

Count Czernin, Austria's indiscreet, and therefore retired, Foreign Minister, has now adopted the less subtle rôle of soldier. He is seen here (at the left) riding with Field Marshal Mackensen (centre), just to show that there is no hard feeling. The Austrian private saluting with such flawless form at the extreme right does not seem to be receiving what an American soldier would consider an adequate recognition from his superior officers.

"WE TO-DAY BOMBARDED THE FORTRESS OF PARIS."—German official statement.

The valuable military effect of the Boche long range gun on a children's hospital in the French capital. Unfortunately for Germany's tactical prestige, only one nurse and two children were killed.
