

TRAINING HISTORIANS

At Columbia University the U. S. Signal Corps is fitting photographers to work under war conditions

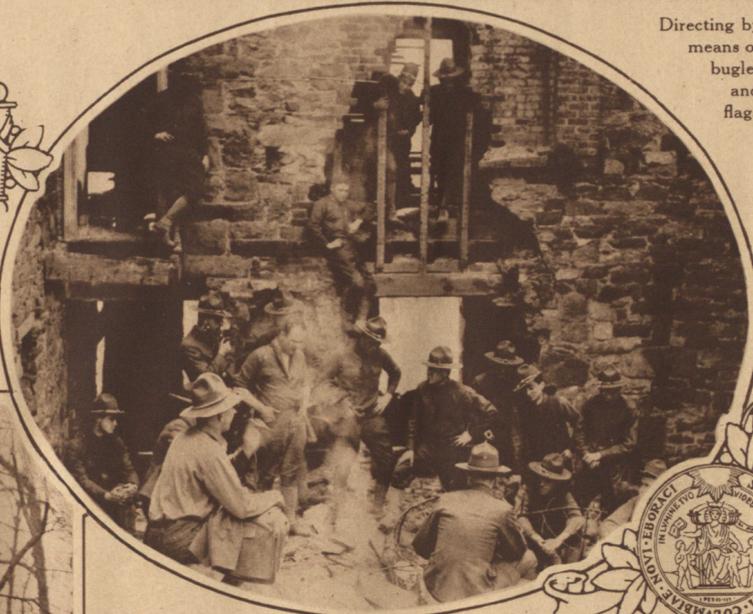

Movie operators who will soon be sent over to make feature films of the American army in action.

Taking pictures in the Dolomites will be child's play after scaling the Palisades.

Directing by means of bugles and flags

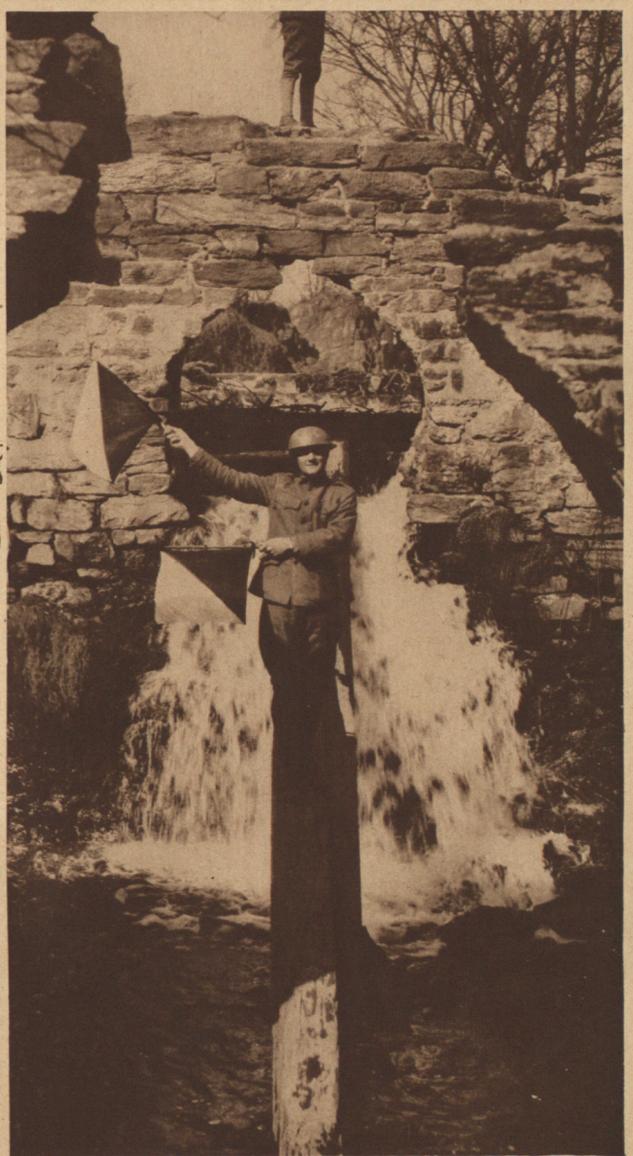

Field work in New Jersey includes studying architecture of the late Teuton period.

Lamp posts in Central Park have no terrors for the Signal Corps.

Captain R. Hodder-Williams, M. C., formerly of the Princess Pats, now commanding the Columbia Corps.

One way of saying "This log is slippery" if you happen to know wig-wagging.