

Scenes in Camp Wagg, Malverne, L. I. Some of the New York Youngsters of the 50,000 in the Church Militant Organization, the United Boys' Brigade.

Officers of the United Boys' Brigade at Camp Wagg, Malverne, L. I.—Front row, left to right: Commandant C. D. Lathrop, Co. B, Signal Corps, Lynbrook, L. I.; Capt. R. Lloyd, Co. A, Signal Corps, Brooklyn; Maj. W. C. Dangier, Signal Corps, General Staff, Col. F. C. Hedges, commanding New York State Militia, Larchmont, Co. C, Second Inf., Brooklyn; Maj. J. E. Everdell, Battery D, Field Artillery, Brooklyn; Second Lieut. J. D. Behrman, Battery D, Field Artillery, Brooklyn; Capt. G. Danberg, Company A, Signal Corps, Lynbrook; Commandant G. Balrock, Co. F, Signal Corps, Lynbrook; Commandant G. Frasier, Co. B, Signal Corps, Valley Stream, L. I.; Lieut. F. Vandewater, Co. F, Signal Corps, Lynbrook—Back row: Capt. E. Schmidt, Co. F, Signal Corps, Lynbrook—Major F. E. Everdell, Capt. G. Russell, Co. H, Signal Corps, Roosevelt, L. I.; Lieut. C. Chancy, Co. B, Signal Corps, Lynbrook, L. I.

Mounted scouts and dispatch messengers of Co. B, Signal Corps, Grace Reformed Church, Brooklyn, Maj. W. C. Dangier and Capt. R. Lloyd, commanding.

Company A, Signal Corps, of Grace Reformed Church, Brooklyn, has a portable field wireless outfit and sends messages regularly to Co. E, Signal Corps, at Lynbrook, L. I.

Company C, Second Inf., Beecher Memorial Church, Brooklyn, in close order drill at Camp Wagg, Malverne, L. I., commanded by Captain A. Dietsch. In the United Boys' Brigade of Greater New York there are about 4,000 infantrymen.

Company A, Signal Corps, Grace Reformed Church, Brooklyn, in extended order drill at Camp Wagg, Malverne, L. I.

Sergeants Vandewater and Leys, Co. E, Signal Corps, Lynbrook.

in their dog tent at Camp Wagg, Malverne, L. I.

Evening parade at Camp Wagg, Malverne, L. I. Two hundred United Boys' Brigade youngsters were in line for this ceremony each evening.

Battery D, Field Artillery, United Boys' Brigade, St. Bartholomew's Church, Brooklyn, going into action at Camp Wagg, Malverne, L. I., under command of Major F. E. Everdell.

Company A, Signal Corps, Grace Reformed Church, Brooklyn, in semaphore signal drill. The company is equipped with a complete United States Army field service outfit.

Company A, Signal Corps, Grace Reformed Church, Brooklyn, at signal practice at camp Wagg, Malverne, L. I.

Battery D, Field Artillery, St. Bartholomew's Church, Brooklyn, in firing drill, under command of Maj. Franklin Everdell, at Camp Wagg, Malverne, L. I.

General view of the camp of the United Boys' Brigade, named Camp Wagg in honor of the Pook Bah of Malverne, Alfred H. Wagg.

"Suppe, Suppe, Suppe," at Camp Wagg, Malverne, L. I. For thirty cents a day the United Boys' Brigade campers had as much as they could eat.