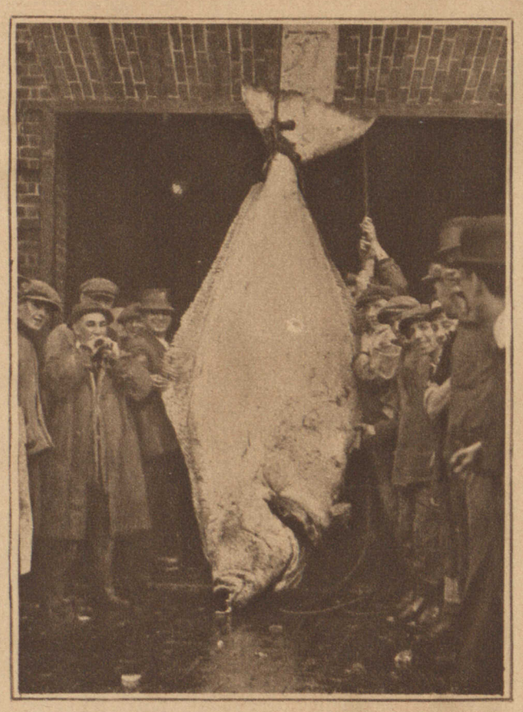
With our troops in France. American soldiers training behind the firing lines are being given the benefit of the experience in trench warfare gained by the Allies at such a frightful cost. To the left a platoon is lined up ready to enter the gas chamber. To the right a machine gun squad learns to take the gun apart blindfolded.
Int. Film Serv.

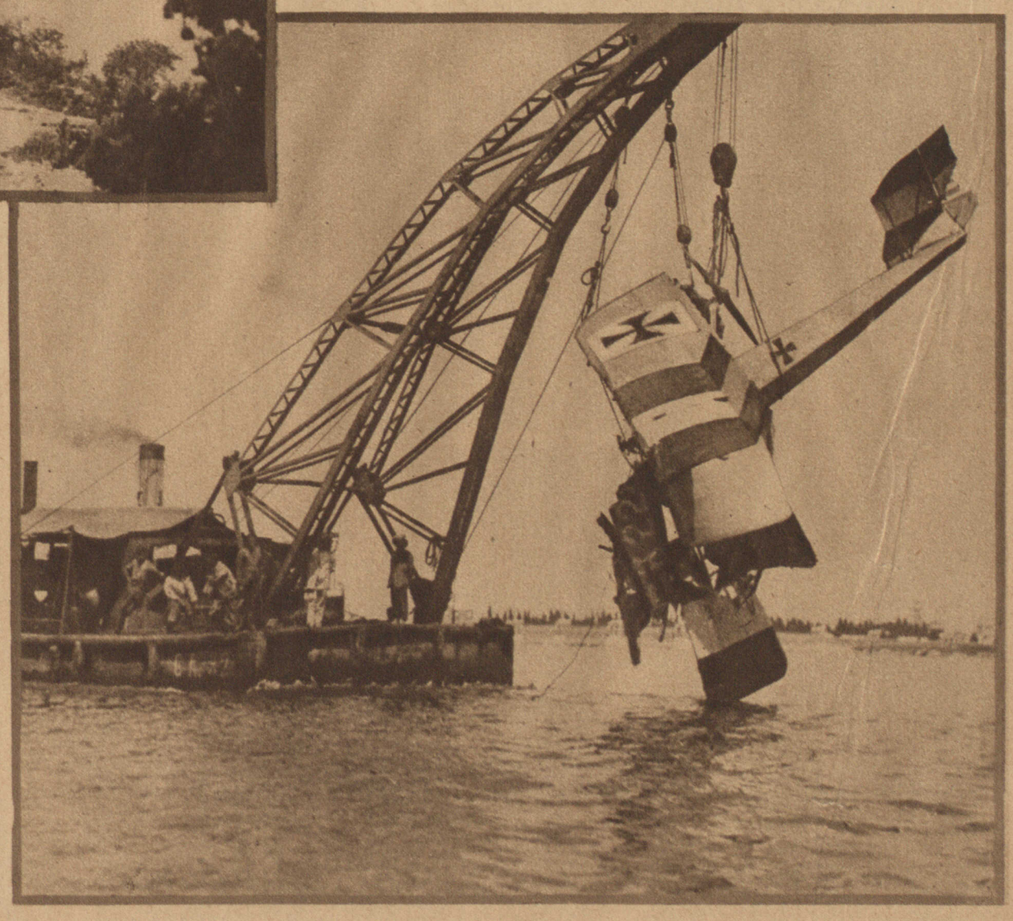
Margaret Beaver has celebrated her 102d birthday, but has not taken to knitting as yet. She is one of the most prominent members of the Salvation Army in Canada.
Gilliams Service.



Did this chap climb into some fisherman's net to help Hoover put it over? He's a halibut, weighs 675 pounds and has lived just that many years, so the old salts say.
Gilliams Service.

The old and the new. An Italian observation dirigible hovers over the outskirts of ancient Rome. Paint out the aircraft, and the picture might be one hundreds of years old.
Central News.

An unusual photograph of Captain George Guynemer, regarded as the most brilliant aviator of the war, who was recently killed in a reconnoissance flight over Flanders, examining the machine gun taken from the German aeroplane he brought down in one of his last flights. Guynemer, who was only twenty-one years old, had over fifty victories officially to his credit.
Kadel & Herbert.

Left—Just like other folk, these Russian peasants line up on the platform of a station in Siberia to watch with great interest the doings of the foreigners. Above the door the sign reads "Long Live the All-Russian Democratic Republic!"
Paul Thompson.


Right—Italy takes a hand at the air game. Somewhere on the shores of the Adriatic a company of engineers salvage an Austrian battleplane driven down after an encounter with one of Italy's flying men.
Central News.