

REMARKABLE VIEW OF AN AMERICAN BATTERY OF "155'S" IMMEDIATELY BEHIND THE AMERICAN TRENCHES. The Occupants of Which Are Plainly Visible, Within the Former German Lines Near Soissons. This Photograph Was Taken on the Afternoon of the First Day of the Franco-American

Counter Offensive
in This Sector
July 18.

(© Underwood & Underwood.)

AMERICAN SOLDIER ASSISTING A HOMEWARD BOUND BRITISH TOMMY, SEVERELY WOUNDED IN ARM AND FOOT, AT A RAILWAY STATION SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE.

(© Committee on Public Information.)

BRITISH AND AMERICAN SOLDIERS, WITH RED CROSS NURSES, ON THE GROUNDS OF BARODA HOUSE, THE AMERICAN RED CROSS HOSPITAL, AT 24, KENSINGTON PALACE GARDENS, LONDON.

The American Officer Standing at the Extreme Left Is Capt. E. Burt Challette, U. S. R., of Toledo, Ohio. (© Western Newspaper Union.)

AMERICAN RED CROSS COMMISSIONERS TO GREAT BRITAIN, FRANCE, AND ITALY, ON THE STEPS OF THE LONDON HEADQUARTERS, 32 GROSVENOR GARDENS. In the Front Row, Left to Right, Are: Major William S. Patten, Deputy Commissioner to Great Britain; Major James S. Perkins, Head of the American Red Cross in Europe; Col. Robert P. Perkins, Commissioner to Italy, and Major Ralph Preston. Second Row: Major Charles M. Bakewell, Major Langdon, and Secretary Marvin of the Harvard Club of New York. (© Western Newspaper Union.)

THE FRENCH EMBASSY IN RUSSIA QUARTERED IN A RAILWAY COACH AT VOLOGDA.

M. Noulens, the French Ambassador, Surrounded by His Staff, Is Shown Seated Amid the French Official Records, Removed from Petrograd. (© Underwood & Underwood.)

DAVID R. FRANCIS, American Ambassador to Russia, With His Staff, in Front of the Temporary American Embassy Established at Vologda on the Route Taken by Ambassador Francis Northward Toward Archangel. (© Underwood & Underwood.)

BRITISH TANK OFFICER AND CREW EXAMINING ONE OF THE NEW GERMAN TANK-PIERCING RIFLES, WHICH IS OF 1/2-INCH CALIBRE AND FIRES A CARTRIDGE 5 INCHES LONG.