You Bet There are No Flies Upon the Major.

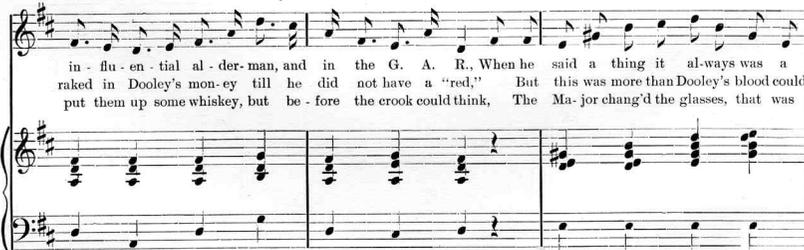

Written and Composed by THOS. J. MCGINNESS.

1. Ma - jor Doo - ley was a pen - sion - er, who'd 2. One night he went to Hoolaghan's to 3. He fell in with a "Bun - co" man who nev - er went to war, And he's not the on - ly one of them I know. Be'ng an have a game at cards. And a "sharp - er" from the bow - ry took a hand. He asked him in to drink, With a - lac - ri - ty the Ma - jor went a - long. They in - flu - en - tial al - der - man, and in the G. A. R., When he said a thing it al - ways was a raked in Dooley's mon - ey till he did not have a "red," But this was more than Dooley's blood could put them up some whiskey, but be - fore the crook could think, The Ma - jor chang'd the glasses, that was go. He once was asked to tell the "press" where cit - y mon - ies went, I stand. He laid hold of the sharper where his clothes hung loose, and then He wrong. They pledged their healths, but ver - y soon the "bun - co" man felt faint, And
