

Letter from Alexander Melville Bell to Alexander Graham Bell, January 25, 1876, with transcript

Home, January 25, 76. (No envelope) My dear Al.,

It is utterly impossible that I, or any one, could write such a lecture as you want. I suppose you will make it largely explanatory, in which case your best course will be to extemporize from "head". Don't undertake more than you can accomplish! Wishing you pudding as well as glory from today's display, and with best love to Mabel and yourself, from,

Your affectionate father, Alex. Melville Bell.
