Worker was not able to get very much information from Mr. Miles that will be of value to the survey as he continually talk of Reconstruction days and of working on the boats of the Mississippi river.

However Mr. Miles said that when he came to Omaha there was about six hundred Negroes in Omaha and that most of them were engaged in doing the same type of work that most of them are doing now. He said that a few were working for the Union Pacific R. R. as waiters and pullman porters. Mr. Miles was born in Mobile Alabama of slave parents about 1848. He said that he was owned by a very good man and that his family was always very happy. Their owner a Mr. Revenal was unusually kind and allowed them the privilege of going about any time of day or night, without a guard. When the war was over and he was given his freedom he worked as a helper on various boats on the Mississippi river. His brother had left for New York and had secured work on a private car of one of the officials of the railroad. When he needed a helper he sent for Mr. Miles and they both worked on private cars of various officials for a number of years, traveling all over the United States. Finally Mr. Miles asked for a transfer to the Pullman division of the railroad and he was stationed in Omaha. He married in Omaha and has lived [here?] since 1892. He spoke of the early churches of the Negroes of Omaha, stating that he is one of the oldest members of the Mt. Moriah Baptist church. Mr. Miles said that he was never very active in 2 community life and therefore could not give very much information to the worker that would be of any value to the survey.

Mr. Miles was unable to attend the Reunion at Gettysburg this summer due to illness. Mr. Miles is one of two G.A.R. veterans living in Omaha and he is very proud of this fact. He is also the oldest ex-railroad employ living here. He asked worker to contact his daughter and that she could give any information that will be of value to the survey.
