SLEEPING BEAUTY

Everyone was fast asleep,
Princess, courtiers, cats and sheep,
And there grew a thorny wall
Through which none could come at all.
Thus a hundred years rolled past
Till a royal prince at last
Cut his way through thorns, and they
Turned to roses right away.
Then he kissed the princess's eyes
And she woke in sweet surprise.
Soon the palace was astir,
Ready to rejoice with her.

LONG study in France gave to Miss Burd's fingers their skill and excellent technique. A real love and understanding of childhood has taught her how to illustrate children's verse and story with a charm of touch and whimsical detail which captivates the little people. Besides her delightful illustrations for children, Miss Burd has done much portrait work, and is a designer of figure windows.

FROG PRINCE

A little princess playing ball
Into the frog pool let it fall;
And when a frog upon the brim
Had fetched it out, she promised him
Whatever favor he should say.
Quoth he, "I want to eat and play
Beside you." So against her wish
He ate from out her golden dish.
The princess kept her word so well
She freed him from a magic spell—
A handsome prince with yellow hair,
He claimed her for his lady fair.
