

Want a Spine Cooler? Go to Bostock's Arena at

Luna Park, and See Animal Rehearsals for the Movies.

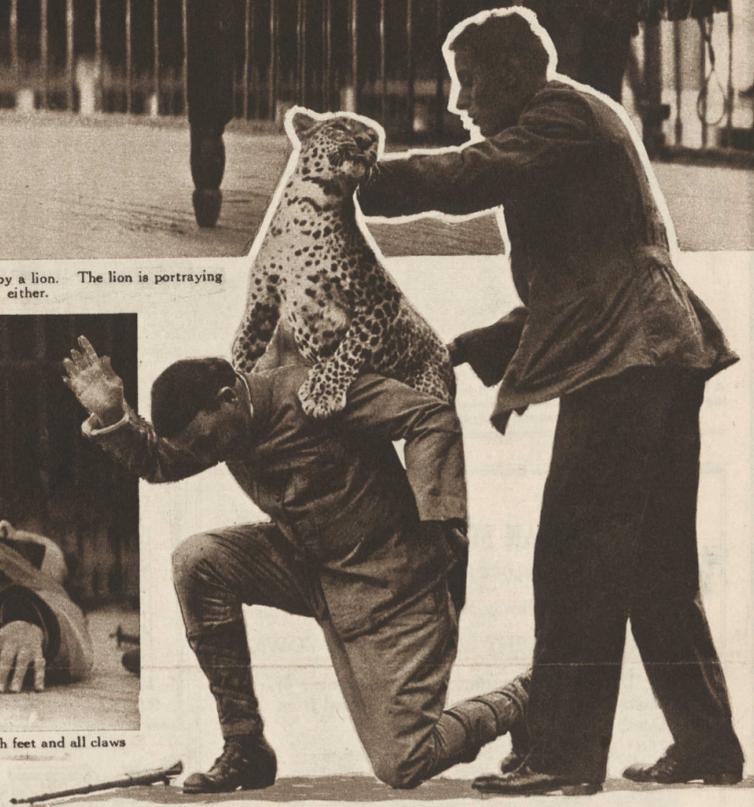

An Undress Rehearsal of a Jungle Scene.—Captain Jack Bonavita is portraying a hunter attacked by a lion. The lion is portraying what he would like to do to Captain Jack. And the lion isn't posing, either.

Summer Recreation for Charles Gay. Gay assists Captain Bonavita in training lions for the "movies." Of course the lions are tame, but the job isn't, even though it is a Gay proposition. Wouldn't you like to hug a lion on a hot day?

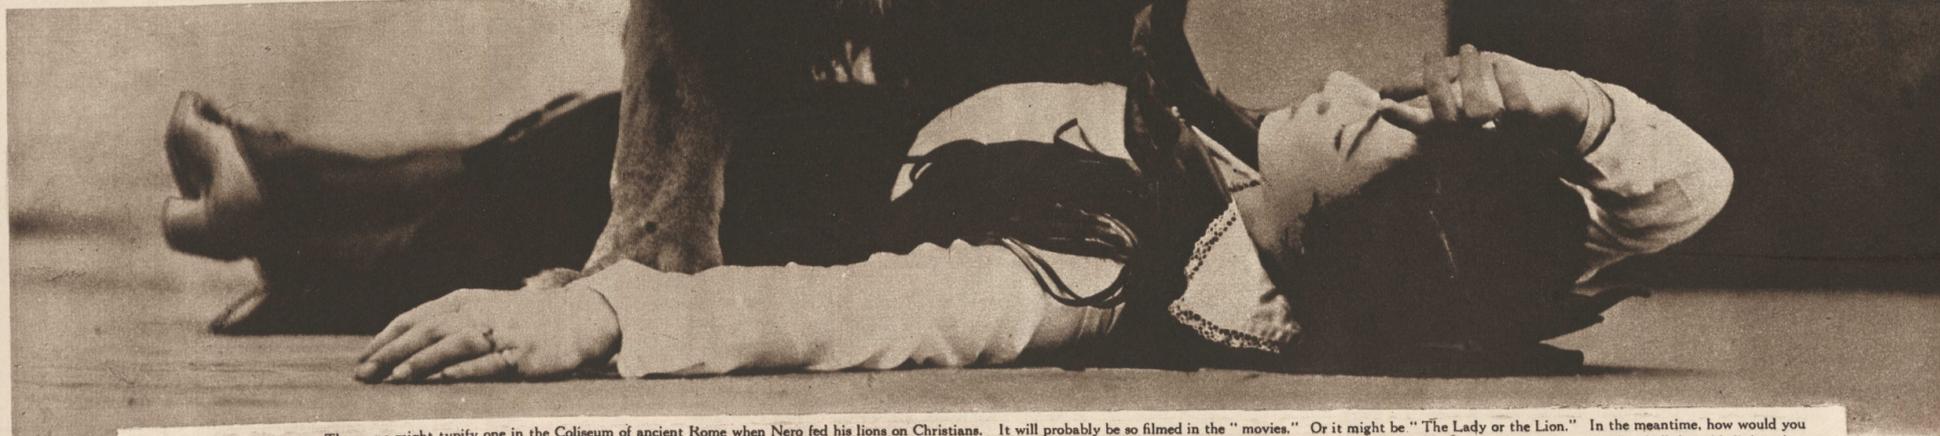

At the Leopard's Mercy.—And that's no "movie" caption. If Mr. Leopard decided to land both feet and all claws on Mr. Gay's face, he'd do it so suddenly that there would be no face left.

The Leopard's Leap on the Hunter.—If Gay didn't exercise a restraining influence on Mr. Leopard Captain Bonavita would soon weigh several pounds less about the back and shoulders.

The Hug of Death.—Another "movie" caption, but if Mr. Leopard wasn't afraid of a skin ripping beating, he would take advantage of his strangle hold on Captain Bonavita.

Thrown to the Lions.—The scene might typify one in the Coliseum of ancient Rome when Nero fed his lions on Christians. It will probably be so filmed in the "movies." Or it might be "The Lady or the Lion." In the meantime, how would you like to be Mlle. Ottawa, Mr. Leo's leading lady? Photos by Underwood & Underwood.