The suit shown features the longer coat, destined to be popular this fall.

Lack Smocks

For Women and Misses

While women have long conceded the all-round usefulness of the smock for warm weather, it is here shown for the first time adapted for Fall and Winter wear, in charmingly individual styles.

At upper right: Smock of all wool jersey, elaborately hand-embroidered in contrasting wool and chenille. Navy, Mahogany, Joffre Blue, Sea Gull Grey, and Reindeer.

Raven-Hue DRESSES & WAISTS of BLACK

"Black is the tea-time color in Paris" —says the June issue of VOGUE.

At this hour, when Paris is at her gayest and smartest, the women who make dress a serious study wear black gowns.

They do it for the same reason that smart American women choose RAVEN-HUE Dresses and Waists of Black—because they know that this color is universally becoming, always appropriate, unfailingly modish.

The RAVEN-HUE fall styles are a revelation of how charming black frocks can be—and should be the first choice of the many progressive dress buyers who are planning to feature "Black for Style" more extensively than ever the coming season.
