

THE RED TERROR IN BERLIN

Machine guns posted on the Degas Brunnen, Berlin, while the Reds endeavor to occupy the imperial stables. Moussault.

Getting armored cars ready for action in the heart of the city, where revolution rages unchecked. Moussault.

Scheidemann (on the left) and Ebert (on the right)—leaders of the faction opposing the Spartacides. © Underwood & Underwood.

Deputy Hirsch (radical Socialist), speaking before a crowd. Numerous trade unions are gathered under their own banners, the general electric workers, machinists and steamfitters, etc. © Press Illustrating Service

Military motors of the Reds spreading incendiary propaganda through the streets of Berlin. Moussault.

The revolution is bloody. This funeral cortege, passing the royal palace, is bearing victims to their graves. Press Illustrating Service.

Liebknecht, up on the cornice of the Reichstag building, making a revolutionary speech to the populace. Moussault.