

"The Home-Coming"

*By Captain Harvey Dunn
United States Army Official War Artist*

Suppose this were your home in one of the cross-streets of Manhattan or in Montclair, or in Pelham or Forrest Hills. Suppose you had left it when you said goodby to your wife and youngsters, and when you came back, instead of finding your home city going along in its serene way, suppose you found nothing but the footprint of the Hun. Then you would know what this Frenchman is feeling, and you would feel as his Yank companion feels, looking on at the wreck of all that a French family holds dearest.
