., Bulletin, Feb. 11, 1890.

The young traveler's comments upon men and cities and works of art are decidedly entertaining.—New York Tribune, Feb. 14, 1890.

The notes of her journey are presented in a style that is very acceptable, and form interesting reading.—San Francisco Call, Feb. 16, 1890.

The letters are full of humor and witticisms, and written with all the freedom and informality of style permissible and enjoyable in private letters.—Boston Herald, Feb. 23, '90.

She is evidently a born writer, having a light, chatty style, although her observations are very shrewd.—St. Louis Republic, March 11, 1890.

It is as readable as the observations and thoughts of such resolute persons, especially if they are women, are wont to be.—Brooklyn Daily Eagle, Feb. 16, 1890.

The story is brightly and tersely written, and is given with conversational ease and minuteness of detail.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, Feb. 22, 1890.

The author's style is gay, and her airy contempt for tradition in art, religion, and social life is one of her most prominent characteristics.—Newark, N. J., Advertiser, Feb. 15, 1890.

There is a way to make a record of travels popularly entertaining, and this way has been followed by the author of "A Woman's Journey Around the World Alone."—New York Sun, Feb. 15, 1890.

The story of her wanderings is very pleasantly told. It is charmingly truthful and free from exaggeration. In England three volumes and cloth binding, with a second edition in library style, would certainly be awarded it.—Boston Herald, Feb. 10, 1890.

Her descriptions are entertaining, while they sparkle with unique phrases and quaint ideas. The story of her travels is told in that chatty manner peculiar to women, which is particularly pleasing from the tongue or pen of a charmingly pretty woman, such as Miss Leland's portrait shows her to be.—Newark Evening News, March 28, '90.

