Location: 236 Front Street, corner of Peck Slip and Front Street, New York, New York County, New York.

Present Owner: New York City; Lessee: South Street Seaport Museum.

Present Occupant: Vacant.

Present Use: Vacant.

Significance: Grocer Edward G. Faile built 236 Front Street between 1827 and 1828. Like many of the buildings in the Seaport, 236 Front Street has contained a variety of businesses including a liquor store and fish market. The vacant building is now part of the South Street Seaport Museum, a group of stores, galleries and piers standing in close proximity to high-rise office buildings in Lower Manhattan.

PART I. HISTORICAL INFORMATION

A. Physical History:

1. Date of erection: 1827-28. In 1826, Edward G. Faile occupied 236 Front St., assessed at $5,300. At that time the lot was leased to Faile by the City of New York. In 1827, a notation in the tax records says "Improving corner lot." By 1828 the building assessed to Edward G. Faile and Co. was valued at $10,000 indicating that a new building replaced an earlier and smaller one.

3. Original and subsequent owners: The building is built on Block 97W, Lot 32. Information for the following chain of title comes from the New York City Conveyance Records, Surrogate's Court.

4. Original plan and construction: An 1879 view called "Panorama of New York, Brooklyn and Vicinity" shows 236 Front Street before its 1884 alteration. The corner building was four and a half stories tall with a steep hipped roof. A canopy wraps around the first story level.

5. Alterations and additions: The first recorded alteration of 236 Front Street took place in 1884. Herman Mathias hired S. M. Marshall, architect, and William C. Rath, builder, to make a full story of the attic by converting the peak roof into a flat one. At the same time the front wall on Front Street was shored up because the first through second floors were bulging. In addition, cast iron piers and cornice replaced the Federal style wooden elements. Inside, they added a new floor and ceilings. A partition made the store floor into two stores.

In 1921, new owners Charles F. Mischler and Philip Begloff, fish merchants, hired architect Charles M. Straub to do a $2,000 alteration on the Peck Slip facade. Part of the front wall in the first story was removed.

B. Historical Context:

1. The land on which 236 Front Street stands was one of the last city-owned waterlots. On February 19, 1821, William Woodhull, Lessee of Lot No. 32 Peck's Slip, filed a petition with the Common Council "praying permission to assign said Lot to Edward Faill." Permission must have been granted because grocer Edward G. Faile paid taxes at Front and Peck Slip in 1822. In 1827, when Faile built the present 236 Front Street, he wanted to buy the two lots on the corner of Peck Slip and Front Street but no decision was made; he was not permitted to buy the property until 1840. Scoville characterizes Faile as a celebrated grocer in The Old Merchants of New York. Faile's grocery business, like many others on the Seaport, complemented the Fulton Market which had opened on the next block in 1822.
2. When Herman Mathias altered the building in 1884, it was a hotel and liquor store. In 1921, when Charles F. Mischler and Philip Begloff bought the building, they used it as two separate fish markets.

PART IV. PROJECT INFORMATION

The South Street Seaport project was undertaken by the Historic American Buildings Survey (HABS), under the direction of John Poppeliers, Chief of HABS, with the co-operation of the South Street Seaport Museum, Inc. Recording was carried out during the summer of 1976 by Frederick W. Wiedenmann (HABS Washington, D.C. office) project supervisor; Lori Zabar (Columbia University), project historian; Robert Lee Wiltse (Louisiana State University), architect; and student architects—Barry Lee Gill (North Dakota State University), Joe E. Price (Texas Tech University), and John R. Temmink (University of Virginia). Susan McCown, a HABS historian in the Washington, D.C. office, edited the written data in 1983, for transmittal to the Library of Congress. Walter Smalling, Jr. of the National Park Service took the photographs of the South Street Seaport structures.
