FOREWORD

The "Book of Figures" is a little manuscript that has recently been presented to The Newberry Library by the Librarian. The book appears to be a guide such as would be used by a fiddler or other musician in calling off the successive movements of dances. It was found some years ago in the attic of an old house in one of the smaller towns in Hartford County, Connecticut.

The manuscript, measuring 16 ½ x 7 centimeters, consists of two sections enclosed in a cover, the first section being in nine sheets and the second in two sheets, each hand-stitched through the fold and the cover. The forty-four pages are unnumbered, the last four being blank except on the verso of the last page. The dances are numbered, sometimes with one number for two dances. The paper is firm but occasionally stained; the cover is made of three thicknesses of wrapping-paper, now dark brown with age.

The title given on the verso of the last page, reads: "Asa willcxs book of Figures".

The spelling, capitalization, punctuation and underlining of the original have been scrupulously followed, occasionally at the expense of clearness. One instance of this sort is the word "hays" in no. 27, meaningless as it stands, which may have been meant for "pays" i. e. pace, the tail of the "p" having been untraced by the pen. The period, which occurs with some consistency throughout the earlier portion of the book, seems to indicate the pause that occurs between the different movements of the dances.
