New York Tribune
April 13, 1919

"A French Port"

By H. Poll

To the French fishermen who braved storm and submarine to bring in their daily haul of precious food for their hungry land belongs, perhaps, the truest, simplest construction of the "Freedom of the Seas." And we shall pray for another Victor Hugo, with another "Pêcheurs d'Islande," to tell the story of this heroic and unsung arm of the French naval service.