I pick'd her up most tenderly,
 And ask'd if she was hurt,
 Convey'd her to an ottoman,
 And then began to flirt,
 She told me she was just eighteen,
 Was reading Martin Tupper,
 Was fond of strolls in moonlit groves,
 And thought she'd have some supper.
 Beautiful girl &c.

I think somehow, the wine I drank,
 Had made me all amiss,
 Or why, why was I fool enough,
 To try and steal a kiss?
 Oh! some one fetch my husband do!
 She scream'd out in affright,
 Married by jingo! I exclaim'd,
 And did a fly by night.
 Beautiful girl &c.

At supper lobster sallad, love,
 And chicken, we discuss'd,
 We gabbled and we gobbled as
 All supping lovers must;
 We champagn'd, sherried, and mosell'd.
 Each time the bottle past,
 Methought each smile the darling gave,
 Was lovliler than the last.
 Beautiful girl &c.

6

A sadder and a wiser man,
 I reach'd my home once more,
 And madly raving at my lot,
 My raven hair I tore;
 I'm wretched as a man can be,
 And farewell, Oh farewell!
 So that sweet, dear, deceiving dream,
 My beautiful, my Nell.
 Beautiful girl &c.
