HILDEBRAND MONTROSE.

Words by G. H. MACDERMOTT.

Music by ARTHUR LLOYD.

Allegretto.

1. I'll sing of Hildebrand Montrose, (his proper name is Charlie.) He speaks as tho' with cold in his 'doss,' bad French he tries to parley; His
2. His scarf, unlike himself is green, His gloves, 'no kid' are 'galler,' His wash'd-out pants are well strapp'd down, He carries a 'fake' umbrella; He
3. His stock in trade of socks count three, He chalks his paper collars, He always pays his taxes, for His income's just two dollars; He hair is in barber's ringlets, His eyes are "madeup" dark, He walks up - on his 'uppers' While strolling in the Park.

nev - er pays his tradesmen, To him they'll give no trust, He drinks dry champagne "cy-dee" Un - til he's fit to 'burst' swears he'll wed a "Duckess," Tho' he waits 'till "all is blue," Tho' he goes to bed a beggar, Wakes up the "Lord Knows Who."

CHORUS.

Au re-voir, ta - ta! you'll hear him say, To the Mar-chi - o-ness Clerkenwell, While bidding her good day; I'll strike you with a feather, I'll stab you with a rose, For the darling of the ladies, Is Hil-debrand Montrose.

Fine.
