Dear Mr. Moftah,

This morning I received the enclosed letter from the clergyman of the parish in which Mr. Newlandsmith is living. In order that you may have not difficulty in reading it, I have typed out this letter. From the contents you will learn what I have suspected for some time, namely, that the illness of Mr. Newlandsmith is mental (مجنون).

The clergyman now wishes to know whether he may use the £15 for treatment for Mr. Newlandsmith, or whether it must be kept for his travelling expenses to Cairo, that is, if he ever recovers sufficiently to be able to go out to Egypt.

Please let me know as soon as possible, in order that I may send instructions to the clergyman in question. If the money is not to be used for Mr. Newlandsmith's treatment, then he will return the cheque to me, and I, in my turn, will forward it on to you by registered post.

I am always ready to offer you my best services in any matter in which I can be of use to you.

May I once again thank you very much indeed for the two liturgical books which you so kindly sent to me, and which I am ever so pleased to add to my library - these will be of very great use to me in my work.

Yours very sincerely A. P. B. B. B.
